

The background of the cover is a photograph of a stone archway leading to a bright blue sky. The text is overlaid on this image. The words 'The Book of' are in green, 'ACTS' is in large green letters, 'FE' is in large blue letters, 'BOOK' is in large red letters, and 'PUBLICATION' is in large yellow-green letters. The author's name 'by Given O. Blakely' is at the bottom in light blue.

The Book of

ACTS

FE

BOOK

PUBLICATION

by Given O. Blakely

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #1

INTRODUCTION TO ACTS

“ 1:1 The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach, 2 Until the day in which He was taken up, after that He through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom He had chosen: 3 To whom also He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God: 4 And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of Me. 5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.” (Acts 1:1-5)

The book of Acts proclaims the working of the risen and exalted Christ. This work was accomplished through the Holy Spirit, whom Jesus said would come after He had left (John 14:16-18). He would also particularly work through the men whom He had chosen, who were “named apostles” (Acts 6:13). These men established the focus and direction of the work of the Lord, having been empowered by Him for that activity. The book of Acts particularly tracks the activity of Peter and Paul – Peter ministering primarily to the Jews, and Paul to the Gentiles (although the ministry of neither man was limited to the groups to whom they primarily ministered) (Gal 2:7-9).

This book is written by a man who was not himself an apostle, yet who was given a “perfect understanding” of the work of Christ “from the very first” (Luke 1:3). He also traveled extensively with Paul, whose activities dominate this book from chapter thirteen to its conclusion (chapter 28) – sixteen chapters.

Although there is doctrine in the book of Acts, it is not primarily a book of doctrine . Rather, it is fundamentally a revelation of activity – Divine activity . In it we find the record of the vigorous action of the exalted Christ, who, by means of the Holy Spirit, is “working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12).

- THE TITLE AND PERSPECTIVE OF THE BOOK.
- THE AUTHOR OF THE BOOK
- WHAT IS NOT IN THE BOOK
- LUKE AND THEOPHILUS
- HISTORICAL, BUT NOT MERELY HISTORICAL
- THE FORMER TREATISE (1:1)
- UNTIL THE DAY HE WAS TAKEN UP (1:2)
- HE SHOWED HIMSELF (1:3)
- THEY COULD NOT DEPART (1:4)
- TWO DIFFERENT BAPTISMS (1:5)
- CONCLUSION

We will be exposed to:

- Divine direction.
- Human involvement.
- The fact of suffering and persecution.
- Religious opposition (from the Jews).
- Corruption within the church (Ananas and Sapphira).
- Sharp dissension among brethren (Barnabas and Paul).
- Brethren becoming convinced of realities formerly rejected (the acceptance of the Gentiles), and a host of other things.
- We will be exposed to religious and political rulers.
- The maltreatment of God’s messengers by religious zealots.
- Kindness shown to them by Gentiles and barbarians.

Only the activities of a handful of God’s servants are particularly detailed. They include Peter, John, James. James the Lord’s brother, Philip the evangelist, Stephen, Barnabas, Paul, and Silas. More is recorded about Paul than any other servant mentioned in this book.

The Acts of the Apostles, then, is more about the work than the workers. It relates more to what was done than to those who did it. It provides an overview of the outworking of Divine purpose, with very little being said about the projects and desires of men. Even though men were involved in, and impacted by, the activities, they are not the primary consideration. This is a record of the works of the risen Savior – how He carried out the great salvation that He accomplished in His death, burial, resurrection, and consequent enthronement, with all power in heaven and earth being given to Him.

With remarkable consistency, those who responded in faith to the Gospel in this record, or to Divine direction, never resist the word or will of the Lord. They gladly acquiesce to the Lord, whether it is the group who were charged with murdering Jesus (2:41), the city of Samaria (8:5-6), Saul of Tarsus who was persecuting the church (9:6), the household of the Gentile Cornelius (10:33), a Gentile jail-keeper (16:30), or those who sought to spread the Word of God throughout the world (16:8-10).

Those with tender hearts were discovered in the most unlikely places:

- The road to Damascus (9:2-6).
- A heathen island (13:6-12).
- In a synagogue where Jews were found contradicting and blaspheming Paul's First

Antioch, Selucia to Salamis 13:1-3

Through Cyprus to Paphos 13:6-12

Perga in Pamphilia 13:13

Antioch in Pisidia 13:14-50

Iconium 13:51-14:5

Lystra 14:6-20a

Derbe 14:20b-21a

Returned to Lystra , Iconium

Antioch 14:21b

Pisidia , Pamphylia , then Perga 14:24-25a

Attalia 14:25a-26a

Antioch of Syria 14:26b-28

Through Syria and Cilicia 15:41

Derbe and Lystra 16:1-3

Phrygia and Galatia 16:4-6

Opposite Mysia 16:7

Passed by Mysia to Troas , then through Samothracia (Samothrace) and Neapolis to Philippi 16:8-40

Through Amphipolis and Apollonia to Thessalonica 17:1-9

Berea (Berea) 17:10-13

Paul sent to coast, then to Athens 17:14-34

Corinth 18:1-17

Cenchrea (Cenchreae) 18:18

Ephesus 18:19-21

Caesarea (Syria) , Jerusalem, & Antioch 18:22

Through Galatia and Phrygia 18:23

Ephesus 19:1-41

Macedonia 20:1-2

Greece, Macedonia, Philippi 20:3-6a

Troas 20:6b-12

Assos..... 20:13-14

Mitylene, opposite Chios, Samos, Trogyllium (KJV), Miletus 20:14-36

Cos, Rhodes, Patara 21:1-2

Tyre 21:3-6

Ptolemais 21:7

Caesarea 21:9-15

Jerusalem 21:16-25

•

(13:45-48).

- A jail cell in a Gentile city (16:29-34).
- Athens, a citadel of worldly knowledge (17:34).
- A great multitude from a synagogue in Thessalonica, where Paul was vigorously opposed (17:2-4).
- The chief ruler of a synagogue in Corinth, where Paul was soundly rejected (18:4-8).
- Many in Ephesus, where those converted had been devoted to occultic activities (19:17-20).

Thus we are exposed to the REAL manner of conversion and Divine direction – the way people react when their hearts have been touched and renewed. The power of the Gospel is confirmed as well as the nature of faith.

Real conversion does not involve delivering extensive apologetics and evidences that supposedly confirm the validity of Scripture. It does not require scopic training and orientation courses, or prolonged exposure to the truth. Such things reflect the wisdom of men, and will not be found in this record of the very real spread of the Gospel.

PAUL'S TRAVELS

The book of Acts provides us with an extensive commentary on Paul's travels for the Lord. These travels are encapsulated in, what men have called, his three missionary journeys. Because they comprise a considerable portion of this book, I have provided a brief overview of those journeys in the preceding page, together with the portions of Acts in which they are recorded.

The most ancient title of this book is "The Acts of the Apostles." Although this name was not given by the one who wrote the book, it does reflect the general nature of it. Some have preferred to call it "The Acts of the Holy Spirit," and, indeed, there is a sense in which that is what is recorded. Yet, this does not provide the intended perspective. Jesus had delivered a commandment to His apostles regarding the preaching of the Gospel and the making of disciples. This book tells us how that was carried out.

This is a faithful and responsible record of the activities of the Apostles AFTER Jesus ascended to heaven and was enthroned on the right hand of God. It is, in fact, an account of how Jesus went about to “build” His church

This is a faithful and responsible record of the activities of the Apostles AFTER Jesus ascended to heaven and was enthroned on the right hand of God. It is, in fact, an account of how Jesus went about to “build” His church (Matt 16:18), working through the men He had ordained and empowered, together with those they gathered around them. As will become very evident, these men conducted themselves quite differently than when they walked with Jesus. They will not have so many questions (Matt 17:10; Mk 7:17; 9:28; 10:10), but will provide answers. They will not philosophize about why conditions exist (John 9:2), but will have a very real grasp of the situation. They will not ask if they should call down fire on their opponents (Lk 9:54), but will conduct themselves more in keeping with the nature of Christ and the New Covenant.

It will be very apparent that something had occurred to these men that altered their nature. They thought, spoke, and acted differently. We will see “newness of life” in action. That “newness” is strictly owing to the exaltation of Christ, which confirmed the Father’s complete and unquestioned acceptance of His death for the sins of the world.

THE SPREAD OF THE GOSPEL

This book records the remarkable spread of the Gospel – within a short time and without an elaborate humanly-devised system being in place.

Preaching

- “Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word ” (Acts 8:4).
- “Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen traveled as far as Phenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to none but unto the Jews only” (Acts 11:19).
- “ Preached the Word” (8:25; 13:5; 14:25; 15:36).
- “ Preaching the word” (Acts 8:4; 11:19; 15:35).
- “ Preached the Gospel” (8:25; 14:7,21).
- “ Preach the word” (16:6).
- “ Preach the Gospel” (16:10).
- “And the word of God increased” (Acts 6:7).
- “ The word of God grew and multiplied” (12:24).
- “So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed” (19:20).
- “And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region” (Acts 13:49).
- “ . . . all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus , both Jews and Greeks” (Acts 19:10).

Places

The places where the Gospel was preached were divers and extensive. Although the purpose of the book is not to provide every single detail of these places, enough is made known to cause extensive and productive thought among those who are in Christ Jesus.

- Countries: Acahai, Asia, Egypt, Africa, Arabia, Italy, Greece

- Cities: Jerusalem, Samaria, Lystra, Derbe, Philippi, Thyatira, Ephesus, Myra, Lasea, Paphos, Selucia, Salamis, Miletus, Trogyllium, Ptolemais, Caesarea, Rome, Athens, Corinth, Thessalonica, Amphipolis, Apollonia, Azotus, Troas, Mysia, Neapolis, Tarsus, Damascus, Antioch of Pisidia,, Attallia, Perga, Assos, Mitylene, Patara, Tyre

- Regions: Lyconia, Macedonia, Lycia, Galatia, Phrygia, Phenice, Pontus, Lyia, Cyrene, Crete, Pisidia, Syria

- Nations: Parthia, Media, Elam, Mesopotamia, Judea, Cappadocia,

- Coasts: Cilicia, Pamphylia

- Islands: Cyprus, Paphos, Chios, Samos, Samothracia, Melita, Coos, Rhodes

Paul's Extended Ministries

- 1 year in Antioch (Acts 11:26).

- 1 ½ years in Corinth (Acts 18:11).

- 2 years in Asia (Acts 19:10).

- 3 years in Ephesus (Acts 20:31).

- 2 years in his own hired house in We will find that the emphasis of the activities in this book related to delivering the Word of God to the people in the energy of Divine

Rome (Acts 28:30).

EMPHASIZING THE WORD

We will find that the emphasis of the activities in this book related to delivering the Word of God to the people in the energy of Divine power . If there are deeds of kindness, they are administered within the context of the Word of God. If there is a ministration of helps or assistance, it is toward those who have embraced the Word of God. Admittedly, this differs significantly from the thrust of contemporary "Christianity." But here, we are being exposed to the REAL work of God, superintended by the risen Christ.

A WORTHY QUOTATION

"This book contains incontrovertible evidence of the truth of Christianity. It is a record of its early triumphs. Within the space of 30 years after the death of Christ the gospel had been carried to all parts of the civilized, and to no small portion of, the uncivilized world. Its progress and its triumphs were not concealed. Its great transactions were not "done in a corner." It had been preached in the most splendid, powerful, and enlightened cities; churches were already founded in Jerusalem, Antioch, Corinth, Ephesus, Philippi, and at Rome. The gospel had spread in Arabia, Asia Minor, Greece, Macedon, Italy, and Africa. It had assailed the most mighty existing institutions. It had made its way over the most formidable barriers. It had encountered the most deadly and malignant opposition. It had traveled to the capital (Rome), and had secured such a hold even in the imperial city as to make it certain that it would finally overturn the established religion and seat itself upon the ruins of paganism. Within 30 years, it had settled the point that it would overturn every bloody altar, close every pagan temple, bring under its influence everywhere the men of office, rank, and power, and that "the banners of the faith would soon stream from the palaces of the Caesars." All this would be accomplished by the instrumentality of Jews — of fishermen — of Nazarenes. They did not have either wealth, armies, or allies. With the exception of Paul, they were people without much education. They were taught only by the Holy Spirit, armed only with the power of God, victorious only because Christ was their Captain, and the world acknowledged the presence of the messengers of the Highest One and the power of the Christian religion. Its success never has been, and never can be accounted for by any other supposition than that God Himself attended it! And if the Christian religion is not true, the change which was brought about by the twelve apostles is the most inexplicable, mysterious, and wonderful event that has ever been witnessed in this world. Their success will stand until the end of time as an argument for the truth of God's overall plan (see 2 Corinthians 13:8). It will always confound the infidel. And, it will forever sustain the Christian with the assured belief that this IS a religion which has proceeded from the all-powerful and infinitely benevolent God." ALBERT BARNES

THE AUTHOR OF THE BOOK

This being the case, the book of Acts reflects Divine priorities, and passes along to believers the things that God wants us to know about the ongoing work of the enthroned Savior.

The author of this book is Luke, whom Paul referred to as "the beloved physician" (Col 4:14). He accompanied Paul in his tour of Asia and Macedonia (Acts 16:10-13; 20:5-6). He was also with Paul in his journey to Jerusalem (Acts 21:1-18). Additionally, Luke accompanied Paul in his final trip to Rome (Acts 27:1-28:31; 2 Tim 4:11; Phile 1:24).

Luke identified himself as the one who wrote the Gospel that bears his name, sending it to the same person to whom this book is addressed: Theophilus (Lk 1:3; Acts 1:1). Luke, like John (Gospel of John, First John, Second John, Third John) does not refer to himself by name. John refers to himself by name only in the book of the Revelation (Rev 1:1,4,9; 21:2,8). Of course neither does Matthew identify himself as the author of the Gospel of Matthew. The same is true of Mark. In the book of Acts Luke refers to himself only as one of those traveling with Paul – "WE" (16:10,11,12,13,16; 20:6,13,14,15; 21:1,2,3,4, 5,6,7,8,10,12,14, 15,16,17; 27:1,2,3,4,5,7,15,16,18,19, 20,26,27,29,37; 28:10,11,12,13,14,16).

There is also a consistency in the early teachers of the church (after the apostles) in ascribing the authorship of this book to Luke. Throughout church history, there has been a unanimous acceptance of Luke as the author of this book. There is no need to engage in lengthy arguments to substantiate that point.

DATE OF WRITING

It is generally understood that Luke completed this book around 63 A.D. It was apparently written from Rome, shortly after Paul had completed spending two years in his own house, teaching things concerning the kingdom of God. The last two verses of the book read, "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him" (Acts 28:30-31). It is probable that Luke compiled records as he traveled with Paul, using them to provide remarkable details in this book. Through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit (for "all Scripture" is given by His inspiration – 2 Tim 3:16), the book was then compiled. This being the case, it reflects Divine priorities, and passes along to believers the things that God wants us to know about the ongoing work of the enthroned Savior. The writing of this book was supervised from heaven, written by a holy man who was empowered by the Holy Spirit.

WHAT IS NOT IN THE BOOK

It is interesting to note what is NOT in this book.

- Proportionately little of the evangelization of the Jews, except for preaching in the Temple (2:46; 5:20,25,42) and synagogues (9:20; 13:5,14; 14:1; 17:1,10,17; 18:4,19; 19:8;).
- Little of the history of the mother church in Jerusalem.

- After the first chapter (1:13), as regarding “the eleven” (without Judas) and “the twelve” (including Matthias, 1:26), only Peter, James, and John are mentioned after chapter one. “Peter and John” are mentioned six times (3:1,3,4,11; 4:13,19; 8:14). Besides that, “John” is mentioned twice (1:13; 4:6). “James” is mentioned twice (1:13; 12:2). By way of contrast, Peter is mentioned sixty-times, and Paul one hundred and forty-six times (as “Saul” as additional twenty-five times).

- There are no community projects, neighborhood outreaches, philanthropy toward the unsaved There are no community projects, neighborhood outreaches, philanthropy toward the unsaved needy, relief projects for distressed areas, supposedly sanctified entertainment, or efforts directed toward special people groups: i.e. singles, married, needy, relief projects for distressed areas, supposedly sanctified entertainment, or efforts directed toward special people groups: i.e. singles, married, youth, senior citizens, etc. Whatever may be said of such activities, they are not recorded in the book of the “Acts.” These are not the activities in which the exalted Christ is represented as being engaged.

- There is not a stereotyped statement of a “plan of salvation,” consisting of a specified number of “steps.”

- There is no reference to “the sinner’s prayer.”

- There is no reference to “the great commission.”

- There is not a solitary reference to “the love of God.”

- No standard version of this book (KJV, NKJV, ASV, RSV, NRSV, NASB, NIV) contains the word “love.”

- Only the NASB, NRSV, and RSV contain the word “charity” (“deeds of kindness and charity” – Acts 9:36).

- “Satan,” or “the devil,” is only mentioned four times (5:3; 10:38; 13:10; 26:18).

- The word “sin” occurs only once (7:60), “transgression” once (1:18), and “iniquity” twice (1:18; 8:23).

By way of contrast, there are forty-six references to “Jesus,” nine references to “Christ,” sixteen references to “Jesus Christ,” sixty references to “the Lord,” sixteen references to “the Lord Jesus,” forty-one references to the “Holy Spirit,” and one hundred and seventy-four references to “God.” There are also forty-one references to the “Word,” “Gospel,” or “Scriptures.” This reflects the kind of context in which the Spirit will develop our ideas about the church.

We must avoid drawing erroneous conclusions from these observations. However, they do suggest an emphasis that is quite different from that to which the churches of our time are being subjected. During the past fifty years, a new and vastly different vocabulary has been adopted and propagated by the self-proclaimed leaders of the Christian community.

LUKE AND THEOPHILUS

LUKE

“Luke” is mentioned by name only two times in Scripture (Col 4:14; 2 Tim 4:11). In the first, he is referred to as “the beloved physician,” and the second states that he was with Paul when he was imprisoned in Rome (2 Tim 4:11). It is inferred that, since he was a physician, he was a man of superior education and natural mental aptitude. His writings also reflect an extraordinarily disciplined mind, which was obviously a gift given to him and sanctified by his faith.

It is generally understood that Luke was a Gentile, as his name is Greek. Also, when Paul mentioned him among those who were laboring with him, he did not class him among the Jews, whom he said were “of the circumcision” (Col 4:11-14). His name means “light-giving,” which is certainly appropriate. We do not know when he was converted. We do know that He was not an eye-witness of the Lord Jesus Himself. His knowledge of Christ was received from the apostles, but his understanding of their word came from God. Therefore he wrote in his gospel, “Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word ; it seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first , to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus” (Lk 1:1-3).

His unusual devotion to Paul sets him apart from the disciples of our day. The Lord had truly touched his heart, changes his affections, and filled him with holy zeal. This kind of man is most unusual in our time – and no doubt in his time as well.

Luke stands as a sterling confirmation that men do not require the spotlight in order to labor effectively for the Lord. Many good and holy men, like Luke, have willingly labored in the shadow of those who had seen more than themselves.

THEOPHILUS

The name “Theophilus” means “friend of God” – “Theo” (God) and “philos” (friend). Here is a person of some distinction (“most excellent Theophilus” – Acts 1:3), to whom two sizeable books of Scripture were written (Lk 1:3; Acts 1:1). Yet, apart from Luke’s salutation in his Gospel and the book of Acts, there is total silence concerning this man in Scripture. Some of the “church fathers” considered him to be a fictitious character – a sort of literary appellation that applies to every believer. Without delving further into this, I will simply say I consider this to be a lot of nonsense.

The term “most excellent” is nowhere applied to a mere fictitious character – a kind of storybook way of speaking to every child of God. The Holy Spirit does have a way of speaking to ALL believers: “ all saints” (Eph 3:8,18; 6:18; Phile 1:5' Rev 8:3), “ all that call upon Him” (Rom 10:12), “ all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 1:2), “ all that believe” (1 Thess 1:7), “ all that will live godly” (2 Tim 3:12), and “ all that are in Christ Jesus” (1 Pet 5:14).

There are other instances of this manner of addressing men. “Claudius Lysias unto the most excellent governor Felix sendeth greeting” (Acts 23:26). “We accept it always, and in all places, most noble Felix , with all thankfulness” (Acts 24:3). “But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness” (Acts 26:25).

I conclude, therefore, that Theophilus was some high-ranking official who had a keen interest in things pertaining to life and godliness. He is an example of those few noble souls who are called of God into the fellowship of His dear Son. As it is written , “For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble , are called” (1 Cor 1:26). Thank God, it does not read “not any,” but “not many.”

HISTORICAL, BUT NOT MERELY HISTORICAL

The book of Acts is an historical book, but not merely or primarily an historical book. It is a record of things that happened, but they are things wrought by the hand of God, not mere men. Permit me to underscore this with a few phrases found in this precious volume.

- “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this , which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33).

- “Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved” (Acts 2:47).

- “But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors , and brought them forth, and said” (Acts 5:19).

- “And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip , saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert” (Acts 8:26).

- “And he trembling and astonished said, Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him , Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do” (Acts 9:6).

- “And there was a certain disciple at Damascus, named Ananias; and to him said the Lord in a vision , Ananias. And he said, Behold, I am here, Lord. And the Lord said unto him , Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul, of Tarsus: for, behold, he prayeth” (Acts 9:10-11).

- “When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).

- “And the hand of the Lord was with them : and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord” (Acts 11:21).

- “And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent His angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews” (Acts 12:11).

- “And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them” (Acts 16:10).

- “And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened , that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul” (Acts 16:14).

- “Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar: and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee ” (Acts 27:24).

If we have a heart for it, we will behold the hand of the Lord throughout this book. He will empower His messengers, convict sinners, open hearts, and pour forth His Spirit. He will direct His people, opening some doors and closing others. When there is increase, it will come from Him.

If we have a heart for it, we will behold the hand of the Lord throughout this book. He will empower His messengers, convict sinners, open hearts, and pour forth His Spirit. He will direct His people, opening some doors and closing others. When there is increase, it will come from Him. When the church is comforted, it will come from the Lord. The Lord Jesus will be seen as present in all of the labors of those He commissions and empowers.

While it is true that those who remain “in the body,” alive in this world, are “absent from the Lord,” He is by no means absent from them. He promised those who labored in His vineyard , “Lo, I am with alway, even unto the end of the world” (Matt 28:20). That marvelous promise is lived out in the book of Acts, seen in every account it provides.

THE FORMER TREATISE

“ 1:1 The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus, of all that Jesus began both to do and teach.”

Luke again writes to Theophilus. He will not update the Gospel, but will rather chronicle its proclamation, and the wonderful effects it works among men. He will also provide a glimpse of how the exalted Christ works within His church – how He directs it, and what occurs when the “glorious Gospel of the blessed God” (1 Tim 1:11) is faithfully proclaimed.

THE FORMER TREATISE

“The former treatise have I made, O Theophilus . . .” Other versions read, “The former account I made, O Theophilus” NKJV “The first account I composed, Theophilus” NASB “In my former book, Theophilus,” “In the first book, Theophilus,” NRSV “I have given an earlier account, O Theophilus,” BBE “I composed the first discourse, O Theophilus.” DARBY “In my earlier work, Theophilus,” NJB “Dear friend who loves God,” LIVING “My former narrative, Theophilus,” WEYMOUTH and “In the former account [which I prepared], O Theophilus.” AMPLIFIED

The word “treatise” is translated from the Greek word lo,gon (logov, from “logos”). This precise word is used 130 times in the New Covenant Scriptures. It is used in a variety of ways, but all of them have the same import – an articulated message, or integrated thought. A few of them will serve to substantiate this. I have highlighted the words translated from lo,gon.

- SOMETHING SAID AGAINST JESUS. “And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him . . .” (Matt 12:32).
- POINTLESS SPEAKING. “But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment” (Matt 12:36).
- THE GOSPEL. “Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended” (Matt 13:21).
- A PRAYER. “And He left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words” (Matt 26:44).
- AN ACCOUNT. “For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse. 41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly” (Acts 19:40).
- THE WORK OF GOD. “For he will finish the work, and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth” (Rom 9:28).
- GIVING AN ACCOUNT. “So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God” (Rom 14:12).
- MESSAGE OF RECONCILIATION. “To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation” (2 Cor 5:19).
- THE WORD OF GOD. “Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things” (Gal 6:6).
- THE LAW SPOKEN AT SINAI. “And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words; which voice they that heard intreated that the word should not be spoken to them any more” (Heb 12:27).
-

As you can see, “word” is not used for a single “word,” but refers to a message, or articulated thought. It can refer to a phrase or idiom (i.e. “idle word”), a prophecy, or a saying. It refers to the entirety of the Gospel, the entirety of the Law, and even the entirety of the Scriptures themselves. It is even used of the presentation of a cause, or giving an intelligent account of something. A synonym for “word” is also “speech” – as in, “John delivered his speech.”

In all of these a purpose is being served by the expression. There is a certain focus in it, and the integration of divers things into a single objective. It is actually a series of statements that make a particular point . All of the details stand together, complement one another, and are a part of a whole concept and single purpose. In ordinary English, we use the term in this way. If we are discussing a certain subject, we might ask a person with expertise in the matter, “Can you give us a word on that?” If a messenger comes from one diplomat to another he might say, “I am sent to deliver a word to you.”

In writing his Gospel, John gave the reason for his word – for a “word” always has an objective. “But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name” (John 20:31). That is why he wrote. Therefore, he did not highlight the activities of Peter or any of the other apostles. His book did not place the accent on Jewish customs or the state of the nation at that time. He spoke predominantly of Jesus Christ. If he mentioned other personalities like the scribes, Pharisees, Sadducees, and lawyers, it was ONLY as they related to the Lord Jesus. If he wrote of Herod, Pilate, Caiaphas, Augustus Caesar, or some other dignitary it was only because they had something to do with Jesus.

Treatise

As used in this text, a “treatise” is not a mere chronological account of Christ’s birth, life, ministry, death, and resurrection. Luke wrote His Gospel to accent Jesus. He provided details that would shed light on the Divine purpose that was fulfilled in Him. When people read his gospel, they would become better acquainted with the Savior of the world.

ALL THAT JESUS BEGAN TO DO AND TEACH

“ . . . of all that Jesus began both to do and teach.” Other versions read, “I wrote about all that Jesus did and taught from the beginning,” NRSV “ I have dealt with all that Jesus began to do and teach,” RSV “of all the things which Jesus did , and of His teaching from the first,” BBE “I dealt with everything Jesus had done and taught from the beginning.” NJB “In my first letter I told you about Jesus’ life and teachings , LIVING “all that Jesus began doing and teaching ,” MONTGOMERY and “I made [a continuous report] dealing with all the things which Jesus began to do and to teach .” AMPLIFIED

There is something here that must be perceived. When speaking about “ all” that Jesus did, Luke wrote only of things that related to His mission to lay down His life and take it up again. He provided two morsels of information that took place within the first two years of Jesus life.

- The visitation of the shepherds on the night of His birth (Luke 2:7-20).
- His dedication as Mary’s firstborn after the days of her purification were complete (Luke 2:21-38).

There are three pieces of information the next ten years of His life.

- Growing, becoming strong, being filled with wisdom, and the grace of God upon Him (Luke 2:40).
- His visitation to Jerusalem and encounter with the “doctors” of the Law (Luke 2:41-50).

One thing is said about the next eighteen years of His life.

- A brief summation of the next eighteen years of His life (subjection to parents, increase in wisdom, stature, and in favor with God and man (Luke 2:51-52).

There are 1,151 verses in the Gospel of Luke. Of them 45 verses are devoted to the first thirty years of His life – under 4%! Over 86% of Luke’s Gospel is devoted to the last three and a half years of Jesus’ life. So far as doing and teaching is concerned, we have a single record of a particular deed Jesus did prior to His baptism – when He sat in the Temple, heard the doctors, and asked them questions (Lk 2:46). One verse out of 1,151 that speaks of a particular deed Jesus did. We have one record of a particular word He said prior to the beginning of His ministry: “How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father’s business?” (Luke 2:49).

Among other things, this confirms that Christ’s teaching was not within the context of the Old Covenant, as some affirm. Rather, Jesus preached in an interim period – between the Law and the Gospel, or the First Covenant and New, or Second, Covenant.

Luke’s “treatise” was a record of Jesus’ life as it bore directly upon the redemption that He came to accomplish. The attention of Jesus became focused on that mission, and He entered fully into it, when He was baptized by John. It was then that He “began” to “do” with the special anointing of God upon Him, and “teach” with the intent of enlightening men concerning God and His Kingdom.

I do not believe there has been a man throughout all of history that would provided a record of Jesus in such a manner. There are those who say the first six years of a child’s life are the most critical. How does their observation sound in view of the life of the premier person in all of history?

Among other things, this confirms that Christ’s teaching was not within the context of the Old Covenant, as some affirm. Rather, Jesus preached in an interim period – between the Law and the Gospel, or the First Covenant and New, or Second, Covenant. That is why the Law is said to have been “until John” (Matt 11:13; Lk 16:16).

There are those who say that Jesus’ teaching was strictly within the context of the Law, and therefore does not apply to the New Covenant era – “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). In doing this, these sophists imagine they can remove the pungent reality of words like, “believe only” (Lk 8:50; Mk 5:36), or “If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth” (Mk 9:23).

Such miserable teachers are corrupt in both their understanding and objectives. Jesus said of His own words, “My words shall not pass away” (Matt 24:35), and “the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life ” (John 6:63). He spoke of the shame that would come upon those who are ashamed of His words (Lk 9:26). He said the person who did not receive His words would be judged on the day of judgment by the very words he rejected (John 12:47). He affirmed that He Himself and the Father would take up their abide in the person who kept His words (John 14:23).

Luke refers to the words of Jesus as what He “began . . . to teach;” that is, what He started to unfold and accomplish in both word and deed. Now, in the book of Acts, he will show how those words were fulfilled after His return to glory, and how they continued to work within the hearts of those who believed them. Let men have done with foolish views of the words of Jesus!

UNTIL THE DAY HE WAS TAKEN UP

“ 2 Until the day in which He was taken up, after that He through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom He had chosen”

Luke is very particular about the focus of His Gospel. He marks a point in time that terminated Christ’s ministry in His body on the earth. This was an epoch in the Gospel, and thus a special notation is made of it.

UNTIL THE DAY HE WAS TAKEN UP

“Until the day in which He was taken up . . . ” Other versions read, “until the day when He was taken up,” NASB ““until the day in which He was received up,” ASV “Till the day when He was taken up to heaven,” BBE “until the day He ascended in to heaven,” NLT “until the day when He was carried up,” LIVING and “until the time of His ascension .” PHILLIPS

It is tragic beyond description that popular preachers and teachers have so very little to say about the ascension of Jesus, when He was received back into heaven. It is a mark that clearly identifies that a “falling away” has taken place, and thus much about the real Jesus is not perceived as having any relevancy for us today. The only time people fail to communicate a truth about Jesus, of which they are aware, is when they do not see it as necessary or important.

How important is the ascension of Christ? Is it really a part of the Gospel? Judging from the way men handle this aspect of “the record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11), one might be led to think of it as something interesting, but relatively unimportant. Does the Word of God speak much about this – the ascension of Jesus?

The Prophets Spoke of It

- “Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in” (Psa 24:7-10).
- “God is gone up with a shout, the LORD with the sound of a trumpet” (Psa 47:5).
- “Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive: thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the rebellious also, that the LORD God might dwell among them” (Psa 68:18).
- “I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought Him near before Him” (Dan 7:13).

Jesus Spoke About It

- “Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory ?” (Luke 24:26).
- “And He saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter ye shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man” (John 1:51).
- “What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where He was before ?” (John 6:62).
- “Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto Him that sent Me ” (John 7:33).
- “In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you . And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know” (John 14:2-4).
- “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto My Father ” (John 14:12).
- “Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away , and come again unto you. If ye loved Me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father : for My Father is greater than I” (John 14:28).
- “But now I go My way to Him that sent me ; and none of you asketh Me, Whither goest Thou?” (John 16:5).

- “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away : for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart , I will send Him unto you” (John 16:7).

- “And when He (the Comforter) is come, He will reprove the world . . . Of righteousness, because I go to My Father , and ye see Me no more” (John 16:9-10).

- “A little while, and ye shall not see me: and again, a little while, and ye shall see Me, because I go to the Father ” (John 16:16).

It is tragic beyond description that popular preachers and teachers have so very little to say about the ascension of Jesus, when He was received back into heaven. It is a mark that clearly identifies that a “falling away” has taken place, and thus much about the real Jesus is not perceived as having any relevancy for us today.

“I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father ” (John 16:28).

- “And now come I to Thee ; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have My joy fulfilled in themselves” (John 17:13).

- “Jesus saith unto her, Touch Me not; for I am not yet ascended to My Father: but go to My brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father , and your Father; and to My God, and your God ” (John 20:17).

Mark and Luke Record the Ascension

- “So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven , and sat on the right hand of God” (Mark 16:19).

- “And it came to pass, while he blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven ” (Luke 24:51).

The Spirit Moved Upon Holy Men to Write of the Ascension After Jesus Returned to Heaven

- “And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up ; and a cloud received Him out of their sight” (Acts 1:9).

- “Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:21).

- “Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God , who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:34).

- “Which he wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at his own right hand in the heavenly places ” (Eph 1:20).

- “Wherefore He saith, When He ascended up on high , he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men? (Now that He ascended , what is it but that He also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens , that He might fill all things)” (Eph 4:8-10).

- “And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory” (1 Tim 3:16).

- “Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Heb 1:3).

- “Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession” (Heb 4:14).

- “For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us” (Heb 9:24).

This accents the total harmony of the Godhead in the resurrection of Jesus. God raised Him (Acts 2:32; 3:15), the Spirit was in the matter (1 Pet 3:18), and Jesus took back His own life (John 10:17-18). Now we see that the Holy Spirit was also active in Jesus delivering His last words to the apostles.

I will speak more of the ascension of Christ when we come to the second verse. At this point it is sufficient to note that it is not at all acceptable for those who speak in the name of the Lord to ignore this facet of Christ Jesus – namely, His ascension. If, in the “record” God has given of His Son, and in the prophets as well, so much has been said about this matter, those who omit it in their preaching and teaching must give an account for that omission. Let it be clear, that no reason for such an deletion will in any way be acceptable.

AFTER THAT HE THROUGH THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ . . . after that he through the Holy Ghost . . . ” Other versions read, “After He through the Holy Spirit,” NKJV “after He had by the Holy Spirit ,” NASB and “ from the Holy Spirit .” NLT

Jesus did not return to glory without preparing His disciples for His bodily absence. Here we are told that Jesus delivered words to His “holy apostles” (Eph 3:5) “by the Holy Spirit.”

The Holy Spirit, then, had “remained” with Jesus, just as John the Baptist was told He would (John 1:33). Speaking of Christ’s resurrection, Peter affirmed that He was “quickened [made alive] by the Spirit” (1 Pet 3:18). Paul also alludes to this when he writes , “and declared to be the Son of God with power according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead” NKJV (Rom 1:4). He categorically refers to it in Romans 8:11: “But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you” (Rom 8:11).

This accents the total harmony of the Godhead in the resurrection of Jesus. God raised Him (Acts 2:32; 3:15), the Spirit was in the matter (1 Pet 3:18), and Jesus took back His own life (John 10:17-18). Now we see that the Holy Spirit was also active in Jesus delivering His last words to the apostles. There are at least two reasons for this.

- No part of redemption will be wrought independently of the Holy Spirit.
- The apostles themselves would be given the Holy Spirit, who would expound the words Jesus delivered to them, enlightening their hearts.

HAD GIVEN COMMANDMENTS UNTO THE APOSTLES

“ . . . had given commandments unto the apostles whom He had chosen” Other versions read, ““ given orders to the apostles whom He had chosen,” NASB “after giving instructions to the Apostles He had chosen ,” NIV “after He had given commandment . . . to the apostles whom He had chosen,” RSV “after he had given His orders . . . to the Apostles of whom he had made selection ,” BBE “having . . . charged the apostles whom he had chosen,” DARBY “ he gave his instructions to the apostles he had chosen,” NJB “after giving his chosen apostles further instructions ,” NLT “He talked to the apostles whom He had chosen,” IE “He gave the apostles whom He had chosen their orders ,” WILLIAMS “had instructed and commanded the apostles (special messengers) whom He had chosen,” AMPLIFIED and “he gave his instructions . . . to the special messengers of his choice.” PHILLIPS

May no person ever think of the Lord Jesus without remembering that He is “a Leader and Commander to the people” (Isa 55:4). I personally have no tolerance for people who speak of Jesus as though He was their “bosom buddy” and close “friend.” Jesus called His disciples “friends,” but never encouraged them to call Him “Friend.”

When Jesus met with His disciples, He did not make a few suggestions, but gave them “commandments.” Matthew, Mark, and Luke record some of these “commandments” (Matt 28:18-19; Mk 16:15-16; Lk 24:45-49). Briefly summarized, these commandments include the following.

- Go into all the world (Mk 16:15a).
- Preach the Gospel to every person (Mk 16:15b).
- Teach all nations, or “make disciples of all nations” NKJV (Matt 28:18b).
- “Baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” NKJV (Matt 28:19).
- Teach them to observe all things that Jesus commanded them (Matt 28:19).
- Repentance and remission of sins should be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem (Lk 24:49).

Jesus had accomplished the destruction of the devil (Heb 2:14), the plundering of dominating spiritual principalities (Col 2:15), and the abolition of death (2 Tim 1:10). He had put away sin (Heb 9:26), made peace through His blood (Col 1:20), ended the Law as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4), blotted out the massive debt incurred under the Law (Col 2:14), and delivered us from this present evil world (Gal 1:4). He had opened up a new and living way to God (Heb 10:20), made a way to announce liberty to the captives (Lk 4:18), and made it right and Just for God to justify sinners (Rom 3:26).

Christ’s “commandments” had to do with making these things known to the world through His empowered messengers. God would use them to fully develop what is called “the record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11).

HE SHOWED HIMSELF

“ 3 To whom also he showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God”

I must confess that I can hardly contain myself as I ponder this marvelous record. It reveals to us the glorious extent to which God has gone to set us free from sin (Heb 1:3), make us separate from the world (Gal 1:4), work in us to will and do of His own good please (Phil 2:13), and at last bring us to glory (Heb 2:10). This work was too staggering to be accomplished by any son of Adam, or group comprised of such sons. Even after the foundational work was done, Jesus labored to convince His disciples of the reality of what He had done and who He was.

TO WHOM ALSO HE SHOWED HIMSELF ALIVE

“ To whom also He showed himself alive . . . ” Other versions read, “to whom He also presented Himself alive,” NKJV “ To these He also presented Himself alive,” NASB “He showed Himself to these men,” NIV “to whom also He presented Himself living,” DARBY “He appeared to the apostles from time to time . . . that He was actually alive,” NLT “He appeared . . . actually alive,” LIVING and “He showed that He was alive.” IE

In this single verse we have a grand summation of nearly one hundred verses of the four Gospels (96).

CHRIST'S LIFE IS THE PRINCIPLE POINT

Jesus “showed Himself alive ” because the salvation men would experience would be by means of His resurrected life. That is the meaning of Paul’s statement: “For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life ” (Rom 5:10).

This is a technical point, but it must be made – particularly in view of the general level of understanding that exists within the professed church. We are never said to have been “SAVED” by Christ’s death, or by His blood. The Spirit is very precise on how we are to view Christ’s death, or the shedding of His blood.

- “Much more then, being now justified by his blood , we shall be saved from wrath through him” (Rom 5:9).

- “For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son , much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by his life” (Rom 5:10).

- “But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ” (Eph 2:13).

- “And, having made peace through the blood of His cross , by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven” (Col 1:20).

- “And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of His flesh through death , to present you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in His sight” (Col 1:21-22).

- “Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death , that is, the devil” (Heb 2:14).

- “And for this cause He is the Mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance ” (Heb 9:15).

- “Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus ” (Heb 10:19).

Salvation, however, requires a LIVING Savior, who has not only died, but is “alive for evermore” (Rom 1:18). Salvation required a Lamb to be offered, but a Lamb that is alive in heaven as well (Rev 5:8,12,13; 6:1,16; 7:9,10,14,17; 12:11; 13:8; 14:4,10; 15:3; 17:14; 19:7,9; 21:14,22,23; 22:1,3).

Ponder the aspects of salvation that require a LIVING Savior.

- Captain (Heb 2:10).
- Deliverer (Rom 11:26).
- Leader (Isa 55:4).
- Intercessor (Heb 7:25).
- Shepherd (John 10:14; Heb 13:20).
- Head (Eph 4:15; Colo 1:18; 2:10).
- Author and Finisher of our Faith (Heb 12:2).
- Author of eternal salvation (Heb 5:9).

- Mediator (1 Tim 2:5; Heb 9:15; 12:24).
- Advocate (1 John 2:1).
- Alpha and Omega (Rev 1:8).
- First and Last (Rev 1:17).
- Beginning and End (Rev 22:13).
- The Amen (Rev 3:14).
- One from which comes Grace, Mercy, and Peace (1 Tim 1:2; 2 John 1:3).
- Branch (Isa 4:2; Jer 33:15; Zech 3:8).
- Light (John 8:12).
- Bread (John 6:35,48).
- King (1 Tim 6:15).
- The Power of God (1 Cor 1:24).
- The Wisdom of God (1 Cor 1:24).
- Counselor (Isa 9:6).
- Door (John 10:7).
- Faithful Witness (Rev 1:5).
- Forerunner (Heb 6:20).
- High Priest (Heb 2:17; 3:1; 4:14-15).
- Vine (John 15:4-5).
- Judge (Acts 10:42; 17:31).
- Living Stone (1 Pet 2:4).
- Lord (2 Cor 4:6; Col 2:6).
- Master (John 13:13).
- Prince of Life (Acts 3:15).
- Teacher (John 3:2; 1 John 5:20).

All of these, and more, require a LIVING and active Savior. None of them can be accomplished by a dead or inactive Savior.

Therefore, Jesus “showed Himself alive ” to His disciples, because from this point on, everything would depend upon Him being alive, in heaven, and at the right hand of God. We are not saved by an historical Christ, but by a living One who has died, and is now risen from the dead! All leaders of all worldly religions – all of them – are either dead or dying! But the Lord Jesus is alive, and we are being “saved by His life.”

In fact, “newness of life” assumes a vital union with the living Savior. Thus Paul reasons, “Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him ” (Rom 6:8).

The very last riveting impression that was left with the disciples of Jesus was that HE WAS ALIVE!

AFTER HIS PASSION

“ . . . after His passion . . . ” Other versions read, “after His suffering ,” NKJV “after His death ,” BBE “after He had suffered ,” DARBY “after His crucifixion ,” NLT and “after His passion (His suffering in the garden and on the cross).” AMPLIFIED

The word “passion” is a good English word, and we have no reason to draw back from it. The English definition of the word is as follows: “1 often capitalized a : the sufferings of Christ between the night of the Last Supper and his death b : an oratorio based on a gospel narrative of the Passion,” MERRIAM-WEBSTER 2003 and “the suffering and death of Jesus.” OXFORD

The meaning of the Greek word used here (paqei/n) is, “suffer, to undergo evils, to be afflicted,” THAYER “suffer, undergo, endure, euphemistically die, suffer death.” FRIBERG

The following versions use this word in this text: King James Version (1611), American Standard Version (1901), Revised Standard Version (1952), Douay-Rheims (1899), New Jerusalem Bible (1985), Bishop’s New Testament (1595), Tyndale’s New Testament (1534), The Webster’s Bible (1833), and The Amplified Bible (1954).

Christ’s “passion” refers to the period commencing when He “began to be sorrowful and very heavy.” This took place as they arrived in the Garden, where He would prepare to give Himself “a ransom, to be testified in due time” (1 Tim 2:5). It included His agony in the Garden, when His sweat fell to the ground like “great drops of blood” (Lk 22:44). His “passion” progressed as He was tried and mocked by Caiaphas and his court, Pilate and his court, and Herod and his court. During these occasions – twice before Pilate – He was interrogated, mocked, and beaten (Matt 26:63; John 18:37; Lk 23:8-11; Mk 15:15). He was struck with a reed and with the fists of men (Matt 27:30; Lk 22:64). He was also scourged (Matt 27:26; Mk 15:15; John 19:1). Finally He was crucified, a process that lasted six long and tedious hours (Mk 15:25; Matt 27:46). The “Passion” concluded when His body was buried, and He made His grave with the wicked and the rich. It was then that He made His grave with the wicked, and was identified with the rich in His death, fulfilling Isaiah’s prophecy (Isa 53:9).

An “Accomplished” Death

The “passion” of Christ speaks of a death that was “accomplished.” That is, it was an achievement that involved purpose, intention, obedience, and a profound commitment. Much more was involved than men nailing Him to a cross. They could not have taken the first step to do that if Jesus had not laid down His life, if it was not the proper time, or if a Divine purpose was not being served.

Isaiah provides a remarkable overview of Christ’s atoning death. He covers His rejection by men, and them despising Him. He includes Jesus’ own experience while upon the cross. He even speaks of God’s view of the matter.

When Jesus was “transfigured” before Peter, James, and John, two personalities came from the unseen world to talk with Him. Luke provides the details of that awesome time. “And, behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moses and Elias: who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem ” (Luke 9:30-31). While they walked in this world, neither of these men had said so much as a single word about Jesus’ death. But now, armed with knowledge from another domain, they could speak intelligently, extensively, and no doubt with great comfort, of Christ’s death.

In laying down His life, the following had to be “accomplished.” This is by no means a complete listing.

- His death had to occur at the right time – in the “fulness of time,” and at the right “hour” (Gal 4:4; Lk 22:53).
- In all of the abuse that would be laid upon Him, He could not open His mouth (Isa 53:7; Mk 14:61; Lk 23:9; Acts 8:32).
- The death had to occur in Jerusalem (Lk 9:31; John 19:20).

- The leaders of the Jewish people had to be instrumental in initiating this death (Lk 9:22; Lk 24:7).
- In His death, there had to be a time when He, out of deep need, cried, “I thirst” (Psa 22:15; John 19:28).
- He had to be “vinegar” to drink (Psa 69:21; Mk 15:36).
- They had to cast lots for His garment (Psa 22:18; Matt 27:35; Lk 23:34).
- He had to die with transgressors as well as for them (Isa 53:12; Mk 15:28).
- He had to be identified with the rich when He was buried (Isa 53:9; Mk 15:43-46).
- He had to die childless (Isa 53:8; Acts 8:33).
- He had to be forsaken at his lowest hour (Isa 53:3; Matt 26:56; Mk 14:50).
- He had to pour out His own soul unto death – or lay down His life voluntarily, not having it taken from Him (Isa 53:12; John 10:17-18; Lk 23:46).

An “accomplished” death, indeed! It is no wonder that it is written, “He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed . . .” (Matt 16:21). And again, “He must suffer many things, and be set at nought” (Mark 9:12). And once again, “But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation” (Luke 17:25).

Isaiah provides a remarkable overview of Christ’s atoning death. He covers His rejection by men, and them despising Him. He includes Jesus’ own experience while upon the cross. He even speaks of God’s view of the matter.

“He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief . . . He was despised . . . Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows . . . stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed . . . the LORD hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and He was afflicted . . . He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter . . . for He was cut off out of the land of the living; for the transgression of My people was He stricken. And He made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death . . . it pleased the LORD to bruise Him; He hath put Him to grief . . . He shall see of the travail of His soul . . . He shall bear their iniquities . . . He hath poured out His soul unto death: and He was numbered with the transgressors; and He bare the sin of many . . .” (Isa 53:3-12).

That, dear reader, is the “passion” of which Luke speaks. Remarkably detailed, large in scope, and all intended to full a specific Divine objective.

BY MANY INFALLIBLE PROOFS

“ . . . by many infallible proofs . . . ” Other versions read, “by many convincing proofs,” NASB “many proofs,” RSV “He gave clear and certain signs that He was living,” BBE “by many infallible tokens ,” GENEVA “by many demonstrations ,” NJB “proved in many ways ,” NLT “by many tokens ,” TNT “in many certain proofs ,” YLT “Jesus proved this by doing many convincing things ,” IE “many sure proofs ,” WEYMOUTH “many convincing manifestations ,” MONTGOMERY “by [a series of] many convincing demonstrations [unquestionable evidences and infallible proofs],” AMPLIFIED and “in many convincing ways .” PHILLIPS

The thing being confirmed was that Jesus Himself – the same One that died – was now alive. As Jesus ascended into heaven, two angels said to the disciples, “Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus , which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven” (Acts 1:11).

Some of the “infallible proofs” include the following.

- He appeared first to Mary Magdalene (John 20:14-17).
- He appeared to some women, and told them to tell His disciples to meet Him in Galilee (Matt 28:9).
- He appeared to the two on the road to Emmaus, blessing and breaking bread while with them (Lk 24:30-31).
- He appeared to His disciples while they were behind closed doors (John 20:19).
- He shows His hands, feet and side to the disciples, and especially to Thomas (Lk 24:38-40; 20:20).
- He provides a miraculous catch of fish for His discouraged disciples (John 21:6-13).

SEEN OF THEM FORTY DAYS

“ . . . being seen of them forty days . . . ” Other versions read, “appearing to them over a period of forty days ,” NASB “appearing to them by a space of forty days ,” ASV “being seen by them during forty days ,” DARBY “for forty days He had continued to appear to them ,” NJB “During the forty days after his crucifixion ,” NLT “ through forty days being seen by them,” YLT “The apostles saw Him several times during 40 days ,” IE “appearing to them at intervals during forty days ,” WEYMOUTH “ Revealing Himself to them during forty days,” MONTGOMERY and “appeared to them repeatedly over a period of forty days .” PHILLIPS

These are forty days from the time of Christ’s resurrection. On that resurrection day, He made the following appearances.

- To Mary Magdalene (Mk 16:9).
- To the women who came to anoint His body (Matt 28:9).
- To Simon Peter personally (Lk 24:34; 1 Cor 15:5).
- Possibly to James, to whom a special appearance took place (1 Cor 15:7).
- To Cleopas and his companion (Lk 24:13-32).
- To the disciples (John 20:19).

Once again, the purpose of the “infallible proofs” was to confirm that Jesus was alive – alive to administer salvation from the Throne.

These were also the first forty days after the celebration of the Passover, during which Jesus died. The fiftieth day after the Passover, was when the “firstfruits” were to be offered to the Lord (Lev 23:15-21). That was the “day of Pentecost,” also referred to as “the feast of ingathering” (Ex 23:16).

Therefore, Jesus spent 80% of the fifty days between Passover and Pentecost with the disciples, preparing them for a new day of Pentecost in which the first harvest of souls under the New Covenant would be realized.

SPEAKING OF THINGS PERTAINING TO THE KINGDOM OF GOD

“ . . . and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God.” Other versions read, “speaking of the things concerning the kingdom of God ,” NASB “ spoke about the kingdom of God,” NIV “gave them teaching about the kingdom of God,” BBE “speaking of the things which concern the kingdom of God,” DARBY “ tell them about the kingdom of God,” NJB “ talked to them about the kingdom of God,” NLT “speaking the things concerning the reign of God ,” YLT and “talking with them about the affairs of the kingdom of God.” PHILLIPS

During this 5-6 week period, Jesus spoke with His disciples “of things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.” When Jesus first started preaching He “came into Galilee preaching “the Gospel of the Kingdom of God” (Mk 1:14). Throughout Christ’s prodigious ministry, “the Kingdom” was His most prominent subject. The Gospels contain fifty-four references to “the Kingdom of God,” and thirty-two references to “the Kingdom of heaven,” used exclusively by Matthew in the place of “Kingdom of God.” In addition there are fourteen references to “the kingdom,” making a total of one hundred references to the “Kingdom.” By way of comparison, the Gospels contain twenty-nine references to “faith,” twelve references to “baptism,” eighteen references to “church,” and ten references to “repentance.” “Works” are mentioned 35 times, with most of the references pertaining to Christ’s own works. Accenting the priority of the “Kingdom of God,” “God” is mentioned three hundred and twelve times, the “Father” one hundred and eighty-one times, and “the Son” one hundred and twenty-four times. “Jesus” is mentioned six hundred and twenty-five times, “Lord” two hundred and seven times, and “Christ” sixty times. There are at least fifty references to the Holy Spirit.

In Christ’s ministry, therefore, there were at least one thousand, three hundred, and seventy-five references to Deity! Is there really any question what the Savior talked about, the theme of His teaching, or the focus of His doctrine? Nearly 1,500 references the kingdom, God, Jesus, and the Holy Spirit! There are also one hundred and forty-three references to “heaven.” That defines Christ’s emphasis !

After He was raised from the dead, Jesus continued speaking about the same things He declared while He walked among men. He elaborated on those things, preparing the disciples for what was to come. He more thoroughly acquainted the disciples with what God was doing, and how He was going to do much of it through them. He spoke of a kingdom that is greater than all others, and will eventually put all other kingdoms out of business, grinding them into powder (Dan 2:44).

During this forty-day period, Jesus set the tone for all preaching and teaching, establishing the priority for the rest of time.

If you read the book of Acts and come up with any other emphasis than the Kingdom of God, together with the Father and the Son who govern it, you have read it without “eyes of understanding” (Eph 1:18)!

HE SET THE TONE

During this forty-day period, Jesus set the tone for all preaching and teaching, establishing the priority for the rest of time. Those who emphasize anything else have shown themselves to be fools. God has placed everything into the hands of His Son (Matt 28:18; 1 Pet 3:22). There is not anything that is not placed under Him, the Father Himself being the only exception (1 Cor 15:27). All judgment has been given to Him (John 5:22). All of the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hidden in Him (Col 2:3). All power in heaven and earth has been given to Him (Matt 28:18).

What spirit would move any person to major on something of which Jesus says little or nothing at all? What can really be said of any individual who does not speak of “things pertaining to the kingdom of God?” Or, is there a rational soul in all of the universe and in all of time who would dare to postulate that Jesus spoke of secondary things, or things that will pass away, or things that would become obsolete.

You see, in our day, we are cast upon the horns of a dilemma. We are faced with an astronomical amount of religious activity, and a minuscule amount of speaking about “things pertaining to the kingdom of God.” Is it possible to wed those conditions together, and even ask the blessing of the Lord to be upon such an amalgamation? The answer is so obvious, I have full confidence that there is not a person in possession of a sound mind that can possibly arrive at a wrong conclusion on this matter. I leave it with you to judge concerning the seriousness of the current status of professed Christendom.

For your information, I provide the following record of the activities of our Lord during that forty-day period. I have attempted to put them in a reasonable sequence, and have made an effort to be sure all of the activities are included. Notwithstanding, I may have inadvertently overlooked some.

ACCOUNTS OF CHRIST'S POST- RESURRECTION APPEARANCES

1. Jesus appears first to Mary Magdalene – Mark 16:9; John 20:14-17
2. Mary told his disciples as they were weeping, and they did not believe her – Mark 16:10-11; John 20:18
3. Jesus meets the women after the angels spoke with them – Matt 28:9
4. Jesus tells the women to tell His brethren to meet Him in Galilee – Matt 28:10
5. Jesus appears to Simon – Luke 24:34
6. Jesus appears to over five hundred brethren at one time – 1 Corinthians 15:6.
7. Jesus appears to His half-brother James – 1 Cor 15:7
8. Jesus appears to the two on the road to Emmaus – Mark 16:12; Luke 14:13-31
9. The two go and tell the other disciples, saying that He had also appeared to Simon, and they did not believe them – Mark 16:12-13; Luke 24:32-35; 1 Cor 15:5
10. The “eleven disciples” went to Galilee to meet Him – Matt 28:16
11. He appears to “the eleven” as they ate, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they did not believe those who testified to them – Mark 16:14; Lk 24:35-40; John 20:19; 1 Cor 15:7
12. When the disciples saw Him they worshiped Him, but some doubted – Matt 28:17
13. Jesus shows them His hands and feet – Luke 24:40; John 20:20
14. The disciples “believed not for joy” – Luke 24:41
15. Jesus eats a piece of broiled fish and a honeycomb before them – Luke 24:42-43
16. Jesus tells them these were the words He had told them before, fulfilling the words written in “the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms” – Luke 24:44.
17. Jesus opened their understanding so they could understand the Scriptures – Luke 24:45-46
18. Jesus breathes on the disciples, saying “Receive ye the Holy Spirit” – John 20:21-23
19. The disciples report the event to Thomas, who was not present when the Lord appeared to them. He does not believe them – John 20:24-25.
20. After eight days Jesus appears to the disciples again, and Thomas is present – John 20:26-29.
21. Jesus did many other signs in the presence of His disciples – John 20:30.
22. Jesus shows Himself again to the disciples by the Sea of Tiberias (Galilee) – John 21:1-3.
23. In the morning Jesus calls out to the disciples, who had been fishing all night, asking if they had caught anything. They say they had not – John 21:4-5.

24. Jesus provides a miraculous catch for His disciples – John 21:6.
25. John recognizes that it is the Lord, and tells the disciples, “It is the Lord.” Peter casts himself into sea to swim to Jesus – John 21:7.
26. All of the disciples go to the land, dragging the net of fish they had caught – John 21:8
27. When they arrive on shore, they find Jesus had prepared fish and bread – John 21:9
28. Jesus asks them to bring some of what they had caught – John 21:10
29. Peter draws the net to land, filled with 153 large fish – John 21:11
30. Jesus tells His disciples, “Come and Dine,” and they all knew who He was – John 21:12.
31. Jesus gives them bread and fish, this being the third time He had appeared to them – John 21:13-14.
32. After they dined, Jesus asks Peter three times if He loves Him. Peter affirms He does, and Jesus tells him to feed His lambs and sheep – John 21:15-17
33. Jesus reveals the manner in which Peter would die, bringing glory to God – John 21:18-19
34. Jesus tells Peter, “Follow Me,” and Peter asks what was going to happen to John – John 21:20-21.
35. Jesus replies that if John tarried until He came, that was no business of Peter’s. The saying then went abroad among the brethren that John was not going to die – John 21:22-23.
36. Jesus commissions them to make disciples, teaching all nations – Matt 28:18-20; Mark 16:15-18; Luke 24:47-49.
37. Jesus leads them as far as Bethany, lifts up His hands, and blesses them – Luke 24:50.
38. While He was blessing them, He was parted from them, and carried into heaven – Luke 24:51; Mark 16:19.

Those forty days provided the strength and encouragement required for the disciples to wait faithfully and productively until the day of Pentecost. They did not establish a new direction, but elaborated on what Jesus had already “began both to do and teach.” Jesus never did come primarily as an Interpreter and Teacher of Moses! He did not come to “sit in Moses seat,” as He said the scribes and Pharisees did (Matt 23:2). His doing and teaching were, and continue to be, of another order. What Jesus “began to do and teach” was continued and expanded following His triumphant resurrection and ascension into glory.

THEY COULD NOT DEPART

“ 4 And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of Me.”

While Jesus is personal in His dealings with His people, most of His instruction takes place among gatherings of His people. He met privately with Peter (Lk 24:34; 1 Cor 15:5), and with James as well (1 Cor 15:6). Yet, we have no idea what He said to them privately. The words He said when He was “assembled together with them” are the subject now related.

BEING ASSEMBLED TOGETHER WITH THEM

“And, being assembled together with them . . .” Other versions read, “And gathering them together,” NASB “On one occasion, when He was eating with them,” NIV “While staying with them,” NRSV

Among other things, this confirms that the book of Acts continues from where the Gospel of Luke concludes – same Jesus, same salvation, and the same purpose .

“And they were all together,” BBE “And eating together with them,” DOUAY “While meeting with them,” NAB “While at table with them,” NJB “In one of these meetings,” NLT “Once when He was gathered with them,” IE “While in their company,” WEYMOUTH “And while being in their company and eating with them,” AMPLIFIED and “On one occasion, while he was eating a meal with them.” PHILLIPS

In his Gospel, Luke refers to this occasion, and confirms that Jesus was, in fact, eating with them. “And while they yet believed not for joy, and wondered, He said unto them, Have ye here any meat? And they gave Him a piece of a broiled fish, and of an honeycomb. And He took it, and did eat before them . . . And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:41-49).

The Greek word for “assembled” is sunalizo,menoj (soon-al-id-so-min-os), and has the suggested meaning, “to be assembled with, meet with, eating with.” THAYER

Among other things, this confirms that the book of Acts continues from where the Gospel of Luke concludes – same Jesus, same salvation, and the same purpose .

DO NOT DEPART FROM JERUSALEM

This was a critical matter. Jesus was operating by the Divine agenda, and was bringing the disciples into conformity with it. The prophets had promised that the Messianic blessing would originate in Jerusalem, and flow forth from it.

“ . . . commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem . . .” Other versions read, “He commanded them not to leave Jerusalem,” NASB “He gave them this command, ‘ Do not leave Jerusalem ,” NIV “ He ordered them not to leave Jerusalem,” NRSV “ He charged them not to depart from Jerusalem,” RSV “He gave them orders not to go away from Jerusalem,” BBE “ He enjoined them not to depart from Jerusalem,” NAB and “ He emphasized that they were not to leave Jerusalem.” PHILLIPS

This was a critical matter. Jesus was operating by the Divine agenda, and was bringing the disciples into conformity with it. The prophets had promised that the Messianic blessing would originate in Jerusalem, and flow forth from it. “ . . . for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem ” (Isa 2:3). “ . . . ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem ” (Isa 66:13). “ . . . O Jerusalem , that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!” (Isa 40:9). “ . . . and I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings” (Isa 41:27). “Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem : for the LORD hath comforted his people, He hath redeemed Jerusalem ” (Isa 52:9). “But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy” (Isa 65:18). “As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you; and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem ” (Isa 66:13). “And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance , as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call ” (Joel 2:32).

Jerusalem was the place where God chose to place His name (1 Kgs 11:36), and that was primarily done in anticipation of the coming Messiah. Even the glorious future that is promised to Jerusalem is based upon the acceptance of the Messiah (Isa 4:3; 24:23; Zech 8:3; 12:5-6; 14:11). Jesus also told

His disciples that the preaching of repentance and remission of sins among all nations would have its “beginning at Jerusalem” (Luke 24:47).

Thus, Jesus prepared His disciples for the commencement of the opening of the door of salvation. They were to be in the proper place at the proper time. The prophets said that Jesus would be born in Bethlehem (Micah 5:2) – and He was (Matt 2:1). They said He would come to the Temple (Mal 3:1) – and He did (Matt 21:2; John 8:20). They affirmed that a light would rise in Galilee (Isa 9:1-2) – and it did (Matt 4:13-15). Now God will fulfill His promise concerning the healing waters of salvation flowing out from the holy city (Ezek 47). Therefore, the disciples must wait in Jerusalem until the appointed time arrives.

WAIT FOR THE PROMISE

“ . . . but wait for the promise of the Father .” Other versions read, “but to wait for what the Father had promised ,” NASB “but wait for the gift my Father promised ,” NIV “ but to keep there , waiting till the word of the Father was put into effect , of which,” BBE “but to wait there for what the Father had promised ,” NJB “until the Father sends you what He promised .” NLT “until the Holy Spirit came upon them in fulfillment of the Father’s promise,” LIVING “wait here for the Father’s promise ,” IE and “but to wait for the Father's promise.” PHILLIPS

The prophets had spoken about this promise, but their word was not attended with great clarity.

- “Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high, and the wilderness be a fruitful field, and the fruitful field be counted for a forest” (Isa 32:15).
- “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3).
- “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions” (Joel 2:28).
- “Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezek 39:29).

WHICH YE HAVE HEARD OF ME

“ . . . but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.” Other versions read, “‘which,’ He said, ‘you have heard from Me ,” NKJV “which you have heard me speak about,” NIV “of which, he said, I have given you knowledge ,” BBE “about which you have heard me speak ,” NAB “‘It is,’ he had said, ‘what you have heard me speak about ,” NJB “Remember, I have told you about this before ,” NLT “ a matter He had previously discussed with them ,” LIVING “ that you heard me talk about ,” IE and “You have already heard me speak about this,” he said.” PHILLIPS

Jesus, however, is very specific in speaking about this promise. He does not send the disciples to the Prophets to ferret out these promises for themselves, muse upon them, and arrive at some satisfying conclusion. He tells them He is referring to the Father’s promise that He Himself had told them.

How glowingly He spoke of that promise , and what hope His words must have aroused in them when He told them to wait for its fulfillment.

- DIRECT THEM WHAT TO SAY BEFORE THEIR ENEMIES. “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak . For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you ” (Mat 10:19-20).

• THE FATHER WOULD GIVE THEM THE HOLY SPIRIT. “If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?” (Luke 11:13).

• INSTANTLY THEY WOULD KNOW WHAT TO SAY BEFORE MAGISTRATES. “And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say: For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say ” (Luke 12:12).

• LIVING WATER WOULD FLOW OUT OF THEM. “He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water . (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified)” (John 7:39).

• THE FATHER WOULD SEND THE SPIRIT TO DWELL WITHIN THEM. “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever ; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you ” (John 14:16-17).

• THE HOLY SPIRIT WOULD TEACH THEM ALL THINGS. “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He shall teach you all things . . .” (John 14:26a).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD GIVE THEM A SUPERNATURAL RECOLLECTION OF WHAT JESUS HAD SAID. “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost . . . He . . . bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you ” (John 14:26).

Jesus, however, is very specific in speaking about this promise. He does not send the disciples to the Prophets to ferret out these promises for themselves, muse upon them, and arrive at some satisfying conclusion. He tells them He is referring to the Father’s promise that He Himself had told them.

THE SPIRIT WOULD TESTIFY OF CHRIST HIMSELF TO THEM, SO THAT THEY WOULD BECOME HIS WITNESSES. “But when the Comforter is come . . . He shall testify of Me : And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning” (John 15:26-27).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD GUIDE THEM INTO ALL TRUTH, GIVING THEM AN UNDERSTANDING OF IT. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth . . . All things that the Father hath are Mine: therefore said I, that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you ” (John 16:13-15).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD NOT SPEAK TO THEM ABOUT HIMSELF. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come . . . He shall not speak of Himself . . .” (John 16:13-15).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD TELL THEM WHAT THE LORD TOLD HIM. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come . . . whatsoever he shall hear, that shall He speak . . . All things that the Father hath are Mine: therefore said I, that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you ” (John 16:13-15).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD REVEAL COMING THINGS TO THEM. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come . . . He will show you things to come . . .” (John 16:13-15).

• THE SPIRIT WOULD GLORIFY CHRIST IN THEM. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come . . . He shall glorify Me . . .” (John 16:13-15).

The Holy Spirit, then, would enable the apostles to fulfill the purpose for which they were chosen. The following was required for that fulfillment.

- Knowing what to say before their enemies.
- Receiving the Holy Spirit.
- Knowing how to answer and speak before magistrates and rulers.
- Life sustaining words issuing forth from them.
- The Holy Spirit remaining with them.
- Being taught “all things.”
- Recalling the words of Jesus.
- Insightfully testifying of Christ Himself.
- Having an understanding grasp of the truth itself.
- Not making the Holy Spirit their subject of exposition.
- Knowing what the Lord Jesus told the Spirit, and being able to declare it.
- Knowing the appointments God had made for the future.
- Glorifying Jesus as the Holy Spirit does.

None of these things could be done in the energy of the flesh. They are deeper than nature can reach, higher than flesh can attain, and require more ability than can be passed through the lineage of Adam.

If these things did not come to them supernaturally, by the will of God, through the Kingly disposition of Jesus, and by the influence of the Holy Spirit, there is not a single aspect of them that could have been accomplished by these, or any other, men.

The Kingdom of God is under the strict supervision of God Himself. He has given the reigns of that Kingdom to His Son, who has been given all power – every bit of it – with the single exception of the Father Himself. He works His will within His people through the Holy Spirit, the heavenly Enabler. That will is summarized in these words: “to give eternal life” (John 17:2).

In this text, the King forbade His subjects to proceed without Divine enablement. There is no place in the Kingdom of God – no place at all – for men working independently of the Holy Spirit. No provision is made for men to implement their own will in matters pertaining to salvation. This will become increasingly evident as we proceed through the book of Acts. We will be exposed to the working of the Lord.

TWO DIFFERENT BAPTISMS

“ 5 For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.”

Jesus now more fully prepares His disciples for what is coming – “the promise of the Father.” What they would experience would transcend everything that went before – even “the baptism of John,” which was, of itself, a sort of epoch. John “prepared” the way for Jesus. Now these men are told they will experience that for which they had been prepared.

Jesus now more fully prepares His disciples for what is coming – “the promise of the Father.” What they would experience would transcend everything that went before – even “the baptism of John,” which was, of itself, a sort of epoch. John “prepared” the way for Jesus. Now these men are told they will experience that for which they had been prepared. Both John’s baptism and their continual presence with Jesus had prepared them for this experience.

JOHN TRULY BAPTIZED WITH WATER

“For John truly baptized with water . . .” Other versions read, “for John baptized with water,” NASB “For John baptized with [or in] water,” NIV “For John indeed baptized with water,” ASV “For the baptism of John was with water,” BBE “John baptized you with water,” LIVING “John immersed people in water,” IE and “for John used to baptize with water.” PHILLIPS

Although some people say the Jews were accustomed to “baptism,” there is no evidence of this in Scripture. Those who teach this say that the word “washings,” as ascribed to the Old Covenant, included the idea of baptism, or immersion in water.

The Greek word for “baptize” occurs in the Septuagint (Greek) version of the Old Testament Scriptures four times.

- 2 Kings 5:14. “And Naaman went down and baptized himself (ejbapti>sato) seven times in the river Jordan,” where the original Hebrew is IBof]yiwi* , from lbif; , to dip, plunge, immerse.” “Then went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan...” KJV

- Isaiah 21:4,6. “Iniquity baptizes me” (hJ ajnomi>a me bapti>zei), where the word is plainly used in the sense of overwhelm, answering to the Hebrews t[iB*; , to come upon suddenly, to terrify.” “My heart panted, fearfulness affrighted me: the night of my pleasure hath he turned into fear unto me.” KJV

- Numbers 19:19. “And the clean person shall sprinkle upon the unclean on the third day, and on the seventh day: and on the seventh day he shall purify himself, and wash his clothes, and bathe himself in water, and shall be clean at even.” KJV

On this usage of the word “baptize” in the Old Testament Scriptures, it is duly noted, “In the Greek, then, of the Septuagint, bapti>zein signifies to plunge, to bathe, or to overwhelm. It is never used to describe the act of one who dips another object into a fluid, or the case of one who is dipped by another .” McClintock & Strong’s Cyclopedia

Those who affirm the Jews practiced the baptism of proselytes prior to Christ, thus making them acquainted with the act of baptism, cannot support their theory. There is no record of such a baptism prior to the second century, well after Jesus had returned to heaven.

Without encumbering you with an unnecessary diversion into this fruitless discussion, I will here cite the generally well accepted McClintock & Strong’s Cyclopedia.

Of the antiquity of lustrations by water among the Jews there is no question, but it is still a disputed point whether baptism was practiced, as an initiatory rite, in connection with circumcision, before the coming of Christ. It is well established that, as early as the second century of the Christian sera, this proselyte baptism was an established rite among the Jews; and their writers, as well as many Christian theologians (e.g. Lightfoot, Wetstein, Wall, and others), claim for it a much greater antiquity. But this opinion is hardly tenable, for, as an act which strictly gives validity to the admission of a proselyte, and is no mere accompaniment to his admission, baptism certainly is not alluded to in the New Testament; while, as to the passages quoted in proof from the classical (profane) writers of that period, they are all open to the most fundamental objections. Nor is the utter silence of Josephus and Philo on the subject, notwithstanding their various opportunities of touching on it, a less weighty argument against this view. It is true that mention is made in the Talmud of that regulation as already existing in the first century A.D.; but such statements belong only to the traditions of the Gemara, and require careful investigation before they can serve as proper authority.

Why Address This Matter At All?

Why bring up the matter of the uniqueness of John's baptism at all? Why not let the words of pretended scholars simply go unchallenged? What difference does it really make?

John's baptism was unique. As already established, it was unique for one person to immerse another person in water for any reason – let alone one that involved one's relationship to God. John came baptizing because that was the means by which the Son of God would be made known (John 1:31-34). Jesus birth was unique. His childhood was unique. What would lead anyone to believe God would reveal Him as His "Son" in an ordinary ceremony, familiar to all of the people?

Secondly, John's baptism itself was unique – that is why it is called "John's baptism" (Acts 19:3) and the "baptism of John" (Matt 21:25; Mk 11:30; Lk 7:29; 20:4; Acts 1:22; 18:25). John's baptism, was also "for the remission of sins" (Mk 1:4), which itself was a totally new concept. In fact, the expression "the remission of sins" is never mentioned in any major version of Scripture prior to the Gospels. The same is true of the single word "remission." That word only occurs in the New American Standard Bible and New Revised Standard Version. It is mentioned four times, and applies to the remission of a debt one man owed another man, having absolutely nothing to do with man's indebtedness to God (Deut 15:1,2,9; 31:10). The Revised Standard Version uses the word "remission" one time, applying it to the "remission of taxes" (Esther 2:18).

For John to prepare the way for the Savior of the world, he and his ministry had to be different, for there was nothing ordinary about what Jesus would do. The proper perception of Jesus, and an appropriate readiness to receive Him, required a radical adjustment of thought.

The Thought Here

Now Jesus turns the attention of His disciples to the substance into which John baptized the people in general, and the apostles in particular: "with water." That is, they were engulfed by, or immersed in, water – for "baptize" means "To dip . . . immerse, submerge . . . to cleanse by dipping or submerging . . . to overwhelm," THAYER and "to dip in or under the water." LIDDELL-SCOTT

For those in Christ Jesus, baptism is likened to being "buried" with Christ (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12). Baptism is a very accurate visible depiction of the "doctrine" made known in the Gospel: the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ. Therefore, it is referred to as "the form of the doctrine" (Rom 6:17).

For us, the uniqueness of baptism is not its association with the "remission of sins" – although that association is surely there (Acts 2:38;22:16). In Christ, the uniqueness is the receiving of the Holy Spirit : "Then Peter said to them, "Repent, and let every one of you be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit " NKJV (Acts 2:38). That is something that did not accompany John's baptism. It was for this reason that Paul, when confronting certain "disciples" from Ephesus, asked them, "Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed?" NKJV (Acts 19:2). Upon hearing that these "disciples" said they had not even heard there was such a thing as the "Holy Spirit." Paul interrogated them further. "Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism" (Acts 19:3). It was then that he told them John's baptism was preparatory, and that it was necessary for them to believe "on Christ Jesus." They were then "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:4). Prior to that, they had only been "baptized with water."

Now Jesus declares that His ministry was transcendent to that of John, and that His baptism was superior as well.

YE SHALL BE BAPTIZED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

" . . . but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Other versions read, "for John truly baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days from now,” NKJV “but in a few days you will be baptized with the Holy Spirit,” NIV “for John baptized with water, but before many days you shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit,” RSV “but you will have baptism with the Holy Spirit , after a little time,” BBE “but in a few days, you will be immersed in the Holy Spirit ,” IE and “but not many days from now you shall be baptized with (placed in, introduced into) the Holy Spirit.” AMPLIFIED

First, I want to mention some supposedly sanctified “church” expressions that are not in the Scriptures. Their origin is found in religious tradition and human opinion.

- “The baptism of the Holy Ghost.”
- “The Baptism of the Holy Spirit.”
- “Holy Spirit baptism.”
- “The baptism of the Holy Ghost with the evidence of speaking in tongues.”
- “Falling under the power.”
- “Slain in the Holy Ghost.”
- “Slain by the Spirit.”

Human opinion is the mother of these phrases, and religious tradition is the child that carries them forward.

John Foretold It

John the Baptist foretold that Jesus would baptize with the Holy Spirit. “I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: He shall baptize YOU with the Holy Ghost, and with fire ” (Matt 3:11).

This word was not delivered to the disciples of Jesus, but to the multitudes to whom John preached – specifically to the ones HE baptized “with water.” Mark says John “ preached , saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized YOU with water: but He shall baptize YOU with the Holy Ghost ” (Mark 1:7-8).

John the beloved says that John the Baptist said this when people “mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not.” “John answered , saying unto them all, I indeed baptize YOU with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: He shall baptize YOU with the Holy Ghost and with fire ” (Luke 3:15-16).

Three Interpretations

There are atleast three differing views of John’s words concerning the manner in which the One coming after him – the Lord Jesus – would baptize.

- That John is referring to a baptism of judgment, in which Jerusalem would be “purged” with the Spirit of burning (Isa 4:4). Matthew’s account of this saying is cited as justification for this view: “And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire . . . He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire” (Matt 3:10). This view does not agree with the There are atleast three differing views of John’s words concerning the manner in next phrase of Jesus, which speaks of gathering the wheat into His barn as well as burning the chaff with unquenchable fire (Matt 3:12; Lk 3:17). That requires the inclusion of more than the destruction of Jerusalem. Also, this view contradicts the manner in which Jesus speaks in our text, which has nothing whatsoever to do with the destruction of Jerusalem.

- Another view is that the reference to Jesus baptizing “with the Holy Ghost” has strict reference, is limited to, the apostles and what occurred on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:1-4), and is identified with miraculous gifts and manifestations that took place on the day of Pentecost, and at the house of Cornelius. That these words do refer to that time cannot be denied. Jesus said the baptism to which He referred (which was the same as that to which John referred), would occur “not many days hence.” Later, Peter specifically correlates the Spirit’s work on Pentecost and at the house of Cornelius with this word. “And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost” (Acts 11:16). This confirms that the word was not limited to the apostles, nor was it confined to the day of Pentecost. Gentile believers experienced the same thing 10-15 years after the day of Pentecost.

- Another view, and the one to which I am inclined, sees this as having a broader fulfillment than the epochs of Pentecost and the house of Cornelius, when the “door of faith” was opened to the Gentiles (Acts 14:27). In this view, Jesus is perceived as announcing the commencement of a new economy that would be under the administration of the Holy Spirit. It would be an era in which men would be “in the Spirit” (Rom 8:9; Gal 3:3; 5:16,25; Eph 6:18; Phil 3:3), as well as the Spirit being “in,” or “given” to them (Acts 2:38; 1 Cor 2:12; 2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; 1 Thess 4:8; 1 John 3:24). Some unique signs did accompany this “gift” on the day of Pentecost and at the house of Cornelius. That does not, however suggest that this exhausted the meaning of Christ’s word. I will now proceed to further develop this view.

Jesus Was Speaking to the Apostles, but Not ONLY to the Apostles

There can be no doubt about these words being spoken to “the eleven.” Luke records the occasion in his Gospel. There he affirms “the eleven” were gathered together, “but adds, “and them that were with them” (Lk 24:33). It was at that particular gathering that Cleopas and his friend came, testifying of their encounter with the living Christ on the road to Emmaus, and in their home (Lk 24:33,35). As they were speaking to “the eleven and them that were with them,” “Jesus Himself stood in the midst of them.” He then spoke to them all concerning several things.

- He questioned them concerning the fear that rose in their hearts (24:38).
- He showed them His hands and feet (24:39-40).
- He asked if they had some food, and then ate before them, confirming the reality of His resurrection (24:41-43).
- He taught them concerning His resurrection, declaring that this is what He had previously taught them concerning the fulfillment of the Law of Moses, the prophets, and the Psalms (24:44).
- He opened their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures, expounding the necessity of His resurrection, that repentance and remission of sins should be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem, and that they were witnesses of these things (24:45-48).
- He then declared that to which our text refers: “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you : but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:49).

We can learn much about the scope of the baptism administered by Jesus by what is said of it. Is the experience of the baptism itself the final point, or is the result of that baptism the chief matter? Was it the experience itself that moved the Kingdom forward, or the effects of it that are chronicled?

When the disciples “tarried in Jerusalem,” more were there than “the eleven.” Later in this first chapter Luke records who were remaining in Jerusalem, waiting for the promise of the Father, as Jesus commanded them to do. The number included Peter, James, John, Andrew, Philip, Thomas, Bartholomew, Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, Simon Zelotes, Judas the brother of James, “the women,” Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren (Acts 1:13-14). “The disciples” that were tarrying are specifically said to be “about one hundred and twenty” (Acts 1:15).

Because I will deal at length with these verses in the following lessons, I will forgo making any further comments on them at this time. This will suffice to establish that the “promise of the Father” was not spoken to the apostles alone. While their role was unique, to be sure, they were not the only ones involved.

How Men referred to the Experience

We can learn much about the scope of the baptism administered by Jesus by what is said of it. Is the experience of the baptism itself the final point, or is the result of that baptism the chief matter? Was it the experience itself that moved the Kingdom forward, or the effects of it that are chronicled?

I am persuaded that there is a certain incumbency for our thoughts on this matter to be in harmony with the Scriptural record itself, and with the inspired record of holy responses to the event. Our view cannot possibly be right if it is not in strict accord with Scripture.

- FILLING AND UTTERANCE. Those gathered together on the day of Pentecost were “all filled with the Holy Spirit,” who gave them “utterance” that was understood by the people (Acts 2:4).
- SPIRIT Poured FORTH. Peter associated what happened with the prophecy of Joel in which God promises to “pour forth His Spirit” upon men (Acts 2:17-18).
- INVOLVEMENT OF THE PEOPLE. This “pouring” would result in the affectation of “sons” and “daughters,” “young men” and “old men,” and “servants” and “handmaids” (Acts 2:16-18).
- THE SPIRIT SHED FORTH. Peter said Jesus had “received” the “Spirit” God had “promised,” and had therefore “shed forth” what the people had “seen and heard” (Acts 2:32-33). This coincides with Paul’s statement concerning the abundant reception of the Holy Spirit by all believers (Titus 3:6).
- THE PROMISE. Peter then told the people the “promise” of the Spirit was to them as well (Acts 2:38-39). The promised Spirit is specially said to be experienced by all those in Christ Jesus (Gal 3:14; Eph 1:13).
- REPENTANCE GRANTED. When Peter rehearsed the events taking place at Cornelius’ house, he specifically told the apostles and elders in Jerusalem that this was a fulfillment of the word Jesus said in our text (Acts 11:15-17). Upon hearing the report, those early saints responded, “Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).
- GIVING THE HOLY SPIRIT. Some time later, Peter testified of this occasion at another special meeting in Jerusalem. At that time, referring to the same events and the same word of Jesus, Peter testified: “And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us . . .”
- PURIFYING THE HEART BY FAITH. Peter went on to say that purification took place at that time. “. . . and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith” (Acts 15:8-9).

• SALVATION BY GRACE. Peter added that this was associated with the Gentiles being saved “through the grace of God” (Acts 15:11).

CONSIDER

What Occurs In Our Baptism

Because Peter related the baptism which believers “obey” (Rom 6:17) with “the gift of the Holy Spirit” which was “promised,” we must consider aspects of baptism into Christ that transcend human ability. There are certain realities accomplished in our baptism that necessitate Divine activity.

The things that occur in our baptism require the inner working of the Holy Spirit. I understand these things to be involved in the “baptism with the Holy Spirit” Jesus is said to administer.

- Baptized into “one body” by the Holy Spirit. “For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body , whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit ” (1 Cor 12:13).
- Baptized into Christ . “Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ ” (Rom 6:3). “For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ ” (Gal 3:27).
- Put on Christ. “For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ ” (Gal 3:27).
- Baptized into Christ’s death. “Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into His death ?” (Rom 6:3).
- Buried with Christ. “Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death” (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
- Old man crucified. “Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him , that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin” (Rom 6:6).
- Become dead with Christ. “Now if we be dead with Christ , we believe that we shall also live with him” (Rom 6:8).
- Becoming dead to sin and alive to God. “Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin , but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom 6:11).
- Made free from sin. “Being then made free from sin , ye became the servants of righteousness” (Rom 6:18,22).
- The circumcision of Christ. “In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ : buried with him in baptism” (Col 2:11-12).

Which of these blessed realities can possibly be accomplished by the believer himself? How is it remotely possible for them to be realized by means of a mere ceremony, like those “divers washings” that occurred under the Law? I am affirming these are all accomplished through the Holy Spirit, and that Jesus’ unique baptism occurs at the time of our baptism.

Raised with Jesus. “Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead” (Col 2:12).

Which of these blessed realities can possibly be accomplished by the believer himself? How is it remotely possible for them to be realized by means of a mere ceremony, like those “divers washings” that occurred under the Law (Heb 9:10)? I am affirming these are all accomplished through the Holy Spirit, and that Jesus’ unique baptism occurs at the time of our baptism. I understand that to be what Peter was affirming in Acts 2:38-39.

Answering An Objection

Some object to this conclusion, saying that Jesus baptizes with the Holy Spirit subsequent to our baptism into Christ, and in a distinct and separate act. They site the disciples from Ephesus as proof of their postulate. Those disciples, they say, had already believed, and had already been baptized. Yet, they received the Holy Spirit in a second work of grace.

The text, however, does not say these disciples had “believed.” In fact, when Paul asked them if they had received the Holy Spirit since they believed, they said “We have not so much as heard whether there is a Holy Spirit” (Acts 19:1-2). They could not possibly have believed on Jesus, for He spoke of the Holy Spirit (Matt 10:20; 12:28,31,32,36; Lk 4:18; John 3:5,6,8; 6:63) and of men receiving Him (Luke 11:13; John 7:38-39).

Paul then told these disciples that John’s baptism was intended to prepare them to believe on Jesus – the Jesus who spoke of the Holy Spirit. It is evident they had not heard of Jesus, else they would have believed on Him already. It is to be understood that Paul preached Jesus to them just as surely as he did to the Philippian jailor, who also had not yet believed on Him (Acts 16:31-32).

When these disciples were baptized “in the name of the Lord,” Paul laid his hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit, with similar attending phenomena as that which occurred on Pentecost and at the house of Cornelius – speaking in other languages and prophesying (Acts 2:2-3,11-21; 10:46).

Lest some imagine that the events attending this outpouring of the Spirit are the standard accompaniments of the baptism Jesus administers, it ought to be noted that these were all unique occasions – spiritual epochs.

- PENTECOST – The initial fulfillment of the promise to Israel.
- CORNELIUS – The opening of the door of salvation to the Gentiles.
- THE DISCIPLES IN EPHESUS – the conclusion of John’s baptism, which is never again mention.

Epochs are never intended to be a precise standard. Instead, there are often unique things that accompany the working of the Lord at such times: i.e., Israel’s epochal deliverance from Egypt, the giving of the Law, the dedication of the tabernacle, the dedication of the Temple, etc. Yet, the deliverance of Israel from Egypt did not present a precise pattern by which Divine deliverance is realized. When God gave the Law at Sinai, it was not attended by standard accompaniments of Divine revelation. Nor, indeed were the dedications of the tabernacle and Temple attended by workings that are standard at every dedication, or setting apart.

Every time God delivers, He does not do so as He did with Israel. Every time God speaks, He does not do so as He did at Sinai. Every time something or someone is set apart to God, things do not occur as when the tabernacle and Temple were dedicated. And, every time God pours forth His Spirit, He does not do so as He did initially in Jerusalem, in the initial acceptance of the Gentiles, and during the closing of John’s baptism.

The era of the New Covenant is particularly referred to as “the ministration of the Spirit,” or “the ministry of the Spirit.” Relating to this matter, we are “baptized” with the Spirit, or put into the Spirit, like our bodies are put into the water in “the form of the doctrine”

That should suffice to provide some input to aid in a personal examination of these things.

THE NEW COVENANT

The Ministration of the Spirit

The era of the New Covenant is particularly referred to as “the ministration of the Spirit,” or “the ministry of the Spirit” NKJV (2 Cor 3:8). Relating to this matter, we are “baptized ” with the Spirit, or put into the Spirit, like our bodies are put into the water in “the form of the doctrine” (Rom 6:17).

Ponder the things that are said to be accomplished by the Holy Spirit.

- Washed, justified, sanctified. “. . . ye are washed , but ye are sanctified , but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11).
- Led in the work of mortifying the deeds of the body. “For if ye live after the flesh , ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God” (Rom 8:13-14).
- Transformation. “But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord ” (2 Cor 3:18).
- The Love of God shed abroad. “And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us” (Rom 5:5).
- Waiting for the hope of righteousness. “For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith” (Gal 5:5).
- Obeying the truth. “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22).
- Affirming Jesus Is Lord. “Therefore I make known to you that no one speaking by the Spirit of God calls Jesus accursed, and no one can say that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit ” NKJV (1 Cor 12:3).
- Spiritual enablements. “Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit . . . But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit , dividing to every man severally as He will” (1 Cor 12:4-11).
- Not Fulfilling Fleshly Lusters. “This I say then, Walk in the Spirit , and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh ” (Gal 5:16).
- Abounding In Hope. “Now may the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that you may abound in hope by the power of the Holy Spirit ” NKJV (Rom 15:13).
- We Reap Eternal Life through the Spirit. “For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting” (Gal 6:8).
- The Effectual Unity of Believers. “Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (Eph 4:3).
- Prayer and Supplication. “Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit , and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints” (Eph 6:18).
- The Love of the Brethren. “Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit ” (Col 1:8). “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren , see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22).
- Keeping What We Have Received. “That good thing which was committed to you, keep by the Holy Spirit who dwells in us” NKJV (2 Tim 1:14).

- The Experience of Righteousness, Peace, and Joy. “For the kingdom of God is not eating and drinking, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit ” NKJV (Rom 14:17).

None of these things can possibly be achieved through natural aptitude of human disciplines. They require an induction into the realm in which “all spiritual blessings” are located, where the primary Worker is the Holy Spirit. The baptism Jesus performs has to do with these things.

Believers Are “In the Spirit”

Believers are said to be “in the Spirit” (Rom 8:9; Gal 3:3; 5:16,25; Eph 6:18; Phil 3:3; 1 Pet 4:6; Jude 1:20). This is Scriptural language denoting an effective union with the Spirit.

Similarly, we are said to be “in Christ” (Rom 8:1; 12:5; 16:7; 1 Cor 1:30; 16:24; 2 Cor 5:17; Gal 1:22; 3:28; Eph 1:1; 2:13; Phil 1:1; 4:21; Col 1:2; 1 Thess 2:14; ; 2 Tim 3:12; 1 Pet 5:14), having been “baptized” into Him (Gal 3:27). We were put into Christ by God Himself. As it is written, “But of Him [God – vs 28-29] are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption” (1 Cor 1:30). The New American Standard Bible reads, “. . . God . . . But by His doing you are in Christ Jesus, who became to us wisdom from God, and righteousness and sanctification, and redemption” (1 Cor 1:29-30).

Also, our lives are “hid with Christ in God ” (Col 3:3). The church is categorically said to be “in God the Father” (1 Thess 1:1; 2 Thess 1:1). Believers are spoken of as continuing “in the Son, and in the Father ” (1 John 2:24). They are also said to be dwelling “in God” (1 John 4:15,16).

WHY SHOULD IT BE THOUGHT INCREDIBLE?

In view of these clear pronouncements, why should anyone think it incredible that those “in Christ” are also “in the Spirit?” And, should we choose to believe these affirmations, just how do we account for being “in the Spirit?” It is the Lord Jesus who put us into the Spirit! That baptism is His baptism – the one He performs. John baptized “with water.” Jesus baptizes “with the Holy Spirit.” That is what John said to the people to whom he preached. That is what Jesus said to his disciples, including “the eleven,” them that were with them, with “the women,” and Cleopas and his companion. The ones who tarried for the promise, as Jesus commanded, included “the eleven,” “the women,” “Mary his mother,” and “His brethren.” A count of this holy gathering is provided, being “about an hundred and twenty.” That whole number prayed together. They chose Judas replacement together. On the day of Pentecost it is written , “they were all together with one accord in one place” (Acts 2:1).

The baptism with which Jesus baptizes is not to be confused with the gifts required and utilized by the Apostles, as well as those dispensed to others. The ministry of the Holy Spirit is just as essential for the effective working of the other gifts that are placed within the body of Christ.

In Peter’s explanation of the events that took place on that marvelous and unique Pentecost, he affirmed the words of Joel were being fulfilled. Those words included “sons” and “daughters” prophesying, and the Spirit being poured out upon God’s “servants and handmaidens” (Acts 2:16-18). What, then, would constrain anyone to say this baptism was only for the apostles – particularly since some Gentile converts received “the same gift” several years later (Acts 11:15-17).

The Gifts Not to Be Confused with the Gift

The baptism with which Jesus baptizes is not to be confused with the gifts required and utilized by the Apostles, as well as those dispensed to others. The ministry of the Holy Spirit is just as essential for the effective working of the other gifts that are placed within the body of Christ. I am affirming that it is essential for a person to be “in the Spirit” to perform any of the functions within the body of Christ. No legitimate ministry within the church can be fulfilled independently of the Holy Spirit, who is the Divinely appointed Administrator of those gifts.

Paul makes a particular point of this to the Corinthians, who had many gifts, but a lot of confusion concerning their employment as well. “There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit . . . But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal [for the profit of all NKJV] . . . But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit , dividing to every man severally as He will ” (1 Cor 12:4,7,11).

Regardless of the gift, the Holy Spirit administers it, doing so from within the context of being “in Christ” (1 Cor 1:2), in His body (1 Cor 12:13), and by means of communion with Him (2 Cor 13:14).

All gifts do not perform the same function. As it is written, “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues. Are all apostles? are all prophets? are all teachers? are all workers of miracles? Have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues? do all interpret? But covet earnestly the best gifts: and yet show I unto you a more excellent way” (1 Cor 12:28-31). All of these gifts, however, require the working of the Holy Spirit – not merely upon the people, as He moved upon Samson, or even the holy prophets. In Christ, the Holy Spirit Himself becomes the environment in which the work is done: “IN the Spirit.”

On the day of Pentecost there did come a time when the attention of the multitude was focused on the apostles. That commenced well into the morning. “But Peter, standing up with the eleven , lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judaea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words” (Acts 2:14). Those twelve men functioned in strict accord with their place in the body – a place that was “first” (1 Cor 12:28). There is no question but that they did and said things uniquely assigned to them.

I do not know that the ministry of Jesus is ever confined to a certain group of people within His body, which is the church. That, however, would be precisely how the Savior is represented, if the promise of the Spirit, which was the promise made by the Father, was confined to the Apostles, or even to the first century.

That does not, however, suggest that they were the only ones on whom the Spirit was “poured forth,” for that would have contradicted the prophesy of Joel, which Peter said was being fulfilled : “I will pour forth my Spirit upon all flesh ” (Joel 2:28; Acts 2:17).

I understand that Jesus baptizes with the Holy Spirit, putting us into the Spirit as John put men into the water.

IN SUMMARY

I do not know that the ministry of Jesus is ever confined to a certain group of people within His body, which is the church. That, however, would be precisely how the Savior is represented, if the promise of the Spirit, which was the promise made by the Father, was confined to the Apostles, or even to the first century. The following is offered in support of this observation.

- Jesus identified the Spirit with which He would baptize the people with “the promise of the Father.” Messianic promises, or the foretelling of the New Covenant era, were always a depiction of the condition of all of the people whom God accepted, not a mere segment of them (Isa 32:15; 44:3; Joel 2:28-29; Ezek 36:27; 37:14; 39:29).

- Jesus said the Spirit with which He would baptize the people, was the One He spoke about to His disciples (Lk 11:13; John 14:16-17,26; 15:26-27; John 16:8-11, 13-15). To suggest this was limited to a small segment of His body, or to a confined period of time during the inauguration of the New Covenant, will require an extraordinary dividing up and distortion of the words of Jesus during that last evening with His disciples (John, chapters 13-17).

- John the Baptist told the multitudes he was baptizing, that Jesus would baptize them with the Holy Spirit (Matt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16).

- Jesus told “the eleven, and those with them,” “the women,” and Cleopas and his companion, “I will send the promise of My Father upon you” (Lk 24:49).

- “About one hundred and twenty” disciples waited together in Jerusalem for the promise, as Jesus had directed (Acts 1:13-15).

- Those who waited together in Jerusalem were all together with one accord on the day of Pentecost, when God poured forth His Spirit (Acts 2:1).

- Peter said the prophecy concerning the pouring forth of the Spirit – the “promise of the Father” – was being fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. That involved the prophesying of “sons” and “daughters,” and God’s “servants” and “handmaidens” (Acts 2:16-17).

- The promise of Jesus baptizing with the Holy Spirit is said to have occurred within the household of the Gentile Cornelius (Acts 11:15-17).

CONCLUSION

It may appear as though I have labored inordinately to establish the nature of this text. And, indeed, there is a sense in which I regret that I have deemed such an approach to be necessary. However, when I began this review of the book of Acts, there was a sort of burden upon my heart. I have been exposed to some extremely skewed views of this book – views that did not always appear honest. In fact, I had embraced an approach to this book that had more of a Sinaitic savor than “the savor of Christ” (2 Cor 2:15). Because of this, I sought the Lord for special grace to approach this volume with a pure and unsullied heart – uncontaminated with the traditions of men. I did not want to abandon a single morsel of truth that I had received, or deny a solitary legitimate perspective of the truth of God that I possessed. However, I also did not want to carry into this study a lot of confusing and questionable traditions and assumptions.

It was particularly imperative that at the threshold of this series, a level field be established for the consideration of the working of the Lord. A sort of direction must be laid down that will allow us to quickly recognize the precious nuggets of truth that are placed in the orchestrated history of this book. We are going to be exposed to the working of the Lord, and we must be quick to recognize it, else we will miss the blessing. Allow me to mention a few of these workings.

- “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain” (Acts 2:23)

- “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33).

- “Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved” (Acts 2:47).

- “But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all His prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled” (Acts 3:18).

- “For to do whatsoever Thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done”

(Acts 4:28).

- “But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors , and brought them forth, and said” (Acts 5:19).

- “Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31).

- “And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip , saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert” (Acts 8:26).

- “Then the Spirit said unto Philip , Go near, and join thyself to this chariot” (Acts 8:29).

- “And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip , that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing” (Acts 8:39).

- “And Ananias went his way and entered the house; and laying his hands on him he said, ‘Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus, who appeared to you on the road as you came, has sent me that you may receive your sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit ’” NKJV (Acts 9:17).

- “Then had the churches rest throughout all Judaea and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost , were multiplied” (Acts 9:31)

- “When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).

- “And the hand of the Lord was with them : and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord” (Acts 11:21)

In this book, we will be exposed to the way in which the exalted Christ works through His body: calling, directing, empowering, and protecting. He has not changed, and the church has by no means graduated to as new kind of existence. It is still increased by the Lord adding to it It is still moved along by Divine direction, and empowered by the power that is toward those who believe. The church in Acts is the church to which we ourselves have been “added.”

“As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them” (Acts 13:2).

- “Of this man's seed hath God according to His promise raised unto Israel a Savior , Jesus” (Acts 13:23).

- “And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how He had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles ” (Acts 14:27).

- “And a vision appeared to Paul in the night ; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us” (Acts 16:9).

- “And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened , that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul” (Acts 16:14).

- “Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city ” (Acts 18:10).

- “And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles” (Acts 22:21).

- “For there stood by me this night the angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, Saying, Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar : and, lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee . Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer: for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me” (Acts 27:25).

In this book, we will be exposed to the way in which the exalted Christ works through His body: calling, directing, empowering, and protecting.

Jesus has not changed, and the church has by no means graduated to as new kind of existence. It is still increased by the Lord adding to it (Acts 2:47). It is still moved along by Divine direction, and empowered by the power that is toward those who believe (Eph 1:19). The church in Acts is the church to which we ourselves have been “added” – The “one body” over which Jesus still presides. There is no other body through which Jesus works. There is not other form of Divine power available to that body than that with which it was initiated – the power that raised Jesus Himself from the dead (Eph 1:19-20).

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #2

FINAL WORDS AND ASCENSION

“ 1:6 When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? 7 And He said unto them, It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power. 8 But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. 9 And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up; and a cloud received Him out of their sight. 10 And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as He went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; 11 Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven.” (Acts 1:6-11)

INTRODUCTION

The “Christian religion,” as some are wont to call it, is not a “way of life.” It is not an external regimen, or a system of rules, procedures, and customs. It is not the induction of a moral change accomplished by the formation of new habits, or adherence to a code of conduct. In Christ Jesus we do not simply receive a new set of rules, a new standard of conduct, and a different way of doing things. It does not involve the exchange of Moses' law for a higher and more thorough law from Jesus. It is not the replacement of one set of ceremonial routines for another.

When the Scriptures speak of "the law of Christ" and being "under the law to Christ" (1 Cor 9:21), they are not speaking of "law" after the Sinaitic order. Men who imagine that this is the case

CONTENTS

- WHEN THEY CAME TOGETHER (1:6a)
- THEY ASKED HIM (1:6b)
- IT IS NOT FOR YOU TO KNOW (1:7a)
- TIMES AND SEASONS (1:7b)
- YOU SHALL RECEIVE POWER (1:8a)
- YOU SHALL BE WITNESSES (1:8b)
- WHILE THEY BEHELD (1:9a)
- A CLOUD RECEIVED HIM (1:9b)
- WHILE THEY WERE LOOKING (1:10a)
- TWO MEN IN WHITE APPAREL (1:10b)
- WHY? WHY? (1:11a)
- NOT A DIFFERENT JESUS (1:11b)
- TAKEN UP INTO HEAVEN (1:11c)
- HE SHALL COME AS HE HAS GONE (1:11d)
- CONCLUSION

are prone to speak of the Scriptures as a "book of rules" and a "roadmap to heaven." Such have an inordinate penchant for external procedures, attaching more significance to the way things are done, than to what is actually being done with and in the heart. These people always emphasize externals, for they have no sensitivity to unseen things.

THE REAL DISTINCTION

Prior to Christ, even the covenanted people of God were "dead in trespasses and sins" (Eph 2:1). After working extensively with them, God said of them, "All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people" (Rom 10:21; Isa 65:2). They were a people with "uncircumcised hearts" (Lev 26:41), to whom God had NOT given "ears to hear" (Deut 29:4). Therefore they were prone to wander and rebellious Ponder how the Lord spoke of this people.

- " . . . I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people " (Deut 9:13).
- " . . . for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me , that I should not reign over them" (1 Sam 8:7).
- "But this is a people robbed and spoiled; they are all of them snared in holes, and they are hid in prison houses: they are for a prey, and none delivereth; for a spoil, and none saith, Restore" (Isa 42:22).

- “Forty years long was I grieved with this generation, and said, It is a people that do err in their heart, and they have not known my ways ” (Psa 95:10).

- “ . . . for it is a people of no understanding : therefore he that made them will not have mercy on them, and he that formed them will show them no favor” (Isa 27:11).

Think upon what Moses, their leader, said of them.

- “Understand therefore, that the LORD thy God giveth thee not this good land to possess it for thy righteousness; for thou art a stiffnecked people ” (Deut 9:6).

- “ Ye have been rebellious against the LORD from the day that I knew you” (Deut 9:24).

- “For I know thy rebellion, and thy stiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the LORD ; and how much more after my death?” (Deu 31:27).

Consider the reaction of the living God to this people – a people He Himself had chosen and cultured.

Men who imagine that this is the case are prone to speak of the Scriptures as a “book of rules” and a “roadmap to heaven.” Such have an inordinate penchant for external procedures, attaching more significance to the way things are done, than to what is actually being done with and in the heart.

“Therefore was the wrath of the LORD kindled against His people, insomuch that He abhorred His own inheritance ” (Psa 106:40).

- “And the LORD heard the voice of your words, and was wroth, and sware, saying, Surely there shall not one of these men of this evil generation see that good land , which I sware to give unto your fathers” (Deut 1:35).

- “They have moved Me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation ” (Deut 32:21).

- “When God heard this, He was wroth, and greatly abhorred Israel : so that He forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which He placed among men” (Psa 78:60).

Consider! Consider!

The nature of this people remained corrupt, even though they were blessed above all other nations, and favored of God. Consider what did not, and could not, change them. Ponder what did NOT alter their character, change their affection, or move them away from iniquity.

- Deliverance could not change them (Ex 18:18; Josh 9:26; Judges 2:16; Psa 107:6).

- Moral law could not change them (Deut 4:8; Psa 147:19; Mal 4:4).

- Divinely ordained religious ceremonies could not change them (Lev 23:2-4,44; Num, 29:39).

- Witnessing miracles could not change them (Ex 14; 16:15,31-35; 17:6; Josh 10:12-13).

- Godly leaders could not change them (Moses, Aaron, Joshua, etc.).

- Precious promises could not change them (Deut 28:2-13).

- The prospect of grievous curses could not change them (Deut 28:15-46).

- Godly judges could not change them (Deborah, Gideon, Samuel, etc).
- Righteous kings could not change them (David, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Joash, Azariah, Uzziah, Hezekiah, Josiah, etc).

The old covenant was designed for an unregenerate people. It was not designed to bless, benefit, or change. It rather discovered the real condition that was caused by sin. It also kept sin from erupting exponentially, mandating death to the transgressor.

Holy prophets could not change them (Elijah, Elisha, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Hosea, Amos, Zechariah, Daniel, Malachi, etc).

- Blessed circumstances could not change them (Josh 21:44; 2 Chron 15:15; Isaiah 51:1-2).
- Divine kindness could not change them (Neh 9:17; Isa 54:10; Joel 2:13).
- A special environment, in a special land, did not change them (2 Chron 20:7; Jer 2:7; 16:18).
- Tender mercies did not change them (Psa 103:4; Neh 9:19,28-29,31; Lam 3:22; Zech 1:16).
- Faithful warnings did not change them (2 Chron 19:10; Jer 6:10).
- Chastisement did not change the people (Deut 8:5; Jer 31:18).
- Abundant provision did not change the people (Josh 9:5; Deut 28:47; 2 Chron 32:29; Neh 9:25).
- Being in bondage to their enemies did not change them (Judges 2:14; 13:1; Ezra 9:8; Neh 5:5; Isa 14:3).
- Enjoying an inheritance did not change them (Ex 15:17; Num 26:53-54; Deut 4:21; Josh 1:6; Lam 5:2).
- The Presence of Jesus Himself did not change the people (John 1:11; John 3:32; Mk 15:13-15).

It is no wonder that God Himself said of His dealings with Israel, “What could have been done more to My vineyard, that I have not done in it? wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?” (Isa 5:4). Again He said, “Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint” (Isa 1:5). And again He said, “In vain have I smitten your children; they received no correction: your own sword hath devoured your prophets, like a destroying lion” (Jer 2:30). And once again, “In thy filthiness is lewdness: because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, till I have caused My fury to rest upon thee” (Ezek 24:13).

This is why it is written, “Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin” (Rom 3:20; Gal 2:16). No person can be made “new” or morally improved from the outside. Advantages do not make people better, or alter their character! The self-help gurus are leading the body of Christ astray, attempting to work moral change by regimen, rules, and the formation of habits. Such an approach may be popular, but it is wrong – seriously wrong. There is not enough place (if, indeed, there is any), for God, Christ, the Spirit, and grace in such approaches.

There is no need for men to speculate about this matter. We do not have to give our attention for a single moment those who hawk their handy routines and secrets for improvement, recovery and moral change. God has shown the absolute vanity of such approaches. He worked extensively with a single nation for 1,500 years, showering them with benefits, punishing them when they were wrong, and giving them every possible advantage. After all was said and done, He said throughout the entire period, and after it as well, they were nothing more than a “disobedient and gainsaying people” (Rom 10:21).

This condition was not the result of Divine failure. It was rather intended to dry up the vain notion that there is any possible way for fallen men to correct their own condition. Even if you put the required tools in their hands, they will either throw them away, or corrupt their use. Until this lesson is learned, all religious labor, when viewed in the most favorable way, is pointed in the wrong direction.

THE OLD COVENANT

The old covenant was designed for an unregenerate people. It was not designed to bless, benefit, or change. It rather discovered the real condition that was caused by sin. It also kept sin from erupting exponentially, mandating death to the transgressor.

It is for this reason that it is written, “For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh” (Rom 8:3). Therefore, it “could not” justify (Acts 13:39). If there was any possibly way for man to be exonerated from sin and morally improved by means of a law – any law – “verily righteousness should have been by the law” (Gal 3:21). That is precisely why “the law made nothing perfect” (Heb 7:19). Moral transformation cannot be realized by means of laws, rules, or any form of human activity. “The flesh,” in all of its varied forms – intellect, emotion, will, and bodily members – cannot carry out the will of God. A transformation is required – a “new creation” – and only God can do that!

ACTS IS A RECORD OF DIVINE ACTIVITY UNDER THE NEW COVENANT

The book of Acts is a record of the working of the Lord under the New Covenant – a covenant in which the people are changed (2 Cor 3:18), regenerated (Tit 3:6), created (Eph 2:10), and born again (1 Pet 1:23). It is a covenant where “newness of life” is experienced, becoming the environment in which one walks (Rom 6:4). Rather than the people finding the commandments of God grievous, they are now the delight of the people (1 John 5:3; Rom 7:22). Rather than shrinking back from God as Israel did at Sinai (Ex 20:19), they flee to Him for refuge, to lay hold of the hope He places before them (Heb 6:18).

In view of these blessed circumstances, we will read of complete and instant responses to the Lord. Believers will be depicted as eager to hear God’s word, and aggressive to obey it. They will be easily directed into the will of God. If sin erupts, it will be the exception, not the rule, and therefore it will often be dealt with harshly, because in Christ there is no excuse for it. Sin does not make sense in the camp of those who have God’s law written in their hearts and put into their minds (Heb 8:10). When people “know the Lord,” it significantly impacts upon their attitude toward “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4; 1 John 2:15-17), “iniquity” (2 Tim 2:19; Tit 2:14; Heb 1:9), and “the flesh” (Rom 7:18; 8:4,5; Gal 5:24).

Now, Jesus will prepare His disciples to operate in this new environment, possessing a new nature. He will speak to them about “power,” and about waiting until they receive it. He will speak of a new era, with new life, and new hearts and spirits. He will tell them that they will become His own witnesses – faithful, insightful, and true.

“ 1:6a When they therefore were come together . . . ” Other versions read, “Therefore, when they had come together,” NKJV “ And so, when they had come together,” NASB “ So when they had come together,” NIV “So when they met together,” NRSV “They, therefore, being come together,” DARBY “And they, when assembled,” MRD “When the apostles were with Jesus,” NLT “And another time when He appeared to them,” LIVING “Once when they were with Him ,” WEYMOUTH and “This naturally brought them all together .” PHILLIPS

Here is an aspect of “newness of life” that is rarely seen in the contemporary church scene: the disciples “were come together.” One trait of God is declared in Psalm 68:6: “God setteth the solitary in families ” (Psa 68:6). Other versions read, “God who maketh men of one manner to dwell in a house,” DOUAY The idea is not only that a place is found for the “solitary,” “lonely,” NASB or “those without friends.” BBE He rather places them together with those who are of the same disposition. That is the reason for the term “families,” or households.

The book of Acts provides a picture of unity and oneness, with the people often coming together. By way of illustration, here is a listing of words relevant to this matter, and their frequency in this book.

- “Together” – 32 times.
- “One accord” – 11 times.
- “Assembled” – 4 times.

All of this emphasizes that being “together,” or in the same “family” is not a mere technicality. This is not a philosophical view of the redeemed, but a practical one. All believers love one another, fit together, and complement one another. They are made to function together, assist one another, and work together.

“Gathered” – 9 times.

- “Join” and “Joined” – 5 times.
- “We” – 134 times.
- “Disciples” – 26 times.

Believers came together to Jesus, to the temple, to pray, to hear, to rehearse, to consider, and to break bread (Acts 1:4; 3:1; 4:31; 10:27; 12:12; 13:44; 14:27; 15:6; 20:7). They also went out together to preach the word, (8:4,14; 13:4; 15:27; 20:17).

Jesus Himself set individuals in a group of twelve (Lk 6:13), and of seventy as well (Lk 10:1). Every person who is “saved” is placed by the Lord in the family of “the church” (Acts 2:47). Together , the redeemed are referred to as “the body of Christ” (Eph 4:12), “His body” (Eph 1:22; 5:30), and “the body” (1 Cor 12:12-27; Eph 4:16; Col 1:18). All of this emphasizes that being “together,” or in the same “family” is not a mere technicality. This is not a philosophical view of the redeemed, but a practical one. All believers love one another, fit together, and complement one another. They are made to function together, assist one another, and work together.

When the first harvest of souls was reaped, the fact that they were put together was duly noted: “And all that believed were together , and had all things common ; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart , Praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved” (Acts 2:44-47). Later is was also said of the church: “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul : neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common” (Acts 4:32).

A body of people professing to be a “church” who have no desire to be together in the presence of the Lord is a living contradiction. It is really no “church” at all, but is more of a business or a social group.

While it is true that Jesus met personally and separately with Peter and James (1 Cor 15:7), the more extensive benefit was wrought when the disciples “came together.” That is the nature of the Kingdom of God! The “pillar and ground of the truth” is not a person, but a people (1 Tim 3:15). The “bride” of Christ is not an individual, but an assembly (Rev 21:2,9; 22:17).

THE RELEVANCE OF THESE OBSERVATIONS

It might appear as though all of this has very little to do with our text, or the book of Acts as a whole. However, that is not the case at all. Those who are “born of God” have a conscious and enjoyable affiliation with all others who enjoy such a birth. “Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God: and every one that loveth him that begat loveth him also that is begotten of Him ” (1 John 5:1). This is a love that causes those in Christ to become the preferred friends, associates, and companions. The faith they have is “common” among them (Tit 1:4), as well as the “common salvation” that they enjoy (Jude 1:3). It is no wonder that such people assemble together, seeking the Lord and gathering insight and strength from His presence. In the beginning of their new life, they were found together “daily” (Acts 2:46).

Thus, following Christ’s resurrection, the disciples not only were found together when He showed Himself (Mk 16:14; Lk 24:33; John 21:2), they were also found gathering themselves to the Lord, preferring Him above all others, and marvelously doing so “together.”

“The Church”

A body of people professing to be a “church” who have no desire to be together in the presence of the Lord is a living contradiction. It is really no “church” at all, but is more of a business or a social group. The very word “church” highlights one of the chief traits of the people of God. The word “church” is translated from the Greek word evkkllhsi,a (ek-klay-sia). This word has the following lexical meaning: “a gathering of citizens called out from their homes into some public place; an assembly; an assembly of the people convened in a public place; an assembly of Christians,” THAYER “the assembled Christian community, congregation, gathering,” FRIBERG “gathering,” UBS “a congregation of Christians, implying interacting membership,” LOUW-NIDA and “the assembly of the citizens regularly summoned.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

Technically speaking, this word can mean any assembly called together, whether religious or political. But that is only as technicality of language, not of “ sound doctrine.” In Scripture there are two views of God’s people as an “assembly.”

First, they have been called out of the world into the fellowship of Christ (Gal; 1:4;. 1 Cor 1:9). They have also been seated “together” in the heavenly places in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:6). All believers are part of this vast spiritual gathering that sits at the feet of Jesus, fights the good fight of faith, and presses toward the mark. We have come to this measureless assembly (Heb 12:22-24), and have thus become acutely aware of other redeemed personalities.

Second, our practical, or external lives, perfectly coincide with our spiritual condition. Functionally, we are called together as a “body,” endowed with various gifts and abilities that interact with one another, bringing edification and encouragement. The thought of a “body” being dismembered suggests death, not life. No sane person would give work to a body that had been taken apart. Therefore it is written, “For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: so we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another” (Rom 12:4-5). And again, “For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him ” (1 Cor 12:14-18).

In both of the above passages, the word was delivered to specific assemblies who profited from coming together. They both suggest that this is the Divine intent of placing us in a “body.”

It should not surprise us that the remarkable “proofs” and teaching that Jesus provided following His resurrection were in assemblies – gatherings of believers. These gatherings were sequestered from the world. They were not in the market places.

“ 6b . . . they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?”

The direction of the disciples thinking will be revealed in the questions they ask the risen Christ. You may be sure, their questions will revolve around what Jesus Himself is going to do. They know that He has not come back from the region of the dead to be idle. They also know there is some unfinished work that was prophesied of old.

THEY ASKED . . . LORD

“ . . . they asked of Him, saying . . . ” Other versions read, “they were asking Him,” NASB “they said to Him,” BBE “they kept asking Him,” NLT “were questioning Him ,” YLT and “began to ask Him .” ISV

The word translated “asked” (hvrw,twn) is in the imperfect active tense, meaning to ask repeatedly, or over and over. The word itself suggests fervency – i.e. begging or urgently soliciting an answer. In other words, this was not a casual occasion with nonchalant discussion. The whole scenario paints a picture of Jesus bearing long with the disciples, not answering their question at the first. His reaction was similar to His delayed response to Bartimaeus (Mk 10:46-49) and the Syrophencian woman (Matt 15:22-23).

This is an aspect of the Divine nature with which we do well to acquaint ourselves. By its very nature, “the flesh” wants instant responses and immediate attention. However, when we are dealing with the Lord of glory, matters are shaped by His will, not ours. He often “bears long” with earnest inquirers, testing their sincerity and faith, and waiting for the appropriate time to answer proper petitions, or deny improper ones (as in the case of Paul – 2 Cor 12:8-9).

As “the pillar and ground of the truth,” it is the business of the church to acquaint men with this aspect of the Divine nature, so they do not stumble through trials in an uncomely manner, or insist upon God paying more attention to them than to His own “eternal purpose.”

RESTORING THE KINGDOM TO ISRAEL

“ . . . Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?” Other versions read, “Lord, is it at this time You are restoring the kingdom to Israel ?,” NASB “Lord, are you at this time going to restore the kingdom to Israel?,” NIV “Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?” ASV “Lord, will you at this time give back the kingdom to Israel ?” BBE “Lord, has the time come for you to restore the kingdom to Israel?” NJB “Lord, are you going to free Israel now and restore our kingdom ?” NLT “Lord, dost thou at this time restore the reign to Israel? ” YLT “Lord, are you going to free Israel [from Rome] now and restore us as an independent nation ?” LIVING “Lord, is this the time for you to rebuild the kingdom for Israel ?” IE and “Lord, is this the time when You will reestablish the kingdom and restore it to Israel ?: AMPLIFIED

Whatever one may think of the disciples prior to the Lord’s enthronement in glory, they were not political pawns or Scripturally illiterate. Their thoughts had been shaped by the Scriptures themselves, and the words of the Lord Jesus.

God's association with Israel remains an area of great confusion within the churches. I come from a background where many taught that Israel has been totally eliminated from Divine dealings, and is no longer recognized by the Lord. The reasoning is that the church has taken the place of Israel, and that all of the promises given to them have now been transferred to the church, taking them away from Israel.

If this is, in fact, a proper assessment, the question of the Israelites was an ignorant one. In such a case, it did not reflect the mind or purpose of the Lord, and they will surely be rebuked, as when they asked the Lord if He wanted them to call down fire on the Samaritans (Lk 9:54-55). Jesus did not allow His disciples to entertain erroneous views, but would stir their thinking in the proper direction, as when He clarified to them why a blind man they had confronted was blind (John 9:1-3), or when Lazarus died (John 11:3-11).

There Was A Basis for Their Question

There was a sound Scriptural basis for this question. It was not one that was produced by human imagination. This will be confirmed by the Lord's answer, which did not discard the question as being foolish and without foundation.

Israel began as a single and united nation – all twelve tribes coming out of Egypt, receiving the Law, and at last settling in Canaan. They remained united through the reign of David. Then, during the reign of Solomon, ten of the tribes revolted, and a division occurred among the people. The ten tribes were referred to as "Israel," with Samaria being their capital. Two tribes, Benjamin and Judah, became "Judah," with their capital being Jerusalem. Each kingdom had their own kings, and often fought against each other.

A marked deterioration took place within both kingdoms, and the judgment of God was leveled against them. First, the ten tribes – the kingdom of Israel – were judged for their idolatrous propensities. Their capital city was overthrown, and they were carried away into Assyria. It is written of that occasion, "Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them out of his sight: there was none left but the tribe of Judah only" (2 Kgs 17:18).

Speaking through the prophets, the Lord spoke repeatedly to both Israel and Judah about their future. Their sin, to be sure, had thrust them upon hard times. Notwithstanding, the Lord held out a time of blessing for them. Here are a few of the promises, given while they were already in a state of dispersion.

Judah, however, proved unfaithful as well. It is written that they "kept not the commandments of the Lord their God" (2 Kgs 17:18). Eventually, particularly because of their failure to honor the land Sabbaths, they were conquered by the Chaldeans, or Babylonians, and carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar (Jer 29:1). Their captivity lasted for an appointed "seventy years" (Jer 25:11). At the conclusion of those seventy years, they were freed, and in due time, were "caused" to return their own land (Jer 29:10). God worked through Ezra, king Cyrus (of Persia), and a number of others, to accomplish this return.

There is no record of Israel ever recovering from their captivity. They never returned to the promised land, but remained dispersed among the nations. The events that took place on the day of Pentecost confirmed that those dispersed Israelites did not lose their identity, as some suppose (Acts 2:5).

God Spoke of Their Future Through the Holy Prophets

Speaking through the prophets, the Lord spoke repeatedly to both Israel and Judah about their future. Their sin, to be sure, had thrust them upon hard times. Notwithstanding, the Lord held out a time of blessing for them. Here are a few of the promises, given while they were already in a state of dispersion.

They speak of a reuniting of Israel and Judah – something that has not occurred since Israel was taken captive in 721 B.C.

- “In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel , and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers” (Jer 3:18).

- “In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely : and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Jer 23:6).

- “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah ” (Jer 31:31).

- “Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand” (Ezek 37:19).

The Lord spoke of gathering Israel from among the nations in which He had scattered them,

- “Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him , and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock” (Jer 31:10).

- “Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even gather you from the people , and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel” (Ezek 11:17).

- “And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered , with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out” (Ezek 20:34).

- “I will accept you with your sweet savor, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen” (Ezek 20:41).

God promised He would not forget Israel, even though they were severely punished.

- “Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands; thy walls are continually before Me ” (Isa 49:15-16).

- “For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee : but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished” (Jer 30:11).

- “Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the LORD: for I am with thee; for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee: but I will not make a full end of thee , but correct thee in measure; yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished” (Jer 46:28).

- “Thus saith the LORD, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; The LORD of hosts is His name: If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever . Thus saith the LORD; If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done , saith the LORD” (Jer 31:37).

A time of blessing was promised that would be so remarkable that Israel would be joined with its most ancient foes , the Assyrians and the Egyptians – and all of them would be saved. “And the LORD shall smite Egypt: he shall smite and heal it : and they shall return even to the LORD , and he shall be entreated of them, and shall heal them . In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land: Whom the LORD of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance ” (Isa 19:22-25).

God promised Israel would be a light to whom the nations would come.

- “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you ” (Zech 8:23).

The Lord’s indignation with both Israel and Judah was never intended to be a permanent condition. Thus He said through Isaiah, “In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee”

“And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it. And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths : for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (Isa 2:2-3).

The Lord’s indignation with both Israel and Judah was never intended to be a permanent condition. Thus He said through Isaiah , “In a little wrath I hid my face from thee for a moment; but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the LORD thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto me: for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee, nor rebuke thee. For the mountains shall depart, and the hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed , saith the LORD that hath mercy on thee” (Isa 54:8-10).

Jesus Himself spoke of God’s wrath against Israel having a terminal point. “And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled ” (Luke 21:24).

Paul referred to the same concluding point. “For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob” (Rom 11:26).

Paul makes a point of the fact that God never did determine to totally eliminate Israel. He refers to a statement made by Isaiah, and fortifies it with apostolic doctrine. “Esaias also crieth concerning Israel, Though the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved: For He will finish the work , and cut it short in righteousness: because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth. And as Esaias said before, Except the Lord of Sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been as Sodoma, and been made like unto Gomorrah” (Rom 9:29; Isa 1:9).

Although there was a very solid prophetic basis for their question, it was still skewed in the wrong direction. At this time they were viewing the Messiah secondarily, and the kingdom of Israel, primarily.

There have been whole generations of people in the earth that God has eliminated – blotting them out. The Amalekites were such a people. “Therefore it shall be, when the LORD thy God hath given thee rest from all thine enemies round about, in the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it, that thou shalt blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven ; thou shalt not forget it” (Deut 25:19). Sodom and Gomorrah were cities of this kind, who ”suffered the vengeance of eternal fire,” never again to be built (2 Pet 2:6; Jude 1:7). But this was not the case with Israel! He left a remnant, and where there is a remnant, there is hope!

MORE COULD BE SAID

Much more could be said on this matter. It would not, however, serve our purpose to carry the matter further. I have made these extended remarks because of the remarkable abundance of theological garbage that is being thrown out into then church on this subject. It is also my purpose to show that the question of the disciples was not a display of ignorance.

Their Question was Skewed

Although there was a very solid prophetic basis for their question, it was still skewed in the wrong direction. At this time they were viewing the Messiah secondarily, and the kingdom of Israel, primarily. It was as though they were viewing the risen Christ as a means to the fulfillment of their perception of the prophets. This was not totally bad, but reflected an understanding that was pointed in the wrong direction.

Even in the prophecies of Israel’s restoration, the prophets made a point of the prominence of the Redeemer.

- “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth” (Jer 23:5).
- “But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them” (Jer 30:9).
- “In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and He shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land” (Jer 33:15).
- “And I will set up one shepherd over them, and He shall feed them, even My servant David; He shall feed them, and He shall be their shepherd” (Ezek 34:23).

At the time the disciples asked this question, they were seeing Jesus like the blind man first saw men: “as trees walking” (Mk 8:24). Christ’s answer will point them in the right direction, and diffuse an inordinate desire for Israel’s earthly prominence.

The prophetic references to Israel’s future glory did not pertain to their political prominence, although I don not doubt some of that may occur. Nor, indeed, was the Messiah targeted to be a worldly King. His kingdom was not, is not, and never will be “of the world” (John 18:36). That is why He ascended up on high.

“ 7a And He said unto them, It is not for you to know . . . ” Other versions read, “It is not for you to have knowledge of,” BBE “It is not yours to know,” DARBY “they are not for you to know,” NLT “It is not for you to know these things,” IE “It is not your business to learn,” WILLIAMS “It is not for you to become acquainted with and know,” AMPLIFIED and “You cannot know.” PHILLIPS

Those who linger long in the presence of the Lord are soon aware that there are things to be known. The disciples did not ask Jesus for an experience, or for some supernatural ability. Instead, they asked for some knowledge. My point is that being aware of the Lord Jesus whets the appetite for knowledge and understanding. The prophet Isaiah said of the Lord Jesus and the present day of salvation, “And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of salvation: the fear of the LORD is his treasure” (Isa 33:6). Suffice it to say, a person who is content to remain in spiritual ignorance knows nothing of the presence of the Lord.

Having said this, there are things that God does NOT intend for men to know. Moses referred to this circumstance when he wrote, “The secret things belong unto the LORD our God: but those things which are revealed belong unto us and to our children for ever, that we may do all the words of this law” (Deut 29:29). There are things that God intends to make known, and things He does not intend to make known. As we will see, there are also matters that are revealed at certain times, and are kept secret until that time. For example, Jesus spoke of things that had been “kept secret from the foundation of the world” (Matt 13:35). Paul said he preached a Gospel that revealed a “mystery which was kept secret since the world began” (Rom 16:25).

Jesus once told His disciples there were matters of the Kingdom that certain of the multitudes were not permitted to know. “He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given ” (Mat 13:11). In that case, the disciples themselves were given the privilege of knowing such things. Now, however, the Lord tells them they have asked about something they have no right to know. Their question extends beyond the perimeter of Divine will, and thus will not be answered.

“ 7b . . . the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in His own power.”

Now we consider a subject that is very sensitive to some. There are poor souls who think that humanity is the center of all things, and that no one has a right to withhold anything from any person. They imagine that God has opened up a pipeline from heaven to earth, so that they are licensed to probe into all areas of knowledge, fully expecting to be able to decipher the greatest of mysteries. Such people have overestimated the human intellect, significantly understated the magnitude of Divine knowledge and purposes, and managed to think of the temporal domain as containing more than it actually does. Jesus will now inform us of the real case.

TIMES OR SEASONS

“ . . . the times or the seasons . . . ” Other versions read, “times or epochs ,” NASB “times or dates ,” NIV “times or periods ,” NRSV “knowledge of the times and the order of events ,” BBE “the times of moments ,” DOUAY “dates and times ,” IE “times and occasions ,” MONTGOMERY and “what time brings [the things and events of time and their definite periods] or fixed years and seasons (their critical niche in time).” AMPLIFIED

Seen from the highest perspective, there is no aspect of God’s purpose that is determined by chance, happenstance, or randomness. There is a level at which Divine control is absolute, and everything operates by Divine schedule. This is not the domain of minutia, incidentals, and the inconsequential. Even though Divine purpose has many particular and seemingly small points, yet they all have a specific objective, and blend in with an ultimate aim. Therefore, Jesus speaks of “times and seasons,” which are larger in

However, the circumference of our thought must have a larger perimeter than the incidental things of life. Unless there is some obvious association of experience with God’s revealed purpose, we do not do well to assume God’s vivifying presence in it.

scope than hours and minutes. This should discourage us from thinking about things like stubbing our toe, falling down a flight of stairs, or seeing a penny on the sidewalk, as being ordained by God. I understand that it is quite possible for such things to be on the Divine agenda. However, the circumference of our thought must have a larger perimeter than the incidental things of life. Unless there is some obvious association of experience with God’s revealed purpose, we do not do well to assume God’s vivifying presence in it.

Revealed Times and Seasons

God has graciously revealed certain appointed times and seasons so we may learn to trust in Him. Men can culture their minds and emotions around their own plans, or learn to trust in the Lord fulfilling His purposes.

- The birth of Isaac took place at an appointed time. “Is any thing too hard for the LORD? At the time appointed I will return unto thee, according to the time of life, and Sarah shall have a son . . . For Sarah conceived, and bare Abraham a son in his old age, at the set time of which God had spoken to him” (Gen 18:14; 21:1).

- The flood commenced on an appointed day. “In the selfsame day entered Noah, and Shem, and Ham, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark” (Gen 7:13).

- The plagues upon Israel took place at appointed times. “And the LORD shall sever between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt: and there shall nothing die of all that is the children's of Israel. And the LORD appointed a set time , saying, To morrow the LORD shall do this thing in the land” (Ex 9:4-5).

- Israel’s deliverance from Egypt took place on an appointed day. “And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt. And it came to pass the selfsame day , that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies” (Ex 12:41,51).

- God once judged Israel with a pestilence that ended at an appointed time. “So the LORD sent a pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed : and there died of the people from Dan even to Beersheba seventy thousand men” (2 Sam 24:15).

- Jesus entered into the world at an appointed time. “But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law” (Gal 4:4).

What Jesus says to His disciples in this text is similar to the manner in which He spoke to the prophets. They were told of the coming of a Messiah, yet were not provided “times and seasons.” When these holy men earnestly sought to discover precisely who the Messiah was, and when He would appear, they were told that was not for them to know.

The word “times” is translated from the Greek word cro,nouj (chron-ous), from which we get the word “chronology.” Lexically, the words means “a definite time . . . period of time with chronological accuracy, by the dates.” LIDDELL-SCOTT That is, not only does “times” speak a certain juncture in history, but of a specific sequence of events. The giving of the Law must follow deliverance from Egypt, and be before the wilderness wanderings. The death of Christ must be after John the Baptist and before the day of Pentecost, etc. This requires a Sovereign God with absolute power and control.

The word “seasons” is translated from the Greek word kairou,j (kahee-rous), which has the lexical meaning, “due measure, a measure of time, a fixed and definite time,” THAYER and “a Divinely allotted time . . . period of time.” FRIBERG This speaks more of duration – a period with a commencement and a close.

Thus, God is depicted as controlling the chronology, initiation, and duration of Divinely appointed events.

IN THE FATHER’S POWER

“ . . . which the Father hath put in His own power.” Other versions read, “which the Father has put in His own authority,” NKJV “which the Father has fixed by His own authority,” NASB “the Father has set by His own authority,” NIV “which the Father hath set within His own authority ,” ASV “which the Father hath kept within His control ,” BBE “which the Father hath put in His own Divine authority ,” GENEVA “that the Father hath established by His own authority,” NAB “that the Father has decided by His own authority,” NJB “The Father sets those dates ,” NLT “that the Father did appoint in His own authority,” YLT “The Father is the only One who has authority to decide such dates and times ,” IE “which the Father has reserved in His own authority ,” WEYMOUTH “which the Father has a right to fix ,” WILLIAMS “which the Father has appointed (fixed and reserved) by His own choice and authority an personal power,” AMPLIFIED and “which have been fixed by the Father’s sole authority.” PHILLIPS

These “times and seasons” are in God’s power, and He does not share that knowledge until the events themselves begin to come to pass . He controls when they will occur and how long they will last. They are in no way determined by men. They are not initiated because of men, nor is their duration determined by them. For example, one of the absurd doctrines taught in our day is that Jesus will come sooner if the church works harder to spread the Gospel.

What Jesus says to His disciples in this text is similar to the manner in which He spoke to the prophets. They were told of the coming of a Messiah, yet were not provided “times and seasons.” When these holy men earnestly sought to discover precisely who the Messiah was, and when He would appear, they were told that was not for them to know. Peter unveiled this to us. “As to this salvation, the prophets who prophesied of the grace that would come to you made careful search and inquiry, seeking to know what person or time the Spirit of Christ within them was indicating as He predicted the sufferings of Christ and the glories to follow. It was revealed to them that they were not serving themselves, but you, in these things which now have been announced to you through those who preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven-- things into which angels long to look” NASB (1 Pet 1:10-12).

The Principle Taught by Jesus

During our Lord’s earthly ministry, He often spoke of things the people did not comprehend. A single example will suffice to confirm this point – namely that when the reality comes to pass, it can then be understood. “I have many things to say and to judge of you: but He that sent Me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of Him. They understood not that He spake to them of the Father.“Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am He, and that I do nothing of Myself; but as My Father hath taught Me, I speak these things” (John 8:28).

This is precisely the principle of which Jesus spoke on the night of His betrayal. For example, He said the following of His betrayal by one of them – something they were not able to grasp at the time. However, when it came to pass, it would become apparent to them. “I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with Me hath lifted up his heel against Me. Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass , ye may believe that I am He” (John 13:18-19).

The same was true when Jesus earlier washed His disciples' feet. At that time they did not realize what He was really doing. Therefore He said to them, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter" (John 13:7).

Ezekiel's Prophecy of the Dry Bones

The same principle is seen in Ezekiel's prophecy concerning Israel – when they were shown to him as a valley of dry bones. "And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD" (Ezek 37:14).

A Restatement of the Principle

Allow me to affirm this principle once again. The thorough understanding of "things to come," as declared prophetically, is only available when they begin to come to pass. Such things cannot be opened by scholarship, language expertise, historical proficiency, or human reasoning.

Neither can they be perfectly clarified by piecing prophecies together. Daniel, for example, received several prophecies – many of them, relating to silent period between Malachi and the birth of John the Baptist. Yet he was not able to put them all together and thus map out their meaning – and he was a gifted prophet, "greatly beloved" of God! The Lord told him, "But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end" (Dan 12:4). That is, what he had prophesied would not be able to be comprehended until the time for them to be fulfilled arrived.

The thorough understanding of "things to come," as declared prophetically, is only available when they begin to come to pass. Such things cannot be opened by scholarship, language expertise, historical proficiency, or human reasoning.

That is precisely what Jesus is telling His disciples. It was not yet time to divulge the times and seasons in which Israel would gain prominence. However, that such a time would indeed come was made clear by the prophets. That is why Paul said God has not "cast away" all Israel (Rom 11:1-5). It is why He spoke of their "fulness," or "full inclusion" NIV (Rom 11:12). He also referred to God "receiving them," of "their acceptance" NIV (Rom 11:15), God being able to "graft them in again" (Rom 11:23-24), blindness happening to them "in part" (Rom 11:25), and of the Deliverer "turning away ungodliness from Jacob" (Rom 11:26). God Almighty has gone on record: "For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins" (Rom 11:27). But God had not made provision for the disciples to know when this was going to happen.

Never Apparent to Unbelief

These things would never be apparent to those in the grip of unbelief. This is why the types, shadows, and prophecies concerning the coming Messiah and the New Covenant remain obscure to Abraham's offspring according to the flesh. That is why the Spirit affirms, "But even unto this day, when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart. Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away" (2 Cor 3:16). In our case, the prophecies have been fulfilled, meaning "we have a more sure word of prophecy" (2 Pet 1:19). Those prophecies are now unsealed, and are no longer shut up. Yet, unbelief seals them to those without faith.

Now Jesus will tell His disciples about things that have been given fore them to know – and they are things that will be taking place in just a few days. They are things that will prepare them for their appointed involvement.

YOU SHALL RECEIVE POWER

“ 8a But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you . . . ”

No person is naturally adequate to be a “laborer together with God” (1 Cor 3:9), or be productive in His kingdom. Even though the disciples had been consistently with Jesus from the baptism of John through His resurrection (1:22), more was needed. Their exposure to Jesus was necessary, but it did not fully qualify them to do the work to which they were assigned. There must be a participation in Christ Himself (Heb 3:14) for spiritual productivity [fruit] to be realized. It is not enough for our vessels [bodies], to be exposed to the truth, and our natural powers to have access to the word and work of God.

If being trained at the feet of Jesus, and being regularly exposed to His words and works had to be matched with Divine endowment, you can rest assured no person will be made adequate today by mere exposure to the truth.

RECEIVING POWER

“But ye shall receive power . . . ” Other versions read, “But you will have power,” BBE “But you shall receive the power,” DOUAY “ye will receive energy,” MRD “but you are going to receive power,” WILLIAMS “ But you shall receive power (ability, efficiency, and might),” AMPLIFIED and “but you are to be given power.” PHILLIPS

There are certain abilities, aptitude, and fortitude that are required in the work of the Lord – things without which, the work cannot be done. Human deficiency cannot be resolved by disciplined procedures and training after the manner of men.

Jesus told the disciples they would “receive” something that they did not yet possess – even though they had once been sent out and empowered to “preach” the Kingdom of God, “heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, and cast out demons” (Matt 10:7-8). That empowerment either had not lingered with them, or was not adequate for the commission they were now being given.

You Will Receive

The word translated “receive” has a particular meaning. It comes from the root Greek word lamba,nw (lam-ban-o). Here the word is lh,myesqe, which is in the future tense (shall receive). Lexically this word means “to take, to take with the hand, lay hold of . . . to take what is one’s own, to take to oneself, to make one’s own, to claim, procure for oneself,” THAYER “to take hold of, grasp, take for oneself, take into possession,” FRIBERG “Get, obtain,” UBS “to grasp.” LOUW-NIDA

It is important to understand the manner in which we “receive” in the kingdom of God. It is not like a vessel receives water when it is poured into it. Receiving is rather like a person reaching out and taking hold of a gift that has been delivered to him. In this case, the gift was, in fact, beyond the reach of the disciples. Therefore the Holy Spirit, who is “sent down from heaven” (1 Pet 1:12), will bring the needed power, ability, and aptitude to men. He puts it within the reach of faith, which can take hold of that whatever is brought from heaven.

Many professing believers do not receive needed gifts simply because they do not have the faith to reach out and take hold of them. They are too occupied with the realm of sense and time, and faith cannot survive in such a domain. That is why the Lord sets His children in “heavenly places” (Eph 2:6), where faith can flourish, enabling the one possessing it to take hold of the blessings that are also placed within that realm (Eph 1:3).

Thus the disciples would not “receive power” by it sweeping over them with an overwhelming influence, for that is not the manner of the kingdom. Rather, as they waited in faith, like the Lord commanded them, at the proper time the power would be brought within their grasp, and they would be able to “receive” it.

Power

The Greek word translated “power” is du,namin (doon-a-min). Sophists have declared us that this is the word from which we get the term “dynamite” – which, in the first place, I am not sure is true. There is certainly no parallel between “dynamite” and the “power” of which our text speaks. Dynamite blows things apart, this power brings things together. Dynamite destroys, this power establishes. When men are said to “dynamite” [verb] something, they are said to “annihilate, decimate, demolish, destruct, dismantle, dissolve, raze, ruin, or shatter” something. MERRIAM-WEBSTER

In Scripture, “power” is a word having to do with the strength, power, and ability to DO the works of God. It is a “power” that exceeds anything produced by nature, whether in natural or in cultured abilities. The word itself includes the idea of authority – imparted authority – so that the individual is granted the right to do a work of God. This “right” is conferred by the Lord Himself.

Uses of the Word

The way in which this word (du,namin) is used in Scripture will clarify its true meaning, I will highlight the word translated from du,namin .

- ABILITY. “And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability .” (Matt 25:15).
- VIRTUE. “And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes?” (Mark 5:30).
- MIGHTY WORK. “And he could there do no mighty work , save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them” (Mark 6:5).
- MIRACLE. “But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me” (Mark 9:39).
- POWER. “And Jesus answering said unto them, Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the scriptures, neither the power of God?” (Mk 12:24).
- MEANING. “Therefore if I know not the meaning of the voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh a barbarian, and he that speaketh shall be a barbarian unto me” (1 Cor 14:11).
- STRENGTH. “For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength , insomuch that we despaired even of life” (2 Cor 1:8).

As Jesus is using the word here, “power” has to do with supernatural aptitude – the ability to do what God requires. The individual is made adequate for the assignment given to him – an assignment that requires resources beyond those possessed by nature.

Spiritual Babylon has done a great disservice to the body of Christ by introducing and maintaining a religion that is close to the earth. It is a religion that does not require Divine input or empowerment. It is shallow, superficial, and powerless. It relies upon human assessment, natural abilities, and the wisdom of men. As a result, those who embrace such an approach consider supernatural abilities to no longer be necessary – even though they acknowledge God has not changed the work that He is doing. This approach to religion has also produced a church that has all of the weaknesses and failures of the world, so that scarcely a real difference can be detected between those who say they are “Christians” and those who say they are not.

There are surely exceptions to these observations – praise the Lord! However, the average professing Christian is acutely aware that today’s “church” is not noted for its power, ability, fortitude, or productivity. Most of its achievements are nothing more than religious ripples on the surface of life, lacking depth and the power to reach the inner man.

Now Jesus speaks to His disciples of a coming break with mediocrity, unbelief, powerlessness, doubt, fear, ignorance, inability, and other things that are associated with a lack of spiritual power.

AFTER THE SPIRIT COMES

“ . . . after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you . . .” Other versions read, “ when the Holy Spirit has come upon you,” NKJV “when the Holy Spirit comes on you,” NIV “the Holy Spirit having come upon you,” DARBY and “of the Holy Spirit which will come on you .” NJB

“Come Upon”

Now Jesus speaks to His disciples of a coming break with mediocrity, unbelief, powerlessness, doubt, fear, ignorance, inability, and other things that are associated with a lack of spiritual power.

Right here, a lot of confusion has been spewed out like spiritual sewage within the body of Christ. Some people have simply dismissed the whole text, perceiving it as something that pertains to the past, having nothing to do with us today. Others see the Spirit coming upon a person more in keeping with a heathenistic way of thinking, with the Lord striking the person down, side-stepping the mind and heart, which are integral to spiritual life.

The expression “come upon” does not refer to an experience like a brick falling upon one’s head. It rather speaks of a process whereby one person positions himself beside another, coming within their proximity. There are two words translated here. One describes the action – “arrive.” The other describes the position or place – “over against.” In our language, this is something the individual or individuals would experience .

Thus we read of the experience of the shepherds when Jesus was born: “And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them , and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid” (Luke 2:9). That is, the angels came within their proximity and the shepherds knew it.

So it would be with the disciples. The Holy Spirit Himself would come upon them – coming along side of them and bring Divine power within their reach. He would not “come upon them” in answer to prayer, but at the word of the King. That is why they were told to “wait,” not leaving Jerusalem.

The phrase “come upon you” does not necessarily differ from the Spirit being within the individual. In His first message, Jesus said the Spirit of God was “upon” Him (Luke 4:18). That is not intended to differ from the Spirit dwelling in Him, being given to Him without measure (John 3:34). Paul said the grace of God was “bestowed upon ” him (1 Cor 15:10). He lived his life, glorying in his infirmities, that “the power of Christ might rest upon ” him (2 Cor 12:9). None of these expressions are descriptive of something visible, tangible, or sensible. That ought to be obvious enough not to require any further word.

Christ’s promise to the disciples conveyed to them the idea that the Holy Spirit would be sent to them in particular, with specific enabling power that would equip them for their assigned task. It was not an experience that could be stereotyped, codified, or stuffed into a theological mold. It could not be worked up or prayed down. It was something that He, and He alone, would cause.

“ 8b . . . and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.”

These words of Jesus confirm what I have just said – that the Holy Spirit coming upon them spoke of them being empowered for the work He assigned to them – and they had been given to Him by God (John 17:7,9,11,24). The manner in which He now speaks utterly decimates many of the erroneous views of apostolic empowerment.

THE NATURE OF THE WITNESS

“ . . . and ye shall be witnesses unto Me . . . ” Other versions read, “you shall be My witnesses ,” NASB “and will tell the people about Me ,” NLT “to testify about Me with great effect,” LIVING “you must be witnesses for Me ,” WILLIAMS and “and you are to be My witnesses.” MONTGOMERY

Just what is a “witness?” The word used here means “one who avers, or can aver, what he himself has seen and heard . . . one who is a spectator of anything,” THAYER and “one who declares facts known to himself, from firsthand knowledge of experience.” FRIBERG Jesus had already told them some of the ways in which the Holy Spirit would empower them.

We know that this is precisely the kind of empowerment to which Jesus refers. When He first announced that the disciples would receive the Holy Spirit, this is what He said: “ . . . wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of Me.”

The Spirit would abide with them, dwell with them, and be in them. “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you ” (John 14:16-17).

- He would teach the disciples all things. “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things . . . ” (John 14:26a).

- He would bring to their remembrance whatever Jesus had said to them. “ . . . and bring all things to your remembrance , whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26b).

- He would testify to them of Christ. “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me ” (John 15:26).

- Jesus Himself would send the Spirit to them. “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you ” (John 16:7).

- The Spirit would work through their message. “And when He is come , He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” (John 16:8).

- He would guide them into all truth. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth . . . ” (John 16:13a).

- He would deliver to them the things that were spoken to Him. “ . . . for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak . . . ” (John 16:13b).

- He would show them things to come. “ . . . and He will show you things to come” (John 16:13c).

- He would glorify Christ, receiving from Him and giving to them. “He shall glorify Me : for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you ” (John 16:14).

We know that this is precisely the kind of empowerment to which Jesus refers. When He first announced that the disciples would receive the Holy Spirit, this is what He said: “. . . wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of Me” (Acts 1:4).

What Jesus Did NOT Say

Because of distorted views extant within the church on this subject, a word about what Jesus did NOT say is appropriate.

- Jesus did NOT say that when the Holy Spirit came to them they would work miracles – although they often did.
- Jesus did NOT say that the evidence of the Spirit coming to them would be speaking in tongues – although initially they did.
- Jesus did NOT say the Spirit would empower them to do many great works – although they did.
- Jesus did NOT say they would become workers, but rather that they would become witnesses.

Jesus associated the Holy Spirit with these realities.

- Abiding in them.
- Teaching them.
- Guiding them into the truth.
- Their recollection of what Jesus had said.
- Testifying of Jesus to them.
- Reproving, or convicting, the world.
- Guiding them into all truth.
- Speaking what He had heard.
- Showing them things to come.
- Glorifying Christ.
- Taking the things of Christ and showing them to the disciples.

The Nature of the Promise Is Clear

There is no ambiguity about these matters. There can be no doubt about their direction, where they are pointed, or their emphasis. These are the matters for which the Holy Spirit would be noted. They were the touchstone by which His presence would be confirmed to them. It is not remotely possible that the Holy Spirit would come upon them, or anyone else, and these things not become prominent! Nor, indeed, is it conceivable that Jesus would speak to his disciples about peripheral or secondary matters relating to the Holy Spirit, then burst upon them a new emphasis when the Spirit came. Such a notion is so utterly foolish that only the devil himself could deceive a person into thinking such things.

In spite of all of this clear evidence, there are still people speaking about Holy Spirit revivals and awakenings in which speaking in tongues and miracles are the fundamental things. Jesus did not associate the coming of the Holy Spirit with these things in His teaching of the key men in the church – the apostles, who are “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28), and part of the “foundation” upon which it is built (Eph 2:20).

Nowhere is the Holy Spirit elevated to a place of doctrinal prominence – nowhere! He is necessary, to be sure. Those who do not have the Spirit of Christ are “none of His” – and

“the Spirit of Christ” is synonymous with the Holy Spirit, as the context clearly affirms (Rom 8:9-13). However, the Holy does not speak about Himself (John 16:13), and it is not possible for a person filled with the Spirit to speak primarily of the Spirit Himself. Christless preaching is always preaching in which the Holy Spirit is not active – regardless of what is being said.

Some Conclusions

There are some conclusions we can draw from these things – from the fact that the disciples would be empowered by the Spirit according to the promise of God, and in accord with the nature of His great salvation.

- The Holy Spirit had to dwell in them, not come upon them occasionally.
- They had to learn the things of God – things pertaining to God’s purpose in Christ Jesus.
- They had to be familiar with what Jesus Himself had said.
- Their ministry would involve the conviction of sin.
- They had to have an understanding of what was to come.
- They had to have a working knowledge of the truth, and the ability to communicate it.
- They had to glorify Christ.

These realities are like boundaries that keep us from venturing into theological nightfall. When you think about the work of the Lord, you must think properly and with a correct focus. If you begin thinking the main work of God is helping people, relieving the afflicted, establishing domestic stability, etc. then you are faced with the gargantuan task of fitting such objectives into the ministry of the Holy Spirit, as defined by Jesus.

Lest I be misunderstood, it is not that the matters I have just mentioned are unlawful, or that no attention is to be given to them. My point is that they are not granted the right to sit upon the throne of thought, to supervise our focus, or direct our attention. They are not given the crown of emphasis. However you deal with them, it must be within the context of the Divine accent. If that is not done, then the works themselves do, in fact, become wrong. There is no such thing as a valid work for God that does not have Christ Jesus at its center, and the Holy Spirit as its source of power and illumination.

Having said these things, I will leave you to peruse for yourself the kind of emphasis that dominates the modern (2006) Christian world. You should be able to pick up on the thrusts, buzz-words and primary things being said. I will say this one last word. Whatever you may think about the Holy Spirit, the gifts of the Spirit, the anointing of the Spirit, and being filled with the Spirit, where the Lord Jesus Christ is not central, and where people are not themselves in fellowship with God’s Son, the Holy Spirit is not working for good, bearing fruit, or convicting sinners.

JERUSALEM

“ . . . both in Jerusalem . . . ” Other versions read, “to the people in Jerusalem,” LIVING and “not only in Jerusalem.” PHILLIPS

Jesus told His disciples that the preaching and witnessing was to be “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47). Later, Peter would tell some of the citizens of Jerusalem that God had sent Jesus to bless and turn away people from their iniquities “unto you first ” (Acts 3:26). This was done, even though Jerusalem had rejected Jesus, not knowing the time of their “visitation.” Jesus had said to them, “O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate: and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see me, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord” (Luke 13:34-35). Not long before He died, Jesus said to Jerusalem, “For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation ” (Luke 19:43-44). Why, then, did He tell His disciples that their work must begin in Jerusalem? Had they not already rejected Jesus, and was not their judgment already made known? What purpose could possibly be served by preaching to them again? I can think of at least six reasons, and there are no doubt more.

- Two witnesses (2 Cor 13:1).
- In anticipation of the great initial; harvest of Jews at the commencement of the New Covenant (Acts 2:41; 4:4; 5:14 – 3,000 + 5,000 + multitudes of both men and women).
- As a witness to the future citizens who would say, “Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord” (Lk 13:34).
- Because of the remnant who had not yet been made known (Rom 11:5).
- Because God had promised Jerusalem would be a praise in the earth (Isa 62:7).
- In prospect of the fulness of “ the times of the Gentiles” (Luke 21:24).

As was mentioned in the previous lesson, Jerusalem was also prophesied to be the place from which salvation would flow (Isa 2:3; Joel 3:16; Micah 4:2).

ALL JUDAEA

“ . . . and in all Judaea . . . ” There were three divisions in the holy land. From North to South, they were Galilee, Samaria and Judaea. Jerusalem was in Judaea (the Greek for Judah), which was the South-most part of the country. Jesus was born in Judaea – “Bethlehem of Judaea” (Matt 2:1,5-6). John the Baptist began his ministry in Judaea (Matt 3:1). Jesus ministered considerably in this part of the promised land (Matt 19:1; Mk 10:1; John 3:22). Now, as a second witness, the disciples were told to be Christ’s witnesses throughout all Judaea.

SAMARIA

“ . . . and in Samaria . . . ” This was an area in which Jesus forbade the disciples to go when He first sent them out: “Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not” (Matt 10:5). Once, when Jesus sent messengers before Him to prepare the way for His arrival, they “entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for Him.” It is written, “and they did not receive Him, because His face was as though He would go to Jerusalem” (Lk 9:52-53). The city of Samaria, former capital of the kingdom of Israel, is where Jesus encountered the woman at the well, as well as a host of people from the city. In fact “many of the Samaritans of that city believed on Him” (John 4:4-41). We know from Christ’s discussion with the woman at the well, that people in this region were not Jews, and thus were ignorant of the Messiah and of the worship of Jehovah – even though they lived in the promised land (John 4:9,20-22). Now Jesus commissions His disciples to be His witnesses to this area.

THE UTTERMOST PART OF THE EARTH

“ . . . and unto the uttermost part of the earth.” Other versions read, “to the end of the earth,” NKJV “even to the remotest part of the earth,” NASB “to the ends of the earth,” NIV “and indeed to earth’s remotest end,” NJB “and to the farthest parts of the world,” IE and “and to the ends (the very bounds) of the earth.” AMPLIFIED

Sin is global, and therefore the proclaimed remedy must be global also. The manner in which this is proclaimed is remarkably precise.

- ALL THE WORLD – the domain. “And He said unto them, Go ye into all the world , and preach . . .” (Mark 16:15). “And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world . . .” (Mat 24:14).

- EVERY CREATURE – the individuals. “. . . preach the gospel to every creature ” (Mark 16:15).

- ALL NATIONS – the groups. “Go ye therefore, and teach all nations , baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost” (Matt 28:19). “And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations , beginning at Jerusalem” (Luke 24:47). “And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached . . . for a witness unto all nations ; and then shall the end come” (Mat 24:14).

As “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15), this continues to be the work of the church. Just as Jesus built up, strengthened, and empowered His disciples for the work of being His witnesses, so must the church be built up, empowered, and strengthened for the work.

No person or region is excluded from this holy work. The disciples were to start where they were, and go into the extremities of the world, being Christ’s witnesses, testifying to His Person, work, and exaltation.

The following information is taken from Foxes Book of martyrs. It provides some perspective of the extensive labors of early believers.

- Peter – Israel, Babylon, Rome.
- John – Asia, Rome, the Isle of Patmos.
- Philip – He labored diligently in Upper Asia, Heliopolis, and Syria.
- Matthew – Parthia, and Ethiopia, Macedonia, Syria, Persia, and Media.
- James – Persia.
- Andrew – Edessa, Sythia, and North of the Red Sea -- Russia.
- Matthias – Ethiopia.
- Bartholomew – India, and Armenia.
- Thomas – Parthia, India, Persia and the East Indies.
- Thaddeus – Edessa, and Egypt.
- Simon – Mauritania, Africa, and Britain.
- Paul – Palestine, Asia, Greece, Italy, Syria, and possibly Spain.
- Mark – Alexandria, Egypt.

The prodigious labors of these and others were owing to several things.

- Their genuine conversion.
- Their love for God and Christ.

- Their tenderness of heart.
- Their belief of the Gospel.
- Their persuasion of the need of all men.
- Their knowledge of, and conviction of, the power of the Gospel.

The only way the church can fail to hold up the truth of the Gospel to the world is for these qualities to be lacking within it. This, I am persuaded, is the condition of the vast majority of American churches. Although men have labored ardently to instill a sense of the necessity and urgency of Christ's words, a weak and emaciated church remains impotent to enter into the work.

Consider This

Although the Gospel is fully intended to be proclaimed to every offspring of Adam, it is not intended only for those who remain in a state of alienation. The Gospel is God's power "unto salvation," not only initially, but after their reconciliation to God as well (Rom 1:16). When the Gospel is not preached to the church, it becomes weak, malnourished, and worldly in its nature. That is precisely why Paul was ready to preach the Gospel to the church in Rome (Rom 1:15). It is why he declared it again to the Corinthians (1 Cor 15:1-3), the Galatians (Gal 2:5), the Ephesians (Eph 6:19), the Philippians (Phil 1:27), the Colossians (Col 1:23), and the Thessalonians (1 Thess 3:2). Paul, like all other laborers that are called into the vineyard of the Lord, was a witness of Christ.

In the epistles, which are all written to believers who Have been added to the church, there are 9 references to "Jesus," 182 references to "Christ." 4 references to "the Son of God," 67 references to "Lord Jesus Christ," 18 references to "Lord Jesus," 9 references to "Christ our Lord," 44 references to "Christ Jesus," and 2 references to "Christ Jesus the Lord." That is 331 references. The epistles also contain 74 references to the "Gospel."

The only way the church can fail to hold up the truth of the Gospel to the world is for these qualities to be lacking within it. This, I am persuaded, is the condition of the vast majority of American churches. Although men have labored ardently to instill a sense of the necessity and urgency of Christ's words, a weak and emaciated church remains impotent to enter into the work.

By way of comparison, the epistles contain 3 references to "baptism," 6 references to "repent" and "repentance," 42 references to the "church," 9 references to "husbands," and 9 references to "wives." Compare that to the number of direct references to Christ and the Lord – not to mention the 561 references to "God" and 45 references to "the Father", all of which are mentioned in reference to Christ and the Gospel.

All of this accentuates what it means to be "witnesses unto" Christ.

Global Proclamations prior to the Gospel

To confirm God's interest in the whole world, there have been some global proclamations of God and His nature. These were prior to the coming of Christ.

KING NEBUCHADNEZZAR. "Nebuchadnezzar the king, unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth ; Peace be multiplied unto you. I thought it good to show the signs and wonders that the high God hath wrought toward me. How great are His signs ! and how mighty are His wonders! His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom , and His dominion is from generation to generation " (Dan 4:1-3).

KING DARIUS. "Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth ; Peace be multiplied unto you. I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for He is the living God, and stedfast for ever , and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and His dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and rescueth , and He worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth , who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions” (Dan 6:25-27).

Prophesies of a Global Gospel

The universality of the “glorious

The fact of the Gospel being declared to all of the world has not been left to the will of man. It will be preached “in all the world,” just as Jesus said. The only issue is whether or not individuals, groups, or generations are involved in the process.

Gospel of the blessed God,” and of the resulting knowledge of God were prophesied of old.

- “ All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee” (Psa 22:27).
- “ All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name” (Psa 86:9).
- “The LORD hath made known his salvation: his righteousness hath he openly showed in the sight of the heathen. He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel: all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God ” (Psa 98:2-3).
- “They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea ” (Isa 11:9).
- “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD , as the waters cover the sea” (Hab 2:14).
- “And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and in winter shall it be. And the LORD shall be king over all the earth : in that day shall there be one LORD, and His name one” (Zech 14:8-9).
- “And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come” (Mat 24:14).

The fact of the Gospel being declared to all of the world has not been left to the will of man. It will be preached “in all the world,” just as Jesus said. The only issue is whether or not individuals, groups, or generations are involved in the process. Jesus has delivered the mandate to declare the Gospel, and He announced the empowerment to deliver a faithful and accurate witness of Himself.

The book of Acts will provide a record of people who took the word of Jesus to heart, lived by faith, and were empowered to be witnesses of Him. They are an example of what it means to be “laborers together with God” (1 Cor 3:9), “ambassadors of Christ” (2 Cor 5:20), and living in “fellowship” with God’s dear Son (1 Cor 1:9). We will find no finely tuned human strategy for the accomplishment of this work. Rather, Jesus will direct His servants by means of their faith in and love for Him.

WHILE THEY BEHELD

“ 9a And when He had spoken these things, while they beheld, He was taken up . . . ”

Luke is marking the final time Jesus spent with His disciples, just prior to “the day in which He was taken up” (Acts 1:2). It is what followed the time when He was “taken up” that will be reported in this book.

WHEN HE HAD SPOKEN THESE THINGS

“And when He had spoken these things . . .” Other versions read, “And after He had said these things,” NASB “After He said this,” NIV “And when He had said this,” RSV “And having said these things,” DARBY “As He said this,” NJB “It was not long after He said this,” NLT “And these things having said,” YLT and “When He had said these words.” PHILLIPS

The words concerning the disciples being His witnesses to the uttermost part of the world were among His last words to them. Matthew, Mark, and Luke, also record these last words (Matt 28:19-20; Mark 16:15-16; Luke 24:46-49). These records contain the following instructions.

- “Go ye therefore” – i.e. in the power with which you will be endued (Matt 18:18a).
- “Teach all nations” (Matt 28:18b).
- “Baptize them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit” (Matt 28:18c).
- “Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you” (Matt 28:19).
- “Go into all the world” (Mk 16:15a).
- “Preach the Gospel to every creature” (Mk 16:15b).
- “Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name” (Lk 24:47a).
- The preaching should be “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47b).
- “Tarry in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49).

There were also some commitments and promises that Jesus made to His disciples.

•
“Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world” (Mat 28:20).

- “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:16).
- Certain “signs” would follow those who believed (Mk 16:17-18).
- “Ye are witnesses of these things” (Lk 24:48).
- “I send the promise of My Father upon you” (Lk 24:49).

It ought to be noted that speaking is elevated to its highest and most profitable level in Christ Jesus. The Lord has thus prepared His disciples for what is going to follow. All work within the Lord’s vineyard is based upon words – the words of the Lord Jesus.

WHILE THEY BEHELD

“ , , , while they beheld . . . ’” Other versions read, “while they watched,” NKJV “ while they were looking on,” NASB “ before their very eyes ,” NIV “as they were watching ,” NRSV “they beholding Him,” BBE “ while they were watching,” NLT “leaving them staring after Him ,” LIVING “While the apostles were watching,” IE “while they were looking at Him ,” WILLIAMS and “even as they were looking [at Him].” AMPLIFIED

Luke provides a few more details in his gospel. After Jesus had delivered these words to His disciples, He “led them out as far as Bethany.” Bethany was near to Jerusalem, and the “mount of Olives” was there as well (Mk 11:1). Later in this first chapter Luke states that the disciples returned to Jerusalem “from the mount called Olivet” (Acts 1:12). That means that what now occurs took place on the mount of Olives. Zechariah spoke of “the mount of Olives” in regard to the last day, saying the

What sacred memories were associated with this mountain! There certainly are places that have been more blessed than others. These are places where a sweeter communion is realized. Therefore, in regard to this mountain, it is said of Jesus, “Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with His disciples”

Lord’s feet would stand there (Zech 14:4). This was the mountain on which Jesus spoke to some about the sign of His coming and the end of the world (Matt 24:3-51). On the night of His betrayal;, this is where Jesus led His disciples (Peter, James, John, and Andrew – Mk 13:3), and where He prayed His great intercessory prayer (Matt 26:30; Mk 14:26; Lk 22:39; John 17). He came down from this mountain when He entered into Jerusalem in the triumphal entry (Lk 19:37-38). This was the mountain where He went “at night,” after preaching in the Temple “in the day time” (Lk 21:37).

What sacred memories were associated with this mountain! There certainly are places that have been more blessed than others. These are places where a sweeter communion is realized. Therefore, in regard to this mountain, it is said of Jesus, “Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with His disciples” (John 18:2).

At this time Luke also says, “And He lifted up His hands and blessed them” (Lk 24:50). We do not know what He said, but it was surely much like the Aaronic blessing: “The LORD bless thee, and keep thee: The LORD make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: The LORD lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace” (Num 6:24-26). Now, as Jesus is blessing them, they are all beholding Him, their eyes being fastened upon Him.

HE WAS TAKEN UP

“ . . . He was taken up . . . ” Other versions read, “He was lifted up,” NASB “He was raised up ,” DOUAY “He was taken up into the sky ,” NLT “He rose into the sky ,” LIVING “He was carried up ,” WEYMOUTH and “He was caught up .” AMPLIFIED

Luke’s gospel reads, “And it came to pass, while He blessed them , He was parted from them” (Luke 24:51). What a momentous occasion it was! Jesus had told them that He would have to leave them, or the Comforter, who is the Holy Spirit, would not come: “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you” (John 16:7). Further, if the Comforter did not come, they could not receive “power,” for He is the One who was going to bring it to them (Acts 1:8). Additionally, the world could not be convicted of sin, righteousness, and judgment, for that would take place only after the Holy Spirit had come (John 16:8-11). If the Spirit did not come, the disciples would not be guided “into all truth,” or be shown “things to come” (John 16:13). Jesus had told them that it was “expedient” for Him to go away (John 16:7). Now the time had arrived, and they were witnessing Him leave.

“ 9b . . . and a cloud received Him out of their sight.” Other versions read, “and a cloud hid Him from their sight,” NIV “and a cloud took Him out of their sight,” NRSV “He went from their view into a cloud ,” BBE “He disappeared into a cloud ,” NLT “Jesus went into a cloud : they couldn’t see Him anymore,” IE “and a cloud closing beneath Him hid Him from their sight,” WEYMOUTH “and a cloud swept under Him and carried Him out of their sight,” WILLIAMS “and a cloud received and carried Him away out of their sight,” AMPLIFIED and “till a cloud hid Him from their sight .” PHILLIPS

As Jesus was blessing His disciples, he began to rise into the air. He was being “parted” from them (Lk 24:51). They would never again know Him “after the flesh” (2 Cor 5:16), being able to see Him with their eyes, and handle Him with their hands (1 John 1:1). From another point of view He was “taken” from them (Acts 1:2,9,22), after being sent down to earth for a while.

Jesus had completed His mission, laying down His life, and taking it up again, according to the commandment given to Him by the Father (John 10:17-18). His sacrifice and resurrection from the dead provided the basis for the reconciliation and justification of sinners. The basis and the realization of these, however, are not synonymous. Jesus must return to heaven, receive the Kingdom, and commence bringing many sons to glory.

Mark says of Christ’s ascension, “He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God” (Mk 16:19). Paul says of Christ’s ascension that Jesus was “received up into glory” (1 Tim 3:16). Hebrews 1:3 affirms, “when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Heb 1:3). It is also written that He entered “into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us” (Heb 9:24). Peter says, “Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:22).

In speaking of the ascension of Christ, therefore, we are addressing a pivotal aspect of God’s “great salvation.” The fact that so very little is being said about it confirms that, in reality, very little is known of the salvation of God.

DANIEL’S VISION

Daniel is the only man in the Word of God referred to as “greatly beloved.” Thrice an angel, from heaven told this great prophet that he was “greatly beloved” (Dan 9:23; 10:11,19). Owing to this remarkable distinction, he was vouchsafed a unique revelation of the coming Messiah. One thing he was given to behold was the ascension of Jesus Christ, and the results of His return to heaven.

In night visions, Daniel affirms that he beheld “one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought Him near before Him. And there was given Him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve Him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed” (Dan 7:13-14).

Our text (Acts 1:10-11) speaks of the Lord going up into heaven, showing it from earth’s perspective: the Lord left His disciples and the earth in a cloud. Daniel’s vision speaks of the Lord’s ascension also, except it shows it from heaven’s perspective: the Lord came back to heaven in the clouds, returning to the Father.

Like the Son of Man

The expression “one like the Son of man” refers to the coming Messiah, not a personality that was similar to Him. The idea is that of appearance – a personality had the appearance of a man rather than like God. Comparatively, when Nebuchadnezzar saw a fourth person in the fiery furnace with Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, he said he was “like the Son of God.” That is, in appearance – particularly in the fire – he appeared more Divine than human. When, therefore, Daniel saw “one like the Son of man,” he was being shown a man coming from earth into the heavenly realms, where men are ordinarily excluded.

The twenty-fourth Psalm speaks of Christ’s return to heaven, and of the interrogation that was directed to the angelic hosts accompanying Him. First, the accompanying hosts cry out, “Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in” (Psa 24:7). Seeing the appearance of a Man, the host of heaven reply, “Who is this King of glory?” (Psa 24:8). The accompanying host reply, “The LORD strong and mighty, the LORD mighty in battle. Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in” (Psa 24:8-9). Again the inquiry comes back, “Who is this King of glory?” Again they hear the reply, “The LORD of hosts, He is the King of glory” (Psa 24:10).

This was “the Man Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 2:5), returning from the accomplishment of His vicarious death and triumphant resurrection.

With the Clouds of Heaven

The disciples saw Jesus leave in a cloud. Heaven saw Him returning “with the clouds” – wrapped, as it was, with the highest part of the order of earth, but the lowest part of the order of heaven. It is as though nature joined its Lord in His return to the glory.

To the Ancient of Days

This is a term denoting God the Father. Daniel saw “the Ancient of days” as the one to whom every heavenly personality was subject, reigning in majestic splendor. “I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of His head like the pure wool: His throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before Him: thousand thousands ministered unto Him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before Him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened” (Dan 7:9-10).

This is the same Person John saw, seated on the heavenly throne (Rev 4:2-5). John also saw the Savior adjacent to that throne and its Occupant. He saw Him as “the Lamb” (Rev 5:6-7). John saw the Lamb take the book of Divine destiny out of the hand of God. The Lamb was able to open the book, revealing its contents. Daniel sees the exalted Savior returning to the Father to receive a kingdom – another view of taking the book of Divine appointments from the Father.

Given a Kingdom and Glory

Daniel sees the returning King, formally being given “all power in heaven and earth” (Matt 28:18). “And there was given Him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve Him: His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and His kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.” This does not refer to Jesus’ empowerment when He returns to earth, but rather to what He received when He returned to heaven. There is no need for confusion on this matter. It is as though the Spirit extended Himself to assure our hearts that we have a Savior who has been exalted, now possesses the Kingdom, and is presently over all.

- “So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God” (Mark 16:19).
- “For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, Until I make thy foes thy footstool. Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ ” (Acts 2:34-36).
- “Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior ” (Acts 5:31).
- “Which He wrought in Christ, when He raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: And hath put all things under His feet ” (Eph 1:20-22).
- “Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name ” (Phil 2:9).
- “Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him ” (1 Pet 3:22).

The government has been placed upon His shoulder, just as Isaiah prophesied (Isa 9:6). The Kingdom has been given to Him, and is now referred to as “the Kingdom of His dear Son” (Col 1:13), and “the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:11). It is also referred to “the kingdom of Christ and of God” (Eph 5:5). John said that when he was on the Isle of Patmos, he was in “the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ” (Rev 1:9).

Christ’s ascension has to do with Jesus returning to heaven to receive the Kingdom and dominion as a glorified Man.

The ascension of Jesus was more than an event. It was the preparation or the commencement of “the day of salvation” and “the accepted time.” It was necessary for Jesus to return to heaven, as a glorified Man, to be invested with authority and power “over all,” in order for men to be saved.

THE ESSENTIALITY AND CENTRALITY OF THE ASCENSION

The ascension of Jesus was more than an event. It was the preparation or the commencement of “the day of salvation” and “the accepted time” (2 Cor 6:2). It was necessary for Jesus to return to heaven, as a glorified Man, to be invested with authority and power “over all,” in order for men to be saved.

In our time, the grandeur of salvation has been greatly obscured by overly-simplistic explanations of it. I do not believe it has registered on the Christianity community what it actually takes to save a person.

In order for any person or persons to be saved, brought safely to glory, and be able to survive the day of judgment, the Savior, as a Man, had to be invested with ALL power. He Himself prayed to the Father, “As Thou hast given Him power over all flesh, that He should give eternal life to as many as Thou hast given Him ” (John 17:2). Further, the salvation must be accomplished by a Man IN heaven! As staggering as the power of angels is, an angel could not save humanity. Neither, indeed, could salvation be accomplished by a fiat, decree, or Divine word, as was the creation (Heb 11:3). Add to this that God must be “just” in saving men, as well as merciful (Rom 3:26; 1 John 1:9). Men must be saved because God is righteous, as well as gracious. Truth must enter into the salvation as well as compassion.

Briefly ponder some of the effects of Christ’s ascension and consequent exaltation.

- Exalted to give repentance and the remission of sins. “Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31).
- Given to the church as One who is above all principality and power, with everything under His feet. “And God placed all things under his feet and appointed him to be head over everything for the church” NIV (Eph 1:22).
- His presence in the glory is preparing that realm for us. “And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also” (John 14:3).
- If He did not go away, the Holy Spirit would not come to dwell with us. “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you” (John 16:7).
- Having ascended into heaven, He has given gifts to men from heaven. “Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men” (Eph 4:8).

A church that is not heavenly minded is a great contradiction. The presence of Jesus in heaven demands that our affection be placed there. It demands that we look to Him there while we are running the race with patience that has been set before us. Our citizenship is there. Our inheritance is there. We have a “better and enduring substance” there.

He is ministering as our High Priest in heaven – interceding for us, and enabling us to approach to God and be received by Him. “Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession” (Heb 4:14).

- He is ever living to make intercession for us in heaven, else we could not be saved. “Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).

- He is appearing in the presence of God for us, thereby ensuring that we will be received if we come to Him. “For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us” (Heb 9:24).

- Redemption was effected by Jesus returning to heaven. “Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us” (Heb 9:12).

- He is mediating the New Covenant from heaven, ensuring that all of its benefits are received by those who believe on Him. This is His “more excellent ministry,” transcending his ministry while He dwelt among men. “But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also He is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises” (Heb 8:6). And again, “And for this cause He is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15).

A church that is not heavenly minded is a great contradiction. The presence of Jesus in heaven demands that our affection be placed there (Col 3:1-2). It demands that we look to Him there while we are running the race with patience that has been set before us (Heb 12:1-2). Our citizenship is there (Phil 3:20). Our inheritance is there (1 Pet 1:4). We have a “better and enduring substance” there (Heb 10:34). Our resurrection bodies are there (2 Cor 5:2). We are also waiting for Him to return from heaven (1 Thess 1:10).

OUT OF THEIR SIGHT

For over three years Jesus was in the domain where He could be seen and touched. However, in order for peace to be made, reconciliation be accomplished, and the Holy Spirit be given, He had to leave this domain and return to the untroubled and superior realm of eternal glory. His flesh was actually a “veil” of obscurement, prohibiting men from seeing Him as He is (Heb 10:20).

Therefore, when His work on earth was completed, and He had showed Himself alive to His disciples with “many infallible proofs,” leaving instructions for them, a cloud “received Him out of their sight.” He went beyond the reach of natural aptitude.

Jesus told His disciples He was going to leave them in order that the Holy Spirit might come, and that they would see Him no more. “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: of sin, because they believe not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see Me no more” (John 16:7-10). He also told Him that the world would see Him no more. “Yet a little while, and the world seeth me no more ; but ye see me: because I live, ye shall live also” (John 14:19).

After Jesus rose from the dead, no one who did not prefer His company when He walked among men ever saw Him again. Peter explained this to Cornelius. “Him God raised up the third day, and showed him openly; not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God , even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead” (Acts 10:40-41).

The strength of the Christian religion is not found in its rules or special way of life. It is not found in its beginnings or, its greatest workers, or even its pure and profitable doctrine. Rather, at its root, its strength is found in its Living Head – one who “was dead,” but is “alive for evermore” (Rev 1:18). Our Savior had to die – but we are not saved by a dead Savior! We are “saved by His life” – His resurrected life (Rom 5:10) in which He mediates and intercedes.

The basis for our salvation is found in His atoning death and glorious resurrection. But many sons are being brought to glory by a living and active Lord – one who has ascended into the realm from which He is now working.

“ 10a And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as He went up . . . ” Other versions read, “And as they were gazing intently into the sky while He was departing,” NASB “They were looking intently up into the sky as he was going,” NIV “While he was going and they were gazing up toward heaven ,” NRSV “As they were straining their eyes for another glimpse .” LIVING “As Jesus was going away, the apostles were staring into the sky ,” IE “But, while they stood intently gazing into the sky as He went,” WEYMOUTH and “and while they were gazing after Him into heaven.” WILLIAMS

It is apparent that Jesus rose slowly into the heavens, permitting some last glimpses of Him. This time the disciples eyes were not “heavy with sleep” as with Peter, James, and John on the mount of transfiguration (Luke 9:32). They were all alert and straining to keep Him in their vision as long as they possibly could. Their eyes were not shifting too and fro. If there were other things within range of their vision, they were certainly paying no heed to them. Their eyes were riveted on the departing Savior, and they would not be turned aside.

THEY HAD BEEN MADE READY

It seems to me that their time with Jesus had prepared them for this singular event. They had witnessed His great power, and while they had not grown accustomed to the unusual, they were not unacquainted with it. Had Jesus risen into the heavens before them when they first started following Him, they would no doubt have cried out in fear, as when they saw Him walking on the water (John 6:19). Now, however, the works and words of the blessed Lord had made their hearts more supple, so that they could look intently upon Him, even though He was disappearing from them, and doing so contrary to all the laws of nature.

A PICTURE OF LOOKING UNTO JESUS

Faith looks intently upon Jesus as the disciples looked intently on Him with their natural eyes, watching Him pass from their sight. Such a look refuses to be distracted. It gives no heed to competing voices that call out, “Lo here! Or “Lo there!”

This is also an excellent portrayal of what it means to look to Jesus, or set our affection on things above. In regard to the progress of faith we are admonished, “Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God” (Heb 12:2). How does a person “look unto Jesus” – a Jesus that is not within the range of natural vision?

Faith looks intently upon Jesus as the disciples looked intently on Him with their natural eyes , watching Him pass from their sight. Such a look refuses to be distracted. It gives no heed to competing voices that call out, “Lo here! Or “Lo there!” (Lk 17:21). Convinced of the reality of Jesus, and having tasted of the benefits of His presence, the one who is “looking unto Jesus” has subordinated all other would-be priorities. The “affection” of such a person is “set on things above, not on things o the earth” (Col 3:1). If Jesus left here to prepare a place for us, so we could leave also, then what rationale can be presented for having our minds nailed like Sisera’s head to the earth (Judges 4:21)?

Let there be no mistake about this. The measure of a person’s love for Christ can be precisely measured by how intently he can look upon Christ Jesus. How long can his attention be riveted on the Son of God? How quickly does he need some distraction? How rapidly does the interest in truth wane? How long can an interest be sustained in “those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1)?

When we are confronted with professing “Christians” who have little or Let no soul be so utterly naive as to imagine disinterest in the Lord of glory will be ignored in our generation, or that a person can ignore Jesus with impunity.

no interest in the King Himself, and even less in His Word, what are we to think? What of those who have not even risen to the level of those precious souls under the Old Covenant, who “spake often to one another,” drawing the attention of the Almighty God (Mal 3:16)? In Malachi’s day an atonement for sin had not yet been made (Rom 5:10). Peace had not yet been made with God (Col 1:20), and the world had not yet been reconciled (2 Cor 5:18-19). The conscience had not yet been purged (Heb 9:14), nor had the devil been destroyed (Heb 2:14). The Holy Spirit had not yet been sent to men, because Jesus had not yet been glorified (John 7:38-39; Gal 4:6). Men had not yet been called into the fellowship of God’s Son (1 Cor 1:9), nor had they been washed, sanctified, and justified (1 Cor 6:11). There was no heavenly Intercessor (Heb 7:25), and people were not being changed “from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of our God” (2 Cor 3:18). Men had not yet been “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17).

Can it be that there can possibly be less interest heavenward in this day of salvation, than in the time when men were “not made perfect without us” (Heb 11:40). Is it remotely possible that those who died “not having received the promise” (Heb 11:13) were actually more fervent than those who have received it? If the men of Nineveh will rise up in the day of judgment and condemn the generation who heard Jesus speak on earth, how will they address those who refused Him who is now speaking from heaven (Matt 12:41; Heb 12:25). If the queen of Sheba will rise up in the day of judgment and condemn those who did not go out of their way to go to Jesus in the flesh, what will she say to those who could have come to Him and learned from Him, and yet refused to do so (Luke 11:31; Matt 11:28-30)?

We have here a record of the disciples looking intently upon Jesus as He faded from their view. They did it before they understood what was really happening. They did it before they received the Holy Spirit. They did it before Jesus gave repentance and remission of sins? They did it before Jesus was exalted at the right hand of God. Let no soul be so utterly naive as to imagine disinterest in the Lord of glory will be ignored in our generation (or any other), or that a person can ignore Jesus with impunity.

TWO MEN IN WHITE APPAREL

“10b . . . behold, two men stood by them in white apparel.” Other versions read, “behold, two men in white clothing stood beside them,” NASB “when suddenly two men dressed in white stood beside them,” NIV “suddenly two men in white robes stood by them,” NRSV “two men came to them , in white clothing,” BBE “two men were found standing near them , in white garments,” NAB “two whiterobed men suddenly stood there among them,” NLT and “Suddenly, two angels stood beside them . They were dressed in white clothes.” IE

When “the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us” (John 1:14), the angels came down to announce the event (Matt 1:20; Lk 1:26-38; 2:9-13). When there was imminent danger for the infant Jesus, angels became involved, directing the holy family on what to do (Matt 2:13,19). Immediately after his baptism, when Jesus was sorely tempted by the devil, “angels came and ministered unto Him” (Matt 4:11). When, on the eve of His betrayal and death, He prayed with “strong crying and tears,” and His sweat fell on the ground like thunderous drops of blood, “there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven, strengthening Him” (Heb 5:7; Luke 22:43,44). When He rose from the dead an angel descended from heaven and “rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it” (Matt 28:2). Two angels sat, one at the head, and one at foot, of the place where Jesus lay in the grave (John 20:12).

It should certainly not surprise us that angels would appear when the Lord ascended into heaven. Angels, however, must make themselves apparent to men, for they are “spirits” (Psa 104:4; Heb 12:7) – and “a spirit hath not flesh and bones” (Lk 24:39).

TWO MEN

Saints are reminded that angels can come to them in the form of men. “Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares” (Heb 13:2).

- Abraham once entertained three angels, who had the appearance of “three men” (Gen 18:2-33).

- Lot had two angels visit him, who also had the appearance of two men (Gen 19:1-17). Verses 5,8,10,12 and 16 refer to them as “men.” Verses 1 and 15 refer to them as “angels.” These were among the three “men” who had visited Abraham earlier (Gen 18:16,22).

- Joshua saw an angel; – no less than “the captain of the host of the Lord.” He appeared to Joshua as a man (Josh 5:14-15).

- Jacob once wrestled with “a man until the breaking of the day” (Gen 32:24). Hosea tells us that he was actually wrestling with an “angel” (Hos 12:4).

- An angel appeared to Manoah and his wife (Samson’s parents). In the thirteenth chapter of Judges, the messenger is referred to as a “man” (13:6,8,10-12). He is also referred to as an “angel” (13:3,9,13,15,16,17,18, 19,20,21).

- An angel spoke to Ezekiel, appearing as a man (Ezek 10:2-6).

- An angel came to Daniel, who appeared as a man (Dan 8:16; 10:5,18; 12:6-7). The book of Daniel even refers to Gabriel as “the man Gabriel” (Dan 9:21).

- Zechariah saw an angel who appeared as a man (Zech 1:10).

I gather that these appearances were accommodations to the frailty of the natural man – a state brought on by transgression. First, men have no natural faculty that permit them to behold angels, who are “spirits.” Second, were they able to behold angels as they really are, I do not doubt that their hearts would fail them for fear.

WHITE APPAREL

These men were attired in white apparel. When Mary saw two angels sitting in the empty tomb, they were “in white ” (John 20:12). When the women came to the empty tomb, they saw “a young man sitting on the right side, clothed in a long white garment” (Mark 16:5). John saw seven angels come out of the heavenly temple, “clothed in pure and white linen” (Rev 15:6).

Can Jesus have so much attention from heaven, where there is not so much as one angelic spirit for whom He died, and yet be so little preferred among the race for whom He died?

White is the predominate color of heaven, and speaks of purity and glory. When Jesus was transfigured, “His raiment was white as light” (Matt 17:2). Luke says it was “white and glistening” (Lk 9:29). The glorified saints are depicted as “clothed in white ” (Rev 7:9,13) – robes that had been “washed” and made “white in the blood of the Lamb” (Rev 7:14). The glorified Son of man is presented as sitting on a “white cloud, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle” (Rev 14:14). The “righteousness of the saints” is portrayed as “fine linen, clean and white ” (Rev 19:8). The glorified Christ, “called Faithful and True” is set forth as riding “a white horse” (Rev 19:11). His armies are said to ride “upon white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean” (Rev 19:14). The heavenly throne is described as “a great white throne” (Rev 20:11).

These angels appeared as “two men,” but they had heavenly attire, and did not comport themselves as mere men. They were from a holy God and a pure realm, and even their appearance as men confirmed this to be the case.

Can Jesus have so much attention from heaven, where there is not so much as one angelic spirit for whom He died, and yet be so little preferred among the race for whom He died? Ah, it is a bitter reality that I often pondered. The church is to be the premier exhibit of what the grace of God can do – not how much it is needed!

WHY? WHY?

“ 11a Which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven?” Other versions read, “Men of Galilee, why do you stand looking into the sky?” NASB “Men of Galilee, why do you stand looking up toward heaven?” NRSV “Ye Galilean men, why stand ye and look toward heaven?” MRD “Men of Galilee, why are you standing there looking at the sky?” NAB and “Men of Galilee, why are you standing here staring at the sky?” NLT

By this time, Jesus has no doubt disappeared from sight. Still, the disciples remain with their vision fixed upon the sky, hoping, no doubt, for yet another glimpse of their blessed Lord. Perhaps they had made a correlation between Elisha seeing Elijah being taken up, and themselves. Elisha was promised that if he saw Elijah “taken from” him, he would receive a double portion of his spirit. He did, in fact, see Elijah parted from him as “there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven” (2 Kgs 2:10-11). He then took of Elijah’s mantle that “fell from him,” and went his way to fulfill the role of a mighty prophet of God.

The parallel is not a perfect one, for the disciples did not receive a double portion of the Spirit Jesus had. God did not give “the Spirit by measure unto Him,” so it was impossible to have a double measure of that Spirit (John 3:34). Still, they were going to enter into a ministry in which they would do “greater works,” because Jesus ascended back to the Father (John 14:12).

The Spirit does not elaborate on the thoughts coursing through the disciples’ minds as they saw Jesus disappear from their sight in His ascent upward. It seems to me, however, that their minds were certainly not empty at the time.

Now, the angels standing by them speak. They are not from earth, but they know what is going on in earth. They know who these men are, and where they are from: “Ye men of Galilee.” In their words, you sense a certain angelic consternation at the dulness of men. They have come from a realm that is filled with knowledge. They have been privy to the coming of the Messiah into the world, and they have a certain understanding of future events. Coming from the heavenly realm, where understanding and recollection are at a much higher level, it must be something like a trial to confront the slowness and dulness of men. They ask the men why they are standing and gazing up into heaven, even after the Savior had disappeared from their sight.

Jesus had told the disciples where to go and what to do: “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:49). It was now time to leave Bethany and head back to the city. The angels wonder why they have not done so, but remain “looking up toward heaven.” Jesus had passed into the domain that, for men in the flesh, can only be accessed by faith. Too, the corporeal presence of the Lord was to be experienced no more by them – as He had told them: “ye see Me no more” (John 16:9). The angels expect them to quickly return to Jerusalem, yet they remain with the eyes fixed on the heavens. These angels are not as tolerant of retarded responses as we poor mortals. They have questioned holy men concerning their ignorance (Zech 4:4-6,11-14; Rev 7:13-14).

“ 11b this same Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “This Jesus,” NASB and “This very Jesus.”
WILLIAMS

There was a sense in which Jesus was different following His resurrection. Now He was “alive for evermore” (Rev 1:18). Sometimes He was not recognizable because “He appeared in another form” (Mk 16:12), and “their eyes were holden that they should not know Him” (Luke 24:16). Until she heard Him speak her name, Mary thought He was “the gardener” (John 20:15). He had suddenly appeared in the room with the disciples when the doors were “shut” (John 20:19), something He had never done prior to His death.

Following His resurrection, when Jesus appeared to His disciples, they “supposed they had seen a spirit.” It was then that He said to them, “And he said unto them, Why are ye troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold My hands and My feet, that it is I myself : handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when He had thus spoken, He showed them His hands and His feet” (Luke 24:37-40). It was the “same Jesus” with whom they had walked for over three years.

Now the angels tell them they have a word to say about this “same Jesus.” He has taken back His life, according to the commandment delivered to Him (John 10:17-18). In some respects He appeared different, but essentially, He was the same – the same Person, the same agenda, and the same purpose.

“ 11c . . . which is taken up from you into heaven . . . ” Other versions read, “who has been taken from you into heaven,” NASB “who was taken up from you into heaven,” NRSV “who was received up from you into heaven ,” ASV “Jesus has gone away into heaven ,” LIVING “ carried away from you into heaven ,” IE and “Who was caught away and lifted up from among you into heaven .”
AMPLIFIED

As already established, this is a pivotal point of sound doctrine. Although Jesus is with His people, even unto the end of the world (Matt 28:20), He Himself is “in heaven.” He presently dwells in our hearts “by faith” (Eph 3:17), but He Himself is in heaven. Christ “in you” is “the hope of glory” (Col 1:27), but He Himself is in heaven. Our experience of Jesus is one of faith, not of sight or of touch. Recently, certain American preachers and teachers have been referring to “the tangible presence of Jesus,” and “the tangible presence of the Spirit.” This is foolish talk and, at the very best, is spoken out of ignorance. The word “tangible” means “capable of being touched: able to be perceived as materially existent, especially by the sense of touch.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

Prior to His ascension, Jesus was present with His disciples in a “tangible” way. John wrote of that circumstance, “That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life” (1 John 1:1). Following His resurrection, Jesus appeared in a tangible manner to His disciples. He told them, “Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have” (Luke 24:39). He was with them tangibly.

Now, however, Jesus has been “taken up from” us “into heaven.” He is no longer with us in a tangible way. He cannot be accessed or perceived by any human senses – He has been taken from us! Human sight cannot see Him. Human touch cannot feel Him. Human ears cannot hear Him. Human smell cannot detect Him. Even if He speaks to men from heaven, as He did to Saul of Tarsus, they must be made to hear and understand His voice by supernatural means. If some person upon earth sees Him, like Stephen when he was being stoned, it both private and miraculous. He has been taken up from us.

Jesus is “in heaven!” A special point is made of this. Our understanding of Jesus is to include this key ingredient: He is in heaven.

- “So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, He was received up into heaven , and sat on the right hand of God” (Mark 16:19).
- “And it came to pass, while he blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven ” (Luke 24:51).
- “For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself , now to appear in the presence of God for us” (Heb 9:24).
- “Who is gone into heaven , and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:22).

The Scriptures affirm that “ God is in heaven” (Eccl 5:2), and Jesus is at His “right hand” – having been seated there with great power and glory (Mk 16:19; Acts 2:33; 7:55-56; Rom 8:34; Col 3:1; Heb 1:3; 8:1; 10:12; 12:2; 1 Pet 3:22). There He is reigning over all.

How, then, can a person be resting in Jesus and have his affection placed on earthly things? If Jesus is in heaven, how is it possible for a person who has faith to focus upon this world? To attempt such a thing is like Peter turning his eyes from Jesus to the storm while he was walking on the water. As soon as he did this, he began to sink! Likewise, the person whose attention is diverted from Jesus, who is in heaven, to the things of this world will surely begin to sink. This is the reason for all backsliding (Jer 14:7), every case of a person being overtaken in a fault (Gal 6:1), and every occasion of sin (1 John 2:1). It is why men “draw back” (Heb 10:39), “fall” (Heb 4:11). “depart from the faith” (1 Tim 4:1), and leave their “first love” (Rev 2:4).

It is time to get the psychoanalysts out of the church. There is no place for them among the redeemed. Aberrant behavior is directly traceable to self-interests and a worldly mind-set. See, Jesus is “in heaven,” and therefore it is not possible to be holy, in god’s favor, or provided with Divine benefits unless your affection is placed there.

Jesus has been “taken up” from the world and the access of all who make it their home. As soon as men cease to live within a lively awareness of that reality, spiritual life begins to wane, and all spiritual resources are out of reach.

HE SHALL COME AS HE HAS GONE

The holy angels know that Jesus is going to return from heaven. In fact, they will accompany Him (Matt 16:27; 2 Thess 1:7). He will come in all of His glory, accompanied by the glory of the Father and that of the angels as well (Lk 9:26). We are even told that an angel will announce the time in which the world will be reaped.

“ 11d . . . shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven.” Other versions read, “will come in just the same way as you have watched Him go into heaven,” NASB “ will come back in the same way you have seen Him go into heaven,” NIV “shall so come in like manner as ye beheld Him going into heaven,” ASV “will come again, in the same way as you saw Him go into heaven,” BBE “shall thus come in the manner in which ye have beheld Him going into heaven,” DARBY “will return in the same way as you have seen Him going into heaven,” NAB “will come in just the same way as you have watched Him go into heaven,” NAS “And someday, just as you saw him go, He will return !” NLT and “and some day, just as He went , He will return,” LIVING

The holy angels know that Jesus is going to return from heaven. In fact, they will accompany Him (Matt 16:27; 2 Thess 1:7). He will come in all of His glory, accompanied by the glory of the Father and that of the angels as well (Lk 9:26). We are even told that an angel will announce the time in which the world will be reaped. “And I looked, and behold a white cloud, and upon the cloud one sat like unto the Son of man, having on His head a golden crown, and in His hand a sharp sickle. And another angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to Him that sat on the cloud, Thrust in Thy sickle, and reap: for the time is come for thee to reap; for the harvest of the earth is ripe. And He that sat on the cloud thrust in his sickle on the earth; and the earth was reaped” (Rev 14:14-16).

When Jesus was with His disciples, He told them that He was going to come again “from heaven.”

- “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of His Father with His angels; and then He shall reward every man according to his works” (Matt 16:27).
- “When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory” (Matt 25:31).
- “For whosoever shall be ashamed of Me and of My words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He shall come in His own glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels” (Luke 9:26).
- “And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again , and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also” (John 14:3).

Apostolic Doctrine Declares It

This was also a critical point of apostolic doctrine. There is no room for a theology that omits or confuses this!

- “So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 1:7).
- “Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come , who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God” (1 Cor 4:5).
- “For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till He come ” (1 Cor 11:26).
- “And to wait for His Son from heaven , whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come” (1 Thess 1:10).
- “When He shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day” (2 Thess 1:10).
- “For yet a little while, and He that shall come will come , and will not tarry” (Heb 10:37).

Now the angels announce that Jesus will return in the same way the disciples have seen Him leave.

WITH THE CLOUDS

- “And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory” (Mat 24:30).

- “Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven ” (Mat 26:64).

- “And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory” (Mark 13:26).

Many professed “Christian” teachers have neutralized the powerful effects of the knowledge of Christ’s return with their theories and traditions. They have so muddied the theological waters that when some people hear of Jesus coming back, they can only think of the traditions of men.

- “Behold, He cometh with clouds ; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen” (Rev 1:7).

WITH THE HOLY ANGELS

- “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of His Father with His angels ; and then he shall reward every man according to his works” (Mat 16:27).

- “When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory” (Mat 25:31).

- “Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of Him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels ” (Mark 8:38).

- “And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with His mighty angels” (2 Thess 1:7).

VISIBLY

- “Which in his times He shall show , who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15).

- “Behold, He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen” (Rev 1:7).

- “And said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of Him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb: For the great day of His wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?” (Rev 6:16-17).

Just as surely as heavenly personalities were acutely aware of Christ’s return to heaven (Dan 7:13-14), so all personalities on earth will be aware of His return here. It simply is not possible to hide a Jesus who appears in “all of His glory,” together with the Father’s glory and that of the holy angels (Lk 9:26). To suggest the possibility of such a thing betrays an abysmal ignorance of Christ’s glory, and insults the faith and intelligence of “God’s elect” (Rom 8:33; Tit 1:1).

Many professed “Christian” teachers have neutralized the powerful effects of the knowledge of Christ's return with their theories and traditions. They have so muddied the theological waters that when some people hear of Jesus coming back, they think of these things:

- The antichrist.
- The tribulation.
- The rapture.
- A glorified kingdom on earth.
- A glorified Christ perceived by men the flesh.
- A war between Jesus and men.
- Pre-millennialism – a return before the millennium.
- Post-millennialism – a return after the millennium.
- A-millennialism – a return during the millennium.

Whatever may be said of these views, the Holy Spirit has not spoken of the return of Christ within such contexts. That is not the "manner" in which He left, and it will not be the manner in which He returns. The angels know this, and the church should not know it as well! The church, as the appointed "pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim 3:15), and is responsible for delivering a proper view of the return of the Lord. This subject should be clear in the minds of believers, and should be driven into the conscience of unbelievers. The fact that these conditions do not exist negate much of the modern church's profession. If the modern church is not clear about such a central thing as Christ's return, how can we be sure it is clear about anything?

In the book of Hebrews, the Spirit says three central things about Christ. They concern what He has done, what He is doing, and what He will do. They are also referred to as His appearings, He IS appearing. He HAS appeared, and He WILL appear.

Buttressing the Point

I understand that this may appear too strong. However, God has spoken to this matter, and there can be no question about it.

In the book of Hebrews, the Spirit says three central things about Christ. They concern what He has done, what He is doing, and what He will do. They are also referred to as His appearings, He IS appearing. He HAS appeared, and He WILL appear.

• WHAT HE IS DOING. "For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true; but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us" (Heb 9:24).

• WHAT HE HAS DONE. "Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others; for then must he often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." (Heb 9:25-26).

• WHAT HE WILL DO. "And as it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment: so Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb 9:27-28).

In which of these appearings do you feel God allows for us to be wrong, or in error? What is there in all of God's Word that suggests we can be incorrect in our view of the Son of God? If God has given us "the record of His Son," is it one that is so vague that differing views can be entertained of that record, and the individual still be honored by God?

If it is true that faith in Christ is essential (Gal 3:26; Col 1:4; 2:5), can that faith be founded upon an improper perception of Jesus? There is really no need to labor this point. A Jesus that does not precisely conform to the “record” God has given of Him is nothing more than “another Jesus” (2 Cor 11:3) – a “Jesus” that cannot possibly save.

If angels, to whom the salvation of Christ does not apply, have an understanding of the fact and manner of Christ’s return, what possible justification can there be for those for whom the salvation was wrought being ignorant of it? What would lead any person to imagine that such a condition is acceptable, or that salvation provides for such ignorance?

In view of this text, I cannot conceive of holy angels being unconcerned about such a situation – and remember, they are our ministers. It is possible that our spiritual condition bears upon their ministry to us.

CONCLUSION

The beginning of this grand book has provided a kind of index that will be seen throughout of its recorded events. According to Divine purpose, and in strict accord with Christ’s ministry, He Himself would be both the substance and incentive of all valid labor. His disciples would labor with a keen awareness of these realities.

- What Jesus had accomplished by the sacrifice of Himself.
- That He is presently in heaven, mediating the New Covenant, making intercession for the saints, and governing the Kingdom.
- That He will come again, bringing His reward with Him, and holding all men in strict account.

At no point will they embark on any mission, or deliver any discourse, that ignores these realities. Circumstances will not be allowed to upstage what Jesus IS doing, ignore what He HAD done, or leave people unprepared for what He WILL do. That, in turn, sets the tone for the work of the church throughout all ages. It is a direction established by heaven, revealed by the Lord Jesus, and facilitated by the Holy Spirit.

Throughout history, the church has been diverted from this Divine focus. This has been owing to the activity of the powers of darkness, which have broke forth in power because of the carnality and ignorance that was found in the professing church. False prophets and pretentious leaders have been used by the devil to shine the theological spotlight on things other than the Son of God. As a result all manner of erroneous doctrines and traditions have erupted like Mount Vesuvius. There have even been whole periods of time when it appeared as though the church had been totally corrupted. The Dark Ages, for example, was a era described as being “A period of intellectual darkness and barbarity.” It extended from the collapse of Roman civilization until the period of the Renaissance – a staggering span of 1,000 years. During this time religious superstition and a hierarchy of authority dominated Christianity. Christ was no longer central in Christendom, but the church itself became primal. Yet, as in all ages, there remained a “remnant according to the election of grace” (Rom 11:5).

It was not until the sixteenth century, with the rise of the Reformation Movement that some measure of freshness, understanding, and life, was injected into the mainstream of Christianity.

Toward the eighteenth century, another blow was struck to the emphasis of Christendom. A period referred to as “The Enlightenment” rose on the horizon of human thought. The French led out in this period, exalting human reason to the throne, and expelling religion from the intellectual scene. In the wake of this movement “Higher Criticism” made its entrance. This approach subjected the Scriptures to human assessment, and thus was born the plethora of Biblical footnotes referring to “older and better manuscripts,” together with the exclusion of such texts as Mark 16 and John 8 from the Scriptures. This particular approach accents the “original language” or “original text” of Scripture, even though there is not so much as a single page of an original manuscript in all of the world. This approach is a major diversion in our day.

Lest I be unduly distracted in this brief digression, let me make the real point. What happened in all of these deviations was that Christ was moved to the back room of theology. Commensurate with all of these misplaced emphases, what Christ had accomplished in His death became obscure, or, at the very least, distorted. What Christ is presently doing became virtually unknown. The declared reality of His return became the basis for a phenomenal amount of speculation and religious opinion – things that have now been codified and imposed on professing Christians, who themselves are without understanding.

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

Why is it necessary to say such things. Are not such observations nothing more references to meaningless history? Indeed not! My point is that the book of Acts presents the very real work of God. It gives us the context of valid labors for the Lord. It identifies how people with pure minds and good hearts thought. This is how God REALLY works, now that Jesus has been enthroned at His right hand, invested with all power in heaven and earth, and given as Head over all to the church.

If we read the book of Acts with the modern church in mind, we will not get much out of it, for that kind of church is not found this volume. If we read it with current religious trends in mind, it will appear nothing more than a record of the way things “used to be.” We will not be confronted with an institutionalized church, formalized Christian education, religious careers, and religious businesses and specialized endeavors. This is a record of how the Lord Jesus worked through His disciples by means of the Holy Spirit. It will not dignify human thought, but Divine purpose. It will not exalt an institution, but the Lord Jesus Christ Himself. It will not smother us with cultural concerns, but subject our minds to the truth, the source of that truth, and its power among men.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #3

THE DISCIPLES RETURN TO JERUSALEM

“ 1:12 Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey. 13 And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room, where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. 14 These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren.” (Acts 1:12-14)

INTRODUCTION

After being commanded by Him to tarry in Jerusalem until they were endued with “power from on high,” Christ’s disciples, had witnessed His ascension into heaven. At this time, the world was on the verge of being impacted by a revolutionary and powerful message. It would be delivered by those who were invested with Divine power.

DIRECTED FROM WITHIN

These people, though accustomed to being in the bodily presence of the Lord, would embark upon their mission without that visible and tangible presence. They would not be directed from without, as they were when Jesus was “among” them, but would be empowered and directed from within .

The New Covenant is “new” in every way. The covenant itself is not one of worldly prosperity and visible impressions. It is not a covenant that is established upon signs and wonders, and sensible manifestations – even though such things do occur. This is a covenant in which an essential change is wrought in the people themselves. All of the activities of those who participate in that covenant reflect that essential change.

Lest we forget the nature of the New Covenant, or are unduly impressed by those pretending to represent the Lord Jesus, let your heart again ponder the covenant under which Christ's messengers will operate. Everything about their activities will confirm the

CONTENTS

- OBEDIENT DISCIPLES (1:12)
- THEY WENT INTO AN UPPER ROOM (1:13a)
- THE ELEVEN (1:13b)
- THE WAITING BEGINS (1:14a)
- DO NOT FORGET THE OTHERS (1:14b)
- CONCLUSION

reality of these characteristics.

- The mind would be effected. "I will put my laws into their mind" (Heb 8:10a). That is, the people will think differently. Their thoughts reflect the mind and law of the Lord. Their thinking is in strict harmony with the word of the Lord. The way in which they think, as well as the substance of their thoughts, will be in accord with the mind and will of the Lord. Their thoughts and meditations would be "acceptable" in the sight of the Lord (Psa 19:14).

- The heart would be effected. "and write [My laws] them in their hearts" (Heb 8:10b). That is, the affections, desires, preferences, and objectives of the people will be wholly altered. They would have an appetite for the Word of the Lord, desiring it more than their "necessary food" (Job 23:12). Their "delight" would be in the "law of the Lord" (Psa 1:2), and they would "love" it with zeal and consistency (Psa 119:97). The people will want to obey the Lord.

- God would be their God. "I will be to them a God," or "I will be their God" NKJV (Heb 8:10c). That is, the people would not consider any other god, or be drawn away from the true God. The real God would be their preference, the One they confessed, and the only One they served.

- They will be God's People. ". . .they shall be to me a people" (Heb 8:10d). That is, God will freely identify Himself with the people, not having to confess their recalcitrance as He did with Israel (Ex 32:9; 33:3,5; Deut 9:13; Isa 30:9; 65:2; Rom 10:21).

- They would ALL know the Lord. "And they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest" (Heb 8:11). That is, they would all be acquainted with the Lord, know His ways, and walk with Him.

- Sins would be Forgiven and Remembered no more. "For I will be merciful to their unrighteousness, and their sins and their iniquities will I remember no more" (Heb 8:12). That is, sin would be put away, the conscience purged, and justification from all things realized.

It is within the framework of this covenant that Christ's laborers would conduct their affairs. They would speak with circumcised and illuminated hearts. They would teach with understanding and insight. All of this would be made possible through the power of the Holy Spirit who would come upon them.

THEY SPEAK FROM WITHIN

It is within the framework of this covenant that Christ's laborers would conduct their affairs. They would speak with circumcised and illuminated hearts. They would teach with understanding and insight.

From their bellies would "flow rivers of living water" (John 7:38). They would, in the ultimate sense, fulfill the words spoken to Job by Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite: "For I am full of matter, the spirit within me constraineth me. Behold, my belly is as wine which hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles" (Job 32:18-19). Solomon's words would be brought to their full measure: "The mouth of a righteous man is a well of life" (Prov 10:11). They would set the tone for "the day of salvation," with joy drawing "water out of the wells of salvation" (Isa 12:4). In fulfillment of Zechariah's prophecy, "living waters shall go out from Jerusalem" (Zech 14:8).

THEY WERE ORIENTED FOR THIS

Throughout their tenure with Jesus of Nazareth, they had been oriented for this time – even though they were not as aware of that orientation as they now would be. The Spirit moved Mark to write this concerning the apostles: "And He ordained twelve, that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach" (Mark 3:14).

It is true that Jesus, upon returning to heaven, was going to empower them by sending His Spirit to dwell within them. As He Himself said, "And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:16-17). Again He said, "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you" (John 16:7).

However, there was a three and one-half year investment in these men before they were given the Holy Spirit. They were exposed to the Divine manner – to the compassion of the Lord, as well as His indignation with pretentious religion. They beheld the subjection of the spiritual underworld to Him, and how readily it yielded to His authority.

It appears as though precious few people have suddenly been wafted into spiritual maturity and empowerment. Many of Christ's disciples were disciples of John first, readying them to become Christ's own disciples. As it is written, "Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples; and looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus" (John 1:35-37). John goes on to tell us that one of those disciples was "Andrew,

It is not proper to expect to make great spiritual strides without some investment of your person. Mediocre disciples are nothing more than the result of second-rate interest and investment.

Simon Peter's brother" (John 1:40).

A Point to be Seen

Suffice it to say, there is something to be seen in all of this. It is not proper to expect to make great spiritual strides without some investment of your person. Mediocre disciples are nothing more than the result of second-rate interest and investment. If you want a lot from the Lord, then you must give Him a lot of yourself.

ORDINARY, YET EXTRAORDINARY

From the standpoint of the flesh, these people were ordinary, but in a few days, they would be transformed into bold and effective witnesses. When the Spirit of God came upon them, they would be anything but ordinary.”

From this very hour, they will begin conducting their affairs with insight and great expectation. Jesus would no sooner leave them than they would begin doing exactly what He said. They would even be led to fulfill a need of which Jesus had not specially told them.

Now we will begin to see how the people of God go about their lives with an absent Jesus – present with them only in Spirit, and out of the reach of their senses. Keep in mind, this is not how they have lived during the past three and a half years. There have been very few times when they were required to launch out without the physical presence of Jesus – as when they were sent across the sea by themselves (Mk 6:46-48). Now, however, they would live out the rest of their lives in the service of the risen Christ – while they are “absent from the Lord” (2 Cor 5:8).

The presence of Jesus with them during the previous forty days has had a calculated effect upon their persons. Even while they wait for “the promise of the Father,” there will be a marked difference in their thinking and conduct.

These disciples will not set up an accountability network, or pass out a list of rules and regulations among themselves. They will operate within the framework of faith’s awareness of the Person of the glorified Christ, and His words to them while He was with them. We will behold how men live by faith.

OBEDIENT DISCIPLES

“ 1:12 Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet, which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.”

Having been told by the heavenly messengers that they would see Jesus again – at the appointed time – they commence the time of waiting. Jesus had told them what to do during the next few days, and now they were to commence the doing of it.

MEMORIALS

The disciples do not linger on the Mount of Olives, nor do they build a shrine there, as some professed Christians are wont to do. In fact, there have even been holy men who erected monuments to the occasions of Divine deliverance and revelation.

JACOB. When Jacob “went out of Beersheba, and went toward Haran,” the Lord appeared to him in a dream, confirming the extension of the Abrahamic covenant through him. It so impressed the patriarch that he took the stone he had used for a pillow “and set it up for a pillar, and poured oil upon the top of it.” He called the name of the place Bethel, and made a monument of the stone. “And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee” (Gen 28:22).

MOSES. When Moses received the Law he made a holy monument to the occasion. “And Moses wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel. And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD” (Ex 24:4-5).

ISRAEL. When Israel crossed over in to Canaan, according to the word of the Lord through Moses, they assembled some very large stones, plastering them with plaster, and writing upon them all the words of the Law. They also build an altar there with untooled stones (Deut 27:1-6).

JOSHUA. When Israel went into the promised land, the Lord commanded Joshua to have a chosen man from each of the twelve tribes take a stone from the middle of the Jordan – where the priests feet stood as they crossed over. They then erected these stones as a sort of memorial to their crossing. When children of future generations inquired about these stones, the people would testify to the parting of the Jordan, and of their crossing over it into the promised land (Josh 4:1-9).

JOSHUA. After entering the promised land, Joshua gathered the people together in Shechem. There he made a covenant with them to do all the words of the Lord. To mark the occasion, Joshua wrote all of the words of the covenant in a book, took a great stone and set it up under an oak tree. That stone became a witness to the people (Josh 24:25-27).

SAMUEL. During the days of the Judges, when Israel had soundly defeated the Philistines, Samuel “took a stone, and set it between Mizpeh and Shen, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, Hitherto hath the LORD helped us” (1 Sam 7:12).

However, even though the occasion we are considering transcended all of those former occurrences, yet there was no monument or pillar erected on the Mount of Olives. The disciples left the Mount without establishing a visible memorial on it – something that was completely out of harmony with the conduct of many righteous people of the past. Why was this so?

The nature of the New Covenant does not allow for the accent of visible things. It is a covenant in which the heart and mind are the prominent part. While there is nothing inherently evil about memorials as established prior to Christ, they are of a lower order, necessitated because of the rarity of faith. In Christ there are two visible ordinances that are, in one sense of speaking, memorials. They differ, however, from the kind of memorials mentioned above. They are baptism and the Lord’s table. While both of them can be seen with the eye, their power is found in their spiritual nature.

Our Baptism

Baptism identifies a point in time when we came into Christ (Gal 3:27a), put on Christ (Gal 3:27b), our sins were washed away (Acts 22:16), we received the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38), realized the circumcision of Christ (Col 2:11-12), and were placed in the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:13). When we ponder our baptism with a mind that is “controlled by the Spirit” NIV (Rom 8:6), we realize that we became “dead to sin,” and therefore can “live no longer therein” (Rom 6:2-7). We also are brought to the conclusion that we are now “alive unto God” as well as “dead indeed unto sin,” and are therefore morally obligated to yield our “members as instruments of righteousness unto God” (Rom 6:8-13). Thus, our baptism does for us what stone monuments did for holy men of old, who lived in inferior times and under an inferior covenant. This difference, however, exists. Our baptism is not something we built, but something we “obeyed from the heart” (Rom 6:17).

The Lord’s Table

The nature of the New Covenant does not allow for the accent of visible things. It is a covenant in which the heart and mind are the prominent part. While there is nothing inherently evil about memorials as established prior to Christ, they are of a lower order, necessitated because of the rarity of faith.

Here is an ordinance in which our memories become intensely active. It is not the table itself that provokes the memory, but eating and drinking what has been spread upon it. “ Take, eat: this is My body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of . . . This cup is the new testament in My blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me” (1 Cor 11:24-25). There is a very real fellowship, or “communion” that takes place at this table – a “communion” in which we realize afresh our participation in the benefits that flow from the death of Christ. Therefore we read of “the communion of the blood of Christ” and “the communion of the body of Christ” (1 Cor 10:16). Additionally, at this memorial we openly proclaim our embrace of the death of Christ, and our anticipation of Him coming again: “For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come ” (1 Cor 11:26). The “table of the Lord,” therefore is to us what memorial pillars and stones were to the godly in past ages. Again, it is different in that it is not something we build or erect, but something we do with devout resolution and purpose.

Why Say These Things?

I have said these things because we are embarking upon the review of a book that details the activities of those living under a new and better covenant. There will be occasions when the apostles must confront the tendency to cling to the manners of the Old Covenant – something that is strictly forbidden under the better testament.

Even in the words we now will consider, there appears to be a marked separation from the old order. There is no request to build a tabernacle on the mountain, as when the disciples witnessed Moses and Elijah returning from the unseen world to speak with Jesus (Matt 17:4; Mk 9:5; Lk 9:33). None of those who were present gathered stones to erect a pillar, devoted to the remembrance of the marvelous ascension of Christ into heaven. No one considered erecting plastered stones in memory of Jesus lifting up His hands and blessing them there. Their hearts were already being reshaped, so that they thought differently about spiritual epochs.

THEY RETURNED TO JERUSALEM FROM THE MOUNT

“Then returned they unto Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet . . .” Other versions read, “Then they returned to Jerusalem from the hill called the Mount of Olives,” NASB “Then they returned to Jerusalem from the mount called Olivet,” NIV “Then they went back to Jerusalem from the mountain named Olivet,” BBE “And afterwards they returned to Jerusalem from the mount called the place of Olives,” MRD “So from the Mount of Olives, as it is called, they went back to Jerusalem,” NJB “The apostles were at the Mount of Olives when this happened,” NLT “Then the apostles went back to Jerusalem from Olive Mountain,” IE and “Then [the disciples] went back to Jerusalem from the hill called Olivet.” AMPLIFIED

They Returned

In his gospel, Luke tells us how the disciples returned: “ And it came to pass, while He blessed them, He was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. And they worshiped Him , and returned to Jerusalem with great joy” (Luke 24:51-52).

They Worshiped Him

Even though Jesus had ascended out of their sight, “they worshiped Him!” – even though they did not see Him. This was something they had never done before. Previously some of His disciples “worshiped Him” “when they SAW Him” (Matt 28:17). When the Lord calmed the storm following walking to the disciples on the water, the disciples “came and worshipped Him” (Matt 14:33). Now, however, they worship a Jesus they could not see. It was the beginning of a new epoch!

With Great Joy

On the eve of His betrayal, the disciples had sorrowed when He told them He was going away. “But now I go my way to Him that sent Me; and none of you asketh Me, Whither goest thou? But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart ” (John 16:5-6). He also told them, “ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy” (John 16:20). Now the very disciples who were sorrowful when informed their Lord was leaving them, are rejoicing even though He had, in fact, left them. A new era had begun!

In The Temple

In his gospel, Luke also say, “And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen” (Luke 24:53). We know this refers to the period prior to Pentecost, for Luke says his gospel covers activities through Christ’s ascension (Lk 1:1-2). This verse, therefore, refers to the ten days that followed Christ’s ascension, until the day of Pentecost.

What a change had been wrought in the disciples! Cleopas and his friend were in a state of despair after Christ’s death (Lk 24:17-24). On the day of the resurrection, the disciples were behind closed doors “for fear of the Jews” (John 20:19). But now that Jesus has ascended, visibly leaving their presence, they “stayed continually at the temple, praising God” NASB (Luke 24:53). Surely, a new day was beginning!

A SABBATH DAY’S JOURNEY

“ . . . which is from Jerusalem a sabbath day's journey.” Other versions read, “a Sabbath day's walk from the city,” NASB “which is near Jerusalem, a Sabbath day's journey away,” NIV “which was near to Jerusalem, and distant from it about seven furlongs,” MRD “a short distance away, no more than a Sabbath walk,” NJB “so they walked the half mile back to Jerusalem,” NLT “[This mountain is about three-quarters of a mile from Jerusalem,” IE and “which is near Jerusalem, [only] a Sabbath day’s journey (three-quarters of a mile) away.” AMPLIFIED

A Sabbath day’s journey was 2,000 cubits from one’s house or domicile, or 1000-1200 yards, or around 1/2 to 3/4 of a mile. The following is an explanation of “Sabbath day’s journey,” and of the manner in which it was determined. This was all the result of human interpretation, not Divine iteration.

EXPLANATION of SABBATH DAY’S JOURNEY

Used only in Acts 1:12, where it designates the distance from Jerusalem to the Mount of Olives, to which Jesus led His disciples on the day of His ascension. The expression comes from rabbinical usage to indicate the distance a Jew might travel on the Sabbath without transgressing the Law, the command against working on that day being interpreted as including travel (see Ex 16:27-30). The limit set by the rabbis to the Sabbath day's journey was 2,000 cubits from one's house or domicile, which was derived from the statement found in Josh 3:4 that this was the distance between the ark and the people on their march, this being assumed to be the distance between the tents of the people and the tabernacle during the sojourn in the wilderness. Hence, it must have been allowable to travel thus far to attend the worship of the tabernacle . We do not know when this assumption in regard to the Sabbath day's journey was made, but it seems to have been in force in the time of Christ. The distance of the Mount of Olives from Jerusalem is stated in Josephus (Ant., XX, viii, 6) to have been five stadia or furlongs and in BJ, V, ii, 3, six stadia, the discrepancy being explained by supposing a different point of departure. This would make the distance of it from 1,000 to 1,200 yards, the first agreeing very closely with the 2,000 cubits. The rabbis, however, invented a way of increasing this distance without technically infringing the Law, by depositing some food at the 2,000-cubit limit, before the Sabbath, and declaring that spot a temporary domicile . They might then proceed 2,000 cubits from this point without transgressing the Law.

And in some cases even this intricacy of preparation was unnecessary. If, for instance, the approach of the Sabbath found one on his journey, the traveler might select some tree or some stone wall at a distance of 2,000 paces and mentally declare this to be his residence for the Sabbath , in which case he was permitted to go the 2,000 paces to the selected tree or wall and also 2,000 paces beyond, but in such a case he must do the work thoroughly and must say: "Let my Sabbath residence be at the trunk of that tree," for if he merely said: "Let my Sabbath residence be under that tree," this would not be sufficient, because the expression would be too general and indefinite (Tractate `Erubhin 4:7).

OTHER SCHEMES for extending the distance have been devised, such as regarding the quarter of the town in which one dwells, or the whole town itself, as the domicile, thus allowing one to proceed from any part of the town to a point 2,000 cubits beyond its utmost limits. This was most probably the case with walled towns, at least, and boundary stones have been found in the vicinity of Gaza with inscriptions supposed to mark these limits. The 2,000-cubit limits around the Levitical cities (Num 35:5) may have suggested the limit of the Sabbath day's journey also. The term came to be used as a designation of distance which must have been more or less definite.

INTERNATIONAL STANDARD BIBLE ENCYCLOPEDIA

The graphic of "A Sabbath Day's Journey" illustrates the manner of calculation described in the above section ("Other Schemes)." The city, in this case, was viewed as a circle. An imaginary box was then drawn around the city. The distance of the "Sabbath Day's journey" was then calculated from the corner of the box Northward (a to f). It was not permitted to be calculated as an angle (a to e). The reason for this was that it made allowance for a slightly longer "journey" (b to f). This indicated that the real intent of the interpretation was not to strictly fulfill the Law. Rather the intention was to give as much allowance to the individual as was possible without actually breaking the Law. Note the assumptions of the makers of this tradition.

- That the prohibition of work on the Sabbath day included traveling.
- That the distance between the ark of the covenant and the people (when crossing Jordan into Canaan) was a standard distance.
- The distance of 2,000 cubits was assumed to be the distance between the tents of the people and the tabernacle around which they were pitched.

Religious men have this penchant for making applications, even if they have to force them into the revelation of God itself. Further, they have no compunctions at all about binding them upon men, even

The rabbi's increased the distance by placing some food at the 2,000-cubit limit, and declaring that a temporary domicile.

- If traveling, the individual could select a wall or a tree at a distance of about 2,000 paces, and declare that his domicile.
- An elaborate calculation was made by making the town an imaginary circle, then placing an imaginary square around it. The calculation was then made to give the greatest possible advantage to the individual.

AN EXCELLENT EXAMPLE OF THE TRADITIONS OF MEN

Here we have a most excellent example of the traditions of men, and the reason for their development. Men form their religious tradition by starting with something God said. Then they attempt to weave their own opinion together with that word, finally concluding with a tradition that, they say, is as binding as the Word of God itself.

The Initial Building Block

Here is the word the Lord with which the rabbis started. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the LORD made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the LORD blessed the sabbath day, and hallowed it” (Ex 20:8-11).

Notice, there is not a single word about travel. Yet, the human mind is most imaginative, and the heart of natural men is “deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked” (Jer 17:9). Religious men have this penchant for making applications, even if they have to force them into the revelation of God itself. Further, they have no compunctions at all about binding them upon men, even doing so in the name of the Lord.

Adding Another Building Block

The Jewish teachers took the Sabbath day instructions, and then merged them with instructions given for the gathering of manna during the forty-year wilderness wandering. “And it came to pass, that there went out some of the people on the seventh day for to gather, and they found none. And the LORD said unto Moses, How long refuse ye to keep my commandments and my laws? See, for that the LORD hath given you the sabbath, therefore he giveth you on the sixth day the bread of two days; abide ye every man in his place, let no man go out of his place on the seventh day. So the people rested on the seventh day” (Ex 16:27-). Now, they conclude that even though the Israelites were commanded to stay in their tents on the Sabbath day (in regard to gathering manna), the fact that they did, in fact, leave their tents, indicated that travel was allowed within the perimeter of the camp. They had abused this allowance by looking for manna, but the travel itself was allowed.

Adding Another Building Block

Now, the Rabbis must come up with a legitimate traveling distance. It must be as lenient as possible, giving every advantage to themselves. Therefore, they take a text from the book of Joshua that had to do with traveling. When Israel crossed Jordan, a certain distance had to remain between the people and the ark of the covenant, that was being carried by the priests. “Yet there shall be a space between you and it, about two thousand cubits by measure: come not near unto it, that ye may know the way by which ye must go: for ye have not passed this way heretofore” (Josh 3:4). That seemed like a comfortable distance – one with which they could live. Therefore 2,000 cubits was set as the distance of legitimate travel on the Sabbath day.

Adding An Assumption

Working with these three building blocks, some human assumption was also required. The first assumption was that the Sabbath day commandment was, in fact, addressing the matter of travel.

Adding Another Assumption

To this, another assumption was added – namely that the distance between the people and the ark of the covenant was also the distance established between the encampment of the Israelites and the tabernacle, which was in the center of the camp.

Adding Another Assumption

Yet another assumption is made, namely that the rules were more lenient for someone who was traveling on the Sabbath day. They were thus allowed to establish a temporary place of residence, and do their calculations from that point.

Adding Another Assumption

The additional assumption that men were free to create the most favorable scenario with their own calculations was also added. They could assume the city was a circle, assume it was proper to have an imaginary square around it, and assume that through mathematics they could produce a rule that favored men the most.

Thus we see what fleshly cunning is employed in the development of “the traditions of men.” Jesus said that men must “lay aside the commandment of God” in order to “hold the tradition of men” (Mk 7:8). He also told scribes and Pharisees that they “transgressed the commandment of God BY” their tradition (Matt 15:3), and “made the commandment of God of none effect” by it (Matt 15:6). With even more strength He affirmed, “Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition” (Mark 7:9).

Paul warned the church that the “tradition of men” has a spoiling effect upon believers. That is, they “cheat” NKJV them, by taking from them things essential for life and godliness. They take man “captive,” relying upon the “philosophy and empty deception” of men NIV (Col 2:8). It is particularly important that professing “Christians” give heed to these words. We are living in a period when there is an astounding dominance of religious tradition, making it a most dangerous time.

During the days of Jehoiada, the priest, he established “keepers of the watch” to guard the king’s house and the house of the Lord (2 Kgs 11:7-9). They were to “go forth on the Sabbath,” but not a word was said about any distance they traveled, or considerations that were to be given at that time.

During the time of Nehemiah, there were certain merchants who came into the city “to sell.” Even though the people were mingling about in the city on the Sabbath, Nehemiah determined they would not buy anything from these greedy merchants on that day. There was not, however, any mention of how far the people could walk on the Sabbath (Neh 10:31). Again, when Nehemiah saw the people treading wine presses on the Sabbath, and bringing in sheaves and “loading them on donkeys,” he “testified against them.” No mention was made of the distances they traveled, but only to the work that they did – work that was expressly forbidden for both man and beast on the Sabbath day.

Jeremiah forbade the people to bear a burden or do any manner of work on the Sabbath, but said nothing about how far they could travel (Jer 17:21-22,27).

Why Is A Sabbath’s Day Journey Mentioned Here?

This is the only reference to “a Sabbath day’s journey” in all of Scripture. There is not the slightest hint of it anywhere else. Not a syllable is mentioned in the Law or the Prophets concerning an appropriate distance to travel on the Sabbath day. Why is it mentioned here?

In mentioning this fact – that the Mount of Olives was a Sabbath’s journey from Jerusalem – Luke is not condoning the tradition. This was rather a means of declaring to Theophilus the distance the disciples traveled back to Jerusalem. They did not return on the Sabbath day, so the statement has no relevance from the standpoint of Law.

Jesus made various appearances to His disciples for forty days following His resurrection. He rose from the dead on the first day of the week (Sunday). The day of Pentecost, fifty days after the Passover, would occur on the first day of the week. Ten days prior would be on a Friday. This reference, then, is nothing more than a means of measurement. It also suggests that, should the scribes and Pharisees be privy to their trip, they could find no fault with them, even if they used their tradition to judge them.

INTO AN

“ 13a And when they were come in, they went up into an upper room . . . ” Other versions read, “And when they had entered, they went up into the upper room,” NKJV “When they arrived, they went upstairs to the room ,” NASB “When they had entered the city, they went to the room upstairs ,” NRSV “And when they were come in, they went up into the upper chamber,” ASV “And when they came in, they went up into the room ,” BBE “And when they were come in, they went up into a parlor ,” PNT “The apostles entered the city. They went to the place ,” IE “And when they had entered [the city], they mounted [the stairs] to the upper room,” AMPLIFIED and “On entering Jerusalem they went straight to the upstairs room .” PHILLIPS

WHEN THEY WERE COME IN

It is important to be where the Lord has directed you to be if you are to receive His blessing, or be favorably used in His purpose.

“ And when they were come in ...” That is, the disciples came into the city of Jerusalem, to which they had returned. Jesus had expressly told them, “but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem , until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:49). They were not to tarry in Capernaum, where Jesus had moved from Nazareth (Matt 4:13). They were not to dwell in one of the cities “wherein most of His mighty works were done” – namely Chorasin or Bethsaida (Matt 11:20-21). Philip, Andrew, and Peter were also from the city of Bethsaida. Surely that would be a good place to “wait.” Perhaps some might think it would be more appropriate to wait in Bethlehem, where Jesus was born (Matt 2:1), or Nazareth, where He was raised (Lk 4:16). Some might have thought it would have been appropriate to wait on the sea shore, from which several of them had been called (Matt 4:19-22).

Of old time God Himself had said Jerusalem was the city He had “chosen” (1 Kgs 11:13). He chose the city out of all of the tribes of Israel “to put His name there” (1 Kgs 14:21). “And unto his son will I give one tribe, that David My servant may have a light alway before Me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen me to put my name there ” (1 Kgs 11:36; 2 Kgs 21:4). He even said of this city, “will I put My name for ever” (2 Kgs 21:7). Through the Psalmist God revealed that His praise would be “in Jerusalem” (Psa 102:21).

The Lord spoke of a time when Jerusalem would be called “the throne of the Lord” (Jer 3:17). It would even be called “The Lord our righteousness” (Jer 33:16). Joel prophesied of the city, “and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance” (Joel 2:32). Jesus told His disciples that the Gospel “should be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47).

It was therefore not only appropriate, but mandatory, that Christ’s disciples return to Jerusalem to “wait for the promise of the Father.” This was a matter in which convenience or human assessment had no part. The disciples may cast their lots for a the replacement of Judas’ “bishopric,” but they will not cast them for the place where they will “wait,” or “tarry.”

A Principle to be Seen

There is something to be seen here. It is important to be where the Lord has directed you to be if you are to receive His blessing, or be favorably used in His purpose. The “promise of the Father” would not seek out where the disciples themselves had chosen to wait. The Holy Spirit would not “come upon” them while they remained in a convenient place, or one they thought more suited to the occasion. They HAD to be in Jerusalem. If they were not there, they would not be endued “with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). A choice to be somewhere else was also a choice to be excluded from the promise.

All of this seems quite apparent to even the casual student. Yet, we must be able to “handle the Word of God aright” (2 Tim 2:15), beholding the manner of the King and His kingdom.

Ponder the Lord's insistence that His disciples be WHERE He says, and associate it with what He has said to us concerning the place we occupy.

- “ Abide in Me , and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in Me” (John 15:4).
- “ Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers : for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?” (2 Cor 6:14).
- “And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not ” (Gal 6:9).
- “Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is ” (Eph 5:17).
- “In the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unproveable in his sight: If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel . . . ” (Col 1:22-23).
- “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation ; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him” (Heb 2:3).
- “But Christ as a son over His own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end ” (Heb 3:6).
- “For we are made partakers of Christ, if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end ” (Heb 3:14).

What of those who have not taken such admonitions seriously. Will a person who does not “abide” in Christ receive the benefits promised to those who do abide? Can a person be unequally yoked together with unbelievers and be received by the Lord just as though that was not the case? Can a professing believer quit, fainting in the way, and still reap benefits along with those who did not faint? Is it really possible to be spiritually ignorant, not understanding the will of the Lord, and yet taste of all the good things promised to those who are not ignorant and do understand His will? Can a person really fail to continue in the faith, remaining ungrounded and unsettled, and still be presented unblameable and unproveable in His sight? Is it remotely possible to neglect God's great salvation and still, in the end, dwell forever with the Lord? If men do not firmly hold the confidence and rejoicing of hope firm to the end, will they still remain in Christ's household? Can a person partake of Christ, gloriously benefitting from His great work of salvation, and not hold the beginning of the confidence steadfast unto the end?

Notwithstanding this rather elementary observation, there are still professing believers who want their prayers answered even though they are not where Jesus said they should remain. They are waffling back and forth, flirting with the ways of the world, and still expecting the Lord to love, care for, and bless them.

Such things are not any more likely than the disciples being endued with power from on high while they waited in Jericho. One might just as well expect the Spirit to come on the disciples while they waited in Chorasin, than the above things could take place. The empowerment and blessing of the disciples was contingent upon them being where Jesus told them to be.

If they would have been out of town when the day of Pentecost had fully come, you may rest assured the Holy Spirit would not have chased them down and blessed them anyway. Notwithstanding this rather elementary observation, there are still professing believers who want their prayers answered even though they are not where Jesus said they should remain. They are waffling back and forth, flirting with the ways of the world, and still expecting the Lord to love, care for, and bless them. Such ways of thinking are only imaginations. There is not so much as a speck of truth in them!

THE UPPER ROOM

“ . . . they went up into an upper room .” Jesus did not tell them to tarry “together.” Yet, the disciples knew this was what He meant. There are visitations, such as that which occurred on the day of Pentecost, which is not intended to be experienced one at a time. There are certain Divine activities that require the saints to be, and work, together.

In all probability, this was the “upper room” in which Jesus had spent His last evening with His disciples. That room was located in Jerusalem – “the city” – and was most memorable. When Jesus instructed His disciples to prepare the Passover for Himself and them, He said, “And he will show you a large upper room furnished and prepared: there make ready for us” (Mark 14:15; Lk 22:12). The word “large” comes from the Greek word me,ga (mega), which has this lexical meaning: “superlative, great,” THAYER “large, spacious, wide, long, extraordinary, great,” FRIBERG “large, greatest,” UBS “big, great, extensive,” LOUW-NADA and “spacious, wide, more than enough.” LIDDLE-SCOTT

The room, then, was of sufficient size to accommodate the people who resided there, as well as all of those who joined them. It was also “furnished,” with all that was required for their stay. It qualified as a residence by being in Jerusalem, and there were memories associated with it that would be great benefit to them. For them, waiting was not a time of leisure, but of great expectation – an expectation that required great attentiveness.

THE ELEVEN

“ 13b . . . where abode both Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, Philip, and Thomas, Bartholomew, and Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.”

Here is an example of giving “honor” to those to whom is it due (Rom 13:7). Because they were especially chosen and ordained to be with Jesus and to preach, Luke takes the time to mention “the eleven,” and that the residence where the brethren were gathered was where they were staying, or dwelling.

WHERE ABODE

“ . . . where abode . . .” Other versions read, “where they were staying ,” NKJV “they were abiding ,” ASV “where they were living ,” BBE “which was now their fixed place of meeting ,” WEYMOUTH “where they were accustomed to meet ,” MONTGOMERY and “where they were [indefinitely] staying .” AMPLIFIED

This “upper room” had become the residence of the disciples. Evidently this was so following that dreadful evening when the Lord was betrayed, followed by His vicarious death. This is evidently where Cleopas and his companion had testified to the disciples following His revelation to them. “ And they rose up the same hour, and returned to Jerusalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them ” (Luke 24:33). This was also the place where Jesus first appeared to His disciples on the same day He had risen from the dead. “Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews , came Jesus and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you” (John 20:19).

THE APOSTLES

Prior to the betrayal and death of Jesus, the Apostles were referred to as “the twelve apostles” (Matt 10:2; Lk 22:14), “the twelve disciples” (Matt 10:1; 11:1; 20:17; Lk 9:1), and “the twelve” (Matt 26:14,20,47; Mk 4:10; 6:7; 9:35; 10:32; 11:11; 14:10,17,20,43, etc).

Following Christ’s death, and prior to the disciples “waiting” in Jerusalem, the apostles were referred to as “the eleven disciples” (Matt 28:16), and “the eleven” (Mk 16:14; Lk 24:9,33; Acts 1:26).

Following the filling of Judas’ vacated position, and before Saul was converted, they are again referred to as “the twelve” (Acts 6:2), and “the twelve apostles” (Rev 21:14,21).

It is important to note these things because the first chapter will explain the necessity for replacing the position vacated by Judas.

PETER

“Peter.” Peter and his brother Andrew were the first ones called to be Apostles (Matt 4:18-20). He was a fisherman by trade (Matt 4:18), and was from the city of Bethsaida (John 1:44). He eventually settled in Capernaum, which was the place Jesus also lived after beginning His ministry (Lk 4:31-38). He was a married man, whose mother-in-law was healed by Jesus during His prodigious ministry (Matt 8:14-15). He was one of the three disciples who were with Jesus when:

- He healed Jairus’ daughter (Mk 5:37-43).
- Jesus was transfigured (Matt 17:1-4).
- Jesus prayed in Gethsemane on the night of His betrayal (Matt 26:36-46).

Peter was one of the four who were privileged to hear the Olivet discourse on the destruction of Jerusalem, the end of the world, and Christ’s second coming (Matt 24:3; Mk 13:3-4).

It was Peter who asked Jesus to explain the following.

- The parable of the steward (Lk 12:41).
- The law of forgiveness (Matt 18:21).
- The law of defilement (Matt 15:15).

Peter is the one who blurted out on the mount of transfiguration, “Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias” (Matt 17:4). He is the only person in the history of the world, other than Jesus, who walked on water (Matt 14:29).

His natural name was “Simon,” meaning “a hearing,” and his father’s name was Jonah. Hence, Peter was called “Simon Barjona,” Barjona meaning “son of Jonah.” Jesus changed his name to Cephas, which means “A stone.” When Andrew, his brother, brought Peter to Jesus, it is written, “And when Jesus beheld him, He said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona: thou shalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, A stone” (John 1:42). “Cephas” is Aramaic, and has the same meaning as “Peter” (a stone) .

There are 158 references to “Peter” in the Scriptures, 6 references to “Cephas,” 18 references to “Simon Peter,” 1 reference to “Simon Barjona,” and 14 references to “Simon.” That is nearly 200 references to this key man.

According to Scripture, Peter is the only man prior to Pentecost to whom God revealed most fully the Person of Christ: “And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God” (Matt 16:16-17; Mk 8:29; Lk 9:20). When Jesus rose from the dead, an angel appeared to some women who came to the tomb, telling them “But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see Him, as he said unto you” (Mark 16:7). Following His resurrection, the Lord Jesus made a special appearance to Peter (Lk 24:34; 1 Cor 15:5).

He is the first man to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, as he himself confessed: “Men and brethren, ye know how that a good while ago God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe” (Acts 15:7; 10:5-48).

Peter was one of the “pillars” of the church in Jerusalem (Gal 2:9). Three years after Paul was converted, he went up to Jerusalem and spent fifteen days with Peter (Gal 1:18). The thrust of Peter’s ministry was “unto the circumcision,” or the Jews – even though through him God first granted the Gentiles “repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).

When Jesus sent someone to prepare the last Passover, to be spent alone with His disciples, He sent Peter and John (Lk 22:8). He is the one who called the attention to the rapid withering of the cursed fig tree (Mk 11:21). Peter is the one who attacked the legion of soldiers arresting Jesus, cutting of the right ear of Malchus, a servant of the high priest (Matt 26:51; Mk 14:47; Lk 22:50; John 18:10).

Peter is the one Satan “desired,” to sift as wheat. The severity of the sifting is confirmed by Peter’s denial of Jesus three times in the same night (Luke 22:31-32,55-61). Peter was the first apostle to see the empty tomb (Lk 24:12; John 20:2-6).

Peter is mentioned 77 times from Acts through Second Peter (“Peter” – 64 times; “Cephas” – 5 times; “Simon” – 8 times).

According to history, Peter preached in Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia, Asia, Babylon, and Rome. Historian Hegesippus (110-180 A.D.) says that “Nero sought matter against Peter to put him to death; which, when the people perceived, they entreated Peter with much ado that he would fly the city. Peter, through their importunity at length persuaded, prepared himself to avoid. But, coming to the gate, he saw the Lord Christ come to meet him, to whom he, worshiping, said, "Lord, whither dost Thou go?" To whom He answered and said, "I am come again to be crucified." By this, Peter, perceiving his suffering to be understood, returned into the city. Jerome saith that he was crucified, his head being down and his feet upward, himself so requiring, because he was (he said) unworthy to be crucified after the same form and manner as the Lord was.”

When Jesus sent someone to prepare the last Passover, to be spent alone with His disciples, He sent Peter and John. He is the one who called the attention to the rapid withering of the cursed fig tree. Peter is the one who attacked the legion of soldiers arresting Jesus, cutting of the right ear of Malchus, a servant of the high priest

The following is also of interest. “According to church tradition, the Roman Emperor Nero, publicly announcing himself the chief enemy of God, was led in his fury to slaughter the Apostles. Because of the persecution, Peter was crucified upside down while in Rome. Concerning the last hours of his life, it is said that when Peter saw his own wife led out to die, he rejoiced because of her summons and her return home, and called to her very encouragingly and comfortingly addressing her by name, and saying, "O thou, remember the Lord." Of the final days of the apostle Peter in Rome, Jowett wrote that Peter was cast into a horrible prison called the Mamertine and for nine months, in absolute darkness, he endured monstrous torture manacled to a post. Mamertine (also known as Gemonium) could be seen with the dungeon and pillar to which Peter was bound in chains. During Peter's entire incarceration, Peter was manacled in an upright position, chained to the column, unable to lay down to rest, yet ,his magnificent spirit remained undaunted. In spite of all the suffering Peter was subjected to, he converted his jailers, Processus, Martinianus, and forty-seven others. Peter met his death at the hand of the Romans by crucifying him in an upside-down position in Nero's circus 67AD. The Search For The Twelve Apostles, William McBirnie, PH.D

Peter wrote the books of First and Second Peter. It is generally understood that he dictated the Gospel written by Mark.

JAMES

“James.” “James” is the Graecized form of “Jacob,” which means “supplanter.” He was the brother of John the beloved, who were the “sons of Zebedee” (Lk 5:10). Jesus called them both immediately after calling Simon Peter and his brother Andrew (Matt 4:21-22). James was also among the favored three, who enjoyed benefits that were not vouchsafed to the other apostles (Matt 17:1; Mk 5:37; 14:33). He was also with Peter, John, and Andrew as they listened in private to our Lord’s discourse on the fall of Jerusalem, the end of the world, and His coming (Mk 13:3).

James, the brother of John and an apostle of Christ, is mentioned two times in the book of Acts, and never again after he was martyred (Acts 1:13; 12:2).

James was the first apostle to be martyred, being slain with the sword by Herod, in a wicked initiative against “certain of the church” (Acts 12:1). “Clement of Alexandria, in a fragment preserved by Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. 1, 9), reports that the officer who conducted James to the tribunal was so influenced by the bold declaration of his faith as to embrace the Gospel and avow himself also a Christian; in consequence of which, he was beheaded at the same time.”

McCLINTOK and STRONG

JOHN

“John.” The younger brother of “James,” whose name generally precedes that of John (ex: Matt 4:21; 10:3; 17:1). Prior to their call by Jesus, James and John were formerly business partners with Simon and Andrew in the fishing trade (Lk 5:10). “John” is known as the disciple that Jesus loved, confirming that he was especially close to the Lord (John 19:26; 20:2; 21:7,20). At the Last Supper, John reclined on Jesus “bosom,” or chest. When Jesus told His disciples that one sitting at the table would betray Him, it finally resulted in Peter asking John to ask Jesus “who it should be of whom He spake.” Jesus answered it was the one for whom he would dip a morsel and give it to him. No one at the table caught the significance of what Jesus said and did (John 13:23-29).

The Gospels give us the name of John’s mother – “Salome” (compare Matthew 27:56 with Mark 15:40; 16:1).

On the night that Jesus was betrayed, both Peter and John followed the group and Jesus to the place of the high priest. We are told that the high priest personally knew John, who went into the palace of the high priest: “And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple: that disciple was known unto the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the palace of the high priest” (John 18:15). Even though John went into the palace, Peter remained on the outside. John then spoke to the woman who was keeping the door, and she let Peter in. “But Peter stood at the door without. Then went out that other disciple, which was known unto the high priest, and spake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter” (John 18:16).

John stood at the foot of the cross when Jesus was crucified, together with Jesus’ mother, her sister, the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. It was at that time that Jesus committed the care of his mother to John, who took her into his house “from that hour” (John 19:25-27).

History records that Andrew preached the gospel to many Asiatic nations; but on his arrival at Edessa he was taken and crucified on a cross, the two ends of which were fixed transversely in the ground. Hence the derivation of the term, St. Andrew's Cross. Andrew labored in Sythia, North of the Red Sea – Russia.

When a report was brought to the disciples that Jesus had risen from the dead, Peter and John ran to the tomb, with John outrunning Peter. He looked into the tomb, and saw the “linen clothes” of Jesus lying there – yet he did not go in until after Peter had arrived and entered the sepulcher. Then John entered the tomb, “and he saw, and believed.” Later, when Jesus appeared to several of the disciples, John again was the first to recognize Him, saying, “It is the Lord” (John 20:3-8).

Church history tells us that an attempt to kill John took place during the persecution of Domitian. “In the persecution under Domitian he is taken to Rome, and there, by his boldness, though not by death, gains the crown of martyrdom. The boiling oil into which he is thrown has no power to hurt him (Tertull. De Proscript. c. 36). The scene of the supposed miracle was outside the Porta Latina, and hence the Western Church commemorates it by the special festival of “St. John Port. Latin.” on May 6th. He is then sent to labor in the mines, and Patmos is the place of his exile (Victorinus, In Apoc. 9; Lampe, 1, 66).”

John wrote the Gospel of John, First, Second, and third John, and the book of the Revelation. The churches of Smyrna, Pergamos, Sardis, Philadelphia, Laodicea, and Thyatira, were founded by him, and he was best noted for his labors in Asia Minor (Western Asia).

John is mentioned 26 times in Acts through Revelation.

ANDREW

“Andrew.” Was the brother of Peter, and they were both called together to be followers of Jesus (Matt 4:18). He is the only other disciple that was with Peter, James, and John, when Jesus delivered the Olivet discourse (Mk 13:3). He was originally a disciple of John the Baptist. When he heard John say, “Behold the Lamb of God,” he, with another of John’s disciples, “followed Jesus” (John 1:36-40). He and Peter were from the city of Bethsaida (John 1:44).

Andrew is the disciple who, when Jesus was about to feed 5,000 men, said to the Lord, “There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?” (John 6:9). When some Greeks came to Philip, saying that they wanted to “see Jesus,” Philip told Andrew, and together they went and told Jesus (John 12:21-22).

History records that Andrew preached the gospel to many Asiatic nations; but on his arrival at Edessa he was taken and crucified on a cross, the two ends of which were fixed transversely in the ground. Hence the derivation of the term, St. Andrew's Cross. Andrew labored in Sythia, North of the Red Sea – Russia. He is not mentioned in Scriptures after Acts 1:13.

PHILIP

“Philip.” Philip the apostle is distinguished from Philip, one of the first deacons, who later became an “evangelist” – (Acts 6:5; 8:5,6,12,13,26, 29,30,31,34,,35,37,38,39,40; 21:8). He was from Bethsaida, and among the first disciples that Jesus called (John 1:43-44). He is the one who called Nathanael, alerting him to the fact that they had found the Messiah (actually, Jesus found them (John 1:45-51).

When Jesus was about to feed the five thousand, He asked Philip, “Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?” (John 6:5). Philip answered, “Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little” (John 6:7).

Certain Greeks came to Philip saying, “Sir, we would see Jesus.” He went and told Andrew, and together they told Jesus of the Grecian inquiry (John 12:21-22).

During the Last Supper, Philip is the one who said, “Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us” (John 14:8). Jesus answered Him with a remarkably extensive reply, beginning with, “ Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father; and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?” (John 14:9-21).

Philip born at Bethsaida, in Galilee and was first called by the name of "disciple." He labored diligently in Upper Asia, and suffered martyrdom at Heliopolis, in Phrygia. He was scourged, thrown into prison, and afterwards crucified, A.D. 54. Philip also preached in Syria. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

THOMAS

“Thomas.” The name Thomas means “twin.” Therefore, he was also called “Didymus,” which is the Aramaic word for “twin” (John 11:16; 20:24; 21:2).

When Jesus went to raise Lazarus from the dead, Thomas is the one who said, “Let us also go, that we may die with him” (John 11:16). At the Last Supper, when Jesus said He was going away, Thomas is the one who said, “Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?” (John 14:5).

Following His resurrection, when our Lord first appeared to His disciples, it is written, “But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came” (John 20:24). When told about the Lord’s appearing, he responded, “Except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe” (John 20:25). Eight days later, when Jesus appeared to the disciples again, Thomas was with them. When Jesus challenged him to put forth his finger and behold His hands, also thrusting his hand into His side, Thomas replied, “My Lord and my God.” Jesus then told him that the blessing belonged to those who did not see, yet believed – something that none of the other disciples had done (John 20:26-29).

Thomas was with the seven disciples who went fishing, only to again confront the living Christ (John 21:2-12).

Thomas preached the Gospel in Parthia and India, where exciting the rage of the pagan priests, he was martyred by being thrust through with a spear. Thomas also preached in Persia and the East Indies. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

BARTHOLOMEW

Luke informs us that Matthew made Jesus “a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them.” In his Gospel, Matthew does not say it was his house, but in humility simply refers to Jesus being in the house, declaring that His disciples were also with Him.

“Bartholomew.” This apostle is only mentioned four times in the entire Bible – all of them listings of the apostles (Matt 10:3; Mk 3:18; Lk 6:14; Acts 1:13). Some are of the opinion that references to “Nathanael” (John 1:45-49; 21:2), actually refer to Bartholomew by a different name. The Gospel of John is the only book that contains the name “Nathanael.”

History records that Bartholomew preached in several countries, and having translated the Gospel of Matthew into the language of India, he propagated it in that country. He was at length cruelly beaten and then crucified by the impatient and aggressive idolaters Bartholomew also preached in Armenia. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

MATTHEW

“Matthew.” “Matthew” is mentioned five times in Scripture – four of them are in apostolic listings (Matt 10:3; Mark 3:18; Luke 6:15; Acts 1:3). He is also referred to as “Matthew the publican” (Matt 10:3), “Levi the son of Alphaeus” (Mk 2:14), “ a publican, named Levi” (Lk 5:27) His name means “Gift of Jehovah.”

Matthew was called to the apostleship while he was on the job, “sitting at the receipt of customs,” or “at the tax collector’s booth” NASB (Matt 9:9; Lk 5:27). When Jesus saw him sitting there, He “said unto him, Follow ME.” The Scriptures emphasize his immediate and thorough response. “And he left all, rose up, and followed Him” (Luke 5:28), and “he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him” (Matt 9:9).

Luke informs us that Matthew made Jesus “a great feast in his own house: and there was a great company of publicans and of others that sat down with them” (Luke 5:29). In his Gospel, Matthew does not say it was his house, but in humility simply refers to Jesus being in the house, declaring that His disciples were also with Him. “And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Him and His disciples” (Matt 9:10). This is the place where Jesus was criticized by the bigoted scribes and Pharisees, who said to His disciples, “Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?” (Matt 9:11; Lk 5:30). Jesus soundly rebuked His critics by saying, “They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick” (Luke 5:31).

It is thought that Matthew wrote his gospel in Hebrew, which was afterwards translated into Greek by James the Less. The scene of his labors was Parthia, and Ethiopia, in which latter country he suffered martyrdom, being slain with a halberd (a battle ax with a handle of approximately six feet in length) in the city of Nadabah, A.D. 60. Matthew also preached in Macedonia, Syria, Persia, and Media. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

JAMES THE SON OF ALPHAEUS

“James the son of Alphaeus.” Other versions read, “James of Alphaeus.” DOUAY

“James the son of Alphaeus” is mentioned four times in Scripture – all in apostolic listings (Matt 10:3; Mk 3:18; Lk 6:15; Acts 1:13). His mother was named “Mary,” as indicated by Mark, who refers to this James as “James the less” (Mk 15:40; Matt 27:56; Mk 16:1; Lk 24:10).

At the age of ninety-four he was beaten and stoned by the Jews; and finally had his brains dashed out with a fuller's club.

SIMON ZELOTES

“Simon Zelotes.” Other versions read, “Simon the Zealot,” NKJV “Simon [known as the Revolutionary],” IE and “Simon the Patriot.” PHILLIPS

This apostle is also referred to as “Simon the Canaanite” (Matt 10:4; Mk 3:18), and “Simon called Zelotes” (Lk 6:15). The word “Zelotes” is a political term meaning “Zealot” – a “member of the party of Zealots.” ROBERTSON Within the context of Roman dominance and citizenry, this party was particularly zealous for the Mosaic law and institutions. This type of zeal is mentioned in the book of Acts where James and the elders told Paul, “Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the law” (Acts 21:20). This extreme nationalist party was founded about A.D. 7 by Judas of Gamala, a city that appears to have lain near the east coast of the sea of Galilee (vide Schurer, 1. 2:225). PULPIT COMMENTARY

As to the designation “Simon the Canaanite,” this does not refer to the condemned nation of the Canaanites, but is a translation of the Aramic equivalent of “Zealot.” It is appropriate here because the zeal for the Law was not being exhibited in foreign countries (where there were many “devout” Jews – Acts 2:5). The word is used here in a political or nationalistic way rather than in comparison with the Jews, who were given that land.

History says that Simon the Zealot preached the Gospel in Mauritania, Africa, and even in Britain, in which latter country he was crucified, A.D. 74. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

JUDAS THE BROTHER OF JAMES

“Judas the brother of James.” Other versions read, “Judas the son of James,” NKJV/NASB/NIV/NRSV “Judas James brother,” GENEVA “Judas James son,” TNT and “Judas, of James.” YLT

“Judas” is the Graecized form of the Hebrew “Judah,” and means “he shall be praised.” Matthew refers to this apostle as “Lebbaeus, whose surname was Thaddaeus” (Matt 10:3). Mark refers to him as “Thaddaeus” (Mk 3:18).

This man is mentioned five times in Scripture: “Lebbaeus, whose surname was Thaddaeus” (Matt 10:3), “Thaddaeus” (Mk 3:18), and “Judas the brother of James” (Lk 6:16; Acts 1:13). The fifth mentioning records a question he asked Jesus on the night of His betrayal. “Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world? (John 14:22).

Judas, brother of James, was crucified at Edessa, A.D. 72. He also preached in Egypt. There is no mention of him after Acts 1:13.

There are the original twelve apostles, minus Judas, who “fell by transgression” – especially chosen and empowered men: chosen to be with Jesus, and empowered to preach (Mark 3:14). Among them were four fishermen (Peter, Andrew, James, and John), a political zealot (Simon), and a tax collector (Matthew). There are two sets of brothers (Peter and Andrew, and James and John), and one twin (Thomas). Some were known as “the son of” (James and John the sons of Zebedee, and James the son of Alphaeus, Simon the son of Jonas), and some as “the brother of” (John the brother of James, and Judas the brother of James).

As you can see, these men had no worldly prominence. They did not come from a highly revered culture, and did not have impressive qualifications. The work to which Jesus called them did not require such distinctions. They would be given a message from another world. They would receive a Spirit the world could not receive, and would call upon people to save themselves from the very generation in which they resided.

The book of Acts will reflect these circumstances. It will unfold the kind of work for which Jesus empowers men. It will establish heavenly priorities among men. What these men will declare and promote will not be impressive to worldly minded people. It will tend to aggravate those with a stereotyped religion, and will be challenging, calling men away from spiritual mediocrity and disinterest in the world to come. These men will think differently. They have been cultured by Jesus, and will be empowered by the Holy Spirit to do so. Their perception of Scripture will not be that of the religious professionals.

It will become increasingly apparent to your heart and mind that contemporary Christianity does not have the faintest resemblance to the book of “the Acts.” This is a book of Divine revelation, working, and empowerment. Heaven is involved in what is being done: God the Father, Christ Jesus the Son, the Holy Spirit, and holy angels. Those who are used by the Lord will not see their circumstances as other men. They will not adopt the assessments of the religious professionals, politicians, philosophers, or business world. They will not see “issues” as the people of the world see them. Their objectives will have no similarity to those of this world. They will not ask the questions the world asks. The things that confound the world will not confound them.

As you are exposed to them in action, you will behold a spiritual composure in them the world cannot emulate. Men cannot be trained to react as they did. When they are being threatened, they do not react as other men. They will not make plans as other men. They will not speak as other men. They will not comport themselves among their enemies as other men.

Make no mistake about this, in the book of Acts we are being exposed to real believers, real preachers, and real teachers. This is the way God really works. The fact that they do not fit the fanciful molds that men have created only confirms the falsity and pretension of much that is around us. Take note of what these people do. Seriously consider how they speak, react, assess, and purpose. You will be exposed to people that have been “joined to the Lord.”

THE “WAITING” BEGINS

“ 14a These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication. . .”

Before He was taken up into heaven, ascending on high, Jesus told His disciples what they were to do.

- “ Wait for the promise of the Father, which . . . ye have heard of Me“ (Acts 1:4).
- “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:49).

What does it mean to “wait?” There are a number of promises given to those who do “wait” on the Lord.

- “ Wait on the LORD: be of good courage, and He shall strengthen thine heart : wait , I say, on the LORD” (Psa 27:14).

- “Rest in the LORD, and wait patiently for Him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass. Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil. For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the LORD, they shall inherit the earth” (Psa 37:7-9).

- “Therefore turn thou to thy God: keep mercy and judgment, and wait on thy God continually ” (Hosea 12:6).

- “To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David. I waited patiently for the LORD; and He inclined unto me, and heard my cry ” (Psa 40:1).

- “The LORD is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him” (Lam 3:25).

- “But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength ; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary ; and they shall walk, and not faint ” (Isa 40:31).

- “Say not thou, I will recompense evil; but wait on the LORD, and He shall save thee” (Prov 20:22).

- “And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for Him, and He will save us : this is the LORD; we have waited for Him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation ” (Isa 25:9).

- “For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, beside thee, what He hath prepared for him that waiteth for him” (Isa 64:4).

It is apparent that “waiting” is something critical in spiritual life. But what does it mean to “wait.” Some might be tempted to think that “waiting” is equivalent to idleness – or simply doing nothing. We will see from our text that the disciples certainly were not idle. In fact, they were quite active. Some of the things they were doing include the following.

- The “waiting” ones were continually in the Temple (Lk 24:53a).
- Were continually praising and blessing God (Lk 24:53b).
- Continued in one accord in prayer and supplication (Acts 1:14).
- Took Divinely sanctioned measures to replace the office vacated by Judas (Acts 1:15-26).
- When the day of Pentecost arrived ten days later, they were all together with one accord and in one place (Acts 2:1).

A SPIRITUAL POSTURE. Waiting upon the Lord is a spiritual posture – a stance, if you please, that is driven by the persuasion of the truth of a specific word from God. It does not shut down all human activity, but rather marshals all of one’s ransomed powers, focusing them upon matters having to do with a Divine commitment – a promise. In this case, the promise was “Ye shall receive power . . . and ye shall be witnesses unto Me” (Acts 1:8). The soul for which this blessing is targeted cannot be distracted, or caught up with the cares of this world. The spiritual senses and cognitive powers must be gathered together for one grand purpose. David described this posture when He pled, “Teach me thy way, O LORD; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name” (Psa 86:11).

CULTURING THE SOUL. In a way, “waiting” is culturing the soul – drawing away from the mundane and becoming acutely conscience of heavenly priorities. In this case, the sending of “the promise of the Father” would require that all of one’s sensitivities and abilities be honed to a fine spiritual edge. It will be imperative for the disciples to be keenly aware of heavenly purposes and influences, and ready to respond instantly.

NECESSARY PREPARATION. In yet another way, “waiting” describes a period of time in which specific preparations are made that directly impact involvement in the will of the Lord. In the first chapter of Acts we find that there is a vacated bishopric that must be filled – a place of responsibility and participation that was never intended to be left unoccupied. In order to address this situation, there must be a grasp of the Word of the Lord. Some level of understanding must be possessed concerning what happened when Judas fell. The disciples must know why the matter needs to be addressed, and how to go about doing it.

These days we are hearing a lot of religious talk about man’s chief purpose being to praise and worship the Lord. To the spiritually uncultured soul, and the individual who does not have a working knowledge of Scripture, it all sounds pretty good – even holy.

TUNING THE HEART. Yet another thing is accomplished in “waiting” – the heart is tuned, so to speak, to the heavenly frequency, so that the message that is sent will not be missed. No one can be struggling with sadness as Cleopas and his companion had done earlier (Lk 24:17). This was a time when they could not be described as they were earlier: “while they yet believed not for joy” (Lk 24:41). No one could be doubting, as “some” has done when they first saw the risen Christ: “And when they saw him, they worshipped Him: but some doubted” (Matt 28:17). They all had to be in the receiving mode.

PERFECTLY JOINED TOGETHER. While the disciples waited, there had to be unity among them. No division could exist, as when Thomas was absent during the resurrected Christ’s initial appearance to His disciples (John 20:12). After that appearance, Peter said he was going fishing, and only six of all the disciples of Jesus went with him (John 21:1-2). When the promise of the Father comes, they cannot be scattered. They must have “the same mind and the same judgment” – the only proper environment in which the work of the Lord can be done (1 Cor 1:10). It is in that kind of environment – and only that kind of environment – that the Lord “commands the blessing” (Psa 133:3).

The activities that will be described in the remainder of this first chapter were conducive to the development of the things just mentioned. They were the kind of involvements in which the flesh is crucified, and all places for the entrance of the wicked one are removed.

The Necessity of Spirituality

It is deeply troubling to me that the modern church is not cognizant of the necessity of and reason for waiting upon the Lord. Far too many professing Christians do not have the faintest notion of a Divine agenda, a specific promise, or the essentiality of a proper mindset. Others are seriously deficient in their perception of what God is doing through Christ Jesus, and of the bearing of the death, resurrection, ascension, and enthronement of Christ upon that purpose.

These days we are hearing a lot of religious talk about man’s chief purpose being to praise and worship the Lord. To the spiritually uncultured soul, and the individual who does not have a working knowledge of Scripture, it all sounds pretty good – even holy.

In our text, the revealed purpose was that of the disciples becoming witnesses to Christ – His “ambassadors” (Acts 1:8; 2 Cor 5:20). Their witness had to be precise, without the slightest bit of corruption in it. It could not contain some residual traditions of the elders that lingered in their thinking. They were going to be the initial “laborers together with God” (1 Cor 3:9), and “workers together with Him” (2 Cor 6:1).

That is very different from the stated purpose of praising and worshiping Christ – at least as modern men conceive of praise and worship.

The involvement of the disciples in the coming events would be within the framework of God’s revealed purpose for redeemed humanity. The following texts are statements of Divine intent. They have a different tone than that of the religious sophists of our day. This IS what God has to say on the subject.

In these texts, the word “that” describes the purpose for the stated Divine activity. It is synonymous with “in order that . . .”

- CONFORMITY. “For whom He did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son , that He might be the firstborn among many brethren” (Rom 8:29).

- BEING BLAMELESS. “Who shall also confirm you unto the end, that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ ” (1 Cor 1:8).

- KNOWING. “Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God ” (1 Cor 2:12).

- BEING MADE SOMETHING. “For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him ” (2 Cor 5:21).

- BEING JUSTIFIED. “Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified” (Gal 2:16; 3:24).

- RECEIVING THE PROMISED SPIRIT. “That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith ” (Gal 3:14).

- RECEIVING ADOPTION. “To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons ” (Gal 4:5).

- BEING ABLE TO STAND. “Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil ” (Eph 6:11,13).

- OUR HEARTS BEING ESTABLISHED. “And the Lord make you to increase and abound in love one toward another, and toward all men, even as we do toward you: To the end he may stablish your hearts unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints ” (1 Thess 3:12-13).

- PARTAKING OF HIS HOLINESS. “For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but He for our profit, that we might be partakers of His holiness” (Heb 12:10).

- BEING FOUND WITHOUT SPOT. “Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot, and blameless ” (2 Pet 3:14).

- LIVING THROUGH CHRIST. “In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent His only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him ” (1 John 4:9).

These are only representative of the many statements of the revealed purpose of God’s great salvation. As you can see, it is quite different from what is being pawned off on the church of our day. These are things that cannot be accomplished by singing trite little choruses that are not accompanied by holy hearts and an affection that has been placed on things above.

It is necessary to say these things because of the cloud of confusion that has fallen upon the church. Men are being taught that proper preparation is found in praise – praise as men define it. On the other hand, our text outlines in great detail precisely how the disciples prepared for the blessing of the Lord. It reveals how they waited.

Why Say These Things?

It is necessary to say these things because of the cloud of confusion that has fallen upon the church – cast upon it by teachers who do not have a grasp of the truth. Men are being taught that proper preparation is found in praise – praise as men define it. On the other hand, our text outlines in great detail precisely how the disciples prepared for the blessing of the Lord. It reveals how they waited. The strict propriety of what they did is confirmed by the events that took place on the day of Pentecost.

Many poor souls have never received the resources provided in Christ Jesus because they simply are not ready to receive them. They are too close to the world, and, consequently, too far from God. Like the Corinthians, they are “carnal,” and “walk as men” (1 Cor 3:3). Therefore, they are really not able to be “blessed.” They stand in need of correction, because they are lingering around the spiritual cesspool from which Jesus delivered them.

CONTINUED

“These all continued . . .” Other versions read, “They all joined together,” NASB “All these were constantly,” NRSV “continued steadfastly,” ASV “gave themselves up to,” BBE “All these were persevering,” DOUAY “were continually devoting themselves,” NAS “constantly,” NIB “all these joined constantly,” NJB “these all were continuing,” YLT “They were all together,” IE “kept devoting themselves to,” ISV “gave their constant attention to,” MONTGOMERY and “devoted themselves steadfastly.” AMPLIFIED

In today’s religious culture, this is a strange concept – CONTINUANCE ! Men have grown so accustomed to seven minute devotions, fifteen minute sermons, and “hour of power,” that they know nothing about being steadfast, continuing, and running with patience. They demand religious brevity so they can get on with the things they really prefer.

But that was not the posture of these disciples. They had just spend forty days with the risen Savior, with Him speaking to them “of things pertaining to the kingdom of God” (Acts 1:3).

However, they had not reached that infamous saturation level where they could contain no more. They “continued” without a break.

It is possible to be on the edge of some great spiritual epoch, and be completely oblivious of it. That was not the case with these disciples. Jesus had told them, “Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence” (Acts 1:5). That had whetted their appetites, and they would not be dissuaded by lesser things. Peter does not suggest that they go fishing now!

How frequently we are reminded of the role of continuance in spiritual life – perseverance and faithfulness.

- Continue in God’s goodness (Rom 11:22).
- Continue in the faith (Col 2:3).
- Continue in prayer (Col 4:2).
- Continue in taking heed to ourselves and the doctrine (1 Tim 4:16).
- Continue in what we have learned (2 Tim 3:14).
- Let brotherly love continue (Heb 13:1).

It ought to be apparent that spiritual life can be maintained by fits and starts. It requires continuance, persevering, holding on, abiding, remaining, enduring, and persisting.

WITH ONE ACCORD

“ . . . with one accord . . .” Other versions read, “with one mind,” NIV “unitedly . . . with one soul” MRD “with one heart,” NJB “with their minds in full agreement,” AMPLIFIED “with the same purpose,” IE and “by common consent.” PHILLIPS

Men sometimes labor for years to try and accomplish religious unity. Here, before the Holy Spirit even came, the disciples were “with one accord.” Their hearts were united. Their minds were single. They were in full agreement, desiring and anticipating the same thing. Not only that, they “continued” to be of one accord, one mind, and a common purpose!

In all of these cases, the people saw things the same way. Whether for good or for evil, it is their perception that brought them together. They were not merely together physically, or in body, but in mind and heart as well.

They had not been this way before! There were times when some of these same people “disputed” among themselves about who “should be greatest” (Mk 9:33-34). One time James and John aggravated the other ten disciples by asking that they be granted the honor of sitting on Christ's right and left hand in His glory (Mk 10:37-41). However, that sort of thing is behind them now. The risen and empowered Christ has directed their attention to great things, and they are all in one accord.

This matter of being "in one accord" is central in the work of the Lord. It is not the result of avoiding speaking about the things of God, or ignoring the Gospel and its implications. Being of "one accord" is not the result of a fleshly preference for one another, or being close friends, and operating within the framework of a humanly devised systematic theology. "One accord" is the translation of a single Greek word – ὁμοθυμαδον (hom-oth-oo-mad-on). Lexically it means, "with one mind," THAYER "action agreed on unanimously with one mind, with one purpose, by common consent," FRIBERG "with one mind, by common consent, together," UBS "pertaining to mutual consent or agreement, with one mind, by common consent, unanimously," LOUW-NADA and "with one accord, mostly joined with." LADLE-SCOTT

This word is used twenty-two times in the book of Acts. It is translated "one accord" (1:14; 2:1,46; 4:24; 5:12; 7:57; 8:6; 12:20; 15:25; 18:12; 19:29). It always has to do with a united perception of things, and being united together by that perception.

- With one accord in prayer and supplication (1:14).
- With one accord and in one place on the day of Pentecost (2:1).
- Continuing steadfastly together in the Temple and from house to house (2:46).
- Lifting up their voice in prayer to God together (4:24).
- Being of one accord amidst the wondrous working of the Apostles (5:12).
- The people of the city of Samaria with one accord giving heed to the Gospel preached by Philip.
- With one accord choosing Barnabas and Paul, sending them to a specific work for the Lord (15:25).

Even those under the grip of Satan worked together, doing their work in a state of agreement and focus.

- The Jewish council with one accord thrust Stephen out of the city and stoned him (7:57).
- The people of Tyre and Sidon came together in one accord, appealing to Herod for peace (12:20).
- The Jews made an insurrection against Paul with one accord, bringing him before the judgment seat of Gallio (18:12).
- In an aggressive defense of their false God Diana, the Ephesians rushed together in one accord, and in opposition to Paul (19:29).

In all of these cases, the people saw things the same way. Whether for good or for evil, it is their perception that brought them together. They were not merely together physically, or in body, but in mind and heart as well.

This is the kind of accord that will be seen throughout the book of Acts. When there is discord, there will always be some form of disruption, for the Lord only works for good in an environment in which the people are of one accord before Him. This is precisely why Paul wrote to the Roman brethren, "That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom 15:6).

Much of the Christianity of our day is devoid of these essential qualities: “one mind and one mouth.” It is not at all unusual to find “church” people singing things they do not want to sing, hearing things they do not want to hear, and doing things they do not want to do. Many gatherings of professing Christians are not the result of the people being of “one accord” or of “one mind.” Some people come together because they think that is what they are supposed to do. Others come together because of carnal friendship. Still others imagine that coming together will somehow compensate for their failure to live by faith, live by every word of God, and live unto the Lord.

I personally know of gatherings of religious leaders – gatherings in which I have personally participated – in which the mind of the constituents on the things of God is not even known – much less has it drawn the people together. Some religious gatherings can only simulate oneness by avoiding speaking about “the things of the Spirit of God” (1 Cor 2:14). I have even heard “Christian” leaders boast that they have agreed not to be overtly disagreeable, thereby acknowledging that they are not in “one accord.” Most people with “Christian” involvements know this is the case. It is not, however, fashionable to talk about it.

Such is the religion of our day. It is what has produced denominations, factions, and schisms among professed believers. It is what has produced contradicting doctrines or teachings. Such circumstances are the result of worldly and demonic wisdom. As James well said, “But if ye have bitter envying and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work” (James 3:14-16).

However, this is not the kind of environment that salvation creates. It is not what happens when people are born again, reconciled to God, and added to the church. Such it is not the religion of the book of Acts – which is an inspired account of what really happens when people are washed, sanctified, and justified (1 Cor 6:11).

What we are going to read is the result of single-mindedness, focused consideration, and being absorbed with the will of the Lord.

IN PRAYER

“ . . . in prayer . . . ” Other versions read, “continual prayer,” DARBY “constantly praying,” IE and “earnest in prayer.” WEYMOUTH

The word from which “prayer” is translated is a most interesting one. It has a two-fold meaning: “prayer addressed to God,” and “a place set apart or suited for the offering of prayer.” THAYER This word emphasizes asking , as the next phrase will confirm. Prayer does have many forms, and we are to learn to employ them all. As it is written, “praying always with all prayer” (Eph 6:18). Some of the types of prayer include:

- Confession, or penitential prayers (Psa 51; 1 John 1:9).
- Intercession (1 Tim 2:1).
- Thanksgiving (Psa 50:14; Phil 4:6; Col 4:2).
- Praise (Psa 118:21; Acts 16:25).

In this text, the emphasis is on asking, petitioning, requesting, calling on the name of the Lord, seeking, and inquiring. In such a wide sweeping expression, these brethren were in “one accord.” Their session was not one of diverse mingled requests and varied objectives. They were “waiting” for the promise that was to be sent to them. Their attention and prayers were doubtless centered on that event. It was at that time, when they were “endued with power from on high,” that the New Covenant would be inaugurated, and the purpose for which Jesus “came into the world” would be put into action.

AND SUPPLICATION

“ . . . and supplication . . . ” Most later versions omit this word (ASV, NASV, NIV, RSV, NRSV, ESV, NLT). The following versions do contain the word: New King James (1982), Geneva (1599), Bishop’s New Testament (1595), Revised Websters (1995), Tyndale (1534), Websters (1833) Young’s Literal Translation (1862).

The word “supplication” has the lexical meaning of, “seeking, asking, entreating, entreaty,” THAYER “plea, entreaty, as addressed to God in prayer, request, petition,” FRIBERG “to plead, to beg, that which is asked with urgency based on presumed need,” LOUW-NADA and “an entreating, asking, a prayer, entreaty.” LADLE-SCOTT

A WORD ON THE TRANSLATION

Technically, and for those who are interested, The Vulgate Latin, Syriac, and Ethiopic versions leave out the last clause, “and supplication.” These words do occur in a significant number of Greek manuscripts. William Tyndale, a unique and heralded Scriptural and language scholar, included the words in his 1534 translation of the New Testament into English.

All of this is really of little consequence. I only mention it to underscore the petty nature of some in their approach to translation. First, there are sufficient acceptable manuscripts to justify the inclusion of the words. Second, there are sufficient godly and extensive scholars who see a need to include them. Third, the very nature of the text lends itself to the employment of this language. Fourth, the same Greek expressions (proskarterh,sei kai. deh,sei and proseuch/ kai. th/ deh,sei) are also found in Ephesians 6:18 and Philippians 4:6. Versions omitting the expression in Acts 1:14, include it in those verses (“prayer and supplication,” ASV/ESV/VRSV “prayers and requests,” NASB “prayers and petitions” NIV). I do not see this as a critical matter. However, I have been compelled to say a few words about it to illustrate the dreadful propensity of worldly wisdom to the nonsensical and meaningless. Only eternity will unveil the extent of the confusion that has been caused in the Christian community by multiple, and often sloppy, translations of the Scriptures.

For what were these disciples praying and making supplication? First, it could not be unrelated to the reason for them waiting for what God had promised. Holy people do not wait for the promise of God while praying about other matters. The fact that the Father had promised to send His Spirit by no means indicated that it would all happen automatically and without the involvement of others. Concerning this promise, made by the Father, Jesus had said, “And I will pray the Father , and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever” (John 14:16). No doubt they also remembered the words of the Lord Jesus concerning men receiving the Holy Spirit. “If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him ?” (Luke 11:13). It is, therefore, perfectly reasonable to understand one of their chief petitions was that they would received the Spirit.

Included in that petition could have been such things as being delivered from evil and protected from their enemies, remaining faithful, that their faith would remain strong, and that they would all remain “of one accord.” All of that, and more, was associated with receiving “the promise of the Father.”

Why Supplicate for Something Promised?

The sophist will ask, “Why should God’s people ask for something that the Lord has promised? Isn’t that a sign of unbelief?” To the unlearned, that makes a lot of sense. However, it really borders on spiritual insanity. God has revealed that the fulfillment of His purposes in the earth includes the involvement of men. The One who can save to the uttermost will use the work of Noah to preserve the eight souls who will multiply in the earth after the flood. He who gives repentance will employ men like John the Baptist and Peter the Apostle to facilitate that repentance. This is, as Job would put it, “parts of His ways” (Job 26:14).

The Principle Declared

All of this would bring the heathen around them to know the Lord Himself had done such great things – things that could in no way be accomplished by men. However, even though God had purposed these things, He would be moved by supplications of His people to do them.

Speaking through Ezekiel, the Lord made known what He had purposed for Israel. Their land, which was made desolate, would become like the garden of Eden. Abandoned cities would be built, walled, and inhabited. All of this would bring the heathen around them to know the Lord Himself had done such great things – things that could in no way be accomplished by men. However, even though God had purposed these things, He would be moved by supplications of His people to do them. Here is how Ezekiel said it. “And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited. Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it. Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them ; I will increase them with men like a flock” (Ezek 36:35-37).

Again, God spoke through Jeremiah, assuring the people of His purposes for them. Yet, they would be realized by means of the involvement of the people. “For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the LORD, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end. Then shall ye call upon Me, and ye shall go and pray unto Me , and I will hearken unto you” (Jer 29:12).

The Principle Illustrated

This Divine principle of human involvement is lived out in the prophet Daniel. Because he lived within the awareness of the Lord created by the Word of God, he sensed that a time for accelerated prayer and supplication had come. Here is how he recorded the experience. “In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem. And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications , with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes” (Dan 9:2-3).

The books of reference were the writings of Jeremiah – particularly the Divinely determined length of the Babylonian captivity: seventy years (2 Chron 36:21; Jer 25:11-12). Of particular importance was the promise of God concerning the conclusion of those seventy years. “For thus saith the LORD, That after seventy years be accomplished at Babylon I will visit you, and perform my good word toward you, in causing you to return to this place” (Jer 29:10).

When Daniel realized that the seventy years of captivity in Babylon were coming to a close, he did not lift his hands in praise saying, “Thank God the time of judgment is coming to an end!!” Instead he said, “And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes” (Dan 9:3). His prayer is one of the great prayers of Scripture, extending from 9:4 through 9:17). In this prayer, which he called a “confession,” he said the following.

- God was great and dreadful (4a).

- God keeps covenant and mercy with those who love Him and keep His commandments (4b).
- Israel had sinned, committed iniquity, and done wickedly in departing from God's precepts (5).
- Israel had not hearkened to God's prophets (6).
- Righteous belonged to God, but confusion of face to Israel (7-8).
- Mercies and forgivenesses belonged to God, even though they had rebelled against Him (9).
- Israel had not obeyed the Lord, but transgressed His law, departing from Him (10-11).
- The Babylonian captivity had confirmed God's word against them (12-14).
- God had brought the people out of Egypt, but they had sinned against Him (15).
- Jeremiah asked the Lord to turn away His anger from them (16).
- He asked the Lord to make His face shine upon His sanctuary, which was then desolate (17).
- He pleads with the Lord to look upon the desolation of His people and the city of Jerusalem (18).
- He asks the Lord to forgive, and not defer to consider His city and His people (19).

I suppose some would argue that all of this was totally unnecessary. After all, God had already promised that He would visit the people after seventy years to perform His good word toward them and cause them to return to their land (Jer 29:10). But let us hear the response of heaven to reasoning like that of Jeremiah! That will settle the matter.

While Daniel was still speaking his prayer and making his confession, God sent the angel Gabriel to Daniel. He said that he was sent by God to give Daniel "skill and understanding." Gabriel said, "At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved : therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision" (Dan 9:23). He then revealed to Daniel not only the end of the Babylonian captivity, but the rebuilding of Jerusalem, and the eventual coming of the Messiah who would be "cut off" for the people (9:24-26).

Jesus In Gethsemane

Somehow, the preachers and teachers of the day have produced a people who have neither eye nor heart, discernment nor sensitivity. Like some Hebrews, they are "dull of hearing." Like the disciples at one time, they are "slow of heart to believe"

If God has ever established His will, it is in the matter of His great salvation. He announced His intentions to destroy the devil through the seed of the woman before Adam and Eve were expelled from the garden (Gen 3:15). He declared His purpose to bless the world through the seed of Abraham (Gen 12:3; 18:18). The manner of the death of Christ was revealed through David (Psa 22). What would take place in His death was revealed through Isaiah (Isa 53). The willingness of the Savior to enter a body prepared for Him and satisfy God through a willing sacrifice was also made known through David (Psa 40:6-8).

If anything can be accomplished without any further involvement on earth, surely it will be this! But that is not the way it all played out! When the hour began to approach when Jesus would lay down His life, He "steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem" where the death would be accomplished (Lk 9:51). When the night arrived when He would, according to prophecy, be betrayed by His own “familiar friend” (Psa 41:9), He agonized in prayer, thrice crying out, “not as I will, but as Thou wilt” (Matt 26:39,42,44). This is the manner of the kingdom!

In Our Text

Therefore, just a few days away from the promised coming of the Holy Spirit upon them, the disciples engaged in focused and consistent prayer. They began to seek fervently what was shortly going to be accomplished. Their action was not a sign of the lack of faith, but the evidence of the strength of their faith.

Our Times

The modern church has delivered a gospel that has not led people to think in this manner. They appear to have no sense of the approaches of Divinely appointed epochs – whether judgments like the destruction of Jerusalem (Matt 24:15-17), or blessings, like events leading up to the return of our Lord.(Lk 21:24-28). Somehow, the preachers and teachers of the day have produced a people who have neither eye nor heart, discernment nor sensitivity. Like some Hebrews, they are “dull of hearing” (Heb 5:11). Like the disciples at one time, they are “slow of heart to believe” (Lk 24:25). Like Jerusalem of old, they are unable to perceive when they have been “visited” by the Lord (Lk 19:44).

These are not the kind of disciples we will find in the book of the Acts. Here we will be faced with a people who know what to do when they are apprised of coming events. They know what to do when they are challenged. Their responses will be immediately and zealous. This is a recounting of life under the New Covenant – of the nature of that life, and of the world’s reaction to it.

DO NOT FORGET THE OTHERS!

“ 14a . . . with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren.”

“The eleven” were the principal people gathered together, but they were not the only ones. Furthermore, they were primary by Divine appointment, not by achievement or human merit. As it is written, “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles , secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues” (1 Cor 12:28). The apostles would not be the only people the exalted Christ used to establish the truth. In this book, we will read of several who were used in an unusual way, yet were not “first.” They include men like Barnabas (4:36; 9:27; 11:22-30; 12:25; 13:7; 43-50; 14:12-20; 15:2,12,22-39), Stephen (6:5-9; 7:1-59), Philip (the evangelist – Acts 6:5; 8:5-40; 21:8), James (the Lord’s brother – Acts 15:13; 21:18), Silas (Acts 15:22-40; 16:19-29; 17:4-15; 18:5), Agabus (a prophet – Acts 11:28; 21:10-12), Timotheus (Acts 16:1; 17:14-15; 18:5; 19:22; 20:4), Judas (a prophet – 15:22,27,32), Simeon, Lucius, and Manaen (prophet-teachers – 13:1-4), and others.

All of these were used mightily by the Lord, not being equal to the apostles, yet putting their hands to the work of the Lord with them.

Now, Luke tells us of the people who were waiting for the promise of the Father. All of these had apparently understood themselves to be included in those who should wait for “the promise of the Father.” All of them had concluded they should not depart from Jerusalem, and that they would, in some way, be included as Christ’s witnesses.

“The eleven” certainly did not consider it a reproach to be gathered with these personalities, nor did they despise their prayers. There are a significant number of professed Christian leaders who would not have allowed these people to be included in this number – particularly sense a major decision will be made by this very group.

THE WOMEN

“ . . . with the women . . . ” Other versions read, “ along with the women,” NASB “together with certain women ,” NRSV “ together with the women,” RSV “with several women,” DARBY “with some women,” NAB “several other women ,” NLT “with women,” YLT [waiting together] with the women,” AMPLIFIED and “together with the women who had followed Jesus .” PHILLIPS

I understand these to be “women” that were previously defined as being associated with Jesus, either personally or in a specific group. Here are some references to these women – especially noted for following Jesus and being devoted to Him.

- “And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him: Among which was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joses , and the mother of Zebedee's children ” (Mat 27:56).

- “There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses , and Salome ; (Who also, when He was in Galilee, followed Him, and ministered unto Him;) and many other women which came up with Him unto Jerusalem” (Mark 15:41).

- “And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene , and Mary the mother of James, and Salome , had bought sweet spices, that they might come and anoint Him” (Mark 16:1).

- “And certain women , which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene , out of whom went seven devils, and Joanna the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna , and many others , which ministered unto Him of their substance” (Luke 8:3).

- “And all His acquaintance, and the women that followed Him from Galilee , stood afar off, beholding these things” (Luke 23:49).

- “And the women also, which came with Him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulcher, and how His body was laid” (Luke 23:55).

- “It was Mary Magdalene , and Joanna , and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told these things unto the apostles” (Luke 24:10).

- “Now there stood by the cross of Jesus His mother , and His mother's sister , Mary the wife of Cleophas , and Mary Magdalene ” (John 19:25).

The significance of at least some of these women is found in the fact that Jesus Himself upbraided the men for not believing their testimony that they had seen the risen Christ. “Afterward He appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen” (Mark 16:14; Lk 24:22).

Women who are specifically named, were identified with Christ, and no doubt with His disciples, include Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James and Joses, Mark the mother of James and John, Joanna, Susanna, and Mary's (mother of Jesus) sister. In addition there were clusters of women referred to as “other women” and “ many other women.” By mentioning them, the Spirit endears them to our hearts.

THE MOTHER OF JESUS

“ . . . and Mary the mother of Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “Jesus' mother,” LIVING “Mary,” WILLIAMS and “Mary His mother.” PHILLIPS

Mary is referred to as “the mother of Jesus” three times (John 2:1,3; Acts 1:14), “His mother” fourteen times (Matt 2:13,14,20,21,; 12:46; Mk 3:31; Lk 2:33,43,48,51; Lk 8:19; John 2:5,12; 19:26), “His mother Mary” once (Matt 1:18), “the mother of my Lord” once (Lk 1:43) and “Mary, of whom Jesus was born” (Matt 1:16).

Prior to her bearing the “holy child,” she was referred to as Mary, “a virgin to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David” (Lk 1:27). The angel Gabriel appeared to her, announcing that she had been chosen and was “highly favored, the Lord was with her, and she was “blessed among women” (Lk 1:28). He specifically told her that she had “found favor with God” (Lk 1:30). Mary’s response to this marvelous announcement was, “Behold the handmaid of the Lord; be it unto me according to thy word” (Luke 1:38).

Mary was related to Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist, who is called her “cousin” (Lk 1:36). At the time of his announcement to Mary, the angel told her that Elizabeth had conceived a son “in her old age, and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren. For with God nothing shall be impossible” (Lk 1:36-37).

Upon visiting Elizabeth and saluting her, the babe John the Baptist leaped in Elizabeth’s womb, and she was “filled with the Holy Spirit” (Lk 1:41). At that time, Elizabeth pronounced a blessing upon Mary: “Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb. . . And blessed is she that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord” (Luke 1:42-45).

Upon hearing these things, Mary praised God in a most unique and insightful manner. This is one of the great expressions of the salvation of God.

“My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior. For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His name. And His mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation. He hath showed strength with His arm; He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich He hath sent empty away. He hath holpen His servant Israel, in remembrance of His mercy; as He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever” (Luke 1:38-55).

When Jesus was born, and the shepherds told Mary and Joseph what the angel had told them concerning the Babe, “Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart” (Luke 2:19).

Mary was an extraordinarily blessed, holy, and insightful woman. Much of the religious world has not beheld her as they should – “blessed among women” and “highly favored” of God.

When Jesus was twelve, and was found in the Temple “in the midst of the doctors,” upon being questioned by her concerning the occasion, Jesus told her that He had to be about His “Father’s business.” Upon their return to Nazareth, it is written of Mary, “but His mother kept all of these sayings in her heart” (Lk 2:51).

At the beginning of Christ’s ministry, when He performed the first of His miracles, “the mother of Jesus was there” (John 2:5). When Jesus was on the cross, “His mother” was there (John 19:25). Now, after His ascension into heaven, when the disciples are waiting for the promise of the Father, “Mary the mother of Jesus” is there.

This is the last mentioning of her in the Scriptures, and we are left with a most favorable impression of her.

Mary was an extraordinarily blessed, holy, and insightful woman. Much of the religious world has not beheld her as they should – “blessed among woman” and “highly favored” of God.

HIS BRETHREN

“ . . . and with His brethren.” Other versions read, “His brothers,” NKJV “as well as His brothers,” NRSV and “the brothers of Jesus.” NLT

These are the half-brothers of Jesus, Joseph being their father. Their names are given in Scripture: “Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas ?” (Mat 13:55).

After Jesus turned the water into wine, He “went down to Capernaum.” At that time, His brethren stayed briefly with Him. “After this He went down to Capernaum, He, and His mother, and His brethren , and His disciples: and they continued there not many days” (John 2:12).

Once, when His brethren had heard the multitudes were swarming around Jesus and His disciples, and they could not even take time to eat, they concluded He was “beside Himself” and journeyed there to rescue Him (Mark 3:21,32).

Well into the ministry of Jesus, His brothers still did not believe in Him. Once, when the Feast of Tabernacles approached, they said to Him, “Depart hence, and go into Judaea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest. For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly. If Thou do these things, show Thyself to the world. For neither did his brethren believe in Him” (John 7:5). They knew He was a great Teacher and miracle worker, but they were not aware of who He really was. Therefore they are properly said to not “believe in Him.” At that time, they were much like the average church member.

Now, however, His brethren have believed on Jesus, and have joined with the disciples in waiting for the promise of the Father.

James

James, the Lord’s brother, became a prominent and leading member of the Jerusalem church. He is the one who wrote the book of James. Another of Jesus’ brothers, Jude, wrote the book of Jude. James the Lord’s brother is also quite prominent in the book of Acts, particularly in regards to special meetings that were called to consider the acceptance of the Gentiles (12:17; 15:13-21; 21:18).

After Jesus had risen from the dead, He made a special appearance to His brother James, as distinguished from the rest of the Apostles (1 Cor 15:7). After Paul was converted, He went up to Jerusalem, spending fifteen days with Peter (Gal 1:18). At that time, Paul said he did not see any of the other apostles – but He did see “James the Lord’s brother” (Gal 1:19). The account of that meeting is found in Acts 21:18-26).

When Paul went to Antioch, and had to confront Peter “to his face” about his improper conduct toward the Gentiles, mention is made of several brethren who had been sent to Antioch by James (Gal 2:12). James, together with Peter and John, were “pillars” in the Jerusalem church (Gal 2:9). This was after James the apostle had been killed by Herod (Acts 12:2). James, the Lord’s brother was now a leading figure.

Wrapping It Up

We are left considering this band of disciples, patiently waiting for “the promise of the Father,” and doing so at the direction of Jesus.

It appears to me that there were a minimum of twenty-six disciples present. The eleven, seven specific women, Jesus' four brothers, and four others: Barsabas and Matthias (identified later), and Cleopas and his companion.

An unbiased consideration of this gathering is devastating to certain views concerning “the role of women” in the church. To this point, after being taught by the Son of God Himself during His ministry, and after having Him teach them concerning the Kingdom of God for the forty days following His resurrection, there was no apparent restrictive views of the women among them.

Barsabas and Matthias were doubtless there, because they were with the disciples “until the day He was taken up” into heaven (Acts 1:22). The others were included when they were with the eleven, when Jesus appeared to them, after which He led them out to Bethany, blessed them, and was parted from them (Luke 24:36-50).

All of these people had apparently concluded that the word to “tarry in Jerusalem” applied to them. I conclude that their presence was something more than a gesture of comfort and kindness toward “the eleven.”

Considering the Women

An unbiased consideration of this gathering is devastating to certain views concerning “the role of women” in the church. To this point, after being taught by the Son of God Himself during His ministry, and after having Him teach them concerning the Kingdom of God for the forty days following His resurrection, there was no apparent restrictive views of the women among them.

Following His resurrection, Jesus had “appeared first to Mary Magdalene.” He charged her, “go to My brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; and to My God, and your God.” Obediently, “Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that He had spoken these things unto her” (John 20:17-18).

When holy women went to anoint the body of Jesus, they confronted a holy angel. Unaware of any restrictions on women speaking to men, this angel told them, “And go quickly, and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and, behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him: lo, I have told you” (Matt 28:7). As they went on their way the risen Christ Himself met them. He told them, “Be not afraid: go tell My brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see Me” (Matt 28:10).

In these texts, if there is any doubt about Jesus “brethren” being “the eleven,” that doubt is shattered by Mark. “Afterward He appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen Him after He was risen” (Mark 16:14). If it is countered that those bearing the testimony really refers to Cleopas and his companion, let it be remembered that Cleopas referred to the testimony of the women BEFORE he and his companion told the disciples they had seen the Lord. They told Jesus (whom they had not yet recognized), “Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulcher; and when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that He was alive” (Luke 24:22-23).

The Relevance of These Observations

There is a certain and contemporary relevancy in these recorded events. We have been exposed to the mind of Christ, and how holy and informed angels thought about women – holy women. They knew nothing of their inherent subordination to all men, or of them not being allowed to bear witness to any man. Jesus commanded Mary, plus a group of women, to deliver a message to His own disciples. It was a message of revelation and of direction as well. They were to tell the men the fact of Him being raised, and then instruct them where to meet Him. Angels from heaven were not aware of any limitations being placed on women bearing witness to men – and men are, in their best state, “a little lower than the angels” (Psa 8:5; Heb 2:7).

Men are told to be cautious about how they speak before angels (Eccl 5:6), and women are told to conduct themselves within an awareness of the presence of angels (1 Cor 10:10). But angels are never admonished to be careful how they speak before men. You may be sure they will not have regard for the traditions of men when they speak, no matter how hoary those traditions are.

In my judgment, men ought to be cautious about adopting any view of women speaking that is at variance with what the Son of God and holy angels have actually done. No view should be taken that perceives Jesus or angels acting in contradiction of the nature of the New Covenant. If it is difficult to put various texts together, then admit to the difficulty, but do not take it upon yourself to impose rules upon your sisters that have not been honored by either Jesus or holy angels. Men will have to give an account for such views, and explain why they ignored what Jesus did, and what angels did, in preference for a human interpretation or tradition.

What the women I have just mentioned did, would be something like some godly women informing certain elders of some truth of God, then telling them what they should do about it. If it is countered that Jesus would never do something like this, I have just shown you where He DID do it.

All people will eventually face these holy women – women whose record was inspired by the Holy Spirit of God. How embarrassing it will be to have to give an accounting for binding rules upon the “daughters” of God that make Mary Magdalene and the holy women appear to be acting in contradiction of the New Covenant! How will men explain that condition on the day of judgment?

Let no one remonstrate, saying that Jesus was at liberty to break the Law, or violate a Divine principle. He was prophesied to be the One who would “magnify the Law, and make it honorable,” not the One who would break it (Isa 42:21).

CONCLUSION

I have spent an unusual amount of time dealing with, what may appear to be, mere incidentals. However, as we approach this marvelous record of Divine working, it is essential that we maintain a proper perspective. The era of the New Covenant is going to be launched, and it is important that we see how this was done. The Gospel of salvation will be declared, and it is crucial that we see what is said, and how it is proclaimed. We will be exposed to the reshaping of the thinking of the disciples, and it is critical that we discern the what, why, and how of that reshaping.

The book of Acts cannot be read through the filter of the Mosaic Law. Much less can it be read through the foggy spectacles of human tradition. We will be exposed to the work that Jesus started, when He “BEGAN to do and teach” (Acts 1:1). Christ’s ministry among men was not an extension of the Old Covenant, and it is disastrous to sound thought if we think that it was. Jesus Himself said that “the prophets and the Law prophesied until John [the Baptist]” (Matt 11:13). As Luke said it, “The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it” (Luke 16:16).

Jesus, then, as well as John the Baptist, preached during a transitional period. This was a time of preparation for the period of the New Covenant, and the preaching of both John and Jesus conformed to that objective. That is why their subject matter is described as “the Kingdom of God,” or “the Kingdom of heaven,” which Matthew prefers to use (Matt 3:2; 4:17). These synonymous expressions are used no less than eighty-four times in the Gospels alone. Acts uses them seven times. Neither one of them is used a single time from Genesis through Malachi – not in any standard translation of the Scripture!

Jesus commented on the Law, but He did not preach the Law – He preached the Kingdom of God. He spoke of the traditions of the elders, but He did not preach those traditions – He preached the Kingdom of God. In keeping with the thrust of His preaching, He spoke about such things as being “born again” (John 3:3,7), receiving the Holy Spirit (Matt 7:112; Lk 11:13; John 7:37-39), names being written in heaven (Lk 10:20), having “eternal life” (Matt 19:29; Mk 10:30; John 3:15,16,36; 4:14; 5:24; 5:39; 6:27,40,47,54; 10:28; 17:2), never dying (John 11:26), seeing Abraham (Lk 13:28), and the day of judgment (Matt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; Mk 6:11). None of these things – not a single one of them – was the thrust of the words of either Moses or the Prophets.

The ministry of Jesus before He died, His ministry to His disciples on earth after He rose from the dead, and His ministry in heaven after He ascended up where He was before, ALL have to do with the New Covenant, Redemption in Christ Jesus, and newness of life. Nothing – absolutely nothing – having to do with the enfleshment, death, and glorification of Jesus is unrelated to those realities.

My posture in all of these lessons will exhibit a total intolerance for the lifeless and unprofitable traditions of men. It will make no effort at all to synchronize the book of Acts with human perceptions. Where there is a conflict between what men have said or are saying, and the record in this book, I will energetically default to Luke’s record. The Gospel preached in Acts is the only valid Gospel there is. It is not a special one for the Jews. If there are weaknesses in the understanding of the people whose records are in this book, that deficiency will be dealt with forthrightly in the book and clearly resolved. If people have conducted themselves improperly, it will be clearly identified and a response recorded. This is an inspired book, and is to be so regarded. It provides an index in the Divine manner of working.

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #4

THE CHOOSING OF MATTHIAS

“ 1:15 And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of names together were about an hundred and twenty,) 16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus. 17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry. 18 Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. 19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood. 20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his bishopric let another take. 21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection. 23 And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias. 24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two Thou hast chosen, 25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place. 26 And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles. ” (Acts 1:15-26)

I CONTENTS

- PETER STANDS UP IN THEIR MIDST (1:15)

- THE SCRIPTURE MUST BE FULFILLED (1:16)
- JUDAS WAS NUMBERED WITH THEM (1:17)
- A REVIEW OF JUDAS' END (1:18-19)
- IT IS WRITTEN (1:20)
- THE QUALIFICATIONS OF AN APOSTLE PLACED BEFORE THEM (1:21-22).
- THEY APPOINTED TWO (1:23)
- THE CHOICE IS FOLLOWED BY PRAYER (1:24-25)
- THEY GAVE FORTH THEIR LOTS (1:25)
- CONCLUSION

INTRODUCTION

As the disciples “wait for the promise of the Father,” Peter is inspired to see that certain Scriptures must be fulfilled BEFORE that promise comes upon them. He perceives a text in which David refers to Judas, though not by name, and sees what needs to be done. His great heart is directed to review the fall of Judas, integrating that perception with the Word of God. In this text, we will see how the Holy Spirit can lead a person to think. The thought processes will be honed to their finest edge, so that a sound diagnosis of events, a remarkable exegesis of Scripture, and a flawless course of action can be articulated. It will also become apparent that the unity of the Spirit removed all carnal obstacles to the fulfillment of the will of God. People will be aware of what they can and cannot do. They will know what to do when their knowledge reaches its limitation. Their faith will also enable them to settle for the answer God gives.

When He was yet with them, Jesus said to His disciples, “Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them” (Mat 18:19-20). In the text before us, this promise will be fulfilled in a remarkable way. The people are gathered together, and they are in agreement. During this time, when outward circumstances were most unfavorable, they had come together like the saints in Malachi’s day: “Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another” (Mal 3:16). They worshiped Jesus and rejoiced together in their return to Jerusalem (Lk 24:52). They were continually “in the Temple, praising and blessing God” (Lk 24:53). Further, they were asking for something to be done by the Father which is in heaven: “These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication” (Acts 1:14). Now it will be confirmed that Jesus is among them, and the Father will hear them. The Sovereign God of heaven will take due note of this solemn assembly.

I am persuaded that many noble spiritual desires are virtually aborted by the condition of the people. They are not together as they should be. They tend to be joined together by a fleshly unanimity rather than by their faith and common fear of the Lord. They really do not meet in the name of the Lord, but in the name of their church, or their theological persuasion, or some other earthly purpose. They are not operating by the Divine agenda.

Consider what remarkable circumstances attend this gathering.

- They have been tutored by Jesus for forty days in things pertaining to the Kingdom of God (Acts 1:3).
- They have been told what was going to happen to them (Acts 1:5).
- Jesus had blessed them (Lk 24:50).

- They have witnessed Jesus ascend, returning to heaven (Acts 1:10).
- Angels have told them He will return in the same manner (Acts 1:11).
- They returned to Jerusalem, worshiping Jesus and filled with joy (Lk 24:52).

I am persuaded that many noble spiritual desires are virtually aborted by the condition of the people. They are not together as they should be.

They have been in the Temple continually (Lk 24:53).

- They are all together (Acts 1:13-14a).
- They are in one accord (Acts 1:14b).

They have been continuing in prayer and supplication (Acts 1:14c).

Does anyone marvel that such a place is fertile spiritual ground? These brethren were not fishing, as some had chosen to do after Jesus had first risen from the dead (John 21:3). They were not filled with all manner of questions, as when they had first met with the risen Christ (Acts 1:6). There is a certain assurance and stability among this people. Their hearts have been affected, so that they are more in tune with heaven than with the earth. Holy desires have been awakened. Great expectation has risen to prominence. The promises of Jesus have moved to the forefront of their thinking. Some of them no doubt included the following – promises Jesus stated to those who followed Him and inquired of Him.

- “But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life” (John 4:14).
- “I am the bread of life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst” (John 6:35).
- “He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water” (John 7:38).

There must have been recollections of such statements as, “theirs is the kingdom of heaven,” “they shall be comforted,” “they shall be filled,” “they shall obtain mercy,” and “they shall all be taught of God” (Matt 5:4,6,7; John 6:45).

There were also promises Jesus gave to His disciples on the night of His betrayal, when He chose to meet with the Twelve apostles. After the dismissal of Judas the traitor, He spoke of things that were going to come – things that would involve the other apostles.

Those with tender hearts do want blessing from the Lord. They want to participate in His work, be used by Him, and walk with Him in the fulfillment of His eternal purpose. We can learn from this text that such benefits require a certain spiritual soil. There is a frame of mind that is capable of receiving from God.

- “If ye shall ask any thing in My name, I will do it” (John 14:14).
- “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you” (John 14:16-17).
- “I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you” (John 14:18).
- “He that hath My commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him” (John 14:21).

- “If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him” (John 14:23).

- “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me” (John 15:26).

- “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you” (John 16:7).

- “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall he speak: and He will show you things to come ” (John 16:13).

- “And in that day ye shall ask Me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name, He will give it you” (John 16:23).

- “At that day ye shall ask in My name: and I say not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you. For the Father Himself loveth you, because ye have loved Me, and have believed that I came out from God” (John 16:26-27).

DO YOU WANT A BLESSING?

Those with tender hearts do want blessing from the Lord. They want to participate in His work, be used by Him, and walk with Him in the fulfillment of His eternal purpose. We can learn from this text that such benefits require a certain spiritual soil. There is a frame of mind that is capable of receiving from God. There is a public environment that is conducive to blessing and Divine direction.

There is an approach to a proper environment in which men seek to simulate what they really do not possess. They feign a preference for the Lord, but their manner of life betrays the absence of such a thing. They pretend that they enjoy the presence of the Lord, but can only do so when their kind of music and other expressions are employed. An acute consciousness of God is missing, and thus they try to bring Him down into the assembly, as though He leaps from His throne to give heed to those going through certain routines. Fresh from the world and its involvements, such people imagine they can produce a spiritual environment by means of a routine, or an exercise, or some other external expression. These are fundamentally wrong ways of thinking.

The brethren in our text have come from the presence of the Lord, they are not seeking that presence. Their minds have been exposed to extended teaching about the Kingdom of God. They have been enraptured by the presence of the Lord, and “many infallible proofs” that accompanied His matchless teaching. They are not trying to contact the Lord, attempting to appropriate honest and good hearts, or get free from enslaving carnal habits. Their worship, praise, prayer, and supplication are the RESULT of what they have seen and heard – what they have experienced.

These brethren are in a position to be directed from heaven. The words of Jesus Himself are in their hearts and minds. They are expecting what the Lord has promised. They are in strict accord with the Divine agenda, refusing to leave the city until what has been promised to them has come to pass.

Now that they are in tune with the heavenly frequency, there will no doubt be some Divine direction. They will become even more fully involved in God’s purpose. Having removed themselves from worldly influences, they are “meet for the Master’s use” (2 Tim 2:21).

PETER STANDS UP IN THEIR MIDST

“ 1:15 And in those days Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said, (the number of names together were about an hundred and twenty).”

Now, in this most excellent spiritual environment, something is sure to take place. The Lord Himself is prominent in the thinking of the people. What has been promised by Jesus is now their focused expectation. They are anticipating an unusual baptism (Acts 1:5). They are looking forward to being “endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). Their hearts are being oriented for the experience of being Christ’s witnesses (Acts 1:8). They are praying to God, and lifting up supplications to Him. Now, some communication will come back from heaven – some direction from the Lord. There is something to be done, and the Lord will direct them in how to do it.

It is possible to pray and beseech the Lord for some needed benefit or direction, yet not remain in the presence of the Lord long enough to get an answer. Often the Lord bears long with His children, not answering or directing them at once (Lk 18:7). This is such a time.

IN THOSE DAYS

“And in those days . . .” Other versions read, “And at this time,” NIV “In these days,” ASV “During those days,” NAB “During this time,” NLT “This prayer meeting went on for several days . During this time,” LIVING “It was on one of these days,” WEYMOUTH , “It was during these days ,” MONTOMERY “Now on one of those days ,” AMPLIFIED and “It was during this period .” PHILLIPS

The following event occurred on one of the days after Christ’s ascension, and before the day of Pentecost – one of the days the disciples were all together, in one place, in one accord, and continuing in prayer and supplication. It was while they were waiting for “the promise of the Father,” as Jesus had instructed them to do (Acts 1:4) – tarrying “in the city of Jerusalem” until they “be endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). We have no idea on which of the ten days what follows occurred. The Ethiopic version (5th-6th Century) reads “on that day,” suggesting that it was the same day they went to the upper room (1:13). This cannot be supported. However, it does appear as though it was early in the ten-day period. The important thing to note is that what follows took place in a truly spiritual environment where hearts were supple and united in Christ Jesus.

PETER STOOD UP IN THEIR MIDST

“Peter stood up in the midst of the disciples, and said . . .” Other versions read “among the believers,” NASB “in the midst of the brethren,” NIV “got up among the brothers,” BBE “stood up to speak to the brothers,” NJB and “Stood up and addressed them as follows.” NLT

Peter, together with Andrew, was the first to be called to follow Jesus (Mat 4:18-19). Frequently, he had spoken out first, or in behalf of the disciples during Jesus’ ministry (Matt 14:28; 15:15; 16:16; 17:4; 18:21; 19:27; 26:33,35; Lk 5:5; ; 12:41; John 13:37).

Now Peter rises to speak again. This, time, however, he is not going to ask any questions, or make some casual suggestions. He has been renewed in the “spirit of his mind,” and he sees things with the kind of clarity that comes from being consciously in the presence of the exalted Christ.

Now Peter rises to speak again. This, time, however, he is not going to ask any questions, or make some casual suggestions. He has been renewed in the “spirit of his mind,” and he sees things with the kind of clarity that comes from being consciously in the presence of the exalted Christ. His spiritual senses have been honed to a fine edge, and his reasoning powers have been sanctified in the crucible of prayer and supplication. He is in tune with heaven, and thus can receive insight and direction. All of the Scripture to which he has subjected his mind will now be accessible to his reasoning powers. He will be able to integrate the truth of Scripture with circumstance, and associate key events with the will of the Lord.

Looking at it from another point of this, Jesus is among the assembly, for it has been convened in His name. He had promised them He would be in such gatherings: “For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them ” (Matt 18:20). He is at this gathering, not as an Observer, but as the Director and Revealer. Speaking through Peter, the Head of the body will address the body through one of its premier members. He will lead them in the fulfillment of what has already been determined in heaven.

THE NUMBER OF NAMES

“ . . . the number of names together . . . ” Other versions read, “a group numbering,” NASB “a gathering of ,” NIV “together the crowd,” NRSV “now the number of names that were in one place,” ESV “people in the congregation,” NJB “the multitude also of the names at the same place was,” YLT and “the whole number of whom gathered together.” AMPLIFIED

Some of the versions do a disservice by depersonalizing the people who were gathered together. This is done by using such terms as “a group,” NASB “a gathering,” NIV and “the crowd.” NRSV The word used here (ovnoma,twn) means “the name by which a person is called; proper names.” LIDDELL-SCOTT In commenting on the significance of this word, the lexicographer Thayer writes, “By a usage chiefly Hebraistic the name is used for everything which the name covers, everything the thought or feeling of which is roused in the mind by mentioning, hearing, remembering, the name, i. e. for one's rank, authority, interests, pleasure, command, excellences, deeds, etc.” THAYER

While some may consider this an insignificant point, the Spirit is accenting the composition of this group, and not the group itself. Expressions like “the eleven,” “the women,” “Mary the mother of Jesus,” and “His brothers,” summon a body of thought into our minds. When we hear the name “Peter,” or “John,” or “James,” it brings with it all kinds of associations. These were individuals who had been touched by the Lord Jesus. Their lives had been significantly altered by their association with Him. Their primary allegiance was to Him. That is why they were gathered together. That is why they engaged in pray and supplication, rather than in mere social activities.

In the world, you can have a large crowd with only a few that are actually involved in the purpose of that crowd. But this is not the case with the gathering of which Luke is writing. These people were not only in the same place, they were all of one accord. They did not come to be entertained, but joined in continuing in prayer and supplication.

When God calls people out of the world, He does not destroy their personal identity. He rather sanctifies it. They do not lose their individuality in the group – something that often happens in worldly gatherings. When God changed the identity of a person, or altered their role and significance, He often changed their name. Abram to Abraham, Sarai to Sarah, Jacob to Israel, Simon to Cephas, Saul to Paul, etc. Thus they would be remembered primarily for what occurred to them after they became involved in the purpose and work of the Lord.

In the world, you can have a large crowd with only a few that are actually involved in the purpose of that crowd. But this is not the case with the gathering of which Luke is writing. These people were not only in the same place, they were all of one accord. They did not come to be entertained, but joined in continuing in prayer and supplication. This assembly bore little resemblance to the common church gatherings of our day.

ABOUT AN HUNDRED AND TWENTY

“ . . . were about an hundred and twenty. ” Other versions read, “about a hundred and twenty,”

NASB “about one hundred and twenty persons,” NIV “there were about a hundred and twenty people in the congregation,” NJB and “as it were, an hundred and twenty.” YLT

We do not know if this was the original number that gathered, or if the numbers had significantly increased. If the number had grown, it was doubtless owing to the disciples being regularly in the Temple, “praising and blessing God” (Lk 24:53). Perhaps some had inquired about their exuberance and, upon hearing the reason for their rejoicing and praise, had joined the number.

Above Five Hundred At Once

In recounting the post resurrection appearances of Christ, Paul mentions Christ showing Himself to a rather large gathering. “And that He was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve: after that, He was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. After that, He was seen of James; then of all the apostles” (1 Cor 15:5-7).

We do not know for sure when or where this post-resurrection appearance took place. There is a general agreement among Bible students that this is probably the appearance of Jesus in Galilee, where He had made most of His disciples. Even before He died, Jesus told the Apostles, “But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee ” (Matt 26:32). An angel told the women who came to the tomb, “And go quickly, and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and, behold, He goeth before you into Galilee ; there shall ye see Him : lo, I have told you” (Mat 28:7). Mark’s record reads, “But go your way, tell His disciples and Peter that He goeth before you into Galilee : there shall ye see Him , as He said unto you” (Mark 16:7). On their way to the disciples, Jesus Himself met the women and said, “Be not afraid: go tell My brethren that they go into Galilee , and there shall they see Me ” (Matt 28:10). While it is admittedly an assumption, it is difficult to believe that the promise that His disciples would see Him in Galilee was kept secret by “the eleven,” or the women who first heard the message confirmed, which Jesus had promised on the night of His betrayal. Notwithstanding, it is not a matter worthy of extended argumentation.

The point to be noted here is that all of these 500 people were not present at the time of our text – during the ten days when the disciples were waiting “for the promise of the Father.” It was certainly not because a great number of that five hundred had passed away, for nearly twenty-seven years later Paul said of them, “of whom the greater part remain unto the present” (1 Cor 15:6).

Now, only 24% of that original five hundred are present, continuing in one accord with prayer and supplication (assuming that number included the ones now present). We will find that there is no effort to round up the missing ones. The work of the Lord proceeds without them, with not so much as a word being said about them. Those who insist on absenting themselves from holy assemblies do not take anything away from those assemblies, as we will see. They are the ones who miss the blessing, as Thomas did when He was not present when the Lord Jesus “breathed on them, and said to them, “Receive the Holy Spirit”” (John 20:22). Be assured that God’s work is not hindered because some professing disciples refuse to be involved in it! The Lord will use the ones that are present. In this case, the three hundred and eighty missing disciples did not participate in the following.

- Hearing Peter’s exposition of the fall of Judas and the necessity of filling his vacated office (1:16-25).
- The casting of lots, used by God to make His choice of the twelfth apostle (1:26).
- Being together on the day of Pentecost when a sudden sound came from heaven like a rushing mighty wind (2:1-2).
- Being filled with the Holy Spirit and speaking in other languages as the Spirit gave them utterance (2:3-4).

- The gathering of the multitude at the report of these happenings (2:5-13).
- The inaugural address of Peter, in which an interpretation of the death and resurrection of Christ was expounded (2:11-36).
- The conviction, response, and baptism of 3,000 “devout” Jews (2:37-41).

Whether or not those three hundred and eighty were included in those who “continued steadfastly in the

There are still multitudes of professing Christians of which we stand in doubt. We do not know if they have really “tasted that the Lord is gracious.” We do not really know if their affection has been set on things above, where Jesus sits on the right hand of God. We do not know if they are giving diligence to make their “calling and election sure.” or if they are really “strangers and pilgrims” in the world

Apostles doctrine,” witnessing the “many signs and wonders” that “were done by the apostles,” we do not know. Did they finally join them when “all that believed were together,” and continued “daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favor with all the people” (2:44-47)? We simply do not know.

But that is the whole point of bringing this up. There are still multitudes of professing Christians of which we stand in doubt. We do not know if they have really “tasted that the Lord is gracious” (1 Pet 2:3). We do not really know if their affection has been set on things above, where Jesus sits on the right hand of God (Col 3:1-2). We do not know if they are giving diligence to make their “calling and election sure” (2 Pet 1:10), or if they are really “strangers and pilgrims” in the world (1 Pet 2:11). It is not clear whether or not they are fighting “the good fight of faith,” and seeking to “lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). When we think of them it is not clear if they are seeking “a better country” or a “continuing city” (Heb 11:14; 13:14). Like the five hundred, they have seen something, but it is not bearing acceptable fruit in their lives. Alas, we must say of them what Paul said of the Galatian church: “I stand in doubt of you” (Gal 4:20). When we consider their manners, we stand in fear, like Paul did of the Corinthians: “But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtlety, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ” (2 Cor 11:3).

I would like to be able to say this applies to only a few professing believers, and represents the exception rather than the rule. However, as with the five hundred, it appears to be the majority (in their case 76%), rather than the minority. It is a sad consideration, but one that we must ponder!

THE SCRIPTURE MUST BE FULFILLED

“16 Men and brethren, this scripture must needs have been fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.”

Now Peter will surface as a leader, fulfilling the name that Jesus gave Him – “Cephas. Which is by interpretation, A stone” (John 1:42). The meaning of “stone” (from the Greek word Πετρος) is “a rock, a ledge or cliff.” THAYER Of the word Robertson says, “In the ancient Greek petra was used for a massive ledge of rock like Stone Mountain, while petros was a detached fragment of the ledge, though itself large. This distinction may exist in Matthew 16:17-18, except that Jesus probably used Aramaic which would not have such a distinction,” ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

Some have said that “Cephas,” or “Peter,” meant “pebble,” while “Rock” (as in Matthew 16:18) means boulder. This is not so, even though Peter was, from one point of view, small and meaningless when compared to Jesus Himself. Jesus did not, however, give Simon a new name that compared him with the Lord. Peter did not have to be renamed to see that there really was no comparison between his natural self and the Lord Jesus (i.e. Luke 5:8). The point of the name is that Peter would be noted for strength, stability, and stamina. He would be made into the kind of man that could not be moved too and fro by circumstances. He would speak words that were foundational – words men could act upon in full confidence of being advantaged by them. He would be of the same spiritual substance as Christ, but not in the same measure.

Now, behold how Peter speaks. It will be as a great stone. His words will be firm, stable, and sure. There will be no shifting sand in them, or stubble that is easily consumed. He will ask no questions. He will make no inquiries. He will not put forth various alternatives. He will not voice a mere opinion. He will not make a casual observation.

MEN AND BRETHREN

“Men and brethren . . .” Other versions read, “Brothers,” NASB “Friends,” NRSV and “My brothers.” BBE

This expression is used eleven times in the book of Acts (1:16; 2:29,37; 13:15,26,38; 15:7,13; 23:1,6; 28:17). In all of the instances, Jews are involved. Peter uses these words to speak to Jews, both converted and unconverted (1:16; 2:29; 15:7). Paul used them when speaking to Jews (13:26,38; 23:1,6; 28:17). When certain Jews were convicted of sin on the day of Pentecost, they used these words to inquire what they ought to do (2:37). In Antioch of Pisidia, the ruler of the synagogue used them when asking Paul and those with him if they had anything to say (13:15). James used them when addressing the conference in Antioch concerning the Gentiles (15:13).

Even though, strictly speaking, the New Covenant had not yet been formally introduced, Peter and the rest of the disciples had already been introduced to its nature. Jesus had spent over three years preaching “the Kingdom of God” among them, and forty days delivering concentrated teaching on the matter.

Some have imagined that Peter was actually speaking only to the men, excluding the women. The use of this expression does not require such a narrow interpretation. Peter surely did not address only the men on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:29). When Paul addressed the synagogue in Antioch using this expression, he added that he was speaking to “children of the stock of Abraham” (Acts 13:26). Paul referred to all believers as “brethren” (Rom 8:29; 12:1; 1 Thess 5:26). John referred to the love of saints as the love of “brethren” (1 John 3:14,16).

There is a spiritual rationale behind the use of “brethren.” joined to with Jesus than of those who wear His name. Therefore Jesus is called “the firstborn among many brethren” (Rom 8:11), and is said to not be shamed “to call them brethren” (Heb 2:11). He is said to refer to believers as “My brethren” (Heb 2:12). His incarnation is described as Him being “made like unto His brethren” (Heb 2:17). All saints are addressed as “holy brethren” (Heb 3:1). However, strictly speaking, they are “brethren” among themselves openly because of their identity with the Lord Jesus Christ.

The expression “men and brethren” is to be understood as a way of saying “everyone,” or “all of you.” There is no sound reasoning that can support the notion that “men and brethren” excluded the women here, but included them in Acts 2:29). Specially, the word “brethren” included both men and women, perceiving them as they are, in truth, related to the Lord Jesus – and in Him, there is “neither male more female” (Gal 3:28). I cannot conceive of spending time joined in one accord with the saints, only to rise and address an assembly choosing to speak only to the men. Those who think in such a manner have surely not spent much time in the presence of the Lord. The marvelous effects of His glory dissolves human distinctions. It does not solidify them.

THIS SCRIPTURE MUST BE FULFILLED

“ . . . this scripture must needs have been fulfilled . . .” Other versions read, “ had to be fulfilled,” NKJV “the Scripture should be fulfilled , ASV “the word of God had to be put into effect ,” BBE “ it was necessary that the scripture should have been fulfilled,” DARBY “ the passage of scripture had to be fulfilled,” NJB “it behoved this Writing that it be fulfilled,” YLT “it was necessary for the Scriptures to come true ,” LIVING and “the Scripture . . . was bound to come true .” PHILLIPS

While pouring out prayers and supplications to God, the thoughts of Peter have included a contemplation of the Word of God. A particular text has come into his mind, and he has considered it while consciously in the presence of the Almighty. He is not thinking as an academic student, but as a disciple of Christ. His primary interest is not the obtainment of information, but the fulfilling of the Word of God.

Peter does not assume that the Word of God will be fulfilled independently of their involvement. He knows that is not the way the Lord works. Even though, strictly speaking, the New Covenant had not yet been formally introduced, Peter and the rest of the disciples had already been introduced to its nature . Jesus had spent over three years preaching “the Kingdom of God” among them, and forty days delivering concentrated teaching on the matter.

Jesus taught a Kingdom that was to be sought – “But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness” (Mat 6:33). Once seen, Jesus said there were even men who “have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake ” (Matt 19:12). Others were described as leaving “house, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake ” (Luke 18:29). Perceiving that this was a kingdom of involvement, men would “press” into it (Lk 16:16), and “seize it by force [as a precious prize—a share in the heavenly kingdom is sought with most ardent zeal and intense exertion]” (Matt 11:12, AMPLIFIED That is precisely what we are seeing in this text – men seizing the Kingdom, taking hold of it as something to be sought with great zeal. There is no other way to account for Peter’s opening words: “The Scriptures must needs be fulfilled!”

Peter is not speaking of something that has already been fully accomplished. He is rather referring to something that remains to be done. His great heart having been sensitized by the presence of the Lord, he perceives that this is something in which the people in that very room must involve themselves. There is no doubt in my mind but that he recalled that dreadful night in the garden, when Jesus was arrested, and Peter himself drew his sword and cut off the right ear of Malchus, servant of the high priest. It was at that time that Jesus articulated the manner of the kingdom: “Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword. Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels? But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled , that thus it must be?” (Mat 26:54). Jesus knew that at that time He was in the center of God’s determined will. The Scriptures were going to be fulfilled, and nothing must interfere with that happening.

Peter now stands in a similar position. They are the threshold of receiving “power from on high,” but something remains to be done. There is a Scripture – a prophecy – pertaining to the very situation in which they find themselves, that “must be fulfilled” – a Divine utterance of purpose that God has placed within their reach. They have been cultured for this occasion and all that follows it. This is something that must be done before they are “endued with power from on high.”

Perhaps Peter recalled that when the virgin Mary was visited by Gabriel and given the announcement of being chosen to bear the Son of God: “Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet” (Matt 1:22). When Jesus sent His disciples to get a “colt” on which He could ride triumphantly into Jerusalem, it was “that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet” (Matt 21:4). When He was arrested in the garden, He told those who came to take Him that they could never arrest Him during His ministry. Now, however, they were able to do so. Matthew then adds, “But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled” (Matt 26:56).

Peter knew that if they did not fulfill the Scriptures, they would be excluded from the things now determined to be done, and someone else would do them. He was, in a sense, speaking like Mordecai did to Esther. Taking her life in her hands, Esther was to go before the king and seek the deliverance of her people from the ruthless designs of Haman. “For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place ; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this ?” (Esther 4:14).

Through the Spirit Peter knew they had come to the Kingdom for such a time as this – a time when the Scripture was to be fulfilled. He will therefore lead the people into that holy involvement.

An Application

Peter now stands in a similar position. They are the threshold of receiving “power from on high,” but something remains to be done. There is a Scripture – a prophecy – pertaining to the very situation in which they find themselves, that “must be fulfilled” – a Divine utterance of purpose that God has placed within their reach.

Here is an area in which there is a near-total lack of consciousness in the modern church. Christianity has been so inundated with “the flesh” that scarcely a soul can think in this manner. To begin with, there is not an adequate grasp of the text of Scripture, which is essential to thinking of the necessity of it being fulfilled. Allow me to briefly develop this thought, for I am persuaded it is a critical one.

- When professing members of the church are not acquainted with the Lord’s Person and ways, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “for they shall all know Me” (Jer 31:34).
- When professed believers are not joyfully obtaining what the Lord has provided in Christ, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation” (Isa 12:3).
- When “Christians” and disobedient, recalcitrant, and wayward in their manners, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “And I will put My Spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:27).
- If those who say they are Christ’s yield to the flesh, and do not subdue it, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts” (Gal 5:24).
- When church members do not understand the things of God, and are not able to speak of them, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly” (Isa 32:4).
- If those who say they are following Christ do not recognize Him or follow wherever He leads, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me” (John 10:27).
- If a professing “Christian” is easily led astray, and is prone to follow those with a strange message, how will the Scripture be fulfilled? “And when He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him: for they know His voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers” (John 10:4-5).

While we are not involved in the specific kind of work Peter will mention, we are in the same Kingdom. We are to have the same interest in the Scriptures being fulfilled. If there is a text that is within our reach, we must extend ourselves to fulfill it. That is the kind of reasoning Paul put forth to the Corinthians. “Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty” (2 Cor 6:14-18).

In view of these pivotal considerations, what can be said of those who cast doubt upon the Scriptures, telling us it contains flaws, omissions, or additions? What is the possible source of such allegations? Will the God of heaven, who speaks so firmly about our reliance upon His word, move men to cast the shroud of doubt upon it?

May you personally have a renewed and sustained interest in seeing the Scriptures fulfilled through your manner of life, direction of thought, and involvement in the will of the Lord.

WHICH THE HOLY SPIRIT SPAKE

“ . . . which the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David spake . . .” Other versions read, “ which the Holy Spirit spoke long ago through the mouth of David ,” NASB “which the Holy Spirit foretold by the mouth of David,” NIV “in which the Holy Spirit, speaking through David ,” NJB “The Holy Spirit spoke ahead of time through David’s lips,” IE “which the Holy Spirit uttered by the lips of David ,” WEYMOUTH and “the Holy Spirit spoke long ago through the voice of David .” ISV

The manner in which Peter refers to Scripture is most arresting. Scripture is writing – which is what the word “Scripture” means. It is the “Scripture,” or writing, that Peter affirms must be fulfilled. There are two things to note here.

- First, the words to which Peter refers are said to have been spoken by the Holy Spirit. It is His influence that makes writing “Scripture.” That is why Paul said, “All Scripture is given by inspiration of God” (2 Tim 3:16). The inspiration factor is the Holy Spirit Himself. This is why Peter said of the prophets, “for prophecy never came by the will of man, but holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit” (2 Pet 1:21). Before men take it upon themselves to tamper with Scripture, let them first consider that these are words spoken by the Holy Spirit.

- Second, the Holy Spirit spoke through a man – a holy man: “by the mouth of David.” Well, technically, it was the pen of David – it was something he wrote. Later Peter will say, “It is written in the book of Psalms” (1:20). However, from heaven’s point of view, what a person writes is no different than what he says with his mouth. It is considered an expression that comes from his mouth.

In view of these pivotal considerations, what can be said of those who cast doubt upon the Scriptures, telling us it contains flaws, omissions, or additions? What is the possible source of such allegations? Will the God of heaven, who speaks so firmly about our reliance upon His word, move men to cast the shroud of doubt upon it? Will He seek to assist us by such words, after telling us we “live by every word of God” (Lk 4:4) – a word that applied to Scripture (Deut 8:3)? And, if His Spirit has not moved men to speak in such a critical manner about Scripture, then what is the source of such words?

How They Thought

There is a certain manner of thought revealed here. Peter, speaking for the gathering, will think in terms of Scripture. He will not reason after the manner of men. He will be guided in his thinking by what has been written in Scripture. In him a word of Solomon was fulfilled: “The preacher sought to find out acceptable words: and that which was written was upright, even words of truth” (Eccl 12:10).

WHICH WAS GUIDE

“ . . . before concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus.” Other versions read, “concerning Judas, who became a guide to those who arrested Jesus,” NKJV “concerning Judas, who served as a guide for those who arrested Jesus,” NASB “who was the leader of them that apprehended Jesus,” DOUAY “concerning Judas, who guided the Temple police to arrest Jesus,” NLT and “concerning Judas, who betrayed Jesus by guiding the mob to Him.” LIVING

You will not find the name “Judas” in the text of which Peter speaks. The texts to which the apostle alludes are as follows”

- “Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me” (Psa 41:9). Jesus confirmed this referred to Judas: “I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the scripture may be fulfilled, He that eateth bread with Me hath lifted up his heel against me” (John 13:18).

- “For it was not an enemy that reproached Me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated Me that did magnify himself against Me; then I would have hid Myself from him: But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company” (Psa 55:12-14).

All through the ministry of Jesus, none of the disciples suspected that Judas was anything but an apostle – even though Jesus knew from the beginning that he was “a devil” (John 6:70). He was the treasurer of Jesus and the twelve, described as “a thief; as keeper of the money bag,” and “used to help himself to what was I it” NIV (John 12:6). Yet, the disciples had witnessed the arrest of Jesus, and saw Judas leading them and betraying Jesus with a kiss (Luke 22:47-48). Now, in the midst of extended prayer and supplication all of this becomes clear in Peter’s mind. He, through the Spirit, correlates those events, and the present circumstances

Far better to seek to understand the Scripture (Luke 24:45; John 20:9), or know the times (1 Chron 12:32; Matt 16:3), or comprehend the good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom 12:2; Col 1:9). It is within the framework of that kind of understanding that all of the lesser questions can be seen properly – first their validity, then what can be known about them.

with Scripture.

There are a number of things people seek to understand – and are willing to extend themselves to appropriate the desired understanding. They include such things as “Who am I?” “Why I am here?” “What is my duty in life?” “What is the secret to success?” “How can I be a better person?” – and so forth. None of these are unlawful, but none of them are the preeminent thing to be known either. Far better to seek to understand the Scripture (Luke 24:45; John 20:9), or know the times (1 Chron 12:32; Matt 16:3), or comprehend the good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom 12:2; Col 1:9). It is within the framework of that kind of understanding that all of the lesser questions can be seen properly – first their validity, then what can be known about them.

Peter states that Jesus “was guide to them that took Jesus.” That is, he is the one who clarified precisely who Jesus was. Thus Judas is repeatedly referred to as “Judas . . . who also betrayed Him” (Matt 10:4; 26:25; 27:3; Mk 3:19; John 18:2,5).

Judas was aggressive in this matter of betraying Jesus – while he was yet “numbered” with the apostles. Immediately after Judas had complained about the woman who poured precious ointment upon Jesus (Matt 26:8-9; John 12:4-5), it is written that he “went unto the chief priests, and said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver Him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver. And from that time he sought opportunity to betray Him” (Mat 26:14-16). Matthew also records the manner in which Judas agreed to betray Jesus – what Peter here refers to as being “guide to them that took Jesus.” “Now he that betrayed Him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is He: hold Him fast” (Mat 26:48). Thus is described this act of treachery!

JUDAS WAS NUMBERED WITH THEM

“ 17 For he was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.”

From the standpoint of being a person, Judas is one of the great blotches on human history. For the informed, he is the epitome of contradiction, and the personification of human iniquity. Now, Peter has been illuminated concerning this former companion, and speaks with understanding concerning him.

NUMBERED WITH US

“ For he was numbered with us, . . .” Other versions read, “he was one of our number,” NASB “he was counted among us,” NIV “was one of us,” NLT and “was reckoned as one of our number.” WEYMOUTH

Judas was not like one of the multitude that simply followed Jesus Matt 4:25; 8:1; 12:15; 19:2; 20:29; 21:9; John 6:2). He was one of Christ’s disciples – one of the chosen twelve. It is written, “And when it was day, He called unto him His disciples: and of them He chose twelve , whom also He named apostles . . . and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor” (Luke 6:13-16).

The “us” of this verse is the twelve apostles, and therefore Peter will also refer to “this ministry.” Because Judas was “numbered with” them, he is included in all of the listings of the apostles representing “the twelve” before Jesus was betrayed (Matt 10:2-4; Mk 3:16-19; Lk 6:14-16). He is also referred to as “one of the twelve” (Matt 26:14,47; Mk 14:10,43; Lk 22:3,47). He is also referred to as “one of His disciples, Judas Iscariot” (John 12:4).

Thus Judas was a real apostle, filling a real office – chosen by Christ Himself. That is why he was “numbered” with the twelve. This is an honor that no man took upon himself.

OBTAINED PART OF THIS MINISTRY

“ . . . and had obtained part of this ministry.” Other versions read, “shared in this ministry,” NASB “received his portion of this ministry,” NIV “was allotted his share of this ministry,” NRSV “had his part in our work,” BBE “received a part of this service,” DARBY “was chosen to share in this ministry,” ISV and “and received [by Divine allotment] his portion of this ministry .” AMPLIFIED

Judas was, then, a legitimate apostle, and that legitimacy was not questioned by any of the other apostles. This man stands as a stirring rebuke to anyone who declares that men cannot fall away – or that someone once accepted can never be rejected.

Not only was Judas chosen by Jesus, he was given a portion of the ministry that was assigned to them. When he sent out the twelve, empowering them to do all manner of miraculous works, Judas was among them. It is written, “And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease. Now the names of the twelve apostles are these . . . and Judas Iscariot which betrayed Him” (Mat 10:2-4). Mark adds that sent them (including Judas) forth “to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast our devils” (Mk 3:13-19). Luke says, “Then He called His twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And He sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick” (Luke 9:1-2).

Thus, Judas could be described as one who preached the kingdom of God, healed the sick, and cast out demons. He truly “obtained part of this ministry.” In addition, he was the treasurer of the band – Jesus and the twelve. He “had the bag” – the money bag – having charge of “what was put therein” (John 12:6), and what dispensed from it (John 13:29).

All through Christ’s earthly tenure, none of the disciples suspected that Judas had any evil intent toward Jesus. On the very night Judas committed his act of infamy, Jesus had revealed that one of His disciples would betray Him (Matt 26:21). When Judas asked if it was him, Jesus responded “Yes, it is you” NIV (Matt 26:25). When Peter requested John to ask Jesus who the betrayer was, Jesus said, “He it is, to whom I shall give a sop, when I have dipped it. And when He had dipped the sop, He gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon” (John 13:26). Upon doing this, “Satan entered into” Judas, and Jesus said to him, “That thou doest, do quickly.” It is written of that event, “Now no man at the table knew for what intent He spake this unto him. For some of them thought, because Judas had the bag, that Jesus had said unto him, Buy those things that we have need of against the feast; or, that he should give something to the poor” (John 13:29).

Judas was, then, a legitimate apostle, and that legitimacy was not questioned by any of the other apostles. This man stands as a stirring rebuke to anyone who declares that men cannot fall away – or that someone once accepted can never be rejected. His office was authorized, and his occupancy of the same was also initiated and sanctioned by Deity. All of this was so, even though Jesus knew from the very beginning that Judas as a “devil.” Early in His ministry, when He fed the five thousand, He said “Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?” (John 6:70). The word “devil” here is not the one used for “demon” in the King James Version (– daimon). Here the word is dia,bolo,j (dee-ab-ol-os), normally applying to Satan himself – “the devil” (ex, Matt 4:1,5,8,11; 13:39, etc). This appellation is applied to Satan thirty-nine times, and here to Judas Iscariot. That is, Judas was like an incarnation of Satan, and is therefore referred to as “the son of perdition” (John 17:12).

Peter has seen that David spoke of Judas when he wrote of a “familiar” betraying the holy one – one of His own number: “Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me” (Psa 41:9). Again he wrote of Judas, “For it was not an enemy that reproached me; then I could have borne it: neither was it he that hated me that did magnify himself against me; then I would have hid myself from him: but it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company” (Psa 55:12-14). Prior to this, the disciples did not know this of Judas, but Jesus knew throughout His ministry that this was the case. Twice it is said of the Savior that he “knew who should betray Him” (John 6:64; 13:11).

Who but God could have arranged things in this manner, and carried them out with such precision? A valid position was filled by a “devil,” and thus Jesus would be betrayed by one of His own chosen disciples. This would precisely fulfill a prophecy that was given nearly eight hundred years earlier – and the Savior would be aware of the whole matter throughout His prodigious ministry! “O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!” (Rom 11:33).

Also, consider that Peter would “deny” Jesus on the night of His arrest (Matt 26:34), but he would not betray Him, nor would any other apostle! When He was arrested in the garden, all of the other apostles “fled.” As it is written, “Then all of the disciples forsook Him and fled” (Matt 26:56). But, it was only Judas who betrayed Him – which is certainly enough! Being with Jesus did not have a lasting impact upon Judas, if, indeed, it had any favorable impact at all. He was, after all, the “son of perdition”, and “a devil,” walking among those God would use to found and nurture the church.

A REVIEW OF JUDAS' END

“ 18 Now this man purchased a field with the reward of iniquity; and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out. 19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem; insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.”

With his mind illuminated, and now understanding the whole matter of Judas, Peter begins an analysis of what happened. This is heaven’s view of the matter, and that view has been vouchsafed to Peter. This was done while the disciples had been continuing in prayer and supplication (1:14), and were also continually “in the temple, praising and blessing God” (Lk 24:53).

With his mind illuminated, and now understanding the whole matter of Judas, Peter begins an analysis of what happened. This is heaven’s view of the matter, and that view has been vouchsafed to Peter.

THIS MAN PURCHASED A FIELD

“Now this man purchased a field . . .” Other versions read, “Judas bought a field,” NASB “this man acquired a field,” NIV “this man obtained a field,” ASV “got for himself a field,” BBE “This man then indeed got a field,” DARBY “he indeed hath possessed a field,” DOUAY “bought a parcel of land,” NAB “the same hath now purchased a field,” PNT and “his dishonest money was used to buy a field for his body.” IE

As men would think, Judas did not buy the field. Having betrayed the Savior for “thirty pieces of silver,” it is written that Judas “repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, Saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself” (Matt 27:3-5). The chief priests, who thought nothing of having Jesus crucified, were very particular the treasury. It is written, “And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood. and they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field , to bury strangers in” (Matt 27:7).

Yet, the money that they used never had lost its association with Judas – even though Judas had made a valiant attempt to disconnect it from himself. Here is an example of what it means to be unforgiven. The sin committed maintains its association with the one who committed it. Only God can break that association, but Judas did not qualify for forgiveness. His repentance was nothing more than “the sorrow of the world” that “worketh death” (2 Cor 7:10).

The “potter’s field” was a place where anonymous people were buried – “strangers” who were unknown, and perhaps died while they were passing through.

Now this parcel of land is associated with Judas – a sort of memorial to his wicked deed.

Some might reason that since this was all determined ahead of time (for Jesus was “the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world” –), that Judas was nothing more than a pawn in the hands of the Lord. But such reasoning is foolish, for sin is never excused in such a flippant manner . In fact, Jesus spoke to this very issue. He referred to Divine determination, and the betrayal through which it would be carried out. “The Son of man goeth as it is written of him : but woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born ” (Matt 26:24). Luke writes, “And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined : but woe unto that man by whom He is betrayed!” (Luke 22:22).

Sovereignty and Divine choice can never be cited as justification for iniquity. Nor, indeed, can the fact that Satan used a person (for Satan “entered into” Judas, John 13:27) provide an acceptable rationalization for committing sin: i.e., “the devil made me do it.”

THE REWARD OF INIQUITY

“ . . . with the reward of iniquity . . . ” Other versions read, “ wages of iniquity ,” NKJV “reward he got for his wickedness,” NASB “with the price of his wickedness ,” NIV “the reward of his evil-doing,” BBE “the wages of sin ,” MRD “the money he received for his treachery ,” NLT “the reward of unrighteousness ,” YLT “the money he got for his crime,” ISV “[money paid him as a] reward for his treachery and wickedness ,” AMPLIFIED and “the proceeds of his infamy .” PHILLIPS

Among other things, this provides us with the heavenly view of money gained by unlawful means. It is tainted, and cannot be accepted by God. Under the Law it was written, “Thou shalt not bring the hire of a whore, or the price of a dog, into the house of the LORD thy God for any vow: for even both these are abomination unto the LORD thy God” (Deut 23:18). “Dog” is a term applied to a “male prostitute,” or sodomite. NIV The fact that “the Lord your God detests them both” NIV confirms that the Law was not speaking of mere animals. The source of money makes a difference! In this case, this was money paid for sinning, for doing iniquity, for betraying the Son of God!

Matthew refers to this passage in his account of Judas returning the money to the chief priests. “Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value; and gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me” (Matt 27:9-10).

A Difficulty With Matthew's Text

The obvious difficulty with the text is that the words quoted by Matthew are not found in Jeremiah, but are actually found in Zechariah. Zechariah prophesied of this very event – the betrayal of Jesus for thirty pieces of silver. “And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver. And the LORD said unto me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD” (Zech 11:12-13).

There are a number of explanations that have been put forward for this circumstance. From an academic standpoint, none of them are satisfactory. Yet, from the standpoint of spiritual reasoning, they confirm that we do not need to have undue concern about the seeming contradiction. It is Divine intention that must be seen.

- It is affirmed that the custom of the rabbis was to consider Jeremiah the chief of the minor prophets. Therefore, his name was ascribed to the latter prophetic writings (Jeremiah through Malachi). In this case, “Jeremiah” would refer to a section of the Bible rather than to a single book. This would be similar, but not identical, to referring to the first five books of the Bible as “Moses” (Matt 8:4; 19:7; John 5:46; 7:19; Acts 3:22; Mk 10:4-7).

- Some say that Matthew referred to the spirit of several texts written in Jeremiah that refer to the “ potter,” buying a field with silver, and the evidence of the purchase (Jer 18:2; 19:1-2; 32:8-14). Matthew appears to use this kind of generalization in Matthew 2:23: “And He came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.” Mark does the same thing in giving a sort summation of the words of Malachi (Mark 1:2-3). I am personally inclined to this view.

- Still others say this was a mistake made by Matthew, where he had a sort of lapse of memory.

In the text before us, Peter is providing a kind of reasoning that strictly conforms to Divine purpose, gleans from both the spirit and text of Scripture, and mingles it all with Divine intent.

There are also those who say that the word “Jeremiah” was inserted by some scribe some time after the original writing of Matthew.

There is no need to dwell upon this matter. It is enough to observe that there is no thoroughly satisfactory academic solution. Then again, Scripture is really not written from a pedantic point of view, and we should not seek solutions in that arena.

In the text before us, Peter is providing a kind of reasoning that strictly conforms to Divine purpose, gleans from both the spirit and text of Scripture, and mingles it all with Divine intent. That is quite often the manner in which holy men handled the Word of God – and it was all done by inspiration (2 Tim 3:16; 2 Pet 1:21).

It All Came Together

All of this has come together in the mind of Peter, and therefore he is speaking with insight and remarkable precision.

FALLING HEADLONG

“ . . . and falling headlong, he burst asunder in the midst, and all his bowels gushed out.” Other versions read, “and falling headlong, he burst open in the middle and all his entrails gushed out,” NKJV “there he fell headlong, his body burst open and all his intestines spilled out,” NASB “and falling headlong, he burst open in the middle and all his bowels gushed out,” NAS and “he fell there with his face downward, and, his body bursting open, he became disemboweled.” WEYMOUTH

This is a gruesome sight, indeed, and thus it should be, for it is associated with the betray of the Son of God by one of His own disciples. But it not nearly as gruesome as the time when the “counsels of the heart” will be laid bare before an assembled universe (1 Cor 4:5).

When David prophesied of the one who would betray Jesus, the “guide” and His own “acquaintance,” he added, “Let death seize upon them, and let them go down quick into hell: for wickedness is in their dwellings, and among them” (Psa 55:12-15). That is, indeed, what took place in Judas.

The Gospel record simply tells us that Judas “went and hanged himself” (Matt 27:5). That is the sole Gospel record concerning the death of Judas. Now Peter provides some additional information. The words “falling headlong” mean that he fell head-down, landing on his face. Although the details are not provided, there have been conjectures as to how this happened. Some see this as meaning Judas tied a rope around his neck and jumped from some high place. When the weight of his body hit the rope, it broke, with Judas falling head-down to the bottom. Others feel that Judas must have hung their for a while, and finally the body fell to the ground below. However one chooses to view it, the account is intended to awaken us to the seriousness of iniquity, and the fact that, unless forgiven, it will be visited upon the person.

A Most Vivid Picture

This language provides a most vivid picture of the time when all of man's inward thoughts, inclinations, and imaginations will be made known. Every person will, so to speak, "burst asunder," and what has been hidden from mortal view will be exposed to an assembled universe. The ministry of Jesus introduced us to this reality. It is said of the Savior, "He knew what was in man" (John 2:25); "And Jesus knowing their thoughts, said" (Matt 9:4; Lk 11:17); "Jesus perceived in His spirit that they so reasoned within themselves" (Mk 2:8); and "Jesus perceived their thoughts" (Lk 5:22).

The day of judgment is also described as a time when secret thoughts and intents will be shouted from the housetop, and human intentions will be made known.

- "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment" (Eccl 11:9).

The report of Judas' death was associated with the deed he committed, and, in the minds of the people, there was no doubt a correlation of his end with his works. Here is a living example of this Scriptural saying: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after."

"For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil" (Eccl 12:14).

- "For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known" (Luke 12:2).

- "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel" (Rom 2:16).

- "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God" (1 Cor 4:5).

Thus, just as surely as Judas' body broke in two, "and all his bowels gushed out," so the counsels and imaginations of every heart will be fully exposed and known before God and every created personality. To be sure, this is an arresting consideration, just as surely as the account of Judas falling headlong calls us to alertness and sobriety.

EVERYONE KNEW!

"19 And it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem . . ." Other versions read, "Everyone in Jerusalem heard about this," NASB "And it became known to all living in Jerusalem," NIV "This became known to the residents of Jerusalem," NRSV "And this came to the knowledge of all those who were living in Jerusalem," BBE "The news of his death spread rapidly among all the people of Jerusalem," NLT "all the people who lived in Jerusalem learned about this," IE "This fact became widely known to the people of Jerusalem," WEYMOUTH and "and all the residents of Jerusalem became acquainted with the facts." AMPLIFIED

The report of Judas' death was associated with the deed he committed, and, in the minds of the people, there was no doubt a correlation of his end with his works. Here is a living example of this Scriptural saying: "Some men's sins are open beforehand, going before to judgment; and some men they follow after" (1 Tim 5:24). That is, the wicked works of some people are made known before the day of judgment, so that there is no question about what they are. In Judas' case, he had secretly arranged to betray Jesus, secretly received money for the deed, and secretly betrayed Jesus at night in a removed garden. But his deed was no longer secret, nor was the dreadful end of his life.

THE FIELD OF BLOOD

“ . . . insomuch as that field is called in their proper tongue, Aceldama, that is to say, The field of blood.” Other versions read, “the blood field,” PNT and “Blood land.” IE

The field was named “The Field of Blood” because it was purchased with blood-money – the price of Christ’s blood. This is doubtless also associated with Judas’ confession when he threw down the pieces of silver “in the Temple” – “I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood ” (Matt 27:4). His own blood was also found in this field, the result of his wicked deed of suicide, or self-murder. The field and the name of it, were like Judas’ tombstone – an epitaph to his wicked deed, for which he is suffering at this very hour.

Historically it is written, “This field, as it is reported by some, was by the appointment of the Empress Helena compassed about with four walls, in the manner of a tower, upon the top of which are seven distinct doors, like windows, by which the dead bodies of Christians are let down into it; and that it is fifty feet wide, and seventy two long: it stands not far from the valley of Himom, and is upon the south side of Mount Zion, where, as Jerome says it was showed in his time.” JOHN GILL

IT IS WRITTEN

“ 20 For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein: and his bishopric let another take.”

Peter will anchor the thinking of the brethren in Scripture. That is what will direct their thinking and confirm the necessity of the action that must now take place. Peter will not buttress his remarks by reminding them who he is – an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a chief one at that. He will not tell them that, by virtue of his placement in the body of Christ, they must listen to him. Whatever truth may be found in such conjectures, they must take their place behind the Word of the Lord.

These days, appeals to the Word of God appear to be rapidly diminishing within the professed church. There are strong solicitations for the devotion and activity of believers that are based upon humanly conceived theological persuasions, statistics, physiological concerns, religious tradition, and logic that is based upon human understanding alone. Any demand for action among the saints of God must be founded upon the Word of God. If Scripture cannot be properly presented as requiring the action, it simply cannot be bound upon the people of God. Any reasoning that is presented must have an obvious association with the Word of the Lord. It seems to me that this is plain enough to require no further justification.

LET HIS HABITATION BE DESOLATE

“For it is written in the book of Psalms, Let his habitation be desolate, and let no man dwell therein . . .” Other versions read, “For it is written in the book of Psalms: ‘Let his dwelling place be desolate, And let no one live in it ,’” NKJV “May his place be deserted; let there be no one to dwell in it ,” NASB “Let his homestead be made desolate, and let no man dwell in it,” NIV “Let his house be waste, and let no man be living in it ,” BBE “May his place be deserted; let there be no-one to dwell in it,” NIB “Reduce his encampment to ruin and leave his tent unoccupied ,” NJB and “Let his place of residence become deserted and gloomy, and let there be no one to live in it .”

AMPLIFIED

This word is taken from Psalm 69:25. and 109:8. “Let their habitation be desolate; and let none dwell in their tents” (Psa 69:25). In this particular Psalm, David was speaking about His own enemies: “Draw nigh unto my soul, and redeem it: deliver me because of mine enemies” (Psa 69:18). These enemies had caused great grief to David, for he says they caused him “reproach,” “shame,” and “dishonor” (verse 19). They had also caused reproach to break his heart. As a consequence, he was full of heaviness, and looked for someone who would take pity on him, someone who comfort him, only to find that he could find “none” (verse 20). His enemies increased his misery, giving him “gall” for his meat (or food), and “vinegar” to drink (verse 21).

Therefore David prays against his enemies – an imprecatory prayer, invoking evil upon them.

- Let their table become a snare to them (22a).
- Let what could have been for their welfare become a trap to them (22b).

Those who have a strictly contextual approach to Scripture will be unable to see Judas in the sixty-ninth Psalm – but Peter saw him there. Inspired by God, he was able handle, or rightly divide the “word of truth.” There is a spirit in Scripture as well as words – and Peter saw it.

Let their eyes be darkened so they cannot see (23a).

- Make their loins shake continually (23b).
- Let God’s indignation be poured out upon them (24a).
- Let God’s wrathful anger take hold of them (24b).
- “LET THEIR HABITATION BE DESOLATE; AND LET NONE DWELL IN THEIR TENTS” (25).
- Let God charge them with iniquity after iniquity (27a).
- Let God not allow them to come into His righteousness (27b).
- Let them be blotted out of the book of the living , and not be written with the righteous (28).

A further reason is given for such remarkable judgments: “For they persecute him whom thou hast smitten; and they talk to the grief of those whom thou hast wounded” (Psa 69:26).

Now, the Spirit has directed Peter to extract a single phrase from this Psalm, applying it to Judas. He had come against the ultimate Man, and therefore was the ultimate flesh-and-blood persecutor. His table did, in fact, become a snare to him, and he could not stand to hold the money he had received – money that ultimately was used to buy the field where he was dashed in two. What could have been of great welfare to him – the apostleship – became a snare to him – where he conducted himself as an enemy while posing as a friend. His eyes were darkened, so that he could see any way out of his dilemma, and thus hung himself. His loins did shake as he cried out to the chief priests that he had sinned in betraying “the innocent blood.” Indignation was poured out upon him, and God’s wrath took hold of him, as he had a dreadful and shameful end. Iniquity was heaped upon him, as he is now noted for this one despicable deed. There is not a single good deed for which he is noted. His name was also blotted out of the book of life, so that he was no longer associated with the Lord Jesus.

Those who have a strictly contextual approach to Scripture will be unable to see Judas in the sixty-ninth Psalm – but Peter saw him there. Inspired by God, he was able handle, or rightly divide the “word of truth” (2 Tim 2:15). There is a spirit in Scripture as well as words – and Peter saw it. There is a direction to Scripture as well as affirmations – and Peter saw it.

The habitation, or dwelling place, of Judas was left desolate. His name was blotted out, and none of his relatives could resume his role in his name – like Isaac stood in the place of his father Abraham, Jacob stood in the place of his father Isaac, and Solomon stood in the place of his father David. No such benefit was afforded to Judas.

If you are ever tempted to think that betraying Jesus, or giving the enemy a reason to speak reproachfully of Him, is not serious, remember Judas! If you are ever inclined to conduct your life in a manner that will enable the wicked to smear the name of Jesus, remember Judas!

HIS BISHOPRIC

“ . . . and his bishopric let another take.” Other versions read, “Let another take his office.” NKJV “May another take his place of leadership ,” NASB “his office let another man take,” NIV “let another take his position of overseer ,” NRSV “Let his position be taken by another,” BBE “let another take his charge ,” GENEVA “let another take his service ,” MRD “let his position be given to someone else ,” NLT “ his oversight let another take,” YLT “Let his work be given to someone else to do,” LIVING “his work let another take up ,” WEYMOUTH and “Let another take his position or overseership .” AMPLIFIED

Again, Peter resorts to the Scripture. Like a scribe that is “instructed concerning the kingdom of heaven,” NKJV he takes out of his “treasure” something that is “old” (Matt 13:52). Peter refers to Psalm 109:8 “Let his days be few; and let another take his office” (Psa 109:8). This is also an imprecatory Psalm in which David prays concerning those who have opened their mouths against him, speaking lies, and doing so “without cause” (2-3). Even though he have loved them, they had become his “adversaries” (4-5). David asks the Lord to do the following.

- Set a wicked man over them, and let Satan be at their right hand (6).
- Let them be condemned when they are judged (7a).
- Let their prayer become sin (7b).
- Let his days be few, “AND LET ANOTHER TAKE HIS OFFICE” (8).
- Let his children be fatherless, and his wife a widow (9).
- Let his children be continual vagabonds, have to beg, and get their bread from desolate places (v 10).
- Let the extortioner get all that they have(11),
- Let there be none that will extend mercy to them, or favor their fatherless children (12).
- Let their posterity be cut off, and their name blotted out of succeeding generations (13).
- Let the iniquity of both their father and mother be remembered (14).
- Let the Lord remember them and cut off the memory of them from the earth (15).

Some would see nothing but an inappropriate response of David in this Psalm. Peter saw it as a prophecy concerning Judas, and the placement of another in his apostolic office.

It ought to be noted that all of this did, in fact, happen to Judas. You may recall that Jesus once prayed for Peter (Lk 22:32). He did not for Judas. The Savior prayed for his disciples in the Garden of Gethsemane, and Judas was present with them. Yet he referred to Judas as someone he had “lost” in order that the Scriptures be fulfilled , referring to him as “the son of perdition” (John 17:12).

If you are ever tempted to think that betraying Jesus, or giving the enemy a reason to speak reproachfully of Him, is not serious, remember Judas! If you are ever inclined to conduct your life in a manner that will enable the wicked to smear the name of Jesus, remember Judas!

A Bishopric

A “bishopric” is a position of authority in which a person becomes responsible for some portion of a sovereign’s rule – in this case, one that is in some sense ruling in the behalf of Christ. Lexically the word means, “an overseer, a man charged with the duty of seeing that things to be done by others are done rightly, any curator, guardian, or superintendent,” THAYER “overseer, one who watches over the welfare of others,” FRIBERG “overseer, one who watches over the welfare of others,” LOUW-NIDA “one who watches over, an overseer, guardian.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

As this word applies to those laboring for Christ, the emphasis is not on leadership (as ordinarily conceived), but upon caring for the believers – and there is a vast difference between the two meanings. Leadership, in this case, had to do with directing the flock into green pastures and beside still waters. It is quite true that correction is often required, and even rebuke. However, the purpose for them both is to get the people to a place where they can be built up in Christ Jesus – a place where they can appropriate the things God has prepared for those who love Him (1 Cor 2:9-10).

Judas had occupied such a place – a “bishopric.” He was included among those who were sent out to release the people from dominion of the wicked one, and announce the glad tidings of the Kingdom of God (Matt 10:1-4). In his case, his office took precedence over his person. He fell but his office did not. The work to which Judas had been appointed still had to be done, and therefore the vacated position needed to be filled by “another.”

A Point to be Seen

The precise manner in which Jesus was betrayed, fulfilling the Scripture, would also allow for a foundational office that would continue AFTER the one who originally filled it was removed from it. This was not true of any other Apostolic office. No one replaced James when He was beheaded by Herod early in the history of the church (Acts 12:1-2). Nor, indeed, was a single other vacated “bishopric” filled. The bishoprics” of Peter, Andrew, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, Thaddeus, and Simon were never filled after their departure from this world . The same is true of the office of the apostle Paul.

PETER’S REASONING

Our text provides us with an excellent example of spiritual reasoning. With his capacity for thought sanctified by prayer, supplication, praise, expectant waiting, and holy recollections , Peter was able to survey the landscape of thought with discernment. He gleaned from the Scriptures, his own experience with Judas, the facts that were generally known, and His awareness of the purpose of God. These were gathered together in his heart, then passed to his mind, where they were woven together in a tapestry of holy conclusion. He was able to associate all of this with the present time, during which they were waiting for “promise of the Father” according to Christ’s own word. He perceived something that had to be done before the promised Spirit would come, enduing them with power. There is no record of Jesus telling them that this would have to be done. The manner in which this whole incident is reported to us confirms that the disciples had not given thought to the subject previously. Here is an example of the Lord directing His people through processes of sanctified thought, or “spiritual understanding.”

How sorely this kind of reasoning is needed in the church of our day. There is far too little acquaintance with Scripture and the revealed purpose of God, and a blanket of “gross darkness” has been spread over God’s “eternal purpose,” which has been revealed, and is intended to be known by the church (Eph 1:11; 3:9-11,18). The absence of this kind of thinking has opened the door for all manners of sophists to enter into the church and distribute their corrupt reasoning. We are faced with a church that cannot think correctly. That is why so many divisions exist within it. It is why sin is springing up within it in unprecedented measures. It is why men are easily seduced, deceived, and led astray.

The irony of the situation is that this happening in time when “the Sun of righteousness” has risen (Mal 4:2), and the mystery of God’s will has been revealed (Eph 1:9). Things that were formerly “NOT made known to the sons of men,” are “NOW revealed” (Eph 3:5). This is “the day of salvation” in which men can “test and approve what God’s will is – His good, pleasing and perfect will” NIV (Rom 12:2). They can even “be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). In this day it is inexcusable to have a church – any church – that remains in a state of spiritual ignorance, unable to think and reason in a godly manner. Those who have allowed such a condition to arise, and have even contributed to the condition must be held accountable for their action.

THE QUALIFICATIONS OF AN APOSTLE PLACED BEFORE THEM

“ 21 Wherefore of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us, must one be ordained to be a witness with us of his resurrection.”

Peter will not stab in the dark on this matter. He will speak with insight and with confidence. He will not think as he did when he rebuked Jesus for speaking of His death (Matt 16:22-23). He will not blurt out wrong words like he did on the mount of transfiguration (Matt 17:4-5). He will have no questions as he did when he asked Jesus about forgiving those who sinned against him (Matt 18:21-22), or when he inquired what the future held for John the beloved (John 21:21-22). Those occasions all occurred while Peter was being prepared. This event reveals a Peter that is being directed by the Lord. Although it is quite fashionable for men to compare themselves and others to the Peter prior to our text, it is more in keeping with redemption to find men who are like the Peter AFTER Jesus ascended into heaven.

OF THESE MEN

“Wherefore of these men . . .” Other versions read, “Therefore, of these men ,” NKJV “Therefore it is necessary to choose one of the men ,” NASB “It is therefore necessary that of the men ,” NIV “So one of the men ,” NRSV “For this reason, of the men,” BBE “It should therefore be, that one of these persons ,” MRD “So now we must choose another man to take Judas’s place,” NLT and “It behoveth, therefore, of the men.” YLT

Judas’ replacement must come from a certain company of people. It is understood that the people then present were the ones from which the replacement would come. There was no time to run about looking for someone. This was occurring sometime within the ten day period between Jesus’ ascension and the coming day of Pentecost. What needed to be done must be accomplished quickly, and within the framework of sound reasoning and spiritual clarity.

Briefly stated once again, a “bishopric,” or Divinely ordained office, had to be filled. It had been vacated by Judas, and yet remained valid. It had to be filled prior to the coming of the “promise of the Father.” Now, Peter will describe the kind of person that must fill the office.

ALL THE TIME

“ . . . which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us . . .” Other versions read, “ the whole time the Lord Jesus went in and out among us,” NASB “ during all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us,” NRSV “all the time in which the Lord Jesus came in and went out among us ,” DARBY “all the time that the Lord Jesus was conversant among us ,” GENEVA “the whole time that the Lord Jesus was living with us ,” NJB “has been with us constantly from our first association with the Lord,” LIVING and “during the whole time the Lord Jesus lived his life with us .” PHILLIPS

The person was not be chosen because of their natural abilities – although they no doubt did have some. Their preeminence among the brethren was not enough. They could not be new to the group of disciples, having only recently become acquainted with Jesus.

The qualification is clear. The replacement had to have been with Jesus continually, as He went in and out among men, “doing good and healing all who were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). They had to be among those who heard Jesus preach – all of the time He preached. They had to be witnesses of His works. They had to be privy to His questions and answers, His skirmishes with the scribes, Pharisees, lawyers, and sadducees. They had to be with Him in the Temple, in the synagogues, the cities, and even the deserts. The only times during which their presence was not required were those times when Jesus took the twelve aside (ex: Matt 20:17; 26:20; Mk 6:7; 9:35; 10:32), or only allowed the inner circle, Peter, James, and John (Matt 17:1; Mk 5:37), or when he taught only four of them, Peter, Andrew, James, and John (Mk 13:3).

There is a certain penalty to be paid for a lack of spiritual consistency. In this case, those who were not with Jesus throughout the entire time of His ministry – approximately three and a half years – were excluded from consideration. Even during this remarkable day of salvation, there are some people who have not followed Jesus consistently for that length of time.

THE REQUIRED PERIOD

“ 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us . . . ” Other versions read, “beginning from the baptism of John, unto the day that he was received up from us,” ASV “from the time he was baptized by John until the day he was taken from us into heaven,” NLT “from the time John started to immerse people, until the time when Jesus was carried away from us,” LIVING and “From the baptism of John at the outset until the day when He was taken up from among us.” AMPLIFIED

Specificity is one of the undeniable marks of Divine direction. Peter, being led along by the Spirit of God, does not leave it up to the people to interpret the meaning of “all the time.”

From the Baptism of John

The period that is being defined is “all the time that Jesus went in and out among us” (v 21). This definition of the period of the Lord’s ministry is described in the Gospels. His ministry was launched when He was baptized by John in Jordan (Matt 3:16-17; Mk 1:9-10; Lk 3:20-21), was led up of the Spirit to be tempted by the devil (Matt 4:1-11; Mk 1:12-13; Lk 4:1-13), began going about preaching that men should repent, for “the kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt 4:12-25; Mk 1:14-15; Lk 4:14-15), and, following His resurrection showing Himself to the disciples alive, and speaking to them of the kingdom of God (Luke 24:1-51; Acts 1:3). That entire period is referred to in the following ways.

There is no place for spiritually uninformed people in the ministry. There is no legitimate office or role within the body of Christ that does not require an exposure to and knowledge of

- “ . . . all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us” (Acts 1:21).
- “And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth” (John 1:14).
- “How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with Him” (Acts 10:38).

- “That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us)” (1 John 1:1-2).

The individual chosen for the vacated bishopric had to have been thoroughly exposed to Jesus – His person, what He taught, and what He did. It was not enough to have only a brief exposure to Him. The person must be acquainted with what prepared men for the Savior – the preaching of repentance. They must be aware of the conflict between Him and His teaching and the world. They must have an idea about His compassion, and the priority of the Kingdom of God, of which Jesus spoke. There must be no doubt about Him being alive, or having ascended into heaven, but they must have been eye witnesses of both events.

There is no place for spiritually uninformed people in the ministry. There is no legitimate office or role within the body of Christ that does not require an exposure to and knowledge of the Son of God. Having spent over fifty years in the ministry I can tell you that, within the professed “ministry” itself, the degree of fundamental ignorance concerning God, His purpose, and His great salvation in Christ Jesus is at an appalling level. Further, the more specialized the ministry, the greater the ignorance appears to be.

ONE MUST BE ORDAINED

“ . . . must one be ordained to be a witness with us of His resurrection.” Other versions read, “one of these must become a witness with us of His resurrection,” NKJV “one will have to be a witness with us of His coming back from death,” BBE “one must be appointed to serve with us as a witness to his resurrection,” NJB “Whoever is chosen will join us as a witness of Jesus' resurrection,” NLT “one of these to become with us a witness of his rising again,” YLT “one should be appointed to become a witness with us to His resurrection,” WEYMOUTH “Must be added to our number as a witness to His resurrection,” WILLIAMS , “one of these men must join with us and become a witness to testify to His resurrection,” AMPLIFIED and “This man must be an eye-witness with us to the resurrection of Jesus.” PHILLIPS

The word “ordained” is an interesting one. It comes from the Greek word gene,sqai (ghin-es-thai), from gi,nomai (ghin-om-ahee). For those with a linguistic interest in the word, it is a verb infinitive aorist middle deponent. Simply put, it speaks of the initiation, or beginning, of something, and not of its duration, completeness, or incompleteness. The word is translated in a variety of ways, each one speaking of a specific beginning, when something or someone started to be.

- “Done” (Matt 1:22) – all this was done.
- “Made” – made of the seed of David (Rom 1:3) and made unto us wisdom (1 Cor 1:30)
- “Fulfilled” (Matt 5:18) – till all be fulfilled.
- “Came to pass” (Matt 7:28) – it came to pass.
- “Arose” – there arose a great tempest (Matt 8:24).
- “Become” – become guilty before God (Rom 3:19), and – become the father of many nations (Rom 4:18).
- “Manifest” – every man’s work shall be made manifest (1 Cor 3:13).

What we have here is this: one of the hundred and twenty gathered together is going to become something he never was before – something that will begin at this meeting. A specific responsibility is going to be initiated – something for which the individual was never before responsible, and for which he had no former obligation. It was something required and known by God by God, yet put into motion by men, and sanctioned by God. Here is a wonderful example of being “workers together WITH God” (2 Cor 6:1), and of God working in men “both to will and to do” (Phil 2:13).

THEY APPOINTED TWO

“ 23 And they appointed two, Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.” Other versions read, “And they proposed two,” NKJV “And they put forward two men,” NIV “And they made selection of two,” BBE “And they presented two,” GENEVA “Having nominated two candidates ” NJB “So they nominated two men,” NLT “And they set two ,” YLT “The assembly nominated two men,” LIVING “They found two men ,” IE “And they accordingly proposed (nominated) two men,” AMPLIFIED and “Two men were put forward.” PHILLIPS

Those who labor for the Lord must be noted for their understanding of the Lord and what He has done. As I have indicated, I have personally found there is generally a great deficiency of this kind of understanding in the professed and professional ministry.

There is a wonderful circumstance to be seen here. This was not a call for volunteers, but for those who met the required criteria. The candidates had to have been with the twelve “all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us” (Acts 1:21-22). This is something that had to be known by those who were assembled together. These were not to be men who had to be brought up to speed on what Jesus “began to do and teach.” They had to have first-hand acquaintance with those things. The people (“they”) knew that Barsabas and Matthias met this criteria, and therefore “appointed” them, putting them forward as fully meeting the qualifications. There was no question about their suitability.

When religion becomes professionalized, as it has in our day, it becomes nearly impossible to distinguish people who have been with Jesus, and are acquainted with His ways. Having spent more time than I care to acknowledge in the presence of specially convened meetings of religious leaders, and conferences supposedly devoted to the cause of Christ, I can tell you that I scarcely have any idea at all concerning the relationship those people have with the Lord Jesus. What they personally know of Him, His ways, His accomplishments, His Word, and His present activity, are generally well kept secrets. The meetings of reference provide no format for the proclamation of such things, but are largely devoted to the promotion of the institutions represented. It is not that everything about these meetings is bad, or that all who attend them are to be suspected of being charlatans. However their real spiritual status is not known. The works that they represent are generally not associated with wisdom and spiritual understanding, and Christ and His accomplishments are not the subject of exposition. In such a setting, the activities of our text would be difficult, if not impossible, to carry out.

Those who labor for the Lord must be noted for their understanding of the Lord and what He has done. As I have indicated, I have personally found there is generally a great deficiency of this kind of understanding in the professed and professional ministry. If you have found otherwise, you have been most fortunate.

Remember, we are being exposed to the manner of the heavenly kingdom. We know from Isaiah’s prophecy that the government of that kingdom was placed upon the shoulders of the Lord Jesus, and that it will prosper under His administration (Isa 9:6-7). We know from Daniel’s prophecy that when Jesus returned to heaven from the completion of His mission on earth, there was given to Him “dominion, and glory, and a kingdom” (Dan 7:14). The Apostolic declaration is that “all things” have been put under Jesus’ feet, and that He has been appointed “to be head over everything for the church” NIV (Eph 1:22).

Now, what we are seeing in the book of Acts is the manner in which He governs His Kingdom –

How He works. In this particular text, He works among those who have these characteristics.

- They have been followers of Him.
- They are united together by their faith, and continue in one accord.
- They have taken His word seriously.
- They are obedient to Christ.
- They place a superior value on His promises.
- They are moved by their understanding of the Scriptures.

Having chosen two men who meet the qualifications required to fill the vacated “bishopic,” the work of this holy group is not completed. Only one of these men can be chosen, for only one office is available. Jesus did not tell them how to go about this procedure. They are having to be directed in the crucible of prayer, supplication, the words of an insightful disciple, and holy activity. The people proceed with wisdom and understanding.

CHOICE FOLLOWED BY PRAYER

“ 24 And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men, show whether of these two thou hast chosen. 25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, from which Judas by transgression fell, that he might go to his own place.”

The people have gone as far as they can. Now the Lord must make His will known to the people. This group has been in the presence of the Lord, and their souls have been tuned to heavenly frequencies. No one from the group dares to suggest which of these two men should take the bishopic from which Judas fell. They know in their hearts that is not a choice they are qualified to make. Therefore, they will lay the matter before the Lord, who alone can manage His own Kingdom.

Care must be taken to discern the manner of this prayer, for it reflects the posture of faith. This is not intended to be an official pattern of prayer. It does, however, reveal how holy people think when they are in the presence of the Lord. It also reveals how the Lord directs those who are submitted to Him.

THE LORD KNOWS THE HEARTS

“And they prayed, and said, Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men . . .” Other versions read, “And they prayed and said, “You, O Lord, who know the hearts of all,” NKJV “Then they prayed, “Lord, you know everyone's heart,” NASB “And they made prayers and said, Lord, having knowledge of the hearts of all men, BBE “And when they had prayed, they said: Thou, Lord, knowest what is in the hearts of all,” MRD “Then they all prayed for the right man to be chosen. ‘O Lord,’ they said, ‘you know every heart.’” NLT and “You, Lord, Who know all hearts (e their thoughts, passions, desires, appetites, purposes, and endeavors).” AMPLIFIED

How often a point is made of God knowing the hearts of men!

- “ . . . the LORD seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the LORD looketh on the heart ” (1 Sam 16:7).
- “ . . . every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou, even Thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men)” (1 Kgs 8:39).
- “ . . . for the LORD searcheth all hearts , and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts . . . ” (1 Chron 28:9).

- “Shall not God search this out? for He knoweth the secrets of the heart ” (Psa 44:21).
- “I the LORD search the heart, I try the reins . . . ” (Jer 17:10).
- “And God, which knoweth the hearts . . . ” (Acts 15:8).
- “ . . . I am he which searcheth the reins and hearts . . . ” (Rev 2:23).

They have gone as far as they can, and have found two men who, by human observation, meet the qualifications. However, this did not include the matter of the heart, which is known to God alone. Therefore they ask for God to make His choice known to them.

This is a sobering reality – the Lord knows the hearts of men – what they really are, how they really think, what they really desire, what they really understand. The outward qualifications for filling this bishopric was that the person had to be with Jesus all the time of His ministry, from the baptism of John until He was taken up into heaven. That, however, did not exhaust the qualifications. The heart of the person had to be pure and acceptable to God. The person could have no ignoble motives. He could not be an undiscerning or disinterested person. There must be a preeminent love for the Lord and “His Christ,” and the Kingdom of God and His righteousness must be sought first. This individual must have a genuine commitment to the Lord, be separated from the world, and be willing to leave all for Jesus. However, these are all matters of the heart, and cannot really be known by the peers of the one to be chosen. Therefore, the disciples make their appeal to the Lord, unto whom all of the heart is laid bare.

Here is something that human organization and systemization cannot discover – “the thoughts and intents of the heart ” (Heb 4:13). However, before a person can be used in the work of the Lord, the condition of the heart must be discovered – and that is something God alone can do. Further, lest men oversimplify this matter, our text makes known that this is often done through the instrumentality of holy brethren who make an appeal to God for His direction.

SHOW US

“ . . . show whether of these two thou hast chosen.” Other versions read, “show which of these two You have chosen,” NKJV “Show us which of these two You have chosen,” NASB “ make clear which of these two has been marked out by you ,” BBE “ manifest which thou hast chosen of these two,” MRD “ show us which of these men you have chosen as an apostle to replace Judas the traitor,” LIVING “ show clearly which of these two men thou hast chosen,” WILLIAMS “Show us which one of these two men You choose to be an apostle and to do this work ,” IE and “ indicate to us which one of these two You have chosen.” AMPLIFIED

Here another critical matter is made known: these disciples know who makes the real choices! Years later, Paul will further clarify the matter by writing, “But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18). That is, God and God alone determines their role or function in the body of Christ. In this case, the role is that of an “apostle,” a class that has been set “first” in the body (1 Cor 12:28).

Technically, the choice had already been made. Practically, it had to be revealed, or “shown” to the people. They knew God’s choice was the only acceptable one, and yet the matter has been cast into their lap, and they must make a decision. They have gone as far as they can, and have found two men who, by human observation, meet the qualifications. However, this did not include the matter of the heart, which is known to God alone. Therefore they ask for God to make His choice known to them. This revelation, as we will see, will be made known in a very practical way.

TAKE PART OF THE MINISTRY

“ 25 That he may take part of this ministry and apostleship, . . .” Other versions read, “to take over this apostolic ministry,” NASB “to occupy this ministry and apostleship,” NIV “to take the place in this ministry and apostleship,” NRSV “To take that position as a servant and Apostle,” BBE “to receive the lot of this service and apostleship,” DARBY “That he may take the room of this ministration and Apostleship,” GENEVA “that he should take part in this ministry and legateship ,” MRD “to take over this apostolic ministry,” NIB “to take over this ministry and apostolate,” NJB “as an apostle to replace Judas the traitor in this ministry,” NLT “to receive the share of this ministration and apostleship,” YLT and “To take the place in this ministry and receive the position of an apostle.” AMPLIFIED

The degree of specificity is most edifying to consider. Here are minds that are being influenced from heaven. These are people whose affection has been set on things above. They are seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness.

These brethren know in their hearts the way in which the Lord works. The history of their people was used to introduce them to the concept. There are positions to be filled – specific areas of responsibility that are of greater significance than the individuals who fill them. Technically, these positions do not change the individual. That is, when they are filled they do not change or sanctify the person. In such a case, a despot could fill them, being made acceptable by virtue of his position. That, however, is not how God works. We know this is the case because of Judas, who fell from his apostolic position, confirming that the position does not sanctify the person.

In the Divine workings, God prepares the position, then prepares the one that is to occupy that position. This is why Jesus chose the original twelve – to prepare them to occupy this lofty office.

Dividing By Lot

By means of the nation of Israel, God acquainted people with dividing an area by “lot.” When Israel came into Canaan, it was not every tribe for themselves, each group picking out the area of the land they preferred. Rather, the promised land was divided into lots, and distributed to each tribe. Before he died, Moses told the people, “Notwithstanding the land shall be divided by lot : according to the names of the tribes of their fathers they shall inherit. According to the lot shall the possession thereof be divided between many and few” (Num 26:56). And again, “ye shall divide the land by lot for an inheritance among the families” (Num 33:54). When they arrived in the promised land, God told Joshua, “divide thou it by lot unto the Israelites for an inheritance, as I have commanded thee” (Josh 13:6). That mandate was carried out and “ By lot was their inheritance , as the LORD commanded by the hand of Moses” (Josh 14:2). Joshua then told the people, “Behold, I have divided unto you by lot these nations that remain, to be an inheritance for your tribes, from Jordan, with all the nations that I have cut off, even unto the great sea westward” (Josh 23:4).

The Body of Christ

Similarly, the body of Christ involves various spiritual “lots” – areas of ministry through which the saints are edified and properly prepared for glory, where they will receive their full inheritance. Some of the more prominent “lots” are described in these words: “And He gave some, apostles ; and some, prophets ; and some, evangelists ; and some, pastors and teachers ” (Eph 4:11). A more extensive listing of lots include the following: “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles , secondarily prophets , thirdly teachers , after that miracles , then gifts of healings , helps, governments , diversities of tongues ” (1 Cor 12:28). Emphasizing their diversity of the “lots” , as well as the way in which they are governed, those at Corinth included, “For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom ; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy ; to another discerning of spirits ; to another divers kinds of tongues ; to another the interpretation of tongues ” (1 Cor 12:8-10).

Paul mentioned the following “lots” to the church at Rome: “Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering: or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness” (Rom 12:6-8). Peter gives a general admonition concerning these lots. “As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen” (1 Pet 4:10-11).

The Point

The point is that the various ministries within the body of Christ are not left up to the discretion of men. God places the members in the body as it has pleased Him (1 Cor 12:28). The gifts themselves are distributed and managed by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 12:4-11).

The holy conclave that is praying in Jerusalem knew this was the way the Kingdom was administered. They knew who made the choices, and how to go about finding out what they should do. Whether they knew it intuitively or by a special word, I am not sure. I am inclined to think they knew it intuitively.

The holy conclave that is praying in Jerusalem knew this was the way the Kingdom was administered. They knew who made the choices, and how to go about finding out what they should do. Whether they knew it intuitively or by a special word, I am not sure. I am inclined to think they knew it intuitively. However one may choose to view it, this occasion must be seen as quite different from the approaches used by the contemporary church.

JUDAS FELL BY TRANSGRESSION

“ . . . from which Judas by transgression fell . . .” Other versions read, “which Judas left,” NASB “from which Judas turned aside,” NIV “from which Judas fell away,” ASV “from which Judas by his sin was shut out,” BBE “from which Judas transgressing fell,” DARBY “from which Judas hath gone astray,” GENEVA “from which Judas broke away,” MRD “which Judas abandoned,” NJB “for he has deserted us,” NLT “from which Judas, by transgression, did fall,” YLT and “from which Judas fell away and went astray.” AMPLIFIED

The insight of these brethren BEFORE Pentecost and BEFORE the Spirit came as Jesus promised, is refreshing to consider. Under the leadership of Peter, not only did these brethren know what needed to be done, and how to go about it, they also knew WHY it had to be done.

Judas had filled a legitimate office, and He was chosen by Jesus to do so. Now, will sin have an effect upon his function in that office, and even his eternal destiny? Some, who are unlearned in the ways of the Lord would contend that such a thing is not possible. Wresting the Word of the Lord, they would declare that “the gifts and calling of God are without repentance” (Rom 11:29). How, then, could the chosen one fall, or be removed from the office to which he had been called? However, their thinking is too simplistic, and unbecoming for anyone who has a love for the truth. Too much is revealed for us to think like that. First, Judas was chosen with the fulfilment of the Scripture in mind, as well as to fill a valid slot in the kingdom. Jesus said of him, “While I was with them in the world, I kept them in Thy name: those that Thou gavest Me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the scripture might be fulfilled” (John 17:12).

Who is the person who will have the audacity to say that everyone affiliated with the church, or making a profession of faith, has been called with permanency in mind? What of the angels who “left their own habitation,” and have now been “reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day” (Jude 1:6). These are angels who “sinned,” and thus judgment was passed upon them – even though they occupied a legitimate “habitation.” Peter says of them, “God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment” (2 Pet 2:4). Peter further reasons on the matter, affirming that this has very much to do with how we consider our own lives. “The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished” (2 Pet 2:9).

Judas, like the fallen angels, “left” his habitation – the one into which Jesus Himself had placed him. Instead of following Jesus and remaining with Him, as He was chosen to do (Mk 3:14), he chose to side with Christ’s enemies, and even realize financial gain through the process. He was in Christ’s house, but was used for a base purpose. As it is written, “In a large house there are articles not only of gold and silver, but also of wood and clay; some are for noble purposes and some for ignoble” NIV (2 Tim 2:20). Peter was intended for noble purposes, and Judas for ignoble purposes. Notwithstanding, it was by transgression that he fell. It was the result of his own doing, and not the result of Jesus’ choice.

Sin was Judas’ undoing, and it is the same with every person who indulges iniquity.

THAT HE MIGHT GO TO HIS OWN PLACE

“ . . . that he might go to his own place.” Other versions read, “to go where he belongs,” NASB “to go to his proper place,” NJB “and gone where he belongs,” NLT and “to go [where he belonged] to his own [proper] place.” AMPLIFIED

It appears as though their thoughts became more clear as they prayed. In other words, responses were coming back to them from heaven. No one spoke of Judas in this manner prior to them continuing steadfastly in pray and supplication. Before Pentecost, and before they were “endued with power from on high,” however, they made this assessment of Judas. Now, some years after the event actually occurred, Luke, moved along by the Holy Spirit, records it for our learning, “upon whom the ends of the world are come” (1 Cor 10:11).

Precisely why did Judas “fall by transgression?” The praying brethren provide the ultimate cause: in order “that he might go to his own place!” Among other things, this confirms that our real place, or position, is not in this world! Woe to that person who conducts his life as though this world was the primary one, and his present position was the only one.

The term “his own place” indicates that the bishopric that he temporarily occupied did not really belong to him. The other apostles left this world as “apostles.” Judas did not. Note he did not fall by transgression in order that he might be removed from the apostleship, but in order that he might go “[where he belongs] to his own [proper] place.” AMPLIFIED To say the least, this is an arresting consideration!

Judas was like certain false teachers of whom Peter wrote. He likened them to “brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed” (2 Pet 2:12). Other versions read, “made to be caught and destroyed,” NKJV “born . . . to be captured and killed,” NASB and “born only to be caught and destroyed.” NIV Like Pharaoh, Judas was “raised up” as one in whom God’s power could be shown (Ex 9:16; Rom 9:17).

Admittedly, this is not a common way of thinking, but the early church was quite capable of handling this kind of thought. They were more God-conscience than the church of our day.

Ultimately, there is a place where everyone “belongs” – a final destiny! There is a place where they will fit in, and for which their present conduct is preparing them. It may be difficult to consider such things, but it is far better to do it now, taking the appropriate measures to ensure that you will be dwelling with the Lord for ever.

THEY GAVE FORTH THEIR LOTS

“ 26 And they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles. ”

Having heard the words of Peter, selected candidates for the office, and prayed for God to make known His choice, the disciples now provide a means through which the Lord can make His choice known.

THEY GAVE FORTH THEIR LOTS

“And they gave forth their lots . . .” Other versions read, “And they cast their lots,” NKJV “And they drew lots for them,” NIV “And they put it to the decision of chance ,” BBE “And they gave them lot ,” DARBY “Then they drew straws ,” LIVING “Then the apostles gave the two men lots ,” WEYMOUTH “And they drew lots [between the two] ,” AMPLIFIED and “Then t hey drew lots for these men .” PHILLIPS

On the surface, this appeared to be an action of chance. Some have likened it to drawing straws – in fact, the Living Bible translates the phrase “gave forth their lots” as “drew straws.” Others have paralleled it with throwing dice. In the simplest form, casting lots would involve writing the names on individual stones, placing the stones in a container, then drawing one of the stones out of the container. The name on that stone was the official choice. In its most complex form, it would involve each person casting their lot to write the name they chose on a stone or piece of wood. That would then be thrown into a container, and the stones would be tallied, with the majority of stones signifying the choice. The latter form is something like the voting that is common in our country.

It is generally understood that each person had one of these articles – a stone, piece of wood, or other media, that contained their name. This would be used when casting lots. That, however, does not appear to fit this scenario.

The Practice Foreshadowed

- When the land of Canaan was divided among the tribes. It was done by the casting of lots. In this case, each tribe would be represented by a stone on which their name was written. When considering a specific portion of the land, the lot would be cast, and the name of the tribe on the stone that was drawn was given the land. “And Joshua cast lots for them in Shiloh before the LORD: and there Joshua divided the land unto the children of Israel according to their divisions” (Josh 18:10).
- Among some Gentiles, this was the mode of the men determining the cause of the storm that fell on the ship in which Jonah was running away from the Lord. In this instance, the names of the possible culprits were written on some media, and the name on the media that was picked was the person charged. “And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots , that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah ” (Jonah 1:7).
- When determining who would be included in the singing for the house of the Lord, the choice was made by casting lots. Similar the case above, names of the candidates were placed on a piece of stone or wood, and the name on the article selected was given the office. “All these were under the hands of their father for song in the house of the LORD, with cymbals, psalteries, and harps, for the service of the house of God, according to the king's order to Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman. So the number of them, with their brethren that were instructed in the songs of the LORD, even all that were cunning, was two hundred fourscore and eight. And they cast lots, ward against ward, as well the small as the great, the teacher as the scholar” (1 Chr 25:6-8).

- Using the same method, under Nehemiah’s administration, it was determined that one out of every ten people would dwell in Jerusalem. Lots were cast to determine who it would be. “And the rulers of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: the rest of the people also cast lots, to bring one of ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy city, and nine parts to dwell in other cities” (Neh 11:1).

- Similarly, when Jesus was crucified, the soldiers cast lots for His garments, thereby fulfilling the Scripture. “And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots” (Matt 27:35; Lk 23:34; John 19:24; Psa 22:18).

Keep in mind that a considerable amount of effort had went into the process BEFORE the lots were cast.

- The people had prayed and made supplications to the God of heaven.
- Peter had shown the gravity of the situation by unfolding what had to be done.
- The qualifications that had to be met were clearly specified.
- Men meeting the qualifications had been selected.
- The people had asked God to reveal the man whom He had chosen.

CASTING LOTS

(properly lr;G or lr;Go, goral', klh~rov, literally a pebble, used anciently for balloting; other terms occasionally thus rendered are lb,je or lb,j, che'bel, a portion, Deuteronomy 32:9; 1 Chronicles 16:18; Psalm 105:11, referring to an inheritance; and lagca>nw, to obtain by lot, Luke 1:9; John 19:24), strictly a small stone, as used in casting lots (Leviticus 16:8; Numbers 33:54; Joshua 19:1. Ezekiel 24:6; Jonah 1:7), hence also a method used to determine chances or preferences, or to decide a debate. The decision by lot was often resorted to among the Hebrews, but always with the strictest reference to the interposition of God. As to the precise manner of casting lots, we have no certain information; probably several modes were practiced. In Proverbs 16:33 we read that "the lot," i.e., pebble, "is cast into the lap," properly into the bosom of an urn or vase. It does not appear that the lap or bosom of a garment worn by a person was ever used to receive lots. McCLINTOK and STRONG’S

Thus, from one point of view, this was not a decision thrown, as it were, into the wind.

Solomon provided some insight into the matter of casting lots, showing that this was a means by which God reveals His own choices. “The lot is cast into the lap; but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD” (Prov 16:33). Other versions read, “But its every decision is of the Lord,” NKJV “but the decision is the Lord’s alone,” NRSV “but the decision is wholly of the Lord,” RSV “but the LORD determines how they fall,” NLT “And from Jehovah is all its judgment,” YLT “but it is the Lord who controls the decision,” LIVING and “but the decision is wholly of the Lord [even the events that seem accidental are really ordered by Him]” AMPLIFIED

This was, then, an act of faith. It was preceded by doing everything possible to men, then leaving the matter in the hands of the Lord. In a sense, this was something like casting all your care upon the Lord. As it is written, “Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for

Remember, this is being written over thirty years later, as Luke was led by the Spirit.

Matthias was, then, the God-ordained person to fill the bishopric vacated by Judas. They had asked for God to reveal His choice, and He did.

you” (1 Pet 5:7). That too is preceded by doing what we can: “Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that He may exalt you in due time:” (1 Pet 5:6). The verse beginning “casting all your care,” is the last part of the sentence commencing in the previous verse.

THE LOT FELL ON MATTHIAS

“ . . . and the lot fell upon Matthias . . .” Other versions read, “and the decision was given for Matthias,” DARBY “and it came upon Matthias,” MRD “and as the lot fell to Matthias ,” NJB “and in this way Matthias was chosen ,” NLT and “Then the apostles gave the two men lots. The lots showed that Matthias was the one .” IE

Thus God, working through their casting of lots, revealed His choice was Matthias. All of the souls present were in the proper frame of spirit, and there were no dissenting voices. I should not doubt that, if there were lots for everyone present, they were all cast for Matthias. They were, after all, in “one accord.” Voting, as we know it, generally assumes different preferences. In this case, God could very well have directed every participant, thereby controlling the decision.

HE WAS NUMBERED WITH THE ELEVEN

“ . . . and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.” Other versions read, “so he was added to the eleven apostles,” NASB “and he was by a common consent counted with the eleven Apostles,” GENEVA “and he was numbered with the eleven legates,” MRD “he was listed as one of the twelve apostles,” NJB “and became an apostle with the other eleven,” NLT “and became an apostle with the other eleven,” LIVING “So, he became an apostle like the other eleven,” IE “and he was added to and counted with the eleven apostles (special messengers),” AMPLIFIED and “and thereafter he was considered equally an apostle with the eleven.” PHILLIPS

Remember, this is being written over thirty years later, as Luke was led by the Spirit. Matthias was, then, the God-ordained person to fill the bishopric vacated by Judas. They had asked for God to reveal His choice, and He did.

Additionally, the people recognized that this was God’s choice and immediately acclimated themselves to it, numbering Matthias with the eleven. Now, when we read of “the twelve” (Acts 6:2), the number includes Matthias. When we read of “the apostles,” Matthias is now among them (Acts 2:37,42,43; 4:33,25,26,37; 5:2,18,34,40; 6:6; 8:1,15,18; 9:27; 11:1; 14:14; 15:2,4,6,22,23,33; 16:4).

Thus everything is ready for the “promise of the Father” to be received, and for the disciples to be “endued with power from on high.” The preparatory things that needed to be done have been accomplished. The stage is set, and the curtain is about to be lifted on “the day of salvation” and the “accepted time.”

CONCLUSION

Thus Luke has provided us with the essential activities that took place during the ten days between Christ’s ascension and the coming day of Pentecost. The minds of all of the disciples have been properly focused, and therefore they have all been in one accord, joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. Both men and women have joined together in the activities: praising God, praying, hearing Peter, and choosing Matthias. There is not the slightest hint that anyone present was excluded, for that would render the phrase “with one accord” meaningless. There is no point to being of one accord if that accord is not in some way expressed. That is precisely why Paul wrote, “That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Rom 15:6). And again, “Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).

Now they are ready for “the promise of the Father” (Acts 1:4), and to be “endued with power from our high” (Lk 24:49). They are ready to receive, ready to become Christ’s witnesses, and ready to be empowered to preach the Gospel, “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47), then in “in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8).

This account has taught us that those who are used by God must have adequate preparation. They must be sanctified by being in the presence of the Lord. They must also address any unfinished business that remains. This is all involved in being “prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

It has also taught us that the government of the kingdom is really upon Christ’s shoulders, and that the ultimate choices are made by God, not man. Jesus is the One who is building His church. His brethren are involved, but are strictly under His administration. Blessed is the person who knows, comprehends, and acquiesces to this.

This account reveals the details of Divine thought, and the extent of human involvement in God’s eternal purpose. All of this takes place in an environment of willing submission and discernment. It is driven by faith and accompanied by hope. This is how the Lord works. It reveals how faith responds. It confirms how the will of the Lord is sought, and how the will of the Lord can, in fact, be known.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #5

THE DAY OF PENTECOST FULLY COME

“ 2:1 And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. 2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. 3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. 4 And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. ” (Acts 2:1-4)

INTRODUCTION

There had been many Pentecosts celebrated in Jerusalem – but never one like the one about to take place. The “promise of the Father” of which Jesus had spoken would be fulfilled. The disciples would “endued with power from on high,” just as Jesus had said. The Holy Spirit would come, sent forth by Jesus from the Father – and it would be with extraordinary accompaniments that the disciples had never before experienced. The nature of these accompaniments would confirm that something of significant proportions had taken place in heaven – something that allowed for the grace of God to be poured forth in unprecedented measures.

Many of the things that would take place were formerly associated with curses, but now they would be the signs of blessing. All of this would take place while the disciples “were all with one accord in one place.” They would be waiting as Jesus had instructed them, and now the blessing for which they were waiting would begin to take place. This would be a new day!

It is a principle of spiritual life that those who wait upon the Lord are in a most excellent position – in our text, a receiving position. A waiting people grow stronger, their spiritual senses being honed to a fine edge, and their spiritual stamina increasing, enabling them to endure. As it is written, “He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the

CONTENTS

- PENTECOST FULLY COME (2:1a)
- WITH ONE ACCORD IN ONE PLACE (2:1b)
- A SOUND FROM HEAVEN (2:2)
- CLOVEN TONGUES OF FIRE (2:3)
- THEY WERE ALL FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT (2:4a)
- THE SPIRIT GIVES THEM UTTERANCE (2:4b).
- CONCLUSION

youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint” (Isa 40:29-31). This promise is being fulfilled in our text.

THE PRINCIPLE OF PROMISE

As we approach this text, it is important that we see, what I will call, the principle of promise. By this I mean that being motivated by a promise is more powerful than be prompted by Law, or a commandment . It is true that, from one point of view, Jesus had commanded His disciples to stay in Jerusalem, and not depart from it: “tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem” (Luke 24:49). Luke states that Jesus “commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem” (Acts 1:4). From one point of view, that should be enough, for “the commandment of the LORD is pure, enlightening the eyes” (Psa 19:8). No follower of Christ would object to having a word than this.

However, the Lord adds certain promises to this commandment, thereby adding more incentive to the believers. In this, the nature of the New Covenant is marvelously confirmed. How they must have pondered those precious promises!

- “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things , and bring all things to your remembrance , whatsoever I have said unto you ” (John 14:26).

- “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father , even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me: and ye also shall bear witness , because ye have been with Me from the beginning” (John 15:26-27).

- “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth : for He shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come ” (John 16:13).

- “He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you . All things that the Father hath are Mine: therefore said I, that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you” (John 16:14-15).

- “And in that day ye shall ask Me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name, He will give it you . Hitherto have ye asked nothing in My name: ask, and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full” (John 16:24).

“And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you : but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high ” (Luke 24:49).

- “. . . wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of Me . . . ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence” (Acts 1:4-5).

- “But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8).

The promises are addressed to faith, and faith has the ability to reach forward and take hold of them. Thus, faith moved these disciples to remain in Jerusalem, address immediate Kingdom concerns, and wait expectantly for the fulfillment of the promises delivered to them.

THE RELEVANCE OF THIS

There has not been unanimity among professed believers concerning the events that took place on the day of Pentecost. Some have viewed the involvement in the fulfillment of the promise as confined to the twelve apostles. Others have taken the position that the events of the day of Pentecost were intended to be duplicated throughout the remaining history of the church. There is, however, another view of these things that is, in my judgment, more in harmony with revealed Divine objectives.

What we have in the book of Acts is the beginning of a new era – “the day of salvation” and “the accepted time” (2 Cor 6:2). It is the time of the promised “new covenant” in which men would be changed by the Spirit of God (2 Cor 3:18). This would be accomplished BY beholding the “glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ” – the glorified Christ (2 Cor 4:6). A marvelous accord with the Law of God would be wrought by it being written in their hearts of the people, and “put” into their minds (Heb 8:10; 10:16). This would lead to them thinking like God.

All of the promises of a Messiah and the covenant He would implement were applicable to this period of time – “the day of salvation,” when men would actually be “reconciled to God” (Rom 5:10), be “justified from all things” (Acts 13:39), and become “a new creation” NKJV in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 5:17).

None of these promises focused on any individual other than Jesus Christ. None of these promises were presented as being applicable to a certain group of people within the body of the ones made “accepted in the Beloved”

None of these promises focused on any individual other than Jesus Christ. None of these promises were presented as being applicable to a certain group of people within the body of the ones made “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6). When doctrines are contrived that represent the experiences of the second chapter of Acts as particularly and exclusively those of the twelve apostles, a fundamental error in reasoning has taken place. Unless the text clearly is limited to “the twelve,” there is no form of spiritual reasoning that can justify men creating such limitations. After the commencement of the day of Pentecost, there was a point at which “the twelve” became the focus of attention (2:14). Until that time, no such limitation is affirmed. Because we are dealing with the fulfillment of ancient prophecies, it will be well to mention some of them, confirming what I have just said. I will limit myself to the texts that speak of the affectation of the people themselves during the promised “day of salvation.” The texts referring to a solitary Savior, or Messiah, are evident, and do not require substantiation at this time. The following texts pertain to the people who will be blessed by the Messiah – the people who will enjoy the benefits of the New Covenant.

- THE PEOPLE WOULD ALL HEARKEN TO THE MESSIAH. “The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto Him ye shall hearken . . . I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put My words in His mouth; and He shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto My words which He shall speak in My name, I will require it of him” (Deu 18:15,18-19)

- THE PEOPLE WOULD BE WILLING. “Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, in the beauties of holiness from the womb of the morning: thou hast the dew of thy youth” (Psa 110:3).

- JOY AND GLADNESS OBTAINED. “And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (Isa 35:10).

- AGREEMENT. “Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the LORD shall bring again Zion” (Isa 52:8).

- THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD. “And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (Jer 31:34).

- HOLY INVOLVEMENT. “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out My spirit” (Joel 2:28-29).

- MADE NEW. “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh” (Ezek 36:26).

When declaring redemption and its glorious benefits, holy men declared the prophets had spoken of these things.

- “Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days” (Acts 3:24).

- “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come ” (Acts 26:22).

- “To Him give all the prophets witness, that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:43).

- “Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets ; as it is written” (Acts 15:15).

- “And when they had appointed him a day, there came many to him into his lodging; to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets , from morning till evening” (Acts 28:23).

MAKING A POINT

If, as some allege, the book of Acts concerns only a record of the apostles, it will have no power, and will even contradict the prophecies of the coming Savior and the New Covenant over which He would mediate.

After Acts 1:13, only Peter, James, and John are ever mentioned in the book. James is only mentioned twice, and neither reference has anything at all to do with what he did (12:,17). Most of the time John is mentioned, he is said to have been with Peter (3:1,3,4,11; 4:13,19; 8:14). Other significant people in the book of Acts include Stephen (6:5,8,9; 7:59; 8:2; 11:19; 22:20), Philip (6:5; 8:5-6, 12-13,26,29-31,34-35,37-40;21:8), Barnabas (4:36; 9:27; 11:22,25,30; 12:25; 13:1-2,7,43,46,50; 14:12,14,20; 15:2,12,22, 25,35-37,39), and Silas (15:22,27,32,34, 40; 16:19,25,29; 17:4,10, 14,15; 18:5).

Add to this the general references to all believers. (2:1,2,4,44,45; 4:32). There are also numerous references to “the disciples” (6:1,2,7; 9:1,19,25,26,38; 11:26,29; 13:52;14:20,22,28; 15:10; 18:23, 27; 19:9,30; 20:1,7; 21:16).

New Covenant life does not center in the Apostles, nor are they the subjects of the Prophets. They themselves were ministers of the New Covenant (2 Cor 3:6), declaring and expounding its benefits to the people. While there is no question about them occupying a unique position in the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:28), and possessing unique insights into the purpose of God (Eph 3:5), they themselves are not the heart of the New Covenant, nor are they the subjects of the book of Acts.

There is no sound basis for imagining that being endowed with power from on high pertained only to the apostles, or that the “promise of the Father” was for them alone. If we are going to benefit from the remarkable record before us, it must be seen as a revelation of the New Covenant itself, and not a mere display of extraordinary power or ability. The day of Pentecost that follows is noted for a proclamation of the exalted Lord Jesus, not the unique experience of His apostles. It chronicles the discretionary activity the enthroned Savior, not the heightened capabilities of His disciples.

Nothing will be done on this day that does not shine the spotlight of attention upon the risen Christ. Nothing will take place that is not immediately associated with the salvation of God as foretold by the holy prophets. The accent will not be on the apostles.

PENTECOST FULLY COME

“ 2:1a And when the day of Pentecost was fully come . . . ”

In order to appreciate the text, one must have some understanding of the prefigurements God instituted under the Law. These prefigurements, or foreshadowings, were included in, what is called, the ceremonial Law. That is, these were not the laws that were written upon the tables of stone, which were “the words of the covenant” (Ex 34:28). They were not a moral code, as ordinarily conceived, but one of ceremony or disciplined routine. It was within the framework of these God-ordained ceremonies that certain conduct was imposed upon Israel. This imposition was required for at least two reasons. First , because Israel did not have a circumcised heart. For this reason they were fundamentally rebellious and wayward (Deut 9:24). This condition necessitated particularization concerning their conduct. Second , these ceremonies contained types and shadows of the redemption that would be realized in Christ Jesus. They provided a means through which the people could become acquainted with such things as atonement, redemption, sacrifice, offering to God, and other related matters.

Of particular note was the requirement to observe three annual feasts. These were special occasions that were to be attended by all of the males of the congregation. Thus it was written, “Thrice in the year shall all your men children appear before the Lord GOD, the God of Israel. For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year” (Exodus 34:23-24). The three occasions involved feasts, which are also specified. “Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which he shall choose; in 1 the feast of unleavened bread, and in 2 the feast of weeks , and in 3 the feast of tabernacles : and they shall not appear before the LORD empty” (Deut 16:16).

THE PASSOVER. “The feast of unleavened bread” was identified with the “Passover,” and was instituted the night Israel was delivered from Egyptian bondage. On the night it was said, “And ye shall observe the feast of unleavened bread; for in this selfsame day have I brought your armies out of the land of Egypt: therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an ordinance for ever” (Exodus 12:17). It was codified under the Law, and was the first of the three annual feasts to be observed (Ex 23:15). The feast lasted seven days, and was held in commemoration of Israel’s deliverance from Egypt: “The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep. Seven days thou shalt eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, in the time of the month Abib: for in the month Abib thou camest out from Egypt” (Ex 34:18; Lev 23:6). This feast was tied to the Passover, which occurred on the fourteenth day of the month, with the feast of unleavened bread beginning on the fifteenth day (Lev 23:5-6; 2 Chron 35:17). This association is clearly made by Ezekiel the prophet: “In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days ; unleavened bread shall be eaten” (Ezek 45:21).

When Jesus dwelt among men, He observed the Passover feast, and it was associated with “the feast of unleavened bread.” As it is written, “Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover ?” (Matt 26:17). Mark 14:1 refers to “the feast of the passover, and of unleavened bread.” Mark 14:12 reminds us, “the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover.” Luke 22:1 reads, “Now the feast of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the Passover ” (Luke 22:1). This should be sufficient to establish the fact.

THE FEAST OF HARVEST. This was the second annual feast , during which the firstfruits were reaped (Ex 23:16). It is also referred to as “the feast of weeks,” because of the manner in which the time of its observance was calculated (Ex 34:22; Deut 16:10,16; 2 Chron 8:13). I will comment on this day more extensively after this introduction.

THE FEAST OF TABERNACLES. This is the third feast, and primarily referred to as “the feast of tabernacles” (Lev 23:34; Deut 16:13,16; John 7:2). It is also referred to as “the feast of ingathering” (Ex 23:16; 34:22). Nehemiah referred to it as the time during which Israel dwelt in “booths” made of branches (Neh 8:14-17; Lev 23:40-43). It also lasted seven days (Lev 23:39), and took place at “the end of the year,” when all of the crops were gathered in from the fields (Ex 23:16).

Thus, in these three feasts we have a marvelous depiction of the salvation of God.

- First, there is a sacrifice and deliverance. Just as surely as Israel had a passover lamb, so Christ is “our Passover,” having been “sacrificed for us” (1 Cor 5:7). Just as Israel was delivered from a prolonged bondage over which they had no power, so we have been delivered from this present evil world (Gal 1:4), saved from our sins (Matt 1:21), and rescued from the prince of the power of the air (Eph 2:2).

- Second, just as there was a celebration of the harvest of firstfruits – a pledge of the full harvest to come – so in Christ there has been an initial reaping of genuine fruits. This took place on the day of Pentecost, during which both the nature and the effectiveness of the sacrifice for sin was confirmed. The caliber of the spiritual grain was revealed at that time, as well as the sureness of the harvest.

- Third, there will be a final harvest in which the thorough field will be reaped, and the grain gathered into the everlasting garner.

See, it is all revealed in those three annual feasts of Israel. In them is encapsulated the whole of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus, and will be carried out to the finest detail.

THE DAY OF PENTECOST

“And when the day of Pentecost . . . ” Other Versions read, “And when the fiftieth days was come,” TNT “Seven weeks had gone by since Jesus’ death and resurrection,” LIVING “On the day of the harvest festival,” WEYMOUTH and “the actual day of Pentecost.” PHILLIPS

Under the Law, the day of Pentecost was never identified by that name. “Pentecost” is used exclusively in the New Covenant writings, and pertains to the way in which the day was calculated. The word “pentecost” means “the fiftieth day.” It is a transliteration of the Greek word, with each letter being converted to an English letter, rather than the word itself being translated. The Greek word is penthkosth/j (pen-tay-kos-tay). It is mentioned in this text. It is also mentioned in Acts 20:16: “For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost ” (Acts 20:16). It is mentioned again in First Corinthians 16:8: “But I will tarry at Ephesus until Pentecost ” (1 Cor 16:8).

There are three ways in which this day is referenced under the Law.

- The Festival of Weeks (Exodus 34:22; Deuteronomy 16:10, 16; 2 Chronicles 8:13) – because it was celebrated seven complete weeks, or fifty days, after the Passover (Leviticus 23:15, 16).
- The Festival of the Harvest (Exodus 23:16), because was a reaping of the grains that were sown during the final harvest of ingathering.
- The Day of Firstfruits (Numbers 28:26), because the first loaves made from the new grain were then offered on the altar (Leviticus 23:17) .

The time of the day of Pentecost was precisely calculated. It came after the Passover, which was a feast of seven days. Measuring from “the seventh sabbath” of that feast, Israel was to count fifty days forward. “Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number fifty days . . .” (Lev 23:16). Stated another way, they were to count seven sabbaths forward – a period of forty-nine days. “And ye shall count unto you from the morrow after the sabbath, from the day that ye brought the sheaf of the wave offering; seven sabbaths shall be complete” (Lev 23:15). On the next day – the fiftieth day – the “feast of weeks,” or the day of “Pentecost,” was observed.

The all important feature of this day was the presentation of two loaves of leavened, salted bread unto the Lord. The size of each loaf was specified: “Even unto the morrow after the seventh sabbath shall ye number fifty days; and ye shall offer a new meat offering unto the LORD. Ye shall bring out of your habitations two wave loaves of two tenth deals : they shall be of fine flour; they shall be baked with leaven; they are the firstfruits unto the LORD ” (Lev 23:17). These were to be accompanied by the burnt offerings of “seven lambs without blemish of the first year, and one young bullock, and two rams.” One “kid of the goats” was also offered “for a sin offering,” and “two lambs of the first year for a sacrifice of peace offerings” (Lev 23:18-19). The priest was then to wave these offerings before the Lord “with the two lambs.”

This was to be a festival of good cheer because of the harvest, and a day of joy. Free will offerings were also to be made to the Lord: “And thou shalt keep the feast of weeks unto the LORD thy God with a tribute of a freewill offering of thine hand , which thou shalt give unto the LORD thy God, according as the LORD thy God hath blessed thee” (Deut 16:10). There was to be a liberal spirit at this time, with special consideration being given to the strangers, the fatherless, and widows. “And thou shalt rejoice before the LORD thy God, thou, and thy son, and thy daughter, and thy manservant, and thy maidservant, and the Levite that is within thy gates, and the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow , that are among you, in the place which the LORD thy God hath chosen to place His name there” (Deut 16:11).

The day of Pentecost, then, was marked by the following.

- It was between the time of Divine deliverance and the final harvest.

It was a time when the firstfruits of the latter seed was offered to the Lord.

- All of the people enjoyed the day, including sons, daughters, manservants, maidservants, the Levites, strangers, the fatherless, and the widows – “all flesh,” so to speak.
- It was a day attended by great joy.

By instituting this day, the Lord confirmed that seed that was sown would grow and produce a harvest. He declared that what was first reaped was to be especially offered to the Lord. There was an affirmation that this day belonged to everyone, including even menservants and maidservants. It was a time when being a servant brought with it no inhibition.

Thus, the following sequence of events have taken place.

- Jesus had died been buried, and remained in the tomb for three days and three nights.
- Jesus has raised from the dead.
- Jesus has appeared to His disciples, spending forty days with them, speaking about things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.
- Jesus has ascended back into heaven.
- The disciples have joined together in prayers and supplications.
- Peter has revealed that the bishopric vacated by Judas must be filled.
- The qualifications for the replacement have been specified.
- Two qualified individuals were identified.
- Prayer is was made to God, asking that He reveal His choice.
- Lots were cast, and the lot fell on Matthias.
- Matthias is numbered with the eleven.

The stage is now set for the fulfillment of the promise.

Let no one imagine that in this day of salvation the will of God is being done independently of human involvement. This is a day when God has called the redeemed to participate in what He is doing. We will find that this is a consistent pattern throughout the book of Acts. We will find the frequent involvement of angels. However, the primary work of the Lord will be carried by those whom He recognizes as being identified with His only begotten Son.

FULLY COME

“ . . . was fully come . . . ”

The words “fully come,” while omitted from several versions (NASB, NIV, NRSV, RSV, ASV, BBE, GENEVA, NAS, NAU, NLT, PNT, TNT, IE, ISV), are integral to the text. Several versions reflect the true idea of the text. “Was now come,” ASV “was now accomplishing,” DARBY “were accomplished,” DOUAY and “was fulfilled.” NAB The Greek word translated “fully come” is sumplhrou/sqai (soom-play-rous-thai). Its lexical meaning is, “to fill completely, to complete entirely, be fulfilled of time,” THAYER and “figuratively of a span of time in God’s planning, be fulfilled, come to an end.” FRIBERG

This is language that speaks of Divine purpose and government. The will of God is inserted into time, surrounded by all manner of challenging circumstances, and an adversary as well. Time itself, which ordinarily erodes everything placed within its confines will be powerless against this purpose. The adversary, the devil himself, will use all of his subtlety to thwart the fulfillment of this purpose. Principalities and powers will attempt to frustrate it as well.

The particular day is not merely a day on the calendar of men. This is a day on the calendar of heaven – a day on which “the promise of the Father” will be sent by Jesus into the adversarial and decaying realm. It is the day Jesus had in mind when He said to His disciples, “ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence” (Acts 1:5). Will the enthroned Savior be able to fulfill what has been determined for this day? Will the purpose that has been set in motion be brought to its determined culmination?

Certain Things Had to Happen

There are certain things that had to happen before this day could be fulfilled. Many of them will be worked out “in the presence” of Christ’s enemies. They will be carried forward by the Man from heaven who has humbled Himself, coming in “the likeness of sinful flesh” (Rom 8:3), and wrapped in “weakness” and servitude (Phil 2:7). Some of the work must be accomplished while the Man from heaven is in a weakened state (2 Cor 13:4).

What had to take place before this day could “fully come?” In a grand display of Sovereignty, all of the requirements were fulfilled, thoroughly and in a timely manner. Here are some of them.

- A VIRGIN CONCEIVES. A virgin had to conceive and bring forth a Son (Isa 7:14; Matt 1:22-23).
- CALLED OUT OF EGYPT. The Holy Child must have been called out of Egypt (Hos 11:1; Matt 2:15).
- SLAUGHTER OF INNOCENTS. There must be a slaughter of the innocents, causing the mothers to weep for their children (Jer 31:15; Matt 2:17-18).
- RAISED IN NAZARETH. The Redeemer had to be raised in Nazareth (Matt 2:23).
- THE WAY PREPARED. One had to come to prepare the way for the coming of Jesus (Isa 40:3; Matt 3:3).
- LIGHT IN GALILEE. A Light had to rise in the Galilean area (Isa 9:1-2; Matt 4:12-16).
- KNOWLEDGEABLE REDEEMER. The proposed Redeemer had to know to choose the good and refuse the evil (Isa 7:15; Heb 1:9).
- HEALING. His earthly ministry must include the healing of the sick (Isa 53:4; Matt 8:17).
- PARABLES. The Messiah must have spoken to the multitudes in parables (Psa 78:2; Matt 13:35).
- FREE FROM SIN. The Savior had to have lived free from sin, so that when He was offered it was not for His own sin (Dan 9:26).
- TRIUMPHAL ENTRY. The Savior must have ridden triumphantly into Jerusalem, sitting upon a young colt, with the people praising Him (Zech 9:9; Matt 21:4-9).
- DISCIPLES SCATTERED. When arrested, His disciples had to be scattered (Zech 13:7; Matt 26:56).
- BETRAYAL. The Redeemer must be betrayed by one identified with Him (Psa 41:9; 55:12-15; Matt 26:47-48; John 17:12; Acts 1:16).
- THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER. Jesus had to be betrayed for thirty pieces of silver (Zech 11:12-13; Matt 27:9).
- WITHOUT CAUSE. When the Savior was crucified, with men there could be no just cause for His death (Psa 35:19; John 15:25).

- CASTING LOTS. When crucified, the men had to cast lots for Jesus' garments (Psa 22:18; Matt 27:35).

- I THIRST. When He died, Jesus had to have cried out "I thirst" (Psa 22:15; 69:21; John 19:28).

- NUMBERED WITH TRANSGRESSORS. When He died, Jesus had to be identified, or numbered, with transgressions (Isa 53:12; Mk 15:27-28).

- NO BONE BROKEN. When the Savior died, no bone of His body could be broken (Psa 34:20; John 19:36).

- VALIDATE NEW COVENANT. The death of the Christ must validate the New Covenant, thus bringing an end to the Old Covenant (Heb 9:16-17).

- SIN REMOVED. The sin of the world had to be taken away (John 1:29), put away (Heb 9:26), and judged in a Man (Rom 8:3).

- MADE TO BE SIN. A Man had to be "made sin for us" – to become sin incarnate (2 Cor 5:13).

- MADE A CURSE. A Man had to become a curse for us (Gal 3:13).

- SIN CONDEMNED. What the Law could not do must be done: sin had to be condemned "in the flesh" (Rom 8:3).

- BURIED WITH THE RICH. When buried, the Savior had to have been buried with the rich (Isa 53:9; Matt 27:60).

- RISE ON THIRD DAY. The Savior had to rise from the dead on the third day (Hos 6:2; Lk 9:22; Acts 10:40; 1 Cor 15:4).

- ETERNAL REDEMPTION. Eternal redemption had to be obtained (Heb 9:12).

- GOD SATISFIED. God had to be "satisfied" regarding the offering made for sin (Isa 53:11).

- PURGING. The heavenly realms had to be purged, or readied for reception of men (Heb 9:23).

- SATAN BRUISED. Satan's Head had to be bruised (Gen 3:15; Heb 2:14).

- POWERS SPOILED. Principalities and powers had to be "spoiled," or plundered (Col 2:15).

- HANDWRITING BLOTTED OUT. The handwriting of ordinances that was against us had to be blotted out (Col 2:14).

- ALL POWER GIVEN. A Man had to be invested with all power in heaven and earth, in order to bring men to glory (Dan 7:13-14; Matt 28:18; 1 Pet 3:22).

- ABOUNDING GRACE. The grace of God had to be able to abound "by one Man, Jesus Christ" (Rom 5:15).

- ONE MAN BARES SIN. The sins of the world had to be effectively laid upon one man, thereby enabling justification (Rom 5:16).

- FREE GIFT FOR ALL. The "free gift" must be able to come upon all men upon the basis of the righteousness of one Man, Jesus Christ, and be accomplished justly (Rom 5:18).

- ONE ACT OF OBEDIENCE. There must be one act of obedience whereby many can "be made righteous" (Rom 5:19).

- A JUST GOD. God must be "just" in the justifying of men (Rom 3:26).

- LIFE TAKEN UP. The Son must take up His own life again, rising from the dead (John 10:17-18).
- JESUS RECEIVED IN HEAVEN. Jesus must be received back into heaven, and the Kingdom given to Him (Dan 7:13-14).
- CHRIST GLORIFIED. Christ must have been exalted and “glorified,” in order that He might send forth the Spirit (Acts 2:33; 3:13).
- INTERCESSOR IN HEAVEN. An Intercessor had to be in place in heaven, to save to the uttermost those who come to God through Him (Isa 53:12; Heb 7:25).
- MEDIATOR IN PLACE. A Mediator had to be established in order to apply the covenant to the people (Heb 8:6; 12:24).

If these works had not taken place at the foundational level, as they did BEFORE Pentecost, nothing could have been worked together for eternal good at the individual level.

WORD FROM JERUSALEM. Everything must be ready for the word of the Lord to go out from Jerusalem (Mic 4:2; Zech 14:8; Lk 24:49)

- BISHOPRIC FILLED. The bishopric vacated by Judas must be filled by a qualified individual (Psa 109:8; Acts 1:20,25,26).
- WORLD RECONCILED. The reconciliation of the world had to have been wrought (2 Cor 5:18-20).
- LAW ENDED AS MEANS. The Law must have been ended as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4).

This is by no means a complete listing of the considerations. Here, however, are forty-seven things that had to be fulfilled BEFORE the day of Pentecost could “fully come.” If a single one of them, or any other requirement, had not taken place, the events that follow could not possibly have occurred. The day could not “fully come” until all of these things were accomplished. They were all essential in order for salvation to be declared to all men.

The Divine will had to have been satisfactorily accomplished in three realms. There could be no flaw in what was done.

- HEAVEN. There could be no discontent in heaven concerning what the Son had accomplished. In God’s assessment, sin must have been satisfactorily put away, Satan destroyed, the Law as a means to righteousness terminated, and the Savior exalted to the place of absolute preeminence.
- EARTH. On earth an effective ministry must have been accomplished in the midst of darkness, an efficacious death achieved, a confirmed resurrection accomplished, and a visible ascension into heaven completed.
- SATAN’S DOMAIN. In the world of darkness, Satan had to have been destroyed, principalities and powers spoiled, and the basis for condemning accusation removed.

Here is a marvelous example of God working “all things” “together” “for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose” NIV (Rom 8:28). If these works had not taken place at the foundational level, as they did BEFORE Pentecost, nothing could have been worked together for eternal good at the individual level.

A SANCTIFYING VIEW

It is only as this book is seen against the backdrop of Divine accomplishment that it will minister grace to the hearers. We will find the book of Acts is the chronicling of the effects of an exalted Savior. On this day He started a work that is continuing to this day.

Having been myself exposed to a suffocating legalistic approach to the book of Acts, I can testify to the refreshment that is ministered by the “fully come” view. This is the view that sees the events taking place on the day of Pentecost as having a firm and unmoveable foundation. A considerable amount of Divine activity preceded this day, when “the day of Pentecost was fully come!” It is only as this book is seen against the backdrop of Divine accomplishment that it will minister grace to the hearers. We will find the book of Acts is the chronicling of the effects of an exalted Savior. On this day He started a work that is continuing to this day. God be praised that when the day arrived, everything was ready!

THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK

As I have already indicated, the day of Pentecost occurred on the first day of the week – fifty days after the “seventh sabbath” of the Passover week (Lev 23:16). Throughout history certain have questioned the superiority of the first day of the week, choosing to honor the seventh day – the Sabbath – as the primary day for believers. Those of us who prefer the first day of the week have good reason for doing so. Consider the following.

- Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week: “Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week , . . .” (Mark 16:9).
- Jesus appeared to Mary Magdalene on the first day of the week: “Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, He appeared first to Mary Magdalene , out of whom he had cast seven devils” (Mark 16:9).
- Jesus appeared on the first day of the week to the women who came to the tomb: “In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. . . . And as they went to tell His disciples, behold, Jesus met them , saying, All hail. And they came and held Him by the feet, and worshipped Him” (Mat 28:1,9).
- Jesus appeared to Cleopas and his companion on the first of the week: “Now upon the first day of the week . . . And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs . . . And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them ” (Luke 24:1,13,15).
- Jesus appeared to the eleven and those who were with them on the first day of the week: “Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week , when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus and stood in the midst , and saith unto them, Peace be unto you” (John 20:19; Lk 24:33-36).
- One week later, again on the first day of the week, Jesus appeared to His disciples again: “And after eight days again His disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus , the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, Peace be unto you” (John 20:26).
- Pentecost was on the first day of the week, fifty days after the last Sabbath of the Passover week: (Lev 23:16).
- The disciples at Troaz gathered on the first day of the week to break bread: “And upon the first day of the week , when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight” (Acts 20:7).
- The brethren at Corinth were noted for gathering on the first day of the week: “Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come” (1 Cor 16:2).

- This is no doubt the day on which John was “in the Spirit” when on the isle of Patmos: “I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet” (Rev 1:10). Those who say John’s reference to “the Lord’s day” referred to the day Lord appeared to Him overlook that He was in the Spirit on that day BEFORE Jesus spoke to Him. This is not a strange view, but has been generally accepted throughout the ages. It is obvious that, to John, the day was a distinguished day, else there would be no significance to saying “the Lord’s day.”

The resurrection of Christ on the first day of the week gave it a special significance – as well as two of His appearances to His disciples on that day. It is therefore fitting that believers honor Him on the first day of the week. It is superior to the Sabbath day because of the events taking place on it. It also is more in harmony with the New Covenant, which is a covenant of beginnings and first things. Under the Law, rest from labor was the emphasis. Under the New Covenant, newness of life is the point.

The sabbath day of the Law is, in a firstfruits sense, fulfilled in Christ Jesus. As it is written, “For we which have believed do enter into rest . . .” (Heb 4:3). A point is made of the fact that Israel never did enter into God’s intended rest. That is, keeping the seventh day holy was really only a token of the rest to which the Lord referred. Here is how the Spirit states the case: “For if Joshua had given them rest, then He would not afterward have spoken of another day. There remains therefore a rest for the people of God. For he who has entered His rest has himself also ceased from his works as God did from His. Let us therefore be diligent to enter that rest, lest anyone fall according to the same example of disobedience” NKJV (Heb 4:11).

If it is countered that the Spirit is not speaking with the seventh-day-Sabbath in mind, then I draw attention to the fact that He was, in fact, speaking with that very day in mind. Thus, the fourth chapter of Hebrews begins, “For we which have believed do enter into rest, as he said, As I have sworn in My wrath, if they shall enter into My rest: although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. For He spake in a certain place of the seventh day on this wise, And God did rest the seventh day from all His works. And in this place again, If they shall enter into My rest. Seeing therefore it remaineth that some must enter therein, and they to whom it was first preached entered not in because of unbelief: again, He limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts” (Heb 4:4-7).

The “first day of the week” was never intended to replace the Sabbath day of the Ten Commandments. It is a day sanctified by the resurrection of Christ, not the rest of God following the creation. It is a day that marks the beginning of a new thing. The Sabbath day is initially fulfilled when we enter God’s rest by ceasing from our own works in order to justification. It is at that point that we “enter into rest” (Heb 4:3, 10). We are also to continue to “labor to enter into that rest” (Heb 4:11).

The Sabbath will be ultimately realized when we enter the glory, finally passing beyond the domain of tiring labor and the struggle to attain. It is then that we will experience the fulfilling of this word, “Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them” (Rev 14:13).

It is far beneath the noble activity of remembering a risen and exalted Christ through whom we obtain salvation, to place an accent upon the observance of the Sabbath day as specified under the Old Covenant.

While there is certainly nothing wrong with honoring the Sabbath day in remembrance of the creation, there is nothing particularly commendable about it either – at least not in view of the glorification of Jesus and the institution of the New Covenant. It is far beneath the noble activity of remembering a risen and exalted Christ through whom we obtain salvation, to place an accent upon the observance of the Sabbath day as specified under the Old Covenant.

Jesus never affirmed that He came to bind the Sabbath day upon men, or remotely suggest that it should be kept by those who are following Him. In fact, during Christ's ministry, some of the most fierce opposition He encountered pertained to what He did on the Sabbath day (Matt 12:2; Mk 2:24; 3:2; Lk 6:2; 13:14; 14:1-3; John 5:16). Although He kept the Sabbath day, regularly attending the synagogue (Lk 4:16), it must be remembered that the Sabbath day commandment did not say to assemble on that day, nor did Moses ever institute the synagogue. Jesus did affirm, "For the Son of man is Lord even of the Sabbath day" (Matt 12:8). He reminded His critics that "the priests in the temple profane the Sabbath, and are blameless" (Matt 12:5). He also said a sheep that had fallen into a pit could be lifted out of it on the Sabbath (Matt 12:11), and that it was "lawful to do well on the Sabbath days" (Matt 12:12). With the confidence of the Lord of glory He declared, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath" (Mk 2:27). By this, Jesus meant that the Sabbath was an inferior institution, being made for man, who was a higher creation. It was made on account of man, and not man on account of the Sabbath. It was further made as a day of rest from toil (Ex 20:9-10; 31:15; Deut 5:13-14).

Even though Paul was sent to the Gentile world, where, with the exception of being among the Jews, there was no extensive knowledge concerning the Sabbath day, he never provided a single word of instruction concerning keeping the Sabbath day – not so much as a syllable. In all of his epistles there is one solitary reference to "sabbaths." That word is not an admonition to keep the Sabbath day, but a warning for believers not to allow any person to judge them regarding sabbaths. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days : which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ" (Col 2:16-17). Other versions read, "or a Sabbath day." NASB/NIV This admonition must be taken seriously by every child of God.

It cannot be coincidence that the day of Pentecost occurred on the first day of the week – the day Jesus rose from the dead! It appears clear to me that the Feast of Pentecost, of the "Feast of weeks," was ordained in expectation of the arrival of the day of Pentecost in Jerusalem, following Christ's exaltation. On that day salvation was implemented.

WITH ONE ACCORD IN ONE PLACE

"1b . . . they were all with one accord in one place." Other versions read, "they were all together in one place," NASB "while they were all assembled together," MRD "they were all in one place together," NAB "they had all met together," NJB "the believers were meeting together in one place," NLT "they were all with one accord together in one place," YLT "as the believers met together that day," LIVING "they had all met in one place," WEYMOUTH "they were all meeting in one mind," WILLIAMS "they were all together in the same place," MONTGOMERY and "they were all assembled together in one place." AMPLIFIED

THEY WERE ALL

"1b . . . they were all . . ." It may seem to be bordering on insanity to ask "Who are the ALL?" Who is it that was "gathered together?" A number of people affirm it was "the twelve," and that these first few verses are all about them. This conjecture assumes that the final words of the first chapter shift the emphasis to the twelve apostles: "and he (Matthias) was numbered with the eleven apostles" (1:26) – as though after everyone cast their lots, they all went to their own abode following the outcome of the casting of lots.

This would mean that only the twelve continued tarrying in Jerusalem, obeying the word of the Lord: “tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.” That word was spoken to “the eleven . . . AND them that were with them,” included the women, Mary Magdalene.

This would mean that only the twelve continued tarrying in Jerusalem, obeying the word of the Lord: “tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). That word was spoken to “the eleven . . . AND them that were with them,” included the women, Mary Magdalene, and Cleopas and his companion (Lk 24:33). Those people, and several others, including the mother of Jesus and His four brothers, had assembled in an upper room, waiting in prayer and supplication for “the promise of the Father” (Acts 1:14). Whether it was the original number or not, those who continued “waiting” numbered one hundred and twenty at the time Peter stood up and delivered an inspired word about filling the “bishopric” vacated by Judas (Acts 1:15).

Precisely what kind of reasoning leads one to believe that when the day of Pentecost fully came, only the twelve remained? Are we to believe, for example, that “the seventy” who were empowered and sent out by Jesus were excluded from this number, as well as from the promise? Why would not the glorious unity of mind and soul that they were enjoying extend into the day of Pentecost? When did the “one accord” cease? Although they are not the final word on the matter, conservative commentators agree among themselves that the “all” of our text refers to the hundred and twenty. These include Albert Barnes, Adam Clarke, Pulpit Commentary, Matthew Henry, John Wesley, Biblical Illustrator, John Gill, John Calvin, Joseph Benson, Matthew Poole, and others. In fact, you will be hard pressed to find a reputable commentator who affirms this passage to be limited to the twelve apostles, or to present a sound case for such a notion.

I present the following reasons for concluding that “they all” include the hundred and twenty of 1:14.

- It is in harmony with the Gospel record (Luke 24).
- It reflects a better flow of the record from the first chapter.
- It serves to accent the magnificent unity that characterized the disciples following Christ’s ascension.
- There is no record of “the twelve” isolating themselves from the other disciples after Jesus ascended into heaven.
- There is no record of a cessation of the waiting of the other disciples between the ascension of Christ and the day of Pentecost.
- There is no record of “the twelve” tarrying in Jerusalem while the others ceased doing so.
- It violates no promise of Jesus, no Scriptural account, or any apostolic exposition of Scripture to see the “all” as applying to the previously mentioned one hundred and twenty.
- It is difficult to believe that the day of Pentecost was not honored by all of the waiting disciples, or that “the twelve” did so in isolation from the others.

WITH ONE ACCORD

“ . . . with one accord . . . ” A considerable number of the translations neuter the power of the text. They accent the visible gathering, without equally confirming the harmonious aspect of the gathering – i.g. “assembled together,” MRD “meeting together,” NLT and “met together.” LIVING This is another one of those cases involving a difference in manuscripts. One set of manuscripts employ the Greek word ο`μοϋμαδο.ν (hom-oth-oo-mad-on), which has a lexical meaning of “with one mind, by common consent, together, unanimously.” THAYER The other set of manuscripts only use the Greek expression παντε.ν ο`μου / (pan-tez om-ou), which has the lexical meaning of, “all, or everyone together.” THAYER This latter meaning is synonymous with the former if “together” is perceived as meaning more than a mere bodily presence – an emphasis that is not ascribed to gatherings of believers. We have already been exposed to the people of this text in the previous chapter “These all continued with one accord” (1:14). It is inconceivable that the Spirit would now mention the same group with only their bodily presence in mind.

These were people who had been going to the temple together (Lk 24:53), meeting together (Acts 1:13), praying together (Acts 1:14), listening together (Acts 1:15-22), together choosing men who were qualified to fill Judas’ place (Acts 1:23), praying together for God to reveal the man He had chosen (Acts 1:24-25), casting their lots together (Acts 1:26), and together confirming the choice of Matthias (Acts 1:26).

The whole nature of the text demands that these people be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. No view of this text must be taken that would remotely suggest anything else, for that would disrupt the intended flow of the text.

Being of “one accord” is one thing. For everyone – “all” – to be of “one accord” is something else. In reference to believers, this phrase is mentioned no less than seven times in Acts (1:14; 2:1,46; 4:24; 5:12; 8:6; 15:25). In all of these instances, it refers to the single-mindedness of the disciples. There were no divisions among them.

It ought to be noted that this is the kind of environment in which the promised blessing of the Lord will be realized. The Psalmist, having the Spirit of God, saw this with remarkable clarity for the times. “Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head, that ran down upon the beard, even Aaron’s beard: that went down to the skirts of his garments; as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountains of Zion: for there the LORD commanded the blessing, even life for evermore” (Psa 133:1-3).

It is no wonder that the church is frequently admonished concerning this matter.

- “Be of the same mind one toward another. Mind not high things, but condescend to men of low estate. Be not wise in your own conceits” (Rom 12:16).
- “Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).
- “Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you” (2 Cor 13:11).
- “Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (Eph 4:3).

Where this unity and single-mindedness is lacking, the ground of the heart and mind become hard and fallow. This is not simply an honorable goal, it is a revelation of real accord with the Lord. Where this accord does not exist someone is at enmity with God.

“Only let your conversation be as it becometh the gospel of Christ: that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel” (Phil 1:27).

- “Fulfil ye my joy, that ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind” (Phil 2:2).
- “Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing” (Phil 3:16).

- “Finally, be ye all of one mind , having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous” (1 Pet 3:8).

Where this unity and single-mindedness is lacking, the ground of the heart and mind become hard and fallow. This is not simply an honorable goal, it is a revelation of real accord with the Lord. Where this accord does not exist someone is at enmity with God.

Christ Himself is not divided. In addressing the matter of divisions in Corinth Paul wrote, “Is Christ divided?” (1Cor 1:13). What is the answer to that question, and who is there who does not know it? And, if Christ is not divided, He surely will not minister His life to those who are divided. For Him to do so would be to “deny Himself” – and He cannot do that (2 Tim 2:13).

In spite of this rather obvious reality, there are multitudes of casual church members who expect to receive the blessing of the Lord, even though they are at fundamental variance with His people. Let it be clear that this cannot be.

When prophesying of the day of salvation, the Spirit moved Isaiah to write, “Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye , when the LORD shall bring again Zion” (Isa 52:8). It is not coincidence, therefore, that the brethren in the second chapter of Acts were gathered together “in one accord.”

The Lord works toward this aim – that His children may be of “one accord.” Therefore Paul wrote, “Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to Christ Jesus : that ye may with one

I know that it all sounds a bit ridiculous. That is because it is! It is ridiculous for those who wear the name of Jesus to seek to find ways to maintain division, or to meet separately, or not to be together in one accord. It is nonsensical to think that a people who are fundamentally divided would be used by God to represent His Son, who is not divided.

mind and one mouth glorify God , even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Rom 15:5-6).

The modern church does not make enough of this. Spiritual Babylon presents a variety of approaches to Christianity that allows the individual to maintain fundamental views that are at variance with those of other believers. It allows for differing views concerning things that God has revealed – like justification, holiness, the return of Christ, the Lord’s table, and what men must do to be saved. If this environment had been in place on the day of Pentecost, the blessing would have come! Further, where it is found now, the blessing still does not come. It allows for differing views of God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit, as well as the present focus of Jesus.

IN ONE PLACE

“ . . . in one place.” Whatever one may think about gathering together, that is the kind of setting in which the New Covenant was inaugurated, and the Gospel was first preached with power and understanding. If the disciples who were gathered together when the day of Pentecost was “fully come” were suddenly transported to our day and time, one can only imagine what would have happened. For one thing, they would not have met so early. Even when they did come together someone would have suggested having cell groups – perhaps twelve, with an apostle leading each one. They surely would not have remained together for so long, and a lot of people would not be participating.

I know that it all sounds a bit ridiculous. That is because it is! It is ridiculous for those who wear the name of Jesus to seek to find ways to maintain division, or to meet separately, or not to be together in one accord. It is nonsensical to think that a people who are fundamentally divided would be used by God to represent His Son, who is not divided.

In the record to which we are now being exposed, the real God is working among His real children, and the real Jesus is ministering among them. The real will of God is being worked out, and all of it is according to God's eternal purpose and the word of His prophets..

A SOUND FROM HEAVEN

“ 2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.”

Ten days earlier, Jesus had told these disciples, “ye shall be baptized with the Holy Spirit not many days from now ” NKJV He did not give them any indication of how this would happen, or if there would be some remarkable phenomenon that would attend that baptism. Further, the prophecies about the pouring forth of the Spirit provided no details about any impersonal accompanying phenomenon.

- “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3).

- “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh ; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit” (Joel 2:28-29).

- “And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn” (Zech 12:10).

Jesus had spoken more specifically of what they were about to experience. He referred to these, and other, things when He said, “wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of Me ” (Acts 1:4). He had spoken specifically to them about this.

- “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter , that He may abide with you for ever; Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him: but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you” (John 14:16-17).

- “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name , He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26).

- “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father , even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me: and ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning” (John 15:26-27).

- “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you . And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” (John 16:7-8).

- “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come , He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you” (John 16:14).

SUDDENLY

“And suddenly . . .” All versions read the same. While they were waiting, there was a sudden intrusion. While they were tarrying something unnatural took place. It was as though something was being imposed upon them. Both time and space had to yield, for this was something superior to nature – something miraculous. The word “suddenly” means “unexpectedly, unawares,” FRIBERG “at once, immediately,” LOUW-NIDA and “of a sudden.” LIDDELL-SCOTT . This is something over which men have no power, either to purpose it or initiate it. It cannot be stopped by men or Satan. In this case, it involves heavenly beings invading, as it were, the domain of time and space. Such intrusions frequently occur in God’s dealings with men.

- A SUDDEN PREPARATION. “And Hezekiah rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly ” (2 Chron 29:36).

- SUDDEN SHAME. “Let all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed: let them return and be ashamed suddenly ” (Psa 6:10).

- SUDDEN PUNISHMENT. “But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly shall they be wounded ” (Psa 64:7).

- SUDDEN CALAMITY. “Therefore shall his calamity come suddenly; suddenly shall he be broken without remedy” (Prov 6:15).

- SUDDEN DESTRUCTION. “He, that being often reprov’d hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed , and that without remedy” (Prov 29:1).

- SUDDEN FULFILLMENT. “I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them; I did them suddenly , and they came to pass” (Isa 48:3).

- GOD’S MESSENGER APPEARS SUDDENLY. “Behold, I will send My Messenger, and He shall prepare the way before Me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to His temple , even the Messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, He shall come, saith the LORD of hosts” (Mal 3:1).

The saints of God must learn to live with THE SUDDEN FACTOR in mind. Conditions that are the result of long periods of time can be suddenly corrected, and what was taken restored. This is all involved in the phrase, “For with God nothing shall be impossible.” In fact, in this very chapter several remarkable things will happen suddenly.

SUDDENLY, A HEAVENLY HOST. “And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God . . . ” (Luke 2:13).

- JESUS APPEARS TO SAUL. “And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven ” (Acts 9:3).

- A SUDDEN EARTHQUAKE. “And suddenly there was a great earthquake , so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed” (Acts 16:26).

- CHRIST’S SUDDEN COMING. “Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrowing, or in the morning: Lest coming suddenly He find you sleeping” (Mark 13:35-36).

All of this may appear to have little or nothing to do with our text, being nothing more than an academic study. But this is not at all the case. This is describing the manner of the Kingdom, and its superiority to this world and everything in it. Heaven is not subject to the laws of this world, and often does not act in accordance with them.

With God, things that appear impossible can happen suddenly. A despot like Herod can be suddenly struck down (Acts 12:23). Sennacherib’s impressive army can be suddenly destroyed (2 Kgs 19:35). The soul can be suddenly illuminated, so that the things of God can be understood (2 Pet 1:19). Joseph can be suddenly exalted to the throne (Gen 41:39-40). Job's affliction can suddenly end (Job 42:10). Prayers can be suddenly answered (Acts 4:31). Gross sinners can be suddenly convicted (Acts 2:37; Acts 16:30). Hearts can be suddenly opened (Acts 16:14).

The saints of God must learn to live with THE SUDDEN FACTOR in mind. Conditions that are the result of long periods of time can be suddenly corrected, and what was taken restored (Joel 2:25). This is all involved in the phrase, "For with God nothing shall be impossible" (Luke 1:37). In fact, in this very chapter several remarkable things will happen suddenly.

Child of God, do not despair as you travail in prayer for matters of deep concern. It may be that in a moment everything will change, and you will become the head, and no longer be the tail (Deut 28:13). In fact, there is a day on God's calendar of purpose when a climactic change will take place. "In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed" (1 Cor 15:52). You have "received a kingdom" (Heb 12:26) that is noted for causing sudden intrusions and changes.

A SOUND FROM HEAVEN

If you are enslaved to ordinary things, and are offended by the extraordinary, you will not long remain with Jesus.

"... there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind..." Other versions read, "there came from heaven a noise like a violent, rushing wind," NASB "a sound like the blowing of a violent wind came from heaven," NIV "from heaven there came a sound like the rush of a violent wind," NRSV "a sound like the rushing of a violent wind," BBE "a sound out of heaven as of a violent impetuous blowing," DARBY "a sound from heaven, as of a rushing and mighty wind," GENEVA "there was a sound from heaven, as of a violent wind," MRD "there came from the sky a noise like a strong driving wind," NAB "there came from heaven a noise like a violent, rushing wind," NAS "there was a sound from heaven like the roaring of a mighty windstorm in the skies above them," NLT "there came a sound from heaven, as it had been the coming of a mighty wind," TNT "out of heaven a sound as a bearing violent breath," YLT "a noise from the sky. It sounded like a strong wind blowing," IE "there came from the sky a sound as of a strong rushing blast of wind," WEYMOUTH "a sound like the roaring of a mighty windstorm from heaven," ISV "there came from heaven a sound like a terrific blast of wind," WILLIAMS "from the sky a sound like the onrush of a mighty wind," MONTGOMERY and "a sound from heaven like the rushing of a violent tempest blast . AMPLIFIED

If you are enslaved to ordinary things, and are offended by the extraordinary, you will not long remain with Jesus. Now, as the disciples are waiting for the promise of the Father, and ready to keep the feast Pentecost, the sound of a rushing mighty wind from heaven is heard. Those familiar with Scripture know that before the day of Pentecost, mighty winds were associated with fear, disruption, and destruction. Such a sound was not ordinarily a comforting one, or a promise of good things to come. The day the Law was given is a case in point. That was a time when the people were kept at a distance, both by Divine mandate, and because of fear. Scripture contrasts that time with what we experience in the New Covenant. "For ye are not come unto the mount that might be touched, and that burned with fire, nor unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest [whirlwind NASB]" (Heb 12:18). The various associations made with God's "wind" are arresting to consider. Historically, they do not offer much room for hope.

- An East wind brought in locusts upon Egypt (Ex 10:13).
- When the Lord passed by Elijah, a great and strong wind rent the mountains and broke the rocks (1 Kgs 19:11).
- A great wind smote the house in which Job's children were feasting, and killed them all (Job 1:19).

- The ships of Tarshish were broken with an East wind (Psa 48:7).
- A stormy wind causes grievous disruption (Psa 107:25; 148:8).
- God's "mighty wind" is associated with destruction (Isa 11:15).
- God has provided a "hiding place from the wind" Isa 32:2).
- The wicked are carried away with God's wind (Isa 41:16; 57:13).
- God scatters His enemies with His wind (Jer 13:24; 18:17).
- There is such a thing as a "destroying wind" (Jer 51:1).
- There is a "stormy wind" that destroys (Ezek 13:11,13).
- A mighty wind threatened the lives of Christ's disciples (Matt 14:24; Mk 4:37; 6:48; Lk 8:23).
- A "boisterous" wind frightened Peter (Matt 14:30).
- A "tempestuous wind" destroyed the ship on which Paul was sailing (Acts 27:14,40-42).

How will this sound influence this gathering of disciples? Will it be destructive? Will it bring fear? Sounds to which people are not accustomed are not ordinarily the source of comfort. In fact, men have been noted to be frightened at sounds – particularly those associated with the living God (Gen 3:10; Psa 77:17; Jer 50:22; 51:54).

IT FILLED ALL THE HOUSE

" . . . and it filled all the house where they were sitting." Other versions read, "and it filled the whole house where they were sitting," NKJV "and it filled the entire house where they were sitting," "and all the house where they were was full of it," BBE "and it filled the entire house in which they were," NAB "and it filled the house where they were meeting," NLT "and it filled the whole house in which they were sitting." AMPLIFIED

This was not a sound that filled all of Jerusalem, nor was it a sound like some of those that went throughout the land of Egypt (Ex 10:13,19). This was a focused sound "from heaven" that "filled all the house where they were sitting." It was the prelude to a new era during which the Lord would be the center of all activity.

There is some resemblance between the filling of this house and the dedication of the Tabernacle and Temple.

The tabernacle dedication. "Then a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle . And Moses was not able to enter into the tent of the congregation, because the cloud abode thereon, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle" (Ex 40:35).

The dedication of the Temple. "And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that the cloud filled the house of the LORD , so that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of the LORD" (1 Kgs 8:10-11). "It came even to pass, as the trumpeters and singers

At the dedication of both the tabernacle and the temple, when they were filled, no man could enter. Here, however, it was the place where they were sitting that was filled! The people were not excluded from the place where extended revelation was given!

were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the LORD; and when they lifted up their voice with the trumpets and cymbals and instruments of music, and praised the LORD, saying, For He is good; for His mercy endureth for ever: that then the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the LORD; So that the priests could not stand to minister by reason of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD had filled the house of God” (2 Chron 5:14).

Here, There Is A Difference

At the dedication of both the tabernacle and the temple, when they were filled, no man could enter. Here, however, it was the place where they were sitting that was filled! The people were not excluded from the place where extended revelation was given! When the tabernacle was filled, even Moses could not enter into it (Ex 40:35). When the Temple was filled, the priests “could not stand to minister” in the Temple (2 Chron 5:14). However, on the day of Pentecost, when the house was “filled,” the people remained. No one had to leave.

Something Had Happened

It is obvious that something has happened in the heavenly realms that enabled Divine influence to be among men without major disruption. A reconciliation had, in fact, taken place, so that what was before noted for destroying and causing fear upon the earth was now endured with peace and tranquility. When the sound of a rushing mighty wind from heaven falls upon the ears of men, and they do not run in fear, an accord between heaven and earth is being exhibited that was never before known. We are witnessing a gracious act.

CLOVEN TONGUES OF FIRE

“ 3 And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.”

Not only is something supernatural heard, there is also a supernatural sight. Something is brought within the range of human vision that could not possibly have been produced by men. The external phenomenon that accompanied the coming of the Spirit was as extraordinary as the coming of the Spirit Himself.

THERE APPEARED

“And there appeared unto them . . .” Other versions read, “They saw what seemed to be,” NIV “appeared among them,” NRSV “And they saw,” BBE “Then, what looked like . . . appeared,” NLT “They saw something which looked like,” IE and “ Before their eyes appeared.” PHILLIPS

When something or someone from heaven comes to earth, it has to “appear,” or be accommodating to the awareness of men. Heaven is of a differing order, consisting of a kingdom that “cannot be shaken,” and will “remain” after heaven and earth have passed away (Heb 12:27). When something or someone from the eternal realm comes into a temporal domain, some provision must be made for men to be aware of it. There are no natural capacities that can perceive things from heaven! God, however, can so clothe invisible realities that they can be seen. Thus, when God descended upon Mount Sinai, it was “in fire” (Ex 19:18). When He descended to show Himself to Moses, it was “in the cloud” (Ex 34:5). When the Holy Spirit descended upon Jesus, He did so “in a bodily shape like a dove” (Lk 3:22; Matt 3:16; Mk 1:10; John 1:32). In these cases, the fire, cloud, and dove were not the point. They were a visible sign of realities that could not be perceived by flesh and blood.

Thus, on the day of Pentecost, when “the promise of the Father” took place, certain signs were given in order to alert the disciples.

What was seen did not “appear” over the city of Jerusalem, like the accompanying signs of God’s presence appeared on Mount Sinai. This appearance was intended for those who were being “endued with power from on high.” It was not something designated for the general populous of the city.

CLOVEN TONGUES LIKE AS OF FIRE

“ . . . cloven tongues like as of fire . . . ” Other versions read, “ divided tongues, as of fire,” NKJV “tongues as of fire distributed themselves ,” NASB “tongues of fire that separated ,” NIV “tongues as of fire , distributed,” RSV “tongues parting asunder , as of fire,” ASV “tongues like flames of fire ,” BBE “tongues, which were divided like a flame ,” MRD “ “flames of fire separating ,” IE “tongues of what looked like fire distributing themselves over the assembly ,” WEYMOUTH “tongues resembling fire, which were separated and distributed ,” AMPLIFIED and “tongues like flames which separated off .” PHILLIPS

With the sound of a rushing mighty wind in their ears, their eyes were arrested with what appeared to be fire. Within the mass of fire, a division took place, and separate tongues shot out like arrows aimed at specific targets.

The word “cloven” means divided, cut in pieces – “to cleave asunder . . . to distribute among themselves,” THAYER “separated off, to be dispersed, divide up among,” FRIBERG “to distribute objects to a series of persons, to distribute, to give to each in turn,” LOUW-NIDA “to divide or part among themselves,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

There was purpose and deliberation revealed in sight. From a single fiery source, specific measures of the fire were being formed for distribution. It must have appeared like the breaking up of a single flame. Yet, this dividing was not random, nor was it like an explosion that results in disintegration. This was a magnificently orderly distribution of the fire.

To say that this was a very unusual phenomenon would surely be an understatement. God had, indeed, been associated with fire. The Psalmist wrote, “ A fire goeth before Him , and burneth up His enemies round about” (Psa 97:3). And again, “Our God shall come, and shall not keep silence: a fire shall devour before Him , and it shall be very tempestuous round about Him” (Psa 50:3). In the tabernacle service, when the law of the burnt offering was instituted, a sacrifice was placed upon the altar. It is written of that time, “And there came a fire out from before the LORD, and consumed upon the altar the burnt offering and the fat ” (Lev 9:24).

Solemnly Israel was told, “For the LORD thy God is a consuming fire , even a jealous God” (Deut 4:24). That word is also delivered to the church: “Wherefore we receiving a kingdom which cannot be moved, let us have grace, whereby we may serve God acceptably with reverence and godly fear: For our God is a consuming fire” (Heb 12:28-29). That is, He is a jealous God, and fire depicts the burning and destructive nature of that jealousy.

How often this was overtly demonstrated in Divine history.

- When Sodom and Gomorrah was destroyed, it was by means of a fire that came out from the Lord. “Then the LORD rained upon Sodom and upon Gomorrah brimstone and fire from the LORD out of heaven ” (Gen 19:24).
- When Nadab and Abihu offered strange fire to the Lord, refusing to take fire from off the altar, as the Lord commanded, “ there went out fire from the LORD , and devoured them, and they died before the LORD” (Lev 10:2).
- Once, when Israel was complaining and murmuring before the Lord, it is written, “And when the people complained, it displeased the LORD: and the LORD heard it; and his anger was kindled; and the fire of the LORD burnt among them, and consumed them that were in the uttermost parts of the camp” (Num 11:1).

- When Korah and his cohorts rebelled against Moses, demanding that they be given honor equal to him, the earth opened up and swallowed them. But that was not the end of the matter, lest the rebellion spread further, “And there came out a fire from the LORD , and consumed the two hundred and fifty men that offered incense” (Num 16:35).

- On one occasion, Ahaziah, king of Samaria, sent some men to get the prophet Elijah. Of that incident it is written, “Then the king sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty. And he went up to him: and, behold, he sat on the top of an hill. And he spake unto him, Thou man of God, the king hath said, Come down. And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty . Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty. And he answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly. And Elijah answered and said unto them, If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty . And he sent again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty. And the third captain of fifty went up, and came and fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight. Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight. And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him: be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king” (2 Kgs 1:9-15).

- During the trial of Job, a servant reported to him the destruction of his sheep. “While he was yet speaking, there came also another, and said, The fire of God is fallen from heaven, and hath burned up the sheep, and the servants, and consumed them ; and I only am escaped alone to tell thee” (Job 1:16).

- Commenting on the history of Israel the Psalmist wrote, “ The fire consumed their young men ; and their maidens were not given to marriage” (Psa 78:63).

- When God descended on Mount Sinai, it was anything but comforting. “And mount Sinai was altogether on a smoke, because the LORD descended upon it in fire : and the smoke thereof ascended as the smoke of a furnace, and the whole mount quaked greatly” (Ex 19:18).

- When God judged Egypt, one of the plagues was a hail that came from heaven, mingled with fire. “So there was hail, and fire mingled with the hail , very grievous, such as there was none like it in all the land of Egypt since it became a nation” (Ex 9:24).

- Even in the most favorable sense, the fire of God was associated with the consumption of an acceptable sacrifice (Lev 9:24; 1 Kgs 18:38; 1 Chron 21:26; 2 Chron 7:1).

Apart from the consumption of sacrifices offered to God, no person acquainted with the Lord ever associated a fire from heaven with blessing! When the fire of God, or fire from heaven, was perceived, it was connected with consumption. In the case of an acceptable sacrifice, that denoted acceptance. In every other case, fire meant rejection and judgment.

There is a single exception to this rule, and it ought to be noted here. When leading Israel from Egypt to Canaan, the Lord employed a “pillar of fire” by night. The purpose of that pillar was to provide illumination. “And the LORD went before them by day in a pillar of a cloud, to lead them the way; and by night in a pillar of fire, to give them light ; to go by day and night” (Ex 13:21).

Although it is not depicted as a fire coming from heaven, Moses once saw a bush that burned with fire, but was not consumed. This was when God called him to deliver Israel from Egypt (Ex 3:2).

How will this phenomenon be regarded by this band of disciples? There certainly was no Scriptural account of such a happening before. Jesus had not told them they would see fire dividing itself and being distributing among them.

It is obvious from what follows that something has taken place in the heavenly realms – something that has impacted upon God’s dealings with men. This fire will not consume, but will rather bring great advantages to men. Instead of fear, men will become bold. They will become strong, not weak.

IT SAT UPON EACH ONE OF THEM

“ . . .and it sat upon each of them.” Other versions read, “and one sat upon each of them,” NKJV “and they rested on each one of them,” NASB “and came to rest on each of them,” NIV “and a tongue rested on each of them,” NRSV “coming to rest upon every one of them,” BBE “and came to rest on the head of each of them,” NJB “and settled on their heads,” LIVING “staying over each one of them,” IE “and on the head of each person a tongue alighted,” WEYMOUTH “resting on their heads, one to each of them,” WILLIAMS “and which settled on each one of them,” AMPLIFIED and “and settled above the head of each one of them.” PHILLIPS

This was a fire directed from heaven – a single source divided into several parts, with each part settling upon each of the people present. This is the body of people described in the first verse as being “with one accord in one place.” As I have already said, nothing in the text suggests this was only the twelve apostles. That would have indicated that they had separated from the rest of the hundred and twenty – a supposition that cannot be supported. Indeed, there is no valid cause to even pursue such a line of reasoning.

Later in this chapter, the attention will be focused on the twelve, with Peter being the chief speaker. However, at this time, the whole group is involved. They had all heard Jesus’ word. They had all waited as He had commanded, tarrying in Jerusalem. They had all continued with one accord in the Temple, and in prayer and supplication in the upper room. They had all participated in the choosing of Matthias. What possible justification is for excluding these people from the fulfillment of “the promise of the Father?”

The Forming of the Body of Christ

Whether or not this was the initial forming of the body of Christ, it certainly provides us with a very vivid picture of the manner of that formation. In this case, tongue-like flames of fire from a single source have settled upon each of the disciples’ heads. This, we will find, portrayed a particular endowment given to each one of them.

In the apostolic doctrine, this very truth is delineated with great care, confirming that special enablements are given to every member of the body of Christ. What is declared doctrinally is seen in the experience of this text. Further, by reviewing the doctrine itself, the text will be disassociated from much of the tradition that has been wrapped around it. If we can associate the text with the revealed purpose of God, and see it as a beginning, rather than an end of itself, we will be much profited. If, on the other hand, we choose view it only as a unique epoch, much of its significance will be missed.

The Doctrine

Because of their ordained diversity, believers are referred to as “the body of Christ.” They have one spirit, like one eternal flame, and yet He rests in a unique way upon each believer, like a tongue of fire.

Amidst some corrective teaching concerning spiritual gifts, Paul clarified the Source, nature, and intent of spiritual gifts. He also affirmed that certain spiritual enablements were given to every member of the body of Christ, and that no member could stand on his own, or was not a part of the body itself. The following is a brief synopsis of First Corinthians 12:4-18.

- There are a variety of gifts, but they all come from the same Spirit. “Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit” (1 Cor 12:4). Just as the fire divided into different, yet harmonious, tongues of fire, so there are a variety of spiritual gifts that work together for the common good.

- There are different kinds of service, or ministry, but they all serve the same Lord, who has a single purpose. “And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord” (1 Cor 12:5). Spiritual gifts are allocated with a strict interest in the will of the Lord. Just as the dividing tongues of flame in our text were designed to carry out the will of God, serving His interests, so it is with all spiritual enduements.

- The various gifts work in differing ways, yet it is the same God who works them all. “And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all” (1 Cor 12:6). Because “God is one” (Deut 6:4; Mk 12:29; Gal 3:20), there is no work of His that is at variance or in competition with another one of His works.

- Each particular manifestation of the Spirit is given for the profit of all, and is not intended for the receiver alone. “But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal” (1 Cor 12:7). Spiritual profit comes by means of edification, which is the essential outcome of every spiritual gift.

- For Corinth, the wide variety of gifts included speaking, extraordinary faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment, and speaking or interpreting other languages. “For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit; to another faith by the same Spirit; to another the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles; to another prophecy; to another discerning of spirits; to another divers kinds of tongues; to another the interpretation of tongues” (1 Cor 12:8-10). This is not intended to be a standard listing of spiritual gifts, and must not be so regarded. It differs from the listings provided in Romans 12:6-8, and Ephesians 4:11. These various lists are intended to reflect those the gifts were prevalent in the individual churches.

Distinctions in the body of Christ are not after the manner of the flesh. Nor are spiritual abilities distributed in accordance with fleshly distinctions. It is our baptism into the body of Christ that qualifies us for these gifts, and in Him there is “neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus”

All of the gifts are the work of the Spirit, who distributes them as He wills, or determines. “But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit, dividing to every man severally as He will” (1 Cor 12:11). Just as surely as the people of our text had no power over the tongues of flame that were being distributed, so no member of the body of Christ has power over the distribution of spiritual gifts.

- Just as the body is a unit, made up of many different parts, so also is Christ. “For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ” (1 Cor 12:12). The variety of functions within the body of Christ requires the appropriate distribution of Divine enablements. These must come from a single source and serve a single purpose.

- By the Holy Spirit, we are baptized into one body, independent of cultural concerns or fleshly distinctions. “For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit” (1 Cor 12:13). Distinctions in the body of Christ are not after the manner of the flesh.

Nor are spiritual abilities distributed in accordance with fleshly distinctions. It is our baptism into the body of Christ that qualifies us for these gifts, and in Him there is “neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:28). Those who depict the distribution of spiritual gifts as being upon the basis of flesh-and-blood differentiations could not possibly be more wrong.

- The body is not one member, nor is there a single standard for the ministry of each one. There are many members because there are many functions. “For the body is not one member, but many” (1 Cor 12:14). There is no member of the body of Jesus Christ that has no need of the other members. If the body is the means through which Jesus works (Eph 1:23), then no one can affirm they have no need of the other members without saying they have no need of the Head of the body Himself.

- There are no incidental members, nor can any imagine that because they cannot do this or that, they are not part of the body. “If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?” (1 Cor 12:15-17). No part of the body is unnecessary, so as to be considered shamefully inferior.

- God has arranged the body precisely as He has desired – in strict accord with His own purpose. “But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him” (1 Cor 12:18). God does not consult with men when it comes to executing His will. As it is written, “Who hath directed the Spirit of the LORD, or being His counselor hath taught Him?” (Isa 40:13). No one can outline the manner in which it would be best for God to work. Nor, indeed, is it the prerogative of the members of the body to determine what role they should play in the body of Christ. It is quite true that one can, for example, “desire the office of a bishop” (1 Tim 3:1). Let such a person know, however, that such aspirations have certain boundaries (1 Tim 3:1-7). Far better to learn to function within the parameters of Divine appointment, and in harmony with Divine objectives (Acts 20:28).

IN OUR TEXT

The principle of spiritual gifts is being lived out in our text. The flame of fire is a manifestation of the Holy Spirit, whom Jesus said He would send from the Father. In strict comportment with His administrative role in the Kingdom, the Spirit begins to divide to the various members of the body appropriate aptitudes. This is depicted by the tongues of fire resting upon each one of them.

Again let me point out that there is no reason to limit this to the Apostles. They are, indeed, placed “first” in the body (1 Cor 12:28), and they will eventually assume the leadership on this grand day – the first Pentecost following Christ’s ascension into heaven.

But for the time of our text, all of the disciples are involved. In fact, Peter will later draw attention to their involvement, confirming that this was done in order to fulfill the prophecy of Joel. Furthermore, Joel did not prophecy of God pouring forth His Spirit upon apostles, but rather upon “all flesh.”

SOMETHING TO BE SEEN

When someone or something from heaven is found upon the earth there is generally, if not always, some kind of disruption. This is because the eternal confronts the temporal, the unseen invades the area of the seen, and incorruption is found amidst corruption.

- This was confirmed at Mount Sinai, where the Living God was revealed. The entire mountain was engulfed in smoke and fire, and quaked greatly (Ex 19:18; Psa 68:8; Heb 12:26).

- When the Lord passed by Elijah, there was a great wind that split rocks, a mighty earthquake, and a devouring fire (1 Kgs 19:11-12).
- When Jesus was born, and angels announced the event to shepherds, the glory of the Lord shone all about them – at night (Luke 2:13).
- After Christ rose from the dead, an angel descended from heaven, and there was a great earthquake (Matt 28:1).
- The Revelation describes an angel coming down from heaven, and the earth being “lightened with his glory” (Rev 18:13).
- When the Son of God entered into the world, it produced a revelation of the hearts of men. Simeon told Mary that “the thoughts of many hearts” would be “revealed” (Lk 2:35).

The point I am making is that heavenly beings cannot come into the zone of earth without it being affected. Some kind of change will take place. In the text before us, a significant change will be wrought within the disciples. They will not be the same.

It is no wonder that is said of all who are in Christ Jesus: “Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new” (2 Cor 5:17). That change continues, until we will, according to Divine purpose, be conformed to Christ’s image – something God has “predestinated” (Rom 8:29).

THEY WERE ALL FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ 4a And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost . . . ”

The text continues, referring to what was occurring in all those who were “with one accord in one place” (2:1). What is being described is the fulfillment of Christ’s promise to His disciples.

- “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high ” (Luke 24:49).
- “For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence ” (Acts 1:5).
- “But ye shall receive power , after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8).

THEY WERE ALL

“And they were all . . .” Other versions read, “ All of them,” NIV and “And everyone present .” NLT

There can be no doubt about this. Whatever took place here involved “all” – everyone that was there. The Greek word translated “all” is pa,ntej (pan-tes). Its lexical meaning is, “quite all, the whole, all together,” THAYER “everybody, all, everything, the whole, all the people,” FRIBERG and “the totality of any object, mass.” LOUW-NIDA

It seems to me that it is a most irrational view to assume that the day of Pentecost as described by Luke commenced with only the twelve apostles. That would require that the twelve be isolated from the other disciples, without a single word that suggests such a thing. It would also diminish the significance of the disciples being together with one accord and in one place.

These are the same people that Luke has been referencing

- Those who continued with one accord “in prayer and supplication” (1:14).
- The disciples, who numbered about “an hundred and twenty” (1:15).
- Those who were “with one accord in one place” (2:1).
- All those who were “sitting” in the house when it was filled with the sound of a rushing mighty wind (2:2).
- Those on whom “tongues like as of fire” sat (2:3).

This “all” is the hundred and twenty who have been the “group” of reference since 1:15. It adds no weight to the matter to cite what other men have said on the subject. Notwithstanding, I thought it well to confirm that this has never been a strange view among professed believers.

- Chrysostom (347-404 A.D.) affirmed this text referred to “the hundred and twenty, and not the twelve” (Homily 4).

- Augustine (354-430) also states that “the hundred and twenty all received the Holy Spirit.” PULPIT COMM

- Johann Meyer (1737-1795) also taught this. PULPIT COMM

- Christopher Wordsworth (1774-1846) also espoused this position. PULPIT COMM

- Alford said of this passage, “Not the hundred and twenty only, but all believers in Christ then congregated in Jerusalem.”

- George Lange (1740-1806) said the same. Lange added, “Not only the apostles, but all the disciples, were filled with the Holy Ghost. There is a universal priesthood of all believers, and the Holy Ghost is the anointing.” ADAM CLARK

- Albert Barnes says, “Probably not only the apostles, but also the hundred and twenty mentioned in Acts 1:15. BARNES NOTES

- Adam Clarke says, “It is probable that the ALL here mentioned means the hundred and twenty spoken of in Acts 1:15, who were all together at the election of Matthias.” CLARKE’S COMM

There are many others, but this will suffice to confirm that this is not a strange position among those acquainted with Scripture.

I have come from a background that took another position – namely, that “the twelve” were the only ones involved in Acts 2:1-4. The basis for this position is stated by one of the venerable leaders of the movement with which I was identified – J.W. McGarvey. Here is what he said. “It is important to determine who are the parties declared by Luke to be “all with one accord in one place;” for upon this depends the question whether the whole hundred and twenty disciples, or only the twelve apostles, were filled with the Holy Spirit. The words are almost uniformly referred, by commentators, to the hundred and twenty. Any who will read the first four verses of this chapter, noticing the connection of the pronoun “they,” which occurs in each of them, will see, at a glance, that it has, throughout, the same antecedent, and, therefore, all the parties said in the first verse to be together in one place, are said in the fourth to be filled with the Holy Spirit, and to speak in other tongues. The question, then, Who were filled with the Holy Spirit? depends upon the reference of the pronoun in the statement, “They were all together in one place.” Those who suppose that the whole hundred and twenty are referred to, have to go back to the fifteenth verse of the preceding chapter to find the antecedent. But, if we obliterate the unfortunate separation between the first and second chapters, and take the last verse of the former into its connection with the latter we will find the true and obvious antecedent much nearer at hand. It would read thus: “The lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered together with the eleven apostles. And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.” It is indisputable that the antecedent to they is the term apostles; and it is merely the division of the text into chapters, severing the close grammatical connection of the words, which has hid this most obvious fact from commentators and readers. The apostles alone, therefore, are said to have been filled with the Holy Spirit. This conclusion is not only evident from the context, but it is required by the very terms of the promise concerning the Holy Spirit. It was to the apostles alone, on the night of the betrayal, that Jesus had promised the miraculous aid of the Spirit, and to them alone he had said, on the day of ascension, "You shall be immersed in the Holy Spirit." It involves both a perversion of the text, and a misconception of the design of the event, to suppose that the immersion in the Holy Spirit was shared by the whole hundred and twenty. It was the apostles, then, and they alone, who were assembled together." A COMMENTARY ON THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, 1863

It seems to me that it is a most irrational view to assume that the day of Pentecost as described by Luke commenced with only the twelve apostles. That would require that the twelve be isolated from the other disciples, without a single word that suggests such a thing. It would also diminish the significance of the disciples being together with one accord and in one place. Does that suggest that the accord described in Acts 1:14 was suddenly disrupted? The whole position requires too many assumptions, and none of them add any weight to the text, or tend to give God more glory. It disrupts the concept of Christ's body, and of the priesthood of all believers (1 Pet 2:5,9; Rev 1:6).

It is not my purpose to spend an inordinate amount of time on this matter. It would prove to be too distracting, and would take away from the text. As we proceed through this chapter, however, I will further show how utterly erroneous this view is, and how it even contradicts the text of Scripture that Peter pointedly declared was being fulfilled by what is not taking place.

FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

" . . . filled with the Holy Ghost . . ." Other versions read, "filled with the Holy Spirit," NKJV "full of the Holy Spirit," BBE and "filled (diffused throughout their souls)." AMPLIFIED

It is important to note that the sound of a rushing mighty wind and the appearance of cloven tongues of fire, were not the Holy Spirit Himself. They were rather arresting evidences of His presence. Jesus referred to this kind of thing when He said to Nicodemus, "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit" (John 3:8).

The Holy Spirit had come from heaven to earth, and the sound and appearance confronting the disciples were evidences of His presence.

To this point, the phenomenon now being described has been referred to in differing ways.

- "The promise of the Father" (Acts 1:4).
- Being "endued with power from on high" (Lk 24:49).
- Being "baptized with the Holy Spirit" (Acts 1:5).
- Now, this experience is referred to as being "filled with the Spirit" (Acts 2:4).

If, as some allege, being baptized with the Holy Spirit was a unique apostolic experience, then "the promise of the Father" is also limited to them. Being "endued with power" is also confined to them. Being "filled with the Spirit" is also for the apostles alone. It would require that the prophets wrote specifically of the apostles when they referred to God pouring forth His Spirit (Isa 44:3; Joel 2:28-29). Such a notion is too absurd for us to waste any more time upon it.

What Does It Mean to be Filled?

Some of the lexical definitions of “filled” include, “to be full . . . what wholly takes possession of the mind is said to fill it” THAYER , “fill with . . . of intellectual and spiritual processes being filled with, experience completely,” FRIBERG “to cause something to be completely full, to fill completely,” LOUW-NIDA “to fill full of a thing.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

This filling relates primarily to the mind, not the body, for although the body is “the temple of the Holy Spirit” (1 Cor 6:19), He is never depicted as filling the body. As will be confirmed in the following phrase, the mind and the ability to express it were being controlled by the Holy Spirit. The people themselves became wholly devoted to the cause of the Lord, and “the flesh” lost all of its intrusive powers.

These were not the first people “filled with the Spirit,” although this would prove to be a unique filling. Others include the following.

- John the Baptist: “For he will be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink. He will also be filled with the Holy Spirit , even from his mother's womb” NKJV (Luke 1:15).

- Elizabeth, the mother of John the Baptist: “And it happened, when Elizabeth heard the greeting of Mary, that the babe leaped in her womb; and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Spirit” NKJV (Luke 1:41).

- Zecharias, the father of John the Baptist: “Now his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Spirit , and prophesied, saying” NKJV (Luke 1:67).

- Peter, when testifying before the Jewish council: “Then Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit , said to them, "Rulers of the people and elders of Israel” NKJV (Acts 4:8).

- Following the release of Peter from prison and a powerful prayer, the whole church was filled with the Spirit: “And when they had prayed, the place where they were assembled together was shaken; and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit , and they spoke the word of God with boldness” NKJV (Acts 4:31).

- Ananias was sent to Saul of Tarsus that, among other things, he might be filled with the Holy Spirit: “And Ananias went his way and entered the house; and laying his hands on him he said, "Brother Saul, the Lord Jesus, who appeared to you on the road as you came, has sent me that you may receive your sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit ” NKJV (Acts 9:17).

- Barnabas is said to have been “full” of the Holy Spirit: “For he was a good man, full of the Holy Spirit and of faith. And a great many people were added to the Lord” (Acts 11:24).

Prior to John the Baptist, being filled with the Spirit specifically related to obtaining wisdom, knowledge, and understanding for a particular God-appointed task (Ex 28:3; 31:3; 35:31; Deut 34:9). The Spirit is also said to have “come upon” certain people to speak a word, or perform a mission (Num 24:2; Judges 6:34; 1 Sam 10:10; 11:6; 19:20,23; 1 Chron 12:18; 2 Chron 15:1; 24:20).

This filling” is a condition in which the Holy Spirit controls the whole person – spirit, soul, and body. Within, the intellect, emotion, and will are under the control of the Spirit. The thought processes are illuminated. The emotion is devoted wholly to the Lord. The will is sanctified so that it becomes one with the will of the Lord. The expressive abilities are marshaled and managed by the Holy Spirit – all within the context of willingness and perception.

This filling” is a condition in which the Holy Spirit controls the whole person – spirit, soul, and body. Within, the intellect, emotion, and will are under the control of the Spirit. The thought processes are illuminated. The emotion is devoted wholly to the Lord. The will is sanctified so that it becomes one with the will of the Lord. The expressive abilities are marshaled and managed by the Holy Spirit – all within the context of willingness and perception.

The people are not turned into robots. They are not carried away into a subconscious state where their cognitive powers lie dormant. They do not go into convulsions, or indulge themselves in irrational babble. They will not break out in laughter, or utter inhuman and unintelligible sounds. These are all things that some professing Christians associate with being filled with the Spirit. But this is NOT what Jesus promised His disciples. He said their experience would turn them into “witnesses” – Christ’s own witnesses (Acts 1:8).

They would not be mindless tools, but “witnesses.” They would declare something they understood, and testify to something they had personally seen. Their witness would be a rational one that they themselves understood.

The Filling Was Not For Pentecost Alone

The apostolic doctrine confirms that being “filled with the Spirit” was not intended to be the inaugural experience of the church. It was the beginning of a covenant that would involve interpersonal and unprecedented relations between Deity and redeemed humanity. The New Covenant is one in which the justified ones are “joined to the Lord,” becoming “one spirit” with Him (1 Cor 6:17). It is one in which God pledges to walk in the people and dwell in them (2 Cor 6:16). The revealed objective is for the church to be “filled with all the fulness of God” (Eph 3:19). In this covenant Christ lives in the individual to such an extent that they live no longer for themselves (Gal 2:20). This is according to the revealed purpose of God (2 Cor 5:15).

In view of these marvelous realities, all believers are admonished “BE filled with the Spirit” (Eph 5:18). In writing of the same thing to the Colossians, Paul referred to letting “the word of Christ dwell in you richly” (Col 3:16). That is exactly what happened on the day of Pentecost – the word of Christ would dwell richly within those filled with the Spirit. Jesus said this is what was going to happen. “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me ” (John 15:26). And again, “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26).

In some ways, the filling on the day of Pentecost was unique. However, that uniqueness related to the commencement of a covenant that would continue. The Spirit would continue to be noted for managing the intellectual and expressive powers of men – which is what it means to be “filled with the Spirit.”

In confirmation of this, Paul wrote of a certain mind-set – one that was controlled by the Spirit. He spoke of being “spiritually minded.” “For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace” (Rom 8:6). Other versions read, “the mind set on the Spirit,” NASB “to set the mind on the Spirit.” NRSV And, how is it that the mind of a man can be set on, and brought into harmony with, the Holy Spirit of God? Is this accomplished by an act of the will? Is it the result of a sanctified procedure of some kind? Is it the conclusion of a lengthy process? This is nothing less than the accomplishment of the Spirit Himself. Thus other versions translate the expression, “the mind controlled by the Spirit,” NIV/NIB “if the Holy Spirit controls your mind.” NLT

How is it that such a phenomenon is possible? Does the Holy Spirit overpower the individual and take control of his mind? This cannot be, for the Spirit can be quenched or grieved by us (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19). The Holy Spirit can be resisted, confirming that He does not invade the individual (Acts 7:51). The Holy Spirit can be “vexed” (Isa 63:10), and can cease to “strive” with men (Gen 6:3). Those who have once been joined to the Lord can live “after the flesh,” and die – even though they had been made alive (Rom 8:13).

Thrust from you any notion that the Holy Spirit will ignore a person’s fleshly propensities, paying no heed to the lack of purity and commitment to God, and take over the way a person thinks. Such a thought borders on blasphemy and belies the very reason for the salvation of God. It was because God could NOT dwell within a defiled people that necessitated salvation in the first place. Sin had to be taken away, the conscience cleansed, and the heart purified before there could be any profitable involvement of God with man. He will not receive a person who is not separate, or touches the “unclean thing” – much less dwell within them (2 Cor 6:17).

This is why separation is required in this day of better things . “If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master’s use , and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

The Ministration of the Spirit

Integral to this passage is the fact that the Holy Spirit is the Administrator of the New Covenant. When teaching concerning the New Covenant, Paul referred to it as “the ministration of the Spirit” (2 Cor 3:8). Other versions read “the ministry of the Spirit,” NKJV “the dispensation of the Spirit,” RSV “the operation of the Spirit.” BBE

• It is inconceivable that being filled with the Holy Spirit is disassociated from these indispensable ministries, or that being filled with the Spirit is confined to a certain segment of the body of Christ. What occurs in our text is unique in the sense of

- Under the Kingship of Jesus, the Holy Spirit is the one to dispenses and manages all spiritual gifts (1 Cor 12:4-11).
- He is the one who changes believers from one stage of glory to another (2 Cor 3:18).
- When we are born again, we are “born of the Spirit” (John 3:6,8).
- He causes us to “abound in hope” (Rom 15:13).
- The essential characteristics of the Kingdom (righteous, peace, and joy), are ministered by the Spirit (Rom 14:17).
- He leads believers in the mortification of the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13-14).
- From within, the Spirit makes intercession for us according to the will of God (Rom 8:26-27).
- The Spirit bears witness with our spirit, confirming that we are the children of God (Rom 8:16).
- The Spirit is sent into our hearts, and cries out within us of our relation with the living God (Gal 4:6).
- We are washed, sanctified, and justified by the Holy Spirit (1 Cor 6:11).

It is inconceivable that being filled with the Holy Spirit is disassociated from these indispensable ministries, or that being filled with the Spirit is confined to a certain segment of the body of Christ. What occurs in our text is unique in the sense of being a beginning. However, the filling itself is not unique. That is a covenantal experience that is adapted to the various roles found within the body of Christ.

The remainder of the book of acts will confirm that being “filled with the Holy Spirit” was not an experience uniquely for the apostles, nor was it something that was intended to occur only on Pentecost.

THE SPIRIT GIVES THEM UTTERANCE

“ 4a . . . and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. ”

Because being filled with the Spirit is associated with Divine purpose and human aptitude, something unique will take place at this time. The Holy Spirit does not come as a Spectator or heavenly Monitor. He is not sent from heaven to assist men to fulfill their own personally conceived ambitions. He is the Spirit of God, sent from the Father because of the request of the Son. He comes on the Father’s business, and because of man’s involvement with His Christ. However He works within these people, it will be in strict concert with God’s eternal purpose and the heavenly agenda. This will not be about men having a unique experience, but about men being involved in the “good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:2). The disciples have been waiting to be endued with power, and now we will see what the power will do.

BEGAN TO SPEAK WITH OTHER TONGUES

“ . . . and began to speak with other tongues . . . ” Other versions read, “and began to speak in other tongues (languages),” NIV “began to speak in other languages,” NRSV “and were talking in different languages,” BBE “and they began to speak in divers tongues,” DOUAY “and began to speak in divers languages,” MRD “began to speak different languages,” NJB “and began speaking in languages they didn’t know,” LIVING “and began to speak in foreign languages,” WEYMOUTH and “and began to speak in other (different, foreign) languages (tongues).” AMPLIFIED

The word “tongues” has been greatly corrupted in our day – so much so, that men hardly have any intelligent notion about what it means. Unfortunately, it has been associated with something unintelligible – something that is not understood, yet yields remarkable benefit and blessing. Before espousing such folly, men must first establish that a personality made in the image of God can be profited by something unintelligible, or that salvation, in any sense, is divorced from understanding, discernment, and perception.

The word “tongues” comes from the Greek word glw,ssaij (gloce-sa-is). The word accents the tongue, or what is spoken, and refers to “the language used by a particular people in distinction from that of other nations,” THAYER and “language, utterance.” UBS

These people were not uttering unintelligible sounds. They were delivering a message – and the entire reason for a message is that something is intended to be understood. A message that is not understood is no message at all. A word that is unintelligent is no word at all, for the sole purpose of a word is to communicate something understandable.

Various Scriptures refer to “tongues” in the sense of a specific language.

- When nations were formed, they were according to language: “By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one after his tongue, after their families, in their nations” (Gen 10:5).
- God told Israel their disobedience would bring their captivity by a nation whose language they did not understand. “The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand ” (Deut 28:49).
- There was a Syrian language. “And in the days of Artaxerxes wrote Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabeel, and the rest of their companions, unto Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the writing of the letter was written in the Syrian tongue, and interpreted in the Syrian tongue ” (Ezra 4:7).

- There was a special Hebrew language. “Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda, having five porches” (John 5:2).

- On the day of Pentecost, a message was understood in different languages. “Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11).

- Men are considered in groups according to their language. “After this I beheld, and, lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands” (Rev 7:9).

The phrase “other tongues” refers to languages other than the native language of the individual. On the day of Pentecost, these were new “new tongues,” referring to languages that were not acquired by natural processes, but were obtained supernaturally. Jesus said this would happen. “And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues ” (Mk 16:17).

An Extraordinary Occurrence

This was a most extraordinary occurrence – a body of people speaking different languages, or “with other tongues.” You may recall that when such a thing had previously occurred, it was a judgment from God, and aborted the building of the tower of Babel. At that time “the whole earth was of one language” (Gen 11:1). Upon noting that the people were conspiring to make themselves a name by building a tower, “the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do” (Gen 11:6).

These were a people who were perfectly united, as evidenced by them speaking “one language.” Such a condition guaranteed that they would accomplish their diabolical will. The Lord, therefore, judged them by confounding their language. “Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech . So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city” (Gen 11:7-8).

On the day of Pentecost, however, their speech was not “confounded,” even though they were speaking different languages. Instead of the work coming to an end, it was actually launched within the context of Divine blessing.

Something must have happened in heaven to enable a blessing to come from speaking different languages. Surely some effective work had been done in heaven for the Spirit to enable a body of people to speak different languages, yet remain “in one accord.”

AS THE SPIRIT GAVE THEM UTTERANCE

“ . . . as the Spirit gave them utterance.” Other versions read, “as the Spirit was giving them utterance,” NASB “as the Spirit enabled them,” NIV “as the Spirit gave them the ability,” NRSV “as the Spirit gave them power,” BBE “as the Spirit gave them to speak forth,” DARBY “according as the Holy Ghost gave them to speak,” DOUAY “as the Spirit enabled them to proclaim,” NAB “as the Spirit was giving them to declare,” YLT “for the Holy Spirit gave them this ability,” LIVING “the Spirit was giving them the power to do this,” IE “according as the Spirit gave them words to utter,” WEYMOUTH “as the Spirit gave them to utter Divine things,”

WILLIAMS “as the Spirit kept giving them clear and loud expression [in each tongue in appropriate words],” AMPLIFIED and “as the Spirit gave them power to proclaim His message .” PHILLIPS

These people were not uttering unintelligible sounds. They were delivering a message – and the entire reason for a message is that something is intended to be understood. A message that is not understood is no message at all. A word that is unintelligent is no word at all, for the sole purpose of a word is to communicate something understandable. Those who take the position that speaking in tongues refers to saying something that cannot be understood do not have a sound basis for their opinion. In Scripture, when we read the words “unknown tongue,” it always refers to an expression unknown by the hearer, not the speaker . The only place the expression is used is the fourteenth chapter of First Corinthians (14:2,4,13,14,19,27). The subject of that chapter is “spiritual gifts” (14:1). Further, the sole purpose for spiritual gifts is the edification of the body, for “the manifestation of the Spirit is given to each one for the profit of all ” (1 Cor 12:7). Paul further establishes that no person can be profited, or edified by what he does not understand. That is why unknown tongues, or languages, are to be interpreted to the hearers. If no one can do this, all are prohibited from speaking in a language that is not known by the people. “But if there be no interpreter, let him keep silence in the church; and let him speak to himself, and to God” (1 Cor 14:28).

When something that is not understood is declared, it makes for confusion, not edification. Paul reasons on the matter in this way. “Now, brothers, if I come to you and speak in tongues, what good will I be to you, unless I bring you some revelation or knowledge or prophecy or word of instruction? Even in the case of lifeless things that make sounds, such as the flute or harp, how will anyone know what tune is being played unless there is a distinction in the notes? Again, if the trumpet does not sound a clear call, who will get ready for battle? So it is with you. Unless you speak intelligible words with your tongue, how will anyone know what you are saying? You will just be speaking into the air. Undoubtedly there are all sorts of languages in the world, yet none of them is without meaning. If then I do not grasp the meaning of what someone is saying, I am a foreigner to the speaker, and he is a foreigner to me” NIV (1 Cor 14:6-11).

Within this context, Paul refers to an “unknown tongue” six times.

- “For he that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God: for no man understandeth him; howbeit in the spirit he speaketh mysteries” (1 Cor 14:2). The language is not unknown to himself, but to the hearers. The fact that he does not speak to men does not mean he himself does not understand, for that would not be “speaking.” Speaking “mysteries” does not mean the person himself does not know what he is saying, but that what he says is mysterious to the hearers – for that is the whole subject of this passage: conduct in the assembly.

Edification cannot be accomplished where the message is delivered in a language that is not known by the people. The fact that the speaker edified himself confirms that he knows what he said, but the people do not.

“He that speaketh in an unknown tongue edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth edifieth the church” (1 Cor 14:4). Edification cannot be accomplished where the message is delivered in a language that is not known by the people. The fact that the speaker edified himself confirms that he knows what he said, but the people do not.

- “Wherefore let him that speaketh in an unknown tongue pray that he may interpret” (1 Cor 14:13). The speaker is not to pray that he himself will be able to understand what he says, for no spiritual gift is for personal profit. His prayer is that he can make what he says understandable to his hearers.

- “For if I pray in an unknown tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is unfruitful” (1 Cor 14:14). Paul does not say he does, in fact, pray in a language he does not understand. He rather speaks in this manner to confirm the absurdity of thinking there is profit in something that cannot be understood. Therefore he relates his own resolve: “What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also: I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also” (1 Cor 14:15). Here the words “and” and “also” indicate that speaking and understanding are joined together, not separated.

- “Yet in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that by my voice I might teach others also, than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue” (1 Cor 14:19). The ratio of five to ten thousand confirms the foolishness of thinking you can profit the people of God by saying something – anything – that is not in a language they speak.

- “If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret” (1 Cor 14:27). Even when men are delivering a message in a foreign language, with an interpreter, no more than two or three are to speak in an assembly, and they are to speak one at a time with a single interpreter. That is because any lack of clarity in the speaking makes for confusion.

Two Doctrinal Examples

Paul sites two practical examples of the uncomeliness of speaking in a language that is not known.

There is a vast difference between saying the speakers are “mad,” or out of their mind, NIV and being convicted, falling on the face, worshiping God, and reporting that God is in the assembly. And what is the difference? It is that the message was understood.

IN MOSES AND THE PROPHETS. Paul cites examples from the writings of Moses and the prophets, confirming that hearing something in an unknown language is anything but a blessing. “In the law it is written, With men of other tongues and other lips will I speak unto this people; and yet for all that will they not hear me, saith the Lord. Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe” (1 Cor 14:21-22). This passage is taken from the books of Deuteronomy and Isaiah. First, Moses related the curses God would bring upon Israel if they did not hearken to the voice of the Lord. Among a significant number of curses was this one: “The LORD shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as swift as the eagle flieth; a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand” (Deut 28:49). Isaiah prophesied of judgment against Israel for their waywardness. “For with stammering lips and another tongue will He speak to this people” (Isa 28:11). Jeremiah spoke of this in an even more pointed way. “They have belied the LORD, and said, It is not he; neither shall evil come upon us; neither shall we see sword nor famine: And the prophets shall become wind, and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.

Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them. Lo, I will bring a nation upon you from far, O house of Israel, saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say” (Jer 5:12-15). What did all of this mean? Simply this. God had spoken to Israel, and they had refused to listen to Him. Instead, they had thrust His word from them. Therefore, God would bring a people against them whose language they would not understand. When this happened, they would know that had been judged by the Lord, and were under His curse. That is why Paul adds, “Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to them that believe, but to them that believe not: but prophesying serveth not for them that believe not, but for them which believe” (1 Cor 14:22). This was not a sign of blessing, but of judgment and cursing.

- A HYPOTHETICAL EXAMPLE. Paul also provides a hypothetical example to confirm the foolishness of speaking to the saints in a language they do not know. “If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad? But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: and thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth” (1 Cor 14:23-25). There is a vast difference between saying the speakers are “mad,” or out of their mind, NIV and being convicted, falling on the face, worshiping God, and reporting that God is in the assembly. And what is the difference? It is that the message was understood.

As The Spirit Gave Them Utterance

Although it should not be necessary to say so, when the Holy Spirit gave these people “utterance,” or the ability to speak, He did not violate the guidelines He Himself moved Paul to write. We may fully expect for every word that is spoken to be understood, and for there to be an association of what is spoken with the Lord, His purpose, and what He had foretold of the day of salvation.

This text is an example of the Holy Spirit taking over and dominating the tongue – a member that no man can tame (James 3:8). But it can be tamed by the Spirit, and employed for noble purposes! He did this with a people who had been waiting for “the promise of the Father.” This was a people noted for their “prayer and supplication.”

CONCLUSION

In every aspect, “the day of salvation” is ordered and orchestrated by the Lord, its Author. That day, along with all of the other works of the Lord, was “finished from the foundation of then world” (Heb 4:3). All men were born and placed in strict accord with Divine purpose, to give them the advantage in seeking the Lord (Acts 17:26-27). The giving of the Law came at the right time, and fulfilled is preparatory ministry (John 1:17; Rom 3:19-20). John the Baptist, the prophet appointed to prepare the way for the Lord and make the people ready, was born at the right time, and his ministry fulfilled at the right time (Lk 1:68-79). Jesus Himself came into the world in “the fulness of the time” (Gal 4:4). He was baptized and commenced His ministry at the right time (Matt 3:13-16; Lk 4:18-21). The death of Christ was accomplished at the appropriate time, in the right way, and in strict accord with Divine determination (Mk 14:41; John 12:23; 17:1; Acts 2:33; 4:27-28; Rom 8:32; 2 Cor 5:21). In due time, and in fulfillment of the Prophets, Jesus was raised from the dead, ascended into heaven, and was given the Kingdom, the government being laid upon His shoulder (Psa 68:18; Isa 9:6-7; Dan 7:13-14; 9:26). It should not surprise us that the day of Pentecost was “fully come,” and that the purpose of God was carried out in the most precise way. This was an act of Divine government!

No person has seen the day of Pentecost correctly until it is seen within the context of God’s “eternal purpose.” This was a day when the door of faith swung open, and the way to glory was exposed to men for the first time. The accomplishments that took place on this day will confirm that it was a display of Divine government – the kind of government that is in place to this very day. We are witnessing the inauguration of the New Covenant by the glorified Christ. This day the destruction of the devil and the reconciliation of the world to God will be confirmed.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #6

THE NEWS OF THE EVENTS, AND THE REACTION OF THE PEOPLE

“ 2:5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven. 6 Now when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language. 7 And they were all amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilaeans? 8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born? 9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judaea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, 10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, 11 Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God. 12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this? 13 Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.” (Acts 2:5-13)

INTRODUCTION

Compared to the occasion – the Feast of Pentecost – and the multitude who were in the city of Jerusalem, the attention of the Spirit is focused on a relatively small number of people. One Hundred and Twenty individuals are involved, and their activities appear to be wholly unrelated to the traditional day of Pentecost. This was a God-ordained day, and had been in place for fifteen hundred years. It was intended to be a public gathering, festive in nature, with the involvement of all of the people – including women, children, servants, handmaidens, strangers, widows, and

CONTENTS

- THE POPULOUS (2:5)
- THE REPORT GOES OUT (2:6a)
- THE MULTITUDE COME TOGETHER (2:6b)
- THE RESPONSE OF THE MULTITUDE (2:7a)
- THE TONGUES – THE MIRACLE OF SPEECH (2:7b-8)
- THE DIVERSITY OF THE CROWD (2:9-11a).
- WHAT THEY WERE HEARING (2:11b)
- CONSTERNATION! (2:12-13)
- CONCLUSION

orphans (Deut 16:10-11). Yet, on this day something was taking place that is superior to the common feast of Pentecost. There was a transition taking place from the old to the new, from the shadow to the substance, and from the type to the antetype. This was in fact, the day that was in the mind of the Lord when He ordained the feast of Pentecost, or, as it was commonly called, “the feast of weeks” (Ex 34:22; Deut 16:10,16; 2 Chron 8:13). Because it is important that we be familiar with the principle of types and shadows, a few words concerning them are appropriate in our preparation for a review of the text before us.

TYPES AND SHADOWS

The Kingdom of God is driven by purpose – an “eternal purpose.” It is progressive in its revelation, but not in its conception. An “eternal purpose” is neither conceived nor carried out according to human responses. Nor, indeed, is it adjusted here and there because of unexpected circumstances.

Before the world was made, the purpose of God was fully conceived, and fixed determinations made. This purpose is called God’s “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11). That is, it is an expression of His very nature. It is a purpose that was conceived independently of the human condition. It is not a response to the dilemma of humanity. This is why it is said to have been “purposed in Himself” (Eph 1:9). So far as its execution in the world is concerned, it was “purposed in Christ Jesus” (Eph 3:11b).

This purpose is included in the works of God, which were “finished from the foundation of the world” (Heb 4:3). As a vicarious sacrifice that would enable God to be “just” in the justification of men (Rom 3:26), Jesus is referred to as “the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world” (Rev 13:8). In regards to His death, He is also referred to as “a lamb without blemish and without spot: Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world,” (1 Pet 1:19-20). Concerning the justified ones themselves, they are said to have been “chosen” in Christ “before the foundation of the world” (Eph 1:4).

If we consider the wisdom of God as made known in His great salvation, we must speak of “the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory” (1 Cor 2:7). When referring to salvation itself, the Spirit informs us that God has “saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9). If we speak of the ultimate aim of salvation – eternal life – we speak in this manner: “In hope of eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began” (Titus 1:2). If we consider the inheritance that has been prepared for the redeemed ones, we refer to “the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world ” (Matt 25:34).

Admittedly, this kind of language is exceedingly difficult for some to receive. They associate it with a form of fate that depersonalizes every aspect of salvation. Others see it as guaranteeing that some will be saved, even though their conduct contradicts the Divine nature. God’s choice, in such a case, is seen as overriding circumstances that are at variance with His own nature. God is, therefore, perceived as tolerating conduct that He elsewhere condemns, because of His choice that makes human conduct irrelevant. Such a God is a contradiction, conducting his affairs contrary to His revelation of own nature. Still others brush this whole matter aside by saying it is nothing more than “Calvinism.”

These responses, and others that are related to them, are nothing more than proof that such people cannot handle “accurately the word of truth” NASB (2 Tim 2:15). Their minds have not been molded by truth, but by the traditions of men. Thus they have mutilated the Word of God like Jehudi did the writings of Jeremiah (Jer 36:23). Like some of the Jewish teachers Paul confronted, they are “Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7).

If you remove the “before the foundation of the world” perspective, you make Scripture fundamentally unintelligible. For, if what God has done is not connected with who He and what He purpose before the world was created, you make the Gospel subjective, and open the door for all manner of corruption.

Why is it wrong to neglect Moses and the Prophets, as though they had been erased from Scripture. It is not so much because of their history, and the manner in which the Lord worked with and responded to men – although that is of inestimable value. In all of God’s dealings – particularly during the administration of the Law – there were types and shadows that portrayed both the nature and the effectiveness of the great salvation He would accomplish in Christ Jesus. There were not only specific prophecies that declared “the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:11). Couched within the ceremonial law, there were reflections of the High Priesthood of Jesus (Lev 21:10; 7:26; 8:1), being sanctified by blood (Ex 24:8; Heb 13:12), and making continual intercession for the people (Ex 18:19; Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25). Those ceremonies introduced men to a substitutionary sacrifice (Lev 9:7; 10:17; 1 Cor 5:7), a living sacrifice (Lev 14:6-7; 16:20-21; Rom 12:1; Rev 1:18), partaking of the sacrifice (Ex 29:32; Heb 3:14; 13:10), and atonement (Ex 29:36; Rom 5:11).

Before “the worlds” (Heb 1:2; 11:3) were created, God’s “eternal purpose” was cast in stone. In fact, it was His reason for making the world, which would be a stage on which the drama of that purpose would be worked out. None of God’s workings among men is independent of that purpose. When, for example, He gave the Law and its attending ceremonies, it was filtered through this purpose. They acquainted men with the things that were required for their redemption, and with the Savior who would carry them out.

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

For too long, men without spiritual understanding have been shaping the thinking of the Christian community. They have taught men of a Kingdom that has differing, and even competing qualities. The blessings of salvation have been divided into those pertaining to the first century, and those pertaining to following centuries.

It is necessary to say these things because of the view some have chosen to take of the day of Pentecost. Such treat it as though it had only an ancient purpose, and stands by itself upon the terrain of theology. Others perceive it as something that is repeated over and over throughout remaining history.

It is important that this day be seen from a two-fold point of view. First, it was the fulfillment of something that was promised by the prophets, and the prophets did not speak of a single day, but of “the day of salvation.” Nor, indeed, did they speak of a blessing that would be experienced by a select group within the company of the redeemed. While there are differing ministries within the body of Christ, they all partake of the benefits that were foretold by the prophets. Ponder what was said of the prophet’s message.

- THE GOSPEL OF GOD. “Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God, (Which he had promised afore by his prophets in the holy scriptures)” (Rom 1:1-2).

- THE RIGHTEOUSNESS OF GOD. “But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets ” (Rom 3:21).

- THE MYSTERY OF REDEMPTION. “Now to him that is of power to stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began, but now is made manifest, and by the scriptures of the prophets , according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith” (Rom 16:25-26).

- THE PIVOTAL CHRIST. “And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets , Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone” (Eph 2:20).

- SALVATION. “Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you : Searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:11).

- A FALLING AWAY. “That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets , and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior: Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts” (2 Pet 3:2-3).

- THE COMPLETION OF THE MYSTERY OF GOD. “But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall begin to sound, the mystery of God should be finished, as He hath declared to his servants the prophets ” (Rev 10:7).

It is essential that we realize the nature of these prophecies as well as their details. None of them were confined to a particular period or region . The healing waters that went throughout the world were of the same substance as the waters that initially flowed out from right side of the altar (Ezek 47:1-9). The living waters that flowed out from Jerusalem did not assume a different nature and manner as they spread into distant regions (Zech 14:8).

For too long, men without spiritual understanding have been shaping the thinking of the Christian community. They have taught men of a Kingdom that has differing, and even competing qualities. The blessings of salvation have been divided into those pertaining to the first century, and those pertaining to following centuries. The high sounding logic that is presented to support these suppositions may appear flawless, but it is rotten to the core. If the prophets foretold of the days of salvation, as is solidly affirmed (Acts 3:24), then their words will support all sound theology . However, if they do not, the theology is false, and is not to be given the luxury of a moment of consideration, If a person’s view of “the day of salvation” does not comport with what the prophets said was coming, we do not need to disprove the notion. The very fact that is not supported by what God said was coming, confirms it belongs in the dung heap, together with all other imaginations.

I have said these things because the chronicling of the events of the day of Pentecost will confirm that they were in strict accord with the words of the prophets. In fact, Peter will appeal to the message of the prophets to confirm the truth of the Gospel he declares (Acts 2:16-21,25-28, 30-31,34-35). He will affirm that what the people saw and heard was precisely according to the prophets.

THE POPULOUS

“ 2:5 And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.”

Whatever men may think about the environment in which Jesus chose to minister, the events of this day will perfectly harmonize with the nature of the Savior’s earthly ministry. His work did not contradict the nature of the Kingdom of which He preached. Some thoughtlessly say Jesus chose to identify with harlots and base people. I do not know who started that bit of nonsense, but it surely reveals a miserable level of spiritual understanding, and possibly the presence of a fundamentally dishonest heart. When Jesus chose the people He wanted to be with Him, He did not choose harlots or people who were in any way degenerate. In times when He wanted only a few select people to be with Him, He did not choose harlots and publicans. When these people were found with Jesus, they had come to Him, not He to them (Matt 9:10; Mk 2:15; Lk 5:29; 15:1). However, they did not come as publicans and harlots, but as those who were in quest of the Christ. This is precisely why Jesus said to His critics, “Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you” (Matt 21:31). They were not Jesus’ preferred company. It was He who became their preferred company!

Daily He taught in the Temple, not the marketplace (Matt 26:55; Lk 19:47; 21:37). When he went throughout the cities, He is not said to have taught in the various places where the common multitudes gathered, but in the synagogues (Matt 4:23; 9:35; ; Mk 1:39; Lk 4:15,44; 13:10). Wherever people listened to Him, Jesus remained. Wherever the people ignored Him, contradicted what He said, or criticized Him, He left (Matt 13:53; 16:4; 21:17; Mk 6:46; 8:13; John 6:15).

The inauguration of the New Covenant did not take place in Athens, Rome, or Alexandria. It did not even take place in Bethlehem or Nazareth, both of which were blessed by the presence of the Lord. God had chosen a particular city, placing His name there, so that it was identified with Him.

This is not even to mention the manner in which God involved Himself with humanity prior to Christ. He was selective about the ones to whom He spoke (Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, etc). He cultured a nation with whom He worked exclusively, “to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). This very manner contradicts the philosophy of the modern church, which has chosen to neglect those who hunger and thirst for righteousness – a manner that is blatantly against everything we know about the Lord. Although it should not be necessary to say it, this does not suggest that it is ever proper to withhold the truth from the needy, or to seek and save that which is lost. It does mean that the interest of the people in the things of God is what keeps the godly coming to them.

Now, this Divine manner will be confirmed again by the location in which this outpouring was taking place, and the people who would gather to observe what was happening.

AT JERUSALEM

“And there were dwelling at Jerusalem . . .” Other versions read, “living in Jerusalem,” NASB “staying in Jerusalem,” NIV “resident in Jerusalem,” MRD and “in Jerusalem that day.” LIVING

The inauguration of the New Covenant did not take place in Athens, Rome, or Alexandria. It did not even take place in Bethlehem or Nazareth, both of which were blessed by the presence of the Lord. God had chosen a particular city, placing His name there, so that it was identified with Him. God said of this city, “. . . Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen Me to put My name there” (1 Kgs 11:36). And again, “In Jerusalem will I put My name” (2 Kgs 21:4). And again, “in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all tribes of Israel, will I put My name for ever” (2 Kgs 21:7). He referred to Jerusalem as the city “which I have chosen” (1 Kgs 11:13). It is described as “Jerusalem, the city which the LORD did choose out of all the tribes of Israel, to put His name there” (1 Kgs 14:21).

Jeremiah prophesied of Jerusalem, “At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the LORD; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the LORD, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart” (Jer 3:17). Again, Jeremiah said of Jerusalem, “In those days shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and this is the name wherewith she shall be called, The LORD our righteousness” (Jer 33:16). Joel said of this city, “for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call” (Joel 2:32).

Ponder the church multitudes who have little or no perception of the Lord or His requirements. They want to be called “Christians,” and be known as members of Christ’s church, yet they have no compelling interest in the things of God. They are not “devout.”

Now we will see the reason for this emphasis on Jerusalem. It was in expectation of “the day of salvation” and the announcement of good news! A Deliverer would be announced in this city who would ultimately “turn away ungodliness from Jacob” (Rom 11:26). This is why God chose this city, blessed it, and placed the sign of His presence there – the Temple, in which the “ark of God the Lord” was placed, whose name was “called on it” (1 Chron 13:6). This city had been cultured for this occasion as no other city.

Dwelling At Jerusalem

There were more people in Jerusalem than normal. A whole host of people – several thousand – were there for the celebration of Pentecost, having come from other areas. According to the Law, they had been drawn there by obligation. According to the Spirit, they had been drawn there by God Himself, who is the One who draws men to Christ. As it is written, “No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day” (John 6:44). According to Jeremiah, He was drawing them with “lovingkindness” (Jer 31:3). According to Hosea, they were being drawn with “the cords of a man” (Hos 11:4).

Isaiah said of “the mountain of the Lord’s house,” “and all nations shall flow into it” (Isa 2:2). Here is the initial, or preliminary, fulfillment of that promise. It is a pledge of what will yet happen, just as surely as the day of Pentecost was the celebration of the firstfruits of a greater harvest to come.

DEVOUT MEN

“. . . Jews, devout men, out of every nation under heaven.” Other versions read, “God fearing Jews from every nation,” NIV “Jews, God-fearing men from every nation,” BBE “Jews, pious men from every nation,” DARBY “Jews, men that feared God, of every nation,” GENEVA “Godly Jews from many nations,” NLT “godly Jews . . . for the religious celebrations, having arrived from many nations,” LIVING “devout Jews . . . from every country in the world,” IE “devout men from every part of the world,” WEYMOUTH “devout Jews from many and distant lands,” MONTGOMERY “devout and God-fearing men from every country under heaven,” AMPLIFIED and “Jews of deep faith from every nation of the world.” PHILLIPS

What kind of people will the Lord draw into Jerusalem? In what kind of soil will the initial sowing of word of salvation be done? This will tell us something about the Lord, and be a sort of pledge to all who hunger and thirst for righteousness, that they will be “filled” (Matt 5:6).

I do not question that all types of people were in Jerusalem at this time – serious and frivolous, holy and profane, zealous and casual, thankful and unthankful. Israel came out of Egypt with a “mixed multitude” (Ex 12:38; Num 11:4), and it is sure that one came to this feast. However, when the Spirit wrote up the record of these events, He mentioned only “devout men,” which made their way to Jerusalem “from every nation under heaven.”

And what are “devout men?” The word “devout” comes from a word that means, “taking hold well, carefully and surely; reverencing God, pious, religious,” THAYER “cautious, devout, pious, as a characteristic of one who carefully observes the law,” FRIBERG “pertaining to reverent toward God,” LOUW-NIDA and “undertaking prudently, discreet, cautious, circumspect,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

These were people characterized by the utmost seriousness about the Lord. They took His word seriously, being fully aware of what was required of them. They had a mind that was prone to ponder upon, and take hold of, the things of God.

Simeon, who was privileged to see the Lord’s Christ before many others, was noted for being “just and devout ” (Lk 2:25). When Stephen was stoned to death, “devout men,” knowing the danger of the circumstances, came forward to bury him (Acts 8:2). Cornelius, who was honored by heaven with a minister who declared the Gospel to him, was known as “a devout man” (Acts 10:2). Ananias, who was chosen by God to heal Paul and see to it that he received the Holy Spirit, is also described as “a devout man” (Acts 22:12). A word used in Moses and the prophets that is quite similar is “upright” (1 Sam 29:6; 2 Sam 22:24; 2 Chron 29:34; Job 1:1; Psa 7:10).

Ponder the church multitudes who have little or no perception of the Lord or His requirements. They want to be called “Christians,” and be known as members of Christ’s church, yet they have no compelling interest in the things of God. They are not “devout.” They have Bibles, have access to teachers, and are invited by God to ask for wisdom – and yet they remain ignorant of matters pertaining to life and godliness. They are not devout. They know that Jesus told them to remember Him at the Lord’s table, but they do not take it seriously. They are not devout. They have been told that the Lord is coming again, and that His reward will be with Him, but they are not prepared. They are not devout.

Let us not be naive about this. God will not work for good in the midst of such a people. He granted no covenantal favors to those in Israel who were not devout, and He has not pledged Himself to act any differently under the New Covenant. An unholy church is, by the very nature of things, a spiritually ignorant one. A people who remain aloof from God reflect that aloofness in their understanding, their manners, and their preferences. If such people come to Jerusalem in ignorance, unless their apathy is changed to interest, they will leave the same way – in ignorance.

Let us not be naive about this. God will not work for good in the midst of such a people. He granted no covenantal favors to those in Israel who were not devout, and He has not pledged Himself to act any differently under the New Covenant.

Take the great conversions of Scripture. The multitudes at Pentecost (Acts 2:41), Cornelius and his household (Acts 10:36-48), the city of Samaria (Acts 8:5-6), and the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:27-39). Ponder Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:3-18), Lydia (Acts 16:14-15), the Philippian jailor (Acts 16:30-34), Crispus (Acts 18:8), and the barbarians of Melita (Acts 28:9-10). Which of them was not devout? Who among them had no interest in what was being said? Which of them lacked a fervent desire to obtain what the Gospel offered? What would lead anyone to believe that God would suddenly shower grace and favor upon a person who had no interest in Him? And, where is there a case of such a thing occurring? If someone cites Saul of Tarsus, it must be remembered that he was “zealous for the tradition of” the Jewish “fathers” (Gal 1:14), was living “in all good conscience” (Acts 23:1), and “was zealous toward God” (Acts 22:3). He was not a political insurrectionist like Barabbas (Mk 15:7).

We cannot make too much of our text – about “devout men” being gathered in Jerusalem. They were men who acted upon what they knew, and therefore were given more. However deficient they may have been, they had a desire to fulfill the word of the Lord – even when it was rather inconvenient. When “the love of many” waxes “cold” (Matt 24:12), a most dangerous situation is found.

THE REPORT GOES OUT

“6a Now when this was noised abroad . . .” Other versions read, “And when this sound occurred,” NKJV/NASB “When they heard this sound,” NIV “And at this sound,” NRSV “And when this sound was heard,” ASV “And when this sound came to their ears,” BBE “But the rumor of this having spread,” DARBY “When they heard this sound,” NLT “And when they heard the roaring in the sky above the house,” LIVING and “they heard the noise.” IE

There is a technical differentiation in the words being used. In verse two, there is reference to “a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind.” There the Greek word used is h=coj (ay-khos), which generally means an impersonal roar – like the sea, the wind, etc. In verse six, however, the Greek word used (for “noised”) is fwnh/j (phone-aas) which has the meaning, “a voice i.e. the sound of uttered words,” THAYER “a sound produced through the throat of living creatures . . . voice, speech, utterance,” FRIBERG “normally a distinctive type of sound as opposed to confused noise” LOUW-NIDA and “a sound, tone, properly the sound of the voice, mostly of men.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

There are, it is true, some students of language that say this refers to the “sound of a rushing mighty wind,” and that the Greek word used here is also used of impersonal sounds. However, first, this precise Greek word is used twenty-three times in Scripture (Lk 17:15; John 5:25,28; 10:3,16,27; 18:37; Acts 2:6; 9:7; 11:7; 22:7; 24:21; 1Cor 14:11; Heb 3:7,15; 4:7; 2 Pet 1:17; Rev 3:20; 10:7; 11:12; 14:13; 16:12,13). With the exception of Acts 2:6, all of these texts employ the word “voice,” and refer to the utterance of words, as compared to a loud unintelligible sound.

Second it is not likely that the “sound of a rushing mighty wind” would draw people together. It would rather move the people to withdraw from such a place. It is not likely that “devout Jews,” familiar with Moses and the Prophets, would be drawn together by “a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind,” – a sound associated with danger and destruction.

Third, the sound is said to have filled “all the house” where the disciples were sitting. It is not said to have filled all Jerusalem, or a specific area in Jerusalem other than this particular house.

Fourth, when the multitude came together they confessed their astonishment was not at the sound of wind but at the voice of words.

The words “noised abroad” have at least two possible meanings. One is that the speaking of the disciples themselves was heard extensively outside of the house where they were sitting. A. T. Robertson takes this view: “The meaning seems to be that the excited ‘other tongues’ of verse 4 were so loud that the noise drew the people together. The house where the 120 were may have been (Hackett) on one of the avenues leading to the Temple.” ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

When God begins to work in a public manner, the word of it will spread. More than being a human trait, this is the manner of the Kingdom.

Another meaning, and the one that I prefer, is that some did, indeed, hear the disciples speaking in other languages, and began to report the happening, spreading the rumor throughout the city. Some of the translations present this view: “But the rumor of this having spread,” DARBY “Now when this was noised,” GENEVA “When this was noised about,” PNT and “and the rumor of this having come.” YLT

Some students and translators of Scripture often use the rules of language to determine their view, rather than contextual considerations, and the revealed manner of Divine working. For example, some feel that the antecedent of “this” is “the sound of a rushing mighty wind,” of verse two. Even from a linguistic point of view, this is most difficult to support. However, it is also hard to accept that God would pour out a gift calculated to appeal to the multitudes, then draw them together by the sound of a wind that is said to have been inside the house where the disciples were sitting. Some argue that if the words of the disciples are meant, a plural verb would have been used here rather than a single one. However, this is easily resolved when we realize that it is the report of the “sounds” that was spread throughout the community, and not the sounds themselves.

WHAT MAY BE LEARNED FROM THIS?

When God begins to work in a public manner, the word of it will spread. More than being a human trait, this is the manner of the Kingdom. Allow me to briefly establish this to be the case.

The deliverance of Israel. When Israel was delivered from Egypt, passing through the Red Sea, and Pharaoh and his armies destroyed, the report was spread to all surrounding areas. Num 22:5; Josh 2:10; 9:9).

- The ministry of John the Baptist. John the Baptist did not go to the people. He prepared the way for Jesus, but himself had no appointed harbinger. The people came to him. Word of him spread rapidly, and the people gathered to hear him preach (Matt 3:5; 14:5; Mk 1:5; Lk 3:7,15).

- The ministry of the Lord Jesus. This is also in keeping with the ministry of Jesus, during which the witness of His mighty works were spread throughout the area by reports, thereby drawing the people to Him (Mk 2:1-2; 7:24; John 4:47).

- The ministry of Paul. News of the ministry of Paul spread wherever he was (Acts 17:6; 21:28; 23:9; 28:8-9).

When speaking to Festus, Paul reminded him that the thing of which he preached “was not done in a corner” (Acts 26:26). That is, what God did, particularly regarding Christ Jesus, was known by the multitudes. This was not because everything was actually done before them, but because the report of the doing was spread abroad. Even when Jesus told those He had healed to not speak about the matter, they did so anyway (Mk 7:36; Lk 5:14-15). This is because the working of the Lord is so unique that men cannot keep silence about it. That is why periods of history in which the Gospel was clearly and powerfully and insightfully preached experienced great awakenings and revivals.

The report of the working of the Lord has a certain spiritual drawing power to it. This is not intended to suggest that if men want big crowds they should preach the Gospel in order that their objectives may be reached. That is a corrupt way of thinking. Godly means are intended for godly objectives.

THE MULTITUDE COMES TOGETHER

“ 6b . . . the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.”

The people had gathered in Jerusalem to celebrate the feast of Pentecost, yet their interest has suddenly been turned to something else . We will find that it is more than a mere novelty that brings them together.

THE MULTITUDE CAME TOGETHER

“ . . . the multitude came together . . . ”Other versions read, “a crowd came together,” NIV “the crowd gathered,” NRSV “They all came together,” BBE “all the people collected together,” MRD “they gathered in a large crowd,” NAB “they came running to see what it was all about,” NLT “crowds came running to see what it was all about,” LIVING “a large group of them came together,” IE “they came crowding together ,” WEYMOUTH “the crowd rushed together ,” ISV and “a crowd quickly collected .” PHILLIPS

There have been times when God called only one person, speaking to him alone, and in isolation. This is how he called Noah (Gen 6:13), Abraham (Gen 12:1-3), Jacob (Gen 28:12-15), and Moses (Ex 3:2-3). Their role in God’s dealings with humanity required this approach. However, for the most part, when it came to blessing the populous, there came a point where they had to come together. In these cases, isolation deprived the people, and left them in a state of ignorance. The interest of the people had to be turned from personal preferences to collective concerns. They had to cease living for themselves alone, and become a part of a greater and more extensive work. One of the greater jeopardies of religion is when men become self-centered. Twice it is said of Israel, “In those days there was no king in Israel: every man did that which was right in his own eyes ” (Judg 17:6; 21:25). Men may call that liberty, but, when speaking of things relating to God, it is really a liability. Ponder how the “together factor” was made known in God’s dealings with men.

- Israel came out of Egypt together (Ex 13:3).
- Israel crossed the Red Sea together (Ex 14:22).
- Israel received the Law together (Ex 24:7).
- Israel crossed the Jordan river together (Josh 3:17).
- Israel entered Canaan together (Josh 6:5).
- The rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem required the people to work together (Neh 4:6).
- New sinews, flesh, or skin came upon the bones in Ezekiel’s valley until they “came together ” (Ezek 37:7).
- The initial blessings of the day of Pentecost took place when the people were “ with one accord in one place ” (Acts 2:1).
- The “power of Christ” was associated with the saints coming together (1 Cor 5:4).
- Edification takes place when the “whole church be come together into one place” (1 Cor 14:23).
- God’s ultimate objective is to gather all things “ together ” in Christ (Eph 1:10).

Israel was a nation that had been cultured for interest in the things of God. With all of their imperfections, which were many, God had worked with them in such a way as to promote them being together in His presence.

Israel was a nation that had been cultured for interest in the things of God. With all of their imperfections, which were many, God had worked with them in such a way as to promote them being together in His presence. Paul itemizes the unique advantages that were given to them. They included “the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). While these did apply at the individual level, their strength was made known primarily when they were together – whether around Mount Sinai, camped around the tabernacle, or entering into the Temple.

On the day of Pentecost, the interest of the people who came together was kindled in the surroundings of honoring a commandment from God. This is the kind of people and culture in which the day of Pentecost took place.

Today’s church world is a vastly different kind of environment. It is characterized by an inordinate amount of self-interest. The average church spends a maximum of five hours a week together – that is, the ones that have gatherings Lord’s day and Wednesday evenings. That is less than 3% of the week (168 hours). Even then, a lot of the time is not spent in an actual exposition or discussion of the Word of God. Time exposed to the word of God would be about 2 1/4 hours a week – if the people attend Lord’s day morning classes, and Wednesday as well. That would be a little over 1% of the week. The majority of professing Christians do not meet Lord’s day evening or Wednesday evening – times generally noted for their sparse attendance. Those people are exposed to the Word of God about 30 minutes a week, in rare cases, perhaps 45 minutes at the most. That is less than 1/2% of the week such people are “gathered together in the name of the Lord.

In spite of these prevailing conditions, with a few exceptions, it is not uncommon to hear small thinking preachers challenge their congregations to take their faith “outside of these four walls.” It seems to me that it is really time to get it inside the four walls, then it will be sure to “get outside,” just as it did on the day of Pentecost.

If it seems as though I have taken this matter too far, that is only because we have a largely dead church on our hands. It is an environment in which the events of the day of Pentecost could never take place.

CONFOUNDED

“ . . . and were confounded . . . ” Other versions read, “and were confused ,” NKJV “and were bewildered ,” NASB “in bewilderment ,” NIV “and were greatly surprised ,” BBE “and were astonied ,” GENEVA “ and they were agitated ,” MRD “and were stunned ,” LIVING “and were amazed ,” WEYMOUTH “and was startled ,” ISV “in great excitement ,” WILLIAMS “and they were astonished and bewildered ,” AMPLIFIED and “were completely bewildered .” PHILLIPS

When the people finally came together, they witnessed extraordinary phenomenon. They saw Jewish people, gathered together on a Jewish holy day, but conducting themselves in a wholly different manner. They could not account for or explain what they saw. It extended beyond the border of ordinary human experience. No merely human aptitude or ability could have created such a condition, and they knew it.

Let no one tone down the message of the Gospel to make it more palatable to the unlearned and ignorant. If men cannot understand what is said, let a person with the mind of the Lord expound it to them – but let no person try and attract the world with spiritual pablum and worldly sounds!

The word “confounded” means “to pour together, mingle, confuse, and cause dismay,” ROBERTSON “to confound or bewilder,” THAYER “confuse, stir up, cause dismay,” FRIBERG “to cause consternation, to confound,” LOUW-NIDA and “commingle, make ruinous, obliterate, to confound, make of none effect, frustrate.” LIDDELL-SCOTT The meaning “poured together” is the picture of a building collapsing, thus causing confusing. The idea here is that what these people saw and heard could not be processed by their minds. They could not account for it. Later, it will be confirmed that the people knew precisely what was being said, but they were wholly unacquainted with the way it was being done. They could not explain it. The house of human logic caved in. Their reasoning powers were deprived of all of their strength. They could not associate what they saw with any previous experience. They could not even relate it to the Word of God, or anything that had been commanded them concerning observing the day of Pentecost.

Kindred words are “amazed” (Ex 15:15; Judges 20:41; Matt 12:23; 19:25), “perplexed” (Isa 22:5; Mic 7:4; Lk 9:7; 24:4), “astounded” (Ezra 9:3-4; Isa 52:14; Dan 5:9), “astonished” (Lev 26:32; 1 Kgs 9:8; Matt 7:28; Mk 7:37), “marveled” (Psa 48:5; Matt 8:27; 9:33; Mk 15:5), and “dismayed” (1 Sam 17:11; 2 Kgs 19:26; Jer 8:9). Similar English words include “consternation,” “confusion,” “bewildered,” “puzzled,” “baffled,” “dumbfounded,” “nonplused,” and “mystified.”

There is a certain condition that exists in a state of unregeneracy that must be acknowledged. It is that the “natural man,” or the “carnal mind,” cannot comprehend the things of God. They extend beyond the perimeter of their capability. There is no question about the impotency of unregenerate mind.

- “For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be ” (Rom 8:6-7).

- “But as it is written, Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man , the things which God hath prepared for them that love him” (1 Cor 2:9).

- “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14).

Take, for example, the Son of God, who was wisdom incarnate, God manifest in the flesh, and the ambulatory presence of God. It is said of Him, “He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not . He came unto His own, and His own received Him not ” (John 1:11). Ponder also what is said of the Holy Spirit. “Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth Him not, neither knoweth Him : but ye know Him; for He dwelleth with you, and shall be in you” (John 14:17).

Thus, when these people came together, even though they were “devout,” and had been exposed to Word of God, and many of His manners, they were “confounded” by what they saw and heard. It did not conform to what they knew about the day of Pentecost – the “feast of weeks.” Their faculties of discernment were equal to what now faced them.

A Word About Practices and Observance s

We are not as many, who oppose the observance of traditionally Christian holidays – like Christmas and Easter. However, if the church does observe them, they ought to leave stale bread off of the table, and bring something fresh and unique for men to ponder. There is enough mediocrity in the world without the church contributing to the mental garbage heaps men have made.

If the church is going to sing, let it be as a result of being “filled with the Spirit,” and the word of Christ dwelling “richly” in them. Let them teach and admonish one another in their songs, as they are exhorted (Eph 5:18-29; Col 3:16). Let their songs reflect their understanding, not their simplicity. Let the stench of the world not be found on their music.

Let no one tone down the message of the Gospel to make it more palatable to the unlearned and ignorant. If men cannot understand what is said, let a person with the mind of the Lord expound it to them – but let no person try and attract the world with spiritual pabulum and worldly sounds!

All of these manners, and more, are reflected in the events of the day of Pentecost. The working of the Lord is always perfecting consistent with His Divine nature and eternal purpose.

WHAT THEY HEARD

“ . . . because that every man heard them speak in his own language.” Other versions read, “every one heard them speak in his own language ,” NKJV “they were each one hearing them speak in his own language,” NASB “each one heard them speaking in the native language of each ,” NRSV “every man was hearing the words of the disciples in his special language ,” BBE “each one heard them speaking in his own dialect ,” DARBY “each one of them was hearing them speak in his own language,” NAU “to hear their own languages being spoken by the believers ,” NLT “they were each one hearing them speaking in his proper dialect ,” YLT and “to hear their own languages being spoken by the disciples .” LIVING

This was the first response to hearing a real gift of tongues! These words could not be said of by those visiting many assemblies boasting that they can speak in tongues. The visitors might marvel, but not because what they heard was understood ! We do not have to apologize for this observation. Here, we are reading of something that God did. If it does not comport with the public tongue speaking of the day, it is the responsibility of those who speak in tongues to see to it they do not contradict Scriptural examples of the same.

What Was the Miracle

Some have conjectured that the miracle was in the hearing of the people. In that case, the disciples would have spoken in an ordinary language, but would have been heard in a diversity of languages. However innocent this view may seem, it does not agree with the text.

- The disciples were filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak with other languages (Acts 2:4a).
- The Holy Spirit gave the disciples utterance . He is not said to have given hearing to the multitude (2:4b).
- Every man heard the disciples speak in their native language (2:6).
- The multitude marveled that the speakers were Galileans, yet spoke in the native languages of their hearers (2:7-8).
- Jesus had given the promise that the disciples would speak with “new tongues ,” or languages (Mk 16:17).

The miracle, then, was in the speaking, not the hearing. The Spirit dispensed languages, not hearing aptitudes. If this was not the case, how could the hearers have been so astounded? Why would they have noted the natural inability of the speakers if the real miracle was their hearing. And, how would they possibly have known that it was a miracle of hearing? In such a case, how would they have known that the disciples were speaking one language and they were hearing another? How could the Spirit be poured out upon the disciples, and the effects of it register upon the crowd?

THE RESPONSE OF THE MULTITUDE

“ 7a And they were all amazed and marveled . . . ” Other versions read, “ utterly amazed,” LIVING “Amazed and astonished ,” NRSV “they were amazed and wondered ,” RSV “they were full of wonder ,” BBE “ wondered at and marveled,” GENEVA “ astounded , and in amazement,” NAB “were beside themselves in wonder,” NLT “were all amazed at this ,” IE “ stunned and amazed,” ISV “were perfectly astounded ,” WILLIAMS “were beside themselves with amazement ,” AMPLIFIED and “they were absolutely amazed .” PHILLIPS

There was no earthly explanation for what these people were seeing and hearing. It went beyond all human aptitude and training. It could not be produced by some form of trickery or deception. Further, there were no skeptics in the crowd – “they were ALL amazed.” No one doubted that something significant was happening – and there was an extremely large diversity of people present. Some would question why and how what they were beholding and hearing was taking place, but no one doubted its reality.

In a day when the philosophers have gained undue prominence within the professed church, and charlatans foist pretentious signs and wonders upon the church, it is important to know that what the Lord works is real.

In a day when the philosophers have gained undue prominence within the professed church, and charlatans foist pretentious signs and wonders upon the church, it is important to know that what the Lord works is real. There have always been people who did not receive a mighty work from God – as those who said Jesus cast out demons by the power of Beelzebub (Matt 12:24). But they did not deny that the work itself had been done. When confronted with a man who had received his sight, though born blind, Jesus’ critics questioned the authority of Jesus, but they did not question the sight of the man (John 9:24). Some people doubted that the seeing man was the one who was born blind, saying he only looked like him. But they did not question the fact of his sight (John 9:8-10). When the chief priests and Pharisees called a council about the disruptive influence of Jesus upon their religion, they acknowledged the reality of His miracles (John 11:47). When Peter and John healed the lame man at the gate Beautiful, they encountered opposition from the Jewish leaders. Yet those leaders affirmed that a “notable work” had been done, and they could “not deny it” (Acts 4:16).

No one in their generation doubted that Israel was really delivered from Egypt. No one questioned that they really passed through the Red Sea, ate manna, or drank water that came from a rock. Everyone in Israel and among the Philistines knew that David slew Goliath. All those present knew that Daniel had been delivered from the lion’s den. No one doubted that Shadrach and Abednego actually came out of a fiery furnace with no evidence upon them that they were even in it. See, this is the manner of the Lord’s working. It is of another order, and it is exceedingly apparent that it is real, even if men do not want to honor the One who did the work.

The situation before us is this: we are faced with a people who say they are “Christian,” yet have no appetite for the Word of God, which sustains Christians. They profess to be in the family of God, but have no profound love for the other members of the family, not preferring to gather frequently, or for any duration, with them. They say they are followers of Christ, who is not of this world, yet they have an obvious love for this world.

However, since the early times, a new kind of “Christianity” has risen to prominence. It is one that is noted for sham, pretension, and fraud. In this new form of “Christianity,” a change in the people is not required. It is a religion of empty profession that allows its constituents to remain fundamentally like the world. In fact, the structure of this religion presumes that the people have not really been changed. The church has all of the problems the world has. Divorce, marital unfaithfulness, theft, extortion, division, hatred, malice – they are all found within the professing church. There are even a whole category of professional therapists and counselors within the church who are hired to deal with these things.

It is not unusual to hear preachers and teachers admit that the people are at fundamental variance with God, not agreeing with Him, and really desiring to do things contrary to His will. Some say Christians are really just like the Israelites of old, always resisting God and preferring to go in another direction.

The situation before us is this: we are faced with a people who say they are “Christian,” yet have no appetite for the Word of God, which sustains Christians. They profess to be in the family of God, but have no profound love for the other members of the family, not preferring to gather frequently, or for any duration, with them. They say they are followers of Christ, who is not of this world, yet they have an obvious love for this world. Their affection is not set on things above, but they say they want to go to heaven. They say they believe every word of the Bible, but they do not read it and meditate upon it. They say they believe God can do anything, but they seek help from the world instead of from Him.

Everyone with any measure of discernment knows that these observations are really understated. Yet, they are so prevalent that some are thinking they are normal, and are really no cause for concern.

In the face of all of these things, we are now being confronted with a working of the Lord that caused all of the “devout” people to marvel. It did not produce a shred of indifference. Everyone knew that something was happening that could not be accounted for by human wisdom. What they were seeing and hearing was not in the “ordinary” category, and everyone knew it.

As “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15), the church is charged with the responsibility of setting the truth before the people. Not only must the message be authentic, but the power of it must be exhibited in those who proclaim it and have embraced it. There is no place within the Kingdom of God for fundamentally unchanged people. No Intercessor is provided for them (Heb 7:25). No indwelling Spirit is promised to them (Gal 4:6). The “things of the Spirit of God” are not for them (1 Cor 2:14). The “exceeding great and precious promises” of God are not for them (2 Pet 1:4). The “fruit of the Spirit” is not intended for them (Gal 5:22-23). “Things that pertain to life and godliness” are not for them (2 Pet 1:3). When the law of God has not been written into the hearts of people, and put into their minds, they are outside the circumference of the New Covenant (Heb 10:16). If they do not “know the Lord,” being acquainted to some degree with His Person and ways, they are not beneficiaries of the New Covenant (Heb 8:11). God has blessed His people “with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places” (Heb 1:3), but any person who is himself not in those “heavenly places” has absolutely no access to them.

IS THIS RELATED TO OUR TEXT?

It may appear that these observations are wholly unrelated to our text, and are nothing more than a strong opinion. However, when we consider what follows, it will become apparent that they are, indeed, related to our text. Now we will be confronted with a people who did something their kind of people simply could not do. They were doing things that were really impossible.

THE TONGUES – THE MIRACLE OF SPEECH

“7b . . . saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galilaeans? 8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?”

The people who are seeing and hearing these disciples assess the situation. They cannot find an answer for what is going on within the arsenals of human experience or understanding.

SAYING ONE TO ANOTHER

“ . . . saying one to another . . . ” Other versions read, “they asked,” NIV “saying among themselves,” GENEVA “they exclaimed,” LIVING and “they continued to say.” WILLIAMS

Real awakening begins when the people begin speaking to one another about the Gospel they have heard. This happened when John the Baptist started preaching.

- “And as the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ, or not” (Luke 3:15).

- “And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No. Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself?” (John 1:19-22).

It was also so when Jesus walked among men.

- “And all bare Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?” (Luke 4:22).

- “And when He was come into his own country, He taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were The point to be seen is that the working of God is so radically different from this world, it draws attention – either favorable or unfavorable. However, no one is strictly neutral or indifferent when the Lord works or speaks in their presence. They will praise or scoff; approach to Him or leave Him; open their astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?” (Matt 13:54).

- “The officers answered, Never man spake like this man” (John 7:46).

- “And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at His doctrine: for He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes” (Mat 7:29).

- “Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the Prophet. Others said, This is the Christ. But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee?” (John 7:41).

The point to be seen is that the working of God is so radically different from this world, it draws attention – either favorable or unfavorable . However, no one is strictly neutral or indifferent when the Lord works or speaks in their presence. They will praise or scoff; approach to Him or leave Him; open their hearts or close them; accept Him or oppose Him. It is not possible for heavenly influences to be among men, for men to be aware of those influences, and yet remain indifferent to them. There is something about God, Christ, and the Gospel that demand a response. This is because of the stark contrast between God and man, Christ and this world, and the Gospel and the wisdom of men. There is such an obvious difference that it elicits a human response of some kind.

This is confirmed by the experience of the believer – the real believer. In Christ there is a different motive for living – it is the hope of what will be experienced after life in this world, after the world passes away, and after the day of judgment. For those in Christ, this is a “good hope” (2 Thess 2:16). We are “begotten” in order to the possession of this “lively hope” (1 Pet 1:3), and are being ”saved” by it (Rom 8:24). The difference in the life that is lived by this hope becomes very apparent because it contradicts the worldly manner of life. The observation of this difference is assumed – that is, one of the underlying premises of Scripture is that people can see the difference this hope makes in ones manner of life. This is why believers are admonished, “But and if ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye: and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled; But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear: Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ” (1 Pet 3:16). There are several things to be noted in this text.

- First, persecution is the result of the world perceiving the difference in the believer – a difference that is not admired.
- Second, believers are to be glad, or happy, that the difference can be seen.
- Third, we are to devote our whole heart to the “Lord God,” allowing no one else to sit upon its throne.
- Fourth, the radical difference in our manner of life will provoke an inquiry by those who see it.
- In order to neutralize the powerful effects of a holy life, those of the world will speak evil of, and falsely accuse, those who live for Christ.
- By maintaining a good conscience, our lives, joined with the reason for our hope, will cause those who criticize us to be ashamed.

These principles are being lived out in our text. The Lord is really working. His people are really the ones in whom He is working. The results of that working are really being seen and heard. These things are producing a very real response among the people. That is the manner of the kingdom. Where society is indifferent to the presence and message of the church, a very serious deficiency exists.

THE INSTRUMENTS – GALILAEANS

“ . . . Behold, are not all these which speak Galilaeans? . . . ” Other versions read, “ Look , are not all these which speak Galileans?” NKJV “Why, are not all these who are speaking Galileans?” NASB “Are not all these people who are speaking Galileans?” NAB “These people are all from Galilee ,” NLT “Are not all these who are talking Galileans?” AMPLIFIED and “Listen, surely all these speakers are Galileans?” PHILLIPS

How is it that these people were startled at Galileans speaking in such a manner?

Galileans were inhabitants of the region of Galilee. History tells us that they spoke “a dialect of the vernacular Syriac,” McClintok which was different from that of Judaea – another region of “the land of the Jews” (Acts 10:39). It was generally considered to be a crude language, with a special tone that was regarded to be near barbaric. It might be likened to the speech of, what is called, a “hillbilly,” as compared to the more polished speech of a highly educated man. This manner of speech is what caused Peter to be detected as he sat in the room where Jesus was being tried: “Surely you too are one of them; for the way you talk gives you away” NASB (Matt 26:73). Mark writes of that event, “Surely you are one of them; for you are a Galilean , and your speech shows it” (Mark 14:70).

Jesus was raised and ministered in Galilee. You may remember that Nathaniel observed of Him, “Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?” (John 1:46). Also, this was a region which, in the minds of the people, was completely disassociated with any spokesman for God. Once, when Nicodemus spoke in defense of Jesus, and of the injustice of the Pharisees judging Him without hearing Him, the Pharisees responded, “They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet” (John 7:52).

Historically, some of opponents of Jesus and His disciples referred to them all as “Galileans.” It was a term of derision, describing a people who were given no dignity, and were viewed as nearly barbaric. Their manners did not match the requirements of a more cultured society.

The point of marvel was that those with so little culture were speaking with such precision and obvious expertise. They had not been educated in the schools of men, and yet spake as though they were. They were doing something that, technically speaking they were not able to do. Indeed, they had never done this before, yet they were doing it, and doing it well.

The time has come for the processing church to go back to its roots and consider its beginnings. Rather than going to the world to obtain the culture and training they imagine is necessary to deliver the message of God, let them explain why this was not the method their Lord chose. If they say their objectives require that they pursue the course they have chosen, then let them explain why their objectives differ from those of God. What has led them to think in this manner? Is it anything in Scripture? Is it any word from Jesus? Is it seen in any example of Scripture?

ON GALILEANS

“Galileans: one of the names of reproach given to the early Christians. It was the ordinary phrase of Julian the apostate, when he spoke of Christ or Christians. He was accustomed to call Christ ‘the Galilaeen God.’ Not only did he use this epithet himself, but made a law, requiring that no one should call the Christians by any other name, thinking thereby to abolish the name of Christians. He died fighting against them; and as he caught the blood in his hand which flowed from a wound in his side, he dashed it towards heaven, saying these memorable words: Vicisti, O Galilae! ‘Thou hast conquered, O Galilaeen!’”

Bingham; Orig. Eccles. book 1, chapter 2, § 2.

Mind you, it is not my intent to heap condemnation upon those who earnestly desire to serve the Lord. However, it is my desire to probe why the desires of contemporary church leaders are so different from those of the One they say they are following.

Behold the Men the Lord Chose

We have a significant number of men who were chosen by God to deliver His message. Let me remind you of a few of them. Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Samuel, Moses, Elijah, Elisha, David, Ezra, Nehemiah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi, John the Baptist, Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James the son of Alphaeus, Lebbaeus, Simon the Canaanite, Stephen, Philip the evangelist, Barnabas, Paul, Silas, Timothy, Titus, Jude, James the Lord’s brother, Luke.

Which of these men provide an example of advantaging from worldly wisdom? Is it Moses? After all, he was “learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds” (Acts 7:22). Did God employ that wisdom? Did He not wait for forty years before He called Moses while he was on the back side of the desert (Ex 3:1) – time enough for his repertoire of Egyptian wisdom to diminish?

The truth of the matter is that we have no example of a servant of God who employed wisdom acquired from the world to do His work.

This is precisely the way the church begins in Acts. Just as surely as the ancient altar of the Lord did not have a tool of man raised upon it (Ex 20:25), so the inauguration of the New Covenant was devoid of the flesh. Nothing originating with man was in it – nothing at all. If such a thing had been there, it would have “polluted” the beginning of “the day of salvation,” just like man’s tools would have “polluted” the altar. That pollution would also have spread.

Using Things Despised

Here, at the very threshold of the beginning of “the body of Christ,” the Lord uses what was despised by men to accomplish His work. This is in strict accord with His revealed manner: “But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world , and things which are despised , hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not , to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence” (1 Cor 1:27-29).

It is not easy for some to accept this Divine mode. This is because it is properly denigrating to “the flesh,” for which no place has been made in Christ Jesus. It is not that it is sinful to be educated, learn a skill, or acquire professional credentials. Luke was a doctor (Col 4:4). However, he was not chosen to write Scripture for that reason. The point to be seen is that the work of God does not depend upon expertise learned from the world that has been cursed, and from which we must be delivered.

If, on the day of Pentecost, a great orator like Tertullus (Acts 24:1) would have been speaking, is there anyone who imagines the words would have had greater weight? Is the Holy Spirit prone to speak through those who have impressive credentials and are cultured in a manner acceptable to the world? We do not have to speculate on this. Our text affirms that God used people who were derisively called “Galileans” – people who could not possibly have done this if the Holy Spirit had not given them “utterance.”

WE HEAR IN OUR OWN TONGUE

“ 8 And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?” Other versions read, “And how is it that we hear, each in our own language in which we were born?” NKJV “Then how is it that each of us hears them in his own native language ?” NIV “And how is it that every one of us is hearing their words in the language which was ours from our birth ?” BBE “how do we hear them each in our own dialect in which we have been born,” DARBY “How does it happen that each of us hears them in his own native language?” NJB “yet we hear them speaking the languages of the lands where we were born !” NLT ”and yet we hear them speaking all the native languages of the lands where we were born,” LIVING “How then does each one of us hear his own native language spoken by them ?” WEYMOUTH “Then how is it that each one of us hears them speak his own mother tongue ?” MONTGOMERY “Then how is it that we hear, each of us, in our own (particular) dialect to which we were born?” AMPLIFIED and “Then how does it happen that every single one of us can hear the particular language he has known from a child ?” PHILLIPS

This is not how men would have done it! The Jews had their own tongue – “the Hebrew tongue” (John 5:2; Acts 21:40; 22:2; 26:14). Would it not have been better to speak in that language? And what of those who have given undue veneration to the Greek language. It is vaunted as being more precise, and more capable of communicating the truth. Why not deliver the message in that language? This is not to mention Latin, which was the language of Empire. Jesus had a sign over him while on the cross written in Greek (the universal language), Latin (the language of the Empire), and Hebrew (the language of the Jews). Why not confine the speaking to those languages. Would that not have meant any technical requirements? The answer is that such an approach did not meet the Divine requirements, and that is why it was not used.

There are at least three things that can be seen in this marvelous display of aptitudes given by the Spirit of God.

A Global Salvation

First, this is the announcement of a global salvation. It is intended, and is effectual to the fullest extent of the effects of sin. There is no place among men where sin has reached, that salvation will not also reach. Its provision will be realized by all who believe, regardless of their location or language. Paul wrote it this way: “For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many . . . for the judgment was by one to condemnation, but the free gift is of many offences unto justification . . . by one man's offence death reigned by one; much more they which receive abundance of grace and of the gift of righteousness shall reign in life by one, Jesus Christ . . . by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life . . . by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous . . . where sin abounded, grace did much more abound ” (Rom 5:15-20).

Later the Holy Spirit will move John to write that men would be redeemed to God “out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation ” (Rev 5:9). Zechariah also prophesied of the universality of this great salvation. “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations , even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you” (Zech 8:23). This is beginning to take place in our text.

A Personal Salvation

This occasion also confirmed the intensely personal nature of salvation. Every single person heard what was being said in their own personal native tongue. “Every man” heard it in the language of the land where he was born. The word came from Jerusalem, but it was not for Jerusalem only. This is a salvation, the Lord affirms, in which “they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them” (Jer 31:34; Heb 8:11).

A Harmonious Salvation

The word was heard in each language, but it was the same word. A difference in cultures did not require an adjustment of the message itself. Salvation is provided for sinners, not for this nation and that nation , or for men or women, or for rich or poor. Sin does not reflect a respect of persons, and neither does salvation. This is because “there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12). It is not possible for the God of heaven to provide a partial remedy for a universal condition. If what sin caused – everything – cannot be remedied by salvation, then it really is no salvation at all.

How marvelously the unique nature of salvation is summarized in the book of Ephesians. “There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all” (Eph 4:6). Every facet of salvation is harmonious with its revealed intent – the eternal purpose of God, and that purpose is never contradicted! That purpose is to gether everything together in one. “That in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him” (Eph 1:10). From the beginning, this is made clear. It is not possible for God to do anything that is not in strict harmony with that aim. That should be evident.

THE DIVERSITY OF THE CROWD

“ 9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judaea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, 10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, 11a Cretes and Arabians.”

We should not be surprised that from the very first day, the diversity of those being saved is emphasized. If it is true that in Christ there is “ neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:28), then this will be reflected at the very first opening of the door of salvation. If it is true that “there is no respect of persons with God” (Rom 2:11), then it will be confirmed in the events taking place on the day of Pentecost. If “One died for all” (2 Cor 5:14-15), and “all things” belong to all saints (1 Cor 3:21). then from the very beginning salvation will be realized by a vast panorama of people. If “all spiritual blessings” have been provided for all who are raised up with Jesus and made to sit together with Him in the heavenly places (Eph 1:3; 2:7), then we can expect this circumstance to be verified by the very first people who hear the message of that salvation.

There is no second class salvation or second-rate benefits. In this salvation, there are none who gain spiritual advantages because of their position in this world. The flesh, together with every single one of its traits, cannot possibly bring a spiritual advantage or opportunity to anyone – not so much as a single soul.

There is no second class salvation or second-rate benefits. In this salvation, there are none who gain spiritual advantages because of their position in this world. The flesh, together with every single one of its traits, cannot possibly bring a spiritual advantage or opportunity to anyone – not so much as a single soul. No person becomes inferior because of their flesh-and-blood birth, or their station in this world. No kingdom benefits are withheld from a person because of where they were born, their nationality, or where they reside.

Further, because this salvation delivers humanity from this present evil world (Gal 1:4), how can it be possible for any distinction pertaining to this world to impose limitations upon those delivered from it?

All of this may seem quite apparent, but there are vast numbers of believers who are being treated as though they are second-rate citizens in the Kingdom of God. The restriction may be based upon their age, their gender, their attainments, their color . . . etc. But when we come to the day of Pentecost – a day which set the tone for all of time unto the coming of the Lord, no such restrictions will be found!

In this text we will see the reality of the dispersing of the Jews after the era of the kings, and before the birth of Christ. The prophets often spoke of this dispersion, affirming that God would regather the Jews into their own land.

In this text we will see the reality of the dispersing of the Jews after the era of the kings, and before the birth of Christ. The prophets often spoke of this dispersion, affirming that God would regather the Jews into their own land. Some years after Pentecost, James wrote his epistle to dispersed Jews: “James, a servant of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are scattered abroad, greeting” (James 1:1). Peter did the same, referring to their status in Christ: “Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia” (1 Pet 1:1).

Moses prophesied of this scattering: “I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men” (Deu 32:26).

Prior to Pentecost, various prophesies were delivered to the dispersed Jews – prophesies that kindled the flame of hope, as the purpose of God was declared.

- “And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth” (Isa 11:12).

- “And it shall come to pass in that day, that the great trumpet shall be blown, and they shall come which were ready to perish in the land of Assyria, and the outcasts in the land of Egypt, and shall worship the LORD in the holy mount at Jerusalem” (Isa 27:13).

- “I will say to the north, Give up; and to the south, Keep not back: bring my sons from far, and my daughters from the ends of the earth ” (Isa 43:6).

- “And I will make all my mountains a way, and my highways shall be exalted. Behold, these shall come from far : and, lo, these from the north and from the west; and these from the land of Sinim” (Isa 49:11-12).

- “The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to him, beside those that are gathered unto him” (Isa 56:8).

- “Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him , as a shepherd doth his flock” (Jer 31:10).

- “Yet will I leave a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries ” (Ezek 6:8).

- “Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen , and although I have scattered them among the countries , yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will even gather you from the people , and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered , and I will give you the land of Israel” (Ezek 11:16-17).

- “And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered , with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out” (Ezek 20:34).

- “I will accept you with your sweet savor, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered ; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen” (Ezek 20:41).

- “Thus saith the Lord GOD; When I shall have gathered the house of Israel from the people among whom they are scattered , and shall be sanctified in them in the sight of the heathen, then shall they dwell in their land that I have given to my servant Jacob” (Ezek 28:25).

- “And they were scattered , because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered . My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, My flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them” (Ezek 34:5-6).

- “As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered ; so will I seek out my sheep , and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day” (Ezek 34:12).

- “Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad ; Therefore will I save my flock , and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle” (Ezek 34:21- 22).

- “And I scattered them among the heathen , and they were dispersed through the countries : according to their way and according to their doings I judged them” (Ezek 36:19).

- “I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations , and parted my land” (Joel 3:2).

- “From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of My dispersed , shall bring mine offering” (Zeph 3:10).

Even in Jesus’ day, there was a keen awareness of the many Jews that were still dispersed: “Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?" (John 7:35).

From these texts, together with the one before us, several key things ought to be noted.

- Israel was scattered by God because of their transgression.
- God has made a commitment to gather them from the countries through which they were dispersed.
- At the time of Christ, Israel itself was keenly aware of this dispersion.
- The Jews had not lost their identity in the nations throughout which they were dispersed. Our text confirms this to be the case, for they came to Jerusalem from many of these nations – and were clearly identified as “Jews” (2:5). They were scattered, yet remained known.

Our text takes place on the day of Pentecost – the harvest firstfruits. As such, it is a pledge of the future gathering of all of the dispersed Jews. The manner in which the Lord works will reveal much of Himself.

The listing of the nations commences in the East, and goes toward the West. All of the areas are ancient areas.

PARTHIANS

“Parthians . . .” Other versions read, “Men of Parthia.” BBE This was a mountainous region lying to the northeast of Media. It extended from India to the Tigris River, and was a part of Persia. The people have been referred to as descendants of Abraham by Katurah. McCLINTOK The Parthian empire, present in the first century, lasted for a period of 400 years, and was considered very significant. As the crow flies, this country was approximately 1,100 miles from Jerusalem. This is the only Scriptural reference to this area and its inhabitants.

MEDES

“ . . . and Medes . . . ” Other versions read, “Men of . . . Media.” BBE This country was also associated with Persia, lying to the Northwest of Persia Proper. It was a smaller country, being about 150,000 square miles in size – about 3/4 the size of modern France. Media was prominent in the history of Esther (Esth 1:3,14,18; 10:2). Isaiah mentions Media as being instrumental in the judgments of God (Isa 21:2). Daniel prophesied of “the kings of Media and Persia,” who overthrew the Babylonian kingdom (Dan 8:20). As the crow flies, Media was about 800 miles from Jerusalem.

ELAMITES

“ . . . and Elamites . . . ” This territory was to the south of Assyria and east of Persia. At one time, Daniel states that he was “at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam” (Dan 8:2). This identified Elam with the same general area as Parthia and Media. This was an ancient area, being mentioned in Genesis 14:1. It appears from Genesis 10:22 that this country was originally populated by the offspring of Shem, one of Noah’s three sons. As the crow flies, Elam was about 700 miles from Jerusalem.

DWELLERS IN MESOPOTAMIA

“ . . . and the dwellers in Mesopotamia . . . ” This is considered to be the entire region between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Abraham was called from this area (Acts 7:2). Isaac obtained his wife from this area (Gen 24:10). The mysterious prophet Balaam, who prophesied for wages, was also from this area (Deut 23:4). Significant Bible cities in this area include Ur (Gen 11:27-28), Haran (Gen 11:31-32), Charchemiah (2 Chron 35:20), Hena (2 Kgs 19:13), and Sepharvaim (2 Kgs 17:24). Now some citizens of this area come for Pentecost. As the crow flies, Mesopotamia was about 600 miles from Jerusalem.

JUDAEA

“ . . . and in Judaea . . . ” For some, the inclusion of Judea offers some problems, because that is the area in which Jerusalem itself was located. However, those who were speaking were not from Judea, but were remaining in Jerusalem according to the word of Jesus – not because they lived there. We understand Judea to be mentioned because the language spoken in that part of Israel was different than the more rough dialect of the Galileans. It is also mentioned to highlight the diversity of the languages being spoken on this memorable occasion.

CAPPADOCIA

“ . . . and Cappadocia . . . ” This was an area in Asia Minor. It is said by ancient Greek writers that this place was noted for its wickedness. History tells us it was converted to Christianity. ALBERT BARNES Peter wrote his first epistle to converted Jews who lived in this place (1 Pet 1:1). As the crow flies, this area was about 600 miles from Jerusalem.

PONTUS

“ . . . in Pontus . . . ” This was another province in Asia Minor, and was situated close to Cappadocia.. It was the birthplace of Aquila, who, with his wife, were faithful workers with Paul (Acts 18:2). Peter also addressed his first epistle to Jewish brethren in this area (1 Pet 1:1). As the crow flies, this area was about 700 miles from Jerusalem.

ASIA

“ . . . and Asia . . . ” This area was west of Cappadocia and Pontus, and is frequently mentioned in Scripture (Acts 6:9; 19:10,22,25,27,31). Tychicus and Trophimus, known for laboring with Paul, were from this area (Acts 20:4). Early in the history of the church, the Holy Spirit forbade the gospel to be preached in Asia (Acts 16:6). That ban, however, was eventually lifted. Ephesus was the capital of Asia. This was the area in which the seven churches were located to whom John wrote the book for the Revelation (Rev 1:4). As the crow flies, this was about 700 miles from Jerusalem.

PHRYGIA

“ 10 Phrygia . . . ” This was another province in Asia Minor, surrounded by Galatia, Cappadocia, and Pamphylia. It is thought that their language was pure Greek. Paul and Timothy preached extensively in this area (Acts 16:6). Paul went through the area again, strengthening the churches there (Acts 18:23). As the crow flies, this was about 600 miles from Jerusalem.

PAMPHYLIA

“ . . . and Pamphylia . . . ” This was also in Asia Minor. When Paul and the company with him came to this area, John Mark departed from them, returning to Jerusalem (Acts 13:13) – something that greatly irritated Paul (Acts 15:38). As the crow flies, this was about 400 miles from Jerusalem.

EGYPT

“ . . . in Egypt . . . ” This was an extensive country, well known to the Jews. At the time of our text, the language used there was the Coptic language. History tells us that the first translation of Moses and the Prophets into the Greek language took place here (the Septuagint Versions).

ALBERT BARNES It was located to the south of Jerusalem. As the crow flies, this was about 400 miles from the holy city.

PARTS OF LIBYA ABOUT CYRENE

“ . . . and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene . . . ” Other versions read, “the parts of Libya adjoining Cyrene,” NKJV “the districts of Libya around Cyrene,” NASB and “parts of Libya belong to Cyrene.” NRSV Libya is the general name for Africa. The Greeks gave it the name “Africa.” Ezekiel mentions this area, associating it with Ethiopia (Ezek 30:5; 38:5). As the crow flies, it was about 700-800 miles from Jerusalem.

ROME – JEWS AND PROSELYTES

“ . . . and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes . . . ” These were certain Jews who had taken up residence in Rome, the capital of Italy. A great number of Jews lived there at this time. “Proselytes” are Gentiles who were converted to Judaism. The Pharisees were noted for working hard to make proselytes (Matt 23:15). One of the first deacons, Nicolas, was a “proselyte” (acts 6:5). In Antioch, a great number of proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas, intensely interested in their message (Acts 13:43). Josephus says there were eight synagogues in Rome. ALBERT BARNES Some years after Pentecost, Claudius commanded all Jews to depart from Rome. This forced Aquila and Priscilla to leave that area and go to Corinth (Acts 18:1-2). As the crow flies, Rome was about 1,350 miles from Jerusalem.

CRETES

“ . . . Cretes . . . ” Crete is an island in the Mediterranean sea. It is 200 miles long and 50 miles wide. In Paul’s travels, he touched this island (Acts 27:7-8,13). Paul left Titus there to “set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city” (Tit 1:5). The Cretians were noted for their deceptive ways. One of their own prophets said, “The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies [lazy gluttons] ” (Tit 1:12-13). As the crow flies, Crete was about 700 miles from Jerusalem.

ARABIANS

“ . . . and Arabians” Arabia is a large peninsula with Syria to the North, the Euphrates on the East, the Indian ocean on the South, and the Red Sea on the West. Isaiah prophesied against Arabia (Isa 21:13). This is the area into which Paul entered shortly after Jesus appeared to him and called him to the apostleship (Gal 1:17). Mount Sinai is also in Arabia (Gal 4:25). As the crow flies, this was about 300 miles from Jerusalem.

WHAT BROUGHT THESE PEOPLE TO JERUSALEM?

What brought this remarkable melting pot of people to Jerusalem? From one point of view, it was the feast of Pentecost. Even so, that was quite remarkable, for Jews were not noted for faithfully keeping their Divinely appointed feasts. Once, in the days of king Josiah, a glorious passover was observed. Although their observance conformed strictly to the instructions of the Lord, it was said of that Passover, “And there was no passover like to that kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem” (2 Chron 35:18). Yet, during the Passover of our text, “devote men” flooded into the city from many different regions.

From a higher perspective, these men were drawn into Jerusalem by the Living God – drawn, as it were, to the Lord Jesus (John 6:44). He allured them into Jerusalem like Hosea said He allured Israel into the wilderness. “Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her” (Hosea 2:14).

The Lord drew these “devout men” to Jerusalem to fulfill the promise of Joel and other prophets. He brought them in to gather a firstfruit harvest of the nation – a pledge of an even greater harvest to come that would involve the whole of the nation of Israel (Rom 11:15-26). He also brought them in as a firstfruit harvest of the world – the time when the whole field will be reaped according to Revelation 14:15-16.

WHAT THEY WERE HEARING

“11b . . . we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God.” Other versions read, “the mighty deeds of God,” NASB “the wonders of God,” NIV “God’s deeds of power,” NRSV “the great works of God,” BBE “the great things of God,” DARBY “the mighty acts of God,” NAB “the marvels of God,” NJB “the wonderful things God has done,” NLT “the mighty miracles of God,” LIVING “the wonderful things they are saying about God,” IE and “the magnificence of God.” PHILLIPS

We are witnessing the Lord Himself at work! The disciples – all of them – are speaking in different languages as the Spirit of God “gave them utterance.” The Holy Spirit not only enabled them to speak in languages they had not learned, He also gave them the message to deliver. What is it that the disciples were saying in these various languages?

FOR “DEVOUT MEN”

This particular verse is important because it reveals something essential about the work of the Lord – particularly of the manner in which the interest of people is solicited. In order to draw the hearts and minds of the people, a word was being delivered. The disciples did not prepare a banquet to draw in the people. They did not engage in various entertaining activities, descending down into the arena of carnal interests. First, the appeal drew the attention of “devout men.” It was Divinely calculated to do precisely that.

The events of the day of Pentecost contrast sharply with the manner in which the modern church is trying to attract the people. This was not simply a language-speaking display, with unlearned Galileans merely speaking in other difficult and more sophisticated languages. That might have drawn a crowd of linguists, but would have no appeal to “devout men.”

It ought to be noted that as soon as you adapt the Gospel to a certain group you must dilute it, for the Gospel itself is tailored for all men. If you modify this message to suit the interests of people, you must dilute it and rob it of its power. It is for all, and must be presented to all. A gospel that cannot be preached to everyone should not be preached to anyone!

Keep in mind that both Jesus and the apostles delivered a message that appealed to “devout men.” That is why Jesus preached in synagogues (Matt 4:23; 9:35; 12:9; 13:54; Mk 1:21,39; 3:1; 6:2; Lk 4:15,16,44; 6:6; 13:10). It is why He taught “daily” in the Temple (Matt 21:14,23; 26:55; Mk 12:35; 14:19; Lk 19:47; 20:1; 21:37-38; 22:53; John 7:14,28; 8:2,20; 18:20). It is why Paul preached in the synagogues (Acts 9:20; 13:5,14; 14:1; 17:1-2,10,17; 18:4,19; 19:8). It is why the early disciples taught much in the Temple (Acts 2:46; 4:1; 5:20-21,25,42).

When the Gospel was first preached to the Gentiles, the Spirit sent Peter to the house of Cornelius, “a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house” (Acts 10:2). When the Gospel was sent into the regions of Macedonia, the Spirit sent Paul to a river where prayer was being made by certain women (Acts 16:13). The message Paul preached in Thessalonica was embraced by a multitude of “devout Greeks” (Acts 17:4). When Paul was agitated with the pervasive idolatry of Athens he “disputed in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market place with them that met with Him” (Acts 17:17).

I understand that there were others who heard the Gospel. However, they did not hear “another Gospel,” or one that was especially tailored for them. There is only one valid Gospel, and it centers in the Lord, not men. It is an “everlasting Gospel” (Rev 14:6) that has remained unchanged through the ages. It does not require some special adaptation to reach certain cultures. It is fully adequate to be declared in a synagogue (Acts 18:4), a market (Acts 17:17), on a desert highway (Acts 8:26), a special coliseum (Acts 17:19), an educational building (Acts 19:9), a place devoted to prayer (Acts 16:13), a prison (Acts 16:32), or in a political chamber (Acts 24:24-25).

Tragically, we are living in a day when professed preachers and teachers are delivering a word that has little or no appeal to “devout men.” It ought to be noted that as soon as you adapt the Gospel to a certain group you must dilute it, for the Gospel itself is tailored for all men. If you modify this message to suit the interests of people, you must dilute it and rob it of its power. It is for all, and must be presented to all. A gospel that cannot be preached to everyone should not be preached to anyone! The Western world needs to hear a word that has a strong appeal to “devout” people, and that challenges gross sinners to yearn to be “devout.” We must not allow the mega-church moguls of our time to divert our attention to “another gospel” (2 Cor 11:4).

WHAT DID THE PEOPLE HEAR IN THEIR NATIVE LANGUAGE?

What kind of message were these people hearing? What had the Holy Spirit of God moved these people to say? Was it a message of what men could be? Was it a word concerning prosperity? Were they hearing words about how to be successful, or how to conquer failure in its various forms? Precisely what was the content of the message they were hearing?

We are not left to conjecture. The Spirit speaks expressly on this matter. They were hearing “the wonderful works of God!” That is, they were hearing a message of what God Himself had done! This was the proclamation of Divine accomplishments, not human possibilities or obligations!

The expression “wonderful works” is the translation of a single Greek word: megalei/a (mega-laia). The lexical meaning of this word is works that are “magnificent, excellent, splendid, wonderful . . . the mighty works of God, the glorious perfections of God and His marvelous doings,” THAYER “great, powerful, splendid, the mighty acts, powerful works,” FRIBERG “prominence, greatness, importance,” LOUW-NIDA “magnificent, splendid, mighty works, splendidly.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

What Was NOT the Subject

The great works of God are numerous and impressive. Yet, on this day, when “the promise of the Father” was being realized, there are certain works that were NOT the heart of the message.

NOT the Works of Creation

The people to whom, the Holy Spirit had given utterance were not speaking of the wonderful works of creation. These were, indeed, marvelous. However, these people were not speaking of God laying “the foundations of the earth” (Job 38:4-6). They were not declaring when God “framed” the worlds with His Word” (Heb 11:3), separating light from darkness (Gen 1:4), the waters above from the waters beneath (Gen 1:7), and the land from the water (Gen 1:9-10). They were not chronicling God’s creation of a vast array of plant life (Gen 1:11-12), sea life and the fowls of the air from water (Gen 1:20-22), and animal life (Gen 1:24-25). These were not the “works” being declared.

NOT the Marvels of Nature

Nor, indeed, were the marvels of nature the things being declared: “the treasures of the snow,” “the treasures of the hail,” discretionary “rain,” and “drops of dew” (Job 38:22,26-28). They were not speaking about the rising and setting of the sun (Eccl 1:5), establishing a boundary for the sea (Job 38:11), and the marvelous instincts of wildlife (Deut 32:11; Job 39:1-30; Jer 8:9). These were not the “works” being declared.

NOT the Wonders Of Israel’s Deliverance

Nor, indeed, were they rehearsing the many wonderful works that God had wrought upon and among the Israelites. He delivered them from Egypt (Deut 4:20,37), preceding their deliverance with ten mighty plagues (Ex 7:17-12:29; Deut 4:34; 26:8). In that deliverance He gave them favor with the Egyptians so that they gave them everything they required for their journey (Ex 12:36). He brought them through the Red Sea on dry ground, then drowned Pharaoh and his armies in the same sea (Ex 14:22-29). However, these were not the “wonderful works” being declared by the speakers.

NOT the Exploits Wrought in Israel

During their journey to Canaan, God provided Israel miraculous meat (Num 11:21-23,31-33), fed them with miraculous bread (Deut 8:3,16; Josh 5:12), provided them rivers of water from a wilderness rock (Ex 17:6; Num 20:11; Psa 78:16; 114:8), caused their clothing to remain new for forty years (Deut 8:4), and wrought countless miraculous deliverances among them (Ex 15:25; Ex 17:9-13; Deut 11:6-7; Num 17:1-7; Josh 3:14-17). Neither were these the “mighty works” now being spoken into the ears of these “devout men.”

NOT the Miracles In Their Captivity

When Judah was in the Babylonian captivity, some mighty miracles were wrought. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were delivered from a fiery furnace, with not a single evidence of being in the furnace remaining of them (Dan 3:23-27). Daniel was delivered from a den of famished lions, spending an entire night with them (Dan 6:22). But these works were not what was being reported by the Spirit-filled disciples on the day of Pentecost.

Why Were Not These Works Reported?

There is a reason why the wonderful works just mentioned were not being reported. None of these works had any redemptive power. None of them were integral to the New Covenant. None of them can reconcile the world to God. None of them can remove sin, or make peace between God and sinful man. None of them could provide a basis upon which men could be “made acceptable” to God. None of them required the “the Word” to be “made flesh” (John 1:14). None of them required Christ’s death, burial, resurrection, ascension, enthronement, or intercession. None of them could induct “the day of salvation” or “the accepted time.” This day was the beginning of “the day of salvation,” and a higher order of works were being declared.

The Wonderful Works Being Reported

The “wonderful works” of our text related specifically to the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. These were all accomplishments of God. None of them were done by man. They were, strictly and most precisely, “the wonderful works of God.”

All of the other works that I have just mentioned could have been heard in the local synagogues. The Pharisees and scribes knew of those works very well. But the ones that the people were now hearing declared were not known among the people.

All of the other works that I have just mentioned could have been heard in the local synagogues.

The Pharisees and scribes knew of those works very well. But the ones that the people were now hearing declared were not known among the people. Here is a brief sampling of the kind of works involves.

- God sending Christ. “But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law” (Gal 4:4). “In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him” (1 John 4:9). “Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins” (1 John 4:10). “And we have seen and do testify that the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world” (1 John 4:14).

- God confirming Christ. “And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased” (Matt 3:17). “While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye Him” (Mat 17:5). “Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know” (Acts 2:22).

- Christ’s triumphant death. “Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted” (Isa 53:4). “For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh” (Rom 8:3). “He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with him also freely give us all things?” (Rom 8:32). “For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him” (2 Cor 5:21).

- Christ’s glorious resurrection. “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it” (Acts 3:26). “This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses” (Acts 2:32). “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree” (Acts 5:30).

- Christ’s illuminating appearances. “Him God raised up the third day, and showed Him openly; not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead.” (Acts 10:40-41).

The true value of a person or group of persons is found in the frequency of their references to “the wonderful works of God.” The closer men are to the Lord, and the more they are “endued with power from on high,” the more they speak of the works of God.

Christ’s Exaltation. “Wherefor God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name” (Phil 2:9). “Which He wrought in Christ, when He raised him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places” (Eph 1:20).

- God sending forth His promise. “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26). “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of me” (John 15:26). “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33). “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

The priority of God the Father in redemption is seen in the frequency of the references to Him that are in the letters written to the churches. There are twenty references to “the Father” in the Epistles, and six hundred and sixty-two references to “God.” At the highest level the “works” are His. As Jesus Himself said, “Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me? The words that I speak unto you I speak not of Myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works ” (John 14:10).

This is how the inauguration of the New Covenant began: by proclaiming “the wonderful works of God.” This is in strict accord with the prophecy of the sweet Psalmist of Israel: “They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power” (Psa 145:11). The restoration of a wayward people is characterized by such talk. As it is written, “Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing: then said they among the heathen, The LORD hath done great things for them. The LORD hath done great things for us ; whereof we are glad” (Psa 126:3). The heavens and the earth are not set to praising because of what men have done, but because of what the Lord has done. Thus it is written, “Sing, O ye heavens; for the LORD hath done it : shout, ye lower parts of the earth: break forth into singing, ye mountains, O forest, and every tree therein: for the LORD hath redeemed Jacob, and glorified Himself in Israel” (Isa 44:23).

The true value of a person or group of persons is found in the frequency of their references to “the wonderful works of God.” The closer men are to the Lord, and the more they are “endued with power from on high,” the more they speak of the works of God. I was raised in a church and institutional environment in which there were very few references to what the Lord had done. If it had not been for my beloved Father, who had understanding in these things, I suppose I would scarcely have heard of them at all. There was actually more talk about the “church fathers” and the “restoration fathers” than “the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.”

I well remember that after I had been preaching for several years, it finally registered upon my spirit how very little I had been talking about God, and of the Lord Jesus who is bringing us to Him (1 Pet 3:18). When, by the grace of God, I determined to remedy that situation, I was at once charged with being a Calvinist. I found that my “brethren” were not at all comfortable with all of the glory being given to God – even though it is written, “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (Rom 11:36). However, that did not lend itself to the advancement of the institution. It is a great liberty to be freed from the shackles of human institutions and their corrupting influence.

FOR CLARITY

For purposes of clarity, we are being exposed to disciples who were filled with the Holy Spirit, and to the focus and content of their speaking. This is how men spoke when they were “endued with power from on high.” This is the manner in which those who are filled with the Spirit speak. Here, we are exposed to the “mind of the Spirit” (Rom 8:27). Here is a message that heaven intends for men to know.

The assessment of their message is provided a vast array of “devout men” – men who have a heart for God, and are serious about their manner of life. Here is an environment in which God will work.

CONSTERNATION!

“ 12 And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this? 13 Others mocking said, These men are full of new wine.”

Here again, the Spirit emphasizes the total inability of the natural mind to account for what is happening. Today there are sundry things being done in the name of Jesus, some of which appear to be supernatural. Often, however, men can account for these things by causes that are not from God. Thus, for example, some healings are said to be nothing more than a psychosomatic phenomenon. Some trace effective alterations in human conduct to a twelve-step plan of recovery, or the human will, or some other humanly conceived procedure.

But on the day of Pentecost, there was absolutely no way for these men to legitimately account for what was happening. It simply dried up fleshly abilities to diagnose or account for what was being done. It is in the same category as one man killing a thousand seasoned warriors with the jawbone of an ass, or two aged people having a son, or the sun standing still, or a virgin conceiving. There simply is no human explanation for such things.

AMAZED AND IN DOUBT

“And they were all amazed, and were in doubt, saying one to another, What meaneth this?” Other versions read, “So they were all amazed and perplexed, saying to one another, ‘Whatever could this mean?’” NKJV “And they all continued in amazement and great perplexity, saying to one another, ‘What does this mean?’” NASB “And they were all surprised and in doubt saying to one another, What is the reason of this?” BBE “And they all wondered and were astonished, saying one to another: From whom is this thing?” MRD “And all were beside themselves with amazement and were puzzled and bewildered, saying one to another, What can this mean?” AMPLIFIED and “Everyone was utterly amazed and did not know what to make of it, Indeed they kept saying to each other, “What on earth can this mean?”” PHILLIPS

Notice how these men have been said to respond to what they are seeing and hearing.

- They were “confounded” (2:6).
- They were all “amazed and marveled” (2:7).
- They were all “amazed, and were in doubt” (2:12).

In these verses there are four different Greek words used to express the reaction of the listeners. They all are similar in meaning, with some slight variations.

When it comes to the working of the Lord, professionals such as psychiatrists, motivators, sociologists, experts in physiology, statisticians, analysts, and medical experts can bring nothing to the table of explanation.

sunecu.qh – “confounded” (2:6). Disturbed, bewildered, stirred up to tumult. Here there is an agitation brought on by the total inability to account for what is happening.

• evxi,stanto – “amazed” (2:7,12). Astounded, to be out of one’s mind. In this case, all that one can do is stand there with their mouth open.

• evqau,mazon – “marveled” (2:7). To wonder. Here the intellect is surprised and stunned by what is seen and heard – astonished.

• dihpo,roun – “in doubt” (2:12). To be entirely at a loss, to be in perplexity.

In the case of “doubt,” the mind challenges what is seen, questioning whether or not the senses can be trusted with what confronts them. The is mental perplexity, where all ability to account for the happening withers and dies.

One of the great characteristics of the work of God is that it transcends all human explanation. This is why it is such a serious transgression to appeal to the wisdom of the world in matters pertaining to life and godliness. When it comes to the working of the Lord, professionals such as psychiatrists, motivators, sociologists, experts in physiology, statisticians, analysts, and medical experts can bring nothing to the table of explanation. What can experts like this clarify for us in the matter of regeneration, the cleansed conscience, a peace that governs the heart and mind, and a joy that overflows in the midst of great difficulties? How can they account for spiritual understanding, a dominating hope, or a resilient confidence and assurance? They can only feign explanations, for such things have been accomplished by a power that is transcendent to nature. When there is a period such as ours (the twenty-first century), when such men are given places of preeminence in the church, spiritual stupidity is inevitable. Men will be brought to wrong conclusions, just as surely as these “devout men” were when they were exposed to Divine workings.

By doubting, these men were saying, “Can this be true?” “I cannot believe my eyes and ears!” “This can’t be happening!” On this day, however, matters will not end with human consternation! The God who is working will provide the explanation for what is happening.

THE MOCKERS

“ 13 Others mocking . . .” Other versions read, “But others were mocking ,” NASB “Some, however, made fun of them,” NIV “But others sneered NRSV “But others, making sport of them ,” BBE “Others however ridiculed them ” MRD “Some, however, made fun of them ,” NIB “Some, however, laughed it off.” NJB “But others in the crowd were mocking .” NLT “But others, scornfully jeering ,” WEYMOUTH “But others made a joke of it ,” AMPLIFIED and “But there were others who laughed mockingly .” PHILLIPS

When something happens that is too much for the human intellect, some resort to “mocking,” attempting to laugh off what is happening as though it was some deviate expression. The word from which “mocking” is translated has the following lexical meaning: “jesting, to deride, jeer,” THAYER “of derisive behavior, jeer, scoff, sneer,” FRIBERG “make fun of,” UBS “to make fun of someone by joking or jesting,” LOUW-NIDA “to joke, jest, scoff, jeer . . . to mock, scoff at.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

Paul encountered this kind of response when he spoke of the resurrection of the dead in Athens. “And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked : and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter ” (Acts 17:32). Ishmael “mocked” Isaac, chiding him and making fun of him (Gen 21:9). Some foolish children made the mistake of mocking Elijah (2 Kgs 2:23). In the time of Nehemiah, a man named Sanballot “mocked” the Jews who were rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem (Neh 4:1).

Mocking is the attempt of flesh to shake off the influence of truth. It is the reaction of the natural man to something he does not understand. Rather than inquiring further into the matter, what is seen is simply brushed aside with some foolish explanation.

FULL OF NEW WINE

“ . . . said, - These men are full of new wine.” Other versions read, “They are full of sweet wine ,” NASB “They have had too much wine. ” NIV They are filled with new wine ,” NRSV “They have drunken new wine, and are intoxicated ,” MRD “They have had too much wine” {Or sweet wine },” NIB “ They're drunk , that's all ! they said,” NLT “They are brim-full of sweet wine,” WEYMOUTH “They are simply drunk and full of sweet [intoxicating] wine,” AMPLIFIED and “These fellows have drunk too much new wine !” PHILLIPS

This was not an intellectual assessment, but an attempt to brush the whole matter aside. A serious mind could not conclude that hearing men speak in many different languages – all of which were known to the hearers – was something resulting from intoxication. Drunkenness garbles the speech, it does not bring more versatility to it. That is why this is called “mocking.” What these men laughed at, saying it was absurd, was nothing to compare with the absurdity of affirming “that strong drink can teach languages.” Dr McLerlland

Throughout history this has often been the tactic of those subjected to the people of God. For example “the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch” (Acts 11:26). This was not a complimentary statement. The word “Christian” means “of Christ,” or “a follower of Christ.”

Instead of the citizenry of Antioch inquiring into the spread of the truth in that area – “a whole year” – they simply brushed aside the whole phenomenon by saying the people were followers of Christ – a Christ they themselves did not embrace. Similarly, when Festus heard the convicting words of Paul, he cast them from him with a mocking reply: “much learning doth make thee mad” (Acts 26:24). Who can forget what Jesus’ critics said of Him: “Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners” (Matt 11:19). Again, certain people brushed aside the words of Christ saying, “Thou hast a devil” (John 7:20), and “Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan and hast a devil?” (John 8:48).

It is ever true, “But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now ” (Gal 4:29). That text refers to Ishmael mocking Isaac – an occasion which resulted in him and his mother being expelled from the house of Abraham (Gal 4:30; Gen 21:9-14).

Thus these mockers attempt to cast aspersions upon those who are miraculously speaking in their own native tongue. For them, marveling led to mockery instead of inquiry.

New Wine

Precisely what is “new wine?” The expression itself suggests it was not what the Scriptures refer to as “strong drink.” The Greek word from which “new wine” is translated is Gleu,kouj (glu-cose). Its lexical meaning is, “the sweet juice pressed from the grape . . . sweet wine,” THAYER “strictly unfermented juice of grapes; hence sweet new wine,” FRIBERG “new, sweet wine in process of fermentation: sweet wine,” LOUW-NIDA The prophets writings frequently refer to “new wine” or “sweet wine” (Isa 49:26; Hos 4:11; Joel 1:5; Amos 9:13; Zech 9:17). Jesus referred to putting “new wine” into old bottles, saying that it would cause them to break in the process of fermentation (Matt 9:17). Isaiah said “new wine” was found “in the cluster,” from which it was pressed (Isa 65:8).

NEW WINE

“One of the methods in use among the Greeks and Romans of doing this was the following: An amphora or jar was taken and coated with pitch within and without, and was then filled with the juice which flowed from the grapes before they had been fully trodden, and was then corked so as to be air-tight. It was then immersed in a tank of cold water or buried in the sand, and allowed to remain six weeks or two months. The contents after this process were found to remain unchanged for a year, and hence, the name aei gleukov — always sweet. The process was not much unlike what is so common now of preserving fruits and vegetables. Sweet wine, which was probably the same as that mentioned here, is also mentioned in the Old Testament (Isaiah 49:26; Amos 9:13).”
ALBERT BARNES

“New wine” was not the hard liquor with which men are familiar today. It was, indeed, intoxicating, but only when it was imbibed in enormous quantities. In this case, much of the fermentation actually occurred after it was ingested. Paul refers to this kind of drinking when he wrote, “And be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess ; but be filled with the Spirit” (Eph 5:18).

However, even though the disciples were not being charged with being persistent drunkards, they were being mocked . By foolishly charging that they were “drunk with new wine,” these men thought to reduce the impact of what they were hearing. They were seeking to shift the occasion from one of sobriety to one of levity, and from one of wisdom to one of foolishness.

It should not surprise us that men refuse to receive the truth when it is so plainly and evidently declared. In this text “the wonderful works of God” were being reported in the native tongues of the people. It is not possible for the truth to be more plainly presented to the human intellect .

And yet, with all of this apparency, there were some who “mocked,” charging the disciples with being excessively full of new wine. Such a charge is utterly ridiculous, and could in no way be supported by any form of sound reasoning.

That, of course, is precisely how the flesh and the natural mind responds when the truth of God is brought within its grasp. The “things of the Spirit of God . . . are foolishness” to the natural men – even when they are “devout,” and have traveled many miles to observe a God-ordained feast (1 Cor 2:14). Do not be stunned when you encounter such things.

The stage has now been set for a remarkable exposition of the events concerning the Lord Jesus Christ. The vehicles through whom, the Lord will work have been duly prepared, and the audience to whom they will speak have been drawn together, and their attention has been captured for the moment. All of those is the Lord’s doing.

CONCLUSION

The remarkable precision associated with the day of Pentecost is worthy of much contemplation. It reflects the nature of God, His ways, the manner of His kingdom, and the effectiveness of His work. The events of this day took place in a particular year, on a particular day, and at a particular time. They were focused on a particular country, in a particular city, on a particular house, and upon a particular people. That is how precisely the Lord’s purposes are fulfilled. Those are also associations that have been made with the “great salvation” that is in Christ Jesus “with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10).

You have probably noticed that as soon as “the day of Pentecost was fully come,” things began to happen in strict accord with the promises of Christ. He had promised His disciples, “For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence” (Acts 1:5). He had assured them, “I send the promise the promise of My Father upon you,” and “ye shall be endured with power from on high” in Jerusalem (Lk 24:49). The twelve were particularly told that the Holy Spirit would teach them “all things” (John 14:26a), bringing what Jesus had said to them to their “remembrance” (John 14:26b). The Spirit would “testify” of Christ to them (John 15:26), and they would “bear witness” of Him (John 15:27). He would “guide” them “into all truth,” “show” them “things to come,” and “show” to them the things He received from Christ (John 16:13-14). Now, in strict accord with these promises, the day of Pentecost has arrived, and these things are beginning to happen.

Divine purposes are always executed in a timely manner. When the time for Noah’s deliverance came, he entered into the ark “the selfsame day” (Gen 7:23). When the “appointed” time for Isaac to be born arrived, the birth occurred “at the set time of which God had spoken to him” (Gen 21:2). When the time for Israel’s deliverance from Egypt arrived, “it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt” (Ex 12:41). To emphasize the truth, it is stated again: “And it came to pass the selfsame day, that the LORD did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies” (Ex 12:51). Jesus came into the world “when the fulness of the time was come” (Gal 4:4). When the very “hour” appointed for the commencement of Christ’s death arrived, the powers of darkness were loosed and went to work (Lk 22:53). When the exact time for Christ’s resurrection arrived, He burst forth from the tomb, taking up His life again on “the third day,” as He was commanded (Luke 24:46; Acts 10:40)

Within the New Covenant, men are brought into the realm in which Divine appointments are made and carried out with meticulous precision (Eph 2:6). Satan cannot stop, alter, or modify a single one of them – something that has been confirmed by the execution of revealed will of God. Men must learn that this is the case, for it is essential for their assurance and confidence. No one has or can speak like God in this regard: “The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand” (Isa 14:24). Again He testifies, “Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure : calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass ; I have purposed it, I will also do it ” (Isa 46:10-11).

Nebuchadnezzar was precisely correct when he praised the God of heaven, “I blessed the most High, and I praised and honored Him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and His kingdom is from generation to generation: And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, What doest Thou?” (Dan 4:34-35).

Gamaliel was right when he observed, “But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God” (Acts 5:39).

Satan and all the powers of darkness blinded and bound all humanity. The whole world remained under his sway (1 John 5:19). Not a single one of Adam’s offspring successfully stood against Him. Yet, he could not stop Jesus from being born! He could not remove Him after He was born, and was a helpless child. He could not stop Him from growing up, increasing in wisdom, and stature, and in favor with God and man. He could not thwart the vicarious death of Christ, in which the sins of the world were taken away and his own head was bruised. He could not stop the resurrection of Christ, through which He was “declared to be the Son of God with power” (Rom 1:4). He was powerless to stop Jesus from appearing to His disciples after He rose from the dead, and teaching them of things pertaining to the Kingdom of God. He could not stop Him from ascending back into heaven, being given all power in heaven and earth, and being seated at the right hand of God. He could not stop the day of Pentecost from coming. He could not stop Jesus from sending forth the Holy Spirit, or His disciples from being filled with the Spirit, or them speaking with insight and power concerning “the wonderful works of God.” In these things he was impotent.

You may be sure, our adversary will not have power to thwart the completion of what is being started on this marvelous day of Pentecost of our text. The work of God will be completed – even in you personally (Phil 1:6)!

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #7

PETER INTERPRETS THE EVENTS OF THE DAY

“ 2:14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them, Ye men of Judaea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words: 15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day. 16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel; 17 And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: 18 And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy: 19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke: 20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come: 21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. ” (Acts 2:14-21)

INTRODUCTION

God will not leave it to men to assess the events of the day of Pentecost, voicing, as it were, their own opinions about what has taken place. Those who must themselves be saved cannot be trusted to properly interpret the working of the Lord. It makes little difference how seemingly expert they are in Scripture, or diagnosing what they see. A logical mind is, of itself, of no value in this matter.

In confirmation of this, behold what conclusions have already been expressed. These are the observations of “devout men,” cultured under a Divinely given law.

- They were “amazed and marveled” (2:7a).
- They properly observed that Galilean CONTENTS
PETER STAND UP WITH THE ELEVEN (2:14a)
THOSE ADDRESSED, AND WHY PETER SPEAKS (2:14b)
IT IS NOT WHAT SOME OF YOU THINK (2:15)
THIS IS WHAT JOEL PROPHESED (2:16)
THE SPIRIT POURED OUT UPON ALL FLESH (2:17a)
SONS AND DAUGHTERS WILL PROPHECY (2:17b)
YOUNG AND OLD WILL HAVE INSIGHT (2:17c)
SERVANTS AND HANDMAIDENS WILL PROPHECY (2:18)
WONDERS IN HEAVEN, AND SIGNS UPON EARTH (2:19)
NATURE BLIGHTED (2:20)
A UNIVERSAL PROMISE (2:21)
CONCLUSION

•

were speaking (2:7b).

- They were confused because these men were speaking in the native languages of the hearers (2:8).
- They pondered how it was possible for them to be hearing of the wonderful works of God in their own language, and from crude Galileans at that (2:11).
- They were all amazed and perplexed about these events (2:12a).
- Some of them, overcome with much perplexity, doubted, and asked what this could possibly mean (2:12b).
- Some mocked, saying that the speakers were filled with new wine.

Now, are these the kind of people whose judgment can be trusted? Remember, they were “devout men.” Yet, with all of their devotion, God had not revealed to them what was really taking place. That explanation must come from someone who has been privy to what the Lord was doing.

Peter will therefore tell the people what is really happening, and how it is the fulfillment of the promises of the prophets.

It has always been God’s manner to interpret what is made known to those who do not have His mind. This is because men cannot discover the mind of the Lord, or arrive at an understanding of His purposes by means of academics or pedagogy. Whether it is the dreams of Pharaoh, the visions of Nebuchadnezzar, or the Scriptures themselves being read by an inquiring official from Ethiopia, truth must be expounded to the unlearned. Sin has so blighted the natural mind that it cannot comprehend any initial exposure to the mind and purposes of the Lord. If nothing else, it will constrain people, like those in our text, to stand aghast at even the intellectually clear proclamation of “the wonderful works of God.”

PREPARING OUR MINDS

Those who represent themselves as speaking for the Lord must have a proper view of things. They cannot be wrong in their emphasis. The foundation of their reasoning cannot be erroneous, or subject to obsolescence.

It is necessary that we prepare our minds for what Peter will say on this occasion. While men are prone to consider what happened to the disciples, and particularly to the apostles, on this occasion, Peter will proclaim what happened to Christ. In fact, he will not make a single reference to the apostles themselves, and will refer to the experience of the disciples as something foretold by the prophets. In other words, this is nothing less than the outworking of the purpose of God, settled before the foundation of the world, and prophesied by holy men who were moved by the Holy Spirit. However, as important as human experience may be, it is not the heart of the Gospel message. The heart of Peter's message will not be what men get, but what God gives. Technically, that may appear to be the same, but the emphasis is significantly different.

What men desire, and what men can receive may seem to be of paramount importance. However, the truth of the matter is that what God desires, and what He gives is ALL important. The only significance that can be found in the will of man occurs when it is brought into harmony with the mind of the Lord. The only desires of men that have lasting legitimacy are those which reach out for what God has promised and provided in Christ Jesus.

Those who represent themselves as speaking for the Lord must have a proper view of things. They cannot be wrong in their emphasis. The foundation of their reasoning cannot be erroneous, or subject to obsolescence. Their perception of fundamental issues cannot be distorted. They must have an acute awareness of the primary Person, the core message, and the appointed objectives of redemption.

It simply is not possible for an "eternal purpose" to focus upon a temporal need, a purely earthly circumstance, or something that is not integral to man's association with God Himself. It may sound comforting to assert that God is interested in every single aspect of your life – but where is the support for such a notion? If it is so, then why did Jesus refuse to come to the aid of that young man who requested that He speak to his brother about their inheritance (Lk 12:13)? Why, when there were "many widows in Israel," did God choose to work in the behalf of a Gentile widow (Lk 4:25)? Even though "many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elijah," why did the Lord heal a Syrian leper (Lk 4:27)? Why did Jesus say to the people while He remained among them, "For ye have the poor always with you" (Matt 26:11). If Jesus came to resolve human difficulty, why did He not deliver the poor of His own people from poverty while He was among them? Why, not two months after Jesus concluded His ministry, was there a man lame from his mother's womb still being placed at one of the Temple gates (Acts 3:2)? He was over forty years old (Acts 4:22). Had they failed to place him at the gate when Jesus was daily teaching in the Temple (Matt 26:55). If Jesus' came to heal the sick, why was this man still lame?

Although there should be no necessity to say so, this by no means diminishes the compassion of the Lord, as confirmed in the countless people He healed while among us. However, it also confirms that this was not the focus of His ministry.

As grievous as man's physical and interpersonal relations are, they are not the driving cause behind the ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the text before us, Peter will not give any attention to the earthly conditions of men. He will, not hold Jesus up as the answer to human problems as men perceive them. He will not present Jesus as the answer to deviate behavior, domestic difficulty, or various forms of social disorder. He will not say that Jesus is the way to fulfill your dreams, reach your goals, stabilize your finances, and secure success. These are things that men proclaim, but there is a glaring and consistent absence of them in apostolic doctrine.

If men have no driving compulsion to have their sins remitted, be reconciled to God, be at peace with God, and obtain an eternal inheritance, the only minister who can help them is Moses. They must be led to the point where they see a need for Jesus as defined in the Gospel – and that is something that the Law does well (Rom 3:19-20; Gal 3:24-25). If “this present evil world” forms the boundary of human thought, the Jesus of the Gospel will make no sense to men.

Because of its elemental nature, in a sense, this is, what might be called, “Theology 101.” Notwithstanding, because of the prevailing thrust of American Christianity, it is necessary to buttress both our faith and our conscience on this matter.

Sin not only defiled humanity itself, but the entire realm that was made for its habitation. It has been revealed that death, or mortality, has been imposed upon the entire creation. This is referred to as “the bondage of corruption.” Thus it is written, “For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope, because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God” (Rom 8:20-21). This is condition from which creation cannot extricate itself. Contrary to the wicked theory of evolution, things are actually devolving, not evolving. They are decaying, dying, and passing away. This also applies to everything that is limited to the created realm. That is, the “fashion of this world” is also passing away (1 Cor 7:31).

In addition to this, the entire human race – the offspring of Adam – is also passing away, and by nature is totally unacceptable. This circumstance requires two things that can only be accomplished by Deity. First, man must be fundamentally changed – born again. Secondly, he must be delivered from the domain of death, or the realm of mortality. If either of these things does not occur, all hope vanishes like smoke. The heavens and the earth, and everything in them, will ultimately pass away (Matt 24:35; 1 John 2:17). As for mankind, “it is appointed unto man once to die, but after this the judgment” (Heb 9:27).

Salvation is calculated to take men out of the world, effectively separating them from that order. Therefore it is written that God visits humanity “to take out of them a people for His name” (Acts 15:14). It is also written that Jesus died to “deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father” (Gal 1:4). In view of this circumstance, Jesus told His disciples, “I have chosen you out of the world” (John 15:19). From an even higher vantage point, the Father gave Jesus people “out of the world” (John 127:6) in order that He might “bring them to glory” (Heb 2:10). This is because the inheritance to, or for, which they were “begotten” (1 Pet 1:3-4) is an “eternal” one (Heb 9:15). As such, it is not possible that it can be realized by men “in the flesh,” or “in the world.”

This is precisely why all believers are admonished, “Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him” (1 John 2:15). This is not a mere prohibition, or a legal matter. It is something that makes perfect sense to faith. If we have been delivered from the world, and no longer belong to it, and if our inheritance is eternal and apart from it, what possible reason can be given for lusting after what is of the world? Of necessity, this includes everything pertaining to temporary life – everything ! Such things cannot become our focus without forfeiting what Jesus really came to do. Only a person who is in the grip of delusion can choose life in this world as a priority.

The fuller benefits of being in Christ will be revealed after the earth passes away. They will be realized after men have met their appointment with death. They will be received after the day of judgment, the dismissal of Satan and his hosts, and the consignment of the damned to the lake of fire. At that time the purpose of salvation will be fully comprehended as well as experienced.

PRELIMINARY CONCLUSION

God will be declared to be doing precisely what He promised to do. If this declaration contradicts what men preach or teach, then their teaching and preaching must be immediately forsaken. In such a case, there is not the slightest chance that it is true.

I have said these things because the second chapter of Acts deals with the beginning of “the day of salvation.” Here is where the direction of Kingdom labors will be established. Here is where the nature of the Gospel message will be confirmed. Here is where the priority, as well as the necessity, of the Lord Jesus will be affirmed. Peter will preach a message that will clarify what has happened. He will do so by anchoring the minds of the people to the word of the Lord – particularly as expressed in the prophets. God will be declared to be doing precisely what He promised to do. If this declaration contradicts what men preach or teach, then their teaching and preaching must be immediately forsaken. In such a case, there is not the slightest chance that it is true. What is here said of New Covenant life will not be contradicted later by inspired men, for God is not capable of such contradiction. If what men say is required within the church conflicts with what Peter here declares to be what God promised, then men are wrong, and we are to pay no heed to what they say.

HARMONIZING THE BIBLE

Some, taking upon themselves to explain how God thinks, have introduced a certain approach to Scripture that neatly allows for them to entertain erroneous views. They call it “harmonizing the Scripture.” By this they mean that truth is assembled something like a puzzle, which infers that it is basically disjointed as presented in the written word. In this view, it is very important to present “balance” in the teaching, and much is made of this mythical approach. While this method seems to be honest and quite safe, that is not at all the case. The truth of the matter is that this view allows for certain texts of Scripture to remain basically offensive to the individual. By pointing to another text, and seemingly acknowledging the truth of it, the offence of the other text is neutralized, and everyone remains happy. For example, people like this cannot put statements together like “a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law” (Rom 3:28) and “by works a man is justified, and not by faith only” (James 2:24). Thus, when they read, “justified by faith” (Rom 5:1), they affirm that expression must be tied together with James 2:24 to get at its true meaning. Therefore, the truth is actually constructed by men piecing together a collage of carefully selected texts that satisfy the theology they have already accepted.

I will tell you up front that Peter’s words will not fit handily into any man-made theology. They will appear to deceived people as though they are not complete enough, not thorough enough. Their scope will seem too small, and their breadth too narrow. However, after all is said and done, the Holy Spirit will take the words of Peter and convince those who murdered Jesus that they have done the wrong thing, and that they must make amends. After all philosophizing is done, that circumstance confirms that God was, in fact, speaking through Peter. We do well to give heed to his words.

PETER STANDS UP WITH THE ELEVEN

“ 2:14a But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them . . .”

Until this time all of the disciples have been speaking, declaring “the wonderful works of God” in the native languages of “devout men out of every nation under heaven.” Now the attention shifts to Peter and the eleven – the twelve apostles. The church is built upon the foundation that they will lay, in strict accord with the declarations of the prophets of old. As it is written, “And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets , Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone” (Eph 2:20). Again Paul referred to this arrangement: “Which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto His holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit” (Eph 3:5). In his epistle to scattered Jewish believers, Peter also refers to this circumstance. “That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior” (2 Pet 3:2). Jude, the half brother of our Lord, also referred to the priority of the words of the apostles. “But, beloved, remember ye the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Jude 1:17).

The significance of Peter is confirmed by the frequency of the references to him. The Gospels refer to him one hundred and six times. There are 54 references to Peter in the book of Acts, and twelve in the epistles.

“The apostles” (the twelve) are prominent in the book of Acts, being mentioned no less than twenty-eight times (1:2; 2:37,42,43; 4:33,35,36,37; 5:2, 12,18,34,40; 6:6; 8:1,14, 18; 9:27; 11:1; 14:4,14; 15:2,4,6,22,23,33; 16:4). They were not always considered by themselves, but were often linked with others. “The apostles and brethren that were in Judaea” (11:1), “the apostles and elders” (15:2,4,6,22,23; 16:4).

However, when it came to rank, the apostles were placed “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). Their message and insight was more full, adapting them to initiate the actual building of the body of Christ, who worked uniquely with them. This is why they were chosen to accompany Jesus throughout His entire earthly ministry – to “be with Him,” and to be sent forth “to preach” (Mk 3:14).

Therefore, now that the people have gathered together, the apostles step forward to fulfill their ministry.

PETER

“But Peter . . .” Other versions read, “Then Peter,” NIV “And afterwards Simon Cephas,” MRD and “and Peter,” YLT “Peter however.” WEYMOUTH

Peter was the leading man among the apostles. In all of the listings of these men, Peter is first (Matt 10:1-4; Mk 3:15-19; Lk 6:13-16; Acts 1:13-14). When the inner circle of three are mentioned, Peter is always first (Matt 17:1; Mk 5:37; 9:2; Mk 14:33; Lk 8:51; 9:28). When Jesus delivered the Olivet discourse to four of His disciples, Peter was the first one listed (Mk 13:3). When He rose from the dead, Jesus appeared to Peter first, then to “the twelve” (1 Cor 15:5). Following his conversion and call to the apostleship, Paul went up to Jerusalem “to see Peter,” but saw none of the other apostles (Gal 1:18-19). Paul said the “Gospel of the circumcision” was given “unto Peter,” as the chief among the twelve (Gal 2:7-8).

The significance of Peter is confirmed by the frequency of the references to him. The Gospels refer to him one hundred and six times. There are 54 references to Peter in the book of Acts, and twelve in the epistles.

Now Peter rises in his appointed role, taking the lead to which He had been appointed, and for which he had been chosen.

STANDING UP WITH THE ELEVEN

“ . . . standing up with the eleven . . .” Other versions read, “taking his stand with the eleven,” NASB “stood up with the Eleven,” NIV “standing with the eleven ,” NRSV “getting up, with the eleven,” BBE “rose up, with the eleven legates ,” MRD “stepped forward with the eleven,” NLT “standing forth with the eleven,” RWB “having stood up with the eleven,” YLT “ together with the Eleven,” WEYMOUTH and “with the eleven standing by Him .” PHILLIPS

There are three ways in which this text is viewed.

- That Peter rose up with the eleven who were already standing and speaking.
- That all twelve stood up at this time, with Peter stepping forward as the spokesman.
- That Peter stood up with the eleven standing up with him.

The idea here is that Peter stood up as one who had a grasp of the situation, and “the eleven” joined him in a show of unity and mutual understanding. The others probably joined in the speaking in an orderly manner, yet the Spirit brings Peter to the forefront of the occasion. He had been prepared for this moment, and seized the opportunity with zeal and insight.

Up to this point, as Peter will confirm, all of the disciples had been speaking as the Spirit gave them utterance. Now, however, the emphasis shifts to the twelve, and they move into the spiritual limelight. Just as within the whole church, they are “first” among the redeemed, not isolated from them (1 Cor 12:28). Those who teach that only the twelve were gathered together, and only the twelve were filled with the Spirit, and only the twelve spoke in other languages as the Spirit gave them utterance, are in sharp conflict with the Spirit’s representation of the body of Christ. Such an approach violates the prophecy that Peter said was being fulfilled in the presence of his listeners.

Notice that Luke states Peter stood up “with the eleven,” thereby confirming that Matthias was, indeed, “numbered with the eleven apostles,” filling the vacated bishopric of Judas (1:26). Those, therefore, who say that Peter took it upon himself to replace Judas, and that Matthias was really not the twelfth apostle, could not possibly be more wrong – and they are foolish besides. “The twelve” are also mentioned in the sixth chapter as being in charge of the church, gathering them together to appoint the first deacons (6:2).

LIFTED UP HIS VOICE

“ . . . lifted up his voice . . . ” Other versions read, “ raised his voice,” NKJV “said in a loud voice ,” BBE “ elevated his voice,” MRD “and shouted ,” NLT and “spoke loudly .” IE

If the Holy Spirit makes a point of this, then we ought to give due heed to what is said. Peter spoke to be heard, for there is no point to speaking if one cannot be heard. God gave the following instructions to the Levites, who were to read all the curses of the Law to the people: “And the Levites shall speak, and say unto all the men of Israel with a loud voice ” (Deut 27:14). When Solomon blessed all of the people at the dedication of the Temple, he did so with a “loud voice”: “And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice , saying” (1 Kgs 8:55). God’s praise was also to be done with “a loud voice ” (2 Chron 20:19; Neh 12:42; Psa 98:4).

The prophets frequently spoke of the voice being lifted up, thereby accenting the importance of what was being said.

- “Lift up thy voice , O daughter of Gallim: cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth” (Isa 10:30).
- “O Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid ; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!” (Isa 40:9).

This is a marvelous spiritual aptitude that those who speak for Christ must culture. They are to have a message from God that is addressed to the people. That requires an acute awareness of both the Lord and the audience – who is being represented, and to whom the word is being delivered.

“Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet , and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins” (Isa 58:1).

- “Go up to Lebanon, and cry; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages: for all thy lovers are destroyed” (Jer 22:20).

It is not that this is a heartless law, or an empty routine that men are to adopt. It is rather a way of loving the Lord with all of our “strength” (Mk 12:30), and using our capacities to their fullest when they are employed in the work of the Lord.

Thus Peter’s voice rises to its peak, overshadowing the speaking going on among the multitude, and the reporting of the wonderful works of God by the other disciples. I gather that, at this point, the other speaking ceased as the attention of the people was drawn to an inspired explanation of the startling events they were witnessing.

AND SAID UNTO THEM

“ . . . and said unto them . . .” Other versions read, “declared to them,” NASB “addressed the crowd,” NIV “addressed them,” NRSV “spoke forth unto them,” ASV and “proclaimed to them.” NAB

Peter did not “speak into the air” (1 Cor 14:9), but clearly and powerfully addressed the inquiring crowd. His words were not only inspired as to their content, they were focused as to their objective. This is a marvelous spiritual aptitude that those who speak for Christ must cultivate. They are to have a message from God that is addressed to the people. That requires an acute awareness of both the Lord and the audience – who is being represented, and to whom the word is being delivered. This should bring empty academic lectures to a grinding halt within the church. Impressive displays of knowledge have no real value if the word is not from God and particularly for the people. This is what Solomon would call a word that is “fitly spoken,” or “spoken in right circumstances” NASB (Prov 25:11). Again, he referred to “a word spoken in due season” (Prov 15:23), and lips that give “a right answer” (Prov 24:26). The words Peter will speak will be, as Solomon stated, “acceptable words” (Eccl 12:10).

THOSE ADDRESSED, AND WHY PETER SPEAKS

“ 14b . . . Ye men of Judaea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem, be this known unto you, and hearken to my words.”

Peter aims his words like an archer aims his arrow. This is characteristic of a person speaking through the Spirit.

MEN OF JUDEA AND ALL DWELLING IN JERUSALEM

“ . . . Ye men of Judaea, and all ye that dwell at Jerusalem . . .” Other versions read, “ Men of Judea and all you who live in Jerusalem,” NASB “ Fellow Jews and all of you who live in Jerusalem,” NIV “Men of Judaea, and all ye inhabitants of Jerusalem,” DARBY “ Men, Jews, and all ye who reside in Jerusalem,” MRD “ fellow Jews and residents of Jerusalem,” NLT “Ye men of Jewry , and all ye that dwell in Jerusalem,” PNT “ visitors and residents of Jerusalem alike,” LIVING and “ My Jewish brothers and all of you who are staying in Jerusalem .” IE

The word “Judaea” comes from the Greek word Vioudai/oi (je-hu-dah-ios), which means “belonging to the Jewish race, Jewish as respects race, before exile, citizens of the kingdom of Judah, after exile, all Israelites, the Jews, the Jewish race,” THAYER “Jew in respect to race or religion, as opposed to non-Jew,” FRIBERG “Jewish,” UBS “the ethnic name of a person who belongs to the Jewish nation,” LOUW-NIDA Other verses containing this word translate it “Jews” (Acts 2:9; 14:5; 21:21; Rom 1:16; Gal 2:13).

Here Peter uses the word to accent the superiority of their Jewish nation over the foreign nations in which they were residing. It is as though he was saying, “Although you are residing in many different nations, you are, in reality, primarily members of the Jewish race.” This same kind of reasoning is found in the terms “Spanish-American, “ “African-American,” etc.

Peter, then, speaks to all of the Jews, whether naturally born or proselytes – those who were from other countries, and those who made their home in Jerusalem and the surrounding area.

BE THIS KNOWN UNTO YOU

“ . . . be this known unto you . . . ” Other versions read, “Let this be known to you,” NKJV “let me explain this to you,” NIV “ take note of this,” BBE “Listen carefully, all of you,” NLT “ Listen , all of you,” LIVING “Listen to me. I will tell you something you need to know ,” IE “be in no uncertainty about this matter,” WEYMOUTH “You must understand something,” ISV “ have no doubt about this matter,” MONTGOMERY “let this be [explained] to you so that you will know and understand ,” AMPLIFIED and “ listen carefully to what I say.” PHILLIPS

This is not an occasion for entertainment, or presenting some curious and intriguing insights. This was a time of revelation, when needful things would be made known. The knowledge that will be disseminated will have to do with “the wonderful works of God” as wrought out in and through Jesus Christ. Peter will not expound the Law. There were men present who could do that. He will not deliver an oration about how men ought to live under the Roman yoke, or exhort the people to free themselves from it. He will not rehearse something that was already known among the people. This will be a time of fresh and invigorating knowledge – knowledge that is intended to be embraced by the listeners.

HEARKEN TO MY WORDS

“ . . . and hearken to my words.” Other versions read, “ heed my words,” NKJV “ give heed to my words,” NASB “ listen carefully to what I say,” NIV “ give ear to my words,” RSV “with your ears receive my words ,” DOUAY “listen to my words,” NAB “ Make no mistake about this,” NLT “hearken to my sayings ,” YLT “Listen carefully,” IE “ pay attention to what I say,” WEYMOUTH “ pay close attention to my words,” WILLIAMS “ listen closely to what I have to say,” AMPLIFIED and “ while I explain to you what has happened.” PHILLIPS

Here Peter calls upon the people to fasten their attention on what he is saying with a mind not to miss anything he says. They were to marshal all of their powers of concentration, and gather together all of their attention. Let no distraction take hold of them. Let them not be drawn aside to other sights and sounds. Gird up the loins of your mind! Shut out inferior and troubling thoughts! Words will now be said that must be comprehended, and that circumstance required the undivided attention of the people.

We have lived to see a new kind generation rise – at least new in this part of the world. Actually, it is a generation that can be traced back to heathen cultures. This kind of generation is referred to as “hedonistic.” Hedonism is the doctrine that “pleasure or happiness is the sole and chief good in life.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER This doctrine was taught by the Epicureans and Cyrenaics. Paul encountered some of these people in Athens (Acts 17:18).

This approach to life was also adopted by the Nicolaites, who are mentioned twice in the letters to the seven churches in Asia. To the angel of the church at Ephesus John was told to write, “But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes, which I also hate ” (Rev 2:6). To the church at Pergamos he wrote, “So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes, which thing I hate ” (Rev 2:15). While much of the details of their teachings is not known, its general thrust is acknowledged to allow for extensive promiscuity, covetousness and fleshly gratification. IRENAEUS, Adv. Haeres. 1,26 This, of course, is precisely the approach to life taken by the Epicureans: self is all important, and the gratification of the flesh is primary.

EPICUREAN PHILOSOPHY

There is no constraint, no obligation to rectitude; there is no moral compulsion; there is no domain for conscience; there can only be a more or less judicious and provident adaptation of actions to the judgments or dispositions of men, and to the supposed satisfaction of the individual. Morality without religion is a pretense and a delusion. A tranquil and pleasurable existence becomes the summum bonum of the sage; the gratification of every passion as it arises the sole duty of an eager and undisciplined nature. Every restraint is removed except such as may be voluntarily imposed; and though cool, impassive, and indolent dispositions may maintain an external propriety of demeanor when exposed to no temptation, there can be no guarantee for rectitude of conduct, and the license of all passions will be gratified by the unclean beasts who wallow in the Epicurean style. McCLINTOK and STRONG

This kind of approach to life has now crept more fully into the church, even though Jesus twice affirmed His hatred of it. This is the mother of all church division – someone is seeking their own desire. It is at the root of the present controversy over music in the church. It is the origin of watered down preaching, adopting worldly philosophies, and striving to appeal to the natural inclinations of the people.

What Does This Have to Do with the Text?

While this may very well appear to be a pointless diversion, it does have much to do with our text. When Peter shouts out, “be this known unto you, and hearken to my words,” he is calling them to consider something greater than themselves. This is a summons to consider something that is wholly separate from fleshly interests, the care of the body, and earthly appetites. He will not speak of the gratification of personal desires – although what He says, if duly heeded, will produce a deep satisfaction. This will not be a “how-to” seminar, or a lecture on how to achieve success in life, and find real satisfaction in the flesh, obtaining all manner of worldly objectives. That kind of approach belongs to the Epicureans and the Nicolaitanes.

Admittedly, this is in sharp conflict with the modern approach to Christianity with its youth movements, senior citizen retreats, and the likes. It is not that such things are of themselves wrong. They are not in concert with the manner of Divine appeals and emphases. This will become exceedingly apparent.

IT IS NOT WHAT SOME OF YOU THINK

“ 15 For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day.”

Peter does not allow for the remotest possibility that what they said had one spec of truth in it. He gives them no right to utter such an absurdity – free speech or not. Whatever one may think about freedom and liberty, men are never free enough to speak a lie, or cast reproach upon the truth.

Being led by the Spirit, Peter is not content for the events of the day to be misunderstood. An “imagination” concerning what is occurring has been voiced, and now, being filled with the Holy Spirit, Peter will cast it down.

THESE ARE NOT DRUNKEN AS YE SUPPOSE

“For these are not drunken, as ye suppose . . .” Other versions read, “For these men are not overcome with wine, as it seems to you ,” BBE “for these are not full of wine, as ye suppose,”

DARBY “For these are not intoxicated, as ye suppose ,” MRD “Some of you are saying these people are drunk. It isn't true !” NLT “These men are not drunk as you think ,” IE “This is not intoxication as you suppose,” WEYMOUTH and “For these men are not drunk, as you imagine .”
AMPLIFIED

Peter does not descend into the arena of speculation or opinion. He does not say, “There is another way of looking at these things,” or “That is just your opinion.” Some among them had declared, “These men are full of new wine” (2:13). Peter does not allow for the remotest possibility that what they said had one spec of truth in it. He gives them no right to utter such an absurdity – free speech or not. Whatever one may think about freedom and liberty, men are never free enough to speak a lie, or cast reproach upon the truth. Salvation is not declared in an arena of free thought and unfettered opinion.

When men begin to allow for differing views of the truth, they move further away from it. This has become such a common practice that professing Christians often think nothing of men maintaining views of Scripture that are actually in conflict with one another. They imagine that men are free to do this, and that God thinks nothing of it. All of this is embraced in spite of the fact that the Spirit has said, “That ye may with ONE MIND and ONE MOUTH glory God” (Rom 15:6), “be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment ” (1 Cor 1:10), “be of one mind ,” (2 Cor 13:11), “with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel” (Phil 1:27), “be of one accord , be of one mind ” (Phil 2:2), “be ye all of one mind ” (1 Pet 3:8), and “arm yourselves likewise with the same mind” (1 Pet 4:11).

Some sophist will say, “What about Romans 14?” That text appears to justify the maintenance of differing views about spiritual matters (Rom 14:1-6). However, the whole point of that text is NOT the continuance of varying views, but refusing to condemn those who see such things differently (14:10-13). The variant views are to be maintained in a conscientious effort to please the Lord (14:7-9). Further, the postulate is that as each person lives unto the Lord, their views will be brought into synch with the truth itself (14:17-19). This is what Paul meant in his statement to the Philippians: “Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you” (Phil 3:15). The point is that different views may, indeed, be entertained. However that condition must not continue, and there is nothing about salvatration that allows for their continuance.

Thus, from the very outset, Peter will throw down erroneous thoughts, for they really have no place with the truth of God. Before he explains what HAS happened, he will clearly define what has NOT happened.

IT IS BUT THE THIRD HOUR OF THE DAY

“ . . . seeing it is but the third hour of the day.” Other versions read, “It is only the third hour of the day,” NKJV “It’s only nine in the morning ,” NIV “it is only nine o’clock in the morning,” NRSV “t’s much too early for that. People don't get drunk by nine o'clock in the morning,” NLT “for it is [only] the third hour (about 9:00 a.m.) of the day,” AMPLIFIED and “ is after all only nine o'clock in the morning of this great feast day.” PHILLIPS

The charge that had been leveled at the speakers was foolish, and wholly without any basis at all. That, of course, is how the flesh is, leaping to ignorant conclusions so that it justifies ignoring what is being said. But Peter will not let the speakers go so easily. He will point out the absurdity of what they have said. He does not assume their sincerity, for sincerity does not move one to leap to foolish conclusions. Sincerity moves one to consideration, examination, and the pursuit of the truth. Where these traits are not found, sincerity is not present – at least, not in the matter at hand. That is, they may very well have been sincere about keeping the Passover and Pentecost, but they were not sincere in their response to the miracle that had confronted them.

The “third hour of the day” was nine o’clock in the morning. This gives us some idea about when the events of the day started. Ponder what had already taken place.

- They were all together with one accord in one place (2:1).
- A sound came from heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and filled all the house where they were sitting (2:2).
- There appeared cloven tongues like fire, sitting upon each of the disciples (2:3).
- They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak in other languages as the Spirit gave them utterance (2:4).
- What was happening was “noised abroad” (2:6a).
- A multitude came together and were confounded because they heard the disciples speaking in their native tongues (2:6b).
- The multitude were amazed, and began speaking to one another, observing that they were hearing of “the wonderful works of God” (2:7).
- The multitude were all amazed, and wondered what all of this could mean (2:12).
- Some mocked, saying that the disciples were “full of new wine” (2:13).

I cannot conceive of such remarkable things happening within a few minutes. However one chooses to look at this, it appears clear that the events of the day commenced rather early – quite unlike gatherings during our time. One senses a feeling of expectancy.

THIS IS WHAT JOEL PROPHESED

“ 16 But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel.”

Peter immediately takes them to the Scriptures – their Scriptures. He will explain what was happening by showing God had foretold through the prophets what the people were now witnessing. That is how he will account for legitimate spiritual experience.

We will now see that valid spiritual happenings will correlate with Scripture. This is because “the Lord GOD will do nothing, but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets” (Amos 3:7). Of old time, God told His people to test what was put before them by Scripture. “And when they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God? for the living to the dead? To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them ” (Isa 8:19-20).

There are self-proclaimed prophets in our day who declare new things are happening. These include such things as being “slain in the Spirit,” falling out under the power,” “laughing in the Spirit,” and people expressing animal-like sounds. However, they are not speaking according to God’s word. No prophet foretold such occurrences, and the church is built upon the foundation of “the apostles and prophets ” (Eph 2:20) – not contemporary prophets, but those who “prophesied of the grace that should come unto you” (1 Pet 1:10). These were the prophets who “testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:11).

Now, let us behold how Peter speaks, and how he explains the events of the day.

THIS IS THAT

“But this is that . . .” Other versions read, “But this is what,” NKJV “No, this is what,” NIV “On the contrary, this is what,” CSB “What you see this morning was predicted centuries ago ,” LIVING “This is the thing,” IE “But [instead] this is [the beginning of] what,” AMPLIFIED and “No, this something which was predicted .” PHILLIPS

Peter immediately takes them to the Scriptures – their Scriptures. He will explain what was happening by showing God had foretold through the prophets what the people were now witnessing. That is how he will account for legitimate spiritual experience.

This is not the manner in which explanations are being provided today. For example, those who are telling us that God is dramatically working through a new praise movement have not shown us any prophecy of such a thing. Those who are saying that a great revival will break out among the youth have not correlated it with Scripture. The people who are testifying of a latter day outbreak of healing are not buttressing their words with the prophets.

I understand that this may appear too critical and too demanding. However, in this text we are being exposed to a very real Divine beginning, and therefore it sets the stage for proper thought and proclamation as well. We must discipline our minds to remember that Peter is speaking just as the others had been speaking – as one “filled with the Holy Spirit”

SPOKEN BY THE PROPHET JOEL

“ . . . which was spoken by the prophet Joel.” Other versions read, “spoken of through the prophet Joel,” NASB “uttered through the prophet Joel,” ESV “this is what the prophet was saying,” NJB “predicted long ago by the prophet Joel,” NLT and “said through the prophet Joel.” IE

So far as the record is concerned, Jesus had not made a point of Joel’s prophecy to the disciples. Now, however, the Holy Spirit will make this association. He will “guide them into all truth” (John 16:13) – and God’s WORD “is truth” (John 17:17).

Peter does not speak as a robot, or as one who is in a trance and knows not what he is saying. Peter knows who he is addressing – Jews from afar, and those who were dwelling in Jerusalem as well. He speaks as one who has heard the charges the listeners have made, being fully aware of their words. He speaks as one who is fully aware of the time – “the third hour of the day.” He has all of his powers of reason, knowing that drunkenness does not happen at that time of the day.

Now, in a display of spiritual aptitude, that can only be given by the Holy Spirit, he correlates what is happening with something that Joel said at least 600 years before, and possibly nearly 900 years prior to this particular day of Pentecost. What Peter now says are words “taught by the Spirit, combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words” NASB (1 Cor 2:13). These words are suitable containers for carrying the news of salvation. They are words confirming that God always speaks and acts with His purpose in mind, and in accord with the holy prophets, to whom He revealed these things.

THE SPIRIT POURED OUT UPON ALL FLESH

“ 17a And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh . . . ”

Joel appears to be one of the earlier prophets, although the precise time of his labors are uncertain. There are a number of allusions to his prophecies by other prophets.

- “Roar from Zion” (Amos 1:2 compared to Joel 3:16).
- “Mountains drop sweet wine” (Amos 9:13 compared to Joel 3:18).

- The Lord “repenting” of evil (Amos 7:3 compared to Joel 2:13).
- Devouring the deep and eating up part (Amos 7:4 compared with Joel 1:20).
- Heavenly bodies darkened (Isaiah 13:10 compared with Joel 2:10,31).
- Shaking heaven and earth (Isaiah 13:13 compared with Joel 3:15,16).
- Faces burning with shame and reproach (Isaiah 13:8 compared with Joel 2:6).
- Casting lots for the people (Obadiah 1:11 compared with Joel 3:3).
- Violence against Jacob (Obadiah 1:10 compared to Joel 3:19).
- The nearness of the chastening day of God (Obadiah 1:15 compared with Joel 1:15).
- Signs, wonders, and deliverance (Zechariah 12:2,9; 14:1, 5-11 compared with Joel 2:30-32)

If Joel prophesied before Isaiah, that would put him prior to 760 B.C. Amos, who appears to allude to Joel’s prophesy, lived and prophesied around 760 B.C. Zechariah prophesied around 750 B.C. Obadiah prophesied around 550 B.C. Based upon these generalities, the particular prophecy to which Peter refers was given somewhere between 800 and 600 years prior to this day of Pentecost.

For modern religious men, contemporary circumstances and needs are the emphasis of the hour. Men cry out for relevancy, and for things that will assist them in living happy and successful lives. However, there is a total absence of this sort of thing in our text. No one would have imagined that Jerusalem needed what is now going to be announced. The people drawn to behold what was taking place saw nothing pertinent in it – it only produced consternation in them. However, this was something that God was doing – something of which He had spoken centuries earlier. Nothing can possibly be more relevant in a world created by God than what He Himself is doing.

THE PROPHECY OF JOEL

JOEL 2:28-32

“ 28 And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: 29 And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit. 30 And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. 31 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come. 32 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call.”

Since the people could not possibly have made a correlation between what they were seeing and what the prophets declared, Peter will show it to them. He will show them that their own Scriptures had spoken of this day, yet they knew it not.

IT SHALL COME TO PASS

“And it shall come to pass . . .” Other versions read, “and it shall be,” NASB “it will be,” NRSV “it will come about,” BBE and “It will occur.” WILLIAMS

There is a certitude in the Word of God that is refreshing to those who are living by faith and being saved by hope. Faith cannot survive on a message or possibilities or probabilities. Hope will wither and die if all it has is the thought of something that might be. It is not wrong to consider the possibilities, but it must only be done after the consideration of certainties.

The prophets (Isaiah through Malachi) used this phrase – “it shall come to pass” – seventy-eight times. The words affirm an “eternal purpose” that cannot possibly be negated or altered. God affirms, “My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure” (Isa 46:10) Again He shouts to the world, “I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it” (Isa 46:11). And again He says, “I work, and who will reverse it?” NKJV (Isa 43:13). David affirmed, “The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever, the thoughts of His heart to all generations” (Psa 33:11). Again David wrote, “Whatsoever the LORD pleased, that did He in heaven, and in earth, in the seas, and all deep places” (Psa 135:6).

If these statements were not absolute truth, Peter could never have said “This is that which was prophesied by the prophet Joel; and it shall come to pass!” Satan could not stop it. His principalities and powers could not deter it. The chief priests and rulers of the Jews could not cause it to be delayed. Pilate and Herod were powerless to hinder it in any way. The inauguration of the New Covenant took place on the appointed day, and at the appointed hour, and without any modification from the original intention, announced centuries before by Joel.

Now Peter begins his explanation of the events.

IN THE LAST DAYS

“ . . . in the last days saith God . . . ” Other versions read, “in the last days says God,” NASB “in the last days . . . God declares,” NRSV and “in the last days – the Lord declares .” NJB

Here Peter is caught up in the spirit of the prophets, giving the sense of the text. Joel does not use the expression “last days,” but relates his prophecy to certain workings of the Lord with Israel. He uses the phrase, “And it shall come to pass afterward” (Joel 2:28). Peter here employs the words of Isaiah, who said, “And it shall come to pass in the last days . . . ” (Isa 2:2). Micah used the same phrase, denoting, as did Isaiah, the times of the Messiah (Micah 4:1). This is the last major division of time.

There is a sense in which the phrase “last days” pertains to the closing period of “the day of salvation.” Thus Paul, warning of a coming apostasy, writes around thirty years after Pentecost, “This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come” (2 Tim 3:1). Peter does the same thing: “Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts” (2 Pet 3:3).

Yet, in our text, the phrase is used to describe the entire “day of salvation,” or period of the New Covenant – particularly of the initiation of that era. The book of Hebrews also uses the expression in this way. “God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds” (Heb 1:1-2).

From the perspective of our text, the closing period of time is viewed as the most productive one enlightened of all eras. In other words, the latter period of this world will be the time of the greatest revelation and opportunity. As when the water was turned into wine, God has “kept the good” for the last segment of human history (John 2:10). Such marvelous realities as justification (Rom 4:25; 5:18), eternal life (John 17:2-3), fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9), and the “communion of the Holy Spirit” (2 Cor 13:10) are all being realized in “the last days.”

This means that, in the fullest sense of the word, “the last days” are not reserved for the “antichrist” (1 John 2:18), the “man of sin” (2 Thess 2:3), “the beast” (Rev 13:11-18; 19:19), and “the false prophet” (Rev 16:13; 19:20). These blotches on human history will have their day during the “latter times” (1 Tim 4:1), but they will not close out “the last days.” The “last days” will be brought to an end when the Lord appears in all of His glory. At that time, the seeming success of the wicked one will be brought to a grinding halt. As it is written, “And then the lawless one will be revealed, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of His mouth and destroy with the brightness of His coming ” (2 Thess 2:8).

Until the Lord returns in all of His glory, “the day of salvation” and “the time accepted” is in place (2 Cor 6:2), and “whosoever will” may “take of the water of life freely” (Rev 22:17). What we have in this text is the beginning of this period of time.

I WILL POUR OUT OF MY SPIRIT

“ . . . I will pour out of My Spirit . . . ” Other versions read, “I will pour forth of My Spirit,” NASB “I will send out My Spirit,” BBE and “I will pour out a portion of My Spirit .” NAB

As I have pointed out previously, this is according to several prophecies, given long before this Pentecost.

- “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour My Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3).

It is important that we comprehend the prophecy Peter affirms is being fulfilled. It is not a prophesy about twelve men, or even one hundred and twenty disciples. What we have here is the beginning of something that involves all humanity.

- “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions” (Joel 2:28).
- “And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out My Spirit ” (Joel 2:29).
- “And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the Spirit of grace and of supplications : and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn” (Zec 12:10).

The words “pour out” speak of copiousness, coming from a word that means “bestow or distribute largely, an abundant bestowal,” THAYER and “to give in abundance, cause to fully experience, generously provide.” FRIBERG This speaks of a lavish shedding forth of the Holy Spirit. It is not a moving of the Spirit “at times,” like Samson experienced (Judges 13:25).

This is what Jesus referred to as being “baptized with the Spirit” (Acts 1:5). It was being “endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). It was the experience to which Jesus referred when He said, “But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you” NKJV (Acts 1:8). It was “the promise of the Father,” for which the disciples had been waiting (Acts 1:4).

Notice that this is a baptism that was accomplished by pouring. Some find it difficult to reconcile the meaning of baptize (immerse or plunge into), with pouring. However, when you consider a lavish and abundant pouring, it is at once perceived that the recipients of this pouring were, indeed, immersed in the Spirit by this heavenly deluge.

The determining factor in this pouring forth of the Spirit was not the people receiving the Spirit, but the One administering the pouring forth. The basis for this marvelous act was death of Christ, through which sin was taken away and the devil destroyed (Heb 9:26; 2:14), and the resurrection of Christ through which He was “declared to be the Son of God with power” (Rom 1:4).

UPON ALL FLESH

“ . . . upon all flesh . . . ” Other versions read, “upon all mankind ,” NASB “on all people,” NIV “on all humanity ,” CSB and “on everyone .” GWN

It is important that we comprehend the prophecy Peter affirms is being fulfilled. It is not a prophecy about twelve men, or even one hundred and twenty disciples. What we have here is the beginning of something that involves all humanity. In fact, in speaking of all believers, Paul refers to the Spirit in the same manner. “. . . according to His mercy He saved us, through the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit, whom He poured out on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior” (Titus 3:5-6). It cannot be mere coincidence that the language is so similar.

I know of no prophecies of salvation, a Savior, the New Covenant, or anything pertaining to them that is regional, provincial, or only for a group of people with fleshly distinctions. No number of grammar studies, verb tenses, word antecedents, and the likes, can neutralize what Peter is saying. His inspired interpretation of the events is based upon Joel’s prophecy – a prophecy that involves “all flesh,” “all mankind,” NASB , “all humanity,” CSB and “everyone.” GWN

I hardly see how Peter could have made the matter any clearer – and yet he does elaborate, confirming that what Joel prophesied was, in fact, happening at that time.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS WILL PROPHECY

“ 17b . . . and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy . . . ”

Joel speaks with precision, leaving no doubt about what would take place “in the last days.” Also, in referring to Joel’s prophecy, Peter will leave no doubt about what was actually happening before the eyes and ears of the people. What Joel had foretold was taking place in Jerusalem, in the house where the disciples were gathered on the day of Pentecost. If this is not true, then Peter would be speaking words into the air, and adding further confusion to the moment.

SONS AND DAUGHTERS

“ . . . and your sons and your daughters . . . ” Every version reads the same. No translator had any doubt about how the text reads. In this case, “all flesh,” or “everyone,” does not mean every single person, but representatives from every class. The pouring forth of the Spirit as prophesied by Joel, would be indiscriminating as regards gender: “sons and daughters.” This blessing would not be realized only by the sons, to the exclusion of the daughters. Is it possible for Joel to say it with any more clarity?

No amount of reasoning can sanctify such a view or justify its propagation. After all of the explanations have been given, we must still confront the “sons” and “daughters” of our text.

Some have great difficulty with this text, even though it is something revealed to Joel, and to Peter as well. Such people have no trouble understanding that when God sends the rain “on the just and on the unjust,” both classes receive the rain and enjoy the benefits of it (Matt 5:45). Yet, when the Lord reveals that one of the marks of “the last days” (not “day”) is that He will pour out His Spirit on “all flesh,” and that this includes “your sons and daughters,” these same people stand back aghast, as though this introduces some kind of theological difficulty. Is it not more likely that the difficulty is caused by their understanding? Who would dare to say that Christ would direct His church to function in contradiction of the revealed nature of this “day of salvation.”

PROPHESYING

“ . . . shall prophesy . . . ” Other versions read, “will be prophets,” BBE “will prophesy,” CSB

“will speak what God has revealed,” GWN and “prophesy [telling forth the divine counsels].”
AMPLIFIED

The evidence of the pouring forth of the Holy Spirit will not be some euphoric feeling, or some strange physical and unintelligent bodily reaction. The “sons” and “daughters shall prophesy.” The word from which “prophesy” is translated means “to speak forth by Divine inspiration, to predict . . . to utter forth, declare a thing which can only be known by Divine revelation . . . to teach, refute, reprove, admonish, comfort others,” THAYER “generally, of speaking with the help of divine inspiration proclaim what God wants to make known, preach, expound,” FRIBERG “proclaim God's message, preach; prophesy, predict; speak God's message intelligibly,” UBS “proclaim God's message, preach; prophesy, predict; speak God's message intelligibly,” LOUW-NIDA “to expound scripture, to speak and preach under the influence of the Holy Spirit,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “proclaim or interpret a divine revelation.” GINGRICH

This particular word is the subject of some significant Pauline doctrine and exposition. He makes clear that this is a word relating to public declarations and mixed audiences. Some brief observations are in order, for Paul also speaks with regards to the nature of the days of the New Covenant.

- After affirming that “the head of every man is Christ; and the head of the woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God,” Paul affirms that both men and women are to prophesy with a mind to honoring their head (1 Cor 11:3-5).
- All believers are urged to desire spiritual gifts, especially to be able to prophesy (1 Cor 14:1).
- The person who prophesies “speaketh unto men to edification, exhortation, and comfort” (1 Cor 14:3).
- Paul said he would like everyone in the church to “prophesy” (1 Cor 14:5).
- Paul poses a scenario of a gathering where everyone is prophesying, and someone who does not believe, or is unlearned in the ways of God, enters the assembly. That person is convicted by the prophesying he hears, and acknowledges the presence of God in the assembly (1 Cor 14:24-25).
- Paul categorically states, “ye may all prophesy one by one, that all may learn and be comforted” (1 Cor 14:31).
- Paul again exhorts the whole church to “covet to prophesy” (1 Cor 14:39).

The persons who would take upon themselves to exclude the women from these texts have a gargantuan task before them. They must contradict Joel, Peter, and Paul, to espouse their view.

In addition to the doctrinal implications of any such contradicting position, we have the very events of our text to consider. Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, affirms that Joel's prophesy is being fulfilled at that present time: “this is that!” Unless his words were empty and filled with air, what Joel had prophesied was actually taking place at that time: sons and daughters were prophesying. If that was not taking place, then in what sense was Joel's prophesy being fulfilled? And why did Peter refer to something as being presently exhibited if it was not taking place at all? How would this have set with those “devout men” who were listening to him – men who had a working knowledge of the Scriptures?

In the matter of granting spiritual insight and the ability to speak it forth, whether one is a son or a daughter will have no bearing on the experience. That is the not basis of Divine determination. For that matter salvation itself, and the world to come for which it prepares us, recognize no such distinctions (Gal 3:28; Matt 22:50).

ANOTHER IMPLICATION

Also, precisely how does this fit in with the notion that ONLY the apostles had been “baptized” with the Holy Spirit? Or, was the baptism unrelated to Joel’s prophecy? What of those who say only “the twelve” had been speaking? How would that circumstance possibly have fulfilled Joel’s prophecy, who said not so much as a word about the Spirit being poured upon a limited class of people?

How can “all flesh” and “sons” and “daughters” be in any sense descriptive of “the twelve?” What rules of grammar can cause Joel’s prophecy to be fulfilled in a unique and isolated gathering of “the twelve,” with them alone receiving “the promise of the Father,” and them alone speaking “the wonderful works of God?” The whole idea that such a thing is possible is nothing more than a foolish tradition, and is to be rejected as spurious, injurious, and contradictory of the very nature of the day of salvation.

No amount of reasoning can sanctify such a view, or justify its acceptance and propagation. After all of the explanations have been given, we must still confront the “sons” and “daughters” of our text.

YOUNG AND OLD WILL HAVE INSIGHT

“ 17c . . . and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams.”

Not only is “the day of salvation” marked by a lack of distinction on the basis of gender, it is also without discrimination as regards age.

YOUNG MEN SHALL SEE VISIONS

“ . . . and your young men shall see visions . . . ” Other versions read, “your young people shall see visions,” NJB “your young men will have visions,” WILLIAMS and “your young men shall see visions (h divinely granted appearances).” AMPLIFIED

The word from which “young men” is translated is neani,skoi (neh-an-is-koi). Lexically it means, “youth,” THAYER and “a young man beyond the age of puberty, but before marriage.” LOUW-NIDA From the standpoint of the flesh, “young men” are immature, and have not had sufficient experience.

A “vision” is a phenomenon where the individual is given to see things inaccessible to the natural senses. It is as though the curtain of obscuring nature is pulled aside and the individual is given glimpses of hidden things. Men who had visions include Abraham (Gen 15:1), Ezekiel (Ezek 8:4), Daniel (Dan 7:2; 8:1), Obadiah (Obad 1:1), and Habakkuk (Hab 2:2). The witness of the transfiguration of Jesus, with Moses and Elijah speaking with Him is referred to as a “vision” (Matt 17:9). When Gabriel the angel appeared to Zacharias, announcing the birth of John the Baptist, it was called a “vision” (Lk 1:22).

During the time of Moses, God said He would speak to prophets by means of a “vision,” even though it was inferior to the way in which He spoke to Moses (Num 12:6-8). There were also lengthy periods of time when no vision at all was given to the people – such as the time when young Samuel came on the scene (1 Sam 3:1). So far as the Scriptural record is concerned, visions were exceedingly rare for the first 4,000 years of human history.

The heavenly bodies are presently a picture of absolute precision and stability. Years, seasons, months, days, hours, minutes, and seconds are determined by them. This is so true that some have ascribed Divine traits to them, even trusting them for assessing the present, and predicting the future.

However, when the Lord poured forth His Spirit “upon all flesh,” even young men would “see visions.” Because Peter declared this was being fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, some young men had no doubt received visions relating to God’s “wonderful works.” It is doubtless true that some of the “wonderful works of God” that were being declared were a rehearsal of these visions.

OLD MEN SHALL DREAM DREAMS

“ . . . and your old men shall dream dreams.” Other versions read, “your elders will dream dreams,” DARBY “your old people will dream dreams,” NJB “your old men will have special dreams,” IE and “your old men shall dream [i divinely suggested] dreams.” AMPLIFIED

Although an inferior form of revelation (Jer 23:28), God has spoken to men in dreams. Men who had dreams include Ahimelech (Gen 20:3), Jacob (Gen 28:12), Laban (Gen 31:24), Joseph (Gen 37:5,9), Solomon (1 Kgs 3:5), Dan 7:1), and Joseph , Mary’s husband (Matt 1:20; 2:13,19,22). With the possible exception of Daniel, none of these individuals were “old men.” However, Peter affirmed that, in strict accord with Joel’s prophecy, when God poured forth His Spirit upon “all flesh,” even the “old men” would dream dreams. This too must have been fulfilled to some extent on the day of Pentecost, as old men were able to have dreams relating to life in Christ Jesus. Because dreams are ordinarily during the night hours, the events of the day of Pentecost would have involved the speaking forth of dreams in which the “wonderful works of God” had been revealed.

The idea here is that God will not divulge His will to people, and employ them in His service, with regard for their age. Even in the granting of visions and dreams, being young or old will not be a determining factor.

THE INSTITUTIONAL CURSE

Although the New Covenant

Let it be clear that such circumstances are in no way related to what God is doing. Where these attitudes prevail God cannot possibly be working for good, for that is not His manner.

functions without regard for age, sending forth benefits to both young and old, this is not the manner of institutions associated with “the church.”

A young man or woman, even though the Spirit of God is upon them and they have the “gift of prophecy,” are often classed with the children, or the “unlearned and ignorant.” Even though they may have an acute understanding of the things of God, and have a profitable understanding of things unseen, they are placed in subordination to those who are wholly lacking of such understanding, yet are considered to be elders or leaders in the household of faith.

The notion of the modern church concerning “old men” also clashes with that of our text. Such are frequently “put out to pasture” as though they are worthless, even though God may give them “dreams,” and they be gifted to expound the things of God with great discernment and profit. “Legion” is the name of such men who, at the height of their fellowship with God are placed on the institutional shelf, and given menial tasks to perform that require neither insight nor spiritual understanding. Let it be clear that such circumstances are in no way related to what God is doing. Where these attitudes prevail God cannot possibly be working for good, for that is not His manner.

The day of Pentecost was an occasion when the real ways of God were proclaimed.

SERVANTS AND HANDMAIDENS WILL PROPHECY

“ 18 And on My servants and on My handmaidens I will pour out in those days of My Spirit; and they shall prophesy.”

As though it was not enough to mention the sons and daughters of the people themselves, the Lord now speaks of the same people from the standpoint of their relationship to Him.

ON MY SERVANTS AND MY HANDMAIDENS

“And on My servants and on My handmaidens . . .” Other versions read, “My bondslaves, both men and women,” NASB “My servants, both men and women,” NIV “My slaves, both men and women,” NRSV “My men-servants and My women-servants,” BBE “upon My bondmen and My bondwomen,” DARBY “My male servants and on My female servants,” ESV and “all my servants, men and women alike.” LIVING

God is very specific on this point. He is not speaking of the servants and handmaidens of people – slaves who served them. Abraham had “trained servants” (Gen 14:14), and an older, or senior, servant as well (Gen 24:2). Isaac had servants who dug a well for him (Gen 26:19). The Jews had servants, and were instructed to treat them properly (Ex 21:20). There were also “hired servants” (Lev 25:40). King Saul had servants (1 Sam 16:15). King David had servants (2 Sam 2:30). Elisha had a servant (2 Kgs 5:20). Paul gave special instruction to this kind of “servants” (Eph 6:5-6; 1 Tim 6:1). Peter did the same, instructing the slaves (1 Pet 2:16).

Sarah had a handmaid named Hagar (Gen 16:1). Rachel had a handmaid named Bilhah (Gen 35:25). Leah had a handmaid named Zilpah (Gen 35:26).

But these are not the kind of servants of which this text speaks. God is speaking of HIS servants and HIS handmaidens, not those of men! God referred to “My servant Abraham” (Gen 26:24), “My servant Moses” (Num 12:7), “My servant Caleb” (Num 14:24), “My servant David” (2 Sam 3:18), and “My servant Job” (Job 1:8).

Hannah referred to herself as the Lord’s “handmaid” (1 Sam 1:11). Mary, the mother of the Lord, also referred to herself as “the handmaid of the Lord” (Lk 1:38). These are the servants of whom the Lord is speaking – both men and women. God Himself affirms this is true. Joel leaves no question about this. Peter confirms this is the case, and cites the events taking place as incontrovertible proof of the matter.

IN THOSE DAYS I WILL POUR OUT OF MY SPIRIT

“ . . . I will pour out in those days of my Spirit . . .” Other versions read, “I will pour out My Spirit in those days,” NKJV “I will in those days pour forth my Spirit,” NASB “I will send my Spirit,” BBE “I will even pour out my Spirit . . . in those days,” CSB “I will pour out a portion of My Spirit in those days,” NAB and “the Holy Spirit shall come.” LIVING

Again, Joel draws attention to the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon both men and women. This time, instead of saying “last days,” he refers to “Those days” – that is, the days in which His servants and His handmaidens will be blessed. Not only will the outpouring be indiscriminating from the social point of view (“your sons and your daughters”), it will also be without partiality concerning His own servants, whether male or female.

This is how the Lord will fulfill His will and convey His will in the days beginning at Pentecost, and described as being “before that great and notable day of the Lord will come.” He does not say His Spirit will be poured out upon the Apostles alone, but upon His servants and handmaidens. That, Peter states, is what is under way that very day.

That means that God was pouring forth His Spirit upon both His servants and His handmaidens – men and women who were united with Him through Christ Jesus.

THEY SHALL PROPHECY

“ . . . and they shall prophesy.” Other versions read, “and they will be prophets,” BBE “they will speak what God has revealed,” GWN and “they shall prophesy [j telling forth the divine counsels and k predicting future events pertaining especially to God’s kingdom],” AMPLIFIED

Some are willing to concede that the Holy Spirit can be poured out upon men and women – as long as only the men speak. But the Holy Spirit strikes their conclusion down to the ground. He does not do it uncertainly, or with some form of theological ambiguity. He does not leave it to men to decipher what is going to happen to these men and women whom God calls His own servants and handmaidens.

“They shall prophesy!” That, Peter says, is what is being fulfilled before the multitudes of “devout” Jews that is standing before him. Joel’s prophecy is the word the Spirit moved Peter to say was being fulfilled. Isaiah had also spoken of the Lord pouring out His Spirit: “I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3). Men and women are not mentioned there. I suppose it would have better suited those who altogether exclude women from speaking in a mixed assembly. But that is not the prophecy God chose to use! He rather chose the one that most precisely described the situation. He also chose the one that put matters in perspective, declaring this to be a condition that would prevail “before the great and notable day of the Lord will come.”

Is anyone willing to affirm that God really has no “handmaidens” – handmaidens that prophesy? Should one be so foolish as to take such an argument into their mouth, what will they do with the prophecy of Mary, who was the Lord’s “handmaiden.” ?

“My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior. For He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. For He that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is His name. And his mercy is on them that fear Him from generation to generation. He hath showed strength with His arm; He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich He hath sent empty away. He hath holpen His servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy; as He spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to His seed for ever” (Luke 1:46-55).

I realize this prophecy was delivered in the presence of Elizabeth. However, so that none would imagine that it was tailored for the women alone, the Spirit moved it to be written in the Scriptures, so all of the men could read it as well! Surely no one will charge the Spirit with breaking the rules in doing this. Is there anyone courageous enough to say the Lord acted out of character in moving Mary to speak in such an exalted manner? Or is there someone who would dare to say she spoke on her own accord and without inspiration?

This is the kind of thing Joel said would become common in “the last days.” It was going to be an era in which the word of the Lord would be delivered by men and women, young and old – and all at the discretion of the Lord. It is He who would pour forth His Spirit upon “all flesh,” without regard to age or gender! This is in anticipation of the great day.

To confirm that this did continue after Pentecost, Philip “had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy” (Acts 21:9). The church at Corinth had women that prophesied (1 Cor 11:5).

Let me once again state that Peter preceded these words by saying, “But this is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel” (Acts 2:16). He had also drawn attention to the ones who were speaking: “For these are not drunken, as ye suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day” (Acts 2:15). He was, therefore, speaking of something that was taking place at that time, and that was characteristic of the days from then until “the great and notable day of the Lord.”

I cannot conceive of those to whom he was speaking drawing the conclusions that many self-professing Bible students have drawn. What would possibly have led them to associate this remarkably detailed prophecy with a speaking group limited to twelve men?

WONDERS IN HEAVEN AND SIGNS UPON EARTH

“ 19 And I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapour of smoke.”

It is fitting that the closing era of time be characterized by climactic and unusual events. There may be some difficulty associated with the precise events now described, but there should be no question about their nature, or the association with the “great and notable day of the Lord.” There should also be a correlation with the words of our Lord, who also spoke of the days preceding His glorious return.

I WILL SHOW WONDERS IN HEAVEN

“And I will show wonders in heaven above . . .” Other versions read, “I will grant wonders in the sky above,” NASB “And I will show portents in the heaven above,” NRSV “wonders will be seen in heaven,” BBE “I will display wonders in the heaven above,” CSB “I will work miracles in the sky,” GWN “I will perform portents in the sky above,” NJB “I will cause wonders in the heavens above,” NLT “And I will cause strange demonstrations in the heavens,” LIVING “I will show amazing things in the sky above,” IE “I will display marvels in the sky above ,” WEYMOUTH and “I will work wonders in the sky above.” ISV

The first thing to note is that this is something the Lord Himself will do. Joel is not prophesying of global warming, quirks of nature, or mere natural disturbances. This is something that God Himself will do – “work,” “perform,” and “cause.” Whatever one may think of these things, they are “wonders” shown, or wrought, by God Himself. They will be imposed upon nature, just as surely mortality was enjoined upon it.

THE HEAVENS

Jesus Speaks

- The sun darkened (Matt 24:29a; Mk 13:24a). This is something that men cannot do, nor can any natural cycle or disturbance cause it. The sun is out of the reach of man, and he has no power whatsoever to alter its activities or existence. The same is true of the moon and the stars, not to mention other heavenly bodies.
- There shall be signs in the sun, moon, and stars (Lk 21:25a).

It is fitting that the closing era of time be characterized by climactic and unusual events. There may be some difficulty associated with the precise events now described, but there should be no question about their nature, or the association with the “great and notable day of the Lord.”

The moon will not give its light (Matt 24:29b; Mk 13:24b).

- The stars shall fall from heaven (Matt 24:29c; Mk 13:25a).

- The powers of heaven will be shaken (Matt 24:29d; Mk 13:25b; Lk 21:26b). This appears to refer to a disruption of the powers of order that are reflected in the heavens – powers ordained by God for “signs, and for seasons, and for days and years” (Gen 1:14). One version reads, “the forces which control the heavens will be disordered and disturbed.” MONTGOMERY This could also refer to the spiritual principalities and powers that reside in the “air” (Eph 2:2), although that does not fit well with the context.

- The sign of the Son of Man appears in the heavens (Matt 24:30a; Mk 13:26; Lk 21:27).

The Apostles Speak

- The heavens pass away with a great noise (2 Pet 3:10).
- The elements melt with fervent heat (2 Pet 3:10).
- The sun becomes black (Rev 6:12).
- The moon becomes as blood (Rev 6:12).
- The stars fall unto the earth (Rev 6:13).
- The heaven departs a scroll (Rev 6:14).

The heavenly bodies are presently a picture of absolute precision and stability. Years, seasons, months, days, hours, minutes, and seconds are determined by them. This is so true that some have ascribed Divine traits to them, even trusting them for assessing the present, and predicting the future. Before the great and notable day of the Lord, this misplaced confidence will be shaken to its very foundations.

I WILL SHOW SIGNS IN THE EARTH

“ . . . and signs in the earth beneath . . . ” Other versions read, “signs on the earth beneath,” NASB “signs on the earth below,” NIV “and prodigies on earth,” MRD “and miraculous signs on the earth below,” NET “and tokens in the earth beneath,” TNT and “I will do miracles on the earth below.” IE

Before “the great and notable day of the Lord,” God will confirm that the entire seen realm is temporary, and therefore unworthy of a preeminent place in our hearts. Just as surely as “the day of salvation” had a beginning, the present earth has an appointed end, or conclusion. Isaiah said of the earth, “The earth is utterly broken down , the earth is clean dissolved (split open NKJV) , the earth is moved exceedingly. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard , and shall be removed like a cottage ; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again ” (Isa 24:19-20).

The signs “in the earth beneath” have to do with it being broken down, split open, moved exceedingly, reeling to and fro, being removed, and falling and not rising again.

THE EARTH

Jesus Speaks

- Famines in diverse places (Matt 24:7a). The earth will refuse to yield fruits to many different peoples, as the ground refused to yield fruit to Cain (Gen 4:12). It appears as though these will occur simultaneously.

- Pestilences in divers places (Matt 24:7b). These are plagues or diseases, breaking out in an unusual manner, and contrary to reason. Again, this is not speaking of plagues over a lengthy period of time.

- Earthquakes in divers places (Matt 24:7c). There have been occasions when the earth “shook and trembled,” and “the foundations also of the hills were moved and were shaken, because He was wroth” – as at Sinai (Psa 18:7). Here, however, simulataneously, the earth will convulse and heave up and down in “various places.” NIV
- Great earthquakes in divers places (Lk 21:11). There will also be mega-earthquakes in different places.

The heavens and earth “which are now” (2 Pet 3:7) are not truly stable – not from the standpoint of Divine purpose. That is, our trust cannot be placed in them. They are destined to pass away. Salvation is presented with this ultimate reality in mind. It is not a way of making the earth “a better place to live.” It is not a means of securing stability, security, success, and happiness in this world.

Troubles in divers places (Mk 13:8c). This speaks of agitation, turmoil, upheaval, and disturbance in unprecedented levels.

- Distress of nations (Lk 21:25b). Whole nations will be smitten with despair, dismay, and anguish. Their wisdom will run out, and fear will grip their hearts.
- The sea and the waves roaring (Lk 21:25c). The sea will toss and roll as though it is beyond all control.
- Men’s hearts failing for fear of the things coming upon the earth (Lk 21:26a). It will become exceedingly apparent that man is not, nor has he ever been, in control. It is ever true that “The earth is the LORD’S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein” (Psa 24:1). The dominance of fear among those who are not reconciled to God confirms that they will finally become acutely aware of this fact – even if it is too late.

BLOOD AND FIRE AND VAPOR OF SMOKE

“ . . . blood, and fire and vapor of smoke.” Concerning “blood and fire,” all versions read the same – “blood and fire.” Concerning “vapor of smoke,” other versions read, “billows of smoke,” NIV “smoky mist,” NRSV “a cloud of smoke,” CSB “clouds of smoke,” NET “thick smoke,” IE “pillars of smoke,” WEYMOUTH and “smoking vapor.” AMPLIFIED

Admittedly, this is a difficult passage, the details of which I am most uncertain. However, there is a general message here that speaks of the latter end of this “day of salvation.” Not only will the reality of salvation itself be confirmed to those who receive it, the destruction of this present evil world will also be confirmed. Those who believe the Gospel will realize the remarkable benefits that it promises. Those who reject the Gospel will eventually realize the absolute vanity of choosing this world over the world to come.

The day of salvation commenced with a great outpouring of grace in this world. The conclusion of that day will be accompanied with a destructive visitation of the wrath of God upon the world itself, and the enemies of Jesus in particular.

The expression “blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke” speak of the destruction of human life (blood), the consumption of the entire natural order (fire), and the final evidence of the removal of all things that offend (vapor of smoke). Jesus referred to this closing destruction when He said, “Men will faint from terror, apprehensive of what is coming on the world , for the heavenly bodies will be shaken” (Luke 21:26).

The Conclusion of the Matter

The heavens and earth “which are now” (2 Pet 3:7) are not truly stable – not from the standpoint of Divine purpose. That is, our trust cannot be placed in them. They are destined to pass away.

Salvation is presented with this ultimate reality in mind. It is not a way of making the earth “a better place to live.” It is not a means of securing stability, security, success, and happiness in this world.

The coming of the Lord will be preceded by some awareness that the end is nigh. Christ depicted this in the parable of the ten virgins (Matt 25:1-12). The five foolish virgins then saw their need of oil. They made a last attempt to obtain some, but it was too late. The door of opportunity was closed, with no more chance of entering in. Even so, in the last stages of time, some will call out for rocks and mountains to hide them from the wrath of the Lamb (Rev 6:16-17). Just as surely as the Israelites were not hurt by the plagues that fell upon Egypt, so those who have put their trust in the Lord will not suffer in the day of His wrath.

I must acknowledge this to be, in a sense, very general. For that reason it is not satisfying to the intellect. However, the power of this text is, in fact, in its generality. It is enough for us to know that the conclusion of our salvation will not be realized in “this present evil world.” This is not where the greatest blessings are realized. However, even though life may be sanctified and blessed while in the body, the entire realm to which the body belongs is destined for destruction – total destruction.

The present heavens and earth will not conclude by a clock, but by a word. They will not simply wear out, but will be forcibly brought to an abrupt conclusion.

The Universe Is Not Winding Down

The universe is not simply winding down. While there is a sense in which deterioration is all about us, the final disintegration of the universe will be by Divine decree – a word! It will not be by means of a natural process. “Whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain” (Heb 12:26-27).

The present heavens and earth will not conclude by a clock, but by a word. They will not simply wear out, but will be forcibly brought to an abrupt conclusion.

NATURE BLIGHTED

“ 20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come.”

The most stable aspects of nature are said to be no longer dependable. I cannot supply the details of this, and freely confess that to be the case.

THE SUN TURNED INTO DARKNESS

“The sun shall be turned into darkness . . .” Other versions read, “the sun will become dark,” BBE “the sun shall be changed to darkness,” DARBY “then sun shall turn black,” LIVING and “into darkness shall the sun be turned.” MONTGOMERY

This condition was foretold by the prophets. “the sun shall be darkened in his going forth” (Isa 13:10). “Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed” (Isa 24:23). “And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord GOD, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day” (Amos 8:9).

Jesus spoke of it as well. “after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened” (Matt 24:29; Mk 13:24).

John the revelator also heard language like this. “And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood” (Rev 6:12).

An introduction to this kind of phenomenon took place during the plagues in Egypt, when “thick darkness” descended upon Egypt that lasted for three days (Ex 10:21-22). A similar thing happened when Jesus died – when, from the sixth hour until the ninth hour, “there was a darkness over all the earth” (Lk 23:44).

But this was only a vague shadow of what is coming when the sun will no longer give its light, for there will be no further need for the universe as it now is.

THE MOON TURNED INTO BLOOD

“ . . . and the moon into blood . . . ” Other versions read, “the moon will become red as blood,” GWN “and the moon will turn blood red,” NLT and “the moon will become blood.” IE

In speaking of the demise of nature, the book of the Revelation also refers to a time when “the moon became as blood” (Rev 6:12). That is, instead of reflecting the brightness of the sun, throwing forth light, it will be crimson dark, for there will be no light for it to reflect.

The language, while no doubt very literal, speaks of the extinguishing of all hope. There is a time scheduled for this world, when hope will no longer be available to men. The door of salvation will be shut, and sinners will at last face an angry God before whom they will not be able to stand.

BEFORE THE DAY OF THE LORD COME

“ . . . before that great and notable day of the Lord come.” Other versions read, “Before the coming of the great and awesome day of the LORD,” NKJV “BEFORE THE GREAT AND GLORIOUS DAY OF THE LORD SHALL COME,” NASB “before the coming of the Lord's great and glorious day,” NRSV “before the day of the Lord comes, the great and manifest day,” RSV “Before the day of the Lord come, That great and notable day,” ASV “before that great day of the Lord comes in glory,” BBE “before the great and gloriously appearing day of the Lord come,” DARBY “before the great and manifest day of the Lord come,” DOUAY “before the day of the Lord comes, the great and magnificent day,” ESV “before the terrifying day of the Lord comes,” GWN “before that great and fearful day of the Lord come,” MRD “before the coming of the great and splendid day of the Lord,” NAB “before the coming of the day of the Lord -- the great and illustrious,” YLT “before that awesome Day of the Lord arrives,” LIVING “Then the great and glorious day of the Lord will come,” IE “to usher in the day of the Lord – that great and illustrious day,” WEYMOUTH “ere the day of the Lord come, that great and terrible day,” MONTGOMERY and “before the obvious day of the Lord comes — that great and notable and conspicuous and renowned [day].” AMPLIFIED

There are those who say this is referring to the destruction of Jerusalem. That time, however, was not a time when the Lord was made manifest. It was not a day when His glory shown forth. Nor, indeed, was the day, in the eyes of the people, strictly associated with Christ Jesus. If that had been the case, the people would have repented. Even at that time, in the midst of a great and unparalleled judgment, a veil remained over the eyes of most of the people.

By way of contrast, the “great and notable day of the Lord” is one of full revelation, when God will “show” Christ, and He will come in all of His glory. It is true that the present day of salvation is “notable” in its effects through faith. However, in my judgment, that is not the sense of this text. Note what is said about the return of the Lord Jesus – and only one more return is proclaimed.

• THE PUBLIC DISPLAY OF THE GLORIFIED CHRIST. “Which in his times He shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen” (1 Tim 6:15-16).

• EVERY EYE SHALL SEE HIM. “Behold, He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Even so, Amen” (Rev 1:7).

• SEEN COMING WITH POWER AND GREAT GLORY. “And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory” (Mat 24:30).

• WHEN HE COMES HE WILL REWARD EVERY MAN. “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of His Father with His angels; and then He shall reward every man according to his works” (Mat 16:27).

• HE SHALL COME IN HIS OWN GLORY, THE FATHER’S GLORY, AND THE GLORY OF THE ANGELS. “For whosoever shall be ashamed of Me and of My words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He shall come in His own glory, and in His Father’s, and of the holy angels” (Luke 9:26).

• PUNISHMENT OF THE WICKED AND ADMIRATION OF THE SAINTS SIMULTANEOUS. “Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power; when He shall come to be glorified in His saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day” (2 Thess 1:9-10).

• EARTH AND HEAVEN FLEE FROM BEFORE HIS FACE. “And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them” (Rev 20:11).

BEFORE this appointed day comes, massive disturbances and disruptions will occur in the heavens and on the earth. The duration of these things is not known, but it will apparently be of sufficient duration to convince the hardhearted that the end of all things is upon them. This will not, however, be a time when preaching will be delivered, the door of salvation opened, or repentance urged. At this time, repentance will not be possible. This is portrayed in the symbolic language of the Revelation, the details of which are not supplied.

• “And the rest of the men which were not killed by these plagues yet repented not of the works of their hands, that they should not worship devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and of wood: which neither can see, nor hear, nor walk” (Rev 9:20).

• “And men were scorched with great heat, and blasphemed the name of God, which hath power over these plagues: and they repented not to give him glory” (Rev 16:9).

• “And the fifth angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast; and his kingdom was full of darkness; and they gnawed their tongues for pain, and blasphemed the God of heaven because of their pains and their sores, and repented not of their deeds” (Rev 16:10-11).

The particular things of which Peter is speaking – “this is that” – are the matters relating to “BEFORE that great and notable day of the Lord.” He is speaking of the door of faith which was opened on the day of Pentecost, and will be closed shortly before the Lord returns in all of His glory. In that final day, even though people are alive, the door of hope will no longer be opened. I do not have the faintest idea about the length of this period of time. It will be sufficient to confirm to the hearts of the wicked how foolish they were not to prepare for “that great and notable day of the Lord.” It will be long enough to substantiate that there is no way to obtain what is necessary to make preparations after the door has been shut. All of that can happen in a very brief period of time – particularly in view of the collapse of the natural order. Even though men hurry about to find a way of being saved, like the five foolish virgins, none will be found. The understanding of this should promote great sobriety and an earnest quest for the salvation of God.

NOT INTENDED TO CAUSE FEAR AMONG THE SAINTS

This is not intended to cause fear among the saints of God. Although all of the particulars have not been revealed, salvation is calculated to prepare us for the end of the world. It provides a new heart that is not attached to the world, and is even repulsed by it. It takes hold of promises that relate to another world, “wherein dwelleth righteousness” (2 Pet 3:13), and compels those living by faith to prepare for that “world to come.”

When the plagues came upon Egypt, the Israelites were protected from them. In the plagues God “put a division” between His people and the people of Egypt (Ex 8:23). When a grievous disease fell upon all the cattle of Egypt, the Lord “severed between the cattle of Israel and the cattle of Egypt” (Ex 9:4). When the plague of boils came, it came only on “the Egyptians” (Ex 9:11). When the plague of hail mingled with fire came, “there was no hail” in the land of Goshen (Ex 9:26). When a thick darkness fell upon Egypt, the Israelites had light in all of their dwellings (Ex 10:23). When all of the firstborn in Egypt died in the last plague God “put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel,” and none of firstborn of Israel died” (Ex 11:5-7).

I am cautious at this point not to venture into the realm of speculation. However, God has given the saints no cause to fear the demise of nature, whether over a brief or extended period. He has told us that the whole creation, presently in “the bondage of corruption,” is patiently waiting for the “manifestation of the sons of God” (Rom 8:19). It appears to me to be unreasonable to think that those whose hearts have been removed from the world would be harmed or overly alarmed by its actual disintegration and demise. When it goes, all of our troubles go.

A UNIVERSAL PROMISE

“ 21 And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved. ”

Joel prophesied, and Peter is confirming, things that will take place BEFORE “the great and notable day of the Lord.” He has first declared a period during which God would pour forth His Spirit without discriminating between men and women. This would result in prophesying, which had been taking place before the multitude now before him. It will now continue to take place in an even more specific manner.

IT SHALL COME TO PASS

“And it shall come to pass . . . ” Other versions read, “And it shall be,” NASB and “Then.” NRSV

Joel not only prophesied that God would pour put His Spirit upon all flesh, but that a day would be ushered in that would have certain marvelous characteristics. This is something that was appointed by God, and it would surely come to pass. It is not something that might come to pass: it would come to pass. It is not something that would come to pass if some variable condition was met: it would come to pass. This is the language of Divine appointment, and will be brought to pass by Divine power. Peter now announces to the people, that the very day in which he is speaking is the time when this word is being fulfilled. This would be a mark of the day of salvation. The door of salvation will be thrown wide open. No special race will be targeted. This will not be limited to any social class, or other group according to the flesh.

WHOSOEVER SHALL BE CALL ON THE NAME

“ . . . that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord . . . ”

Further, no aspect of salvation will contradict this distinction by God making determinations according to the flesh. The outworking of salvation cannot resort to fleshly distinctions as a basis for Divine working within that salvation.

“Whosoever”

Other versions read, “ everyone ,” RSV “whoever” BBE “ all ,” NJB and “ anyone .” LIVING Peter continues to point out the universality of Joel’s promise. He has already spoken of “all flesh,” “your sons and your daughters,” and God’s “servants” and “handmaidens.” Now he makes it even more personal by saying “whosoever.” The only qualification is the one that will be stated. If that qualification is met, there is no natural or fleshly distinction that can disqualify the individual.

Let it be clear that Peter is establishing the border of salvation. Further, no aspect of salvation will contradict this distinction by God making determinations according to the flesh. The outworking of salvation cannot resort to fleshly distinctions as a basis for Divine working within that salvation.

“Call Upon the Name of the Lord”

Other versions read, “ makes his prayer to the Lord,” BBE “ asks for mercy from the Lord,” LIVING “ trusts in the name of the Lord,” IE and “call upon the name of the Lord [invoking, adoring, and worshiping the Lord—Christ].” AMPLIFIED

Peter now gives a wonderful summation of Joel’s words – which words are even more extensive. Joel wrote, “And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call ” (Joel 2:32). Now, Peter fastens on those who “call upon the name of the Lord.”

What does it mean to call upon the Lord’s name? It is an action that is frequently mentioned in Scripture.

- In the days of Enos, the son of Seth, “began men to call upon the name of the Lord ” (Gen 4:26).
- “And he [Abraham] removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Bethel, and pitched his tent, having Bethel on the west, and Hai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the LORD, and called upon the name of the LORD ” (Gen 12:8).
- “And he [Isaac] builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD , and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well” (Gen 26:25).
- “And call ye on the name of your gods, and I [Elijah] will call on the name of the LORD : and the God that answereth by fire, let him be God. And all the people answered and said, It is well spoken” (1 Kgs 18:24).

Let it be clear that Peter is establishing the border of salvation. Further, no aspect of salvation will contradict this distinction by God making determinations according to the flesh. The outworking of salvation cannot resort to fleshly distinctions as a basis for Divine working within that salvation.

“But Naaman was wroth, and went away, and said, Behold, I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper” (2 Kgs 5:11).

- “What shall I render unto the LORD for all his benefits toward me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of the LORD” (Psa 116:12-13).

- “I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving, and will call upon the name of the LORD” (Psa 116:17).

- “For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent” (Zeph 3:9).

- “And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord” (Acts 22:16).

- “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Rom 10:13).

- “Unto the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours” (1 Cor 1:2).

Calling upon the name of the Lord is invoking God through prayer, acknowledging that He alone is God. That is, it is an earnest request for God to act, or to move, in the behalf of the individual. This kind of call is the result of the persuasion of at least two things: first, that “God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, a mighty, and a terrible, which regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward” (Deut 10:17). This does not refer to a frantic stabbing in the dark, inquiring if there really is a God, then asking Him to make Himself known. Calling on the name of the Lord reveals the individual is convinced of who God is, and that He does whatsoever He pleases. Second, this “call” is a plea for God to come to the aid of the individual, work in his behalf, or make Himself more fully known to the one calling on God’s name.

The “name of the Lord” is what God has revealed about Himself. It refers to His being, character, and what may be known of Him. When Moses asked God to show him His glory, the Lord replied, “And He said, I will make all My goodness pass before thee, and I will proclaim the name of the LORD before thee” (Ex 33:19). The actual proclamation is recorded. “And the LORD descended in the cloud, and stood with him there, and proclaimed the name of the LORD. And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children's children, unto the third and to the fourth generation” (Ex 34:5-7).

The proclamation of the Lord’s “name” was a declaration of His Person – His character and manner.

To “call upon the name of the Lord” is to beseech the Lord to focus those traits upon the individual; i.e., to show mercy, grace, and longsuffering toward the one who is calling out. To cause goodness and truth to come to such a one, and to forgive their sins. What has happened in such a case is that the individual has now made an association between his condition and what God is inclined to do. He sees his need for mercy and grace, and thus pleads for it. He sees his need of goodness and truth, and, with a strong desire for them, beseeches the Lord to give them in abundance.

If, for example, a person wants a new Rolls Royce, an annual income in six figures, and a stately mansion, he cannot call upon the name of the Lord for them, for God has not declared Himself as being disposed to give such things. It is not that He cannot do this, but that this is not how He wishes to be known. If a person wants to make that desire known to the Lord, according to Philippians 4:6, I suppose it might be considered proper. However, it seems to me that it would be difficult to reconcile such requests with God's call to "love not the world" (1 John 2:15), "set your affection on things above" (Col 3:2), and "lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth" (Matt 6:19).

When a person calls "upon the name of the Lord," he is asking God to respond in accordance with what He has revealed about Himself.

It is important to note that while preaching is one of the preeminent activities of "the day of salvation," it is calling upon the name of the Lord that actually brings the blessing. This suggests that the Gospel of Christ is calculated to constrain one to call upon the name of the Lord. Where this is not done, the Gospel has not really been perceived or believed.

In our day, men have come up with different ways of appropriating salvation. Some ask the individual to repeat a certain prayer, following the lead of the preacher. Others simply ask the people to come forward and receive prayer for their salvation. Such methodologies do not speak strongly of the yearning of the one who needs salvation. They do not encourage one to call upon the name of the Lord – to verbally and zealously seek what is being offered in the name of the Lord.

Let me be clear about this. Only a response to the real Gospel of Christ can properly be referred as "calling upon the name of the Lord." Acceptable calling requires the God-ordained message, and not "another Gospel" (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6). It is quite possible that the prevalence of unacceptable conduct within the churches is directly related to the belief of "another gospel" – one that does not provoke one to "call upon the name of the Lord."

SHALL BE SAVED

" . . . shall be saved." Other versions read, "will be saved," NIV "will have salvation," BBE and "shall live." MRD

This same promise is reaffirmed in Romans 10:13. There the Spirit states that men cannot call upon the name of the Lord unless they have believed on Him: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed?" Further, they cannot believe on the Lord unless they have heard of Him: "and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?" Further, they cannot hear without a preacher: "and how shall they hear without a preacher?" Even further, how can anyone preach unless they are sent "And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" (Rom 10:14-15).

What does it mean to be "saved?" Perhaps you have heard people say things like, "I am saved, but I am not living close to the Lord." Or, "I am a Christian, but not a committed one." Or, "I was a Christian, but was not walking with the Lord." Then, there are church cliches like "carnal Christian," or "worldly Christian," or "uncommitted Christians." All of this has caused people to speak glibly about being "saved." For some people being "saved" is the result of repeating the mythical "sinners prayer." For others, it means they have been "baptized" – at least that is what they call it. A significant number of professing Christians rarely even use the term "saved." For example, I come from a background where this word was not part of the vocabulary.

The word "saved" occurs in the book of Acts ten times (2:21,47; 4:12; 11:14; 15:1,11; 16:30,31; 27:20,31). I know those times, two refer to being saved from physical calamity (27:20,31).

As used in our text, the epistles use the word "save" fourteen times (Rom 11:14; 1 Cor 1:21; 2:2; 7:16; 9:22; 1 Tim 1:15; 4:16; Heb 7:25; James 1:1; 2:14; 4:12; 5:20; 1 Pet 3:21; Jude 1:23); "saved" is used twenty-one times (Rom 5:9,10; 8:24; 9:27; 10:1,9,13; 11:26; 1 Cor 1:18; 3:15; 5:5; 10:33; 15:2; ; 2 Cor 2:15; Eph 5:2,8; 1 Thess 2:16; 2 Thess 2:10; 1 Tim 2:4,15; 2 Tim 1:9; Tit 3:5; 1 Pet 4:16; 2 Pet 2:5; Jude 1:5); “saving” two times (Heb 10:39; 11:7; and “Savior” nineteen times (Eph 5:23; Phil 3:20; 1 Tim 1:1; 2:3; 1 Tim 4:10; 2 Tim 1:10; Tit 1:3,4; 2:10,13; 3:4,6; 2 Pet 1:1,11; 2 Pet 2:20; 3:2,18; 1 John 4:14; Jude 1:25).

Any term or concept that is mentioned this many times ought to be a prominent part of the vocabulary of the church.

The word “save” comes from the Greek word σωθη, setai, the verb form of the Greek word σω, ζω (so-zo). The lexical meaning of this word is, “to save, to keep safe and sound, to rescue from danger and destruction, to save a suffering one from perishing, to make well, restore to health, to bring forth from; positively, to make one a partaker of the salvation of Christ,” THAYER “save, rescue, bring to salvation,” FRIBERG and “save rescue, deliver, keep safe, preserve, cure, make well.” UBS

Several concepts are captured by the word “saved.” These concepts speak of a change in ones moral and spiritual condition.

- DELIVERANCE : rescue, bring out. This presumes a former state of imprisonment, confinement, capture, and condemnation. When a person is “saved,” he is “delivered from the Law” – the condemning law (Rfom 7:6). He is also “delivered from this present evil world” – from its dominance (Gal 1:4). There is also a deliverance “from the power of darkness” (Col 1:13), those Satanic powers that hold men captive. There is also deliverance “from the wrath to come” (1 Thess 1:10). There is even deliverance “out of temptation,” so that we are not overcome by it (2 Pet 2:9). A salvation that does not deliver the people from the power and dominion of the enemy and the world is not “the salvation of God” (Psa 50:23; Acts 28:28).

- RECOVERY : get back, reclaim, redeem, revive. This presumes a former state of lostness, forfeiture, decline, weakness, and perishing. How marvelous to consider that we have been “redeemed from the curse of the Law” (Gal 3:13), so that are free from condemnation. There is also redemption “from all iniquity,” so that we live no longer in sin (Tit 2:14). Redemption is referred to as “the forgiveness of sins” (Col 1:14).m A salvation that does not restore men to God and to spiritual wholeness cannot possibly be “the salvation which is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10).

Isaiah foretold the conditions of safety that would be brought in by the Messiah. “And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land”

SAFETY : protection, security, defense. This presumes a former condition of hazard, jeopardy, peril, and vulnerability. Isaiah foretold the conditions of safety that would be brought in by the Messiah. “And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land” (Isa 32:2). Ponder the wonderful and reassuring word: “We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not” (1 John 5:18). A salvation that leaves people vulnerable to the devil and subject to fits and starts is not “the salvation of the Lord” (Lam 3:26).

- PRESERVATION : keep, sustain, maintain. This presumes a previous state of deterioration, weakness, and imminent death. To know that we are kept has a stabilizing effect upon the soul. “He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: He that keepeth thee will not slumber” (Psa 121:3). Again we are reminded, “Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time” (1 Pet 1:5). A salvation that allows for people to fall, go backward, forget, and stumble through life has nothing whatsoever to do with “the salvation of our God” (Isa 52:10).

The state from which we were saved is often mentioned in Scripture. It is always a past condition.

- “But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin , but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. . . For when ye were the servants of sin , ye were free from righteousness. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death” (Rom 6:17,20-21).

- “Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God. And such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:9-11).

- “That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world ” (Eph 2:12).

- “But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ” (Eph 2:13).

- “For ye were sometimes darkness , but now are ye light in the Lord: walk as children of light” (Eph 5:8).

- “Which in time past were not a people , but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy , but now have obtained mercy” (1 Pet 2:10).

- “For ye were as sheep going astray ; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls” (1 Pet 2:25).

Isaiah foretold the conditions of safety that would be brought in by the Messiah. “And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land” From the very beginning of the church people who are said to have been “saved” experienced and manifested the kind of changes the prophets said would come to pass.

When Peter referred to being “saved,” the “devout men” before him would have a good idea about what he meant. When seven years of famine struck the land of Egypt, and Joseph, directed by the Lord, resolved the dilemma, the people said, “Thou hast saved our lives” (Gen 47:25). When Israel passed safely through the Red Sea on dry ground, then saw their enemies drowned in the same sea, the record was written up in these words: “Thus the LORD saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians; and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore” (Ex 14:30). When Moses stood before the people at the end of his days, he cried out to them, “Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the LORD , the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places” (Deut 33:29). When Israel realized victory over the Philistines, the record was written up in these words: “So the LORD saved Israel that day: and the battle passed over unto Bethaven” (1 Sam 14:23).

These men no doubt knew the various expressions of the Psalmist which spoke of salvation. “Turn us again, O God, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved ” (Psa 80:3). “Turn us again, O God of hosts, and cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved ” (Psa 80:7). “Turn us again, O LORD God of hosts, cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved ” (Psa 80:19). Now Peter will put the matter squarely before them.

This is the day when salvation will be realized by whoever calls upon the name of the Lord! Now that Peter has the ears of the people, he will proclaim the name of the Lord as it has been revealed in Christ Jesus – in particular as it was revealed in Christ’s death and resurrection.

CONCLUSION

We are being exposed to the time when God first poured out His Spirit upon “all flesh” – both men and women. This has been done in strict accord with the “promise of the Father,” as expounded by the Lord Jesus, the prophecies of the prophets in general, and the of Joel in particular. This whole matter sets the stage for the very nature of life in Christ Jesus. This is the inauguration of the New Covenant, and serves to confirm the nature of that wonderful “ministration of the Spirit,” as the New Covenant is called (2 Cor 3:8). The Spirit’s abundance is described as Him being “poured forth,” lavished upon the people because of atoning death of Jesus Christ. Peter will affirm that Jesus has caused what the people are seeing and hearing, and that it is in strict accord with His role as the Savior of the world. In fact, Jesus is declared to have done this in His exalted capacity of “both Lord and Christ” (2:36). With great power, Peter will relate the death, resurrection, and exaltation of Christ with the events being witnessed by the people.

The day of Pentecost is not at end of itself, but was the beginning of a new era – an era in which the outworking of the eternal purpose of God was commenced, and in which men and women would be prepared for the world to come. Years later Peter will refer to this very day as “the beginning” (Acts 11:15). The more we are able to see that day as a “beginning,” the more we will be able to glean from it. Everything occurring on that day will reflect the revealed purpose of God, administered and completed by the Lord Jesus.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #8

“ 2:22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a Man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know: 23 Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain: 24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it. ” (Acts 2:22-24)

INTRODUCTION

The day of Pentecost marked, what Peter later referred to as, “the beginning” (Acts 11:15). Pentecost is to the New Covenant what Sinai was to the Old Covenant. As long as the world remains, there will never be a heaven-sent view of salvation that is at variance with what was presented on the first Pentecost after Jesus ascended “up where He was before” (John 6:62).

Here, the Gospel of Christ was first preached with understanding, by someone other than Jesus – someone who was “filled with the Spirit.” The account before us is not the outworking of the wisdom of men. The minds and mouths of men were employed, but they were under the direct supervision of the Holy Spirit, who was working under the direction of the exalted Christ. Any analysis of this day, and the events that took place on it, must be considered within the framework of the will of God, the authority of Christ, and the working of the Holy Spirit. Peter will not deliver a Gospel that is tailored only for the Jews, as some theologians imagine. There are those who, “understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7), teach that Peter preached one Gospel to the Jews, and Paul preached another to the Gentiles. The Gospel Peter preached was the same one Jesus commanded to be preached “to every creature” (Mk 16:15). Paul preached the same Gospel, but was given to elaborate extensively on both its nature and content. However, the Gospel itself was the same. We do well, therefore, to give heed to what Peter declares, and to the manner in which he directs the thinking

CONTENTS

- YE MEN OF ISRAEL (2:22a)
- HEAR THESE WORDS (2:22b)
- JESUS OF NAZARETH (2:22c)
- A MAN APPROVED OF GOD (2:22d)
- THE MEANS BY WHICH HE WAS APPROVED (2:22e)
- YOU KNOW IT WELL (2:22f)
- HIM! (2:23a)
- BEING DELIVERED UP (2:23b)
- YOU HAVE TAKEN (2:23c)
- YOU USED WICKED HANDS (2:23d)
- GOD RAISED HIM UP (2:24a)
- SOMETHING THAT WAS NOT POSSIBLE (2:24b)
- CONCLUSION

of the people. He will give a brief exposition of some of the greatest events in all of history: the death Christ, the resurrection of Christ, the enthronement of Christ, and the events taking place on that day of Pentecost.

There are several things to be noted in this singular event. First, the focus of the preaching. Second, the manner in which that focus, who is Jesus Christ, is expounded. We will find that the words of Peter bear very little, if any, similarity to the preaching of our day. There will be no mention of God loving the people and wanting to be a part of their lives. No reference will be made to contemporary issues, domestic goals, or successful living. Peter will not allude to worship, praise, or “the will of God for your lives.” Prior to the inquiry of the people themselves, he will not refer to the remission of sins, Christ dying for our sins, or a step-by-step way of appropriating salvation. There will be no presentation of Bible study methodologies, no reference to the one true church, and not a single word about reaching certain people groups – like youth, singles, etc. Jesus will not be presented as a problem solver.

I understand such proclamations are cherished traditions in the minds of many, and am certainly not set to summarily reject them. However, the truth of the matter is that the Holy Spirit did not provide us a single example of this kind of preaching. That certainly ought to establish that such cannot be a revelation of “the mind of the Lord.”

In particular, this lesson will focus on the manner in which the death of Christ is declared. What Peter does say about that death is as startling to the institutionalized mind as what He does not say. He will say little about why Jesus died, as ordinarily conceived.

Peter’s focus is placed on Deity. Everything is perceived and expounded in view of the Person and working of the Lord. Such a view is not strange to those who “have the mind of Christ.” Notice the references to Deity in our text.

- “Jesus of Nazareth” (22a).
- “A Man approved of God ” (22b).
- “. . . miracles and wonders and signs, God did by Him ” (22c).

- “Him , being delivered” (23a).
- “By the determinate counsel . . . of God ” (2:23b).
- “By the . . . foreknowledge of God ” (2:23c).
- “ Whom God hath raised up” (2:24a).
- “ . . . it was not possible that He should be holden of it” (2:24b).

When the results of this preaching are recorded, it will be apparent that the Holy Spirit worked with the words of Peter, convicting the people of the sin of unbelief, the need for righteousness, and the judgment of the devil.

There are eleven references to Deity in the three verses of our text.

- The only town mentioned is the one from which Jesus came – Jesus of Nazareth (2:22a).
- The only approval mentioned is that of God Himself – approved of God (2:22b).
- The means of approval are the things God did through Christ – miracles wonders and signs (2:22c).
- The first reason for Jesus being delivered up is traced to the “determinate counsel of God” (2:23a).
- The second reason for Jesus being delivered up is related to “the foreknowledge of God” (2:23b).
- God raised Jesus from the dead (2:24a).
- God loosed the pains of death from Jesus (2:24b).

Amidst a gigantic departure from the faith, this kind of preaching is virtually unknown in our country. Human assessment and reasoning have become the standard basis for proclamation, and it is not right. By way of comparison, Peter will employ the Spirit’s nomenclature, “combining spiritual thoughts with spiritual words” NASB (1 Cor 2:13). When the results of this preaching are recorded, it will be apparent that the Holy Spirit worked with the words of Peter, convicting the people of the sin of unbelief, the need for righteousness, and the judgment of the devil (John 16:7-11).

At least one reason for an impotent church is the employment of unfertile words – words that have no spirit of life in them (John 6:63), and consequently cannot be used by the Holy Spirit.

As we consider Peter’s message we will find no reference to the Pharisees, their activities, or their persuasions. The scribes will not be mentioned, nor their teaching. There will be no reference to the traditions of the elders, or the tactics of the lawyers, who were specialists in the law of Moses.

Peter will not call the people to consider finances. He will not promise them worldly success. He will not upbraid anyone for being poor, or congratulate anyone for being rich. He will make no appeal to worldly status or achievement. All of this, of course, is very apparent. I only mention it because there is so much of this kind of preaching all around us. It may be said of such preaching that it is “of the earth, earthy” (1 Cor 14:47).

There will be an urgency in Peter’s words, as well as a staggering tone of judgment. He will describe men as they really are, and make no effort make them feel good about themselves. He will declare what they have really done – whether they knew it or not – and will make no effort to gloss it. We will also be made privy to “the mind of the Spirit,” who is moving Peter to speak. His reasoning did not originate with him, but, by faith, he had been brought into accord with the thinking of the Spirit of God. There is no variance between Peter’s understanding of God’s purpose and the purpose itself. From the “heavenly places” where he is seated (Eph 2:6), and through the Holy Spirit with whom he is “filled” (Acts 2:4), Peter is speaking with absolute precision and spiritual understanding.

YE MEN OF ISRAEL

“ 2:22a Ye men of Israel . . . ” Other versions read, “You that are Israelites,” NRSV “Men, ye sons of Israel,” MRD “Men! Israelites! YLT “O men of Israel,” LIVING and “Fellow Israelites.” ISV

At the time of our text “the door of faith” (Acts 14:27) was opened “to the Jew first” (Rom 1:16). This was necessary because all of the promises concerning the day of salvation had been given to the Jews. It is said of them: “Israelites; to whom pertaineth . . . the promises” (Rom 9:4). Jesus also announced to a certain Samaritan woman, “salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22).

The location of the various peoples of the earth – “the sons of Adam” – was determined in accordance with the number of the children of Israel. It is written, “When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel”

The employment of the word “Israel” links the people with the Abrahamic promise and “the fathers” – Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, through whom “the twelve tribes” came (Gen 49:28; Ex 24:4; 28:21; 39:14; Ezek 47:13; Matt 19:28; Lk 22:30; Acts 26:7; James 1:1; Rev 21:12). After wrestling with Jacob throughout the night, a heavenly messenger gave him a new name – “Israel.” It is written, “And he said, Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel : for as a prince hast thou power with God and with men, and hast prevailed” (Gen 32:28). In Hebrew the name Israel means “God prevails.” STRONG’S In the Greek language it means, “he shall be a prince with God.” STRONG’S This change of name reflects Divine purpose.

There several names given to these people. They are called “the Jews” (2 Kg 16:6; Ezra 4:12; Matt 2:2; Gal 1:13; 1 Thess 2:14). The book of Acts contains sixty references to “the Jews,” and eight to “a Jew.” They are also referred to as:

- “Jacob” (Rom 11:26).
- “The tribes of Israel” (Gen 49:16; Num 31:4; Josh 22:14; Judges 20:2; 1 Sam 2:28; Psa 78:55).
- “The twelve tribes of Israel” (Gen 49:28; Ex 24:4).
- “The tribes of the children of Israel” (Josh 4:5,8; 19:51; 21:1; Rev 7:4).
- “The people of the children of Israel” (Ex 1:9).
- “The people of Israel” (Num 21:6; Josh 8:33; Ezra 2:2; Neh 7:7; Amos 9:14).
- “The people of God” (Judges 20:2).
- “The people of the Lord ” (Judges 5:11).
- “The children of Israel” (Ex 3:14; 19:2; Rom 9:27; Heb 11:22; Rev 2:14). There are six hundred and thirty-five uses of this expression in Scripture – 621 in the Genesis through Malachi, and 14 in Matthew through Revelation.

The word “Israel” is found 2,566 times in Scripture. The only name mentioned more is “God” (4,019). “Lord” is mentioned 1,055 times. By way of comparison “Gentiles” and “Gentile” are mentioned 123 times, and “nations” 336 times.

The location of the various peoples of the earth – “the sons of Adam” – was determined in accordance with the number of the children of Israel. It is written, “When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, He set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel ” (Deut 32:8).

THE LOFTIEST VIEW

“Ye men of Israel” reflects the highest view of the Jewish nation. Although many Israelites found confidence in being a “Jew,” resting in the Law and making a boast in God (Rom 2:17), the term “Israel” removes all cause for national boasting. This traces their existence back to God, who “chose Israel” and made Himself “known” to “the house of Jacob” (Ezek 20:5).

Lest the Gentiles imagine that the Israelites no longer have any significance with God, Paul presents a lengthy argument for the absurdity of such an imagination. It is appropriate to briefly consider his argument, lest we be tempted to view Pentecost as a mere technicality. This was a “first fruits” harvest, and was reaped in anticipation of a fuller harvest of the children of the Israel, as well as the “other sheep” that would be added from the Gentile world (John 10:16). Peter will also acknowledge this greater harvest when he cries out, “For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off , even as many as the Lord our God shall call ” (Acts 2:39).

ROMANS CHAPTERS 9-11

Here, I will only provide an outlined overview of Paul’s argument, confirming that at no point is the offer of salvation, and the anticipation of it being received, withdrawn from Israel.

- Paul maintains a great concern for Israel (9:1-3).
- God made a determined investment in Israel (9:4-5).
- There is a remnant within the nation, chosen by God, as confirmed in their history (9:6-13).
- The righteous character God supports the maintenance of Israel, for His will is the determining factor, in both those who reject and those who accept (9:14-24).
- There is a remnant within Israel who will yet be reaped. The reasonableness of this is seen in the fact that the Gentiles were themselves redeemed from an unacceptable state. It makes all the more sense for the Israelites to also receive mercy (9:25-33).

Lest the Gentiles imagine that the Israelites no longer have any significance with God, Paul presents a lengthy argument for the absurdity of such an imagination. It is appropriate to briefly consider his argument, lest we be tempted to view Pentecost as a mere technicality.

Just as with the Gentiles, the present state of unbelieving Israel is due to their own spiritual obtuseness (10:1-3).

- Faith, however, induced by the hearing of the Gospel, can triumph over such a sordid past (10:4-17).
- Although the sound of the Gospel has been heard by the Israelites, God, in accord with His word through Moses, will provoke them to jealousy by the acceptance of the Gentiles (10:18-21).
- It is categorically stated that God has not cast away His people Israel (11:1a).
- Paul presents himself as proof of this, for he was not cast away (11:1b).
- The fact that God has always preserved a remnant among this people is confirmed by such a preservation in the days of Elijah (11:2-4).
- Thus there remains a remnant among the people, “according to election,” even though they are presently in a state of unbelief (11:5).

- This arrangement is in perfect accord with the grace of God (11:6).
- Israel as a whole has not obtained the benefit, but the remnant within them did, and “the rest were blinded” (11:7-10).
- The stumbling of Israel is not a permanent condition – i.e., they have not utterly fallen (11:11a).
- Instead, this has been God’s means of bringing salvation to the Gentiles, to whom, God had not sent a prophet affirming a coming salvation (11:11b).
- The salvation of the Gentiles is not intended to be an end of itself, but is designed to provoke Israel “to jealousy” (11:11c).
- If the fall of Israel brought the riches of salvation to the world, and the diminishing of them meant salvation’s wealth was brought to the Gentiles, much more will blessing be brought by their restoration (11:12).
- Paul magnified his ministry to the Gentiles in order that he might provoke the Israelites to jealousy (11:13-14).
- If the casting away of Israel meant the reconciling of the whole world, receiving them again will induce an even greater spiritual resurrection (11:15).
- If the beginning of the nation (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob) was holy, then so are their offspring (11:16).
- Only “some of the branches” were broken off of the tree, making room for the grafting in of the Gentile branches, who came from a wild tree (11:17a).
- The Gentile branches are partaking of the stability and vitality of a Jewish root and tree. Therefore, it cannot be that the total Jewish tree has been rejected (11:17b).
- Gentile believers should not be proud against the Israelites, for the Gentiles are being supported by the Israelite’s tree (11:18).
- Some Gentiles may assume that the Israelites were broken off in order that they might take their place. This is not so. It was because of unbelief that the “some” branches were broken off, and the Gentiles are in the tree by faith, and thus will, also be broken off if they abide not in that faith (11:19-22).
- Likewise, the fallen Israelites will also be grafted in again if they abide not still in unbelief. That makes more sense to men that the grafting in of the Gentiles, who never were a people. What is even more, “God is able to graft them in again” (11:23).
- If the Gentiles were put into the rich olive tree “contrary to nature,” “how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?” (Rom 11:24).

A TECHNICAL POINT

Prior to the time when Peter was speaking, Jesus had already told Jerusalem it would be rejected, because it had rejected Him, knowing not the day of it’s visitation (Luke 19:42-44). He categorically told them, “Behold, your house is left unto you desolate : and verily I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me , UNTIL the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord” (Luke 13:35). Yet Peter rises on this memorable Pentecost, and will call forth the remnant, fulfilling this word: “until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.” True, it will be a remnant, yet it will also be the “first fruits” of an even greater harvest to come!

Therefore, when Peter addresses these people he is appealing to their Divine heritage. He is stirring up a recollection of “the fathers” and the unequivocal promises that were made to them. He will therefore, by this means, plead with great insight and power. We do well to give heed to his words.

HEAR THESE WORDS

“ 22b . . . hear these words.” Other versions read, “listen to these words,” NASB “listen to this,” NIV “listen to what I have to say,” NRSV “give ear to these words,” BBE and “I beg you to listen to my words.” PHILLIPS

We cannot make too much of these words. If it is true that “faith cometh by hearing,” then men must be exhorted to hear – to listen, hearken, give heed, and take into their hearts and minds what is being said by the Gospel.

Jesus had told His disciples, “Preach the Gospel to every creature!” (Mk 16:15). The promise that those who “believe” and are “baptized” shall be saved, postulates that the Gospel has been heard. The emphasis here is on the preaching, not on the baptizing. For some, this is too hard to hear, because they imagine that it is somehow demeaning baptism. Such a notion is only an unfounded thought to be cast down.

Paul stated the case, and it is to be received, offensive or not. “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect” (1 Cor 1:17). Paul said this because there were some in Corinth who attached more significance to their baptism, and who performed it, than to the Christ into whom they were baptized. He wrote, “Is Christ divided? was Paul crucified for you? or were ye baptized in the name of Paul? I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius; lest any should say that I had baptized in mine own name. And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other” (1 Cor 1:13-16).

It was certainly not that Paul was indifferent about the subject of baptism. Much of what we know about this ordinance was delivered to us by Paul himself (Rom 6:3-17; 1 Cor 12:13; Gal 3:27; Eph 4:5; Col 2:12-15). However, if you remove Jesus Christ from Paul’s writings, you will also have to remove the subject of baptism, for it all hinges on Christ Jesus the Lord.

Now Peter calls upon the people before him to “hear” his words. The word “hear” comes from a word meaning, “to attend to, using the faculty of hearing; consider what is said; understand, perceive the sense of what is being said.” THAYER A summons to “hear my words” is a call to consider and understand with the intention of obeying. This is the kind of statement a spiritually confident man makes. Peter does not assume this posture because of his natural speaking ability. His is an sureness produced by faith – the “full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22), and “the full assurance of understanding” (Col 2:2). He has not been taught speaking skills, nor has he taken a course in the art of persuasion. The truth of God has impacted his spirit, and he himself comprehends what he is going to say.

RECEIVING IS NOT OPTIONAL

Jesus made quite clear how heaven regards those who refuse the ones He sends, not hearkening to them, or treating them just as though they had said nothing important. “He that heareth you heareth Me; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me”

I have often heard men present what they conceive to be the truth as though there was an option available to men to reject it. They call upon men to research the possibility of what they say, and buttress their remarks with words like, “I believe this with all of my heart.” Such produces an atmosphere much like an academic classroom where the students are asked to consider various contradicting theories, then pick the one to which they are attracted. It all sounds innocent enough, and maybe even “intellectually honest.”

However, when you are speaking of matters with eternal consequences, and issues that relate to the God with whom we have to do, there is no room for such approaches. When we address the death of Christ, human guilt, and the resurrection of Christ, there really is no room for any opinion. We need the unvarnished truth on such issues, and men must be exhorted to hear what is being said.

IS IT IMPORTANT TO HEAR?

If you are tempted to wonder how important hearing is, consider the words of the prophet Isaiah. “Incline your ear, and come unto me : hear, and your soul shall live ; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David” (Isa 55:3). Is there anything about that word that makes for indifference, differing opinions, or the development of some lifeless philosophy? Is there no consequence for failing to “incline your ear” to the living God? Is being made alive irrelevant? What of passing by an “everlasting covenant, even the sure mercies of David?” Does that sound like something that is neutral, unimportant, or merely interesting?

Remember, Peter is speaking as Christ’s witness. Jesus had already told the disciples that when the Spirit came upon them, and they were “endured with power from on high,” they would be His “witnesses” (Acts 1:8). That is, God was speaking to the people through Peter , perfectly coinciding with Paul’s later statement, “as though God did beseech you by us” (2 Cor 5:20).

Jesus made quite clear how heaven regards those who refuse the ones He sends, not hearkening to them, or treating them just as though they had said nothing important. “He that heareth you heareth Me; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me ” (Luke 10:16). There is a “threefold cord” (Eccl 4:12) that is woven by God. It consists of God Himself, the Lord Jesus whom He has sent, and those who are sent out by Christ. To reject the one who is Christ’s witness is to reject Christ Himself. To reject Christ, is to reject God.

Ponder the word that Jeremiah was given to speak. “O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD” (Jer 22:29). Consider the outcome of rejecting that threefold admonition. I will venture to say there has never been a time when God spoke to men through holy men that He was indifferent about their response.

Let your mind take in the words of Moses, the servant of the Lord. “ Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of My mouth . My doctrine shall drop as the rain, My speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass: because I will publish the name of the LORD: ascribe ye greatness unto our God” (Deut 32:1-3). God’s word is copious, supplying nourishment to those tender souls, whether they are new in the household of faith, or a bruised reed, or smoking flax. It also supplies rich nourishment to the stable and strong, who are like the robust and full-grown grass of the field. However, the profitable and abundant word of the Lord brings no benefit to those who do not hear it, failing to give their ears to the Lord. Peter knows this well, and that is why he calls upon the people to hear his words.

If you have “an ear to hear” you will sense that one of the besetting sins of the modern church is that its ministers rarely have very much to say. Too many of its preachers speak only of modern day issues. They do really have a message – one through which faith “comes” (Rom 10:17), because it is the means through the Holy Spirit works on the hearts of men. Too many professing ministers are only giving sundry responses to what is happening among men. You will at once perceive that this is not the way it is with Peter. He does have something to say, and he therefore bids the people to give heir attention to it. He will speak forcefully and candidly, and will demand that the people listen to him.

JESUS OF NAZARETH

“ 22c . . . Jesus of Nazareth . . .” Other versions read, “Jesus the Nazarene,” NASB and “Jesus from Nazareth.” GWN

The phrase “Jesus of Nazareth” occurs seventeen times in Scripture (Matt 26:71; Mk 1:24; 10:47; 14:67; 16:6; Lk 4:34; 18:37; 24:19; John 1:45; 18:5,7; 19:19; Acts 2:22; 6:16; 10:38; 22:8; 26:9). John records the full writing of the inscription that Pilate had “prepared and fastened to the cross.” NIV “And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS” (John 19:19).

Herein is a most interesting circumstance! At this point, Peter does not refer to “Christ the Lord,” “the Son of God,” the “Savior of the world,” or even “Christ” or “Messiah.” He rather speaks of the Lord as He was last publically known – when He was crucified and a sign was placed above His head identifying Him as “Jesus of Nazareth”

Matthew refers to the writing as an “accusation,” or charge against Him. “And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS” (Matt 27:37). Mark refers to the sign as a “written notice,” NIV and represents it as saying, “THE KING OF THE JEWS” (Mk 15:26). Luke also refers to it as a “superscription,” and says it read “This is the king of the Jews” (Lk. 23:38). John informs us that the “chief priests” objected to this sign. They went to Pilate about the matter. “Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews; but that he said, I am King of the Jews” (John 19:21). Ponder the following.

- His enemies were known to refer to Jesus as “Jesus of Nazareth” (Matt 26:71; Mk 14:67).
- The demons calls him by this title (Mk 1:24; Lk 4:34), indicating they were well familiar with Him, and where He was raised and conducted His affairs unto thirty years of age.
- When Bartimaeus asked who was passing by, this was the description the people used (Mk 10:47; Lk 18:37). Angels called him “Jesus of Nazareth” (Mk 16:6).
- On the road to Emmaus Cleopas referred to Him in this way (Lk 24:19).
- When Philip found Nathanael and told him they had found the one of whom Moses and the Prophets wrote, he called Jesus by this title (John 1:45).
- When the soldiers came to the garden to arrest Jesus, and He asked them who they were seeking, they twice replied, “Jesus of Nazareth” (John 18:5).
- When Stephen’s opponents raised charges against him, and eventually stoned him, they said, “For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us” (Acts 6:14).
- When Peter preached to Cornelius and his household, this is how He referred to the Savior (Acts 10:38).
- When Jesus appeared to Saul of Tarsus, and Saul asked Him, who He was, the Lord replied, “I am Jesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest” (Acts 22:8).
- When Paul recounted his past life, he said, “I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth ” (Acts 26:9).

CONSIDER THE SAYING

Herein is a most interesting circumstance! At this point, Peter does not refer to “Christ the Lord,”

“the Son of God,” the “Savior of the world,” or even “Christ” or “Messiah.” He rather speaks of the Lord as He was last publically known – when He was crucified and a sign was placed above His head identifying Him as “Jesus of Nazareth” (John 19:19). When He was arrested in the garden by “the men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees,” this was how they referred to Him (John 18:3). This is how He was known among the people. Those standing before Peter well knew that this was the man concerning whom they had cried out “Crucify Him, crucify Him” (John 19:6), and “Away with Him, away with Him, crucify Him,” and “We have no king but Caesar” (John 19:15). When Pilate told the crowd he was “innocent of the blood of this just person,” the people shouted out, “His blood be on us, and on our children” (Matt 27:25).

That was the “Jesus of Nazareth” the people standing before Peter knew. When the people had been exposed to His matchless words, in spiritual coldness and rebellion they had responded, “Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary, the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at Him” (Mark 6:3). So far as they were concerned, that was the Jesus they knew, and they had clearly made known their view of Him. Now Peter would face them with who Jesus really was, what they themselves had done, and how the very purposes of God had been fulfilled in their presence.

A MAN APPROVED OF GOD

“ 22d . . . a Man approved of God among you . . . ”

The people to whom Peter was preaching had not approved of Jesus – not as He had represented Himself. They had received Him as “the carpenter, the son of Mary, and the brother of James and Joses, and of Judah and Simon” (Mk 6:3). They had received Him to some degree as “the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee” (Matt 21:11). But they had never perceived this Jesus as Peter was going to proclaim Him.

Although much is not made of this fact during our time, what the Father thinks of the Son of paramount importance. Many spend a considerable amount of time speaking to men about what God thinks of them. It all sounds very nice, but it is not. The Gospel focuses on the Father’s approval of Jesus, for without that approval salvation is simply not possible.

This is the man they had rejected, not knowing that in Him they had experienced “the time of” their “visitation” (Lk 19:44). Jesus Himself told them He had brought them the “things which belong to thy peace! But now they are hid from thy eyes” (Lk 19:42). In fact, in accordance with the word of the prophets, God had “visited and redeemed His people” (Lk 1:68). God had even sent a forerunner to announce the Savior’s coming, and ready the people to receive Him. Thus Zecharias, the father of that prophet John the Baptist, declared, “Through the tender mercy of our God; whereby the dayspring from on high hath visited us, to give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace” (Luke 1:78-79).

APPROVED OF GOD

. . . a Man approved of God. . . ” Other versions read, “a Man attested by God,” NKJV “a man accredited by,” NIV “a man who had the approval of God,” BBE “a man pointed out . . . by God,” CSB “a man borne witness to by God,” DARBY “a man whom God brought to . . . attention,” GWN “a man made manifest . . . by God,” MRD “a man commendedto you by God,” NET “God publicly endorsed,” NLT “a very special man. God clearly showed this,” IE “a Man accredited and pointed out and shown forth and commended and attested . . . by God,” AMPLIFIED and “a man proved . . .by God himself.” PHILLIPS

First, this is something that was done deliberately by the living God, and directly specifically to the Israelites. The aim was to sanction “Jesus of Nazareth” as the promised Messiah.

From the very beginning this was made plain. When, for example, Jesus was born, a holy angel told lowly shepherds, “For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord” (Luke 2:11). Before Jesus was born “of a woman,” an angel from the Lord told Joseph, to whom Mary was espoused, “And she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call His name JESUS: for He shall save His people from their sins” (Matt 1:21). When Jesus was baptized by John, God Himself said “This is My beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased” (Matt 3:17). In His first message in His own home town, Jesus read Isaiah’s prophecy of the coming Messiah and what He was sent to do. He then announced, “This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears” (Luke 4:21).

In addition, throughout Christ’s prodigious ministry, He was “approved of God.” Later, Peter declared to the household of Cornelius, “How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and with power: who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil; for God was with him” (Acts 10:38). Nicodemus, an inquiring Pharisee, acknowledged that it was evident that God was “with Him” (John 3:2). When the Jews objected to Jesus saying God was His Father, He said to them, “the works which the Father hath given Me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of Me, that the Father hath sent Me” (John 5:36). He also affirmed that “the Father” had “sealed” Him (John 6:27).

A Critical Requirement

Although much is not made of this fact during our time, what the Father thinks of the Son of paramount importance. Many spend a considerable amount of time speaking to men about what God thinks of them. It all sounds very nice, but it is not. The Gospel focuses on the Father’s approval of Jesus, for without that approval salvation is simply not possible. If men are going to be saved, someone who is, without any question, approved by God must accomplish it, for we cannot extricate ourselves from the bondage into which sin cast us.

Salvation in all of its aspects must come from outside ourselves. This is because sin has made men thoroughly unacceptable to God. That is a condition that results in unregenerated men being “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1).

The One charged with effectively addressing and correcting this condition must be approved by God, being well pleasing to Him, for God Himself is the reason for the salvation. Also, His work must be accepted. Scripture affirms this in a number of ways.

- Jesus “suffered for sins” that He might “bring us to God” (1 Pet 3:18).
- Jesus reconciled us “to God” (Rom 5:10).
- We have been “alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom 6:11).
- Being made “free from sin,” we have become “servants to God” (Rom 6:22).
- We have been “married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God” (Rom 7:4).
- Only those who serve Christ are “acceptable to God” (Rom 14:18).
- In salvation we turn “to God” (1 Thess 1:9).
- It is through Christ that we “come unto God” (Heb 7:25).
- Through Christ we have been made “kings and priests unto God” (Rev 1:5).
- There is only “one Mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 2:5).

The entirety of our salvation, from beginning to end, depends upon God’s approval of Christ. The Jesus we embrace MUST be the One God approved and sent into the world. It MUST be the One whom God sustained during His earthly ministry. It MUST be the One whose death God accepts, as confirmed by His resurrection from the dead. It MUST be the One to whom God listens as He makes intercession for those who come to God through Him.

There is a “Jesus” that is sanctioned, accepted, and approved by God for the work of saving men. That means that God honors His words and His works. It means He blesses those who receive Jesus in the capacity God has ordained.

If God has “approved” Jesus, there can be no acceptable reason for rejecting Him. It can never be acceptable to ignore what He says, or refuse what He offers.

The entirety of our salvation, from beginning to end, depends upon God’s approval of Christ. The Jesus we embrace MUST be the One God approved and sent into the world. It MUST be the One whom God sustained during His earthly ministry. It MUST be the One whose death God accepts, as confirmed by His resurrection from the dead. It MUST be the One to whom God listens as He makes intercession for those who come to God through Him.

AMONG YOU

. . . among you . . .” Other versions read, “to you,” NKJV “ to your attention ,” GWN “ publicly endorsed ,” NLT

Now Peter informs the audience that God’s approval of Jesus did not take place behind closed doors, or on a mountain apart from the people. God approved, sanctioned, and endorsed “Jesus of Nazareth” among them . He drew their attention to Him, publicly endorsing Him. Paul referred to the public nature of Christ’s life, ministry, and death when he said to Festus, “For the king knows about these matters, and I speak to him also with confidence, since I am persuaded that none of these things escape his notice; for this has not been done in a corner ” NASB (Acts 26:26).

The Divine approval of “Jesus of Nazareth” was not merely general – only for the masses of people at large. It was a targeted approval – “among you ,” “to your attention.” The Israelites were the ones among whom Jesus ministered. His activities were primarily in their villages, towns, and cities (Matt9:35; Mk 6:6; Mk 6:56). He was in their synagogues (Matt 4:23), and taught daily in their Temple (Lk 19:47). He ministered in all three parts of their land: Galilee (Matt 15:41; John 7:1,9), Samaria (Lk 17:11; John 4:4),and Judaea (Matt 19:1). He attended, and ministered at their feasts (Matt 26:17; John 5:1;6:4; 7:2, 37). He ministered by their sea shores (Matt 13:2), desert places of their area (Matt 13:13-15), as well as throughout their country (Matt 9:31; 14:35). He ministered in Caesarea Philippi in the far North(Matt 15:13), and the southmost region of Idumaea (Mk 3:6).

In all of these regions, it was apparent and beyond question that Jesus was no ordinary man. Multitudes flocked to Him “from every quarter” (Mk 1:45). It is written, “And there followed Him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan” (Matt 4:25).Three times Matthew wrote, “great multitudes followed Him” (Matt 8:1; 12:15; 19:2). Seven times the people to whom Jesus ministered are referred to as “the multitudes” (Matt 5:1; 9:33,36; 11:7; 14:22,23; 21:9).

In the ministry of Jesus the rich were exposed to Him (Lk 18:23), the “common people” (Mk 12:37), the religious elite (Matt 15:1), and the socially unapproved(Matt 9:10). The king heard about Him and His mighty works (Mk 6:14). Special religious councils were convened because of Him (Matt 22:15;Mk 3:6). Two times He fed a multitude miraculously with very small supplies of bread and fish (Matt 14:21; 15:38). He went into their homes (Matt 9:10,28; 26:6). He healed their sick in the streets (Mk 6:56), throughout “all Syria” (Matt 4:24), and in desolate places (Matt 12:15).

All of this is a commentary on “among you.” Peter will establish that there was no possible excuse for the Jews missing the significance of Jesus, much less for their rejection of Him.

A PRINCIPLE TO BE SEEN

In the end, we will see that there is no valid reason for the ignorance of God – not so much as a single one. Even where it appears as though the Gospel has not been preached, men have been created with a conscience that should compel them to engage in a quest for God, for the “work of the law” has been Divinely written upon it (Rom 2;15). In addition to this, God has strategically and purposefully positioned every person in both time and geography in order that they might seek the Lord . “From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live. God did this so that men would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us” NIV (Acts 17:26-27). I hardly see how anything can be stated with greater precision and objectivity.

Add to this the ministry of the Prophets and John the Baptist among the Jews, together with the prodigious ministry of Jesus, and the words of Peter obtain unusual strength and conviction – “A Man approved of God among you.” There was not a soul in that region that had not in some way been exposed to “Jesus of Nazareth.” He was like a household name throughout the length and breadth of the land.

-

THE MEANS BY WHICH HE WAS APPROVED

“ 22e . . . by miracles and wonders and signs which God did by Him in the midst of you . . . ”

Now Peter declares the means by which Jesus was publicly “approved by God” among them . The appointed means were in no way ambiguous, vague, or open to question. They were thorough, unquestionable, and beyond all controversy.

Three classifications of mighty works are given, with each of them transcending the natural order. By “transcending the natural order” I mean the works Jesus wrought could not have been accomplished by natural means, even though some of them had to with natural activities. They occurred in nature, but were not done by employing the forces, or laws, of nature. Take, for example, the feedings of the four thousand and the five thousand. Both of them involved a natural activity – eating. The multitudes were not fed miraculously by nourishing the people without them eating. They also were given bread and fish – ordinary food. They were not fed with “bread from heaven,” (John 6;31-32) or “angels’ bread ” (Psa 78:25). Yet, Jesus used a means of multiply the bread and fish that were outside the boundaries of natural power. Bread cannot reproduce itself, or increase in quantity by means of natural laws.

I say these things because there are those who teach that miracles, signs, or wonders are wholly outside the limits of nature. Those holding to this view take the position all works within he categories of our text are creative in nature. However, as in the case of Jesus feeding the multitudes, He did not create bread and fish, but rather increased them. That is the same kind of miracle wrought when the widow of Zarephath found her small portion of oil and meal being sustained throughout a famine, even though it was being used (1 Kgs 17:16). The same was true of the widow’s “pot of oil,” which, though small, was used to fill a great number of vessels, yet the oil in the “pot” did not diminish (2 Kgs 4:3-6).

BY MIRACLES . . .

“ . . . by miracles and wonders and signs . . .” Other versions read, “with deeds of power,” NRSV “mighty works,” ASV “works of power,” DOUAY “mighty deeds,” NAB “powerful deeds,” NET “by the miracles and portents and signs,” NJB “by doing tremendous miracles,” LIVING

The Greek word from which “miracle” is translated is duna,mesi (doon-a-mesi). It comes from the same root word as the word used in Romans 1:16: “the gospel of Christ . . . which is THE POWER of God unto salvation.” Often the word is translated “mighty works” (Matt 11:20-23; 13:34), and “power” of God (Matt 22:29). In Matt 25:15, it is translated “ability” (Matt 25:15). In Mark 5:30, it is translated “virtue.”

This word accents the ability and authority of the Lord to do something. The deed that is wrought is accomplished because of the power and dominance that is resident in the Lord – inherent. The lexical meaning of this word is, “inherent power, power residing in a thing by virtue of its nature, or which a person or thing exerts and puts forth,” THAYER “able to produce a strong effect, power, might, strength,” FRIBERG and “ability, capability.” LOUW-NIDA That is, the worker, is able to cause something to happen that could never be accomplished through the ordinary or extended course of nature. An example of a “miracle” is “the miracle of the loaves” (Mk 6:52). Here, the accent is on the one who DOES the miracle, and the power or authority HE possesses.

By these supernatural means – miracles, wonders, and signs – God sanctioned the Person, word, and works of “Jesus of Nazareth.” No adversarial power, whether Satanic or human, could stand before the Lord’s Christ. No demon ever argued with Jesus or sought to resist His will. No infirmity could remain when Jesus had dismissed it. No natural element ever failed to yield to Him, whether wind, storm, waves, water, trees, or fish.

As used in this text, the word “miracle” does not mean sign, or proof. It rather speaks of the ability and authority to do something – like dismiss demons with His word (Matt 8:16).

BY . . . WONDERS

Other versions read, “ did amazing things,” GWN “prodigies,” MRD and “portents.” NJB

Coming from the Greek word te,rasi (teras), a “wonder” is something that is so unusual it draws the attention of men. It is something wrought externally that can be observed and analyzed by others. Lexically the word means, “something so strange as to cause it to be watched or observed,” THAYER and “something so unusual it arouses close observation.” FRIBERG Here the accent is on the NATURE of the work that is done.

The healing of a man with a withered hand, and the raising of an impotent man, might be called a “wonder” – something that could be seen. By way of comparison, in the woman who was miraculously healed of an issue of blood the effects of the miracle were seen, and not the miracle itself.

In this sense, not all of Christ’s mighty works were “wonders” – done openly with the intent to gain the attention of the people. It is not that they were not wonders in the sense of being able to cause the people to marvel. Rather, they were not done openly – like turning water into wine (John 2:1-10), and Peter getting a coin from a fish’s mouth (Matt 17:27).

Examples of “wonders” would be the more open works that caused the people to marvel (Matt 8:27; 9:8,33).

BY . . . SIGNS . . .

Other versions read, “miraculous signs,” NET and “wonder-works/” WILLIAMS

The word “sign” comes from the Greek word shmei,ojj (say-mi-ois), which refers to a supernatural work that serves as a pointer to some distinguishing characteristic. Lexically the word means, “that by which a person or a thing is distinguished from others and known,” THAYER “basically, what serves as a pointer to aid perception or insight; sign, mark, distinguishing characteristic” FRIBERG and “a sign, a mark, a token,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

An example would be the healing of the paralytic man who was let down through the roof to Jesus’ feet. Before healing Him, Jesus said: “But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house” (Mark 2:10-11).

Although not the point of this text, the preeminent “sign” is the resurrection of Christ, which confirmed that He was the Son of God with authority and power (Rom 1:4). Using the same word that is employed in this text, Jesus said of His resurrection, “But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign ; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth” (Matt 12:40).

In this case, the PURPOSE of the work is the point – the reality to which it points.

WHICH GOD DID AMONG YOU

“ . . . which God did by Him in the midst of you.” Other versions read “which God did through Him in your midst,” NKJV “Which God performed through Him in your midst,” NASB “which God wrought by Him in your midst,” DARBY and “which God performed through Him right here among you .” WILLIAMS

By these supernatural means – miracles, wonders, and signs – God sanctioned the Person, word, and works of “Jesus of Nazareth.” No adversarial power, whether Satanic or human, could stand before the Lord’s Christ. No demon ever argued with Jesus or sought to resist His will. No infirmity could remain when Jesus had dismissed it. No natural element ever failed to yield to Him, whether wind, storm, waves, water, trees, or fish. He spoke “with authority” (Lk 4:36) because He had authority from God, being approved by Him. No man could touch, harm, answer, or arrest Jesus until the time came for Him to lay down His life. The reason for this – He was “approved of God.”

This Divine approval did not take place in a remote area, but “among” the Jews themselves. It was a public approval, a frequent approval, and an effective approval. God gave the people enough evidence of His unqualified sanction of “Jesus of Nazareth”, so that no question concerning the identity or authenticity of Jesus could possibility be legitimate.

Jesus had gone “among the people,” working the works of God. As it is written, “And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people ” (Matt 4:23). And again, “And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people ” (Matt 9:35). His presence among them was so arresting that it is written, “So there was a division among the people because of Him ” (John 7:43), and “There was a division therefore again among the Jews for these sayings” (John 10:19). The entire area was aflame with an acute awareness of the presence and ministry of Jesus, His words, and His works. Peter powerfully places this before the people.

YOU KNOW IT WELL

“ 22f . . . as ye yourselves also know.” Other versions read, “just as you yourselves know,” NASB “as you yourselves have knowledge,” BBE “as you also know,” DOUAY “as you well know,” NLT “according as also ye yourselves have known,” YLT “You know this is true,” IE and “as you very well know.” PHILLIPS

Peter now appeals to the conscience of the people. They were fully aware of the Divine approval to which Peter has referred. It was their hard hearts and unwillingness to yield that caused them to ignore all of that evidence, rejecting the Son of God. Ponder the many references to the response of the people to Jesus. They confirm they knew– at last intellectually – of the extraordinary nature of Christ, His words, and His works.

- ASTONISHED AT HIS DOCTRINE. “And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at His doctrine ” (Matt 7:28).
- THE PEOPLE WERE AMAZED. “And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the son of David?” (Matt 12:23).
- THE PEOPLE FOLLOWED HIM. “When Jesus heard of it, He departed thence by ship into a desert place apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed Him on foot out of the cities” (Matt 14:13).
- THE PEOPLE PRAISED HIM. “And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest” (Matt 21:9).
- THE PEOPLE RAN TO HIM. “And straightway all the people, when they beheld Him, were greatly amazed, and running to Him saluted Him” (Mark 9:15).

Peter now appeals to the conscience of the people. They were fully aware of the Divine approval to which Peter has referred. It was their hard hearts and unwillingness to yield that caused them to ignore all of that evidence, rejecting the Son of God.

THE PEOPLE GLORIFIED GOD. “And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion” (Mark 2:12).

- THE PEOPLE RESORTED TO HIM. “And He arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judaea by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto Him again; and, as He was wont, He taught them again” (Mark 10:1).
- EVEN THE SCRIBES AND CHIEF PRIESTS KNEW OF HIM. “And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy Him: for they feared Him, because all the people was astonished at His doctrine” (Mark 11:18).
- THEY WONDERED AT HIS WORDS. “And all bare Him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of His mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?” (Luke 4:22).
- THE PEOPLE PRESSED TO HEAR HIM. “And it came to pass, that, as the people pressed upon Him to hear the word of God, He stood by the lake of Gennesaret” (Luke 5:1).
- THEY GLORIFIED GOD AND WERE FILLED WITH FEAR. “And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to day” (Luke 5:26).
- THE PEOPLE RECEIVED HIM. “And it came to pass, that, when Jesus was returned, the people gladly received Him: for they were all waiting for Him” (Luke 8:40).
- MANY BELIEVED ON HIM. “And many of the people believed on Him, and said, When Christ cometh, will He do more miracles than these which this man hath done?” (John 7:31).

The above texts are all confirmation of the impact of God's approval of Jesus among the people. There was no acceptable reason for the Jews rejecting Him – not so much as a single one. He had been approved with unwavering consistency over and over, time and again, among them .

HIM!

“ 23a Him . . .” Other versions read, “This man,” NASB “this Jesus,” RSV “This same,” DOUAY and “This very man.” ISV

In this single word Peter narrows the focus of his words to a solitary Individual – the Lord Jesus Christ. The prophets had declared that the hopes of humanity depended upon “a Man” – not a nation, not an army, not a body of people, but “a Man.” And a Man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land” (Isa 32:2). Again, speaking of the coming Messiah – a single person – Isaiah wrote, “And He shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel, for a gin and for a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem” (Isa 8:14).

What spirit would provoke any one to shine the spotlight of attention on any other person? How is it possible for a people to become so enamored of an individual, a movement, or a line of thinking that do not give the obvious preeminence to this man?

The Divine assessment of every person will be made upon the basis of this Person. He will either be a place of refuge, or a Stone of stumbling, a great Rock to shelter them from the heat or a “gin (trap) and a snare” by which they will be discovered and condemned. He would be either a Foundation – the means of their stability – or a crushing Rock that would grind them into powder.

What spirit would provoke any one to shine the spotlight of attention on any other person? How is it possible for a people to become so enamored of an individual, a movement, or a line of thinking that do not give the obvious preeminence to this man? Keep in mind, that to divide the people of God, you must focus on something other than Jesus, for He is not divided, and cannot be the cause of division among His people.

Throughout history – from very early times – the focus of the church has been its weakness. Paul stated the case well to the Colossians, who were being pulled away from a proper focus. “Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in Him , which is the head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10). It is not possible to obtain any resource required for life and godliness that is not resident in the Person of Christ. There is no body of human knowledge that contains so much as a mote of spiritual value. No mere man has ever, or can ever, present a new line of reasoning to the people of God, a thought-out procedure that will enhance spiritual life, or a principle that will cause a person to in any way excel in spiritual life. Men may extol such things as hermeneutics, homiletics, apologetics, logic, and the likes, but there is no life in any of them. No person can in any way say of such principles of thought, “they are spirit, and they are life” (John 6:63). None of them can make “the man of God perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17). Unlike the Word of God, none of them can beget a soul (James 1:18), save the soul (James 1:21), build men up (Acts 20:32), or make men “wise unto salvation” (2 Tim 3:15). Only the Word of God, which focuses on the Lord's Christ, can accomplish such things – and they are all essential to our identity with God through God.

There are at least two principle diversions from Christ in the “Christian” community. These have to do with appropriating and maintaining a productive relationship with the living God. Both of them have this one thing in common: Jesus is not the main thing. He is not the solitary means of Divine approval or moral improvement. All of them are driven by an overestimation of the human mind and an underestimation of the need for the grace of God as ministered exclusively through the Lord Jesus Christ.

LAW

Within, for what of a better term, “Christendom,” there is an approach to man’s association with God that is based upon the Law principle . This approach assumes a fundamental recalcitrance within “Christians.” This primary propensity requires an approach to Divine acceptance and godly living that is much like surrounding the individual with a fence. Boundaries are established beyond which men cannot go, and within which they are bound to operate by obligation. This particular view prompts unlearned preachers and teachers to say to believers, “We are just like the Israelites of old,” or “You know how we are; we seek our own will and do not want to do God’s will,” or “We just do not listen to the Lord as we should,” or “We need to make Jesus the Lord of our life.” All of this has a kind of holy sound to it, and draws affirmative responses from the half-hearted and lukewarm.

The premier Law is the one inculcated upon men by the living God Himself – The Ten Commandments and the ordinances that surrounded them. This Law stands for all moral law. It’s purpose was never to justify. It was never intended to be a means of obtaining Divine approval. Rather, it’s purpose is summarized in these words: “Now we know that what things soever the law saith, it saith to them who are under the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may become guilty before God” (Rom 3:19). In this ministry, it is appropriately referred to as “our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith” (Gal 3:24). In other words, it confirmed the need of a Savior to all who took it seriously.

In its ministry, this Law also confirmed the inability of law – any law – to justify a person, or exonerate him from sin and its defiling effects. In confirmation of this the Spirit says, “Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law ” (Gal 3:21). That is, for a law to be effective as a means of obtaining God’s approval, it must be able to confer life .

No person who can handle the Word of God aright will affirm that life – spiritual life – can be conferred upon men by means of a law, or a rule of conduct. Such a postulate borders on insanity. Jesus has made quite clear that life lies in a Person, not a code. He affirmed that He Himself is “the Life” (John 14:6), and that He alone, having life “in Himself,” has been given the power or authority, to confer life (John 5:26).

Peter’s employment of the term “HIM” draws the attention of His hearers to the Lord Jesus, the sole means of obtaining eternal life and the Divine acceptance that is bound to it.

PHILOSOPHY

A philosophical approach to obtaining life is based upon human reasoning. While it may be associated with various laws, rules, routines, and disciplines, the imagined strength of this system is human reasoning itself.

Paul warned the Colossians of this dreadful approach to spirituality, which was already being perpetrated among them by false teachers. “Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world , and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power” (Col 2:8-10). Other versions read, “philosophy and empty deceit, according to the tradition of men,” NKJV “philosophy and empty deception, according to the tradition of men, according to the elementary principles of the world,” NASB “hollow and deceptive philosophy, which depends on human tradition and the basic principles of this world,” NIV and “so-called philosophy and intellectualism and vain deceit (idle fancies and plain nonsense), following human tradition (men’s ideas of the material rather than the spiritual world), just crude notions following the rudimentary and elemental teachings of the universe.”

AMPLIFIED

Notice that this approach is contrasted with one that is “after Christ.” This erroneous approach exists because men do not believe there is completeness in Christ (Col 2:9). The fulness of the Godhead is not seen as resident in Christ, which imagination allows for the appropriation of needed resources elsewhere. Also observe that the philosophical approach borrows from the world (“rudiments of the world”), and has human tradition as one of its main pillars (“the tradition of men”).

The word “philosophy” is an interesting one. It is a transliteration of the Greek word filosofia (fil-os-of-ee-as). As used in the Colossian text, its lexical meaning is, “a world view, as opposed to that derived from Divine revelation; human wisdom or understanding,” FRIBERG “human understanding or wisdom and, by implication, in contrast with Divinely revealed knowledge,” LOUW-NIDA “sophistry,” GINGRICH

Human reasoning, and the knowledge resulting from it, must never be allowed to become the basis, or foundation, of religious thought. There is nothing unlawful about reasoning itself. In fact, there is a certain necessity of reasoning within the fabric of spiritual life. However, the conclusions reached by human reasoning are only valid when they are found in perfect harmony with Divine utterance. Legitimate conclusions are always founded upon precise Scriptural affirmations.

Hermeneutics

There are a number of bodies of human knowledge that fall into the classification of philosophy. Chief among these intellectual culprits is hermeneutics. The definition of this term is, “The study of the methodological principles of interpretation; a method or principle of interpretation,” MERRIAM-WEBSTER “a philosophical technique concerned with the interpretation and understanding of texts. It may be described as the theory of the interpretation and understanding of a text on the basis of the text itself. The concept of “text” has been extended beyond written documents to include, for example, speech, performances, works of art, and even events. Thus, one might speak of and interpret a ‘social text.’” OXFORD

The Spirit clearly states that there is a thoroughness in Christ Himself that makes us completely adequate. “And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10). Thus Christ is described as “all, and in all” (Col 2:11), “our Life” (Col 3:4), and “the hope of glory” (Col 1:27). If all of the “fulness of the Godhead” dwells in Christ Jesus (Col 1:19; 2:9), how could there possibly be any emphasis other than “Him” ?

There are a number of official hermeneutics – scientific principles by which the Bible is interpreted (as compared with “believed”). The Britannica Encyclopedia provides four of the primary ones. “Its (HERMENEUTICS) primary purpose is to discover the truths and values of the Bible, which is seen as a receptacle of divine revelation. Four major types of hermeneutics have emerged: LITERAL (asserting that the text is to be interpreted according to the “plain meaning”), MORAL (seeking to establish the principles from which ethical lessons may be drawn), ALLEGORICAL (interpreting narratives as having a level of reference beyond the explicit), and ANAGOGICAL or MYSTICAL (seeking to explain biblical events as they relate to the life to come). More recently the word has come to refer to all “deep” reading of literary and philosophical texts.” BRITANNICA ENCLYCLOPEDIA

For example, some read the Bible like a manual of human conduct – a sort of roadmap to heaven.

In this view, the Scriptures are primarily a legal document written to spell out the details of human conduct. Others read it as a kind of unreachable goal that is set before us – the ideal toward which we hopelessly strive. Still others perceive it within an institutional setting – a way of finding out how to identify the one true church. In this approach to Scripture, the lense of human perception is placed over the Scripture, so that it is read with a purely human conclusion in mind.

No absolutely hermeneutical approach perceives Christ Jesus Himself as being the central subject of Scripture, and Object of personal quest (Phil 3:7-14). Some, for example, perceive the primary focus to be the worship of God. Others see it is obtaining the secret to success in this world. Still others see the fundamental matter to be holiness. More could be said, but this will suffice.

At the lowest possible rung of the ladder of human perception there are those who read the Scriptures as a Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, Christian Church, of Christ of Christ, Charismatic, Catholic, and even a professing Christian sodomite. Each of these manage to find justification for their particular division of institutionalized Christianity. All of these, however, read over the real point of Scripture, and manage to miss the key Person of God's Son. Oh, they know He is there, and even acknowledge that He is the great Primary One. However, in the development of their distinction in the Christian community they put Him into the background.

Peter does not do this. Immediately He brings the Lord Jesus Christ into the foreground – “HIM!” All of the people knew that Jesus stood out among men as He went about “doing good and healing all that were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). However, as Peter will confirm, they did not regard Jesus as absolutely preeminent.

THE FOCUS DIVINELY DEFINED

If God's message centers in His Son, why would our message revolve around anything else. “He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God hath made Him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of His Son . And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son ” (1 John 5:10-11).

The message focuses upon what Jesus did, not what we should do. “Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand ; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain. For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that He was buried , and that He rose again the third day according to the scriptures” (1 Cor 15:1-4). If we “stand” in the Gospel, then who is the author of the notion that the Gospel is not to be preached to the church?

If accomplishment is the point, then the summary of our doctrine must be Christ Himself. “Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an High Priest , who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a Minister of the sanctuary , and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man” (Heb 8:1-2). What Jesus IS doing is the primary activity. All other activities are prioritized after that consideration, and are only valid as they are directly related to Christ's activity.

The Spirit clearly states that there is a thoroughness in Christ Himself that makes us completely adequate. “And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10). Thus, Christ is described as “all, and in all” (Col 2:11), “our Life” (Col 3:4), and “the hope of glory” (Col 1:27). If all of the “fulness of the Godhead” dwells in Christ Jesus (Col 1:19; 2:9), how could there possibly be any emphasis other than “Him” ? If salvation in all of its multifarious aspects is described as receiving “of HIS fulness” (John 1:16), then we are shut up to Him for all resources required for life and godliness.

BRIEF CONCLUSION

Peter now turns the attention of the people to the Son of God – “HIM.” This is the one individual who is of eternal relevance, and upon whom the destiny of all men is hinged. He will declare that what happened to Jesus is infinitely more important than what has happened to them. He will attribute the most important counsel, knowledge, and work to be that of God Himself. He will also declare that what they did to Jesus was more pertinent to their current status than anything else they ever did. Christ Jesus is the most relevant Person who has ever walked on earth.

BEING DELIVERED UP

“ 23b . . . being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God . . . ”

The subject is Christ Jesus – the One who had been clearly approved by God among the very people now standing before Peter. What would men do with the Man whom God unquestionably and powerfully approved among them? What advantage had their religion given them in the matter of recognizing the One foretold by the holy prophets? How ready had the teaching of the scribes made them to receive “the Lord’s Christ” ? That is what Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, will now address.

BEING DELIVERED

“ . . . being delivered . . . ” Other versions read, “delivered up,” NASB “ handed over to you,” NIV “when He was given up ,” BBE “given up,” DARBY “who was given over to death ,” GWN “ delivered over ,” NAU “who was put into your power ,” NJB “after He was delivered ,” TNT “being given out ,” YLT “God . . . let you ,” LIVING and “after He was betrayed .” WILLIAMS

Jesus was put into their hands. That is, He was placed within the perimeter of their power. They could do with Him whatever they desired. The border of their wills now was extended to include “Jesus of Nazareth.”

Prior to the time when He was “delivered” into their hands, they had absolutely no power of influence of any kind over Him. When the people of His own home town “rose up and thrust Him out of the city,” they “led Him unto the brow of the hill whereon the city was built, that they might cast Him down

Here is what men did when they were given the opportunity by God to do so. The hearts of Jews, Gentiles, common people, religious people, religious leaders, and politicians will now be revealed.

headlog.” It looked like He was within their power at that time – but He was not. It is written, “But He passing through the midst of them went His way” (Luke 4:30). Another time, later in His ministry, the Jews “took . . . up stones to cast at Him: but Jesus hid Himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by” (John 8:59). Of another occasion it is written, “Therefore they sought again to take him: but He escaped out of their hand” (John 10:39). When the “officers from the chief priests and Pharisees” came to arrest Jesus in the Garden, He acknowledged that He was, indeed, “Jesus of Nazareth.” Of that occasion it is written, “As soon then as He had said unto them, I am He, they went backward, and fell to the ground” (John 18:6). Up to that moment, He had not yet been delivered into their hands. That is why they could not so much as lay a hand on Him, much less do Him harm.

However, following the above-mentioned event, Jesus was put into their hands. Of that occasion it is written, “Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to Him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves. When I was daily with you in the temple, ye stretched forth no hands against Me: but this is your hour, and the power of darkness ” (Luke 22:53).

It was God Himself who delivered Jesus into the hands of the people. Later Peter will tell another group of Jews, “But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled” (Acts 3:18). It was God who “delivered” Jesus up “for our offenses” (Rom 4:25). It is categorically stated, “ He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all . . .” (Rom 8:32). If God had not handed His own Son over to this hateful mob, they would have been totally frustrated in every one of their attempts to take Him. They were used by God and did not even know it.

Here is what men did when they were given the opportunity by God to do so. The hearts of Jews, Gentiles, common people, religious people, religious leaders, and politicians will now be revealed. Thus the word of Simeon will be fulfilled: “Behold, this Child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against; (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also,) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed ” (Luke 2:34-35).

BY THE DETERMINATE COUNSEL

“ . . . by the determinate counsel . . . ” Other versions read, “by the determined purpose ,” NKJV “by the predetermined plan ,” NASB “by God’s set purpose ,” NIV “according to the definite plan ,” NRSV “by the decision,” BBE “according to God’s determined plan ,” CSB “by a plan,” GWN “being hereto appointed . . . the good pleasure of God,” MRD “by the deliberate intention ,” NJB “His prearranged plan ,” NLT “it was part of His plan which He made long ago ,” IE “God’s settled purpose ,” WEYMOUTH and “according to the definite and fixed purpose and settled plan .” AMPLIFIED

What occurred to Jesus was not a “prediction.” God does not “predict” or “forecast.” Men make predictions upon the basis of observation, experience, or scientific reason. MERRIAM-WEBSTER Jesus referred to such predictions when He said, “When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the sky is red and lowering. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?” (Mat 16:2-3). However, this is NOT the nature of Divine dealings, prophecies, and inspired foretelling.

Early believers knew this is the manner of the Kingdom. When they prayed for Divine power, they referred to God’s determination in regard to the suffering and death of Jesus. “For of a truth against Thy holy child Jesus, whom Thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done ” (Acts 4:28).

Jesus Himself said of His imminent death, “And truly the Son of man goeth, as it was determined : but woe unto that man by whom he is betrayed!” (Luke 22:22). It was God who set the agenda for Christ’s vicarious death. The prophet Zechariah traced the vulnerability of Jesus to the Father’s work. “Awake, O sword, against My shepherd, and against the man that is My fellow, saith the LORD of hosts: smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered: and I will turn Mine hand upon the little ones” (Zech 13:7).

Determinate Counsel

The words “determinate counsel” speak of something that is Divinely purposed to happen. It takes place because God has decreed it. It would never have taken place if God did not determine that to happen.

The word “counsel” means “purpose . . . the contents of a Divine plan,” THAYER “an inward thought process leading toward a decision . . . the result of inner deliberation, resolve, decision, purpose, plan,” FRIBERG “that which has been purposed and planned,” LOUW-NIDA “determination,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “resolution.” GINGRICH “Determinate counsel” speaks of an appointed objective. It declares the will of God that is inherent in Himself, and is not a mere reaction to earthly circumstance. In this “counsel” there is an unwavering and unalterable decision. There is a determination that cannot be changed or in any way thwarted. There is a Divine resolve that will be carried out to the fullest extent, and without a single minuscule omission. This is God’s will at its highest level, where there is no input from any source other than the Godhead. This “counsel” cannot be improved or negated by any influence external to God Himself.

There is a level of God’s will that is subject to variation – a level that interfaces with human circumstance. For example, God is described as One “Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth” (1 Tim 2:4). However, this does not mean that all men will be saved. It rather leaves men with the thought that the door of salvation has been opened to them. At this level of the Divine will, faith is the actuating agent.

Again it is written, “In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you” (1 Thess 5:18). This by no means suggests that every one wearing the name of Jesus is thankful. It rather presents God’s will as a sort of circumference within which insightful thanksgiving is offered by faith. Again it is written, “For this is the will of God , even your sanctification, that ye should abstain from fornication” (1 Thess 4:3). This is a “will” into which we enter, knowing that all of the resources required for its accomplish are found in Christ Jesus. However, this does not mean that personal sanctification is realized independently of our own involvement in the process.

As declared in Peter’s words, the “counsel” of the Lord involves a Divine will that cannot possibly be contradicted. God says of His “counsel,” “My counsel shall stand , and I will do all My pleasure” (Isa 46:10). This is a “counsel” that cannot possibly be frustrated – you might say it is unconditional: “The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever , the thoughts of His heart to all generations” (Psa 33:11). The delivering up of Jesus took place at a precise period of time – “the fulness of the time” (Gal 1:4). It also was fulfilled in an exact segment of that time – “the hour” (John 12:23; 17:1). Man had absolutely no input into this “counsel.” The only reason any man knows about it is that God has revealed it to us.

AND FOREKNOWLEDGE OF GOD

“ . . . and foreknowledge of God . . . ” Other versions read, “and knowledge of God ,” BBE “God had determined in advance ,” GWN “the prescience ,” MRD “God knew what would happen ,” NLT and “God knew ahead of time .” IE

Right here a lot of confusion has been introduced among believers. Several of the translations reflect this confusion, presenting the “foreknowledge of God” as though it speaks of God looking into the future, and seeing what was going to happen. Thus James Murdock’s translation reads, “the prescience.” The word “prescience” means “Divine omniscience, foresight,” MERRIAM-WEBSTER “ability to foresee future events, having knowledge of events before they take place.” OXFORD The New Living Translation reads, “God knew what would happen,” and the International English Version reads similarly, “God knew ahead of time.” It is not possible for a view to be more off-target than is represented by these versions. Our salvation has not been accomplished by means of God foreseeing what men would do to Jesus. To even suggest that the expiation of sins, the reconciliation of men to God, and the making of peace could rest upon such a foundation displays an staggering ignorance of God, Christ, and redemption.

The word “foreknowledge” comes from the Greek word prognw,sei (prog-no-sis). Lexically it means, “forethought, prerarrangement,” THAYER “foreknowledge or purpose,” UBS “chosen beforehand.” LOUW-NIDA The Louw-Nida Lexicon translates this verse, “God, in His own will and foreknowledge, had already decided that this One would be handed over to you.”

Even in the lexical definitions, many of the lexicographers miss the point. “Foreknowledge” has to do with purpose, not mere awareness. That is why it is tied with God’s “determinate counsel.”

Divine “foreknowledge” relates to what God Himself purposes to do, NOT what He knows in advance that man will do. Therefore it is written, “Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world” (Acts 15:18). Other versions read, “To the Lord was His own work known from the beginning of the world,” DOUAY “From the beginning of the world God knoweth all His works ,” GENEVA and “Known from the ages to God are all His works .” YLT

When it comes to things immediately related to God’s eternal purpose, He is motivated by Himself, and not by the works of fallen man. This fact is made clear by the Holy Spirit.

- “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9).

- “Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself ” (Eph 1:9).

- “In whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will ” (Eph 1:11).

“According to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Eph 3:11).

It is essential that this be seen, else a distorted view of God and His purpose will take hold of the heart. The Divine will, particularly as it relates to salvation, was conceived and implemented within the confines of His Person, and without any input from without Himself. Therefore we read of God purposing “in Himself” (Eph 1:9).

Now, it should be apparent that Peter is not speaking about God merely foreseeing what the Jews were going to do to Jesus. Peter affirms that what they did was in strict accord with what God had determined. In this case, His foreknowledge was the cause of the action. If this is not the case, then we would have a redemption that was initiated and carried out by men, not God. Who would dare to embrace such a foolish notion? This would mean that God took what men did and reworked it, so to speak, so that salvation was brought from it. It is not comely to imagine that this can be involved in a salvation that is “of the Lord” (Jonah 2:9).

The Use of “Foreknowledge”

The word “foreknowledge” is likewise used in First Peter. There it is also causal in nature: that is, it is what causes things to happen . “Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied” (1 Pet 1:2). Some choose to believe that men are “elect” because God foresaw what they were going to do. However, even a cursory perusal of Peter’s inspired utterance will confirm the folly of such a view. There he joins three elements together to explain our salvation.

- The “foreknowledge of God .”
- The “sanctification of the Spirit. ”
- The “sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ .”

How likely is it that, at the foundational level, the foreknowledge of what men would do could be blended together with what the Spirit would do and what the blood of Christ would do? In my judgment this would be like the “tool” of man being used to build the altar of God – something that was strictly forbidden. As it is written, “And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it ,” and “And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them ” (Ex 20:25; Duet 27:5). The same was true in the building of the Temple. “And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building ” (1 Kg 6:7).

Here, the entire Godhead is involved. The “sanctification of the Spirit” refers to the Spirit’s own activity. It’s effectiveness is in no way mingled with the aspirations or works of men. The “sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ” speaks of Divine activity, not human activity. This is not a process that is in any way accomplished by men. How, then, could it be possible for these two works to be joined with “the foreknowledge of God,” if it is nothing more than God seeing in advance what men would be and do? The whole notion is too absurd to merit any further discussion.

Jesus Foreordained

The vicarious death of Christ was foreordained by God, independently of human input. Therefore it is written, “But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot: Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world , but was manifest in these last times for you” (1 Pet 1:19-20). Jesus is also referred to as “the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world” (Rev 13:8).

The Spirit reveals that a Divine caucus between the Father and the Word was held in the heavenly chambers. This event took place with the eternal counsels of God in the background. The prophetic portion announcing this conversation is found in the fortieth Psalm. “Sacrifice and offering thou didst not desire; mine ears hast thou opened: burnt offering and sin offering hast thou not required. Then said I, Lo, I come: in the volume of the book it is written of me, I delight to do thy will, O my God: yea, thy law is within my heart” (Psa 40:6-8). The exposition of that Psalm is found in the book of Hebrews. The Savior Himself is depicted as saying these things when He made His entrance into the world.

“Wherefore when he cometh into the world, he saith, Sacrifice and offering thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me: In burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin thou hast had no pleasure. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me,) to do thy will, O God. Above when he said, Sacrifice and offering and burnt offerings and offering for sin thou wouldest not, neither hadst pleasure therein; which are offered by the law; then said he, Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all” (Heb 10:5-10).

Here, the entire Godhead is involved. The “sanctification of the Spirit” refers to the Spirit’s own activity. It’s effectiveness is in no way mingled with the aspirations or works of men. The “sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ” speaks of Divine activity, not human activity. This is not a process that is in any way accomplished by men.

There are several key considerations found in this passage. Remember, we are speaking of the “determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God.”

- God never desired the sacrifices offered under the Law. They were not provided for Himself, but were designed to prepare the way for the Lamb whom He did desire.

- A special body was prepared for Jesus that enabled Him to be a Man – a Man that could die, offering up His own body.
- Burnt offerings and sacrifices for sin never did please the Lord. That is, they brought no satisfaction to Him, and no cleansing for men.
- When it became apparent that this was the case – that the offerings of the Law were not satisfactory to God or effective for men – then the Word prepared to enter the world to do the will of God – a “will” that had already been determined.
- Jesus did not come into the world because men requested Him to do so. He came to “do the will of God.” In so doing, He would take away “the first” (covenant), and “establish the second” (covenant).
- It is that “will,” or second covenant, that would be the means of sanctifying men.
- The sanctification itself would be accomplished “through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.”

Men Will Be Held Responsible

Thus God is set forth as the One who delivered Jesus into the hands of the people. This was done in order that His counsels, not man’s need, might be fulfilled. Even so, men will be held responsible for what they did to Jesus.

For some, “this is a hard saying.” Why would God deliver Jesus into the hands of men, then hold them responsible for what they do? There is no need of stumbling at this. God has revealed that this is His manner.

- He raised up Pharaoh to make a name for Himself, hardened his heart, and then punished him for that hardness (Ex 9:16-17; Psa 136:15).
- God raised up Nebuchadnezzar to chasten His people for not honoring the land Sabbaths, then punished him for what he did to Israel (Jer 27:6; 25:11-12).
- Judas was an instrument in the hands of the Lord, raised up to fulfill the word of the Lord. Yet, he fell by transgression, which transgression was the deed appointed by God Himself (John 6:64; Acts 1:25).

Admittedly, this is a line of reasoning that flesh cannot trace. Yet, God has revealed this to be His manner, and especially when it comes to matters directly related with salvation. Further, this is the precise application that Peter will make to his audience.

PRELIMINARY SUMMATION

Peter has drawn the attention of His hearers to the activity of God Himself. Jesus had not simply fallen into their hands. They had not outsmarted Jesus, or taken Him unawares. If God had not delivered Him into their hands, they would never have been able to put their hands upon Him. Furthermore, God was not backed into a corner on this matter. He did not deliver Jesus into their hands because of what they desired, or because He saw what they would do. Who is the fool who would imagine that the salvation of God would rest upon such a flimsy foundation?

Now Peter will face the people with what they did to Jesus when they had the power to do so. Although God delivered Him into their hands, and did so in accordance with His own determined purpose, He did not make them do what they did. Given the opportunity to do whatever they wanted with Jesus, their wicked hearts drove them to do what they did, fulfilling the very objective of God. In Christ’s death, not only was the purpose of God made known, but the depravity of man as well.

For some, this view is very difficult to receive, and they cannot process it in their minds. They become confused when they hear of an unrestricted God carrying out His will by the hands of fickle men who are under the domination of Satan. Nor, indeed, can they imagine that a person could do such evil as is here presented, and do it because they themselves were evil, or that a holy God could even use such people to fulfill His counsels. However, those are the circumstances before us, and Peter will bring them to bear upon the people. He will do it under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

YOU HAVE TAKEN

God handed His Son over to them, and they promptly took Him into their custody to do whatever they willed. When Jesus was made accessible to Peter, Andrew, James, and John, they followed Him. When He was accessible to Matthew, he left his place of business and followed Him. But these men, when they had a chance, took Jesus.

“ 23c . . . ye have taken . . . ” Other versions read, “you,” NASB “after you had taken,” GENEVA “ye have delivered,” MRD “ You took ,” NJB and “being given out .” YLT

The emphasis here is on “YE” – in particular, the Israelites standing before Peter – the Jews, the “men of Judea,” the “devout men.” God “delivered Him,” and they took Him. God handed His Son over to them, and they promptly took Him into their custody to do whatever they willed. When Jesus was made accessible to Peter, Andrew, James, and John, they followed Him. When He was accessible to Matthew, he left his place of business and followed Him. But these men, when they had a chance, took Jesus. Of that taking it is written, “Then the band and the captain and officers of the Jews took Jesus, and bound Him , and led Him away to Annas first; for He was father in law to Caiaphas, which was the high priest that same year” (John 18:12-13). Matthew reads, “And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled” (Matt 26:57).

The word “taken” is one associated with violence. It means “to take with the hand . . . in order to use it.” THAYER Here the idea is that they took hold of Jesus to implement their own wills. Now they would be able to express what they really thought of Jesus. It appears on the surface that they did this by force – and, indeed, the deed is attributed to them just as though that was the case. However, it was the submission of Christ to the will of the Father that enabled them to “take Him.”

ISAIAH’S PROPHECY

Isaiah prophesied of this taking in his inspired treatise of the sacrificial Lamb of God. “ He was taken from prison and from judgment : and who shall declare His generation? for He was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of My people was He stricken” (Isa 53:8). Other versions read, “By oppression and judgment He was taken away,” NASB/NIV “He was arrested, taken away, and judged,” GWN “Oppressed and condemned, he was taken away,” NAB and “Forcibly, after sentence, he was taken.” NJB

Isaiah views the purpose for which Jesus was “taken away.” This was the passage the Ethiopian eunuch was reading when Philip was directed to him: “ In His humiliation his judgment was taken away : and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth” (Acts 8:33). Another version reads, “In His humiliation He was taken away by distressing and oppressive judgment and justice was denied Him [caused to cease].” AMPLIFIED This text is quoted from the Septuagint version which places the accent on the experience from Christ’s point of view : “In His humiliation His judgment was taken away.” SEPTUAGINT

The reference to Christ’s “humiliation” accents His submission, not the manner in which men humiliated Him. It is written that Jesus “ humbled Himself , and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross” (Phil 2:8). That is the only reason Jesus was able to be taken in the garden, taken from the courtrooms in which He was tried, and taken to the cross where He was crucified. Nevertheless, the responsibility for this dastardly deed will be placed squarely upon the shoulders of the Israelites.

That is why Peter accents the ones who took Jesus away, in order that they might judge Him and terminate His life cutting Him “off out of the land.” Peter charges the people themselves for the deeds appearing to be done by relatively few people.

- Judas (John 18:2).
- A band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees (John 18:3).
- The chief priests and elders of the people (Matt 26:47).
- Annas, a former high priest and father in law to Caiaphas (Luke 3:2; John 18:13,24).
- Caiaphas the high priest, together with the scribes and elders (Matt 26:57).
- The multitude of chief priests and rulers of the people who cried out “Crucify Him! Crucify Him!” (Lk 23:13,21).

During those earlier times, the leaders could not implement their will toward Jesus because the people were for Him. But when “the hour arrived” for His appointed death the climate was not the same. The Jewish leaders no longer “feared the people,” but boldly launched their initiative against the Lord Jesus, taking Him.

Jesus did the same thing when He stood over the city of Jerusalem and said weeping, “Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation ” (Luke 19:42-44).

John the apostle did the same when he wrote, “He came unto His own, and His own received Him not ” (John 1:11).

During Christ’s ministry the “scribes and chief priests . . . sought how they might destroy Him: for they feared Him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine” (Mark 11:18). Again, His enemies “sought to lay hold on Him, but feared the people ,” who, at that time, favored Christ (Mk 12:12). Luke says of that occasion, “And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people” (Luke 20:19). Again it is written, “And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people” (Luke 22:2).

During those earlier times, the leaders could not implement their will toward Jesus because the people were for Him. But when “the hour arrived” for His appointed death the climate was not the same. The Jewish leaders no longer “feared the people,” but boldly launched their initiative against the Lord Jesus, taking Him. There was a sense in which the nation was united in their rejection of Christ.

That is why Peter now speaks with such convicting candor. Being moved along by the Holy Spirit of God, and in full possession of his faculties of mind, he will now address the death of Christ from the perspective of those upon earth.

YOU USED WICKED HANDS

“ 23d . . . and by wicked hands have crucified and slain”

It is the nature of the Spirit of God to press matters of critical importance, whether in the area of comfort or conviction. When eternal issues are at stake, it is not the time to mince words and seek to appease the wills of the people. Not only had the people taken Jesus, they had done something with Him after they took Him – something that was evil, and could only have been done deliberately. Peter will now place that squarely before them, doing so with precise and weighty words.

BY WICKED HANDS

“ . . . and by wicked hands . . .” Other versions read, “by lawless hands,” NKJV “by the hands of godless men,” NASB “with the help, of wicked men ,” NIV “by the hands of those outside the law ,” NRSV “by the hands of evil men ,” BBE “you used lawless people ,” CSB “with wicked hands,” GENEVA “by using men who don’t acknowledge Moses’ teaching ,” GWN “into the hands of the wicked ,” MRD “using lawless men,” NAB “by men outside the law ,” NJB “with the help of lawless Gentiles ,” NLT “by the hands of unrighteous persons ,” PNT “by the hordes of unrighteous people,” TNT “God . . . let you use the Roman government ,” LIVING “by the hands of Gentiles ,” WEYMOUTH “by the hands of lawless and wicked men ,” AMPLIFIED and “and you used for your purpose men without the Law !” PHILLIPS

To that you could also add rejection, unbelief, ignorance, hatred, hardness of heart, wickedness and spiritual adultery, and perversity. Sin is never a simple matter. It is always accompanied by all manner of inward as well as outward corruption.

In their handling of Christ, the Jews solicited the aid of ungodly men. The record of this is provided by the Spirit. Having held a caucus in which they condemned the Lord’s Christ, “all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put Him to death: and when they had bound Him, they led Him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor ” (Matt 27:1-2). First they bound Jesus and “led Him away to Annas” (John 18:13). Then “Annas had sent Him bound unto Caiaphas the high priest” (John 18:24). Then, from Caiaphas, Jesus was bound again and delivered to Pontius Pilate (Mk 15:1).

When Pilate was confronted with Jesus, he asked them the purpose for delivering Jesus to him. The Jews answered, “If He were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered Him up unto thee” (John 18:30). A “malefactor” is an “evildoer,” NKJV or “criminal” NIV – an extremely vague generalization. Pilate replied, “Take ye Him and judge Him according to your law.” The people quickly replied, “It is not lawful for us to put any man to death” (John 18:30-31).

Of that occasion John says, “That the saying of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he spake, signifying what death he should die” (John 18:32). The “saying” of reference was, “And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me. This He said, signifying what death He should die” (John 12:32-33), referring to His crucifixion. Jesus had also said of His death, “Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver Him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify Him ” (Matt 20:19). And again Jesus said, “Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified ” (Mat 26:2).

A sophist might reason that since God’s “determinate counsel and foreknowledge” was involved, together with the words of Jesus being fulfilled, the people ought not be charged with any responsibility. After all, it was the will of the Lord that was being carried out. Such reasoning is too simplistic, and is unbecoming of anyone professing to know the Lord. The Jews did not do these things mindlessly, being moved along by some mystical source that neutralized their powers of reason. They entered into matter with great zeal, knocking down every barrier that was raised before them. It is true that the will of the Lord was being done, but it was through the instrumentality of vessels of “dishonor” who were dominated by unbelief, and filled with all manner of wickedness (2 Tim 2:20).

Here “the intents of the heart” are made known as well as the “determinate counsel” of the God of heaven. When Pilate told the people he found no fault in Jesus, “they were the more fierce, saying, He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place” (Luke 23:5). It was then that Pilate, now knowing Jesus was a Galilean, sent Him to Herod, who had jurisdiction in that area (Lk 23:7). After “Herod with his men of war set Him at nought, and mocked Him, and arrayed Him in a gorgeous robe,” he “sent Him again to Pilate” (Luke 23:11).

All of this was the playing out of our text: “ye have taken, and by wicked hands” (Acts 2:23). The Jews employed the Roman government carry out their own wicked will, and Peter boldly confronts them with that fact.

HAVE CRUCIFIED AND SLAIN

“ . . . have crucified and slain.” Other versions read, “have crucified and put to death,” NKJV “you nailed to a cross . . . and put Him to death,” NASB “put Him to death by nailing Him to the cross,” NIV “you crucified and killed,” NRSV “did crucify and slay,” ASV “you put to death on the cross,” BBE “did crucify and slay,” ERV “you crucified Jesus,” GWN “you killed,” NAB “put Him to death by nailing Him to the cross,” NIB “you took and had crucified and killed,” NJB “you nailed Him to a cross and killed Him,” NLT “having crucified – ye did slay,” YLT “ nail Him to a cross and murder Him,” LIVING “you . . . have nailed to a cross and have put to death,” WEYMOUTH “kill by nailing Him to a cross,” WILLIAMS “you crucified and put out of the way [killing Him],” AMPLIFIED and “you nailed up and murdered.” PHILLIPS

Two deeds are charged to the Jews – Israelites and men of Judea: the crucifixion and killing of “Jesus of Nazareth.” The killing was done by means of crucifixion, and the intention of the crucifixion was to impose death. Yet, there were two distinct deeds, and they were both charged to the very people now being addressed by Peter.

A transgression is a compound matter. Here the effects alone are addressed: crucifixion and killing. Peter had also associated other deeds with this transgression: “ye have taken,” and the employment of “wicked hands.” To that you could also add rejection (Mk 8:31), unbelief (Matt 13:58), ignorance (Lk 19:44), hatred (John 15:25), hardness of heart (Mk 10:5), wickedness and spiritual adultery (Matt 16:4), and perversity (Lk 9:41). Sin is never a simple matter. It is always accompanied by all manner of inward as well as outward corruption.

Keep in mind that the Man these people had crucified and slain through the hands of wicked men had been clearly and unquestionably “a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know” (Acts 2:22). Yet, with all of staggering evidence placed before them, they eagerly entered into the most dastardly deed ever committed by men – crucifying and killing the prince of life. Those who choose to stifle the impact of truth in order to walk in their own ways to not have the faintest notion of how capable of sin they become by doing so.

The words are staggering in both clarity and conviction. Peter plainly says the Jews – “men of Judaea, and all that dwell in Jerusalem” – took the life of Jesus. They put Him to death, nailed Him on the cross, killed Him, murdered Him, and put Him out of their way. They used the hands of wicked men to do it, but the responsibility for the deed belonged to them.

According to appearance, it looked like the Romans did this. However, Peter says the Jews did it. They were the ones who delivered Him to the Romans, and the ones who accused Him. They were the ones who refused to do the deed themselves, yet insisted that it be done anyway. They were the ones who charged Him with being a criminal. They were the ones who unrelentingly cried out “Crucify Him! Crucify Him!”

Did the Jews kill Jesus? Some say they did not, and vainly seek to argue their case. However, the Spirit has said too much on this matter for any doubt about it. Later, after the day of Pentecost, Peter said to the Jews, “But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:14-15). Still later, Peter will again make a point of this to the rulers and elders of the people. “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole” (Acts 4:10). Again, Peter hurled this charge at the people. “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree” (Acts 5:30).

When preaching to the Jewish council, Stephen also charged them with the murder of Jesus. “Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers” (Acts 7:52).

When Peter preached to the household of Cornelius, he made mention of the Jews responsibility for Christ’s death. “And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree” (Acts 10:39).

In Antioch of Pisidia, Paul made mention of this on the Sabbath day in a synagogue. “And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain. And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him, they took Him down from the tree, and laid Him in a sepulchre” (Acts 13:28-29).

Paul also referred to the general guilt of the Jews in the matter of Christ’s death when writing to the Thessalonians. “For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men” (1 Thess 2:15). There can be no doubt in our hearts on this matter!

GOD RAISED HIM UP

“24a Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death . . .”

There are two basic postulates behind Peter’s words – realities that undergird what He is saying. First, the things that have happened to Jesus were according to “determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God.” That is, if God had not willed that Jesus be taken, crucified, and slain, those things could not possibly have occurred. It was true of the Jews just as surely as Jesus said was the case with Pilate. “Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater sin” (John 19:11).

Second, God determined the outcome of these events as well as their actual occurrence. A Divinely intended purpose was being served which involved the destruction of the devil and the reconciliation of the world. The fulfillment of that purpose was confirmed and validated by the resurrection of Christ Jesus, which Peter will now proclaim.

WHOM GOD RAISED UP

“Whom God hath raised up . . .” Other versions read, “And God raised Him up again,” NASB “But God raised Him from the dead,” NIV “But God gave Him back to life,” BBE “Whom God has raised up,” DARBY “But God raised Him from death to life,” GWN “But God . . . raised Him back to life,” NLT “Jesus suffered the pains of death, but God set Him free,” IE and “He raised

Him to life again .” PHILLIPS

The Jews took Jesus, crucified Him, and killed Him. That was a revelation of the value they attached to Jesus. In their judgment He was not worthy to live. That is why they cried, “Away with Him, away with Him, crucify Him . . . King? The chief priests answered, We have no king but Caesar” (John 19:15).

God, however, reversed their verdict, thus nullifying it. Their judgment was completely false, as confirmed by the resurrection of Christ. He came back from the judgment they passed upon Him. They said He was not fit to live. God said He was not fit to stay dead! Christ’s death confirmed what the Jews thought. His resurrection confirmed what God purposed and knew. The purposes of the Jews were carried out in Christ’s death. However, their purposes were voided, and the determination of God confirmed by His resurrection.

Throughout the book of Acts, there are repeated pivotal references to the resurrection of Christ. Most of the time, the raising of Jesus is contrasted with the malicious deed of the Jews.

- “And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead ; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:15).
- “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead , even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole” (Acts 4:10).
- “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:30-31).
- “And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree: Him God raised up the third day , and showed him openly” (Acts 10:439-0).
- “And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him, they took Him down from the tree, and laid Him in a sepulchre. But God raised him from the dead ” (Acts 13:29-30).

Throughout the book of Acts, there are repeated pivotal references to the resurrection of Christ. Most of the time, the raising of Jesus is contrasted with the malicious deed of the Jews.

“Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead ; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ” (Acts 17:3).

- “That Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead , and should show light unto the people, and to the Gentiles” (Acts 26:23).

In addition, the fact that Christ's death fully met its Divinely intended purpose, was proved by His resurrection from the dead. Much is made of this in Scripture.

- “And declared to be the Son of God with power , according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead ” (Rom 1:4).
- “Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification ” (Rom 4:25).
- “Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again , who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:34).
- “And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power ” (1 Cor 6:14).
- “Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you ” (2 Cor 4:14).

- “That I may know him, and the power of His resurrection ” (Phil 3:10).
- “Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel” (2 Tim 2:8).
- “Now the God of peace , that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus , that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant” (Heb 13:20).
- “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead ” (1 Pet 1:3).
- “Who by him do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead , and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:21).
- “The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ ” (1 Pet 3:21).

The resurrection of Christ was therefore necessary for our justification, His intercession for us, and our own resurrection from the dead. It was essential for us to obtain Divine power, have a Good Shepherd, and be born again. It was needed for us to believe in God, and have faith and hope in God. His resurrection is even the thing that validates our baptism into Christ.

Those who crucified Christ did not have a single one of these intentions in their evil objectives . Further, if their will had prevailed, we would not receive any of them. Therefore, God reversed their verdict, raising Jesus from the dead.

HAVING LOOSED THE PAINS OF DEATH

“ . . . having loosed the pains of death . . . ” Other versions read, “ putting an end to the agony of death,” NASB “ freeing Him from the agony of death,” NIV “ having freed from death,” NRSV “having loosed the pangs of death ,” RSV “having made Him free from the pains of death,” BBE “ ending the pains of death,” CSB “having loosed the sorrows of hell ,” DOUAY “and loosed the sorrows of death ,” GENEVA “and destroyed the pains of death,” GWN “and hath loosed the cords of the grave,” MRD “ releasing Him from the throes of death,” NAB “freeing Him from the pangs of Hades ,” NJB “freeing Him from the horrors of death ,” NLT “having terminated the throes of death,” WEYMOUTH “ liberating Him from the pangs of death,” AMPLIFIED and “But God would not allow the bitter pains of death to touch him.” PHILLIPS

In this statement, Peter reaches beyond the perimeter of earthly experience. By inspiration he reaches into the domain of death and declares that a certain freedom was realized in the resurrection of Christ from the dead.

The Pains of Death

This is, indeed, an intriguing expression – particularly when we are speaking of the Lord Jesus Christ. The word “pains” is the same word translated “travail” (wvdi/naj – o-deen-as). This is the word used to describe a woman in the travail of birth. It is also the word used in reference to the Lord’s return as it relates to the wicked. “For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail (wvdi.n) upon a woman with child ; and they shall not escape” (1 Thess 5:3).

In each of these three cases (a woman giving birth, the wicked experiencing wrath, and the Lord Jesus raising from the dead), travail, or pangs, is the prelude to something else. The travail is not the point, but what comes after it. Travail, or pains, or pangs, are the mean by which the appointed outcome is realized. For the mother, the travail is the prelude to the birth of a child. For the wicked, the painful travail realized at the coming of Christ will be the prelude to damnation. For the Lord Jesus, death itself was the preface to “the power of an endless life” (Heb 7:16).

In the case of Christ, it is not possible for the mind of man to comprehend what was involved in “the Prince of life” experiencing death. There is no greater contradiction than what is found in life and death. That is the comparison from which other contradictions spring – such as light and dark, and righteousness and unrighteousness.

In the matter of the salvation of man, it was essential that, in the Person of Christ, life spring forth from death. This was necessary because salvation involves making the dead alive, both in the spirit and in the body. However, this could not happen unless a Pioneer blazed the path from death to life, triumphing over him “that had the power of death, that is, the devil” (Heb 2:14). The way back to God had to be raised up and sanctified for us coming to God.

By loosing “the pains of death,” Peter was saying death could no longer retain Jesus. His tenure in that domain was over. His Spirit was loosed from Hades, and His body was loosed from the grave.

SOMETHING THAT WAS NOT POSSIBLE

“ 24b . . . because it was not possible that He should be holden of it. ”

The word “because” precedes the explanation of Christ’s resurrection. While it was an area of great Divine power (Eph 1:20), it was also something that could not possibly fail to take place. This is a form of reasoning that is outside the circumference of human logic. For men, something cannot be possible and impossible at the same time. However, that is only because human experience, as men view it, has only one dimension. It is like a vapor that eventually dissipates (James 4:14), or breath that is confined to the narrow passages of our nostrils (Isa 2:22). However, when we consider the workings of the Lord, particularly in death, there are two dimensions: what can be seen, and what cannot be seen. Peter will now point us to something that cannot be seen with any purely human sense or ability.

IT WAS NOT POSSIBLE

“ . . . because it was not possible . . . ” Other versions read, “since it was impossible ,” NASB “ because it was impossible,” NIV “ inasmuch as it was not possible,” DARBY “because it could not be ,” MRD “for in fact it was not possible,” WEYMOUTH “ seeing that it was not possible,” AMPLIFIED and “indeed there was nothing by which .” PHILLIPS

When the Spirit says “ not possible,” or “ im possible,” He does not speak after the manner of men. When men say such words, there is still a crack in the door of hope. But with the Spirit, there is not a single ray of hope for something that is “impossible.”

There are things that are “impossible with men” (Lk 18:27). In such matters no man or amalgamation of men can make them possible. Jesus said that it is “easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.” When the disciples heard it they responded, “Who then can be saved?” The all-knowing Christ replied, “With men this is impossible ; but with God all things are possible” (Mat 19:26). It is not common for men to associate salvation with something beyond all human capability. But that is the way it is.

When the angel Gabriel appeared to Mary, announcing she was going to give birth to the Son of God, he boldly announced, “For with God nothing shall be impossible” (Luke 1:37).

In this text, Peter will affirm that there was something death could not do. It was an area where death was impotent.

THAT HE SHOULD BE HOLDEN

“ . . . that He should be holden of it. ” Other versions read, “that He should be held by it ,” NKJV “for Him to be held in its power ,” NASB “to keep its hold on Him ,” NIV “for Him to be overcome by it ,” BBE “that He should be held in the grave ,” MRD “death could not keep Him in its grip ,” NLT “to be held fast by death,” WEYMOUTH “seeing that it was not possible for Him to continue to be controlled or retained by it ,” AMPLIFIED and “and indeed there was nothing by which death could hold such a man .” PHILLIPS

After three days and nights had elapsed death could no longer retain the Lord Jesus. It would have been easier for heaven and earth to pass away than for Jesus’ body to remain in the grave, or His spirit remain in Hades, for one more day. Jesus had said, “the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again ” (Mark 8:31). It was not possible for this saying to fail!

Christ’s death and burial were intended to accomplish something. In His death, and prior to His resurrection, the following were to accomplished. This is only a sampling of the many things carried out by Christ’s death.

- He had to “put away sin,” taking it away (Heb 9:26; John 1:29).
- He had to “destroy the devil” (Heb 2:14).
- He had to blot out “the handwriting of ordinances that was against us,” taking it “out of the way” (Col 2:14).
- He had to “spoil principalities and powers” (Col 2:15).
- He had to “reconcile” those who were enemies (Rom 5:10).
- He had to “make peace” (Col 1:20).

Once these appointments had been accomplished, death had no alternative – it had to release Jesus. The “gates of Hades” had to swing open of their “own accord,” just like the prison gates opened for Peter (Acts 12:10).

The resurrection of Christ was the fact to which Jesus was alluding when He said of the foundation of His Sonship, “And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my

If the truth concerning Jesus is not declared, men will not be saved. God will not give life to men by means of a corrupt view of His Son. It is also gloriously true that He will not allow death to hold any person who embraces His Son as He is declared in the Gospel – the record God has given of His Son.

church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it ” (Matt 16:18). Death would not maintain its grip upon Jesus, nor will it maintain its grip upon those who “die in the Lord” (Rev 14:13).

In the world, death is more powerful than life. It finally conquers all life, swallowing up humanity, and refusing to let any of them return. Even when such great men as Abraham, David, John the Baptist, and Paul passed into the domain of death, it appeared as

In the world, death is more powerful than life. It finally conquers all life, swallowing up humanity, and refusing to let any of them return. Even when such great men as Abraham, David, John the Baptist, and Paul passed into the domain of death, it appeared as though their lives had been permanently terminated.

though their lives had been permanently terminated. They never again showed themselves to men in the earth. It appeared as though the hold of death was invincible.

However, when Jesus “descended into the lower parts of the earth” (Eph 4:9), death took hold of a different kind of man. This is one Man it could not retain! He is the pledge of our own resurrection, in which “all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation” (John 5:28-29). Thus it is written for our comfort, “Knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you” (2 Cor 4:14). Thus we see that the resurrection is a fact – and yet it is more than a fact. It is also a pledge that God will not leave us in the domain of the dead either! There is a time for the redemption of the body!

Those who teach and lead the people of God must keep the facts of the resurrection of Christ and our own resurrection before the people, that they “faint not.” They are absolutely critical to our survival in a world destined for destruction.

CONCLUSION

Thus, Peter has powerfully declared the death of Christ as no one standing before Him had ever heard it. They heard that this was an appointed death, designed by God to accomplish His own inscrutable will. They also were made aware of what they had really done, and that they were as guilty of Christ’s blood as Judas himself. That fallen bishop betrayed Jesus, but the people had eagerly taken the One he betrayed, then crucified and killed Him through the hands of wicked men. They let nothing stand in their way. They

There is no place in the Divine economy for human opinion, traditions, or methods. If the truth concerning Jesus is not declared, men will not be saved. God will not give life to men by means of a corrupt view of His Son. It is also gloriously true that He will not allow death to hold any person who embraces His Son as He is declared in the Gospel – the record God has given of His Son.

ignored the clear approval of God. They refused to consider Christ’s own witness. They declined to consider the testimonies of those who had been healed and delivered by “Jesus of Nazareth.” They even disregarded the challenging questions of Pilate, and turned his offer of a prisoner exchange. That is what sin does to a people. It blinds them, hardens them, and makes them utterly unreasonable and foolish.

It is imperative that God’s people see the necessity of insightful preaching, and declaring the truth about Jesus. It is to be admitted this is not fashionable to do. To those who have a “form of godliness, but deny the power thereof,” it seems totally irrelevant. Such people prefer an emphasis on the “here and now,” because that is all they can see. Their hearts have a veil over them, and they are insensitive to the issues of eternity. This is the kind of people Peter addressed on the day of Pentecost. They were blissfully unaware of the judgment that had been pronounced by Jesus upon their city. Although many of them had heard about the day of judgment, and of the appearance of Nineveh and the Queen of the South, it had made no impact upon them. They had already forgotten their cries for the crucifixion of Jesus less than two months ago, to say nothing of the triumphal entry a few days before. They were in a sad state.

As Peter addresses this crowd of people, it will become increasingly apparent that there is no place in the Divine economy for human opinion, traditions, or methods. He will not speak as the wise men of his day – or as the religious experts of our day. He will not in any way employ the wisdom of men, or seek to please men, or try and catch them with cunning words. There will be a freshness in his words, as well as penetrating power. They will be words the Holy Spirit can use.

If the truth concerning Jesus is not declared, men will not be saved. God will not give life to men by means of a corrupt view of His Son. It is also gloriously true that He will not allow death to hold any person who embraces His Son as He is declared in the Gospel – the record God has given of His Son.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #9

THE PREACHING OF JESUS: HIS RESURRECTION

“ 2:25 For David speaketh concerning Him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for He is on my right hand, that I should not be moved: 26 Therefore did My heart rejoice, and My tongue was glad; moreover also My flesh shall rest in hope: 27 Because Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption. 28 Thou hast made known to Me the ways of life; thou shalt make Me full of joy with Thy countenance. 29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day. 30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; 31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that His soul was not left in hell, neither His flesh did see corruption. 32 This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.”
(Acts 2:25-32)

INTRODUCTION

Peter continues his insightful, powerful, and inspired declaration of “Jesus of Nazareth,” a Man who was clearly and publicly approved by God in the midst of the people who had taken, crucified, and killed Him. Because their deeds were provoked by the “determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,” heaven did not interfere with what they did. Because their personal judgment was wrong, and because a living Christ was required to both author and finish salvation, God reversed their verdict, raising Jesus from the dead. Death could not hold Christ, for He who is “the Life” is superior to death. Also, death could not hold Him because death is a consequence of sin, and Jesus had “put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself.” The consequence of sin cannot maintain its power over the One who took away the sin of the world.

Peter will establish that a dead Christ is of no value. While the death of Christ is essential to our salvation, so is His resurrection. His death established the basis for the remission of sins and our reconciliation to God. In His death, God was able to fully and satisfactorily

CONTENTS

- DAVID SPEAKS CONCERNING CHRIST (2:25)
- HEART, TONGUE, AND FLESH (2:26)
- SOUL AND BODY (2:27)
- KNOWLEDGE AND JOY (2:28)
- DAVID WAS NOT SPEAKING ABOUT HIMSELF (2:29)
- THE PROPHET SPOKE ABOUT CHRIST (2:30)
- THE RESURRECTION AND ENTHRONEMENT (2:31)
- WE ALL ARE WITNESSES (2:32)
- CONCLUSION

judged sin. Sin had to be handled judiciously – judged and condemned by God. This was required because, as God Himself revealed, He cannot acquit the wicked, or clear the guilty. That is, He cannot dismiss sin with a word, or simply begin treating sinners as though they had never sinned at all.

THE DIVINE NATURE DECLARED

God revealed this aspect of Himself to Moses, when He declared His own name, showing forth His glory. “Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty . . .” Ex 34:7). Moses confessed this back to God when pleading for the people: “The LORD is longsuffering, and of great mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression, and by no means clearing the guilty . . .” (Num 14:18). Nahum was also given to see this aspect of the Divine nature. “The LORD is slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked . . .” (Nahum 1:3).

God’s nature will not allow Him to pass over sin, dismissing it from His mind because of His mercy . “Mercy and truth” must meet together, and “righteousness and peace” must kiss each other (Psa 85:10). Salvation must not require that God abandon His own nature, clearing the guilty when He says He cannot do such a thing, and acquitting the wicked when He says He will “not at all” do this. There must be a way found in which God can remit sins without violating His own nature. Praise God, a way was found, and the resurrection of Christ proves it.

Romans 3:25

The salvation of man, while being a revelation of the love of God, is actually founded upon the righteousness of God. We are not left to conjecture about this matter. In a remarkable statement of the cause behind the remission of sins the Spirit affirms, “Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God” (Rom 3:24-25). Other versions read, “to demonstrate His righteousness,” NKJV “to demonstrate His justice ,” NIV “to show His righteousness,” NRSV “to make clear His righteousness,” BBE “the manifestation of His righteousness,” MRD and “to prove His righteousness.” NAB

An unjust salvation is no salvation at all. It was not enough for God to justify fallen humanity. He had to do it in a just and righteous manner, for He “cannot deny Himself”

In this passage the Spirit reminds us of the sins that were committed in the past – by the people of God – “sins that are past.” On the surface, it appeared as though God has passed over them, clearing the guilty and acquitting the wicked. If this is the case, then God has violated His own nature, or denied Himself – and that is something He “cannot” do (2 Tim 2:13). The point is that God viewed the sins of the ancients in the prospect of His Son taking sin away. When Jesus died, the effectiveness of His death reached backward, severing sin’s association with those, who were trusting in God, upon the basis of their faith. The Spirit states it this way: “And for this cause He is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament , they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15).

The remission of sins – even the sins of believers before Christ – was a display of God’s righteousness. He was righteous in being forbearing, and not cutting the people off, and He was righteous in finally clearing their record upon the basis of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

Romans 8:3

The judgment of sin took place in the body of Jesus. The Spirit states the case this way: “For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh” (Rom 8:3). That is, God condemned sin in the flesh of His Son Jesus. The New International Version thoroughly misrepresents the case here reading, “condemned sin in sinful man.” Another version also corrupts the text: “That way God condemned sin in our corrupt nature.” GWN The thought declared by the Spirit is that God condemned, or judged, sin in Christ’s body , for it was “in His body on the tree” that Jesus bore our sins (1 Pet 2:24). The sin that was found in men was condemned in a Man – “THE MAN Christ Jesus.”

Jesus was “made sin for us,” and was also “made a curse for us” (2 Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13). Thus God dealt with sin justly, which allowed Him to be “the just and the Justifier of him that believeth in Jesus” (Rom 3:26). An unjust salvation is no salvation at all. It was not enough for God to justify fallen humanity. He had to do it in a just and righteous manner, for He “cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13). Following Jesus’ death, no one must be able to condemn or lay anything to the charge of God’s elect (Rom 8:33-34). If there is anything unjust about salvation, it will not be able to stand. If there is some characteristic of God that is blurred or violated by the death of Christ, then it will not be effective.

This is why the resurrection of Christ is integral to the FOUNDATION of our salvation. In His resurrection the death of Christ is validated, and His Sonship is confirmed. In it the deeds of the men who crucified and killed Jesus are shown to be unrighteous, their hearts impure and hard, the their eyes blinded. Also, the NEED for salvation is substantiated by the resurrection of the Lord Jesus from the dead. And over and above all of this, God was shown to be impeccably and uncompromisingly righteous in His “great salvation.” It is no wonder that those who neglect this salvation are offered no way of escape from the judgment of the Almighty (Heb 2:3). A salvation of this magnitude and effectiveness cannot be treated casually. A God that has gone to this extent to “save His people from their sins” cannot be afforded a secondary, or even lesser, place in the lives of men. Those who allow “other things” (Mk 4:19) to upstage their commitment to the Lord do so at the expense of their own salvation. They are exchanging their souls for something that is worthless (Matt 16:26).

In Christ’s death, the Son of God dealt effectively with sin. He removed it in its totality, taking it away from the face of God. This opened the way for the remission of sins and the cleansing of the conscience. It also cleared the path for justification, in which a person is “made righteous” through the judicious and holy act of Divine imputation (Rom 5:19; 4:22-25). In His death Jesus also destroyed the devil, thereby removing the power of sin. Now, men could be freed from enslavement to sin (Rom 6:17,18).

In Christ’s burial, it was confirmed that Jesus really did die. He “made His grave with the wicked, and with the rich in His death” (Isa 53:9), there He was thoroughly identified with fallen humanity. The curse of God had been effectively administered (Gal 3:13), and the soul of Jesus was separated from His body. Preceding His burial, the spirit of Jesus separated from His body, leaving it lifeless, “for the body without the spirit is dead” (James 2:26). This too was an voluntary act of Jesus, as on the cross He committed His spirit to the Father (Lk 23:46). In His burial the fact that He was not destroyed was confirmed in the unseen world where He “preached the Gospel also to them that are dead” (1 Pet 3:18; 4:6).

CHRIST’S RESURRECTION

The resurrection of Jesus confirmed that God was satisfied with His death, and would require no more “sacrifice for sins” (Isa 53:11). It also declared that Jesus was not only the Son of God, but that He was “the Son of God with power” (Rom 1:4). For this, and other reasons Peter will elaborate on Jesus being raised from the dead. He will proclaim that the people before him have to do with a living Jesus – one who has been exalted to the right hand of God.

The people standing before Peter considered Jesus to be dead – even as His disciples once thought, prior to His appearances to them. Very early on the first day of the week, women came to the tomb to anoint the body of Jesus thinking He was dead (Mk 16:2). Mary Magdalene came early to the tomb, and she thought Jesus was dead. When she saw that His body was no longer there, she thought someone had taken it away (John 20:15). Cleopas and his companion pondered the happenings related to Christ’s death, and concluded that He was still dead, and all of their hopes had been dashed to the ground (Lk 24:19-21). Even “the eleven” apostles thought Jesus was dead, and did not believe the testimony of the women who said He was alive (Mk 16:14; Lk 13:9-11). You might say they believed in a “historical Jesus.”

THE HISTORICAL JESUS

It is true that some make much of “the historical Jesus.” By this they mean that He was a real person in real time, and that what He did upon the earth was real, not metaphorical. Although “Jesus of Nazareth” was, from this point of view, a historical person, we are not saved by such a Christ. It is wrong to present Jesus as though He was not presently active. The Lord Himself revealed, “I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death” (Rev 1:18).

It is a living Christ that is presently seated at the right hand of God (Mk 16:19). He who lives is mediating the New Covenant (Heb 8:6; 9:15; 12:24). We are not being shepherded by a record of Jesus, but by the “Good Shepherd” Himself (John 10:11,14). One who is alive intercedes for us (Heb 7:25). A living Savior sends us grace and peace (Rom 1:7; 1 Tim 1:2). The One who is teaching us is alive (Eph 4:20-21; 1 John 5:20).

The resurrection of Christ is the link between His effective death and the administration of the New Covenant. There could be no “day of salvation” or “accepted time” without a risen Savior. The One who laid down His life had to take it up again, else His death was in vain, as well as all of His earthly ministry, gracious words, and marvelous works.

Although I desire to be gracious on this matter, the nature and direction of modern preaching does not confirm the necessity of a risen Savior. It does not appear that this has been burned into the conscience of men. There is far too much talk about men, and too little about Jesus. When the love of God is mentioned, it is often wholly unrelated to the righteousness of God and the confirming resurrection of Christ. But I will not linger on this morose thought. Instead, let us consider how the Holy Spirit moved a holy man to speak about Christ’s resurrection. He will anchor his words in the firm ground of Scripture, and will show us unseen things about Jesus being raised from the dead. Prior to this Peter had affirmed of Jesus, “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it” (Acts 2:24). Now Peter will expound that glorious reality. As we should expect, his exposition will be with great power and effectiveness.

DAVID SPEAKS CONCERNING CHRIST

“ 2:25 For David speaketh concerning Him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for He is on my right hand, that I should not be moved.”

Prior to this day, Peter had associated the events related to Christ’s death with Scripture. At that time he had referred to statements made by David, nearly eight hundred years before Jesus (Acts 1:16 [PROPHECIES Psa 41:9; 55:12-15]; Acts 1:18 [PROPHECIES Matt 27:9-10; Zech 11:12-13]; Acts 1:20 [PROPHECIES Psa 69:25; 109:8-15]).

There is not a valid word pertaining to the salvation of God that is not stated in Scripture, or “contained in the Scripture” (1 Pet 2:6). While this may seem to be very obvious, it is staggering to consider how many statements are made by men concerning some aspect of redemption that are not affirmed in Scripture.

Now Peter again turns to the Scriptures to support what he is saying. There is not a valid word pertaining to the salvation of God that is not stated in Scripture , or “contained in the Scripture” (1 Pet 2:6). While this may seem to be very obvious, it is staggering to consider how many statements are made by men concerning some aspect of redemption that are not affirmed in Scripture. A brief rehearsal of a few of them will serve to substantiate this point.

- “God loves everyone the same.”
- “God’s love is unconditional.”
- “Nothing you do can affect what God thinks of you.”
- “Born again Christian.”
- “Carnal Christian.”
- “New Testament Church.”
- “New Testament Christian.”
- “Eternal security.”
- “Seven year tribulation.”
- “Pre-tribulation”
- “Post-tribulation”
- “Mid-tribulation”

- “The baptism of the Holy Ghost.”
- “Full gospel.”
- “Healing is in the atonement.”
- “God wants to bless everyone.”
- “Praise and worship.”
- “Soul sleeping.”
- “Jesus will come again to reign.”
- “The thousand year reign of Christ.”
- “Christ will reign a thousand years in Jerusalem.”
- “Once saved, always saved.”
- “The plan of salvation.”
- “Believer’s baptism.”
- “Water baptism.”
- “The free will of man.”
- “The sinner’s prayer.”
- “The Lordship of Christ.”
- “Make Jesus the Lord of your life.”

These are only representative of a host of expressions that are nearly beyond number. They all represent vast bodies of theological thought – thought that is related to the salvation of God and its appropriation. Some may affirm that there are aspects of truth in some of these sayings, and that it is good to use them as long we tell the people what we mean. Is this really true? Does it represent a pattern of thought that has been revealed by the Spirit of God? I would rather say that they are all nothing more than theological bags “with holes” (Hag 1:6). They are like “broken cisterns that can hold no water” (Jer 2:13). The truth of God is too large to fit into them. If someone imagines that they have, after all, stuffed the truth of God into such sayings, they will find it is like “new wine” that will cause these frail theological “bottles” to break (Lk 5:37).

Who is the person willing to affirm that God has left it up to men to formulate statements that depict His Christ and His salvation? Is it possible that the truth of God is in any sense nothing more than a conclusion of men – for that is precisely the nature of all of the statements I have placed before you.

I will proceed no further in this matter, for we have an actual example of the nature of “acceptable words” in the text before us. Peter will resort to the Scriptures in his exposition of resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ.

DAVID SPOKE CONCERNING CHRIST

“For David speaketh concerning Him . . .” Other versions read, “For David says of Him,” NASB “This is what David meant when he said about Jesus,” GWN “For David says about Him,” NET “King David said this about Him,” NLT “For David saith in regard to Him,” YLT “King David quoted Jesus as saying,” LIVING “This is what David said about Jesus,” IE “For David says in reference to Him,” WEYMOUTH and , “When David speaks about Him he says.” PHILLIPS

Here is an excellent example of “the testimony of Jesus” being “the spirit of prophecy” (Rev 19:10). It clarifies the saying of Jesus Himself, “Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of Me” (John 5:39). Peter also referred to the encapsulation of Scripture when he wrote, “Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow ” (1 Pet 1:10-11). Christ Jesus Himself is the Sum and Substance of Scripture. He is the Theme of Scripture, and the Life-line that holds it all together. The day Jesus Christ is seen in Scripture is the day it comes alive to its reader.

The idea here is that David prophesied what Jesus would say. He is, from one point of view, quoting Jesus eight hundred years before He came unto the world. He is expressing “the mind of Christ” – how Jesus thought.

Peter attributes the 16 th Psalm to David. Paul does the same (Acts 13:35-36). The idea here is that David prophesied what Jesus would say. He is, from one point of view, quoting Jesus eight hundred years before He came unto the world. He is expressing “the mind of Christ” – how Jesus thought. The words of this section of the Psalm are declared by Peter to have been said by Jesus Himself. Whether they were audibly said, or were expressed in the heart and mind alone is not the point.

The Holy Spirit had revealed this to David because David was “a man after His own heart” (1 Sam 13:14). The Lord could entrust gems of redemptive truth to David, knowing he would declare them for succeeding generations. In this regard David was much like Abraham, the father of all who believe (Rom 4:11). God said of father Abraham, “For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him , and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him” (Gen 18:19).

The text of reference is Psalm 16:8-11. It may appear on the surface as though David is speaking only of himself. However, Peter, being moved by the Holy Spirit, says he was really speaking about Jesus. That is, these are words attributed to Jesus. The words “David speaketh concerning Him,” do not mean that David was talking ABOUT Jesus like a sort of commentator, but that the Spirit, speaking through David, was divulging what the Lord Jesus would say. While David may have experienced some measure of the fulfillment of these words, it was very small. Strictly speaking, the Psalm was not intended to be a testimony of David (although some of the things were no doubt experienced by him), but a prophecy of Christ. This prophecy refers to the resurrection of Christ, as Peter will strongly affirm.

I FORESAW THE LORD ALWAYS

“ . . . I foresaw the Lord always before my face . . . ” Other versions read, “I was always beholding the Lord in my presence,” NASB “ I saw the Lord always before me,” NIV “ I beheld the Lord always before my face,” ASV “I saw the Lord before my face at all times,” BBE “I foresaw the Lord continually before me,” DARBY “I always see the Lord in front of me,” GWN “I was always beholding the Lord in my presence ,” NAS “ I kept the Lord before my sight always,” NJB “I see the Lord is always with me ,” NLT “I know the Lord is always with me,” LIVING “I constantly fixed my eyes upon the Lord,” WEYMOUTH and “I always kept my eyes upon the Lord.” WILLIAMS

The word “foresaw” does not mean “saw ahead of time.” Here the idea is to keep in one’s own constant view – as in “ fore most.” That is, Christ’s view of God was His primary, foremost, and preeminent view. Even while upon the earth, He walked within a constant awareness of God.

To what period of time does this Psalm refer? There is doubtless a sense in which it referred to the life and ministry of Jesus who said, “And He that sent Me is with Me : the Father hath not left Me alone; for I do always those things that please Him” (John 8:29). However, is that the experience of which this Psalm speaks?

HE IS ON MY RIGHT HAND

“ . . . for He is on My right hand, that I should not be moved.” Other versions read, “for he is at My right hand , that I should not be shaken ,” NASB “I cannot be moved because He is by My side,” GWN “with Him at My right hand I shall not be disturbed ,” NAB “God’s mighty power supports Me ,” LIVING “because He is at My right hand to keep Me secure ,” IE and “for He is at My right hand that I may not be shaken or overthrown or cast down [from My secure and happy state].” AMPLIFIED

The idea here is that of Divine fellowship. The Son is speaking of the closeness of the Father to Him, and of the sustaining power of that Presence. This phraseology is used elsewhere in the Psalms to denote the keen awareness of the Lord’s presence. “Nevertheless I am continually with Thee : thou hast holden me by my right hand” (Psa 73:23). “My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever ” (Psa 73:26). “The LORD is thy keeper: the LORD is thy shade upon thy right hand ” (Psa 121:5).

Jesus is not here speaking of His time with the Father “ before the world was” (John 17:5), for there was no need for the Lord to be sustained at that time, nor was He in any danger of being moved or shaken. Nor does this refer to Christ’s earthly ministry when God was, indeed, with Him. As He acknowledged on the eve of His betrayal, “the Father is with Me” (John 16:32).

I am going to affirm, and establish, that this is referring to the experience of Jesus after He died and before He rose from the dead.

This text establishes the absurdity of the soul-sleeping doctrine, and confirms Christ’s anticipation of His resurrection after He died, awaiting “the third day.” It is one of those rare glimpses into the netherworld, and solicits our attention.

HEART, TONGUE, AND FLESH

“ 26 Therefore did My heart rejoice, and My tongue was glad; moreover also My flesh shall rest in hope.”

This is the language of consciousness after death, and it is very detailed. It speaks of awareness, rejoicing, gladness, and anticipation. Peter affirms that all of this has to do with the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. As we should expect, this will be a sort of optimum view, for it is speaking of the experience of the Lord of glory.

THEREFORE DID MY HEART REJOICE

Here is a view of death that was not enjoyed by the ancients. Prior to Christ, death was largely associated with inactivity and hopelessness.

“Therefore did My heart rejoice . . . ” Other versions read, “Therefore My heart rejoiced ,” NKJV “Therefore My heart was glad ,” NASB “Therefore My heart doth rejoice ,” MRD “Therefore My heart has been glad,” NAB “ No wonder My heart is glad,” NLT “because of this My heart cheered ,” YLT “No wonder My heart is filled with joy ,” LIVING “ For this reason My heart is glad,” WEYMOUTH “ That is why my heart is glad,” ISV and “ So my heart is glad.” WILLIAMS

This is the result of the Lord Jesus keeping God always before His face. As He considered the Father, His heart began to rejoice, because, as it is also written 16 th Psalm, “Thou wilt show Me the path of life: in Thy presence is fulness of joy ; at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore ” (Psa 16:11).

Here is a view of death that was not enjoyed by the ancients. Prior to Christ, death was largely associated with inactivity and hopelessness. This we read, “For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?” (Psa 6:5). And again, “Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest” (Eccl 9:10). And yet again, “Wilt thou show wonders to the dead? shall the dead arise and praise thee? Selah. Shall thy lovingkindness be declared in the grave? or thy faithfulness in destruction? Shall thy wonders be known in the dark? and thy righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?” (Psa 88:10-12). Isaiah wrote, “For the grave cannot praise thee, death can not celebrate Thee: they that go down into the pit cannot hope for Thy truth. The living, the living, he shall praise Thee, as I do this day: the father to the children shall make known Thy truth” (Isa 38:18-19).

However, these expressions are not the ultimate view of death. They are the apparent view, and teach us that if we are to live for the Lord, we must do so now . However, they are not the ultimate view, for Christ has “hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel” (2 Tim 1:10). Now, more is known about human experience after death, even though some mystery remains concerning it.

What does it mean for one’s heart to rejoice? This is rejoicing in its most precise expression. It is a rejoicing that proceeds from perception and understanding. It is connected with the knowledge of what the Lord will do.

MY TONGUE WAS GLAD

“ . . . and My tongue was glad . . . ” Other versions read, “my tongue exulted,” NASB “my tongue rejoices ,” NIV “my tongue rejoiced,” NRSV my tongue full of joy,” BBE “and my glory exult ,” MRD “my tongue delighted ,” NJB “my tongue shouts His praises ,” LIVING “my mouth spoke with joy ,” IE and “my tongue exulted exceedingly .” AMPLIFIED

Here is the expression of a spirit that has been separated from the body. That spirit is not content to remain without a body. Paul expressed this frame of mind, ascribing it to all of the elect, who prefer being “absent from the and present with the Lord.” Speaking of that period after death and prior to resurrection he writes, “For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life ” (2 Cor 5:4). Prior to the resurrection, death had not yet been “swallowed up in victory” (1 Cor 15:54). However, while the body of Jesus was buried, His tongue was “glad,” rejoicing in the prospect of being raised from the dead. His spirit would not remain in Hades, and His body would not remain in the grave. The thought of this set the Lord’s Christ to rejoicing!

By saying “My tongue,” the text does not suggest that Jesus, while His body remained in the tomb, was occupying a body as He did upon the earth. This is language that accommodates itself to the frailty of human understanding. The idea is that Jesus’ joy was expressed – put into words and addressed to God Himself.

Whatever Jesus employed to preach “unto the spirits in prison” (1 Pet 3:19) – “them that are dead” (1 Pet 4:6) – was also employed in this expression of gladness.

MY FLESH SHALL REST IN HOPE

However, in our text, Jesus is not anticipating the general resurrection of the dead. He is looking forward to His own resurrection, which was a pledge of the general resurrection that would take place when He comes “the second time,” at “the last trump”

“ . . . moreover also My flesh shall rest in hope.” Other versions read, “moreover My flesh also will abide in hope,” NASB “My body also will live in hope,” NIV “moreover My flesh will live in hope,” NRSV “moreover My flesh will dwell in hope,” RSV ‘My body also rests securely,’ GWN “I know all will be well with Me in death,” LIVING “Yes even My body will live in hope,” IE “even My body still rests secure in hope,” ISV “My very body also shall pitch its tent in hope,” MONTGOMERY and “My flesh also will dwell in hope [will encamp, pitch its tent, and dwell in hope in anticipation of the resurrection].” AMPLIFIED

Here Jesus is depicted as contemplating the resurrection of His body from the grave. Remember, Peter is associating this passage with Christ’s resurrection , not with His thoughts while He remained in the body on the earth.

Prior to Christ, some sensitive souls were made aware of the coming resurrection.

The Reasoning of Job

Although there was no Scripture at the time of Job, he thought upon a tree that had been cut down, yet sprouted again “at the scent of water.” In a marvelous display of holy reasoning he said, “For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the ground; Yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth boughs like a plant” (Job 14:7-9). Later he reasoned further on the matter. “And though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God : Whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold , and not another; though my reins be consumed within me” (Job 19:26-27).

From the standpoint of God’s people, our flesh resting in hope is another way of saying, “the hope and resurrection of the dead” (Acts 23:6). Again it is written, “And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead , both of the just and unjust” (Acts 24:15). Seeing this matter very faintly, Solomon was still able to make out the rough outline of the resurrection: “The wicked is driven away in his wickedness: but the righteous hath hope in his death ” (Prov 14:32). With the eagle eye of faith, Isaiah foresaw the resurrection of the dead. “ Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise . Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead ” (Isa 26:19).

However, in our text, Jesus is not anticipating the general resurrection of the dead. He is looking forward to His own resurrection, which was a pledge of the general resurrection that would take place when He comes “the second time,” at “the last trump” (1 Cor 15:52). In His resurrection, Jesus was the “firstfruits of them that slept” (1 Cor 15:20). Christ was raised first, and “afterward they that are Christ's at His coming” (1 Cor 15:23).

Thus Jesus is portrayed as saying His flesh would “rest in hope,” knowing that He would be raised from the dead, because it was not possible that He should be held within the grasp of death (Acts 2:24).

Glimpses of Life After Death

Scripture provides us several examples of personalities of personalities after they left this world.

Thus David spoke of Jesus’ experience after He died and before He rose again from the dead. During that three-day interim the following took place.

- Abraham: (1) Knew of the status of some men living long after he had died. (2) Was aware of circumstances attending life out of the body. (3) Knew of Moses and the Prophets, who lives more than five centuries after he died. (4) Had understanding about what was required to convince men of the necessity of repentance (Luke 16:24-31).

- Samuel: (1) Knew the Lord had departed from Saul. (2) Knew the kingdom of Israel had been given to David. (3) Knew why the Lord had taken the kingdom from Saul. (4) Knew the Lord would deliver Saul into the hand of the Philistines. (5) Knew the Lord would deliver the Israelites into the hands of the Philistines (1 Sam 28:11-19).

- Lazarus: (1) Was in the bosom of Abraham. (2) Was seen by someone in the fires of torment. (3) Was being comforted (Lk 16:23-25).

- A certain rich man: (1) Lifted up his eyes in Hades, being in torment. (2) Saw Abraham, and Lazarus in his bosom. (3) Asked for some relief from his suffering. (4) Was aware of those remaining alive in the earth. (5) Petitioned Abraham to send a messenger to his five brothers, lest they also come to the place of torment (Lk 16:23-28).

- Moses: (1) Appeared in glory with Jesus on the mount of transfiguration. (2) Talked with Jesus about the death He would accomplish in Jerusalem (Lk 9:30-31).

- Elijah: (1) Appeared in glory with Jesus on the mount of transfiguration. (2) Talked with Jesus about the death He would accomplish in Jerusalem (Lk 9:30-31).

- Paul: He did not know whether he was dead or alive when these things took place. That confirms consciousness and alertness exist after death, else he could not have spoken in this manner. (1) Was caught up into paradise. (2) Heard unspeakable words that are not lawful for a man to utter. (3) Recalled the experience when God raised him up (1 Cor 12:3-4).

- Departed Spirits from Noah's day: (1) Had the capacity to hear words from Jesus, who preached to them (1 Pet 3:19-20; 4:6).

- Martyrs: (1) Were seen under the heavenly altar. (2) They had some sense of things happening on the earth. (3) Asked how long it would be until their blood was avenged on them dwelling on the earth. (4) White robes were given to them. (5) They were told to rest for a while.

CONCLUSION

Thus David spoke of Jesus' experience after He died and before He rose again from the dead. During that three-day interim the following took place.

- He saw the Lord before His face at all times.
- He was aware that He would not be moved.
- His heart rejoiced.
- His tongue was glad.
- His flesh rested in hope.

Peter will now explain WHY these conditions existed, confirming that we are speaking about things related to His death – not His life .

SOUL AND BODY

“ 27 Because Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell, neither wilt thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption.”

With the care that comes from being led by the Holy Spirit, Peter opens up why Jesus spoke as He did – rejoicing in his heart and articulating it with His tongue, or in words.

THOU WILT NOT LEAVE MY SOUL IN HELL

“ Because Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell . . . ” Other versions read, “ For you will not leave my soul in Hades,” NKJV Because Thou wilt not abandon My soul to Hades,” NASB “because you will not abandon me to the grave.” NIV “Because Thou wilt not leave my soul unto Hades ,” ASV “For you will not let my soul be in hell ,” BBE “because you will not abandon my soul to the netherworld ,” NAB “For you will not leave my soul among the dead ,” NLT “because You won’t abandon my soul in death ,” IE “Thou wilt not leave me un the Unseen World forsaken ,” WEYMOUTH and “For You will not abandon my soul, leaving it helpless in Hades (the state of departed spirits).” AMPLIFIED

We are now entering a subject concerning which we have only limited information. However, enough has been revealed for us to have an intelligent grasp of the general facts in the case.

Did Jesus Go to the Lake of Fire

Our first task is to define what is meant by “hell” – “Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell.” There are some who affirm that Jesus went to the “hell” into which the devil and his angels have been cast. It is averred that Jesus went there to get the keys of death and hell from the devil. However, there is nothing in Scripture that even suggests such a thing. The doctrine of men that brings this teaching to us states that “the keys” originally belonged to Adam – although nothing in Scripture associates Adam with these “keys.” When he sinned, they say, Adam gave the keys to Satan, who retained them in his grasp until Jesus came. It is affirmed that this is what is meant by the words stating that Satan “had the power of death” (Heb 2:14). Although “keys” are not mentioned here, this man-made doctrine says that Jesus wrested them from the hand of the devil, keeping them for Himself. These are the “keys,” they say, to which the glorified Christ referred when He said, “I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death” (Rev 1:18).

The flaw in the reasoning is found in the fact that Jesus not only raised the dead during His earthly ministry (Matt 11:5; Mk 5:41; Lk 7:13-15; John 11:43-44), He also gave power to His disciples to raise the dead (Matt 10:8). This all took place before He died, and suggests that He already had the keys, being able to loose death from whomsoever He willed. There was no need for Jesus to “go to hell” to obtain these keys.

Secondly, Jesus is not said to have tasted hell for every man. It is rather pointedly stated, “But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honor; that He by the grace of God should taste death for every man ” (Heb 2:9). Here death refers to being separated from God – cut off from Him. This took place when He was forsaken by God upon the cross , and constituted the bitterness of the cup that He was given to drink (Matt 27:46). This is when Jesus was “cursed” (Gal 3:13), “smitten of God,” “wounded,” “bruised,” and chastised for the sins of the world (Isa 53:4-5). That was His ultimate suffering. It did, indeed, foreshadow the agonies of hell, but was not the domain for which Satan is known.

Christ’s meaning is not that the gates of hell, or hades, will not prevail against the church – although they will not – but that they will not prevail against the Foundation. That is, He would rise from the dead, for “the gates of hell,” or “hades,” refer to the ability of death to keep its victims within its grasp.

The absurdity of the doctrine is also highlighted by the fact that Jesus said where He was going when He died – and it was not hell. He said to the penitent thief, “Verily, I say unto thee, To day shalt thou be with Me in paradise ” (Lk 23:43). If Jesus went to the lake-of-fire “hell,” He would have to pass the uncrossable gulf between the place of comfort and the place of suffering. He would either have had to do this en route to “paradise,” taking the thief with Him, or leave the thief in “paradise,” and then cross over into “hell” to get the keys. Such thinking requires an extraordinary amount of imagination – the kind that needs to be cast down (2 Cor 10:4-5).

Those who embrace the soul-sleeping nonsense argue that the punctuation in this verse is wrong. They say Jesus had a mind to the distant future, and did not mean the day He died. Thus they read, “I say to thee today, Thou shalt be with Me in paradise” – that is, will eventually be with Jesus in paradise. In the day Jesus spoke, therefore, they say that both Jesus and the thief fell asleep, entering an unconscious and idle state. Jesus was raised three days later, and the thief is still asleep, his spirit remaining in his lifeless body until the day of the resurrection. Perhaps there is some remote chance that Jesus also raised the thief at that time, although that would mean that He alone was not the “firstfruits of them that slept” (1 Cor 15:20). The penitent thief would also have been raised at that time. Indeed, false doctrines do tie all kinds of knots that ravel rather than unravel the truth.

Soul In Hell

The Authorized Version often uses the word “hell” as a synonym for “hades,” or the abode of the dead. In Moses and the Prophets, “hell” is often translated from the word “Sheol” – “hades or the world of the dead” (2 Sam 22:6; Psa 18:5; 116:3).

Referring to the abode of the dead, Jesus said the “gates of hell” would not prevail against the fact and foundation of His Sonship (Matt 16:18). It would not keep Jesus within the confines of its “gates.” Other versions properly render the word “hell” as “hades.” This does not refer to the lake of fire, or the present base of operation for the devil. It is the same use of the word employed by David: “For Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell” (Psa 16:10). This refers to the resurrection from the abode of the dead, as confirmed by Peter’s exposition of this verse (Acts 2:27-32).

Christ’s meaning is not that the gates of hell, or hades, will not prevail against the church – although they will not – but that they will not prevail against the Foundation. That is, He would rise from the dead, for “the gates of hell,” or “hades,” refer to the ability of death to keep its victims within its grasp. Death, however, could not keep its hold on Christ Jesus – the Jesus Peter had just confessed (Acts 2:24). Christ is affirming He will rise from the dead to build His church. In a secondary sense, this also applies to the church, which will also be raised from the dead to assume the stewardship of “the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven” (Dan 7:27).

THE PROCESS OF DYING

1. Shadow of “death” (Matt 4:16).
2. Deliver to “death” (Matt 10:21).
3. The “death” of Christ (Rom 5:10).
4. “Death” entered the world” (Rom 5:12).
5. The second “death” (Rev 21:8).

ABODE FOR RIGHTEOUS SPIRITS

1. Abraham’s bosom (Lk 16:22)
2. Paradise (Lk 23:43; 2 Cor 12:4)
3. Under the altar (Rev 6:9)
4. Present with the Lord (2 Cor 5:8)

ABODE FOR UNRIGHTEOUS SPIRITS

1. Hell KJV (Lk 16:23; 2 Pet 2:4)
2. Hades NKJV (Lk 16:23)
3. Tartarus GREEK (2 Pet 2:4)

In this sense, Revelation also associates “hell” with death, not punishment. “And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death , and Hell (Hades) followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death , and with the beasts of the earth” (Rev 6:8).

Because man is a complex being, death is a complex experience. Man is a tripartite being, having three parts: spirit, soul, and body (1 Thess 5:23). The spirit and the soul are the unseen part of man, and are most difficult to distinguish from one another. However, the Word of God is able to probe the inward parts of man, “even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit” (Heb 4:12).

The process, or experience, of dying is often referred to as “death.” It is even personified in Revelation 6:8: “And I looked, and behold a pale horse: and his name that sat on him was Death , and Hell followed with him. And power was given unto them over the fourth part of the earth, to kill with sword, and with hunger, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.” Notice that “Hell” followed “Death.” The word used here is “Hades,” and is so translated in other versions. In the experience of death, there is a separation of the seen and unseen parts of man. The unseen part is sometimes referred to as the “spirit” (Lk 23:46; Lk 8:55), and sometimes as the “soul” (Gen 35:18; 1 Kgs 17:22). At “death,” this unseen part leaves the body, or is separated from it. The grave is the residence for the body, and “hades,” or the “hell” of our text, is the abode for the unseen part of man.

Because there are no exact English words for these domains, it is difficult to translate them. “Hades,” for example, is a transliteration of the Greek word a[ldhj (Ha-des). It is not a translation, for there is no precise English word that parallels this Greek word.

Hades is a domain in which both righteous and wicked spirits remain until the resurrection of the dead. At that time, both the graves and Hades will yield up their dead. This is the meaning of the phrase, “And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them : and they were judged every man according to their works” (Rev 20:13). It is at this point that there will be a uniting of the body and spirit at the resurrection.

Jesus provided us with a picture of Hades, the abode of the departed spirits, in his account of the death of the rich man and Lazarus. It was in “Hades” that the rich man lifted up his eyes and saw Abraham “afar off.” Abraham was also in “Hades,” but was not suffering. He was on the other side of a vast and uncrossable gulf (Lk 16:26).

There is one other word translated “hell,” and it refers to the place where the fallen angels are presently reserved. The text referring to this reads, “For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell , and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment” (2 Pet 2:4). Here, the word “Hell” is not taken from “Hades,” nor is it taken from the word “Gehenna,” which is the lake of fire. The Greek word used here is quite different; it is tartarw,saj (tar-tar-oos-as). Some versions read, “threw them down into Tartarus ,” CSB “the infernal regions ,” MRD “the chains of Tartarus,” NAB “the underworld ,” NJB “having cast them down into Tartarus ,” YLT “hurling them down into Tartarus ,” WEYMOUTH/WILLIAMS and “cast them down to Tartarus .” MONTGOMERY regarded by the ancient Greeks as the abode of the wicked dead,” THAYER “regarded by the Greeks as a place of torment and punishment below Hades,” FRIBERG and “thought of as a place of divine punishment lower than Hades.” GINGRICH Again, there is no appropriate English word into which this can be translated. The closest English word is “Hell.”

Lexically, the word “Tartarus” means, “the name of a subterranean region, doleful and dark,

The point here is that these unseen abodes are all characterized by consciousness. They are not a place of calm repose. In the case of wicked angels, they have no bodies as men do, but are spirits.

When Jesus said, “Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell,” He was saying He would not remain in the abode of the dead. This was part of the experience of Him “tasting death,” but was never intended to be an extended period (Heb 2:9). The “Prince of life” cannot remain in the abode of the dead! It is not that He was suffering or in pain at that time. That is not the portion of His “cup” that He dreaded (Matt 26:39; John 18:11). His sufferings occurred while He was dying, not after He was dead!

This is a technical point with God, but it is necessary for us to see it. There are some aspects of death that Jesus did not “taste.” They were not necessary to the accomplishment of our reconciliation to God and deliverance from sin.

Just as the Throne room of God (Rev 4:2-9) is superior to the abode of the dead, so Jesus anticipated being delivered from the lower realms and elevated to the high ones. It was not the contemplation of His return to His disciples that brought Him joy, but the prospect of ascending “up where He was before” (John 6:62), and enjoying “the glory” He had with the Father “before the world was” (John 17:5).

The “gates of hell,” or “the gates of hades,” would swing open for the Lord Jesus, and He Himself would rise from the dead. David told of the Savior’s joyful anticipation of that event.

THOU WILT NOT SUFFER THINE HOLY ONE TO SEE CORRUPTION

“ . . . neither wilt thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption.” Other versions read, “nor allow Thy Holy One to undergo decay,” NASB “nor will You let Your Holy One see decay,” NIV “or let Your Holy One experience corruption,” NRSV “Neither wilt thou give Thy Holy One to see corruption,” ASV “and you will not give up Your Holy One to destruction,” BBE “nor wilt thou give Thy gracious one to see corruption,” DARBY “or allow your Holy One to rot in the grave,” NLT “or let the body of Your Holy Son to decay,” LIVING “You will not allow the body of Your Holy One to decay in the grave,” WEYMOUTH and “nor let Your Holy One know decay or see destruction [of the body after death].” AMPLIFIED

This is a technical point with God, but it is necessary for us to see it. There are some aspects of death that Jesus did not “taste.” They were not necessary to the accomplishment of our reconciliation to God and deliverance from sin. The putting away of sin did not require them. Two of them are listed here. (1) He was not left in Hades until the general resurrection. (2) His body did not experience decay, or corruption. This latter point is the subject of this phrase.

When Lazarus died, his body decayed, and putrefaction set in – even though he would be raised from the dead (John 11:39). Joseph’s body rotted in the grave, leaving only his “bones” (Ex 13:19). The holy prophet Elisha died and was buried. His body also decomposed, leaving only his “bones” (2 Kgs 13:21). But no decay touched the body of Jesus. Although a consequence of sin, it was not necessary for the body of Jesus to experience decay.

There is a reason behind this. The resurrection is not a mere rejuvenation of flesh, but the putting on of incorruption (1 Cor 15:53-54). Although the new body will emerge from the graves, it will be a different kind of body, not subject to corruption (1 Cor 15:35-44). This circumstance did not require that Jesus' body pass through the stages of corruption. Redemption depended more upon what happened to His body "on the tree" than in the grave (1 Pet 2:24). The Divine cursing that Jesus experienced did not take place after He died, in the grave, or in the abode of the dead. It took place on the cross. Thus, it is written, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree" (Gal 3:13). Jesus was cursed while He was on the cross, when He was bearing our sins in His body "on the tree" (1 Pet 2:24). To say Jesus "went to Hell" would require that He be cursed after He died and after peace was made (Col 1:20). This is another reason why those who say Jesus went to the place of punishment – "Hell" – are wrong. Such a view betrays a fundamental ignorance of what was required to save man, the nature of the Divine curse, and the extent to which Jesus tasted of death. Such views ought to be zealously discarded, for they misrepresent God, Christ, and the salvation that is "with eternal glory." They are like clouds without water and trees without fruit. They obscure the truth, blind the eyes, and tend toward spiritual bondage.

KNOWLEDGE AND JOY

" 28 Thou hast made known to Me the ways of life; thou shalt make Me full of joy with Thy countenance."

Remember, this Psalm provides some insight into the experience of Jesus after He died and before He was raised. If the soul-sleeping theory is right, then Jesus was separated from the Father for three days. God forsook Him for three days, and there was no communion between Them. I consider such a postulate impossible to prove. The judgment of God upon Christ was associated with His death, not His burial! WHILE He was upon the cross, there was a period of three hours – from the sixth to the ninth hour (12:00 PM - 3:00 PM). It is written, "And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour" (Luke 23:44). It was around the ninth hour that Jesus cried out concerning being forsaken by God. "And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" (Matt 27:46). Jesus was "made sin" on the cross (2 Cor 5:21). He was "cursed" on the cross (Gal 3:13). That is where He bore our sins (1 Pet 2:24). There is where the reconciliation occurred (Eph 2:16). There is where the peace was made (Col 1:20). There is where the record against us was taken out of the way (Col 2:14). Not in the tomb, but on the cross! Later, after He was raised from the dead, Jesus would enter into heaven "by His own blood . . . having obtained eternal redemption for us" (Heb 9:7).

THOU HAST MADE KNOWN TO ME THE WAYS OF LIFE

"Thou hast made known to Me the ways of life . . ." Other versions read, "You have made known to Me the paths of life," NIV "You have made Me see the ways of life," BBE " You have revealed the paths of life to Me," DARBY " You make the path of life known to Me," GENEVA "You have taught Me the way of life," NJB "You will give Me back My life," LIVING and "You taught Me how to live." IE

"The ways of life" are the ways leading to life – the way from death to life. Again, Peter confirms that the Psalm is a depiction of the resurrection of Christ. In particular, it is a behind-the-scenes view of the Savior's frame of mind while He was "absent from the body" in Hades. Never before had any person blazed a trail from death to life. There had been some few people who had been raised from the dead, but they, through the power of God, were called back by someone outside of themselves. We have a record of several resurrections.

- The son of the widow of Zarephath (1 Kgs 17:17-23).
- The Shunnamite's son (2 Kgs 4:32-37).
- A dead young man who, when he was cast into a sepulcher, touched Elisha's bones

(2 Kgs 13:21).

- The son of the widow of Nain (Luke 7:12-15).
- Jairus' daughter (Lk 8:49-55).
- Lazarus (John 11:43-44).
- Dorcas (Acts 9:37-40).
- Eutychus (Acts 20:9-12).

None of these people navigated their way back to earth from the abode of the dead. Jesus, however, had received a commandment to take His life back (John 10:17-18). How will the Savior make the transition from death to life, and from Hades back to the world? This Psalm affirms that the Father would show Him the way back. Care must be taken not to assume more in this text than is obvious to faith. It does not suggest that Jesus was ignorant or in a hopeless state. It does confirm that the resurrection of Jesus from the dead involved the activity and direction of the Father. Therefore it is written that "God raised" Jesus (Acts 2:32; 4:10; 10:40; 13:30,37).

God did not do this by the imposition of His power, but by means of His fellowship and oneness with the Son. It seems to me that the work here described transcends both the language and the minds of men. Thus it is stated in a manner that is familiar to those who walk in the light as He is in the light. Because of His holy nature, God had forsaken Jesus when He was dying. However, He joined with Him in His resurrection, showing Him "the path" to life, and doing so while He was in the region of the dead. Jesus, then, was not asleep, and is never said to have been.

In confirmation of this, the 16th Psalm reads, "Thou wilt show Me the path of life: in Thy presence is fulness of joy; at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore" (Psa 16:11).

THOU SHALT MAKE ME FULL OF JOY

"... thou shalt make Me full of joy with Thy countenance." Other versions read, "You will make Me full of joy in Your presence," NKJV "Thou wilt make Me full of gladness with Thy presence," NASB "You will fill Me with joy in Your presence," NIV "You will make Me full of gladness with Your presence," NRSV "Thou shalt make Me full of gladness with Thy countenance," ASV "I will be full of joy when I see Your face," BBE "In Your presence there is complete joy," GWN "and give Me wonderful joy in Your presence," LIVING " You came near Me , and I felt great joy," IE "You will fill Me with delight in Your presence," WILLIAMS and "You will enrapture Me [diffusing My soul with joy] with and in Your presence." AMPLIFIED

This is the experience to which Paul referred when He said "Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father" (Rom 6:4). It is as though the glory of God came into that tomb like it did into the Tabernacle and Temple. When God's glory invaded the region of the dead, death lost all of its power, and path to life was clear. The presence of the Father filled the Christ with great joy. This was the glory that He laid aside to enter into the world. It was the glory withheld from Him while He bore our sins in His body on the tree.

Here is the ultimate experience: coming near to the Lord, and being in His presence, beholding His countenance. Jesus experienced the most joy when He was relishing the presence of the Father. That neutralized whatever was involved in being in the region of the dead. That compensated for being in a bodiless state, confined, from one point of view, to a distant condition.

We ought to learn from this that our most debilitating circumstances are decidedly reduced when we know the Lord is with us. There are times when we, in measure, experience what Paul did when the Lord "stood by" him (Acts 23:11). Somehow that compensated for the difficulties he was experiencing at the time when he was about to be "pulled in pieces" by a frenzied crowd of hostile Jews (Acts 23:10).

The 16th Psalm says, “in Thy presence is fulness of joy; at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore” (Psa 16:11). It may appear as though it is speaking only of being where the Father is – in His presence. In this text, however, it is speaking of the Father being where Jesus was, gladdening Him with His countenance and refreshing Him with His presence.

DAVID WAS NOT SPEAKING ABOUT HIMSELF

“29 Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day.”

Peter continues with this seemingly technical point, insightfully and powerfully affirming that Jesus is “risen indeed” (Lk 24:34). He will now confirm how unreasonable it was to think David was testifying of his own experience. Even though David did not say, “I am speaking about the coming Messiah,” the people should have been able to conclude that this is what he was saying. Some of them had, after all, represented themselves as thinking men. They had said, “These men are full of new wine” (Acts 2:13). Peter has already shown them how foolish they were in thinking such a thing (Acts 2:15). Now he will move them to consider something that they had not yet associated with the Christ.

LET ME SPEAK FREELY TO YOU

“Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David . . .” Other versions read, “Brethren, I may confidently say to you regarding the patriarch David,” NASB ““ Fellow Israelites , I may say to you confidently of our ancestor David,” NRSV “My brothers, I may say to you openly that David,” BBE “Brethren, let it be allowed to speak with freedom to you concerning the patriarch David,” DARBY “Men and brethren, I may boldly speak unto you of the Patriarch David,” GENEVA “Men, brethren, I may speak to you explicitly of the patriarch David,” MRD “Brothers, no one can deny that the patriarch David himself,” NJB “Dear brothers, think about this ! You can be sure that the patriarch David wasn't referring to himself ,” NLT “Men, brethren! it is permitted to speak with freedom unto you concerning the patriarch David,” YLT “My Jewish brothers, I can tell you plainly about David, our ancestor,” IE “As to the patriarch David, I need hardly remind you , brethren,” WEYMOUTH and “Men and brother-Jews, I can surely speak freely to you about the patriarch David.” PHILLIPS

From one point, what Peter is saying is very obvious. Yet, like blind men do, the people had not considered what Peter declares is very plain. Men – particularly religious men – have a tendency of “doting about questions and strifes of words” (1 Tim 6:4), neglecting powerful realities that are before them. Sometimes it is necessary to bring very obvious things before the people, and cause them to look closely at them. Take, for example, the women who had come to the tomb of Jesus to anoint His body. They were confronted with an angel who told them not to be afraid. He reminded them , “He is not here, for He is risen, as He said.” As if that was not enough he continued, “Come, see the place where the Lord lay” (Matt 28:6). From one point of view, the facts were very clear. Jesus had said He was going to rise from the dead (Matt 16:21), and He was not there. However the classroom in which the facts are seen is not enough.

There must be a perception of the facts before they can wield their power upon the heart and mind. Men delight in entertainment and novelty, but God is in neither one.

The Patriarch David

Now, it is as though Peter said, “Let me tell you what is obvious about the patriarch David.”

What is the meaning of the word “Patriarch”? Some versions read “our ancestor.” NRSV/IE Abraham is also called a “patriarch” (Heb 7:4). The twelve sons of Jacob are also called “the twelve patriarchs” (Acts 7:8-9). The word is a transliteration of the Greek word patria,rcou (pat-ri-archs-ou). Lexically, it means “founder of a tribe, progenitor,” THAYER “chief father . . . chief of a family,” FRIBERG and “father of a nation.” GINGRICH Thus, a “patriarch” is more than an important person, or someone who is positioned in a certain lineage. This word had to do with being the first of a certain order.

As used here, David is seen as the one through whom the Messiah came. That is precisely why the Messiah is called “the Son of David.” This was confessed to be true during Christ’s ministry among men. It was acknowledged by two blind men, all the people, a woman of Canaan, multitudes, the Pharisees, and the scribes (Matt 1:1; 9:27; 12:23; 15:22; 20:30; 21:9; ; 22:42; Mk 12:35).

David was not only a type of Christ, he was the first of a kingly lineage through which Jesus came. As the head of that kingly lineage, David is called “the patriarch.”

This particularly relates to Christ’s authority and kingship. The prophets said He would sit on “the throne of David ” (Isa 9:7). It is written that He would be given “the key of the house of David ” (Isa 22:22). His salvation is referred to as “the sure mercies of David ” (Isa 55:3). He is “the branch” that was raised up unto David (Jer 23:5; 33:15). The Messiah is even referred to as “David their King” (Jer 30:9; Hos 3:5), and “My servant David ” (Ezek 34:23-24). This is, then, a key association!

David was not only a type of Christ, he was the first of a kingly lineage through which Jesus came. As the head of that kingly lineage, David is called “the patriarch.” Peter will elaborate on this more extensively as this word continues.

HE IS BOTH DEAD AND BURIED

“ . . . that he is both dead and buried . . .” Other versions read, “that he both died and was buried,” NASB “came to his death, and was put in the earth,” BBE “he is both dead and buried,” GENEVA “he died, and also was buried,” MRD “not only died and was buried,” MONTGOMERY and “There is no doubt that he died and was buried.” PHILLIPS

The point Peter is making is this: the word David wrote in the 16 th Psalm could not have been about himself. There are some Psalms that have a dual application, the partial one being found in the writer, and the complete fulfillment in Christ Jesus (Psa 18:43; 47:5-9; 65:2-4; 69:1-4; 75:2; 93:2-3; 102:24; 109:25; 118:19,21). However, the Psalm now being declared by Peter is not in that category. It applies exclusively to the Christ, as Peter will now affirm.

HIS SEPULCHER IS WITH US

“ . . . and his sepulcher is with us unto this day.” Other versions read, “His tomb is with us to this day,” NKJV “his resting-place is with us today,” BBE “and his monument is amongst us unto this day,” DARBY “his tomb is in our midst to this day,” NAB “his tomb is still here among us,” NLT “His grave is still here with us today,” IE and “we still have his tomb among us.” WEYMOUTH

The point is that the body of David was still in “his tomb.” Further, if his body was in his tomb, his spirit was still in Hades – the abode of the dead. He was still under the dominion of death. This confirms that David could not possibly have been speaking about himself, for his present condition contradicted the Psalm. He had been left in Hades, and his body did see corruption. He had, in fact, just as Joshua and David, gone “the way of all the earth” (Josh 23:14; 1 Kg 2:2).

THE PROPHET SPOKE ABOUT CHRIST

“ 30 Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne.”

Peter now affirms that David was not speaking as a mere man. He was not recounting his own personal experiences.

BEING A PROPHET

“Therefore being a prophet . . .” Other versions read, “And so, because he was a prophet,” NASB “But he was a prophet,” NIV “Since he was a prophet,” NRSV “Whereas therefore he was a prophet,” DOUAY “David was a prophet,” GWN “Therefore, seeing he was a prophet,” PNT “a prophet, therefore , being,” YLT “Being a prophet, however ,” WEYMOUTH and “But while he was alive he was a prophet.” PHILLIPS

Phillips’ translation captures a facet of this text that is most intriguing. In the 16 th Psalm we have Jesus speaking after He died – after He had left the world for a season. The Psalm represents Jesus as speaking prophetically: “My flesh shall rest in hope . . . Thou wilt not leave My soul in hell. . . neither wilt Thou suffer Thine Holy One to see corruption . . . Thou shalt make Me full of joy with Thy countenance.” David, however, only prophesied while he was alive.

Peter leaves no doubt about this matter. David is speaking as a prophet. He is not speaking of himself, or out from himself. God is, in fact, saying something about the Christ through David, and doing so far in advance of the appearance of the Messiah.

Being a faithful prophet, David prophesied “according to the proportion of faith” (Rom 12:6). That is, he spoke what he saw, or understood. He spoke “as the oracles of God” (1 Pet 4:11), uttering the mind of the Lord, and doing so with understanding. We are again reminded that “the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy” (Rev 19:10).

KNOWING THAT GOD HAD SWORN WITH AN OATH TO HIM

“ . . . and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him . . .” Other versions read, “And so, because he was a prophet, and knew that God had sworn to him with an oath,” NASB “that God had promised him on oath,” NIV “and having in mind the oath which God had given to him,” BBE “and knew that God had sworn him an oath,” NJB “and knowing that with an oath God did swear to him ,” YLT “and knew God had promised with an unbreakable oath ,” LIVING “God vowed to David,” IE “and knowing that God had solemnly sworn to him,” WEYMOUTH “and knowing that God had sealed to him with an oath,” AMPLIFIED and “He knew that God had given him a most solemn promise .” PHILLIPS

David engages his mind – his memory and his contemplative powers – as he prophesies. He prophesies “knowing” what God had promised to him, not while in a trance.

The prophecy (a promise of God) of reference is found in the seventh chapter of Second Samuel. Because this is such a pivotal prophecy, we will do well to consider it in some depth.

“And as since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies. Also the LORD telleth thee that He will make thee an house . . . And when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for My name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever. I will be his Father, and he shall be my son. If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men: but my mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I put away before thee. And thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever ” (2 Sam 7:11-16).

Another account of this occasion is found in the book of First Chronicles.

“And it shall come to pass, when thy days be expired that thou must go to be with thy fathers, that I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy sons; and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build me an house, and I will stablish his throne for ever. I will be his father, and he shall be my son: and I will not take my mercy away from him, as I took it from him that was before thee: but I will settle him in Mine house and in My kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be established for evermore. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David” (1 Chr 17:11-15).

In his Psalms, David refers to this promise.

“I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah” (Psa 89:3-4).

David engages his mind – his memory and his contemplative powers – as he prophesies. He prophesies “knowing” what God had promised to him, not while in a trance.

“Then thou spakest in vision to thy Holy One, and saidst, I have laid help upon one that is mighty; I have exalted one chosen out of the people. I have found David My servant; with My holy oil have I anointed him: With whom My hand shall be established: Mine arm also shall strengthen him. The enemy shall not exact upon him; nor the son of wickedness afflict him. And I will beat down his foes before his face, and plague them that hate him. But my faithfulness and My mercy shall be with him: and in My name shall his horn be exalted. I will set his hand also in the sea, and his right hand in the rivers. He shall cry unto Me, Thou art my father, my God, and the rock of my salvation. Also I will make him My firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth. My mercy will I keep for him for evermore, and My covenant shall stand fast with him. His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and his throne as the days of heaven. If his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments; If they break my statutes, and keep not my commandments; Then will I visit their transgression with the rod, and their iniquity with stripes. Nevertheless my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from him, nor suffer my faithfulness to fail. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah” (Psa 89:19-37).

“ The LORD hath sworn in truth unto David; He will not turn from it; Of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore. For the LORD hath chosen Zion; He hath desired it for his habitation. This is My rest for ever: here will I dwell; for I have desired it. I will abundantly bless her provision: I will satisfy her poor with bread. I will also clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall shout aloud for joy. There will I make the horn of David to bud: I have ordained a lamp for Mine anointed. His enemies will I clothe with shame: but upon himself shall his crown flourish ” (Psa 132:11-18).

There are several key factors to note in this prophecy.

- God would make a house for David.
- David’s seed would build a house for God’s name.
- God would establish the throne of David’s kingdom forever.
- God would be a Father to David’s seed, and the seed would be His son.

- David's house and kingdom would be established forever.
- God would settle David's seed in His house and kingdom forever.
- God's hand would be established with David.
- David's horn would be exalted.
- God would make his firstborn higher than the kings of the earth.
- God covenant would stand fast with him.
- His seed would endure forever, and his throne as the days of heaven.
- David's seed would endure forever, and his throne as the sun before Him.
- God swore in truth and would not turn from it, that of the fruit of David's body He would raise up one to sit on his throne.
- He would make the horn of David to bud.
- The crown of the seed would flourish.

Observations

First, there is a part of this prophecy that does not refer to Christ Himself. "If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men ."

In the prophecy itself, there is no direct reference to the Messiah. This is an association that comes with understanding. It is clear from the Psalms of David that he came to grasp the significance of the promise. In fact, Peter says it was David's understanding of this promise that prompted the statements of the sixteenth Psalm.

Second, there is a sense in which much of promise pertained to Solomon, who would build the Temple. "He shall build an house for My name."

In the prophecy itself, there is no direct reference to the Messiah. This is an association that comes with understanding. It is clear from the Psalms of David that he came to grasp the significance of the promise. In fact, Peter says it was David's understanding of this promise that prompted the statements of the sixteenth Psalm. Prophecy, then, was actually joined with understanding, and also gave birth to additional prophecies through the power of the Holy Spirit.

It is important to note the role of the mind in prophesying. Even when prophecies were intended for later generations, the minds of the prophets were involved. Peter says of those who spoke of Christ's sufferings and glory, "Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently , who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow" (1 Pet 1:10-11). Rather than speaking or writing while in some kind of subconscious trace, these prophets knew what they were prophesying. They knew it concerned the coming Christ. They probed what they expressed, "trying to find out the time and circumstances to which the Spirit of Christ in them was pointing when He predicted the sufferings of Christ and the glories that would follow." NIV What is even more, the Lord answered their earnest inquiries, making known that "not to themselves, but to us they were ministering the things which now have been reported to you through those who have preached the gospel to you by the Holy Spirit sent from heaven; things which angels desire to look into" (1 Pet 1:12).

Thus, while many of the particulars about the promised Messiah were not made known to David, His kingly nature was revealed, as well as the eternal and uninterrupted nature of His beneficent kingdom.

OF THE FRUIT OF HIS LOINS

“ . . . that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, . . .” Other versions read, “that of the fruit of his body, according to the flesh,” NKJV “one of his descendants,” NASB “that of the fruit of his body,” BBE “one of David’s descendants,” GWN “of the fruit of thy bowels,” MRD and “one of David’s own descendants.” NLT

The coming Messiah would come from David’s progeny – from his natural offspring. Although David had several sons, the Messianic lineage would be traced through only one of them – Solomon. All through the lineage of Jesus this was the case. Abraham had seven sons beside Isaac: Ishmael, Zimran, Jokshan, Medan, Midian, Ishbak, and Shuah (Gen 16:16; 25:2). However, the Messiah came through Isaac. Isaac began Jacob and Esau, but the Messianic lineage came through Jacob (Mal 1:2). Jacob had twelve sons, but the Christ came from only one of them – Judah (Heb 7:14). Judah had five sons, but the Messiah came through Pharez (Matt 1:3).

I say these things only to point out that David had to understand which of his sons would provide the lineage for the coming Christ. He understood the prophecies delivered through him to have a secondary reference to Solomon, who did build a house for God, even as the Messiah would also do. I understand this to be the purpose for the dual nature of the prophecy. Solomon was the secondary reference, and the building of the Temple was a secondary building, in order that the lineage itself might be better understood.

TO SIT ON HIS THRONE

“ . . . He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne.” Other versions read, “He would raise up the Christ to sit on his throne,” NKJV “to sit . . . upon his throne,” NASB “he would place . . . on his throne,” NIV “He would put . . . on his throne,” NRSV “he would set one upon his throne,” ASV “would take his place as king,” BBE “one should sit upon his throne,” DOUAY “I will seat [one] on thy throne,” MRD “succeed him on the throne,” NJB “that Christ . . . should sit on his seat,” PNT “would [be the Messiah and] sit on David’s throne,” LIVING “would sit upon David’s throne,” IE and “He would set one on his throne.” MONTGOMERY

The throne of reference was not an earthly throne, for Jesus would later make clear that His kingdom “is not of this world” (John 18:36). That being the case, its throne could not possibly be established in this world. Further, the purpose for Christ’s rule was not the establishment of a worldly empire. A higher purpose is being served by Jesus’ kingdom than worldly prominence.

Isaiah prophesied that the Messiah would sit upon David’s throne. “For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever . The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this” (Isa 9:7). Thus, we have a Messiah coming from the seed of David, and sitting upon the throne of David.

Peter is now going to relate all of this to “Jesus of Nazareth.” He has clearly stated that David was not speaking about himself when he wrote of not being left in Hades, and his body not being subject to corruption. He was actually speaking of the Messiah, for the present circumstances confirmed he could not have been speaking about himself. His body was still in the grave.

In Peter’s inspired exposition, he will speak of Jesus sitting on David’s throne quite differently than many historical and modern self-professed theologians. He will not speak of Christ’s second coming. He will not speak of Jesus setting up His kingdom in Jerusalem. He will not speak of an earthly empire. Men have made these associations, but they cannot associate them with Peter’s exposition.

Lest this appear to be a mere gloss of the text, let me remind you that Peter is now speaking of Jesus being “raised up to sit ” on David’s “throne.” “Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne ” (Acts 2:30). He is relating this to the prophecy of One not being left in Hades, and His body not seeing corruption. He is referring to One coming back from the dead, not to One coming back to earth from heaven!

This is highly disruptive to much eschatology – humanly conceived eschatology.

THE RESURRECTION AND ENTHRONEMENT

“ 31 He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that His soul was not left in hell, neither His flesh did see corruption.”

Peter leaves no doubt concerning the reason and focus of David’s prophecy. He will not tie that prophecy to the book of Daniel, or to a Messianic kingdom upon earth – and he is “filled with the Spirit.” He will not associate it with the overthrow of the antichrist, or with a magnificent kingdom in Jerusalem. This word is how an inspired man speaks, who knows the truth about Christ.

HE SEEING THIS BEFORE

“He seeing this before . . .” Other versions read, “he, forseeing this,” NKJV “he looked ahead,” NASB “Seeing what was ahead,” NIV “he foresaw,” RSV “He, having knowledge of the future,” BBE “Seeing this in advance,” CSB “He knowing this before,” GENEVA “David knew,” GWN “he spoke with foreknowledge,” NJB “having foreseen,” YLT “David was looking far into the future and predicting,” LIVING “David knew this before it took place,” IE and “with prophetic insight.” WEYMOUTH

And what is it that David saw before – that is, saw before it actually came to pass. What is the sight that prompted him to speak as he did? It was the enthronement of his own Seed upon his throne. It was the fulfillment of God’s promise to make him a house (2 Sam 7:27), and to have it governed by the King on a throne that is established forever (1 Chron 17:11-14). This is what David saw “before.”

HE SPAKE OF CHRIST’S RESURRECTION

“ . . . spake of the resurrection of Christ . . .” Other versions read, “spoke concerning the resurrection of Christ,” NKJV “spoke of the resurrection of the Messiah,” NRSV “was talking of the coming again of Christ from the dead,” BBE “that the Messiah would come back to life , and he spoke about that before it ever happened,” GWN “speaking of the Messiah’s resurrection,” NLT “he did speak concerning the rising again of the Christ,” YLT “predicting Messiah’s resurrection,” LIVING “the resurrection of Christ and told it,” WILLIAMS “spoke [by foreknowledge] of the resurrection of the Christ (the Messiah),” AMPLIFIED and “THE resurrection of Christ, and it is this of which he is speaking .” PHILLIPS

Let me go over this once again. Here are the facts in the case.

- God would build David a house (2 Sam 7:11).
- He would raise up One from David’s own lineage to sit upon his throne (2 Sam 7:16).
- He would reign forever (2 Sam 7:13).

- His kingdom would have no end (2 Sam 7:16).
- As a King, He would build God's house (1 Chron 17:12).
- God would make this King higher than the kings of the earth (Psa 89:27).
- God swore and would not repent, that He would raise up one to sit on David's throne (Psa 89:3-4).

Given these facts, exactly how would David correlate his prophecies with the coming King? With what event would he associate the fulfillment of these prophecies? How will the Holy Spirit lead him to speak? Peter leaves no doubt on the matter. David was inspired, and Peter is also inspired. Now Peter affirms the matter clearly, and without any ambiguity whatsoever. David was moved to speak "of the resurrection of Christ." He did not speak about Christ's second coming, but about His resurrection. He did not speak of Jesus returning to earth from heaven, but of Him returning from the region of the dead!

Is it possible to state the case with any more clarity? With the insight of faith and the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, David saw the raising up of a King to sit upon his throne, and it moved him to speak of the resurrection of Christ! He foresaw a King being raised up to build God's house, and he spoke of the resurrection of Christ. He looked ahead by faith and saw an eternal reign, and spoke of the resurrection of Christ

Some men say that Jesus is coming back from heaven to be seated on the throne and reign. Peter will declare He rose from the dead to do so!

This is Peters exposition of resurrection – Christ's resurrection in particular, and resurrection in general. It involves a twofold deliverance: one from Hades, and one from the grave. The spirit is in Hades, and the body is in the grave. Both deliverances must occur for there to be a resurrection from the dead.

This prophecy is all the more remarkable when you consider how very few references are made in Moses and the Prophets to the resurrection of the dead in general, and to the resurrection of Christ specifically. Job alluded to the resurrection of the dead (Job 14:12-15; 19:25-27). David spoke of Christ's resurrection (Psa 16:9-10). He gave some veiled words about the general resurrection (Psa 17:15; 49:15). Isaiah spoke of death being swallowed up in victory (Isa 25:8), and the earth casting out her dead (Isa 26:19). Daniel spoke of many that sleep in the dust of the earth awakening (Dan 12:2-3). He was told by a heavenly messenger that he would "rest" and stand in his lot at the end of his days (Dan 12:13). Hosea spoke of God's people being ransomed "from the power of the grave", and being redeemed "from death" (Hos 13:14).

In all of this, David, being a man after God's own heart, spoke with the greatest clarity on the nature the resurrection itself. It involves not being left in Hades, and the body coming out of the grave. He also is the only prophet that spoke of Christ's resurrection from the dead – and his reference needed to be interpreted by Peter for men to see it.

Peter also affirms that David's prophecy was prompted by what he saw . That is, through the Spirit he saw the enthronement of Jesus, and was moved by the Spirit to prophesy of Christ's resurrection. That is an association made in heaven, not upon earth. Yet, you will be hard pressed to find anyone speaking about Christ being raised up to sit upon David's throne that points to the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. That, however, is what Peter did as he was moved by the Holy Spirit.

HIS SOUL AND HIS FLESH

“ . . . that His soul was not left in hell, neither His flesh did see corruption.” Other versions read,

“that His soul was not left in Hades, nor did His flesh see corruption,” NKJV “that He was neither abandoned to Hades, nor did His flesh decay,” NASB “that He was not abandoned to the grave, nor did His body see decay,” NIV “He was not abandoned to Hades, nor did his flesh experience corruption,” NRSV “He was not left in Hades, and His flesh did not experience decay,” CSB “that neither has he been left in hades nor his flesh seen corruption,” DARBY “that neither was he abandoned to the netherworld nor did his flesh see corruption,” NAB “He was saying that God would not leave him among the dead or allow his body to rot in the grave,” NLT “He will not be left in death. His body will not decay in the grave,” IE “to the effect that He was not left forsaken in the Unseen World, nor did His body undergo decay,” WEYMOUTH “that He was not deserted [in death] and left in Hades (the state of departed spirits), nor did His body know decay or see destruction,” AMPLIFIED and “Christ was not deserted in death and His body was never destroyed. 'Christ.” PHILLIPS

This is Peters exposition of resurrection – Christ’s resurrection in particular, and resurrection in general. It involves a twofold deliverance: one from Hades, and one from the grave. The spirit is in Hades, and the body is in the grave. Both deliverances must occur for there to be a resurrection from the dead. It has already occurred in Jesus, it will yet be fulfilled in the resurrection when “ all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation” (John 5:28-29).

I am chagrined at the bent of some translations in the direction of soul-sleeping. They translate this verse as though it involves redundant expressions. “He was not abandoned to the grave, nor did His body see decay,” NIV “He will not be left in death. His body will not decay in the grave,” IE “Christ was not deserted in death and His body was never destroyed.'Christ.” PHILLIPS “He said that the Messiah wouldn't be left in the grave and that his body wouldn't decay,” GWN “he was not left in the grave, neither did his body see corruption,” MRD and “He will not be left in death. His body will not decay in the grave.” IE

These are wholly inappropriate translations. They reflect human persuasion rather than Divine intent. Two parts are mentioned (“soul” and “His flesh”) , and two locations or conditions are mentioned (“Hell” [Hades] and “corruption.”

SOUL-SLEEPING

The soul-sleeping heresy affirms that both the seen and unseen parts of those who are dead are “asleep.” This is base on the Scriptural references to death as “sleep” (Deut 31:16; Job 7:21; 14:12; Dan 12:2; John 11:11; Acts 7:60; 13:36; 1 Cor 15:6,18).

These references pertain to the body, and are used to confirm the reality of the coming resurrection. The use of the term “sleep” is not intended to denote unconsciousness, but the prospect of being raised from the dead. Thus Job speaks of death as sleeping “in the dust” (Job 7:21), and Daniel to “sleep in the dust of the earth” (Dan 12:2).

A Separation

At death, there is a separation of the seen and unseen parts of men. It is not possible, therefore, that they would both remain in the same place. Rachel’s death is described using this kind of language. “And it came to pass, as her soul was in departing , (for she died) that she called his name Benoni: but his father called him Benjamin” (Gen 35:18).

When the son of a widow of Zarephath died, Elijah raised him from the dead. The prophet asked the Lord, “I pray Thee, let this child’s soul come into him again .” When the boy was raised, it is described in these words: “And the LORD heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again , and he revived” (1 Kgs 17:22).

Referring to his preference of death over life in the body, Paul wrote of being “ absent from the body” (2 Cor 5:8).

When referring to an epochal vision he received, Paul said he did not know whether he was “in the body or out of the body” – and he was very conscious at that time (2 Cor 12:3).

When Stephen died, he is said to have fallen “sleep” (Acts 7:60). However, before he died, he referred to the separation of his spirit from his body. He prayed, “Lord Jesus, receive my spirit” (Acts 7:59). It is inconceivable that he was referring to a period of unconsciousness, or to the resurrection of the dead that would be in the future.

At death there is a separation of the seen and unseen part of men.

Consciousness After Death

Scripture does not support unconsciousness after death, or a lack of awareness of the surroundings. Our text is proclaiming a prophecy that referred to Jesus having gladness in the presence of the Lord after He died, and expecting His appointed resurrection.

There are both teaching and testimonies that affirm the consciousness of those who have died. This is pertinent to the significance of our text, which speaks of Christ’s anticipation of His resurrection.

Jesus preaching to the spirits. The very person who, in our text, was preaching on the day of Pentecost, later referred to Jesus’ activity after He died, and before He was raised. “For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit: by which also HE went and preached unto the spirits in prison; which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water” (1 Pet 3:18-20). Those seeking to defend the soul-sleeping view, as well as several others, say that the preaching of reference was that of Noah, in whom, they aver, the spirit of Christ was present. However, Noah is never depicted as possessing “the Spirit of Christ,” prophesying of Christ, or preaching to “spirits.” Later Peter again refers to this incident. “for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead , that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit” (1 Pet 4:6). Noah preached no Gospel, nor did he preach that anyone might “live according to God in the spirit.” Although this incident presents some difficulties for surface thinkers, it is in Scripture. It testifies to the Lord having no pleasure in the death of the wicked. There is no reason to imagine that all of those who died in the flood were wicked, and consequently went to Hell. Scripture does not affirm this. Nor, indeed, are we to suppose there were no children, demented, or some who did not have the faintest notion of the existence of Noah. This text does not clarify all of the issues of post-death misery, but it does affirm the activity of Jesus after His death and before His resurrection. Peter says of Jesus “ HE went and preached to the spirits!”

Revelation while out of the body. When Paul was caught up into the “third heaven,” he was very aware of what was happening. He “heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter.” The experience was so vivid that Paul gloried in the experience (2 Cor 12:4-5). If the soul-sleeping theory is true, then Paul was speaking ignorantly and without due regard for the truth. Who is the fool who will postulate such an absurdity?

In no way can any of these verses be perceived as speaking about men in the flesh, or in the body. We have come to an assembly of “spirits” who have been perfected – that is, freed from the encumbrances of the flesh. That this could refer to unconscious beings in the grave is an absurdity unworthy of being embraced by intelligent men.

We have come to the spirits of just men made perfect. Candidly the Spirit affirms of all who are in Christ Jesus, “But ye are come unto . . . the spirits of just men made perfect” (Heb 12:22). Other versions read, “You have come,” NKJV “you have approached,” NAB “what you have come to is.” NJB This is a description of where believers remaining “in the body” have come. Elsewhere these coming ones are referred to as “being yourselves also in the body” (Heb 13:3). And to whom does the Spirit say we “have come?” Pertinent to this discussion, He states it includes “the spirits of just men made perfect.” The word “spirits” is translated from the Greek word pneu,masin (pnyhoo-mah-sin). This exact word is found five times in Scripture, and its meaning is obvious. It is never applied to people on earth.

- “And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth He even the unclean spirits [neu,masin] and they do obey Him” (Mark 1:27).

- “And they were all amazed, and spake among themselves, saying, What a word is this! for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean spirits [neu,masin], and they come out” (Luke 4:36).

- “Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits [neu,masin], and doctrines of devils” (1 Tim 4:1).

- “To the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits [neu,masin] of just men made perfect” (Heb 12:23).

- “By which also he went and preached unto the spirits [neu,masin] in prison” (1 Pet 3:19).

In no way can any of these verses be perceived as speaking about men in the flesh, or in the body. We have come to an assembly of “spirits” who have been perfected – that is, freed from the encumbrances of the flesh. That this could refer to unconscious beings in the grave is an absurdity unworthy of being embraced by intelligent men.

The rich man and Lazarus. Jesus gave the account of “a certain rich man,” and “a certain beggar named Lazarus.” Some affirm that this was really a parable, and not an actual account. However, who has ever heard of a parable that likens reality to something that is nothing more than a myth. If the soul-sleepers are right, then Jesus used a lie to teach truth – and I view that as a serious suggestion. In that case we have the One who is “the Truth” using a fable to teach something. In the account, Jesus did not speak like a soul-sleeper would speak. In fact, no soul-sleeper could talk like this. The Lord, who is “full of grace and truth,” said Lazarus died, and was carried by the angels to Abraham’s bosom. There he was comforted. The rich man died, was buried, and lifted up his eyes in hell, being in torment. This dead man spoke to Abraham, received an answer from Abraham, made another petition of Abraham, and was given another answer by Abraham. Both the rich man and Abraham knew about the rich man’s brothers, and of their spiritual condition. Abraham knew about Moses and the Prophets, who did not live until more than 500 years after he died. Abraham also spoke of other personalities who existed with both the rich man and Lazarus, and how, if they desired to do so, they could not pass from one region to the other. That is how Jesus spoke about life after death.

Souls under the altar. John was given a glimpse of some of these “spirits of must men made perfect.” He tells us who they were, where they are now, and of their former lives on the earth. “And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God , and for the testimony which they held” (Rev 6:9). He did not see men in the body, but “souls.” They were not men in the earth, but those who had been killed because of their testimony. These “souls” cried out to the Lord “a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, with a loud voice, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?” (Rev 6:10).

Far from being asleep, these souls were very conscious, both of their surroundings, and of their former lives. Heaven knew this was the case, so there was an immediate response to their cry. “And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled” (Rev 6:11). Methinks if some person had told these “souls” of the doctrine of soul-sleeping, they would have laughed at them in derision.

Moses and Elijah came back. We have the record of two men who left this world – one by death, and one by translation – yet came back in glory. When Jesus was transfigured, “behold, there talked with Him two men, which were Moses and Elias: Who appeared in glory, and spake of His decease which He should accomplish at Jerusalem” (Luke 9:31). They both talked with Jesus about His appointed decease, or death – and on earth neither of them said so much as one syllable about Christ’s death. They surely could not have talked if they were asleep or unconscious – even doing so with prophetic insight.

Thus we have the record of several departed souls, or spirits, and of their activity after they died. Whether some of them are viewed as parables or reality, the fact of consciousness after death still remains. It is unimaginable that the premier Personality, the Lord Jesus Himself, would have come behind “the spirits of just men made perfect” (Abraham, Lazarus, Paul, Moses, and Elijah), not being active after He died and before He rose from the dead.

CONCLUSION

Peter has introduced the resurrection of Christ in a most insightful way. He has declared that David “foresaw” it, and prophesied of the Savior’s anticipation of it. That is, this is something that was in God’s eternal purpose – Jesus taking back His life again, just as He was commissioned to do. God, therefore, alerted humanity to it more than 800 years ahead of time. It was foretold by David before Jesus, and anticipated by the Savior while He yet remained in the region of the dead.

WE ALL ARE WITNESSES

“ 32 This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses.”

Peter has already stated that God has raised Jesus from the dead: “Whom God hath raised up , having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it” (Acts 2:24). He has also declared this was something prophesied by David. Now He will affirm the truth of Christ’s resurrection once again, and buttress it with yet another witness.

THIS JESUS

“This Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “ This man Jesus,” GWN/NJB “He was speaking of Jesus,” LIVING “So Jesus,” IE “It was this very Jesus ,” ISV “I mean Jesus,” WILLIAMS and “Christ is the man Jesus.” PHILLIPS

“This Jesus” is “Jesus of Nazareth,” a man approved by God in their presence, and over an extended period. It is the Jesus they took, crucified, and killed “by wicked hands.” It is also the One David foresaw, as well as the One who testified to God Himself that He would not leave Him in Hades, or allow His body to see corruption.

The people had tried to put “this Jesus” from themselves, thereby fulfilling the second Psalm. “The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us” (Psa 2:3). Now, they are having to face that “same Jesus” again!

GOD RAISED UP

“ . . . hath God raised up . . .” Other versions read, “God has raised up,” NKJV “God raised up again ,” NASB “God has raised . . . to life ,” NIV “God has given back to life ,” BBE “God has resurrected,” CSB “ God brought . . . back to life ,” GWN “Jesus rose from the dead ,” LIVING and “God raised from death .” WEYMOUTH

“This Jesus” is “Jesus of Nazareth,” a man approved by God in their presence, and over an extended period. It is the Jesus they took, crucified, and killed “by wicked hands.” It is also the One David foresaw, as well as the One who testified to God Himself that He would not leave Him in Hades, or allow His body to see corruption.

Like the wise man of Solomon’s reference, Peter is fastening truth in the minds of those before him. “The words of the wise are as goads, and as nails fastened by the masters of assemblies , which are given from one shepherd” (Eccl 12:11). He once again faces them with the stark reality of God’s reversal of their judgment. They killed Him, God raised Him! They rejected Him, God accepted Him! They hated Him, God loved Him!

Twenty-one times it is stated that God raised Jesus from the dead (Acts 2:24,32; 3:26; 5:30; 10:40; 12:7; 13:22,30,33,34; 17:31; Rom 4:24; 6:4; 8:11; 10:9; 1 Cor 6:14; 15:15; 2 Cor 4:14; Gal 1:1; Eph 1:20; Col 2:12; 1 Pet 1:21). By way of comparison, fourteen times it is stated that Christ “died” (Rom 5:6,8; 6:10; 8:34; 14:9,15; 1 Cor 8:11; 15:3; 2 Cor 5:14,15; 1Thess14; 5:10). To say that Christ’s resurrection is central to the preaching of the Gospel is an understatement, to say the least. Yet, there is a great deal of purported Gospel preaching that does not make much of Christ’s resurrection.

WE ALL ARE WITNESSES

“ . . . whereof we all are witnesses.” Other versions read, “ of which we are all witnesses,” NKJV “to which we are all witnesses of the fact ,” NIV “and of that all of us are witnesses,” NRSV “We are all witnesses of this ,” CSB “We are all eye-witnesses of this!” IE “a fact to which all of us testify ,” WEYMOUTH “and of that all we [His disciples] are witnesses,” AMPLIFIED and “ a fact of which all of us are eye-witnesses!” PHILLIPS

Technically, no one actually witnessed the resurrection itself – not even the soldiers who watched the tomb. They were startled by an angel , not the rising of Jesus from the dead (Matt 28:2-4). These witnesses saw Jesus after He was risen form the dead.

Jesus had told them, “But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be witnesses to Me in Jerusalem , and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the end of the earth” NKJV (Acts 1:8). Prophetically He had said to them, “And ye are witnesses of these things” (Luke 24:48). Later Peter would say it again: “But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses ” (Acts 3:14-15). Again, he would say, “And we are His witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him” (Acts 5:32). At the house of Cornelius he again testified, “And we are witnesses of all things which He did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree: Him God raised up the third day, and showed Him openly; Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God , even to us, who did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead” (Acts 10:39-41).

Technically, no one actually witnessed the resurrection itself – not even the soldiers who watched the tomb. They were startled by an angel, not the rising of Jesus from the dead (Matt 28:2-4). These witnesses saw Jesus after He was risen from the dead. In fact, He had spent considerable time with them, showing Himself “alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of things pertaining to the Kingdom of God” (Acts 1:3). Further, His appearances were not limited to “the twelve,” but included “above five hundred brethren” (1 Cor 15:6), “James” (1 Cor 15:7), Mary Magdalene (Mk 16:9), “the women” (Matt 28:9), Cleopas and his companion (Luke 24:15-34), and others (Lk 24:10-11,35-36).

Some might conjecture that it would have been better to have the actual Jesus there, and thus the people could have the witness of the disciples corroborated. However, there is something that must not be overlooked. A faithful witness is verified to the conscience of men by the Holy Spirit. Jesus had promised that when the Spirit came, He would “reprove,” or convict, NKJV “the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: of sin, because they believe not on me; of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more; of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged” (John 16:8-11).

This promised work is precisely what will be accomplished on this marvelous day of Pentecost – a day when the “door of faith” was being opened to the sons of men. During the events of this Christ’s resurrection will be confirmed.

CONCLUSION

Thus, Peter has presented the resurrection of Christ, so essential to man’s salvation. He has declared it as the work of God Himself, who raised Him from the dead, thereby negating the judgment of those who took Him, crucified Him, and killed Him. He has also affirmed that David prophesied of Christ’s resurrection, knowing that God was going to raise up a King to sit on his throne, and that He would reign forever. He has also declared that he and those with him are eye-witnesses of the risen Christ.

All of this confirms that salvation must be implemented and completed by a living Savior. Spiritual life is not maintained by rules, regulations, ceremonies, and procedures. Such things have a little measured value. As it is written, “For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come” (1 Tim 4:8). This is not referring to “exercise,” as ordinarily conceived. It rather refers to disciplines of the body – religious disciplines like fasting, abstinence, celibacy, regular religious activities, etc. Thus, the New American Standard Version reads, “for bodily discipline is only of little profit, but godliness is profitable for all things, since it holds promise for the present life and also for the life to come” (1 Tim 4:8). However valuable these things, and other similar activities, may appear, they cannot culture the soul, feed the spirit, or heighten spiritual sensitivity. They do not enhance Divine fellowship, cause grace to come to us in greater measures, or make our prayers more effectual.

From beginning to end, we require a living Savior, and that is what Peter is declaring. He is opening up the nature of the New Covenant, which significantly differs from the Old Covenant which “stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation” (Heb 9:10). Now, instead of a ceremony, men are being called “into the fellowship” of God’s dear Son (1 Cor 1:9). Instead of coming to the Temple, they will be urged to “draw nigh unto God” Himself by means of a “better hope” (Heb 7:19), and to do so “with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb 10:22). All of that requires a living Savior – one who can say, “I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death” (Rev 1:18). That is the Jesus that Peter is declaring!

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #10

THE PREACHING OF JESUS: HE IS LORD!

“ 2:33 Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear. 34 For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy foes thy footstool. 36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ.” (Acts 2:33-36)

INTRODUCTION

Contrary to the doctrines of many, Peter will affirm that Jesus has been seated on David's throne, and that this was necessary to the salvation of men. He will relate this enthronement to the resurrection of Christ, not His second coming.

It is critical that men obtain an understanding of what is required to save a man, as well as a race. Once the requirements are seen, it will at once expose the folly of salvation by works, or the imagined power and effectiveness of the human will. The blow that sin dealt to the human race removed all hope of self-improvement and recovery.

Men became so corrupt that they extended themselves to crucify the Lord of glory. The whole human race joined in condoning this death, and insisting that it take place: Jews and Gentiles, men and women, masters and servants, rulers and subjects, religion and politics.

It is not possible for an acceptable strategy for recovery from such a fall to rise from those in a depraved and hopeless state. Such a plan cannot be produced by religious leaders – they had joined in having Jesus killed. It cannot come from the political branch of society – they too were involved in carrying out the death of Christ. The common people cannot produce a strategy for recovery – they

CONTENTS

- BEING BY THE RIGHT HAND EXALTED (2:33a)
- HAVING RECEIVED OF THE FATHER (2:33b)
- HE HATH SHED FORTH THIS (2:33c)
- DAVID IS NOT ASCENDED (2:34a)
- SIT ON MY RIGHT HAND (2:34b)
- UNTIL I MAKE THINE ENEMIES THY FOOTSTOOL (2:35)
- LET ALL THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL KNOW (2:36a)
- GOD HATH MADE THAT SAME JESUS “LORD” (2:36b)
- GOD HATH MADE THAT SAME JESUS “CHRIST” (2:36c)
- CONCLUSION

were carried along by the enemies of Jesus, and also agreed to His death.

The redemptive plan itself must be conceived by the living God – traced back to His determinate counsel and foreknowledge. Such a purpose cannot be developed by those who have been blighted by sin and taken captive by the devil. Further, the initiation and completion of salvation requires a reigning King with all power. Heavenly resources are requisite to the extrication of men from enslavement to sin, and the maintenance of holiness, “without which no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14).

THE CRITICALITY OF THIS SERMON

I have stated this before, but am compelled to say it once again. We are being exposed to the inaugural act of the exalted Christ – the pouring forth of His Spirit and the consequent laying of the foundation upon which the church, both as individuals and as a “body,” is built. It is not possible that this initial work can in any way be flawed. The message cannot be partial or faulty. There can be no exaggeration or understatement in the declaration. Jesus must be precisely presented, for this will set the tone for Gospel labors during the rest of time.

Nothing in this message can be subject to obsolescence. Nothing will be presented that will be upstaged by a later message or further insight. If there is a message presented as Gospel that is in any way at variance with the word of Christ to which this text exposes us, then there is not the slightest chance that it is correct. A view of the death of Christ that clashes with Peter’s presentation can be nothing more than a lie. It is not possible that salvation can be wrought by the means of such a contradicting message. A perception of the resurrection of Christ that is in any way antithetical to Peter’s message is in every way corrupt.

Any word that is presented as pertinent to salvation that is not characterized by the absolute, obvious, and unwavering centrality of Christ (as made known through Peter’s words) is a fabrication of man, and has been conceived in the energy of Satanic power and demonic delusion. It

Any word that is presented as pertinent to salvation that is not characterized by the absolute, obvious, and unwavering centrality of Christ (as made known through Peter's words) is a fabrication of man, and has been conceived in the energy of Satanic power and demonic delusion. It can be properly classified as "doctrines of demons" NKJV (1 Tim 4:1). I understand that this may appear unjustifiably strong. However, if anything, it is an understatement. This is because we are dealing with foundational realities – things upon which the whole of salvation has been built. It is no more possible for a doctrine to survive that is built on a flawed foundation than it is for a house that is built on the sand to survive the rain and floods (Matt 7:26-27). The criticality of foundations is well stated by the Psalmist: "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" (Psa 11:3). How will it be possible for them to build if the foundations have been "cast down" GENEVA or "undermined" ? GWN When the things that support thought are erroneous, how is it possible for the process of thought itself to be right?

WHAT HAS BEEN SAID?

With these things in mind, what has been said of the Christ to this point?

- Jesus Christ was a Man "approved by God" (2:22a).
- He was "approved" by three categories of works: "miracles," "wonders," and "signs" (2:22b).
- Jesus was "delivered" up by God's "determinate counsel" (2:23a).
- He was "delivered up" by God's "foreknowledge" (2:23c).
- Once placed in the hands of the Jews by God Himself, they took Him, crucified Him, and killed Him (2:23d).
- The Jew did this by employing the "wicked hands" of men – Gentiles who did not know God (2:23e).
- God raised Jesus from the dead, negating the verdict of the people (2:24a).
- It was not possible for death to retain Jesus (2:24b).
- David spoke of Christ and of His experience after His death and prior to His resurrection. The Father was His focus, He was at Jesus' right hand, Jesus' heart therefore rejoiced, His tongue was glad, and his flesh rested in hope – i.e., in anticipation of His resurrection(2:25-26a).
- Jesus knew and said that God would not leave His soul in hades (the abode of spirits), nor allow His body to see corruption (in the grave) 2:27.
- The way back to life from the dead was made known to Jesus by God (2:28a).
- Jesus was made glad with the Father's countenance, while He remained in the region of the dead (2:28).
- Knowing that God had sworn to raise up an everlasting King from his lineage, to sit upon his throne, David spoke of the resurrection of Christ (2:29-30).
- Christ's resurrection, not His second coming, is directly related to His enthronement – sitting upon David's throne (2:30b-31).
- The resurrected Christ was seen by His disciples, confirming that He was, indeed, alive (2:32).

Peter, under the inspiration of the Spirit, will now proceed to build upon these realities. In fulfillment of Jesus' promise, the Spirit will "guide" him into "all truth" (John 16:13), testifying of Christ (John 15:26), and presenting the view of Him that is necessary if men are to be brought salvation.

These, then, are essential as the foundation of our salvation: the death, burial, resurrection, and enthronement of Jesus. In order to bring salvation within the reach of men, we cannot begin with self-perceived human needs. It is wrong – seriously wrong – to present Jesus as the means of correcting domestic, political, and social dilemmas. The Father did not send the Son to make the world a better place to live, or to address the difficulties that men rank most highly. Even though this is not commonly acknowledged, it ought to be abundantly clear.

There are people in the earth who prosper on every hand, experiencing little difficulty along the way. Of old time, before truth had been extensively proclaimed to men, this condition troubled “Asaph the chief” 1 Chron 16:5 among the singers of Israel. “For I was envious at the foolish, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked . For there are no bands in their death: but their strength is firm. They are not in trouble as other men; neither are they plagued like other men . . . they have more than heart could wish . . . Behold, these are the ungodly, who prosper in the world; they increase in riches ” (Psa 73:3-12). In some professed Christian circles, those would be considered evidences of Divine blessing. In fact, for a moment, that is what Asaph tended to think. However, that was only because he was thinking on a lower plain, and in the wrong area of thought. He said of the occasion, “When I thought to know this, it was too painful for me; until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places: thou castedst them down into destruction. How are they brought into desolation, as in a moment! they are utterly consumed with terrors” (Psa 73:16-19). It ought to be abundantly evident that it is wholly inappropriate to present Christ as the means of achieving such a status! Peter will not speak a single syllable that will lead men to think of worldly prosperity, political excellence, or domestic stability – not so much as a word. There will be no possible way to build such objectives upon the words Peter delivered on the day of Pentecost.

Neither, indeed, can we begin with the church and its necessary role in redemption – although it does have a role in redemption, being the appointed “pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3;15). In this case, men hold before the people the official religious institution with which, they say, men must be aligned. However, in Scripture WHICH church one chooses is really not the point. Rather what any given church is saying and doing is the point – and each congregation is personally judged by the Lord, as clarified in the second and third chapters of Revelation, in which Jesus measures His churches.

We must begin and end with the Son of God, for He is, in truth, “the Beginning and the End,” the “First and the Last,” and the “Alpha and the Omega.” The secret to acceptance with God and sound theology is where Jesus ranks in both allegiance and doctrine. Within the Kingdom of God, no place has been provided for any other priority or emphasis. If Jesus is not “The First,” dictating the direction, and “the End,” identifying its objective, the whole of religion is meaningless, and even damaging.

All of this is being gloriously clarified in the words of Peter as he, under the direction of the Spirit of God, brings the people to focus upon the Lord Jesus Christ, whom they had taken, crucified, and killed. He will not allow the people to become diverted to some other matter – like the corruption of the religious leaders, the chicanery of Judas, or the heartlessness of both Pilate and Herod. He will shine the light upon the Son of God Himself. In so doing he is establishing the direction of preaching.

BEING BY THE RIGHT HAND EXALTED

“ 2:33a Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted . . . ”

Peter is in the midst of expounding the resurrection of Christ. It is important to see that our Lord’s resurrection is not confined to Him rising from the dead. The total view of the resurrection includes at least four elements. Even though there is a sense in which each one of these is considered separately, there is also a sense in which they have all been joined together.

- Raised from the dead. Here death was defeated, for it was not possible that Jesus should be held within the “gates of Hades.” Our salvation required this raising .
- Ascended. In the ascension, Jesus bodily left the domain of the seen – the earth. Our salvation could not be implemented while He remained on the earth.
- Received in heaven. Having left the domain of death and the realm of the seen, Jesus must be received in heaven, else salvation cannot be implemented. God must be pleased with what Jesus had accomplished.
- Enthroned. In order for salvation to be realized, Jesus had to be enthroned at the right hand of God. This great salvation can only implemented by a King who is in possession of all power in heaven and earth.

Scripture often speaks of the risen Christ with these realities in mind. For example, we are said to be saved “by His LIFE” (Rom 5:10). This “life” includes Christ being raised from the dead, ascending into heaven, being received in heaven, and being enthroned at the right hand of God. The book of Ephesians also presents this view – the resurrection of Christ and His exaltation tied together. “Which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at his own right hand in the heavenly places” (Eph 1:20). The book of Philippians does the same, viewing Christ in His death and exaltation. “And being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name” (Phil 2:9).

As Peter will confirm, the resurrection of Christ is not to be viewed independently from His exaltation. They are to be viewed together.

THEREFORE

“Therefore . . .” Here the word “therefore” introduces that which necessarily followed Christ’s resurrection. There was a reason why the soul of Jesus was not left in Hades, nor His body see corruption. The resurrection of Jesus was not an end of itself, but was the required prelude to His exaltation. Jesus could not be exalted until His death had accomplished its appointed objectives. Among them were the following:

-

Taking away the sins of the world (John 1:29).

- Reconciling Jew and Gentile in one body (Eph 2:16).
- Making peace (Col 1:20).
- Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us (Col 2:14).
- Spoiling principalities and powers (Col 2:15).
- Being made sin for us (2 Cor 5:21).
- Being made a curse for us (Gal 3:13).
- Reconciling us to God (Rom 5:10).
- Tasting death for every man (Heb 2:9).
- Redemption for the transgressions that were committed under the first covenant (Heb 9:15).
- Destroy the devil (Heb 2:14).

When these were satisfactorily accomplished, God raised Jesus from the dead. This was done in order that He might be exalted, for the Savior of men must be an exalted Savior – One who possesses all power in heaven and earth, and is enthroned at the right hand of God. No one could possibly obtain “eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9) until this was done.

BEING BY THE RIGHT HAND

“ . . . being by the right hand of God . . .” Other versions read, “to the right hand of God,” NKJV “at the right hand,” NRSV “God used His power,” GWN “by God’s right hand,” NJB “at His right side,” IE “by the mighty hand of God,” WEYMOUTH and “by and to the right hand of God.” AMPLIFIED

Here there are two possible meanings.

- That Jesus is positioned at the right hand of God.
- That Jesus was exalted BY means of the right hand of God – that is, God’s right hand exalted Him. NJB/WEYMOUTH/AMPLIFIED

There is no angel in heaven or in hell that is not under the government of Jesus. There is no cherubim or seraphim that is not subject to Him. Arch angels and chief angels are under His control. All of nature is governed by Him. All circumstances are under His command. All men are regulated by Him, and no person is completely free.

While both are true, it appears that the meaning of this text is that God’s right hand exalted Christ . Thus the Scriptures contain the following expressions: “Thou that savedst by Thy right hand . . . Thy right hand hath holden me up . . . the saving strength of His right hand . . . neither did their own arm save them: but thy right hand, and thine arm . . . save with Thy right hand” (Psa 17:7; 18:35; 20:6; 44:3; 60:5).

The expression “being by the right hand of God exalted” means, “being exalted by means of the right hand of God.” Elsewhere we know that the place of exaltation was also at the right hand of God (Rom 8:34; Eph 1:20; Heb 1:13; 12:2). In fact, Peter will make that point later.

EXALTED

“ . . . exalted . . .” Other versions read, “being lifted up,” BBE “to give Jesus the highest power,” GWN “raised to the heights,” NJB “exalted to the place of highest honor in heaven,” NLT “now He sits on the throne of highest honor in heaven,” LIVING “Jesus was lifted up,” IE and “lifted high .” WEYMOUTH

The exaltation of Jesus was to the throne in heaven – and “the heavens do rule” (Dan 4:26). The Spirit witnesses that God has “highly exalted” the Lord Jesus (Phil 2:9). That is, He has exalted Him to “the highest place,” NIV “given Him exceptional honor,” GWN “greatly exalted Him,” NAB “raised Him high,” NJB and “elevated Him to the place of highest honor.” NLT

The Spirit is very precise concerning the exaltation of Jesus. “All things” have been put under Him, or under His control and government (Eph 1:22). The only personality that is not under Him is God Himself. As it is written, “For He [God] hath put all things under His [Jesus] feet. But when He [God] saith all things are put under Him [Jesus], it is manifest that He [God] is excepted, which did put all things under Him [Jesus]” (1 Cor 15:27). The Amplified Bible reads, “For He [the Father] has put all things in subjection under His [Christ’s] feet. But when it says, All things are put in subjection [under Him], it is evident that He [Himself] is excepted Who does the subjecting of all things to Him.”

Again, the exaltation of Christ is something that has already taken place, and is associated with

His resurrection, not His second coming. Solid and unquestionable affirmations of this fact remove any and every basis for doubt.

- “Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him ” (1 Pet 3:22).

- “ . . . the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion , and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under His feet , and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church” (Eph 1:19-22).

There is no angel in heaven or in hell that is not under the government of Jesus. There is no cherubim or seraphim that is not subject to Him. Arch angels and chief angels are under His control. All of nature is governed by Him. All circumstances are under His command. All men are regulated by Him, and no person is completely free. Life and death are totally in the hands of the exalted Christ. He can summon holy angels to your aid, or command that the devil and his hosts leave you alone.

The significance of the exaltation of Christ is seen in the summation of the extensive commentary on Christ that is found in the book of Hebrews. “Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum : We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man” (Heb 8:2). From this, some preliminary conclusions can be drawn.

- The exaltation of Christ has to do with His High Priesthood.
- Jesus is presently functioning in the work for which His exaltation has suited Him.
- He is now seated at the right hand of the throne of the “majestic [God] in heaven.”

AMPLIFIED

- He is currently ministering in the behalf of redeemed men within the place of ultimate effectiveness – “the true tabernacle which is erected not by man but by the Lord.”

AMPLIFIED

According to our text, Jesus is not waiting to be exalted, He IS exalted. There will never be a time when Jesus is more exalted than He is at this present time. When He is revealed in all of His splendor and glory, we will see what He is presently . We will behold the glory that He presently possesses. That is the meaning of Paul’s statement concerning the showing, or unveiling, of Jesus . “That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: Which in His times He shall show, who IS the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” – “the ONLY Sovereign (Ruler)” AMPLIFIED – (1 Tim 6:14-15).

Whatever men may think about “the antichrist” (1 John 2:18), the “man of sin” and “the son of perdition” (2 Thess 2:3), and “a king of fierce countenance” (Dan 8:23), Jesus IS King over him, or them. No matter how fierce the opponent of the people of God, the exalted Christ is Lord over him. However men may choose to view “the great tribulation” (Matt 24:21), and “those things which are coming upon the earth” (Lk 21:26), the enthroned Jesus is over them all. He can shorten such times “for the elect’s sake” (Matt 24:22). He knows “how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished” (2 Pet 2:9).

We do not preach a Gospel of doom – one that speaks more of the reign of a despot than of the reign of Christ Jesus the Lord. We do not announce a time when things will be hopeless, moving men to fear. We proclaim the same Jesus Peter heralded on the day of Pentecost – one who has been exalted to the throne and rules over all. There are no despots who do not ultimately yield to His word. There are no foes that cannot be totally subdued by a word from Him – by the breath of His mouth, or even by His majestic splendor. There are foes, to be sure, but they are all without question subject to Christ!

HAVING RECEIVED OF THE FATHER

“ 33b . . . and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost . . . ”

The exaltation of “this same Jesus” was not an end of itself. There was a Divinely appointed objective that was being served by the enthronement of “the Man Christ Jesus.” God Himself had purposed the salvation of man, who was languishing in hopelessness, and was “without strength” (Rom 5:6). Given insight into this purpose, Paul wrote, “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace , which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9). That “purpose and grace” is the subject of earnest inquiry among believers. Faith confirms to the heart that this speaks of surety .

Notice the order of Divine activity: first He “saved” us, then He “called” us. The language here is very precise, and, in a rare display of unanimity, all of the versions present this order: “saved,” then “called.” The following versions present this sequence: King James (1611), New King James (1982), American Standard (1901), New American Standard (1977), New International (1984), Revised Standard (1952), New Revised Standard (1989), Christian Standard Bible (1999), Darby (1884), Douay-Rheims (1899), English Revised (1885), English Standard (2001),

There is domain of activity between heaven and earth that is, by Divine intention, ruled by “the prince of the power of the air.” Everything that is required for life and godliness must come down to us from heaven, through that infested domain, and into the realm of the curse.

Geneva (1599), God’s Word (1995), James Murdock Translation (1852), New American Bible (1991), The Net Bible (2004), New Jerusalem Bible (1985), New Living Translation (2004), The Bishop’s New Testament (1595), Revised Webster (1833), Tyndale New Testament (1534), Noah Webster Bible (1833), Young’s Literal Translation (1862), Living Bible (1971), International English (?), Weymouth’s New Testament (1903), International Standard (1967), Williams New Testament (1937), Montgomery New Testament (2001), Analytical Literal Translation (2005), Bishop’s Bible (1568), Good News Bible (1966), Modern King James (1998), Literal Translation of the Holy Bible (1976), Amplified Bible (1965), J.B. Phillips New Testament (1962).

There are thirty-seven translations that are in perfect accord concerning the order of this text – “saved,” then “called.”

The point I am making is that salvation in Christ is sure. It is grounded in a purpose that antedated the creation of the world – an “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11). That is one reason it is referred as an “eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9).

The means by which this salvation is realized must be as sure as the purpose that drives it. In the last analysis this salvation cannot depend upon the ones who are being saved. They are involved, to be sure, and their faith is the appointed means of appropriating the salvation. However, the salvation itself does not rest upon their faith, nor does it depend upon their works. Men are not exalted so they can accomplish this salvation. Jesus was exalted for that purpose! This is a salvation that must be carried out by One to whom every personality but God is subject.

There is domain of activity between heaven and earth that is, by Divine intention, ruled by “the prince of the power of the air” (Eph 2:2). Everything that is required for life and godliness must come down to us from heaven, through that infested domain, and into the realm of the curse. How will that happen if the “Captain” of salvation is not unquestionably over all?

One of the reasons for the failure of the modern church to present an accurate depiction of Jesus is that it has failed to see the seriousness of the human dilemma. Not only is man grossly deficient in every area, he is dominated by the powers of darkness, and there is no way of escape for him within the confines of “this present evil world.” That is why our former condition is so vividly described. “Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: Among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. . . Wherefore remember, that ye being in time past Gentiles in the flesh, who are called Uncircumcision by that which is called the Circumcision in the flesh made by hands; that at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world ” (Eph 2:2-3, 12).

Now, that is a circumstance in which the word of an all powerful Savior who has not only settled our account and defeated our adversary, but is also reigning for the singular purpose of bringing us to glory, is “good news!”

HAVING RECEIVED OF THE FATHER

“ . . . and having received of the Father . . . ” Other versions read, “having received from the Father ,” NKJV “He has received from the Father,” NIV “having received the Father’s word ,” BBE “just as promised , the Father gave Him ,” LIVING and Father has now given . IE

It is a principle in Christ’s dealings with men that what He gives them is what the Father has given Him. When He was with His disciples He said to them, “Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you ” (John 15:15).

THE ARRANGEMENT

Every redemptive benefit comes from the Father, through the Son, and is received by faith. This arrangement reflects the will of God, the mediatorial ministry of Jesus, and the pivotal role of faith. It requires that whatever is received be in strict accord with the “eternal purpose of God.” It also requires that the Lord Jesus be inclined to the individual that is to receive the benefit. The one receiving the benefit must possess faith and be living by it.

A request for something that is not integral to the purpose of God is a pointless request (Eph 1:11; 3:11; 2 Tim 1:9). Something that is not in harmony with the New Covenant, which Jesus is mediating, will not be ministered by Him, for He will not step out of His New Covenant role to bring advantages to men (Heb 8:6; 9:15; 12:24). A person in whom Jesus is not dwelling, and with whom He is not fellowshiping (John 14:21,23; 1 Cor 1:9), cannot receive blessings from God. It simply is not possible. The person who is not believing cannot receive what Christ gives to men from God (Rom 11:20; 2 Thess 2:12; Heb 3:19; 4:6; 11:6).

Why Say These Things?

It might appear as though these observations have little or nothing to do with this text. On the contrary, it is imperative that we make these associations. Our text is a record of the laying of the foundation upon which the church was to be built. It involved a kingdom that God Himself, according to His Word, would “set up” among men (Dan 2:44). It involved a Savior who would bless men in strict accord with the promises of God (Acts 3:26). It is also related to the mediation of a better covenant that was established upon better promises (Heb 8:6). The words delivered by Peter must also be words that the Holy Spirit can use, for the word of mere man is never His “sword” (Eph 6:17). Additionally, what he says must perfectly comport with what Jesus said He was going to do, and what He said His disciples would experience. Peter's interpretation of the events must be precise and in strict comportment with the will and word of the Lord, for God never blesses men by means of a lie, a misrepresentation, or an exaggeration.

As I have emphasized before, the words Peter delivers must not be at variance with any words regarding salvation that will be delivered by others. Nor, indeed, is there such a thing as a valid word pertaining to salvation and its appropriation that contradicts, or is at variance with, the words Peter is now speaking.

THE PROMISE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ . . . the promise of the Holy Ghost . . . ” Other versions read, “the promise of the Holy Spirit,” NKJV “the promised Holy Spirit ,” NIV “word that the Holy Spirit would come ,” BBE “a promise respecting the Holy Spirit,” MRD “the Holy Spirit who was promised ,” NJB “as He had promised , gave Him the Holy Spirit,” NLT “ just as promised, the Father gave Him the authority to send the Holy Spirit,” LIVING and “the promised [blessing which is the] Holy Spirit.” AMPLIFIED

Keep in mind, this is speaking of what Jesus received from the Father following His return to heaven. While He remained with them, He had told His disciples of this promise. “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: . . .” (Luke 24:49).

“I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you ” (John 14:18). “And I will pray [ask NKJV] the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter , that He may abide with you for ever” (John 14:16). “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name . . .” (John 14:26). “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father , even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father . . .” (John 15:26). “Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you ” (John 16:7). “And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father , which, saith he, ye have heard of Me” (Acts 1:4).

There are several things to be noted from these texts. They reflect a Divine precision that acquaints us with the complexities of salvation itself – not complexity in the receiving of salvation, but in its provision and effectiveness.

- Jesus would “send the promise of the Father” to His disciples (Lk 24:49).
- Speaking of the Spirit coming and abiding with His disciples, Jesus said, “I will come unto you” (John 14:18).
- The Father would give them the Spirit – “another Comforter” (John 14:16).
- The Father would send the Spirit in Jesus’ name (John 14:26).
- Jesus would send the Spirit “from the Father” (John 15:26).
- The Spirit would not come unless Jesus went away. Then, Jesus would “send Him” (John 16:7).
- The coming of the Spirit was “the promise of the Father” – a promise delivered to the disciples by Jesus (Acts 1:4).

Among other things, this accentuates the effects of Adam's transgression in particular, and the human condition in general. When sin and death entered into the world (Rom 5:12), God could no longer have direct, or immediate, dealings with humanity. The Holy Spirit could not be “given” until Christ Jesus was “glorified” (John 7:39). There was a moral and spiritual distance between God and man that forbade a direct confrontation with the Living God. That is why God, after being asked to reveal His glory, said to Moses “Thou canst not see My face: for there shall no man see Me, and live” (Ex 33:20). Again it is written, “Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see ” (1 Tim 6:16).

This is also why His “only begotten Son” was required in order for men to become intimately acquainted with God. Therefore it is written, “No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him” (John 1:18).

The Father promised He would give His Holy Spirit, pouring Him forth upon humanity (Isa 44:3; Joel 2:28-29). However, He would do it indirectly – through His Son. He would give that promised Spirit to the Son to give to those whom the Son judged to be proper recipients of the Spirit. This is also involved in “all judgment” being committed to the Son (John 5:22).

As you might expect, men tend to understate the human condition, presenting God as though He was free to have immediate and intimate involvements with humanity. This, however, is not at all the case. No man can come to the Father except through Christ (John 14:6). That not only refers to our initial coming to the Father, but to our post-conversion approach as well. Thus it is written, “Wherefore He is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25). Even after we are justified, God had promised to give His Holy Spirit to men. Jesus had elaborated on that matter, revealing what the Spirit would do. He had also revealed that the Spirit would not be given until He left this world and returned to heaven.

“we shall be saved from wrath through Him” (Rom 5:9). The love of God that believers experience “is in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Rom 8:39). It is “through Him” that we have “access by one Spirit to the Father” (Eph 2:18). It is even “by Him” that we “do believe in God” (1 Pet 1:21).

Therefore, Peter carefully states the case, giving proper glory to God, and anchoring the thoughts of the people to a sure foundation. God had promised to give His Holy Spirit to men. Jesus had elaborated on that matter, revealing what the Spirit would do. He had also revealed that the Spirit would not be given until He left this world and returned to heaven. Now Peter tells the people Jesus has, indeed, left the world, and has been exalted into heaven. Now is the time for the Holy Spirit to be given, and God has given the Holy Spirit to His Son to give to the people. Jesus will now perform His first Kingly act upon earth.

HE HATH SHED FORTH THIS

“ 33c . . . He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear.”

Peter continues to explicate what is occurring before the people. Already he has told them the following.

- He clarified the nature of the speakers. Those who were speaking were not drunk (15).
- He revealed that a prophecy was being fulfilled. They are witnessing the initial fulfillment of Joel’s prophecy (2:16-22).
- He defined what had happened. The Holy Spirit has been poured out (2:17).
- He faced them with the Man they had rejected – a Man “approved of God.” Jesus Christ was approved by God among them by means of miracles, wonders, and signs (2:22).
- He expounded the role of God in Christ’s death. Jesus had been delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God (2:23a).
- He told them what they had actually done. They had taken, crucified, and killed

Jesus by the hands of wicked men (2:23b).

- He announced the Divine reversal of their judgment. God had raised Jesus from the dead. (2:24)

- He announced the fulfillment of David's prophecy. In raising Jesus from the dead, one of David's key prophecies was fulfilled (2:24-28).

- He announced Christ's superiority over death. It was not possible for the pains of death to hold Jesus (2:24).

- He expounded a prophecy a reigning Messiah. David spoke of the resurrection of Christ when he referred to God raising Christ to sit on his throne (2:30).

- He declared they were eye witnesses. Peter and those with him were witnesses of the resurrected Christ (2:32).

- He affirmed that Jesus had been exalted by God. Jesus had been exalted to the right hand of God (2:33a).

- He announced that Jesus had received the Spirit to dispense. Jesus had received the promised Holy Spirit from the Father (2:33b).

Now Peter will reveal what Jesus is doing from the Father's right hand – now that He has received the promised Spirit from the Father.

HE HATH SHED FORTH THIS

“ . . . He hath shed forth this . . . ” Other versions read, “He poured out this,” NKJV “He has poured forth this,” NASB “and has poured out,” NIV “He has sent this thing,” BBE “hath sent this gift,” MRD “and poured it forth,” NAB “the outpouring of that Spirit,” NJB “to pour out upon us,” NLT “He was shedding forth this,” YLT “Jesus poured out this,” IE and “He has made this outpouring.” AMPLIFIED

God had promised HE would pour forth His Spirit (Joel 2:28-29), but He did it through the exalted Jesus whom they took, crucified, and killed. They perceived “Jesus of Nazareth” as unworthy to live, but God the Father saw Him as worthy to impart life. They thought him unfit to minister, but God saw Him as the ultimate One to minister. They saw no advantage in the presence of Jesus, but God gave the ultimate advantage through Him.

Now, for the first time in history, the Holy Spirit was being poured forth indiscriminately – on male and female: “all flesh.” As a result, there was a profuse declaration of “the wonderful works of God,” an inspired interpretation of the events that were occurring, and an exposition of the death, burial, and resurrection of “Jesus of Nazareth.”

With this lavish and unprecedented outpouring of the Holy Spirit, men were speaking with clarity, and all of the people understood what they were saying. None of the people fell to the ground “under the power” of the Holy Spirit. No one lapsed into a state of unconsciousness. There is no record of strange fleshly sensations. While there was a obvious excitement among the people, it was all harnessed for the glory of God, being characterized by sanctified intelligence, with lucidity of thought and clarity of speech.

Rather than the pouring forth of the Spirit overpowering the people, causing them to act irrationally or without the control of their faculties, it sanctified their expressive capabilities. That is precisely why Peter will draw the attention of His listeners to what they are beholding. Something of inestimable profit will be realized on this occasion.

Similar Language

Rather than the pouring forth of the Spirit overpowering the people, causing them to act irrationally or without the control of their faculties, it sanctified their expressive capabilities. That is precisely why Peter will draw the attention of His listeners to what they are beholding. Something of inestimable profit will be realized on this occasion.

Further clarifying the shedding forth of the Holy Spirit, Paul refers to it in his letter to Titus. This letter was written approximately thirty-five years after the day of Pentecost, during which Peter delivered the words of our text. Here is what Paul wrote. “But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior; that being justified by His grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life” (Titus 3:4-7). Notice that the Holy Spirit was “shed on us abundantly.” Other versions read, “poured out on us abundantly,” NKJV “poured out upon us richly,” NASB “poured on us generously,” NIV “gave us freely,” BBE “poured a generous amount of,” GWN “poured out on us in full measure,” NET “Poured out upon us with wonderful fullness,” LIVING and “abundantly poured out upon us.” WILLIAMS

The words of our text – “shed forth” – are a translation of the Greek word evxe,ceen (ek-kheen), the exact word that is used in Titus 3:6. The Titus text adds the word “abundantly” (from plousi,wj), which means “richly, in an abundant way,” FRIBERG “in full measure,” UBS and “in large amount, in abundance, rich, richly.” LOUW-NIDA There can be no question that Paul is writing about the same outpouring that Joel prophesied, and Peter confirmed was happening on the day of Pentecost. It is inconceivable that Paul would use precisely the same language, even adding a superlative, of a lesser kind of outpouring.

However, we are not shut up to our own conclusions on this matter. Paul makes associations with this abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit that confirm it is related to salvation, and not an apostolic epoch alone.

- It is said you have been conferred upon those who were formerly “foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving diverse lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another” – the general condition of all unregenerate souls (Tit 3:3).
- It is associated with the appearance, or experience, of “the kindness and love of God” (Tit 3:4).
- It is related to being saved, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to God’s mercy (Tit 3:5a).
- It is connected with being “saved by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Spirit” (Tit 3:5b).
- The Spirit was “shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior,” which perfectly correlates with Peter saying Jesus had “shed forth this” (Tit 3:6).
- The pouring forth of the Spirit is associated with being “justified by grace” (Tit 3:7a).
- It is related men being “made heirs according to the hope of eternal life” (Tit 3:7b).

There is no possible way that Peter could be referring to a uniquely apostolic experience. Such a view contradicts Joel’s prophecy. It also negates the explanation of Peter, and is in conflict with the teaching of Paul. Those who take this view do so only to justify their stilted and traditional theology. Those who take it upon themselves to attach sectarian meanings to Scripture stand in an extremely perilous position.

WHICH YE NOW SEE AND HEAR

“. . . which ye now see and hear.” Other versions read, “which you both see and hear,” NASB “what you now see and hear,” NIV “which now you see and have knowledge of,” BBE “behold and hear,” DARBY “you yourselves are seeing and hearing,” ESV “just as you see and hear today,” NLT and “with the results you are seeing and hearing today.” LIVING

And, what were the people seeing? They were beholding people under the influence of the Holy Spirit, yet in possession of all of their anointed faculties. They were seeing men and women prophesying, in fulfillment of Joel’s prophesy. They were witnessing people speaking with boldness about a man that this very audience had rejected. They were witnesses to a group of people who were perfectly united, having no variance among them. They may also have witnessed tongues of fire resting upon the heads of all who spoke, without consuming or harming them.

Ponder what the people were hearing. They had heard a proclamation of the “wonderful works of God.” They had heard this proclamation in their own native languages, spoken by Galileans, who had no natural or learned expertise at all in those languages. They had heard an explanation of what they were seeing. A fulfillment of the prophecy of Joel was declared to them, as well as the fulfillment of the prophecy of David. Their ears had heard a detailed exposition of the death of Christ, His activity while His body remained in the tomb, and of His resurrection from the dead. The enthronement of Jesus had been announced in their ears. And now, they are hearing that the exalted Christ is the One who has caused all of this extraordinary phenomenon – He has shed forth the Holy Spirit “on all flesh.”

DAVID IS NOT ASCENDED

“34a For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord”

The truth is not illogical, even though, strictly speaking, it has a logic of its own. There is no contradiction within the fabric of the truth itself – no weakness that can cause the whole of truth itself to collapse. No amount of human reasoning can weaken the structure of the truth, or justify any degree of doubt or unbelief. Therefore, Peter proceeds to confirm the truth of Christ’s exaltation, showing that although appeared as though David was speaking of himself, he was not.

DAVID IS NOT ASCENDED INTO THE HEAVENS

“For David is not ascended into the heavens . . .” Other versions read, “David did not ascend to heaven,” NIV “For David has not gone up into heaven,” BBE “For it was not David who ascended into the heavens,” CSB “David didn’t go up to heaven,” GWN “For David himself never went up to heaven,” NJB “No, David . . . never ascended into the skies,” LIVING and “David never ascended into heaven.” PHILLIPS

Christ’s Ascension

By saying “David is not ascended,” Peter is affirming that Jesus IS ascended into heaven, from which He has “shed forth” the Holy Spirit, thus fulfilling the 110 th Psalm. The ascension of Jesus is a critical facet of the Gospel, and was elsewhere foretold by the Psalmist. “Thou hast ascended on high, thou hast led captivity captive: thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the rebellious also, that the LORD God might dwell among them” (Psa 68:18; Eph 4:8-

The truth is not illogical, even though, strictly speaking, it has a logic of its own. There is no contradiction within the fabric of the truth itself – no weakness that can cause the whole of truth itself to collapse. No amount of human reasoning can weaken the structure of the truth, or justify any degree of doubt or unbelief.

10). Mark writes that Jesus “was received up into heaven” (Mk 16:19). Luke writes that Jesus “was parted from them and carried up into heaven” (Lk 24:51), and that “He was taken up” (Acts 1:9). Paul writes that “He that descended (into the lower parts of the earth 9) is the same also that ascended far above all heavens, that He might fill all things” (Eph 4:9-10). Paul also writes that Jesus was “received up into glory” (1 Tim 3:16). It is also written that Jesus “passed into the heavens” (Heb 4:14), and “entered... into heaven itself” (Heb 9:24).

It is from this exalted position that Jesus dispensed the Holy Spirit, pouring Him forth “on all flesh,” as Joel prophesied He would. Jesus did not shed forth the Holy Spirit while upon the earth. This had to be done from heaven. With all of the marvelous miracles He wrought, He Himself never did fill anyone with the Holy Spirit. John the Baptist was “filled with the Holy Spirit, even from the mother’s womb” (Lk 1:15). Elizabeth was “filled with the Holy Spirit” when she confronted Mary, who came to her after receiving the word that she would bear the Son of God (Lk 1:41).

Zechariah, father of John the Baptist, was “filled with the Holy Spirit” when he prophesied after John was born (Lk 1:67). However, in all of Christ’s ministry, only He was said to be “full of the Holy Spirit” (Lk 4:1). He Himself declared that the effusion of the Spirit would come after He was glorified: “If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified)” (John 7:37-39).

Now, however, Jesus IS glorified, having ascended “up where He was before” (John 6:62). Fulfilling His own word, He went “unto Him that sent” Him (John 7:33; 16:5). And again, “I go unto My Father” (John 14:12; 16:16,28). Referring to His ascension, Jesus prayed to the Father on the eve of His betrayal, “And now come I to Thee” (John 17:13). Following His resurrection Jesus said to Mary Magdalene, “I ascend unto My Father, and your Father; and to My God, and your God” (John 20:17).

The essentiality of the ascension of Christ will be confirmed by Peter’s words.

Two Other Ascensions

In addition to Jesus, there have been two men who did ascend “into the heavens.” Prior to the Law, Enoch “was translated that he should not see death” (Heb 11:5), FOR “God took him” (Gen 5:24). During the administration of the Law, “Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven” (2 Kgs 2:11). However, neither of these men “descended” into “the heart of the earth” as did Jesus. The souls of these two men did not enter into Hades prior to their ascension, nor their bodies enter the grave. Both of those experiences, were realized by “Jesus of Nazareth” before His ascension.

There are three primary periods of time associated with this world. The time before the Law, the time during the Law, and the time after the Law. In all three periods, life after death was confirmed by the bodily ascension of a man into the heavens. The latter, the ascension of Christ, was the greater, because it involved His soul returning from Hades, and His body coming out of the grave. During all three periods it was also confirmed that this world was not the primary place, and death was not man’s ultimate destiny.

Now, Peter refers to something that is obvious, showing that David was not giving a personal testimony when he spoke of the soul not being left in Hades, and the body not seeing corruption. He has already drawn attention to this fact by reminding the people that David’s sepulcher was still with them – that is, that his body remained in the grave, substantiating that his soul was still abiding in Hades, for the soul only leaves Hades when it is going to be united with its resurrected body.

HE SAITH HIMSELF

“ . . . but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord . . .” Other versions read, “but he says himself: 'The LORD said to my Lord,' NKJV “The Lord declared to my Lord ,” NJB and “ God spoke to my Lord, the Messiah , and said to Him.” LIVING

Notice how Peter continues to rivet the thinking of the people to the Scriptures. He does not demand that the people believe him because he is an apostle – although it was right for the people to do so, for Jesus sent Peter. He does not depend upon oratorical or persuasive skills, but on the “sword of the Spirit.” Jesus had said when the Spirit came, He would “reprove,” or “convince” men. If ever there were men who needed to be reproved, it was those now standing before Peter. They had taken, crucified, and killed the Man God had clearly approved before them. However, the Spirit will not use the wisdom of men to convict “the world.” He will not employ natural aptitude for this great work. He will use “words” – words that are characterized by “spirit” and “life” (John 6:63). He will work through men who are able to handle “accurately the word of truth” NASB (2 Tim 2:15).

Having “the Spirit of prophecy,” David spoke of the coming Messiah. He knew the appointed Savior would possess all authority and power, and thus spoke of Him as being “equal with the Father” (John 5:18; Phil 2:7) – i.e., “Lord.”

“The Lord said to my Lord”

Although the Messiah had not yet been born, David saw Him as his own “Lord.” By faith he subjected himself to Him, anticipating His coming.

Here there is a play on words: “ THE Lord” versus “ MY Lord.” “ The Lord” is God the Father, and “ my Lord” is the exalted Christ. Both are properly called “Lord,” and both are Divine. In another place, the Father addresses the exalted Son as “God.” “But unto the Son He saith, Thy throne, O God , is for ever and ever: a scepter of righteousness is the scepter of Thy kingdom” (Heb 1:8). There can be no higher assessment of the Savior of the world – “Lord” and “God.” You may recall that, upon beholding the risen Jesus, Thomas exclaimed, “My Lord and my God!” (John 20:28). Rather than rebuking Thomas, Jesus affirmed that he, upon seeing, had believed the truth. While yet among us, Jesus Himself declared, “That all men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father . He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him” (John 5:23).

David’s confession fulfills the word spoken by Paul: “Therefore I make known to you that no one speaking by the Spirit of God calls Jesus accursed, and no one can say that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit” (1 Cor 12:3). In this word David acknowledges that He is an “Israelite indeed” (John 1:47), and “a Jew, which is one inwardly” (Rom 2:29). He saw the promise and embraced it!

The quotation is taken from the 110 th Psalm, one of the great Messianic prophecies. “The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool” (Psa 110:1). In this Psalm, the coming Christ is made known.

- He is the “rod” of God’s “strength,” proceeding forth to rule over all in the behalf of the Father (110:2a).
- His Kingdom is one in which He rules “in the midst” of His enemies, bringing sons to glory from among those long enslaved to the devil (110:2b).
- The people would “be willing” in the day, or time, of His power (110:3).
- The Father declared Him to be a “priest forever after the order of Melchizedec” – i.e., a priest that is also a King (110:4; Gen 14:18).

- He would ultimately decimate all of His enemies, and they would publicly and obviously become His footstool (110:5-7).

During His earthly ministry the Lord Jesus referred to the prophecy to which Peter now refers. Once, when “the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he?” Knowing the text, of Scripture, but only in a surface sense, “They say unto him, The son of David.” With a wisdom that stopped their mouths Jesus replied, “How then doth David in spirit call Him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on My right hand, till I make Thine enemies Thy footstool? If David then call Him Lord, how is He his son?” (Mat 22:41-45). The question was so powerful that it is written, “And no man was able to answer Him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask Him any more questions” (Matt 22:46). Obviously, a lot of truth is packed into that passage.

Of course, Jesus was “the Son of David” according to the flesh, and is so called (Matt 1:1). This referred to His kingly nature and ministry, fulfilling the promise God made to David. However, Jesus is preeminently “the Son of God,” and therefore David called Him “Lord.”

SIT ON MY RIGHT HAND

“ 34b Sit Thou on My right hand...”

Peter continues his exposition of the exaltation of Jesus – something that was essential to the saving of men. Men can only be delivered from this present evil world, reconciled to God, and gain access to the Father by a Savior who is enthroned in glory.

SIT THOU

“Sit Thou . . .” Other versions read, “Sit at ,” NKJV “Be seated ,” BBE “Take,” GWN and “take Your seat .” NJB

In this text, “sitting” is not a posture of rest, but of reign. It is not the language of inactivity, but of receiving the reins of Divine government. Having completed His work on earth, Jesus now commences His work in heaven. His work on earth would be the foundation, or basis, for His work in heaven, and His work in heaven would be the outcome of His work on earth. Thus we read, “Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person, and upholding all things by the word of His power, when He had by Himself purged our sins, sat down . . .” (Heb 1:3). Notice the remarkably glorious things that are associated with Christ sitting down. All of them pertain to salvation.

Being “the brightness” of God’s glory – that is, the fullest and most complete revelation of that glory.

- Being the “express image” of God’s Person – that is, the most exact depiction of who God is, and of His will, or “eternal purpose.”
- Total control of everything that has been created – “upholding [sustaining] all things by the word of His power.”
- By Himself, without any aid from any created personality, purging our sins.

Before Jesus could be seated, He had to “finish” the work the Father gave Him to do (John 4:34; 17:4). Once the work of taking away the sins of the world was completed, the accuser of the brethren could be cast down, principalities and powers spoiled, and the Law terminated as a means to righteousness (Rev 12:10; Col 2:15; Rom 10:4). Now men could be reconciled, and peace could be made between men and God (Col 1:20-21). Once seated, He must be invested with “all power in heaven and earth,” for the work of salvation was an aggressive one.

Thus, being fully qualified by both His nature and His accomplishments, Jesus “sits” upon the throne, taking charge of the Kingdom. Speaking of being seated, Jesus said to the church in Laodicea, “To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with Me in My throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with My Father in His throne ” (Rev 3:21).

Thus, being fully qualified by both His nature and His accomplishments, Jesus “sits” upon the throne, taking charge of the Kingdom.

When Pharaoh ruled Egypt, it is said that he “ sat on his throne” (Ex 12:29). When Solomon assumed the rule, it is written that he “ sat upon the throne of his father David” (1 Kgs 2:12). Previously Peter had made a point of this, declaring, “Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell, neither his flesh did see corruption” (Acts 2:30-31). Therefore, Peter announces that the reign of the Messiah has begun.

ON MY RIGHT HAND

“ . . . on My right hand . . .” Other versions read, “My highest position of power,” GWN “here in honor beside Me,” LIVING “at My right side ,” IE and “at My right hand and share My throne .”
AMPLIFIED

The “right hand” of God is the place of both favor and rule. Much is made of Jesus being on the right hand of God.

- He was received in heaven and “sat on the right hand of God” (Mk 16:19).
- When Stephen was dying, he “saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God” (Acts 7:55).
- It is from “ the right hand of God” that Jesus is making intercession “for us” (Rom 8:34).
- Jesus, being at God’s “own right hand ,” is described as “ Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come” (Eph 1:21).
- The “things which are above,” which are to be fervently sought, are said to be “where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1).
- The summation of the message of the book of Hebrews is that “We have such an High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens” (Heb 8:1).
- The “Author and Finisher of our faith” is described as being “set down at the right hand of the throne of God” (Heb 12:2).
- The preeminence of this position is described by Peter: “Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:22).

The “right hand of God” is a working and ruling hand, representative of His great power. It is associated with the giving of the Law, saving strength, purchase, and victory (Deut 33:2; Psa 20:6; Psa 78:54; 98:1). Jesus is sitting there because this is the kind of power that is required to bring many sons to glory (Heb 2:10). Our salvation demands a powerful and active Savior.

UNTIL I MAKE THY ENEMIES THY FOOTSTOOL

“ 35 Until I make Thy foes Thy footstool.”

Salvation is being accomplished in the midst of God's enemies. As it is written of the Christ, "rule Thou in the midst of Thine enemies" (Psa 110:2). He is bringing "many sons to glory" in the capacity of "the Governor among the nations" (Psa 22:28). The 22 nd Psalm is also a Messianic Psalm.

While men remain in "this present evil world," they are being readied for glory. Here, while they are "absent from the Lord," they are being "changed from glory unto glory" (2 Cor 3:18). En route to the promised land, they must "resist the devil" (1 Pet 5:8-9), and wrestle "against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Eph 6:12). They must take up their cross (Mk 10:21), crucify the flesh (Gal 5:24), deny themselves (Matt 16:24), mortify their members that are upon the earth (Col 3:5), and work out their own salvation with fear and trembling (Phil 2:12). They must run the race that has been set before them (Heb 12:1-2), deny "ungodliness and worldly lusts," and learn to live "soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world" (Tit 2:11-12). They must learn to "fight the good fight of faith," and "lay hold on eternal life" (1 Tim 6:12). They are required to learn how to "use" the world, while not abusing it (1 Cor 7:31). They must master the art of looking (Tit 2:13; Heb 12:2; 12:15; 2 Pet 3:12), seeking (Rom 2:7; Col 3:1; Heb 13:14; 1 Pet 3:11), and waiting (Rom 8:23; Gal 5:5; 1 Thess 1:10; 2 Thess 3:5).

All of this presumes we are facing hostility, opposition, and an aggressive foe. That is the nature of salvation – it is being wrought in an arena of conflict. For this reason, we need a King that is reigning, who has un questionable power and authority. It must be a King to whom the foe consistently yields, and whose will cannot be effectively contested. If we do not have such a King and Leader, we will not be able to be saved!

UNTIL

"Until . . ." Other versions read, "Til," NKJV

The word "until" speaks of a limitation in time – a span that lies between the commencement of an activity and its conclusion. In this case, it limits the duration of Christ being seated at the right hand of God in His mediatorial and intercessory capacities.

A few examples of the use of the word "until" will confirm the nature of its use in Scripture.

- "And he sent forth a raven, which went forth to and fro, UNTIL the waters were dried up from off the earth" (Gen 8:7).
- "And Jacob was left alone; and there wrestled a man with him UNTIL the breaking of the day" (Gen 32:24).
- "And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, UNTIL they were finished" (Deut 31:24).
- "Be merciful unto me, O God, be merciful unto me: for my soul trusteth in thee: yea, in the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge, UNTIL these calamities be overpast" (Psa 57:1).
- "He sent a man before them, even Joseph, who was sold for a servant: Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron: UNTIL the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him" (Psa 105:17-19).
- "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, UNTIL the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Rom 11:25).
- "Which is the earnest of our inheritance UNTIL the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory” (Eph 1:14).

- “That thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, UNTIL the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Tim 6:14).

Jesus being seated at the right hand of God denoted the commencement of His reign and present ministry. His reign is in order to the bringing of many sons to glory. His ministry relates to His mediation of the New Covenant and His intercession for the saints.

Rather than Christ’s “reign” focusing on the subjugation of His enemies, its intent is to take out of the world a people for His name, wash, sanctify, and justify them, and bring them to glory, perfecting them on the way. That is the purpose that is being fulfilled in Him. In this work, rather than pummeling His enemies to the ground, He is reigning “in the midst of them,” and there is not a thing they can do about it.

There is an appointed duration of Christ’s present ministry. His mediation of the New Covenant is not intended to be an eternal one, but is adapted to the circumstance of the saints being in a fallen and hostile world. Neither, indeed, is His present intercessory work intended to last forever. It is also required because the sons of God are currently in a “coming” posture (Heb 7:25), living by faith, resisting their foes, and seeking to lay hold on eternal life (James 4:7; 1 Tim 6:12). However, as long as this world remains, believers are “in the body,” and the devil is moving about, Jesus must remain at the right hand of God. Salvation itself requires that He do so.

I MAKE THY FOES THY FOOTSTOOL

“ . . . I make Thy foes Thy footstool.” Other versions read, “ I make Your enemies Your footstool,” NKJV “I make Thine enemies a footstool for Your feet,” NASB “ I put all those who are against you under your feet,” BBE “ I have put thine enemies to be the footstool of thy feet,” DARBY “ I put your enemies under your control,” MRD “ I humble your enemies, making them a footstool under your feet,” NLT and “I bring Your enemies into complete subjection.” LIVING

Notice that Jesus Himself does not subdue His enemies. The Father does so. This is not owing to any weakness on the part of Jesus, for He presently possesses “all power in heaven and earth” (Matt 28:18), and is fully equal to any work He has been given to do. That work, however, does not have to do with the subjugation of hostile forces. In His death He has already destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14) and plundered principalities and power, making a public display of them (Col 2:15). All of that, however, was in order to the salvation of men. John’s apocalyptic Gospel associates the overthrow of Satan with the coming of salvation. “And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him. And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ : for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night” (Rev 12:7-10).

Upon the expulsion of Satan and his angels from heaven, salvation, strength, the kingdom of God, and the power of Christ came within the access of men. This is because sin had been removed, and a reconciliation had been accomplished. Satan cannot remain in his accusatory capacity under such circumstances.

Upon the expulsion of Satan and his angels from heaven, salvation, strength, the kingdom of God, and the power of Christ came within the access of men. This is because sin had been removed, and a reconciliation had been accomplished. Satan cannot remain in his accusatory capacity under such circumstances.

As long as sin was not removed, there was a basis for the accusations of the devil. Once sin was removed, however, that basis was destroyed, and therefore the accuser was thrown out of heaven. Now an Intercessor is speaking for the saints, for their record has been cleared of guilt.

A Future Revelation

At the present time, Jesus has been “highly exalted,” and “angels and authorities and powers” have been “made subject to Him” (Phil 2:9; 1 Pet 3:22). The saints are presently “the sons of God” (1 John 3:1-2), and have been “justified from all things” (Acts 13:39). Satan has really been “destroyed” (Heb 2:14), “principalities and powers” spoiled (Col 2:15), and captivity “led captive” (Eph 4:8). However, for men, these things are only apprehended by faith. They have not yet been made known openly.

Notwithstanding, there is a time appointed when these realities will be fully revealed, and there will be no question about their reality.

- Jesus will be revealed. “. . . our Lord Jesus Christ: Which in His times He shall show , who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:14-15). “Behold, He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him , and they also which pierced Him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Even so, Amen” (Rev 1:7).

- The children of God will be revealed. “ When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory” (Col 3:4). “For the earnest expectation of the creature waiteth for the manifestation of the sons of God ” (Rom 8:19). “Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him ; for we shall see Him as He is” (1 John 3:2).

- The defeated status of Jesus’ foes will be revealed. “The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou at my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool” (Psa 110:1). “ Until I make thy foes thy footstool” (Acts 2:35). “But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?” (Heb 1:13).

Being made Christ’s footstool speaks of a public display. Jesus is presently seated at the right hand of God, waiting expectantly for this to take place. As it is written, “But this Man, after He had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God; From henceforth expecting till His enemies be made His footstool” (Heb 10:12-13). This involves the fulfilment of Daniel’s prophecy of His kingdom: “but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever” (Dan 2:44).

That Christ’s present sitting posture is one of reigning is confirmed by Paul’s teaching. “Then cometh the end, when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power. For He must reign, till He hath put all enemies under His feet . The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death” (1 Cor 15:24-26).

Presently Christ’s reign is one in which His enemies are being continually frustrated. Daily there are people being delivered from the clutches of Satan and the guilt and power of sin. For the informed ones, this confirms that a devastating blow has already been struck to the powers of darkness, together with their “prince” (Eph 2:2).

When His Enemies Become His Footstool

Jesus’ “enemies” will be made His “footstool” when they are publicly humiliated like the “five kings of the Amorites” in the days of Joshua. It is written of these five kings, “Therefore the five kings of the Amorites, the king of Jerusalem, the king of Hebron, the king of Jarmuth, the king of Lachish, the king of Eglon, gathered themselves together, and went up, they and all their hosts, and encamped before Gibeon, and made war against it” (Josh 10:5). The men of Gibeon quickly sent to Joshua saying, “Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us: for all the kings of the Amorites that dwell in the mountains are gathered together against us” (Josh 10:6). As Joshua ascended from Gilgal, together with “all the people of war” and “all the might men of valor,” the Lord spoke to him: “Fear them not: for I have delivered them into thine hand; there shall not a man of them stand before thee” (Josh 10:8). The kings were defeated, and their armies killed “with a great slaughter.” As the foe ran from Joshua, the Lord “cast down great stones from heaven,” so that “they were more which died with hailstones than they whom the children of Israel slew with the sword” (Josh 10:11). It was on this occasion that the sun stood still in the heavens for a whole day as the Lord mightily delivered the enemies of the Lord into the hands of Joshua and his army (Josh 10:12-13). Of that occasion it is written, “And there was no day like that before it or after it, that the LORD hearkened unto the voice of a man: for the LORD fought for Israel” (Josh 10:14).

During this whole affair, the five kings of the Amorites fled, hiding themselves “in a cave in Makkedah.” When that was reported to Joshua, he had stones rolled before the mouth of the cave, confining the kings to that place. After the battle was over, Joshua returned to that cave and said, “Open the mouth of the cave, and bring out those five kings unto me out of the cave” (Josh 10:22). When the kings were brought out, Joshua called to the captains of the men of war and said, “Come near, put your feet upon the necks of these kings. And they came near, and put their feet upon the necks of them” (Josh 10:24). When they had done so Joshua continued, “Fear not, nor be dismayed, be strong and of good courage: for thus shall the LORD do to all your enemies against whom ye fight” (Josh 10:25). Then the kings were slain and hanged “on five trees” in public disgrace. THE ENEMIES OF THE PEOPLE OF GOD HAD BECOME THEIR FOOTSTOOL!

There is an appointed day when the enemies of Christ will all be brought forth. They will stand in shame before an assembled universe. Jesus will call for the saints, which are His body, to come forth and put their feet upon the necks of these enemies. At the time the saying will be fulfilled, “And the God of peace shall bruise Satan under your feet shortly” (Rom 16:20). That will be the ultimate fulfillment of the Lord making Christ’s enemies His footstool, and will be the prelude for them all being cast into the lake of fire – the devil, his chief workers, and all who followed them (Rev 19:20; 10:10,14-15).

DO NOT MISS THE MEANING

In quoting this prophecy of David, Peter is at variance with great bodies of modern theology. Some have Jesus leaving the right hand to secretly rapture the church, returning to heaven for a period of time while all havoc breaks out upon the earth. Then they have Him returning to engage in great battle which will consummate in the overthrow of “the Antichrist” and his followers. Then they have Him reigning in Jerusalem for a thousand years. All of this, if true, must occur WITHOUT Jesus being at the right hand of God.

That will be the ultimate fulfillment of the Lord making Christ’s enemies His footstool, and will be the prelude for them all being cast into the lake of fire – the devil, his chief workers, and all who followed them.

However, what must we do with these word from the Father Himself? “Sit thou on My right hand, until I make Thy foes Thy footstool” (Psa 110:1). This certainly is a valid word. Jesus quoted it (Matt 22:44; Mk 12:36; Lk 20:42-43). Peter quoted it in our text (Acts 2:34-35). Paul affirms that this word was never said to any angel: “But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool?” (Heb 1:13). He also affirms that Jesus is presently awaiting the fulfillment of this word: “But this Man, after He had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God; from henceforth expecting till His enemies be made His footstool” (Heb 10:12-13). Note, He is not awaiting the time when He Himself will make His enemies His footstool, but when they will be “MADE His footstool.”

The Father has told Him to remain seated at His right hand UNTIL the time comes when His enemies are made His footstool – brought forward and shown to be utterly defeated, humiliated, and frustrated in all of their wicked intentions.

The Truth Seen In The High Priesthood

The truth of Jesus being seated at the right hand of God “until” a specified time was foreshadowed in the High Priesthood under the Law. This had particular regard to the day of atonement, when the High Priest went into the Most Holy place to appear before God. This had particular regard to atonement: “And the LORD said unto Moses, Speak unto Aaron thy brother, that he come not at all times into the holy place within the veil before the mercy seat, which is upon the ark; that he die not: for I will appear in the cloud upon the mercy seat. Thus shall Aaron come into the holy place: with a young bullock for a sin offering, and a ram for a burnt offering . . . And this shall be an everlasting statute unto you, to make an atonement for the children of Israel for all their sins once a year. And he did as the LORD commanded Moses” (Lev 16:2-20, 34).

The atonement was made while the High Priest was in the Most Holy place, and ended when He came out of it.

“And there shall be no man in the tabernacle of the congregation when he goeth in to make an atonement in the holy place, until he come out, and have made an atonement for himself, and for his household, and for all the congregation of Israel” (Lev 16:17).

Confirming that this did depict the present ministry of Jesus, the book of Hebrews refers to this occasion. “But into the second went the high priest alone once every year, not without blood, which he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people” (Heb 9:7). “Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others” (Heb 9:25). “But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year” (Heb 10:3).

When Jesus descends “from heaven” (1 Thess 4:16), and is “revealed from heaven” (2 Thess 1:7), He shall leave His present position. That is a position of mediation and intercession. When He leaves, just as surely as the work of the High Priest had been completed within the Most Holy Place, so the mediatorial reign of Jesus shall be concluded. “The day of salvation” will come to a close. There will be no more distribution of the oil of the Spirit (Matt 25:8). No more preachers will be “sent” (Rom 10:15). No more repentance will be given (Acts 5:31).

There will be no more battles to fight – particularly by Jesus. He has already won all of His battles, defeating the foe in His death, when He was “crucified through weakness” (2 Cor 13:4; Heb 2:14; Col 2:15). It only remains for Jesus to be shown, or manifested, in all of His glory. That appearance itself will destroy His enemies. As it is written of Satan’s primary worker, “And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders” (2 Thess 2:8-9). Until this time, Jesus will remain at the right hand of God, bringing many sons to glory.

LET ALL THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL KNOW

“ 36a Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly . . . ”

We are beholding an example of being “filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). Not only does Peter know what facts to accentuate, he also knows how to use them to build sound conclusions and promote holy reasoning.

THEREFORE

“Therefore . . .” Other versions read, “For this reason,” BBE “So let,” NLT “So , therefore,” TNT and “Now , therefore.” PHILLIPS

This is the day of frothy choruses with simplistic lyrics and endless repetition. This is the kind of fare the emotion loves. However, those with productive minds find such things highly offensive, and unbecoming of anything associated with the God of heaven.

The word “therefore” takes two related thoughts, ties them together, and reasons upon the basis of the conclusion to which they lead. This requires the sanctified use of the mind, as compared with moving men to a conclusion or action based upon the response of emotion. Those who seek to force a favorable response by merely emotional entreaty are actually appealing to the weakest part of the human constitution. The emotion is part of the most erratic and unpredictable makeup. Matters of eternal consequence cannot be decided within such boundaries. Therefore, Peter, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, will summon his listeners into the domain of concentrated thought, contemplation, and cognition.

In the modern church, this approach is not at all common. This is the day of frothy choruses with simplistic lyrics and endless repetition. This is the kind of fare the emotion loves. However, those with productive minds find such things highly offensive, and unbecoming of anything associated with the God of heaven. When sophists tell us how wonderful such approaches are, and how much they have personally gained from them, we should ignore what they say. Let them take the words of Moses, the Prophets, John the Baptist, Jesus, and the Apostles into their mouths, and tell us how simple and repetitious they are!

LET ALL THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL KNOW

“ . . . let all the house of Israel know . . . ” Other versions read, “let all Israel be assured,” NIV “let the entire house of Israel know,” NRSV “Let the whole house of Israel . . . know,” DARBY “All the people of Israel should know ,” GWN “the whole House of Israel can be,” NJB “let everyone in Israel know,” NLT “I . . . state to everyone in Israel,” LIVING “let the entire house of Israel understand ,” ISV “let all the descendants of Israel understand,” WILLIAMS “let the whole house of Israel recognize ,” AMPLIFIED and “the whole nation of Israel must know .” PHILLIPS

All the House of Israel

Peter’s word is not for the religious leaders, but for “ all the house of Israel.” It is not for the men or the women, but for “ all the house of Israel.” This is not a word for the young people, or old people, or married, or singles, but for “ all the house of Israel.” If the people thought of themselves primarily as male, or female, or young, or old, now they are to think of themselves as members of “ all the house of Israel” – the covenanted people of God.

This is something that a covenant people should know. It is something of which those who are associated with the God of heaven should be aware.

In our time, valid doctrine pertains to everyone who is in Christ Jesus. There is not a separate doctrine for the doctors of the Law, and another for the common people. We have no idea about the social makeup of the audience Peter is addressing – age, gender, or social status. Truth does not come packaged for special groups. What is more, when men seek to tailor the truth for special groups it is at the expense of moral and spiritual power. This is because truth is presented with two fundamental groups in mind: the alienated and the reconciled, the saved and the lost, those who are at peace with God and those who are not. When you attempt and make the truth more versatile than that, you are walking in a forbidden area. In the case of Peter, he is speaking to those who are alienated from the life of God.

ASSUREDLY

“ . . . assuredly . . . ” Other versions read, “or certain ,” NASB “be assured,” NIV “with certainty ,” NRSV “most certainly ,” DOUAY “ beyond a doubt ,” GWN “for a surety ,” TNT “ clearly state,” LIVING “ beyond all doubt and acknowledge assuredly,” AMPLIFIED and “beyond the shadow of a doubt .” PHILLIPS

To know something “assuredly” is to have no doubts about it. This word is translated from a word that means, “safely (so as to prevent escape), assuredly, THAYER “knowing something beyond doubt, for sure, certainly,” FRIBERG and “securely, steadfastly, unshaken in purpose, assuredly, knowing.” LEH

What Is Involved

There are certain things that characterize redemptive truth – that is, “the truth of the Gospel” (Gal 2:5,14; Eph 1:13; Col 1:5).

Truth – Gospel truth – is like a two-sided coin. By its very nature, it is not neutral, and thus it cannot be ignored with impunity, or embraced without being blessed. Because it is foundational, it will support the person who embraces it. Because it is ultimate reality, it is characterized by unwavering certainty, or sureness. For that reason faith can confidently rest upon it, bringing assurance and stability to the soul. For those who “know the truth,” there is freedom from the enslavement of sin (John 8:32). To such it may be said, “ye heard the word of truth, the Gospel of your salvation” (Eph 1:13). These people become “partakers of His promise in Christ by the Gospel” (Eph 3:6).

However, that is not all there is to “the truth of the Gospel.” There are also those who do not believe the Gospel, imagining that they are free to reject it. Such individuals see no urgency in the Gospel – no need to embrace it quickly and heartily. For them, there is another side to the Gospel, and it is not so pleasant. First, the Gospel is appropriately called “the everlasting gospel” (Rev 14:6). It involves a “mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God” (Eph 3:9), and is connected to “the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Eph 3:11). It is also associated with “eternal life, which God, that cannot lie, promised before the world began” (Tit 1:1-3).

All of this means that the Gospel (which Peter is preaching) will ultimately confront every person who has rejected it. This is involved in Jesus’ poignant words, “He that rejecteth Me, and receiveth not My words, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day . For I have not spoken of Myself; but the Father which sent Me, He gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak” (John 12:48-49).

When, therefore, Peter says “let all the house of Israel know assuredly,” he is referring to more than the certainty of the words that he speaks. These are words that must be received now, or, in the day of judgment, they will testify against those who heard and rejected them. There is no chance that these words are not true, or that men can treat them indifferently.

How is it possible for “the Father of spirits” (Heb 12:9) to speak, and there be no requirement for those whom He has created to hear? What would lead any soul to imagine that something graciously purposed before the world began could be ignored without eternal consequences? What person of sound mind can reason that a Divinely prepared way of escape from condemnation can be thrust aside, and no more be said about the matter?

There is a tone of urgency in the words of Peter than cannot be contained in human language. Only a sensitive heart can grasp it – and it must be grasped. This is particularly true when such words are being delivered to the very people who took, crucified, and killed “the Prince of life” (Acts 3:15).

Commensurate with the induction of psychological and fundamentally self-centered preaching, this sense of urgency has all but disappeared from, what is called, “preaching.” There is too much allowance for delay, indecision, and procrastination. The people are not made to feel the very real necessity of embracing the message – a necessity that is reflected in the Gospel itself. The word concerning Jesus Christ that follows cannot be ignored without heaven taking due note of it. There is an evident tone of urgency in it.

GOD HATH MADE THAT SAME JESUS “LORD”

“ 36b . . . that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord . . . ”

Peter will now affirm who Jesus is – particularly what God has exalted Him to BE. He does not speak of who the Israelites are – although much could be said about that. He does not declare who the Apostles are, although considerable could be said about that. He does not comment on the brethren assembled with them, and of the outpouring all of them have experienced. There is no saving power in any of those things, and the church is not built on them.

The power of Peter’s preaching is seen in its focus. He has referred to the outpouring they have received, and the fact that they are witnesses of the resurrected Christ, but that is not his main point. The meat of what was said at the first, and what he himself has been saying, pertains to Deity.

- The “wonderful works of God ” (2:11).
- The promise of God , that He would pour forth His Spirit ” (2:17).
- God’s servants and handmaidens prophesying (2:18).
- God showing wonders in heaven and signs upon earth (2:19).
- Calling on the name of the Lord (2:21).
- Jesus of Nazareth (2:22a).
- God’s approval of Jesus (2:22b).
- God doing miracles, wonders, and signs through Jesus (2:22c).
- The “determinate counsel” of God (2:23a).
- The “foreknowledge” of God (2:23b).
- God raising Jesus from the dead (2:24a).
- God loosing the “pains of death” from Jesus (2:24b).
- What the LORD said to David’s Lord , who is Jesus (2:25a).
- Christ’s words while He was awaiting His resurrection (2:25b-28).
- The “oath” that God swore to David (2:30a).
- God’s promise to “raise up Christ to sit” on David’s throne (2:30b).
- David seeing “the resurrection of Christ ” ahead of time (2:31).
- God “raised up Jesus ,” whereof they were witnesses (2:32).
- Jesus being by “the right hand of God exalted” (2:33a).

- Jesus receiving “the promise of the Spirit ” from God (2:33b).
- Jesus was seated at the Father’s right hand until His enemies are made His “footstool” (2:34-35).

For some people, such an approach could be called theological, which, to them, means it lacks practicality. Oh, they would not charge Peter himself with declaring impractical theology – but that is really what they think.

There are twenty-one major references to the works of Deity, and thirty-eight secondary ones. That is focus! The Person being expounded is Jesus Christ. The context of that exposition is the purpose and work of God the Father.

For some people, such an approach could be called theological, which, to them, means it lacks practicality. Oh, they would not charge Peter himself with declaring impractical theology – but that is really what they think.

GOD HATH MADE

“ . . . that God hath made . . . ” Other versions read, “God made Jesus,” GWN “did God make,” YLT “God has declared,” PHILLIPS and “God made Him,” LITERAL TRANSLATION All other versions read “God has/hath made.”

Behold the centrality of God Himself in Peter’s preaching. The works they declared were God’s works (2:11). The promise was God’s promise (2:17). The servants and handmaidens belonged to God (2:19). God approved of Jesus (2:22a). God worked by Jesus (2:22b). It was God’s determinate counsel (2:23a). The foreknowledge was God’s (2:23b). God raised Jesus (2:24a). God loosed the pains of death (2:24b). God spoke to David’s Lord (2:25). God swore with an oath to David (2:30a). God promised to raise up Christ to sit on David’s throne (2:30b). God exalted Christ with His right hand (2:33a). God promised the Holy Spirit (2:33b). God gave the Holy Spirit to the exalted Jesus (2:33c). Jesus is seated at the right hand of God (2:34).

Remembering that Peter is filled with the Spirit, and that he has been “endued with power from on high,” consider how rare such preaching is in our time. There is a marked emphasis on men, their needs, and what they can be. But you will find no such preaching in the Word of God – particularly in our text, where the focus and tone of true preaching is being established. Peter has no gimmicks, no catch-phrases, no buzz-words to catch the attention of the people. He is not thinking of the response of the people, but of the God who made the people.

Peter affirms that God “hath made” Jesus to be something. The word “made” is a most interesting one. It comes from the Greek word εποίησεν (e-poi-aa-sen). Lexically the word means, “to make; i.e., to fashion, construct, form, fashion . . . to create, produce,” THAYER “of God’s creative activity... accomplish,” FRIBERG “make, do, cause, effect, bring about, accomplish, perform, provide,” UBS “to make, produce, create,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “to cause, to bring about,” LEH and “do, cause, accomplish.” GINGRICH

When Jesus ministered among men, He frequently spoke of His association with the Father. Here is a very small sampling of the manner of His speaking.

- “All things are delivered unto Me of My Father” (Mat 11:27).
- “And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me” (Luke 22:29).
- “The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do: for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise” (John 5:19).

- “For the Father loveth the Son, and showeth Him all things that himself doeth” (John 5:20).

- “For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son” (John 5:22).

“For as the Father hath life in himself; so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself” (John 5:26).

- “I seek not Mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me” (John 5:30).

- “. . . for the works which the Father hath given Me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of Me, that the Father hath sent Me” (John 5:36).

- “Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed” (John 6:27).

There is a sense in which Jesus is what the Father made Him. He prepared a body for Him (Heb 10:5), sent Him (1 John 4:14), told Him what to say (John 17:8), and gave Him a work to finish (John 5:36). It was in this way that God’s “own arm” brought salvation to Himself. As it is written, “And He saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore His arm brought salvation unto Him ; and His righteousness, it sustained Him” (Isa 59:16).

God provided Himself with a Savior that met all of His requirements, allowing Him to be both the “just and the Justifier” of the believer (Rom 3:26). He did not provide a Savior that reflected the desires of humanity, but One that met His own requirements. That is why it is so wrong to present Jesus as the answer to every self-conceived human need. Sin has rendered men obtuse, so that they do not know what they “need.” Fallen men think in terms of this world, without regard to their association with the living God. Their perception of need is not accurate, as they think within the confines of time and the duration of life in the body. Christ cannot be placed within such a restricted context, and those who attempt to put Him there have seriously erred. They have not seen Christ or life correctly.

God has made Jesus what He Himself needed Him to be. That need was based upon His “eternal purpose,” which took into account the real condition of humanity, and what was required for them to obtain a good standing in His sight. The proper perception of mankind is this: “All have sinned [past tense] and come short [present tense] of the glory of God” (Rom 3:23). What God has “made” Jesus, is within that framework.

Let me speak candidly about this. Men present Jesus as the One appointed to heal marriages, bring good health, stabilize finances, and produce security in this world. No such representation of Jesus is found in Scripture. The abundant life that Jesus came to bring is not earthly life brought to its maximum level. Those who suggest such a thing could not possibly be more wrong.

Living under an inferior covenant with inferior promises, Asaph knew that the ungodly experience more of that kind of life than the godly! He spoke of the wicked enjoying “prosperity,” having “firm” strength, “not” being in “trouble,” not being “plagued like other men,” having “more than heart could wish,” prospering “in the world,” and experiencing “increase in riches” (Psa 73:1-12). Yet, with all of that, they are referred to as “the wicked” (73:3), “corrupt” (73:8a), speaking “wickedly” (73:8b), speaking “loftily” (73:8c), setting “their mouth against the heavens” (73:9), and are called “the ungodly” (73:12).

After he “went into sanctuary,” and considered these prospering people in the presence of the God of heaven. He saw them quite differently. Then he “understood their end ,” which is more important than their present circumstances! God had placed these people “in slippery places,” and had targeted them to be cast “down into destruction.” They would be “brought into desolation,” and “utterly consumed with terrors.” God is described as despising “their image” (73:17-20).

What shall we say of those who present a Christ who brings such things to men? How shall we regard preachers and teachers who present Jesus as the appointed means of optimizing life in “this present evil world?” We shall regard them as liars of the worst order – as imposters who bring unspeakable handicap to the sons of men. God has not “made” Jesus this kind of Minister! There is no need to expend ourselves to support such a statement. The Gospel does not contain so much as a syllable that presents the Son of God in this manner. Even a fool should know that if we are “not of this world,” and the kingdom of Christ is “not of this world,” the benefits brought by Jesus cannot be “of this world.”

Speaking of the Savior in the same manner as Peter, Paul said “God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God” (Rom 3:25). The words “set forth” parallel Peter’s words “God hath made that same Jesus.”

In the Gospel, God presents Jesus as He has made Him. The acceptance or rejection of Jesus pertains directly to the way in which God has presented Him. Peter will now provide a summary statement regarding this matter.

THE SAME JESUS YOU CRUCIFIED

“ . . . that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified. . . ” Other versions read, “this Jesus, whom you crucified,,” NKJV “this Jesus, whom you put to death on the cross ,” BBE “this Jesus, I say, whom ye have crucified,,” GENEVA and “the Man whom you nailed to a cross .” IE

Speaking through the Spirit, Peter will not let the people forget what they did to Jesus. What God has “made” Jesus is in spite of what they have done, not because of it. I do not doubt that someone in the flesh might have objected that they really did not crucify Christ. But their objections would not have been heard. They were just as guilty as if the hammer had been in their own hands. In a secondary sense, it was THEIR will that was carried out, not the will of the Romans. That is why Jesus said to Pilate, “Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against Me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered Me unto thee hath the greater sin” (John 19:11).

Ponder some of the things the Jews had said of Jesus. This was their assessment of Him – the One who God had now made “both Lord and Christ.”

- “And many of them said, He hath a devil, and is mad ; why hear ye him?” (John 10:20).
- “Then answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil ?” (John 8:48).
- “And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth ” (Matt 9:3).
- “Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy ” (Mat 26:65).
- “And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned ?” (John 7:15).

Peter, however, mentions none of these things. Instead, he goes straight to the deed to which their faulty conclusions led them: “Jesus, whom ye have crucified!”

Much could be said about the principle that is made known in this text. Think of the stoning of Stephen, and the opposition that Paul experienced. All who went along with such things were guilty of them, whether they personally entered into the opposition or not. Think of churches that have terminated faithful preachers of the Word, or refused to act upon their words. The day of judgment will clarify the remarkable extent to which men were personally involved in their rejection of the truth of God. This is because they had no love for it.

GOD HATH MADE HIM LORD

“ . . . God hath made . . . both Lord . . . ” Other versions read, “God has made . . . Lord,” NKJV and “God has made Him . . . Lord.” NASB

What does it mean to be “made Lord?” Someone might say, “Was He not Lord already? Didn’t John the Baptist say he was sent to ‘prepare ye the way of the Lord ’ (Matt3:3)? Did not men call Him “Lord” (Matt 8:2,6,21; 9:28; 15:22; 17:15, etc)?” Indeed, this is so. However, as Jesus walked among men, He was not doing so as their “Savior.” That role was fulfilled after He died and rose again. As Peter said some time later, “Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Savior , for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). Paul said much the same thing in Antioch of Pisidia when he spoke of the risen Christ: “Of this man's [David] seed hath God according to His promise raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus ” (Acts 13:23).

Peter is here expounding what is involved in Jesus being Savior. First, God has made Him “LORD!” As used here, the term “Lord” means King, Ruler, and Sovereign.

Twelve times Jesus is referred to as “the Lord Jesus” (Lk 24:3; Acts 4:33; 7:59; 19:13; Rom 10:9; 1 Cor 6:11; 2 Cor 4:10,145; Col 3:17; 2 Thess 1:7; Heb 13:20; Rev 22:20).

Fifty-one times He is referred to as the “ Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 11:17; 15:11; 16:31; 20:21; Rom 1:7; 5:1,11; 13:14; 1 Cor 1:3,7,8; 8:6; 15:57; 2 Cor 1:2,3; 8:9; Gal 1:3; Eph 1:2,3,17; 3:14; 5:20; 6:23,24; Phil 1:2; 3:20; Col 1:2,3; 1 Thess 1:1; 2:19; 3:11,13; 5:9,23; 2 Thess 1:1,2,8,12; 2:1,16; 1 Tim 1:1; 6:14; 2 Tim 4:1; Tit 1:4; James 2:21; 1 Pet 1:1; 2 Pet 1:16; 2 John 1:3; Jude 1:4).

Twice He is referred to as “Christ the Lord ” (Lk 2:11; James 2:1).

Four times He is called the “ Lord and Savior” (2 Pet 1:11; 2:20; 3:2; ,18).

Once He is called “the Lord Christ” (Col 3:24).

Once He is called “ Lord of all” (Acts 10:36).

Three times He is referred to as “ Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15; Rev 17:14; 19:16).

Once He is called “the Lord of glory” (1 Cor 2:8).

He is called “the Lord ” twenty-six times (Acts 9:6,10,11,15; 18:9; 23:11; 1 Cor 4:5; 6:14; 1 Cor 9:5; 15:47; Eph 5:29; Phil 4:5; 1 Thess 1:6; 4:15,17; 5:2; 2 Thess 1:9; 2:8,13; 2 Tim 4:8; Heb 2:3; James 5:7,8; 2 Pet 2:1; 3:10; Rev 1:5).

There are 101 clear and uncontested references to Christ as “Lord.” There can be no question about this. It is consistently found in the Apostles’ doctrine, and it is so because the Father has, indeed, made Him “Lord.”

There are 101 clear and uncontested references to Christ as “Lord.” There can be no question about this. It is consistently found in the Apostles’ doctrine, and it is so because the Father has, indeed, made Him “Lord.”

The Prophets Speak

Consider how Jesus being Lord is expounded in Scripture – first by the Prophets, who prepared men for a Savior who would be the Ruler.

- “I shall see Him, but not now: I shall behold Him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob, and a Scepter shall rise out of Israel, and shall smite the corners of Moab, and destroy all the children of Sheth” (Num 24:17).
- “The adversaries of the LORD shall be broken to pieces; out of heaven shall he thunder upon them: the LORD shall judge the ends of the earth; and He shall give strength unto His King, and exalt the horn of His Anointed ” (1 Sam 2:10).
- “Yet have I set My King upon My holy hill of Zion” (Psa 2:6).
- “Thou hast delivered Me from the strivings of the people; and Thou hast made Me the Head of the heathen : a people whom I have not known shall serve Me ” (Psa 18:43).
- “Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in” (Psa 24:7).
- “Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David , and upon His kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this” (Isa 9:7).
- “And the key of the house of David will I lay upon His shoulder; so He shall open, and none shall shut; and He shall shut, and none shall open” (Isa 22:22).
- “Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness , and princes shall rule in judgment” (Isa 32:1).
- “Behold, the Lord GOD will come with strong hand, and His arm shall rule for Him : behold, His reward is with him, and his work before him” (Isa 40:10).
- “Behold, My Servant shall deal prudently, He shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high ” (Isa 52:13).
- “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper , and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth” (Jer 23:5).

The Lord Jesus Speaks

Ponder what the Lord Jesus said about being “made” Lord.

- “ All things are delivered unto Me of my Father” (Mat 11:27).
- “And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth” (Matt 28:18).
- “And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as My Father hath appointed unto Me ” (Luke 22:29).
- “For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom He will ” (John 5:21).
- “For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son” (John 5:22).

The Declaration of the Apostles

The messengers sent forth by Jesus left no doubt about Him being made Lord.

- “The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (He is Lord of all)” (Acts 10:36).
- “Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all , God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:5).
- “For to this end Christ both died, and rose, and revived, that He might be Lord both of the dead and living ” (Rom 14:9).
- “Which he wrought in Christ, when He raised him from the dead, and set him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion , and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under His feet , and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church” (Eph 1:20-22).
- “And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord , to the glory of God the Father” (Phil 2:11).
- “Which in His times He shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords ” (1 Tim 6:15).

The Particular Emphasis

The particular emphasis of Jesus being “made Lord” pertains to God’s promise to David: that He “would raise up Christ to sit on his throne” (Acts 2:30). Isaiah also spoke of Jesus being “upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this” (Isa 9:7). Jeremiah also spoke of Jesus in this way: “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper , and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth” (Jer 23:5).

Jesus is presently reigning as Lord upon the throne of David – that is Peter’s proclamation. That reign is associated with Christ’s present exaltation in heaven, not with Him returning the second time to earth. We have a reigning Savior!

Making Him Lord

Perhaps you have heard people refer to making Jesus “Lord of your life.” The talk goes something like this: “Now that Jesus is your Savior, you need to make Him Lord of your life.” The postulate is that you can be saved, yet not be willingly under the government of Jesus. Whatever this kind of language is intended to declare, it is certainly flawed to the core. It is really nothing more than the language of Ashdod – Babylonish jargon.

God has already “made” Jesus Lord, and He cannot be made any more “Lord” than He is right now. The fact that people do not submit to Him as Lord has nothing whatsoever to do with Him being Lord. He is “Lord both of the dead and the living” (Rom 14:9). The phrase “the dead and the living” is without regard to whether or not people are reconciled to God. All of the dead, who have left the body, are under the authority of Christ. That is how He will be able to raise them all from the dead. All of the living, whether they are saved or lost, are under the government of Jesus. That is why, regarding the lost, He can call them, judge them, and draw them to Himself. For the saved that is why He can feed them, lead them, and bring them to glory.

There is no personality in heaven, earth, or under the earth that is not subject to Christ – the Father Himself being the only exclusion (1 Cor 15:27). The knowledge this should provoke men to “call upon the name of the Lord.”

There is no such thing as a salvation in which “the saved” do not acknowledge, confess, and submit to Jesus as “Lord of all.” The notion that a person can be “saved,” and yet not own Jesus as their Lord is nonsense. That is why we read, “That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the LORD Jesus , and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved . For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation ” (Rom 10:9-10). In this case, “confession” is not a mere intellectual acknowledgment. Technically, the word “confession” means “the substance of our profession which we embrace with hope,” THAYER “a statement of allegiance expressing binding assent and public commitment,” FRIBERG and “to express openly one’s allegiance to a proposition or person.” LOUW-NIDA

Where there is no embracement of Jesus “as Lord,” there is no salvation. Why would God save a person who did not acknowledge and embrace Jesus as LORD, when that is what God has made Him? The whole notion is unbecoming of anyone who loves the truth. It just is not right, and we must avoid speaking as though there was even a grain of truth in it. It is devoid of truth.

GOD HATH MADE THAT SAME JESUS “CHRIST”

“ 36c God hath made . . . and Christ.” Other versions read, “God has made . . . Messiah,” NRSV and “God has made . . . Christ (the Messiah).” AMPLIFIED

While “Lord” denotes Jesus’ relationship to us, “Christ” speaks of His relationship to God. Thus He is referred to as “the Lord’s Christ” (Lk 2:26), “ His Christ” (Acts 4:26; Rev 11:15; 12:10), “the Christ of God ” (Lk 9:20), “Christ, the chosen of God ” (Lk 23:35).

The word “Christ” means “anointed One,” and is also translated “Messiah” (Dan 9:25,26; John 1:41; 4:25). The word “Jesus” speaks of His saving capacity: “He shall save His people from their sins” (Matt 1:21). The term “Lord” speaks of Him in He reigning, or ruling , capacity: “ rule Thou in the midst of Thine enemies” (Psa 110:2). The term “Christ” emphasizes the Savior in His working capacity: “Christ died” (Rom 5:6,8; 14:15; 1 Cor 8:11; 15:3), “Christ hath redeemed” (Gal 3:13), “Christ being come an High Priest” (Heb 9:11), “Christ also hath once suffered” (1 Pet 3:18), etc.

As the anointed One, Jesus was “chosen of God” to do for man what man could not do for himself. These were things that had to be done before God could save us – and they all had to be done by a man – “the Man Christ Jesus.”

The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah speaks in detail about a Man through whom God would provide a just basis for the salvation of men.

- He bore our griefs (4a).
- He carried our sorrows (4b).
- He was stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted (4c).
- He was wounded for our transgressions (5a).
- He was bruised for our iniquities (5b).
- The chastisement of our peace was upon Him (5c).
- By His stripes we are healed (5d).
- The Lord laid on Him the iniquity of us all (6).
- He was oppressed and He was afflicted (7).
- He was taken from prison and from judgment (8a).
- He was cut off out of the land of the living (8b).

- For the transgression of the people He was smitten (8c).
- He made His grave with the wicked and with the rich in His death (9).
- It pleased the Lord to bruise Him (10a).
- It pleased the Lord to put Him to grief (10a).
- His soul was made an offering for sin (10b).
- The pleasure of the Lord prospers in His hand (10c).
- The Lord saw the travail of His soul and was satisfied (11a).
- He bore the iniquities of the people (11b).
- He poured out His soul unto death (12a).
- He was numbered with the transgressors (12b).
- He bore the sin of many (12c).
- He makes intercession for the transgressors (12d).

All of this, and much more, is summarized in the words, “And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross” (Phil 2:8).

“Christ” was the “Man” of whom Isaiah prophesied: “And a Man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land” (Isa 32:2). He was the “Immanuel” that was “made of a woman,” and grew up in a fallen world (Isa 7:14-15). He is the One chosen to announce deliverance (Lk 4:18-19). If anything was required for salvation to be effective, the Christ is the One who did it. This covered everything from taking away the sin of the world (John 1:29), to destroying the devil (Heb 2:14) and triumphing over death (Acts 2:24). All of that is encapsulated in the word “Christ.”

Peter has already said that David prophesied that God “would raise up Christ to sit on his throne” (2:30). Here is a glorified Man. Enthroned in glory, with all power in heaven and earth in His hand. He has been exalted because of what He has, as a Man, accomplished. Thus it is written, “And after He had appeared in human form, He abased and humbled Himself [still further] and carried His obedience to the extreme of death, even the death of the cross! Therefore [because He stooped so low] God has highly exalted Him and has freely bestowed on Him the name that is above every name, That in (at) the name of Jesus every knee should (must) bow, in heaven and on earth and under the earth, And every tongue [frankly and openly] confess and acknowledge that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father” AMPLIFIED (Phil 2:8-11).

In making “Jesus of Nazareth” both Lord and Christ, God has fully provided for the salvation of men. As “Christ,” God has affirmed that Jesus fully accomplished all that was necessary for God to be both the “just and the Justifier” of him that believes on Jesus (Rom 3:26). He has fulfilled all of the prophecies relating to the Savior, crushing the enemy, removing all obstacles, and sanctifying the way – the “high way” – to God (Isa 35:8; Heb 10:20).

As “Lord,” Jesus has been invested with all of the authority and power required to bring the sons home to glory. He has, and is ready to dispense, all of the resources men require to navigate from earth to glory (Col 2:3). Those who are “in Christ” are, in every sense of the word, “complete,” wanting nothing (Col 2:10). Nothing essential for “life and godliness” can be obtained anywhere else (2 Pet 1:3). It is all in Christ – every single resource. Those who seek elsewhere will be disappointed.

God hath made the same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ

CONCLUSION

Thus Peter has presented the Savior of the world, clarifying “Jesus of Nazareth,” making known both the fulfilled intentions of God and the completely wrong assessments of the Israelites. In his powerful presentation of Christ he has made no reference to the love of God. He did not speak of the removal of sin, or say that Christ died for the sins of the world. He has not yet not offered the remission of sins, or told the people what to do to be saved. He has not delivered a word about Jesus meeting the needs of the people, or being there to help them through their troubles. He has, however, presented a view of Christ with which the Holy Spirit will surely work. Permit me to briefly review what this Spirit-filled man has declared.

In his powerful presentation of Christ he has made no reference to the love of God. He did not speak of the removal of sin, or say that Christ died for the sins of the world. He has not yet not offered the remission of sins, or told the people what to do to be saved. He has not delivered a word about Jesus meeting the needs of the people, or being there

Jesus was a man “approved” by God among the people through miracles, wonders, and signs (2:22).

- He was “delivered by the determinate counsel of God” (2:23a).
- He was “delivered” by the “foreknowledge of God” (2:23b).
- The people had taken Him, and by “wicked hands” had crucified and slain Him (2:34).
- God “raised Him up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it” (2:24).
- David prophesied concerning Jesus’ experience while His body was in the grave, declaring that He anticipated His own resurrection (2:25-26).
- Christ’s soul was not left in Hades (2:27a).
- Christ’s body did not see corruption in the grave (2:27b).
- The “way of life” was made know to Jesus – i.e., the way from death to life (2:28).
- God promised David that He would raise up his offspring to sit upon his throne (2:30a).
- The prophecy related to the resurrection of Christ (2:30b-31).
- Those upon whom the Spirit had come were all witnesses of the risen Jesus (2:32).
- Jesus was exalted by means of the right hand of God (2:33a).
- Jesus received from the Father the promised Spirit, in order that He might pour Him forth upon men (2:33b).
- Jesus had poured forth the Spirit, producing the results that were being witnessed by the people (2:33c).
- David spoke of Jesus when he said the Lord said to His Lord, “Sit Thou on My right hand, until I make Thy foes Thy footstool” (2:34-35).
- God has made Jesus “both Lord Christ,” having raised Him from the dead, and enthroned Him at His own right hand (2:36a).
- God did this to the Jesus the people had crucified (2:36b).

I do not believe there is a homiletical expert in the world who would have suggested such a presentation – yet, that is the one inspired by the Spirit of God, who “searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God” (1 Cor 2:10).

In the verses that follow, we will see whether or not the Holy Spirit was able to accomplish His reproving and convicting ministry through these words.

I want to press upon you to consider the manner and message that Peter delivered. You will find that it does not agree with modern day evangelistic methods. I am quick to say that this is not intended to be a template for every presentation of Christ to sinners. However, it does provide insight into the proper direction and emphasis of preaching. It also confirms that what men think about Jesus is of critical importance. It is the responsibility of every preacher and teacher to assist people in discerning the true Jesus, what He has accomplished, and how the Father has exalted Him above all. We must have zero-tolerance for any doctrine that leaves people fundamentally ignorant of the Lord's Christ. Such teaching places men in eternal jeopardy, and robs the soul as well. It must not be tolerated in the body of Christ!

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #11

THE RESPONSE OF FAITH

“ 2:37 Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? 38 Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. 39 For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. 40 And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation. 41 Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. 42 And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.”
(Acts 2:37-42)

INTRODUCTION

After men have reviewed the Divine summation of Peter's message, they may be tempted to speculate or philosophize about it. It is admittedly difficult to perceive any humanistic approach in it. It is clearly based upon the Scriptures, and focuses upon the Person and experience of “Jesus of Nazareth.” I have never heard or read of anyone who made an effort to systematize the message itself, or develop a pattern of preaching from it. Nor, indeed, would such an effort be in order. Honest and good hearts will be duly impressed by the result of Peter's words

CONTENTS

- WHEN THEY HEARD THIS, SOMETHING HAPPENED (2:37a)

- THEY SAID TO PETER AND THE REST OF THE APOSTLES (2:37b)
- REPENT! (2:38a)
- ALL OF YOU, BE BAPTIZED (2:38b)
- YOU WILL RECEIVE THE GIFT (2:38c)
- THE PROMISE IS TO EVERYONE WHO IS CALLED BY GOD (2:38d)
- HE HAD MORE TO SAY (2:40a)
- SAVE YOURSELVES FROM THIS UNTOWARD GENERATION (2:40b)
- THEY THAT GLADLY RECEIVED HIS WORD (2:41a)
- THREE THOUSAND SOULS WERE ADDED (2:41b)
- IT DID NOT STOP THERE (2:42)
- CONCLUSION

– the effects that it produced in those who heard it. That will confirm that the Holy Spirit took the words of the apostle and worked with them, causing something to occur in the people that truly constituted an epoch.

The things that took place in this text are outside the perimeter of natural aptitude. What was perceived and spoken was influenced by the touch of Christ and the power of the Holy Spirit. No amount of natural ingenuity, effort, or wisdom could have produced such insight and speech. This is confirmation of a Divine work within men – both within the speaker and the hearers.

WHAT HAS BEEN SAID THUS FAR

Jesus prepared his disciples for the events that took place on the first Pentecost following His ascension back to heaven. I do not doubt that, when the Lord spoke them, His words lacked the clarity that was realized when the Spirit came upon the disciples, and they were filled with His mind and power.

What Jesus Said

- HE WOULD BE WITH THEM. “ I am with you always , even unto the end of the world. Amen” (Matt 28:20).

- THEY WOULD SPEAK WITH NEW TONGUES. “And these signs shall follow them that believe . . . they shall speak with new tongues . . .” (Mark 16:18).

- THEY WOULD PREACH AND WITNESS WITH POWER. “And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things . And, behold, I send the promise of My Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high ” (Luke 24:47-49).

- THE SPIRIT WOULD REMAIN WITH THEM. “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever ” (John 14:16).

- THE SPIRIT WOULD TEACH THEM AND STIR UP THEIR MEMORY. “But the Comforter . . . He shall teach you all things , and bring all things to your remembrance , whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26).

- THE SPIRIT WOULD TESTIFY THROUGH THEM. “But when the Comforter is come. . . He shall testify of Me: and ye also shall bear witness . . .” (John 15:26-27).

The things that took place in this text are outside the perimeter of natural aptitude. What was perceived and spoken was influenced by the touch of Christ and the power of the Holy Spirit. No amount of natural ingenuity, effort, or wisdom could have produced such insight and speech.

THE SPIRIT WOULD GUIDE THEM INTO ALL TRUTH, SHOW THEM THINGS TO COME, AND GLORIFY CHRIST. “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth . . . He will show you things to come . He shall glorify Me : for He shall receive of mine, and shall show it unto you . . .” (John 16:13-15).

• THEY WOULD RECEIVE POWER AND BE WITNESSES. “And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father . . . ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence . . . But ye shall receive power , after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me . . .” (Acts 1:4-5,8).

• HE SPENT FORTY DAYS WITH THEM, TEACHING CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD. “To whom also He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God ” (Acts 1:3).

The fact that these words were all veiled in mystery at the time they were spoken, is confirmed by the disciples’ words to Christ after He rose from the dead, and before He ascended into heaven. “When they therefore were come together, they asked of Him, saying, Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?” (Acts 1:6). Their understanding was not yet illuminated.

The Experience of the Disciples

1. Thus far, the Spirit has come upon the disciples as the Lord had said. Attending signs confirmed this had happened (Lk 24:49; Acts 1:4) .

• There came a sound from heaven “as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting” (2:2).

• There “appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them” (Acts 2:3).

• “And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance” (Acts 2:4).

2. All of the disciples had, in fact, become witnesses, testifying of the works of God (John 15:27; Acts 1:4,5,8).

• “. . . we do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11)

3. They spoke with “new tongues,” as Jesus had promised (Mk 16:18).

• “And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance” (Acts 2:4).

Peter affirmed Jesus had received the promised Spirit from God, and poured it out upon the people. “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear”

4. In confirmation of Christ’s promise, the Holy Spirit had led the speakers into all truth, showing them the things of Christ, and revealing things to come (John 16:13-15).

• Opened the prophecy of Joel. “But this is that which was spoken by the prophet

Joel; and it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams: and on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my Spirit; and they shall prophesy: and I will show wonders in heaven above, and signs in the earth beneath; blood, and fire, and vapor of smoke: the sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before that great and notable day of the Lord come: and it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Acts 2:17-21).

- Declared God’s approval of Christ. “Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know” (Acts 2:22).

- Accounted for Jesus being taken. “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God . . .” (Acts 2:23a).

- Proclaimed what they did when Jesus was put into their hands. “ , ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain ” (Acts 2:23b).

- Proclaimed the resurrection of Christ, declaring the rationale behind it. “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it” (Acts 2:24).

- Declared the fulfillment of Psalm 16:8-11. “For David speaketh concerning him, I foresaw the Lord always before my face, for he is on my right hand, that I should not be moved . . .” (Acts 2:25-28)

- Declared the intent of David’s Psalm. “Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne. He seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ...” (Acts 2:29-31).

- Provided insight concerning the nature of death and the state of the dead. “ . . . that his soul was not left in hell” [Haded}, “neither his flesh did see corruption” (Acts 2:31).

- Comprehended that David spoke of Christ’s resurrection when he spoke of someone being raised up to sit on his throne. “Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he seeing this before spake of the resurrection of Christ...” (Acts 2:30-31).

- Declared that Jesus had been exalted, and was presently at the right hand of God, fulfilling David’s Psalm. “Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, He would raise up Christ to sit on his throne . . . Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted . . .” (Acts 2:30,33).

- Affirmed Jesus had received the promised Spirit from God, and poured it out upon the people. “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33).

- Revealed that David could not have been speaking of himself. “For David is not ascended into the heavens: but he saith himself, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand . . .” (Acts 2:34-35).

- Declared Jesus would remain at God’s right hand until His enemies were made His footstool. “ . . . The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy foes thy footstool” (Acts 2:35).

- Affirmed that God had made Jesus Lord, fulfilling the promise to seat one upon David's throne. "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord . . ." (Acts 2:36).

- Announced that God had made Jesus Christ, fulfilling David's promise to raise up "Christ" to sit on His throne. "Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus . . . Christ " (Acts 2:36).

Brief Summation

We have witnessed a man speaking under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit – the Spirit who had been "poured forth" by Jesus. Peter spoke with lucidity, confidence, and power. He was able to reason, correlate Scripture, and maintain a clear focus on the Lord Jesus Christ. Although he had an abundance of personal experience with Jesus Himself, he founded his reasoning on the Word of God, confirming that God had done what He had promised in Scripture. He had no difficulty speaking of the Sovereignty of God and the responsibility of men in the same sentence (2:23).

Men could not have taught Peter to preach in this manner. He was speaking while enjoying "the communion of the Holy Spirit" NKJV (2 Cor 13:14). He was in possession of his sanctified faculties of reason and speech, and was able to speak pointedly about God, Christ, and the people standing before him.

It is quite clear that Peter's message stands in sharp contrast to human methodologies. He was not motivated by an institutional spirit, the desire to straighten out the personal difficulties experienced by those in his audience, or the promotion of fleshly interests.

Further, the events were of such a nature that no one could satisfactorily account for them according to human wisdom. Some "mocked," or made fun of the people, saying that the speakers were "full of new wine" (2:13). If someone filled with the Holy Spirit had not explained what was happening, the facts of the case would never have been known.

It will be helpful to identify the generation to whom Jesus had spoken – the very generation to whom Peter is now speaking. This will accent all the more the marvelous things that will occur. Here is how Jesus referred to this generation.

THE GENERATION TO WHOM PETER WAS SPEAKING

It will be helpful to identify the generation to whom Jesus had spoken – the very generation to whom Peter is now speaking. This will accent all the more the marvelous things that will occur. Here is how Jesus referred to this generation.

- "But whereunto shall I liken this generation ? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented" (Matt 11:16-17).

- "The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation , and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here" (Matt 12:41).

- "The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation , and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here" (Matt 12:42).

- "And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation" (Mark 8:12).

- "That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; From the blood of Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation ” (Luke 11:50-51).

- “But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation ” (Luke 17:25).

This was the generation in which “the builders” rejected the Stone which became the Head of the corner (Mk 12:10). It was one in which the Jewish leaders (the scribes and Pharisees) had “shut up the kingdom of heaven against men” (Matt 23:13). It was one in which the “lawyers” (experts in Moses’ law) “took away the key of knowledge” (Lk 11:52). Jesus said of the inhabitants of the chief city of this generation, “For the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation” (Luke 19:43-44). And again He said, “Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see Me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord” (Mat 23:39).

Throw into this revealed scenario the fact of the impotence of “the natural man” (1 Cor 2:14) , the hostility of “the carnal mind” (Rom 8:7) , and the depravity of worldly wisdom, and you have, what appears to be, an utterly hopeless situation.

Now, we will behold the power of the Gospel, and how it will work among those who “killed the prince of life” (Acts 3:15). To this point in our text, they have shown no remorse or sorrow about what they have done.

WHEN THEY HEARD THIS, SOMETHING HAPPENED

“ 2:37a Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart . . . ”

Spiritual powers are at work as Peter speaks. Do not think for a moment that “the old serpent” is not moving in and out among the people, exerting all of his deceptive powers. When the Lord Jesus sheathed His sword in Gethsemane, submitting to the powers of darkness because it was their hour, the people appeared effective in resisting His influence. However, on this day, Christ’s sword is no longer in its sheath, but is drawn, proceeding out of His mouth. The Holy Spirit is at work among the audience also, convicting men of sin, righteousness, and judgment – just as Jesus said He would (John 16:8-11).

WHEN THEY HEARD THIS

When the Lord Jesus sheathed His sword in Gethsemane, submitting to the powers of darkness because it was their hour, the people appeared effective in resisting His influence. However, on this day, Christ’s sword is no longer in its sheath, but is drawn, proceeding out of His mouth.

“Now when they heard this . . . ” Other versions read, “When the people heard this,” NIV “Now when these words came to their ears,” BBE “And having heard this,” DARBY and “hearing this,” NJB “Peter’s words.” NLT

These people were not moved God-ward but what they saw, but by what they heard . You could not have asked for any more impressive material for the eye-gate. People in a state of rational ecstasy, people speaking in the native languages of their hearers, and possibly even tongues of fire sitting upon the heads of the speakers. Yet, our text does not read, “when they saw this,” but rather “when they heard this.”

The Myth of Faith Superiority of Sight

You have probably heard someone say, “I would rather see a sermon than hear one.” Of course, that is said by those who have no understanding. The most precise visual that was ever presented to humanity was the Word that was “made flesh, and dwelt among us” (John 1:14). This was not a vague image, but “the express image” of the “Person” of God (Heb 1:3). Divine qualities dwelt corporally in Him, for “in Him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily” (Col 1:19; 2:9). Yet, when men saw this walking sermon, men said, “He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him” (Isa 53:2). Is it possible for the eye to be privileged to see anyone more precise, more holy, more thorough, more like God? Was there anything about this Man that was inadequate, insufficient, or not to the point? Once, when certain of the country of the Gadarenes “saw Him,” they asked Him to “depart out of their coasts” (Matt 8:34). After being exposed to Him for over three years, the Jews followed their leaders and cried out, “crucify Him, crucify Him” (Lk 23:21).

What kind of commentary is that on the value of vision – seeing a sermon, as men would say? Does this shed any light on the “media-ministry” fad that is sweeping the country? Exactly what can these electronic marvels do that the incarnate Word could not do?

Faith Comes by Hearing

The truth of the matter is that “faith cometh by hearing,” not seeing. It does not come by working, but by “hearing.” It does not come by thinking, but by “hearing.” The message directed to the hearing is the Gospel itself, as expressly taught in the tenth chapter of Romans. Pointedly it is stated, “How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things! But they have not all obeyed the gospel. For Esaias saith, Lord, who hath believed our report?” (Rom 10:14-16). Peter was not preaching about secrets to a successful life in this world. He did not promise the people health and wealth, happy homes, and the right to have a lot of fun. That is not the kind of message that results in faith. It was not so in Peter’s day, and it is not so in our day either.

The very next verse reads, “So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God,” or “So faith comes from hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ” (Rom 10:17). That is, the message that is heard is the Gospel of Christ itself, and the hearing that appropriates that message comes by the word, or commandment, of Christ.

Faith is clearly said to come from God and Christ. “Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 6:23). Thus we are said to have “obtained like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1). It has therefore been “given” to us “to believe” (Phil 1:29). Believers are therefore said to have “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27).

A message that promises well being in this world does not do such a work. What kind of piercing does a health and wealth gospel do? Will someone say it will convict the sinner of the sin of poverty and ill health? Is that what people are willing to say?

What of Peter’s message? Was it Gospel? He preached of the death of Christ (2:24), His burial (2:15-31), and His resurrection (2:31-32). He also spoke of His exaltation and enthronement (2:33-36). Is that the kind of message the Holy Spirit can use? Will Jesus give grace to believe to those who hear a message like that? The text will speak for itself. Make no mistake about this, the response that follows was prompted by what the people heard – and “faith cometh by hearing.”

PRICKED IN THEIR HEARTS

“ . . .they were pricked in their heart . . .” Other versions read, “they were cut to the heart,” NKJV “they were pierced to the heart,” NASB “their hearts were troubled ,” BBE “they had compunction in their heart,” DOUAY “they were deeply upset ,” GWN “they were agitated in their heart,” MRD “they were acutely distressed ,” NET “pierced their hearts,” NLT “ moved them deeply,” LIVING “they felt a sharp, cutting pain in their conscience ,” IE “ stung to the heart,” WEYMOUTH “they were stabbed to the heart,” WILLIAMS “they were stung (cut) to the heart,” AMPLIFIED and “they were cut to the quick .” PHILLIPS

We are told, “For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart ” (Heb 4:12). Here is an example of this happening. Remember, many of these hearers were the same people who took Jesus, crucified, and killed Him (2:23). It takes hard and calloused hearts to do something like that! How can such steeled persons be reached? What can awaken their conscience and convict them of their unbelief and wrong doing? It is the truth preached by someone who has been illuminated!

The Holy Spirit used His “sword,” and drove Peter’s word down into their hearts, convicting them of sin, righteousness, and judgment. They saw their own miserable unbelief. They saw that Jesus was righteous, and that they had rejected and killed Him. They saw that Satan had been judged, and yet they had been his vassals when they rejected and denied “the Just One” (Acts 7:52).

A Message That Pricks the Heart

Peter delivered a word that caused the hearts of the people to be pricked, pierced, and stabbed into spiritual alertness. A message that promises well being in this world does not do such a work. What kind of piercing does a health and wealth gospel do? Will someone say it will convict the sinner of the sin of poverty and ill health? Is that what people are willing to say? How will such people handle the word of the Lord, “Hearken, my beloved brethren, Hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?” (James 2:5). And, how can such an inspired statement be true if Jesus came to remove poverty?

Being “cut to the heart” does not always result in a favorable reaction. Later, when Peter preached to another group, “they were cut to the heart and took counsel to slay him” (Acts 5:33). When Stephen preached powerfully to the Jewish council, “they were cut to the heart , and they gnashed on him with their teeth” (Acts 7:54). In both of these cases, the conscience of the people had been seared. The word used for “cut” is one meaning to exasperate, as though the heart was cut in two. There is no healing properties in that word, only destruction. Therefore, when they were “cut to the heart” they lashed out in rebellion against God’s Word. For hearts of this order, the Word of God pushes the person further and further away from God until he has no compunctions about killing the speaker – whether it be Jesus, Stephen, or one of the prophets. This oppressive effect of the Word is described in Scripture. “But the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken ” (Isa 28:13). Those who steel their heart against the Word of God have no guarantee that their condition will not consummate in eternal destruction.

In our text, the word for “pricked” means to cause deep pain, or sorrow and regret. In this case, instead of becoming obstinate and even violent, a solution to the grievous condition is earnestly sought. There is profound lamentation for what has been done, and a determination to do whatever is necessary to recover from it. If this seems like an impossible reaction, our text records how it was actually lived out in Peter’s listeners.

THEY SAID TO PETER AND THE REST OF THE APOSTLES

“ 37b . . . and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?”

It appears that the people interrupted Peter’s message, unable to contain themselves any longer. His word, through the power of the Holy Spirit, had penetrated to their inmost being, and they saw what they had done to Jesus from an entirely new point of view. They could not keep quiet, social conventions notwithstanding.

Right here we are given to see an aspect of the Kingdom of God that is rare in our time. When men see the truth – really see it – they will do anything they can to obtain it. This is precisely the point of Jesus’ words concerning the radical change in people’s approach to God following John the Baptist. “And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force ” (Mat 11:12). Other versions read, “forceful men lay hold of it,” NIV “the violent are taking it by storm,” NJB “ardent multitudes have been crowding toward,” LIVING and “violent men seize it by force [as a precious prize—a i share in the heavenly kingdom is sought with most ardent zeal and intense exertion].” AMPLIFIED

Luke’s record of this saying confirms that men were eagerly coming into the Kingdom, refusing to be denied. “The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it ” (Luke 16:16). That is, those who desire the Kingdom extend themselves to enter into it, sparing no effort. Other versions read, “everyone is forcing his way into it,” NIV “and everyone is eager to get in,” NLT “eager multitudes are pressing in,” LIVING and “everyone is trying hard to get into.” IE The attitude of the people is emphasized. Since John the Baptist, something was being preached that solicited the intense interest of the people. They concluded that this was something to be possessed, and they made every effort to do so.

This reaction agrees with the words of Jesus concerning entering the way that leads to life . “ Strive to enter in at the strait gate: for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able. When once the master of the house is risen up, and hath shut to the door, and ye begin to stand without, and to knock at the door, saying, Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he shall answer and say unto you, I know you not whence ye are” (Luke 13:24-25). Other versions read, “Make every effort to enter,” NIV “Do your best to go in,” BBE “Strive with earnestness,” DARBY “Try hard [tol enter,” GWN “exert every effort,” NET “Try your hardest,” NJB “work hard to,” NLT “Strain every nerve to force yourself through,” WEYMOUTH “Keep on struggling to,” ISV and “You must struggle on to get in through.” WILLIAMS

Since John the Baptist, something was being preached that solicited the intense interest of the people. They concluded that this was something to be possessed, and they made every effort to do so.

It is, therefore, clear from Jesus’ words that this is the manner of the Kingdom. If the people do not quench the Spirit, this is what He will lead them to do. If they in any way comprehend what is declared by the Gospel, this is what they will do.

Now, behold in our text the fulfillment of this very thing – men striving to enter, and seizing the Kingdom as a prize to be grasped.

TO PETER AND THE REST

“ . . . and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles . . .” Other versions read, “to Peter and the other apostles,” NIV “and they said to Simon and to the rest of the legates,” MRD “They asked Peter and the other apostles,” IE “ and they said to Peter and the rest of the apostles (special messengers),” AMPLIFIED and “they cried to Peter and the other apostles.” PHILLIPS

The fact that the question is addressed to “Peter and to the rest of the apostles” confirms they were standing together as a group – in the “unity of the faith” and “the unity of the Spirit” (Eph 4:3,13). The text does not indicate that all of the apostles were speaking. Peter “stood up with the eleven,” but there is no evidence that they were also speaking, as though different groups were being addressed. Whatever the circumstances, it was apparent that these men were all in one accord, and there were no divisions among them.

The view one entertains of men of God is vastly different when their hearts have been “pricked.” Before they had referred to these men as “Galileans” (2:7). Now they refer to them as “Men and brethren.” What a difference conviction makes! Once some of them “mocked,” saying the speakers were “full of new wine” (2:13). Now, however, their hearts have been pierced, and they speak with respect and recognition.

WHAT SHALL WE DO?

“Men and brethren, what shall we do?” Other versions read, “Brothers, what should we do?” NIV “what are we to do?” BBE and “Men and fellow-Jews, what shall we do now?” PHILLIPS

This is how those who are convicted by the Holy Spirit speak. They want to know what they are to do, and they are urgent in their quest for this information. They do not assume they know what to do, they are asking for enlightenment on the subject. Peter has not told them in advance what they are to do, even though that has become a common practice within the Christian community. It is as though people think outlining the duties of men is a proper constraining influence. There is no need to enter into a debate about this matter. I will simply observe that Peter had not told them what was required, and therefore the people asked.

When Saul of Tarsus confronted the exalted Christ, he asked, “Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do” (Acts 9:6). When Peter went to the house of Cornelius, he was met with these words: “Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God” (Acts 10:33). After an earthquake had opened the doors of a prison in Philippi, loosing every man’s bonds, the jailer burst forth and said to Paul and Silas, “Sirs, what must I do to be saved?” (Acts 16:30).

It is not my intention to outline a procedural approach to Christ. My point is that those who have genuinely been impacted by the Gospel will not be content to remain ignorant. If they are convicted of sin, they will want to know how to rid themselves of it right away. Once they are convinced that Christ is, in fact, greater than themselves, they will be compelled to seek a means of reconciliation, and then adjust their lives to please only Him. Until this awareness bursts upon the soul, men only play at religion. They will not throw themselves into something that has not captured their interest. They will not seek to enter the Kingdom if they have attached no ascendant value to it. When men are not valiant for the truth, we do not need to wonder why. They simply have not yet been convinced of the truth, for once the truth is KNOWN, it frees the individual from bondage to Satan, sin, and self (John 8:32,36). It is no marvel, therefore, that these men spoke out in earnest inquiry, not waiting for a further word, but interrupting Peter.

REPENT!

“ 38a Then Peter said unto them, Repent . . . ”

Prior to this, the last recorded words of Peter are, “Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ” (Acts 2:36). Now, he must quickly move from declaring the Gospel to instructing sinners what to do. The Spirit will enlighten him in this area just as surely as He did in that of proclamation. He will be able to perceive the condition of the people, recall the words of the Lord Jesus, discern the proclamations of the holy Prophets, and correlate it all into a spiritually rational response.

THEN PETER SAID UNTO THEM

“Then Peter said unto them . . .” Other versions reads, “Peter replied,” NIV and “Peter answered them.” GWN

Peter was one of the apostles, but he not over them. He was not superior to them, but one with them. This appears to have been apparent to the listeners, for they addressed “Peter and the rest of the apostles.” It was doubtless the unanimity in the message that led them to this conclusion.

Peter had been given “the keys of the kingdom of God” (Matt 16:19), and he opened the door of salvation to the “Jew first, and also to the Greek” (Rom 1:16). He will now bring salvation within the reach of the people. If you wonder concerning the largeness of salvation, Peter is addressing the very people who took Jesus, crucified Him, and killed Him (Acts 2:23). These are people who had refused to come to the light (John 3:19), rejected the Lord (Lk 17:25), and had demanded that He be put to death (Lk 23:21). What word of instruction will Peter deliver to such a people?

Peter was one of the apostles, but he not over them. He was not superior to them, but one with them. This appears to have been apparent to the listeners, for they addressed “Peter and the rest of the apostles.” It was doubtless the unanimity in the message that led them to this conclusion. This does not necessarily imply that all of the apostles were speaking. However, it was abundantly evident that they were all of one accord.

REPENT!

“ . . . Repent . . . ” Other versions read, “Let your hearts be changed ,” BBE “Do penance ,” DOUAY “ Amend your lives,” GENEVA “all of you must turn to God and change the way you think and act,” GWN “You must repent,” NJB “Each of you must repent of your sins, turn to God,” NLT “ Reform ,” YLT “Each of you must turn from your sins, return to God,” LIVING “ Change your hearts,” IE and “Repent (change your views and purpose to accept the will of God in your inner selves instead of rejecting it).” AMPLIFIED

Peter’s reply is of special interest because it conflicts with the kind of answers given to inquiring sinners today. Can you imagine Peter saying, “If there is anyone here who wants to receive Jesus, raise your hand, and I will pray for you.” Or, “Bow your head and repeat this prayer after me. When you are finished, you will be a new creature.” Or, “If those who are interested will come forward, someone will take you to another room for counseling.” Or, “We require that you take a six week course that outlines what is involved in being saved. Please come forward and enroll if you are interested.” Or, “If you have received Jesus into your heart, please fill out one of the cards in front of you and pass it to one of the ushers. We will give you some materials on how to walk in newness of life.” Or . . .

If all of this seems foolish, it is because it is!

The word “repent” is a large one and is absolutely requisite to any profitable involvement with the Living God. This is a word that has to do with the heart, and is reflected in the conduct of the individual as well. It is not something that is to be talked about, but is to be done.

“Repent” comes from the Greek word Metanoh,sate (met-a-voas-at-a). Its lexical meaning is, “to change one’s mind . . . feel sorry that one has done this or that . . . conscious of their sins and with manifest tokens of sorrow, are intent on obtaining God’s pardon . . . heartily to amend with abhorrence of one’s past sins . . . conduct worthy of a heart changed and abhorring sin . . . to withdraw, or turn one's soul from," THAYER "predominately of a religious and ethical change in the way one thinks about acts," FRIBERG "have a change of heart, turn from one's sins, change one's ways," UBS "To change one's way of life as the result of a complete change of thought and attitude with regard to sin and righteousness," LOUW-NIDA and "to change one's mind or purpose." LIDDELL-SCOTT

Repentance has to do with actual moral change – a change in thought, conduct, and manner of life. By that I mean the penitent person begins to think differently, speak and do differently, and live for a different reason. Such a person has turned around, leaving the broad road that leads to destruction, and getting on the narrow way that leads to life. This is an individual that is intent, and will allow nothing to dissuade him from his determination to amend his ways and come to God.

Repentance is not a philosophical subject, nor is it something about which men are to theorize. It is something that is to be done, and there are eternal penalties for not doing so.

Repentance is on the threshold of the Kingdom. It precedes one's entrance into the Kingdom, and until it is accomplished, the wrath of God abides on the individual. As the "pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim 3:15), it is the responsibility of the church to keep this fact before the people. That is one of the reasons Jesus said that "repentance," as well as "remission of sins" was to be "preached" (Lk 24:47). In my judgment the modern church has not done well in this matter.

The word "repent," in all of its varied forms (repent, repented, repentance, repenting) is found forty-five times in Moses and the Prophets. Of those times, thirty-six refer to God Himself repenting (Gen 6:6,7; Ex 32:12,14; Num 23:19; Deut 32:36; Judges 2:18; 1 Sam 15:11,29,35; 2 Sam 24:16; 1 Chron 21:15; Psa 90:13; 106:45; 110:4; ; 135:14; Jer 4:28; 15:6; 18:8,10; 20:16; 26:3,13,19; 42:10; Ezek 24:14; Hos 11:8; 13:14; Joel 2:13,14; Amos 7:3,6; Jonah 3:9,10; 4:2; Zech 8:14). That leaves nine direct references to men repenting in all the Old Covenant writings (Ex 13:17; Judges 21:6,15; 1 Kgs 8:47; Job 42:6; Jer 8:6; 31:19; Ezek 14:6; 18:30).

By way of comparison repentance, in all of its varied forms, is mentioned sixty times in the New Covenant writings. Of those a single text refers to God Himself, where it is written "The Lord swore and will not repent, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec" (Heb 7:21).

It ought to be evident that something of an epochal nature occurred after the writings of Moses and the Prophets. John the Baptist, who was "sent from God" (John 1:6), called upon men to "Repent" (Matt 3:2; Mk 1:15). Luke says he came "preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins" (Lk 3:3). He insisted that those seeking to be baptized by him "bring forth fruits meet for repentance" (Matt 3:6; Lk 3:8).

When Jesus began preaching, He also preached that men ought to "Repent" (Matt 4:17). When He sent His disciples out to preach, "they went out, and preached that men should repent" (Mark 6:12). Jesus said He came to call "sinners to repentance" (Matt 9:13; Lk 5:32). However, it is written of "the cities wherein most of His mighty works were done . . . they repented not" (Matt 11:20). He told people, "except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13:3), and announced "there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:10).

But with all of that, there are precious few direct references to people repenting in the Gospels. So far as the record is concerned such occasions were exceedingly rare prior to Christ's enthronement at the right hand of God.

To tell someone to "Repent" is equivalent to telling an impotent man, "Take up thy bed and walk," or a man with a withered hand, "Stretch forth thy hand" (Matt 9:6; 12:13). In their own strength, men cannot do such things, as even the prophets testified. "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil" (Jer 13:23). It is true of the whole of humanity, just as surely as it was true of favored Israel: “Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment” (Isa 1:5-6).

Yet, Peter delivers this word – and it is to be taken seriously. “REPENT!” He calls upon them to renounce what their response was to “Jesus of Nazareth,” a “man approved by God.” They must, as Jeremiah thundered, “thoroughly amend your ways and doings” (Jer 7:5). As Joel said, they were to “rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God” (Joel 2:13). As Isaiah said, “Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD” (Isa 55:7). That is what is involved in repentance, and it had to be done – while Peter was speaking to them!

The modern church, for the most part, has very little to say about repentance. That is because convenient ear-tickling doctrines have been invented by men that gloss the presence of sin. Iniquity is being explained as something that is possibly inherited, and is often referred to as a “generational curse.” It may even be defined as a sickness, addiction, a malady that is physiological, or in one’s genetic makeup, and disassociated from one’s will. To such people, repentance from sin would be like repenting of having cancer, or some other disease. They have been taught to view sin as a consequence of something outside of the human will and responsibility. All of this fits handily into a psychological emphasis that is fueled by human wisdom and driven by delusion.

Instead of repenting, we now have “Christian counselors” who can lead the people into a more productive life through special routines, procedures, disciplines and even special diets. If, for example, people have outbursts of anger, they can enroll in an “anger-management” course. Thus, they are conveniently led to ignore the Holy Spirit’s word on the matter, “put off . . . anger” (Col 3:8).

Behind the Scenes

The Spirit takes us behind the scenes, shedding light on this great work of repentance. He reveals that “the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance” (Rom 2:4). That is, the fact that an opportunity to repent is given testifies to the goodness of God, who is “not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance” (2 Pet 3:9). Therefore, the fact that men are commanded to repent is itself proof that God is good, and that repentance is therefore possible.

It is also revealed that being “made sorry after a godly manner” leads “to repentance” (2 Cor 7:9). That is, when the heart is made sorrowful over what has been done, a pathway has been opened up that leads to repentance. It is therefore stated that “godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented” (2 Cor 7:10). In other words, when “godly sorrow” leads one to repent, the individual will not regret repenting, but will rather realize benefits that will lead to gladness of heart and satisfaction.

When our text states that those hearing Peter’s words were “pricked in their hearts,” it is to be understood that they were experiencing “godly sorrow” that leads to repentance. Through the Spirit, Peter perceived this sorrow, and told them to “Repent.”

We are even told that God can give a person repentance – even of sin that has taken control of the individual. “In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth; and that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil, who are taken captive by him at his will ” (2 Tim 2:26). Later in the book of Acts, Peter will boldly announce that Jesus has been exalted to “ give repentance to Israel” (Acts 5:31).

Thus, from one point of view, when Peter calls upon the people to repent, he is requiring the people to do something impossible to the flesh. It is like Jesus saying to a paralytic, “Rise up and walk” (Lk 5:23), or telling an impotent man, “Rise, take up thy bed and walk” (John 5:8). It is like Peter himself saying to a lame man who had to be carried here and there, “rise up and walk” (Acts 3:6). Yet, if the people will believe his word, they will, in fact, be given the power to repent. Further, Divine power is always dispensed and realized in the domain of faith. That is precisely why Jesus said, “If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth” (Mark 9:23). Where men do not believe, they cannot repent. Their impenitence is confirmation that they have not believed on Christ. Thus they do not hold His word in high regard, nor are they willing to renounce their sins. However, it is still their duty to repent.

ALL OF YOU, BE BAPTIZED!

“38b . . . and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins . . .”

Being filled with the Spirit, Peter knows how to answer the inquiry of the people. He does not have a handy manual of church doctrine in his hand, but rather has the Word of God in his heart. Christ’s word is dwelling in him richly, and therefore truth comes out of his mouth.

What Peter will now say has become a subject of disputation among professed believers. Even though the Lord commands His people to be “of one mind” (Rom 15:6; 2 Cor 13:11; Phil 1:27; 2:2; 1 Pet 3:8), the professing church does not have “one mind” on this subject. Wherever men are at variance with this word, they are at enmity with Christ, profession notwithstanding. There is no division in Christ (1 Cor 1:13), and therefore it is not possible for Him to bless contradicting views, or use them to accomplish His will.

BE BAPTIZED, EVERY ONE OF YOU

“ . . . and be baptized every one of you . . .” Other versions read, “and let every one of you be baptized,” NKJV “and let each one of you be baptized,” NASB “every one of you, and have baptism,” BBE “and be baptized, each of you,” CSB “and each of you must be baptized,” GWN “and every one of you must be baptized,” NJB “and each one of you must be immersed,” IE and “and, as an expression of it, let every one of you be baptized.” WILLIAMS

Our baptism is a point from which holy reasoning proceeds – reasoning that can bring unparalleled confidence to the heart. The sixth chapter of Romans is a case in point. Here the issue is not whether or not a person should be baptized. Rather, it is assumed that the professing “Christian” has been baptized.

Peter does not say baptism is a consideration, or an option to be pondered. He does not tell the people, “Now that you are saved, you need to be baptized.” There is no doubt that He remembered the words of the Lord Jesus. “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:16). Again, emphasizing what the Apostles themselves were to do, Jesus said, “Go therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” (Matt 28:19). With the emphasis placed on the benefits themselves, Luke records Jesus as saying, “And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem” (Luke 24:47).

Each of these statements is no doubt a summation of what Jesus said, providing insight, and a key perspective of His words.

Not Baptized in the Spirit

This is not, as some suppose, a reference to being baptized in the Holy Spirit – a baptism that Jesus Himself performs (Matt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16). That baptism is not represented as a commandment, or an obligation to be fulfilled by men. It is more of a result than an obligation.

The baptism of which Peter speaks is something men do, and it is associated with many facets of spiritual life. A list of some of associations follows – things tied to baptism.

1. Repentance (Acts 2:38).
2. The remission of sins (Acts 2:38).
3. The gift of the Holy Spirit (Acts 2:38).
4. Believing (Mark 16:16; Acts 8:12; 18:8).
5. Salvation, or being “saved” (Mark 16:16; 1 Peter 3:21).
6. Being buried with Christ (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
7. In baptism we were raised with Christ (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
8. Being identified with Christ's death (Rom 6:3).
9. Becoming dead to sin (Rom 6:2-3).
10. Becoming alive to God (Rom 6:3-11).
11. The circumcision of Christ, in which the whole body of sin is cut away (Col 2:11-12).
12. Faith in the operation, or working, of God (Col 2:12).
13. Coming into Christ (Gal 3:27).
14. Putting on Christ (Gal 3:27).
15. A commandment (Acts 10:48).
16. The confession of Christ (Acts 8:36-37).
17. Gladly receiving the Word of God (Acts 2:41).
18. Washing away our sins (Acts 22:16).
19. Coming into one body through the Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
20. Something that is done “in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit” (Matt 28:19).

Our baptism is a point from which holy reasoning proceeds – reasoning that can bring unparalleled confidence to the heart. The sixth chapter of Romans is a case in point. Here the issue is not whether or not a person should be baptized. Rather, it is assumed that the professing “Christian” has been baptized. Observe how Paul reasons with believers concerning their deadness to sin, and the total unreasonableness of catering to sin.

- We were baptized into Christ's death (6:3).
- We were buried with Him by baptism into death (6:4a).
- We were baptized into Christ's death in order that we might be raised from the dead (6:4b).
- We were raised from the dead to walk in newness of life (6:4b).
- Those truly planted in the likeness of Christ's death will, in fact, also be in the likeness of His resurrection (6:5).

- Our “old man” is crucified with Christ in order that “the body of sin,” or whole sinful nature, might be destroyed (6:6a).
- The “old man” was crucified in order that we might not “serve sin” (6:6b).
- The one who is “dead to sin” is freed from its dominating power (6:7).
- If we are really “dead with Christ ,” we will “also live with Him” (6:8).
- Once Christ was “raised from the dead,” He never again returned to that domain (6:9-10).
- Just that surely, those in Christ are to consider themselves to be “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord” – or by means of our union with Him (6:11).
- In view of our condition in Christ, we are not to allow sin to reign in our “mortal bodies,” that we should yield to its every whim (6:12).
- Neither are we to yield our various capacities of expression to sin (6:13a).
- Rather, we are to yield those capacities to God, as those who are “alive from the dead” (6:13b).
- Now that we are saved by grace, we are no longer “under the Law” (6:14).
- Grace does not allow us to live in sin (6:15).
- Rather than being ruled ruthlessly against our wills, we are ruled by that to which we subject ourselves – whether of “sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness” (6:16).
- Baptism is “the form of the doctrine,” and was “obeyed from the heart” by those in Christ (6:17). The “doctrine” is the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ, which is depicted in baptism (6:17).
- The freedom realized when we were baptized into Christ’s death, and raised up by the glory of the Father, caused us to become “servants of righteousness” (6:18).
- Just as surely as those who have been baptized were once servants of sin, just that surely they are now to yield their capacities “to righteousness unto holiness” (6:19).
- When those who have been baptized were the servants of sin, they had no righteousness. They had no approved fruit in the things of which they are now ashamed, which things always conclude in death (6:20-21).
- Now, being made from sin and become servants to God, they have their “fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life” (6:22).
- All of this experientially confirms that “the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord” (6:23).

SOME GENERAL OBSERVATIONS

If, as some allege, baptism has nothing to do with salvation, then the sixth chapter of Romans is nothing more than the spurious ranting of a madman. In order to justify the doctrine of salvation without baptism, one must take Jehudi’s “penknife,” and cut this chapter out of the Bible. As long as it is there, it stands as a condemnation of those who make baptism optional.

Although these things may appear unrelated to our text, I have taken the time to say them because they explain WHY Peter spoke as he did. In the context of that day, with murderers of Jesus standing before him, and being filled with the Holy Spirit, he spoke in perfect accord with “the mind of Christ.”

Although these things may appear unrelated to our text, I have taken the time to say them because they explain WHY Peter spoke as he did. In the context of that day, with murderers of Jesus standing before him, and being filled with the Holy Spirit, he spoke in perfect accord with “the mind of Christ.”

IN THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST

“ . . . in the name of Jesus Christ . . . ” Other versions read, “in the name of Jesus the Messiah,” CSB and “by the authority of Jesus the Messiah.” IE

Whatever one may think of baptism, Peter now associates it with Jesus Christ – the Savior of the world and Mediator of the New Covenant. You cannot connect unessential and optional things to the King of kings and Lord of lords. That would allow for men to be selective in their obedience.

Here, the phrase “in the name of Jesus Christ” means “of that upon which any action, effect, condition, rests as a basis or support; properly, upon the ground of; and of that upon which anything is sustained or upheld.” THAYER That is, they were to be baptized upon the basis of Christ’s person and command. If there was no other reason for being baptized than the word He gave to disciples (Matt 28:19; Mark 16:16), that was reason enough to cast down any suggestion that men should refuse to be baptized, or even hesitate to do so.

It is interesting that we have no example in the book of Acts of any convicted sinner refusing to be baptized, or any preacher of the Gospel saying it was not necessary to do so.

FOR THE REMISSION OF SINS

“ . . . for the remission of sins . . . ” Other versions read, “for the forgiveness of your sins,” NASB “so that your sins may be forgiven,” NRSV “unto the remission of your sins,” ASV “so that your sins will be forgiven,” GWN “to show you have received forgiveness for your sins,” NLT “to the remission of sins,” YLT “so that your sins may be forgiven,” IE “with a view to the remission of your sins,” WEYMOUTH “that you may have your sins forgiven,” WILLIAMS “to [or, for; or, because of] [the] forgiveness of sins,” ALT and “for the forgiveness of and release from your sins.” AMPLIFIED

Owing to flawed theology, some have taken it upon themselves to wrest this text. These are people who consider baptism to be unrelated to salvation, even though it is specifically associated with Christ’s death, burial, and resurrection, upon which salvation is founded. The New Living Translation (a true misnomer) reflects this confusion: “to show you have received forgiveness of your sins.” The Amplified Bible also suggests this as a possible meaning: “because of the forgiveness of sins” – although “because” can refer to intent.

This argument (whether baptism is because of remission already received, or in order to the receiving of remission) rages around a single Greek word – εις (eis). This is a preposition that can be translated in a number of ways, all of which are determined by the context. These possible translations include “into” (into the city, Matt 26:18) “toward” (to heaven, Lk 9:16), “in” (in the house, Mk 10:10) “among” (among the thorns, Mk 4:17), “to” (gave them over to, Rom 1:26), “for” (for a catch, Lk 5:4), “so that” (that they might be saved, 2 Thess 2:10), and “because of” (in the name of, Matt 10:41).

In the latter case, Jesus speaks of receiving a prophet “in the name of a prophet,” or because he is a prophet; and receiving a righteous man “in the name of a righteous man,” or because he is a righteous man. Seizing upon this usage, some reason that Peter was admonishing the people to be baptized because they had already been forgiven, and not in order to obtain remission. Let us consider the implications of such a position.

- In such a case, Peter would have announced remission before they had received it.
- The people would have received remission before they had gladly received the Word.
- Remission would have been announced upon the basis of repentance alone.
- Newness of life would have been experienced without being identified with Christ's death, into which death we are "baptized" (Rom 6:3-4).

The meaning of the text is that baptism was the appointed means through which the remission of sins was appropriated. This perfectly agrees with the words of the Lord Jesus Himself. Let it be clear, our doctrine must rest upon Divine utterance, not varied linguistic meanings. Here is what the Head of the church said. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16:16).

There are three activities to be considered. Two are done by men, and one is done by God: (1) Believe, (2) Baptized), and (3) Saved. The sequence in which Jesus used these words is beyond question, whether they are considered in Greek or in English. Theologically, men have viewed the appropriation of salvation in at least three different ways – as least as it touches upon this text.

- Believe, be baptized, be saved.
- Believe, be saved, then be baptized.
- Saved by Divine appointment, then believe, and after that be baptized.

There really is no question about this among honest souls. Jesus has spoken plainly, and, as His representative, Peter could not possibly have spoken in contradiction of the One in whose name he was preaching.

I am sure that none of the listeners would have disputed with Peter about whether or not they had to be baptized. After all, this was the only thing they could do perfectly, and it was perfectly doable. Being baptized is one of the very few things men can do with near-perfection. In view of this, it is a marvel that men have chosen to be so contentious about this ordinance, squabbling over its necessity as though it was vague, ambiguous, or not necessary. Men ought to rejoice to submit to be baptized – to have the opportunity to participate in an ordinance to which such marvelous and plenteous benefits are attached.

Keep in mind the magnitude of the sins of which this particular multitude was guilty: taking Jesus, crucifying Him, and killing Him by means of "wicked hands" (2:33). Now Peter announces a salvation so grand and so extensive that even these people can be forgiven! But Peter now provides further incentive to obey.

YOU WILL RECEIVE THE GIFT

“ 38c . . . and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.”

It is at this point that Peter separates baptism into Christ from John's baptism. The remission of sins is not the unique thing about this baptism, even though extensive arguments have arisen over that matter. John's baptism was also in order to the remission of sins. As it is written, "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins" (Mark 1:4). And again it is said of John, "And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins" (Luke 3:3). You may recall that those who did not submit to John's baptism are said to have rejected the counsel of God. "And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John. But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him "

(Luke 7:29-30). Who is the person willing to affirm that baptism into Christ has less importance than John's baptism? In fact, we do have a record of "certain disciples" who had been baptized "unto John's baptism." When it was determined that they had not been baptized into Christ, and consequently had not received the Holy Spirit, "they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 19:1-5). This confirms that baptism into Christ supercedes and now even invalidates John's baptism. This verse will lead us to that inevitable conclusion.

YE SHALL RECEIVE

" . . . and ye shall receive . . ." Other versions read, "and you shall receive," NKJV and you will receive," NIV "and you will have . . . given to you," BBE "then you will receive," GWN "so that you may receive," MRD and "then you also shall receive." LIVING

Here is the first promise Peter directly offers to his hearers. He has already told them of Joel's promise that "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (2:21). However, he has provided no details on the matter of calling upon the name of the Lord . Now, the people are actually calling upon the name of the Lord, and Peter will tell them how salvation will be ministered to them. First, upon their baptism into Christ (Gal 3:27), they will experience "the remission of sins ." That is, the record of their sins will be "blotted out" (Isa 44:22; Acts 3:19), and their conscience will be freed from guilt (Heb 9:14). Now he tells them they will also receive a "gift." This is not a gift that it is possible for them to receive, but is one they will receive. This is not something they ought to receive, but could possibly pass them by. Upon their repentance and baptism, this is what will be given to them by the exalted Christ.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST

" . . . the gift of the Holy Ghost." Other versions read, "the gift of the Holy Spirit," NKJV "and you will have the Holy Spirit given to you," BBE "receive the Holy Spirit as a gift," GWN "this gift , the Holy Spirit," LIVING and "the free gift of the Holy Spirit." ALT

Here we see the act of man and the promise of God tied together. Man is given something to do that brings him into the realization of a Divine commitment. This sheds some light on a statement made concerning this great salvation: "And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him" (Heb 5:9). This is not "obedience" as made known under the Law. That obedience had nothing to do with faith, for "the Law does not rest upon faith" NRSV (Gal 3:12). This is an obedience that springs forth from faith. As it is written, "Through Him and for His name's sake, we received grace and apostleship to call people . . .to the obedience that comes from faith" NIV (Rom 1:5).

"The Gift"

Ordinarily, we would think of a gift as something not attached to conditions. Here, however, is a gift from God that is connected with the conditions of repentance and baptism. Those conditions, however, do not produce a merit on the part of men, causing them to deserve the gift. Rather, they bring men into the area in which the gift can be received. Both repentance and baptism have separating qualities. Repentance separates us from the direction in which we lived, turning us around so that we face another goal, and progress toward it. Baptism separates us from the condition and guilt of our past, moving us from death to life, and from a defiled conscience to one that is purged. Now, "the gift" can be received – not because we deserve, but because we are in the place where it can be conferred.

It is to be understood that this gift is essential to salvation. It is not a mere novelty to be enjoyed, like a new possession that has no purposeful utility, but is only used during times of leisure or for purposes of entertainment.

“The Holy Spirit”

The “gift of the Holy Spirit” is the Spirit Himself, not something that He gives. Peter has already identified the enthroned Christ as the Giver: “Therefore being exalted to the right hand of God, and having received from the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, He poured out this which you now see and hear ” (Acts 2:33). Peter does not turn from his emphasis upon Christ the Giver to the Holy Spirit’s gifts.

This is the promise to which Jesus Himself referred when He said, “If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water” (John 7:38). Clarifying this word, the Spirit adds, “(But this spake He of the Spirit, which they that believe on Him should receive : for the Holy Ghost was not yet given ; because that Jesus was not yet glorified)” (John 7:39). Thus, Jesus spoke of receiving something that was given, and Peter declared the same thing, referring to a gift that was to be received. The Holy Spirit Himself is the gift of reference.

Peter is particularly referring to the prophecy of Joel: “I will pour out of My Spirit upon all flesh” (Acts 2:17; Joel 2:28-29). That pouring was never intended for the apostles alone, for they were not “all flesh,” nor were they “sons and daughters.” While they did experience some unique gifts and abilities (Acts 2:43; 5:12; 2 Cor 12:12), the “gift of the Holy Spirit” was not unique to them. Nor, indeed, is there the slightest hint in the prophets of such a thing.

The receiving of the Holy Spirit is something that is common among all who are in Christ Jesus. No one should dispute this, for it is consistently declared.

- “And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us ” (Rom 5:5).

- “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His ” (Rom 8:9).

- “For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption , whereby we cry, Abba, Father” (Rom 8:15).

What is there about Christ’s exaltation that suggests He would pour out the Holy Spirit upon twelve men alone, with the purpose of giving them unique abilities that were intended for only a time. How can such a view in any way be termed “Gospel” – and why would Peter declare such a word to a general audience?

“What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God , and ye are not your own?” (1 Cor 6:19).

- “Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts” (2 Cor 1:22).

- “Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit ” (2 Cor 5:5).

- “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts , crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

- “He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us His holy Spirit ” (1 Thess 4:8).

- “For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost ” (Heb 6:4).

- “And he that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in Him, and He in him. And hereby we know that He abideth in us, by the Spirit which He hath given us ” (1 John 3:24).

- “Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and He in us, because He hath given us of His Spirit ” (1 John 4:13).

Now, I have only cited the texts that affirm those in Christ have, in fact, been given the Holy Spirit. I have not dealt with the various ministries performed through the power of the Spirit, or the sundry abilities that He confers upon men. Those considerations are not common to the household of faith, and our text is speaking of something that is common.

The Spirit that is promised is the same one Jesus had poured out – it was the gift Peter and those with him had received. That is the point of this word. The only meaningfully exposure of these people to the Holy Spirit was taking place before them. Peter had interpreted it by saying it fulfilled the word of Joel, but He is offering to the people the very same Spirit he and the others had received.

Remember, Peter is laying the foundation of the church, and declaring the requirements for induction into Christ. His words cannot be referring to unique experiences, or to ones that were intended to be temporary. Nothing about Christ’s exaltation pertained to temporal conditions. Jesus is permanently out of Hades (2:27a). His body is forever out of the grave (2:27b). He has been raised from the dead to sit on David’s throne (2:30). He is exalted into the heavens for all of time (2:34). He has made Lord and Christ⁵ – invested with all power in heaven and earth for all time (2:36).

What is there about Christ’s exaltation that suggests He would pour out the Holy Spirit upon twelve men alone, with the purpose of giving them unique abilities that were intended for only a time. How can such a view in any way be termed “Gospel” – and why would Peter declare such a word to a general audience?

Now Peter will elaborate on the matter, leaving no doubt concerning what is intended by this word. He will speak with a clarity becoming of the occasion.

THE PROMISE IS TO EVERYONE WHO IS CALLED BY GOD

“ 39a For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.”

Peter now dispels all doubt about the applicability of the promise of the Spirit to his listeners. “The promise” of reference is the Holy Spirit. This expression is frequently associated with the sending of the Spirit to those who are in Christ Jesus.

- “And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high” (Luke 24:49).

- “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost , He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33).

- “That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Jesus Christ; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith ” (Gal 3:14)

- “In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise ” (Eph 1:13).

- “And, being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father , which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. (Acts 1:4-5).

This is not the promise of speaking in tongues, but the promise of giving the Holy Spirit. It is not the promise of miraculous gifts, but of receiving the Holy Spirit of God.

THE PROMISE IS TO YOU AND YOUR CHILDREN

“For the promise is unto you, and to your children . . .” Other versions read, “the promise is for you and your children,” NASB “the promise is for you, for your children,” NRSV “the promise is to you and to your children,” RSV “the word of God is for you and for your children,” BBE “for the promise is made unto you, and to your children,” GENEVA “This promise belongs to you and to your children,” GWN “the promise that was made is for you and your children,” NJB “for Christ promised Him to each one of you . . . and to your children,” LIVING “For the promise [of the Holy Spirit] is to and for you and your children,” AMPLIFIED and “For this great promise is for you and your children.” PHILLIPS

This parallels with Joel’s words, “ your sons . . . your daughters . . . your young men . . . your old men” (2:17; Joel 2:28). This was not an outpouring intended only for the Apostles. That is not what Joel promised, and it is not what Peter preached.

The promise of the Holy Spirit is included in the vast array of promises that were given exclusively to Israel. Thus Paul writes, “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises ; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5).

Once again, I emphasize that Peter is putting down the foundation, opening the door to the Kingdom of God with the “keys” that were given to him (Matt 16:19). His words cannot be viewed in a provincial manner, or as being applicable to a few, and only relating to the initial activities of the church.

The expression “to you and your children” confirms that “the promise” is to all generations of Jews. They only have to meet the conditions to receive it, just as the generation standing before Peter was about to receive it.

This being the case, there is no hint in Peter’s words that Israel would be summarily cut off, and the Gentiles would be grafted in their place. Although some do believe this has happened, this is not at all the case. Peter is not delivering a special Gospel for the Jews alone, but the “truth of the Gospel,” which pertains to all men (Gal 2:5,14; Col 1:5).

Once again, I emphasize that Peter is putting down the foundation, opening the door to the Kingdom of God with the “keys” that were given to him (Matt 16:19). His words cannot be viewed in a provincial manner, or as being applicable to a few, and only relating to the initial activities of the church.

THE PROMISE IS TO ALL WHO ARE AFAR OFF

“ . . . and to all that are afar off . . .” Other versions read, “and to all who are far off,” NASB “for all who are far away,” NRSV “and even to the Gentiles,” NLT “even to those in distant lands,” LIVING and “it is also for people who are far away.” IE

Now Peter, speaking under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit announces that this promise is also applicable to other nations, both distant and disassociated with Israel.

These are the “other sheep” of whom Jesus spoke, declaring that He must “bring” them into the “fold” (John 10:16). Unwittingly, Caiaphas also spoke of this. “And one of them, named Caiaphas, being the high priest that same year, said unto them, Ye know nothing at all, nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not. And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation; and not for that nation only, but that also He should gather together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad ” (John 11:49-52).

The promise of the Gentiles being participants in God’s great salvation was sprinkled throughout the Prophets. Here are a few of the references.

- “His name shall endure for ever: his name shall be continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in Him: all nations shall call Him blessed” (Psa 72:17).
- “ All nations whom thou hast made shall come and worship before thee, O Lord; and shall glorify thy name” (Psa 86:9).
- “The LORD hath made known his salvation: his righteousness hath he openly showed in the sight of the heathen. He hath remembered his mercy and his truth toward the house of Israel: all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God” (Psa 98:2-3).

The acceptance of the Gentiles is one of the great aspects of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. This was not a reaction to Israel’s rejection of Christ, but was a purpose determined before the foundation of the world, as confirmed by its announcement through the Prophets.

“And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and His rest shall be glorious” (Isa 11:10).

- “Sing unto the LORD a new song, and His praise from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof ” (Isa 42:10).
- “And He said, It is a light thing that Thou shouldest be My Servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give Thee for a light to the Gentiles , that Thou mayest be My salvation unto the end of the earth ” (Isa 49:6).
- “The LORD hath made bare His holy arm in the eyes of all the nations ; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God” (Isa 52:10).
- “The Lord GOD which gathereth the outcasts of Israel saith, Yet will I gather others to Him, beside those that are gathered unto Him ” (Isa 56:8).
- “And many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be My people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent Me unto thee” (Zech 2:11).
- “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities : and the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD” (Zech 8:20-22).

The acceptance of the Gentiles is one of the great aspects of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. This was not a reaction to Israel’s rejection of Christ, but was a purpose determined before the foundation of the world, as confirmed by its announcement through the Prophets.

EVEN AS MANY AS THE LORD OUR GOD SHALL CALL

“ . . . even as many as the Lord our God shall call.” Other versions read, “as many as the Lord our God shall call unto Himself,” NASB “everyone whom the Lord our God calls to Him,” NRSV “even all those who may be marked out by the Lord our God,” BBE “as many as the Lord our God may call,” DARBY “It belongs to everyone who worships the Lord our God,” GWN “for all those whom the Lord our God is calling to Himself,” NJB “who has been called by the Lord our God,” LIVING and “[even] to and for as many as the Lord our God invites and bids to come to Himself.” AMPLIFIED

Here is an aspect of salvation that is not consistently declared these days. The promise of the Spirit is for “as many as the Lord our God shall call.” This puts the initiation of salvation in the Divine court. It all has to start with Him!

Those in Christ are referred to as “the called” (Rom 1:6), “called to be saints,” Rom 1:7; 1 Cor 1:2;), and “them which are called” (1 Cor 1:24). Those for whom God works everything for good are said to be “called according to His purpose” (Rom 8:29), and those He justifies are said to be “whom He called” (Rom 8:30). The whole church, both Jews and Gentiles are referred to as those “whom He hath called” (Rom 9:24). We have been “called into the fellowship of His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord” NKJV (1 Cor 1:9). We were also “called into the grace of Christ” (Gal 1:6), and “called into liberty” NKJV (Gal 5:13), and “called in one hope of your calling” (Eph 4:4). We have been “called in one body” (Col 3:15), “called” into “His Kingdom and glory” (1 Thess 2:12), “called . . . unto holiness” (1 Thess 4:7), and “called” to “eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). We have even been “called with a holy calling” (1 Tim 1:9), and only those who are “called . . . receive the promise of eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15). God is described as “He which hath called you” (1 Pet 1:15) – the One who has “called you out of darkness into His marvelous light” (1 Pet 2:9), and “called . . . unto His eternal glory” (1 Pet 5:10).

Those in Christ are admonished to “see your calling” (1 Cor 1:26), and “make your calling and election sure” (2 Pet 1:10).

The Meaning of “Call”

We ought to expect any term that is associated with the Lord to be important, and pregnant with meaning. That certainly is true of this word– “call.”

The Greek word from which “call” is translated is proskale,shtai (pros-kal-eh-on-tie). Its root meaning is “to call to oneself; to bid to come to oneself,” THAYER and “summon, call in . . . appoint.” FRIBERG

There is a sense in which the call of God can be ignored. The prophets spoke of this – a very real call by God that was really despised.

- “Wherefore, when I came, was there no man? when I called, was there none to answer . . .” (Isa 50:2).
- “Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer ; when I spake, ye did not hear . . .” (Isa 65:12).
- “I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer ; when I spake, they did not hear . . .” (Isa 66:4).
- “. . . I called you, but ye answered not” (Jer 7:13).

In the above sense, “many are called, but few are chosen” (Matt 22:14; 20:16). However, in the above texts from Matthew, a different word is translated “called.” It is not the same as the word used in our text. Matthew uses the word klhtoi , (klay-tos), which accents the idea of being “invited.” THAYER

Peter's use of "called" is stronger than an invitation – although there is an invitation inherent in the call. We know this is the case because the promise is to "as many as the Lord our God shall call" – not as many as respond to the call. In this case, those who are "called" DO respond because they have been given "ears to hear" (Deut 29:4; Matt 11:15).

These two uses of the word "call" provide differing views of God's activity man-ward. A "call" that is primarily an invitation views salvation prior to human involvement. That is a call that comes by means of the Gospel: "Whereunto he called you by our gospel, to the obtaining of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Thess 2:14).

A "call," in the sense of being effectual, is accounting for human involvement, explaining why they were saved. That view couples the "call" with those to whom the call came being "given" to "believe" (Phil 1:29).

Isaiah prophesied of this latter sense of calling. "I am sought of them that asked not for me; I am found of them that sought me not: I said, Behold Me, behold Me, unto a nation that was not called by my name" (Isa 65:1). The New American Standard Bible reads, "I permitted Myself to be sought by those who did not ask for Me; I permitted Myself to be found by those who did not seek Me. I said, 'Here am I, here am I,' To a nation which did not call on My name."

The words "Behold Me, Behold Me!" speak of the kind of call of which our text speaks. It is the Divine explanation for why God was sought by them that asked not for Him, and was found by those who were not seeking Him. Paul confirms the truth of this grace when he wrote to the Romans, "But Esaias is very bold, and saith, I was found of them that sought me not; I was made manifest unto them that asked not after me" (Rom 10:20). This explains why the promise could be made to "as many as the Lord our God shall call." It is not merely that an invitation was offered to those who were not seeking. The Lord declares "I have been found by those who did not seek me; I have shown Myself to those who did not ask for Me." RSV

I want to reiterate that "the promise" is the one Peter declared was being fulfilled at that time – the promise made by Joel: "I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh" (Joel 2:28; Acts 2:16-18). Peter is providing the rationale behind his words, "and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit" NKJV (2:39). Upon repenting and being baptized, his hearers will surely receive this gift because the promise of the Spirit applies to them, and to their children, and even to the Gentiles – "everyone whom the Lord our God calls to Him." RSV

Now we again see the utter absurdity of the teaching that says the Spirit was poured out only on the apostles, and was only intended for them. This view contradicts so many facets of the truth it is a marvel that anyone has embraced it.

- The promised Spirit was for all flesh (Joel 2:28a; Acts 2:17a).
- It was for the sons and daughters of the Jews (Joel 2:28b; Acts 2:17b).
- it was for the young men and the old man (Joel 2:28c; Acts 2:17c).
- It was for God's servants and handmaidens (Joel 2:29a; Acts 2:18a).
- It was for the ones now being addressed by Peter (2:39a).
- It was for the children of the ones being addressed by Peter (2:39b).
- It was for the Gentiles, who were afar off (2:39c).
- Ten to fifteen years later, Peter affirms that the very same promise was fulfilled in the house of Cornelius (Acts 11:15).
- Paul affirms that the Spirit has been "poured out abundantly" upon all who are in Christ Jesus (Tit 3:6).

Truly the promise is to everyone the Lord our God shall call . That is not a word that became obsolete after the day of Pentecost. Throughout the Apostolic writings, the people of God are told of things that are wrought within them through the power of the Holy Spirit. These include love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance (Gal 5:22). It includes everything that falls under the categories of “righteousness and truth” (Eph 5:22). The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Spirit (Rom 5:5). It is “through the Spirit” that we mortify the deeds of the body, subduing the sinful nature (Rom 8:13). The Spirit confirms to us that we are the sons of God (Rom 8:16). From within, He helps our infirmities through effectual intercession (Rom 8:26-27). Righteousness, peace, and joy are all realized through Him (Rom 14:17). We “abound in hope” through His power (Rom 15:14). The New Covenant in which presently participate is administered by the Spirit (2 Cor 3:8). He is the One who is changing us from glory to glory, conforming us to the image of God’s Son (2 Cor 3:18). We even obey the truth “through the Spirit” (1 Pet 1:22).

What is there about life in Christ Jesus that does not require an abundant “supply of the Spirit” (Phil 1:19)? What part of the newness of life is independent of the Holy Spirit? Even at the threshold of the experience of salvation, we are washed, sanctified, and justified “ by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11).

All of these things were neither known by the people nor declared to them by Peter on the day of Pentecost. However, Peter spoke so as to awaken holy expectation. Something significant had happened to Christ’s disciples when the Spirit was poured forth upon them, and it would be no different for those who heard his voice. He did not tell the people how they would react, or what external phenomenon might take place. Peter devoted not so much as a syllable of speech to such things. All of that would have been pointless, for such things are determined by the Lord Himself. He did not tell the people the same outward things they had experienced would also be realized by the hearers. Today, there are some men who are telling people such things, but Peter did not. That was not the manner of his preaching.

Peter has accented Christ Jesus, who is the One pouring forth the Spirit. He told the people the exalted Christ did this (Acts 2:33). Now he assures the people that the pouring, or shedding forth, was not completed. It was for them also.

HE HAD MORE TO SAY

“ 40a And with many other words did he testify and exhort . . .”

Once again, let me remind you that we are being exposed to a man who is filled with the Holy Spirit. His mental and expressive capacities are sanctified, and the Holy Spirit is actually speaking through him – even though Peter is well aware of what he is saying. His spirit has been “joined” to the Lord, and they are “one spirit”

Once again, let me remind you that we are being exposed to a man who is filled with the Holy Spirit. His mental and expressive capacities are sanctified, and the Holy Spirit is actually speaking through him – even though Peter is well aware of what he is saying. His spirit has been “joined” to the Lord, and they are “one spirit” (1 Cor 6:17). When He was yet among them, the principle of speaking to which we are now being exposed, was revealed by Jesus. “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak . For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you ” (Matt 10:19-20).

Peter has not been “delivered up,” in the sense of that Matthew text. However, he is standing before the people who took, crucified, and killed Jesus through the hands of lawless men. The Lord is giving him words to say. He is not doing it in a mechanical and impersonal way. Jesus is rather enabling Peter to correlate Scripture, associate his experience of Jesus with the anticipatory words of the prophets, and consciously speak the mind of the Lord while in perfect accord with it.

We must therefore take Peter's words as a revelation of the mind of the Lord. This is precisely how the Spirit speaks. It is exactly how the Lord of glory thinks. This is not the mere expression of a man, but the words of someone who has been joined to the Lord and knows it.

WITH MANY OTHER WORDS

“And with many other words . . .” Other versions read, “And with much more such words,” BBE “Peter said much more,” GWN “in many other words,” MRD “he spoke to them for a long time using many other arguments,” NJB “then Peter continued preaching for a long time,” NLT “then Peter preached a long sermon,” LIVING “Peter was warning them with many other words,” IE “and with many more appeals,” WEYMOUTH “with many more words he continued,” ISV “and [Peter] solemnly and earnestly witnessed . . . with much more continuous speaking,” AMPLIFIED and “Peter said much more than this.” PHILLIPS

Peter is not finished. The matter salvation is not simplistic and momentary as some have led us to believe. The main objective here is not to make sure the people are baptized – even though that must be done. He will assist the people in discerning the gravity of their situation.

“MANY Other words”

Peter uses “many other words.” The word “many” is a significant one. It indicates a large quantity, yet is not limited to quantity. It comes from the Greek word plei,osin (plei-o-sen), which has a root meaning of “numerous, abundant, plenteous,” THAYER “heartily . . . a long time,” UBS “great in degree of comparison.” GINGRICH The word also implies “greater in quality, superior, more excellent.” STRONG’S It incorporates the idea of “further” STRONG’S – that is, Peter developed the thought extensively more.

This is an aspect of “reasoning” – being able to take a thought and develop it further, showing the full sense of it, so that a fuller perspective comes within reach of the hearer. The modern church is especially weak in the area of reasoning with words. You may recall that when Paul spoke to Felix he “reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come” (Acts 24:25). The result was that Felix “trembled,” and asked Paul to leave. Oh, that those who profess to be preachers and teachers were more adept in the holy art of “reasoning” on the things of God! Such an activity will often call for “many more words.”

A Modern Situation

I have often heard some question whether or not people knew what they were doing when they were baptized. Of course, no person who has “obeyed the form of the doctrine” delivered to them knew at that time what he now knows of his baptism (Rom 6:17). The original sincerity of the individual is not to be determined by the level of understanding that is realized after years of growth.

Perhaps one way to ensure an acceptable level of sincerity, is to use the “many other words” method. Rather than attempting quick and easy conversions with a minimal amount of effort on the part of the speaker, and abbreviated thinking on the part of the hearer, why not make every effort to clarify the real situation of the hearer?

Behold how the man who is filled with the Spirit speaks. This will, in part, account for the response that will be realized.

TESTIFY AND EXHORT

“ . . . did he testify and exhort . . .” Other versions read, “testified and kept on exhorting,” NASB “he warned them and pleaded with them,” NIV “many other arguments and exhorted them,” NRSV “he gave them his witness , offering them salvation,” BBE “testified and strongly urged them,” CSB “bore witness and continued to exhort them,” ESV “he besought and exhorted them,” GENEVA “he testified to them, and entreated of them,” MRD “ strongly urging all of his listeners,” NLT “he was encouraging them,” IE “ solemnly warned and entreated them,” WEYMOUTH “he continued to bear testimony , and kept entreating them,” MONTGOMERY “warned (reproved, advised , encouraged) them,” AMPLIFIED “he gave his testimony and implored them,” PHILLIPS and “urgently warning and urging .” ALT

To testify means to “earnestly, religiously to charge . . . to attest, testify to, solemnly affirm,” THAYER “earnestly ask, strongly tell, strongly urge, insist,” FRIBERG “declare solemnly and emphatically, charge under solemn oath,” UBS “to make a serious declaration on the basis of presumed personal knowledge,” LOUW-NIDA and “to be in earnest.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

You see, then, with what vigor Peter speaks to the people. He is at once solemn, emphatic, and earnest. He affirms, insists, and urges. There is no casualness in his words. The content, tone, and manner of his speech all convey the ideas of importance and urgency.

The word “exhort” is also a significant one, denoting pressing the issue upon the hearers. It has a lexical meaning of “call for, summon . . . entreaty . . . admonish,” THAYER “speaking with persistence, earnestly ask for, implore, urge,” FRIBERG and “to plead for, earnest request, appeal.” LOUW-NIDA

Again, behold the manner in which Peter speaks, calling for action, summoning, admonishing, imploring, urging, and earnestly persisting. He does not leave his hearers with the slightest suggestion that what he has affirmed can be ignored, or that an immediate response is not essential. He knows he is dealing with people who have unwittingly been the vassals of the devil. He is sensitive of the fact that such people must be snatched from the fire, and that the laborer who does so must show mercy, being “mixed with fear” NIV (Jude 1:23). He has not proclaimed an alternative Gospel, but the only one that is invested with Divine power (Rom 1:16). He has not declared a Savior that is one of many, but One who is the “only Name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12). There is only one acceptable response to such a Redeemer, and it must not be delayed.

Oh, the utter bane of shallow and frothy approaches to evangelism that leave men thinking they can delay to “repent and be baptized!” May the Lord remove from men all gospels that leave people thinking they can delay to obey the Gospel. There is no place in earnest appeals for the souls of men for levity, casualness, and intellectual novelty! Our text confirms this is the case, so there is no need to argue the point.

Is there a thinking man in all the world that imagines Peter could have done better with a video presentation? Would he have been wiser to have couched his presentation in a modern scenario of life, or filled it with contemporary illustrations? How would he have fared if he had presented only the introduction to Gospel, and asked the people to come back tomorrow so they could hear the rest? To some, all of that may seem like pointless chatter. However, it is my firm persuasion that the modern gurus of evangelism have not improved on the approach of Peter.

Candidly, I am angry at those who have handled this text in a cursory manner, and have taught others to do the same. I am angry because I myself was a victim of their misguided and uninformed manners. Like the religious leaders of Jesus’ day, they have muddied the waters and blocked the door of entrance to the Kingdom of God (Matt 23:13)! My personal persuasion is that Peter would not be welcomed in the average church. If that is true then Jesus is not welcomed either (Luke 10:16).

SAVE YOURSELVES FROM THIS UNTOWARD GENERATION

“ 40b . . . saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.”

Luke will now give a summation of Peter’s extended words. This is the matter concerning which he delivered “many other words.” it was the point concerning which he testified and exhorted, speaking persistently, with great urgency, and with imploring tones.

SAVE YOURSELVES

“ . . . saying, Save yourselves . . .” Other versions read, “Be saved,” NKJV “come out,” BBE “live ye from,” MRD and “escape from,” WEYMOUTH

This escape is from a generation – a generation that is headed in the wrong direction, and is destined for condemnation.

Peter’s words will make no sense to a Babylonian, or someone at home in the nominal church. But they are serious words. Even the sound of them arrests our attention. “SAVE YOURSELVES!”

Here, the word “save” does not mean to remit sins, be justified, or raised from death in trespasses and sins. This is something assigned to men, and it is to be done. Peter will be specific in his use these words. Let me first establish what “save” means. This is not a simplistic thing that does not relate to actual life. I know that for some, salvation, or being saved, is nothing more than a theory, with no real substance to it.

The word “save” comes from a word with this lexical meaning: “to keep safe and sound, to rescue from danger and destruction . . . to bring safe forth from . . . save from evils that obstruct,” THAYER “to deliver, to rescue, to make safe,” LOUW-NIDA and “escape to a place,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

There are two perspectives seen in the word “save.” First, what one is saved from , and second, what one is saved to . Speaking of salvation in general, we are saved:

- From sin to righteousness.
- From death to life.
- From Satan to Christ.
- From condemnation to justification.
- From the power of Satan to God.
- From darkness to light.
- From vanity to purpose.
- From bondage to freedom.
- From deception to illumination.
- From alienation to reconciliation.
- From uselessness to sanctification.
- From enmity to fellowship.
- From having no part to obtaining an inheritance.

In this text, the emphasis is placed on the “from” – what we are saved from. There is a further emphasis on human involvement, so that the meaning of saved is synonymous with ESCAPE. Here we are speaking of getting away from, coming out of, departing, running away, and fleeing. There is a realm in which unspeakable danger – yea, eternal jeopardy – exists! Peter calls upon his listeners to get out of that realm – escape from it, flee from it, depart from it. “SAVE YOURSELVES!”

FROM THIS UNTOWARD GENERATION

“ . . . from this untoward generation.” Other versions read, “this perverse generation,” NKJV “this corrupt generation,” NIV “this crooked generation,” RSV “this evil generation,” BBE “froward generation,” GENEVA “the evils of the nation,” LIVING “this twisted generation of people,” IE “that crooked age,” WILLIAMS “this crooked (perverse, wicked, unjust) generation,” AMPLIFIED “this perverted generation,” PHILLIPS and “this wicked people.” GNB

And what is it from which they are to save themselves? It is not from sin, for Jesus alone can for that! It is not from condemnation, for they must be “delivered” from that. It is not from the power of darkness, for that is work the Lord alone can accomplish (Col 1:13).

This escape is from a generation – a generation that is headed in the wrong direction, and is destined for condemnation.

“Generation”

Precisely what is a generation? A generation refers to one’s nativity or birth (Gen 31:3; Matt 1:17). It is a people who are of the same stock, having been begotten by a common father – a family (Matt 17:17; Mk 9:19). It can be a race of men, or a multitude of people living at the same time (Matt 24:34; Mk 13:30; Lk 1:48). It can also refer to an age, or period of time (Acts 14:16; Eph 3:5; Col 1:26).

There are entire periods of time that are especially noted for evil – like the days of Noah (1 Pet 3:20; Gen 3:5,11,13). There are whole groups of people who are noted for their wickedness – like Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 18:20; 19:13). There is a generation that is noted for cursing father and mother, being pure in their own eyes though not washed from their filthiness, who are lofty in their own eyes (Prov 30:11-14). God was especially grieved with a whole generation of Israelites (Psa 95:10).

God said there were generations who hated Him (Ex 20:5; Deut 5:9). Asaph the psalmist spoke of a generation who “set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God” (Psa 78:8). Jeremiah spoke of a generation associated with God’s wrath (Jer 7:29). John the Baptist and Jesus spoke of a “generation of vipers” (Matt 3:7; 12:34). Jesus spoke of an “adulterous and sinful generation” (Mk 8:38).

It is imperative that a person comprehends the kind of generation in which he is living. David spoke of a generation that sought God (Psa 24:6). He also mentioned “the generation of the upright” (Psa 112:2), and “one generation” that would praise God’s works “to another” generation (Psa 145:4). What kind of people are you identified with? To what “generation” do you willfully belong?

“Untoward”

An “untoward” generation is one that is directionally crooked, curved, and headed in the wrong direction. Morally and spiritually it is a perverse, wicked, unfair, surly, and froward generation. STRONG’S An “untoward generation” is opposed to God, and thus chooses its own way over the ways of God. The thoughts and ways of such a generation contradict the thoughts and ways of God, and are set in opposition to Him. Given the opportunity to do so, there is nothing such a generation will not do to maintain its own wicked preferences. Untoward generations have yielded men who killed their own brother (Gen 4:8), those who murmured against Moses (Ex 16:2), and others who killed the Prophets (Matt 23:31). There have been others who “killed the prince of life” (Acts 3:15), stoned Stephen (Acts 7:59), and took a vow not to eat until they had killed Paul (Acts 23:12). Those who seek the Lord must escape from such a generation, saving themselves from it.

Noah lived in such a generation, and therefore had to escape from it. By faith he “prepared an ark to the saving of his house” (Heb 11:7), saving himself from an untoward generation. Angelic messengers from the Lord urged Lot to save himself from an untoward generation, saying, “Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed” (Gen 19:17).

Those to whom Peter was speaking were part of an untoward religious generation. They honored God “with their lips, but their heart was far from” Him (Matt 23:8). Using “many other words,” Peter urged his listeners to come out from that generation – to separate themselves from it, thus saving themselves from its dreadful destiny.

By repenting, they were turning around, forsaking the direction of the “untoward generation,” and having no more to do with it. Their hearts and minds would now be set in another direction, and affections set on things above. They were thus turning from their way “to God” (Acts 26:20), for repentance is “toward God” (Acts 20:21). By being baptized, they were becoming “dead to sin” by virtue of being baptized into Christ’s death (Rom 6:3,11). Thus they would be escaping from the world, which lies “under the sway of the wicked one,” NKJV and is therefore condemned (1 John 5:19). This, of course, would bring them into accord with the will of God, which moved Jesus to give Himself “for our sins, that He might deliver us from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4).

In our deliverance from the world, we are given something to do, just as Israel was given when they were saved out of the land of Egypt. The Holy Spirit speaks of that great deliverance after this manner.

- “ . . . the Lord, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt” (Jude 1:5).
- “ I brought up Israel out of Egypt, and delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of all kingdoms, and of them that oppressed you” (1 Sam 10:18).
- “Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself ” (Ex 19:4).
- “And they departed from Rameses in the first month, on the fifteenth day of the first month; on the morrow after the passover the children of Israel went out with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians” (Num 33:3).
- “And Moses told his father in law all that the LORD had done unto Pharaoh and to the Egyptians for Israel's sake, and all the travail that had come upon them by the way, and how the LORD delivered them ” (Ex 18:8).

And yet, there was a sense in which Israel saved themselves from Egypt – by doing the things God required of them. I trust you have not forgotten the extensiveness of their involvement in the deliverance. Here are some of their activities.

- Killed the passover lamb (Ex 12:21).
- Placed the blood of the lamb upon their doorposts, on the side and on the top (Ex 12:7-7).

While it may not be popular to do so, it seems to me that there is a need to make the people more aware of the jeopardy of remaining connected to an “untoward generation.” The church must make much of this facet of salvation to our generation. If the revealed will of God is to “deliver us from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), then bringing the world into the church is a most serious transgression.

- Roasted the passover lamb and made unleavened bread (Ex 12:8).
- Ate the passover lamb, with unleavened bread and bitter herbs (Ex 12:8-10).
- Girded themselves, and held their staffs in their hands (Ex 12:11).
- Spoiled the Egyptians, gathering gold, silver, and clothing (Ex 12:35).
- Carried their bread-dough, and bound their kneading troughs in their clothing upon their shoulders (Ex 12:34).
- Took their flocks, and herds, “even very much cattle” (Ex 12:38).
- Baked unleavened cakes and brought them out of Egypt (Ex 12:39).

Now, Peter calls upon people to engage in activities associated with deliverance from sin, and thus separate themselves from the “untoward generation” among whom they found themselves.

What About Today

While it may not be popular to do so, it seems to me that there is a need to make the people more aware of the jeopardy of remaining connected to an “untoward generation.” The church must make much of this facet of salvation to our generation. If the revealed will of God is to “deliver us from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), then bringing the world into the church is a most serious transgression. If men are allowed in the church while holding on to worldly manners and values, then we must treat this word from Peter – a man filled with Spirit, as though it has no relevance for the people of our time. God will not treat lightly those who so blatantly impose their corrupted wills upon us. Such people are a blotch on the church, and must be thrust from it.

THEY THAT GLADLY RECEIVED HIS WORD

“41a Then they that gladly received his word were baptized . . .”

How will such an uncompromising word be received by the people? They have been charged with killing Christ, even though He was approved by God in their very midst by incontestable miracles, wonders, and signs. Peter has called upon them to repent, turning from their wicked ways, and to be baptized for the remission of their sins. Now, what will they do?

THEY THAT GLADLY RECEIVED HIS WORD

“Then they that gladly received his word . . .” Other versions read, “So then, those who had received his word,” NASB “those who accepted the message,” NIV “those who welcomed his message,” NRSV “those who gave hearing to his words,” BBE “those who accepted what Peter said,” GWN “some of them readily received his discourse,” MRD “accepted what he said,” NJB “believed what Peter said,” NLT “who joyfully welcomed his Message,” WEYMOUTH “those who accepted and welcomed his message,” AMPLIFIED and “the ones gladly welcoming His Word.” LITV

You will note that a number of the later translations omit the word “gladly.” Here again, we are faced with differing manuscripts, and the human choice of the later manuscripts over the earlier ones – and the earliest ones are still around 300-400 A.D.

Let us take the word that is common to all accepted manuscripts – the one translated “received.”

The Greek word is avpodexa,menoi (ap-od-ekh-om-enoi). The accepted lexical meaning of this word is, “accept what is offered, to receive with joy, to receive into the mind with assent, to approve,” THAYER and “welcome, receive favorably . . . recognize, acknowledge, praise for.” FRIBERG

Even if we had no access to manuscripts and lexicons, we should know that it is the peculiar quality of faith to joyfully receive. Would anyone care to postulate that God would honor someone who reluctantly received – if there is such a thing in Christ Jesus. Can one welcome and receive something from God with bitterness of soul and chaffing of spirit? And, where is there an example of such a thing in Christ Jesus?

I have taken the time to briefly mention this matter because of the text itself. Peter has not spoken casually, but forthrightly. He has not made suggestions, but earnestly pled for an immediate and uncompromising response. I do not believe it is possible to receive such words without gladness. The prospect of the conscience being purged from such guilt as taking, crucifying, and slaying Jesus could not but produce gladness in the hearts of those hearing this word.

Thus, the Spirit has done His work of conviction, or reproving, just as Jesus said He would. “And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” (John 16:8).

- OF SIN – “because they believe not on Me” (John 16:9). That is, they did not believe on Jesus even though God had clearly approved of Him. They did not believe on Jesus even though He “went about doing good, and healing all who were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:39). They did not believe on Him, even though no one could convince Him of sin, or find a legitimate fault in Him (John 8:46; 18:38).

- OF RIGHTEOUSNESS – “because I go to My Father and ye see Me no more” (John 16:10). That is, the Father received and welcomed Him, enthroning Him at His right hand. That substantiated that He was, in fact, righteous. In fact, He is “the Righteous One” (1 John 2:1).

- OF JUDGMENT – “because the prince of this world is judged” (John 16:11). This was confirmed in the fact that it was not possible for Jesus to be held in realms of the dead, or by him who “had the power of death, that is, the devil” (Heb 2:14). Jesus thoroughly and unquestionably overcame the devil, even at His own weakest point (2 Cor 13:4). No person aligned with the devil will be able to avoid being cast into the lake of fire with him.

And what do people do when they “gladly receive” the Word? They joyfully yield to it, and that with great expectation.

WERE BAPTIZED

“ . . . were baptized . . . ” Other versions read, “had baptism,” BBE and “were immersed.” IE

Here we are confronted with the first act of obedience to the Gospel. If those who “obey not the Gospel” will suffer the vengeance of Christ (2 Thess 1:8), then what do you suppose the prospects are of those who obey it? They were baptized just like Peter had commanded them to be – as those who had repented, and for the remission of their sins. No one contested what Peter had said. Furthermore, it is obvious that his extended words buttressed what he had told them to do, so that it made perfect sense to “be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins” (2:38).

The first visible response of the people was not praying, but being baptized – and that is a matter of record – inspired record. Under the conditions of Pentecost, it would have been out of order to pray for salvation.

THREE THOUSAND SOULS WERE ADDED

“ 41b . . . and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls.”

This is still the day that started with the disciples being together with one accord and in one place. It is obvious that Divine blessing has an impact on how people consider “time.” So far as the record is concerned, no one is discontent with the nature or length of the meeting.

We do not know the time of day at this time. When Peter commenced speaking, it was only the third hour of the day – nine O’clock in the morning. We know that Peter said “many other words,” and the preaching went on for “a long time,” NJB with Peter preaching “a long sermon.” NLT This is “long” by Jewish definition, not by the American church. In Nehemiah’s day, when an awakening took place, the people spent half a day (eight hours) in sacred activity. They heard the priests read “in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and worshipped the LORD their God” (Neh 9:3). Earlier, Ezra had read the book of the Law to everyone who “could hear with understanding” “from the morning unto midday” (Neh 8:2-3). I find it difficult to conceive of the announcement of a glorified and saving Jesus to have less of an impact upon the people than revivals under the Law, which had a diminishing glory, as compared to the greater glory of the New Covenant (2 Cor 3:8-11).

THE SAME DAY

“ . . . and the same day . . . ” Other versions read, “ that day,” NKJV “ on that day,” MRD “that very day,” NJB “on that one day,” WEYMOUTH and “on that day alone .” PHILLIPS

This is still the day that started with the disciples being together with one accord and in one place. It is obvious that Divine blessing has an impact on how people consider “time.” So far as the record is concerned, no one is discontent with the nature or length of the meeting. Of course, this was an epochal day, and it is fitting that a lot is accomplished in it.

THREE THOUSAND SOULS

“ . . . there were added unto them about three thousand souls.” Other versions read, “three thousand were added to their number,” NIV “three thousand persons were added,” NRSV “three thousand souls were joined to them,” BBE “3,000 people were added to them,” CSB “there were added to the church about three thousand souls,” GENEVA “about 3,000 people were added to the group .” GWN “about 3,000 in all ,” NLT “three thousand persons united with them that day,” WILLIAMS and “about three thousand souls were added to the number of disciples .” PHILLIPS

The last known number that were said to have been “together” was one hundred and twenty (Acts 1:15). Now, in a single day, the number of disciples swells to at least 3,120, for 3,000 were “added” to their number. That is a 2600% increase! In other words, at the end of the day, there were 26 times as many disciples than there were at the beginning!

Isaiah prophesied of this time, when Zion travailed and brought forth children. “Who hath heard such a thing? who hath seen such things? Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? or shall a nation be born at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children. Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God” (Isa 66:8-9). Notice the holy reasoning.

- No one had ever heard of such a thing. “Who hath heard such a thing?”
- Can the earth produce a harvest in a single day? “Shall the earth be made to bring forth in one day? ”
- Can a nation be born at once, or suddenly? “ . . . or shall a nation be born at once?”

- As soon as travail began, the birth was consummated. “. . . for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children.”

- Does God cause the infant to mature in the womb, and yet no birth take place? “Shall I bring to the birth, and not cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.”

Indeed, in this single day, a nation was born within a nation, and a people were produced where there had been no indication of hope. We shout with the Psalmist, “This is the LORD'S doing; it is marvellous in our eyes” (Psa 118:23).

ANOTHER CONSIDERATION

Indeed, in this single day, a nation was born within a nation, and a people were produced where there had been no indication of hope. We shout with the Psalmist, “This is the LORD'S doing; it is marvellous in our eyes”

There is something else to be noted here – something that confirms the superiority of the New Covenant. When the Law was given from Sinai, people did not “gladly receive the word.” Instead, the people called for Aaron to make them an idol, to which they ascribed their deliverance from Egypt. Indignant with the reprehensible sight Moses called out, “Who is on the LORD'S side? let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him” (Ex 32:26). These were to Moses what the eleven were to Peter, standing with him. What will Moses have them do? You that would serve God under a system of law, hear what Moses said. “Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbor” (Ex 32:27). There is the first record of the law working wrath, just as Paul said it did: “Because the law worketh wrath” (Rom 4:15).

The outcome of that dreadful day is recorded for our admonition “upon whom the ends of the world are come” (1 Cor 10:11). “And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men ” (Ex 32:28). Thus, when the Law was given, and in keeping with its nature, “about three thousand died.” But on this day, when the risen Christ “shed forth” the Holy Spirit upon His disciples, three thousand were made alive: “and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls” (Acts 2:41). They are said to have been “added” when they “gladly received his word” and “were baptized.”

Peter and those with him reaped here where others had sown, including John the Baptist and the Lord Jesus Himself. They also reaped where Holy Spirit had done His work, and where the reigning Christ had shed forth His Holy spirit.

IT DID NOT STOP THERE

“ 42 And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers.”

For many, this would have been enough: long preaching, and three thousand souls added. “Let the names be added to the roles, and life continue on as it had been before” – that is how the flesh thinks. But that is not how these people thought. Remember, we are being exposed to the real work of God. We have been exposed to how men speak when they are filled with the Holy Spirit. We have seen the focus of Spirit-filled men. We have also witnessed how people initially respond who gladly receive the Word. However, it did not end there. The Spirit will witness concerning the ongoing effects of people having their sins forgiven and receiving the gift of the Holy Spirit.

THEY CONTINUED STEADFASTLY

“And they continued steadfastly . . .” Other versions read, “were continually devoting themselves to,” NASB “devoted themselves to,” NIV “kept their attention fixed on,” BBE “persevered in,” DARBY “were persevering in,” DOUAY “continued in,” GENEVA “remained faithful to,” NJB “joined with other believers in regular attendance at,” LIVING “the believers dedicated themselves to,” IE “were constant in listening in,” WEYMOUTH “steadfastly persevered,” AMPLIFIED “continued steadily learning,” PHILLIPS and “spent their time .” GNB

Newness of life does not ebb and flow, moving back and forth, and up and down. It is not erratic, wandering here and there, characterized by inconsistency, and blowing hot and cold. Admittedly, these characteristics are found within the professing church, but not in the one that Jesus is building.

The expression “continued steadfastly” comes from a single Greek word – proskarterou/ntej (pros-kar-ter-oon-tez). Lexically it means, “to persevere in anything, to give constant attention to a thing . . . to adhere . . . to be devoted or constant . . . steadfastly attentive unto, to give unremitting care to a thing . . . to continue all the time,” THAYER “to persist at, stay by... occupy oneself diligently with, pay persistent attention to, persevere in,” FRIBERG “keep close company with,” UBS “to continue to do something with intense effort, with the possible implication of despite difficulty, to keep on,” LOUW-NIDA “to persist obstinately,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “spend much time in,” LEH “busy oneself with, be busily engaged in be devoted to.” GINGRICH

For these believers, the day of Pentecost was a start, not a consummation. Continuing steadfastly involved persistence, faithfulness, devotion, and constant attention. It included, intensity, keeping on, and spending a lot of time. For these people, in rising to “walk in newness of life” (Rom 6:34), everything had become new, and old things passed away (2 Cor 5:17). They did not simply add something new to their lives, like seasoning to a pot of soup. In fact, they threw out the old pot, and began consuming something new!

The things in which these brethren “continued steadfastly” are of note. This is the beginning of the church. It is the time when the Spirit was first “shed forth” by the exalted Christ. It is the time when the proper foundation was put in place, and the right perspective of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ was declared. There was not contamination at this point, no diversion, and no corruption. This was to the new creation what Adam was to the natural creation. Ulterior motives had not yet been developed, and the old serpent was reeling from his absolute defeat. If ever the focus was right, it was at the time of our text.

What will the people conclude from the things they have heard? Where will they place their emphasis. What will be precious to them? How will they conduct their lives, and what will be the center of those lives?

Four pivotal considerations are mentioned: the apostles doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers. What is not mentioned is impressive. Among the things NOT mentioned are praise, worship, soul winning, counseling, entertainment, higher education, missions, church planting, training, and family activities. It is not that any of these things are wrong, and God forbid that this impression be found among us. We are speaking of focus here – of main things, primary activities, and key involvements. These are matters in which the greatest benefits were found, and where the most genuine profit was realized.

Because these will be developed at length in the remainder of the book, I will only introduce them here. Two things will be obvious to you. First, how important these things were to the brethren of that time, and second, how relatively unimportant they are to brethren in our time.

IN THE APOSTLE’S’ DOCTRINE

“ . . . in the apostles' doctrine. . .” Other versions read, “apostles’ teaching,” NASB “teaching and fellowship of the apostles,” ASV/DARBY “”doctrine of the apostles ,” DOUAY “ teachings of the apostles,” NAB “ instruction and fellowship of the apostles,” AMPLIFIED and “ learning from the apostles.” GNB

The Spirit has revealed that the church is “ built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone” (Eph 2:20). The “prophets” of reference are those who “testified before hand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:10-11). The Apostles, guided by the Holy Spirit (John 16:13), correlated the prophets with the words of Jesus, declaring that what was promised was fulfilled in Christ the Lord. Apostles have been “set,” or placed, “first” in the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:28). God especially made known to them the “mystery of Christ” which had been kept secret from the foundation of the world (Eph 3:4-5). What they said was of such importance that Peter, who is the speaker in our text, once wrote, “That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior ” (2 Pet 3:2).

The “apostles’ doctrine” is what they taught – their teaching, or core doctrine. That “doctrine” particularly had to do with Christ, and is therefore referred to as “the doctrine of Christ” (Heb 6:1; 2 John 1:9). They were chosen to establish the truth of God among men, and are therefore depicted as the “twelve foundations” of the glorified church (Rev 21:14).

By continuing steadfastly in “the apostles’ doctrine,” these new converts resorted continually to them. They were like fountains of living water, opening the truth of salvation to the people, clarifying the prophecies of Christ, confirming His centrality, and showing how spiritual life centers in and relies solely upon Him.

Wherever there is a body of people who claim to be followers of Jesus, yet who do not continue steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine, acquainting themselves with what they have delivered to the people, we have a sort of spiritual freak on our hands. When professing Christians are unacquainted with apostolic doctrine, a kind of spiritual crisis exists. The Apostles have been placed “first in the church,” which is built upon the foundation they have put in place (Eph 2:20). If men entertain ideas about Christ, salvation, grace, truth, the church, and the world to come that have not been spoken by the Apostles, then there is no possibility that they are right – not at all!

Imagine yourself with the responsibility of determining the spiritual IQ of church people concerning the following the books. Romans, First and Second Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, First and Second Thessalonians, First and Second Timothy, Titus, Philemon, Hebrews, James, First and Second Peter, First, Second, and Third John, Jude, and Revelation. These all contain apostolic doctrine. Yet, there is a remarkable level of ignorance in nearly every American church concerning them. Think how very few people know anything at all about key points of apostolic doctrine: atonement, justification, sanctification, appropriating righteousness, the resurrection of the dead, the intercession of Jesus, the gift of the Holy Spirit, our eternal inheritance, the depravity of the flesh, the new birth, the new covenant, being in Christ, and a host of other themes.

Somewhere between the time of our text and now, the professing church has stopped continuing in the apostles’ doctrine, and the results of that abandonment are well know to every person who is in fellowship with Christ.

IN FELLOWSHIP

spiritual life that places no value on saints meeting together? We are not talking of meeting to play, like Israel did at the foot of Mount Sinai (1 Cor 10:7). If the Lord has put us in a body, precisely what defense can be presented for not meeting together? Of what value is a segmented body?

“ . . . and fellowship” . . .” Other versions read, “and to the fellowship,” NIV “were united together,” BBE “in the communication,” DOUAY “and were associated together,” MRD “to the brotherhood,” NJB “teaching sessions,” LIVING “sharing with each other,” IE “to fellowship with one another,” WILLIAMS “and joined in their fellowship,” PHILLIPS and “taking part in the fellowship.” GNB

From the very beginning, believers – real believers – have been attracted to one another. In fact, that is one of the evidences that they have passed from death unto life (1 John 3:14). Jesus said this is a point in which being His disciple is confirmed (John 13:35). Before Pentecost the disciples “assembled together” (Acts 1:4,5). On the day of Pentecost they “with one accord in one place” (Acts 2:1). As soon as what was happening was “noised abroad, the multitude came together” (2:6). Now, with an exponential growth, they all continue steadfastly, persevering “in fellowship,” in honor “preferring one another” (Rom 12:10). Jesus said where two or three were “gathered together” in His name, He was “in the midst of them” (Matt 18:20). Now the people are intense about meeting together. They will be found “together” in the Temple and “from house to house” (Acts 2:46).

What can be said of an approach to spiritual life that places no value on saints meeting together? We are not talking of meeting to play, like Israel did at the foot of Mount Sinai (1 Cor 10:7). If the Lord has put us in a body, precisely what defense can be presented for not meeting together? Of what value is a segmented body?

The truth of the matter is that heaven takes note of the people of God when they meet together (Mal 3:16-17). Jesus meets with them (Matt 18:20). The “power of our Lord Jesus Christ” is there (1 Cor 5:4). Such times can be an occasion when “great grace” us upon us all (Acts 4:33). Then is when we can especially comfort and edify one another (1 Thess 5:11). Early believers were devoted to continuing steadfastly in fellowship – sharing, communing, and bringing profit to one another.

IN BREAKING OF BREAD

“ . . . and in breaking of bread. . .” Other versions read, “taking of broken bread,” BBE “in breaking the eucharist,” MRD “the Communion services,” LIVING “to eating,” IE “attendance at the Communion,” WEYMOUTH “to the breaking of bread [including the Lord’s Supper],” AMPLIFIED and “breaking of the loaves.” MKJV

Some people do not believe this pertains to the Lord’s Supper. They say this simply had to do with sharing meals with one another. However, how can we justifying simply eating together being joined with the apostles’ doctrine, fellowship, and prayer? If men meet only for this purpose, what do they do with the Pauline admonition, “When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord’s supper. For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not” (1 Cor 11:22). Let us have done with foolish teaching. It has no place in the body of Christ!

And what of those multitudes of disciples who do not continue steadfastly in this ordinance? Either they have not been taught correctly, or they have “counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith” they “were sanctified, an unholy thing”

Early disciples “came together” on “the first day of the week” to “break bread” (Acts 20:7). Do some imagine that this means they came together only to have a common meal? In a pointed statement about breaking bread Paul wrote, “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?” (1 Cor 10:16). These early believers did not focus their lives on themselves, meeting as friends and neighbors. Men ought to be able to conclude this with no difficulty on the basis of at least two revealed points.

- First, we know no man after, or according to, the flesh. “Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh : yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more” (2 Cor 5:16).

- Second, we do not live for ourselves but for the Lord Jesus Christ. “And that He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves , but unto Him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15).

Jesus said, “this do in remembrance of Me” (Lk 22:19). Jesus also told His disciples, “teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you” (Matt 28:19). Paul taught the Corinthians about this matter (1 Cor 11:23-29). It is obvious that Peter and the apostles also taught these converts on the subject. That is precisely why they “continued steadfastly” in “the breaking of bread.”

And what of those multitudes of disciples who do not continue steadfastly in this ordinance? Either they have not been taught correctly, or they have “counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith” they “were sanctified, an unholy thing” (1 Cor 10:29).

IN PRAYERS

“ . . . and in prayers.” Other versions read, “ to prayer,” NASB “the prayers,” NRSV “and prayer meetings,” LIVING and “to times of prayer.” ISV

There is something about praying together that brings benefits that can be realized in no other way. Take the early church as an example. When threatened by the religious bigots of their day, Peter and John, “being let go, they went to their own company , and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.” Together, and “with one accord,” “they lifted up their voice to God.” what an occasion it must have been, and what fervency must have exuded from their tongues as they presented their case to God. They prayed with insight and intent, correlating Scripture with circumstance, and asking the Lord to look upon the threats of their foes, and grant themselves “that with all boldness they may speak the Thy word.” Together they asked the Lord to do this by stretching forth His hand “to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of Thy holy Child Jesus.” It is written that “when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and 1 they were all filled with the Holy Ghost , and 2 they spake the word of God with boldness . And 3 the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul : neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; 4 but they had all things common . And 5 with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus : and 6 great grace was upon them all ” (Acts 4:33). That is but one example of the potency of those with one heart and soul praying for proper things at the proper time.

The converts of our text continued steadfastly in prayers, confirming the awareness of absolute dependency upon the Lord Jesus , who alone is “Head over all things,” and has been given in that capacity “to the church” (Eph 1:20-23).

. CONCLUSION

We have seen the marvelous effects of people being “endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49). This is what happens when men are guided into all truth, and are shown “things to come” (John 16:13). We have beheld the “power of God unto salvation” brought to bear upon men as a result of preaching the Gospel (Rom 1:16). We have witnessed how men react when they have, in fact, been convicted of sin, righteousness and judgment (John 16:8-11). We have been privy to how men speak when they are Christ’s witnesses (Luke 24:48; Acts 1:8). We have also been exposed to what is involved in calling upon the name of the Lord (Acts 2:21). We have been shown how to speak to the guilty, and what to say to the convicted. Our ears have heard, and our hearts have pondered, how people live in newness of life (Acts 2:42).

Whatever men may say about preaching, conviction, duration, counsel, and the likes, what we have seen in this text is the real thing. It is something by which all other contemporary activity can be measured, evaluated, and appropriately accepted or rejected.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #12

THE EFFECT OF CONVERSION

“ 2:43 And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. 44 And all that believed were together, and had all things common; 45 And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. 46 And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, 47 Praising God, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved. ” (Acts 2:33-47)

INTRODUCTION

The impact of truth upon the human spirit is staggering to consider. Upon knowing, or apprehending, “the truth of the Gospel,” the character of the individual is reshaped – the consequence of being born again. When one makes the Divinely accomplished transition from “the power of darkness” to “the Kingdom of” God’s “dear Son,” life in all of its aspects becomes radically different . A purported conversion that leaves the individual fundamentally the same is no conversion at all. A person cannot be made “new,” yet remain basically “old.” Sins cannot be remitted and the Holy Spirit given without it impacting on a person’s perspective, focus, and reason for living. That is why conversion is referred to as being raised from death in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1). While the measure of a person’s change may not appear the same, the fact of it will be evident. This is why the liberated souls of our text begin doing what no code could

CONTENTS

- FEAR CAME UPON EVERY SOUL (2:43a)
- MANY SIGNS AND WONDERS WERE DONE (2:43b)
- THEY WERE ALL TOGETHER (2:44a)
- THE ABSENCE OF A COVETOUS SPIRIT (2:45)
- DAILY CONTINUANCE (2:46a)
- BREAKING BREAD FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE (2:46a)
- EATING WITH GLADNESS AND SINGLENESS OF HEART (2:46b)
- PRAISING GOD (2:47a)
- HAVING FAVOR WITH ALL THE PEOPLE (2:47b)
- ADDITIONS EVERY DAY (2:47c)
- CONCLUSION

make them do. They began fulfilling the righteousness of the Law (Rom 8:2).

BABYLON'S CONTRIBUTION

Babylon the Great, that spiritual monstrosity that is noted for its fornication and opposition to the saints (Rev 17:5-6; 18:2-3), has promoted a religion that does not involve a radical moral and spiritual change. In fact, it is exceedingly difficult in our country to distinguish believers from unbelievers. From within the church itself, it is often confessed that those in the world often have more comely observable traits than those who profess to be members of the body of Christ. While care must be taken not to overemphasize appearance, it must be made clear that an ungodly appearance strongly suggests, if not outrightly proves, an ungodly character.

ABOUT APPEARANCE

When Jesus spoke of not being deceived by appearance, He was not speaking of a wicked and worldly appearance, but of a comely appearance that was nothing more than simulation. "Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity" (Mat 23:28). He never suggested that a person who was genuinely godly could appear as though they were ungodly, and a person who had been delivered from the world could continue to look as though that had not occurred. This is precisely why Paul solemnly admonished believers "abstain from ALL appearance of evil" (1 Thess 5:22). Speaking of our outward manners, it is also written, "Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God" (1 Cor 10:32). And again, "Giving no offence in any thing" (2 Cor 6:3). And again, "Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men" (2 Cor 8:21).

It is out of order for any professing Christian to ask other believers to overlook their carnality, or not judge them for uncomely manners. Not knowing men "after the flesh" (2 Cor 5:16a) does not suggest that we ignore ungodly conduct and manners. We do not know Jesus "after the flesh" (2 Cor 5:16b), but that does not suggest He had uncomely ways that we are asked to ignore. Let all believers have done with suggesting that worldly manners are to be glossed, and that we are to pretend that unrighteous conduct can be ignored. If we are told "touch not the unclean thing" (2 Cor 6:17), "let not corrupt communication come out of your mouth" (Eph 4:29), and "be ye holy in all manner of conversation" (1 Pet 1:15), who is the person willing to suggest such things are to be ignored? How can men be convicted of sin if believers act as though it is not really there? It is the solemn obligation of every professing believer to see to it that their lives are not a distraction, and that they do not contradict their profession.

THE FACT OF REAL CHANGE

It is out of order for any professing Christian to ask other believers to overlook their carnality, or not judge them for uncomely manners.

All of this is true because in Christ a very real change does take place. That is why conversion is referred to as being “born again” (John 3:3,7; 1 Pet 1:23). There is a termination of one manner of life, and the commencement of another manner. Jesus called it making “the tree good” (Matt 12:33), becoming “as little children” (Matt 18:3), being born “of God” (John 1:13), and being made “free indeed” (John 8:32,36). The book of Acts refers to this as the hearts being “purified by faith” (Acts 15:9), and the Lord opening the heart (Acts 16:14).

The Apostles referred to the new birth in a variety of ways: being “freed from sin” (Rom 6:7), being “made free from the law of sin and of death” (Rom 8:2), God putting us into Christ (1 Cor 1:30), becoming a new creation (2 Cor 5:17), putting on Christ (Gal 3:27), being quickened “together with Christ” (Eph 2:5), and being saved by “the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Spirit” NKJV (Tit 3:5).

It is inconceivable that such things could occur without a change becoming very evident. Ponder how regeneration involves moving from one domain to another.

- From being blind TO having our eyes opened (Acts 26:18a; 2 Cor 4:4,6; Hb 10:32).
- From darkness TO light (Acts 26:18b; Eph 4:18-23; 5:8).
- From the power of Satan TO God (Acts 26:18c; Col 1:13; Heb 2:15).
- Made free from sin and become servants TO God (Rom 6:22).
- Passing from death TO life (1 John 3:14; John 5:24; Rom 6:4; 8:2).
- From being alienated TO being reconciled (Col 1:21).
- Out of darkness INTO His marvelous light (1 Pet 2:9).
- From being “not a people” TO being “the people of God” (1 Pet 2:10a).
- From not having obtained mercy TO obtaining mercy (1 Pet 2:10b).

It approaches blasphemy to suppose that the work accomplished by the Son of God would not have moral and spiritual consequences of unspeakable magnitude.

The God of Salvation

Is it possible for God to really work without anything significant really happening? – and salvation in all of its intricacies is a work of God (Jonah 2:9; Rev 7:10). When God worked in creation, something observable and of significant duration took place. When He sent a flood to destroy the ungodly and save Noah, something evident took place. When He delivered the children of Israel from Egypt, something perceptible took place. Can it be that in His greatest work – recreating men in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:10) – nothing really takes place? In a moral and spiritual recreation are we to expect that no genuine change occurs? Do those who are “saved” remain fundamentally the same as they were before? Do their basic appetites remain as they were before? Are their primary inclinations unchanged? I acknowledge that if we look at the modern church we might be inclined to think this is the case. If we consult with the religious counselors and professed Christian psychiatrists, we might consider this to be likely.

How is it possible for the transition from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, to take place without it impacting upon the conduct of the individual? And, if a change of this magnitude can, in fact, occur without effecting our lives, precisely in what sense have we been changed, or delivered, or reconciled, or regenerated, or born again? It is the business of those who wear the name of Jesus to press these matters upon the conscience of men.

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

It is necessary to say these things because of the religious climate in which we are living. It suggests that a person can be reconciled to the Lord and still be a friend of the world. But this is not so, for a holy God has no tolerance of sinners just because they call themselves Christians. If they are not changed, then they are not His children, for, in Christ, He does not beget sinners. Or, is there someone who would care to affirm that He does do such a thing?

But there is another reason why these things must be declared. The change wrought in regeneration accounts for the conduct in those of our text. If we do not see their manners as a consequence of their reconciliation to God, we will be inclined to view them as moral supermen – a sort of lofty example that is wholly divorced from our situation. Therefore, instead of perceiving them as a means to measure our own profession, we will be moved to think of them as superior believers, quite unlike ourselves. They will, in such a case, be more like heroes than like brethren. If that is so, their record will no longer be profitable to us, and will not be perceived as a relevant word.

Unless a person is a fool, the absurdity of such thinking will be evident. It approaches blasphemy to suppose that the work accomplished by the Son of God would not have moral and spiritual consequences of unspeakable magnitude. But let me say no more on the matter. Let the text speak to you. Matthew Henry well says of the believers of our text, “They kept close to holy ordinances, and abounded in all instances of piety and devotion, for Christianity, admitted in the power of it, will dispose the soul to communion with God in all those ways wherein He has appointed us to meet Him and promised to meet us.” MATTHEW HENRY NOTES

We must never allow ourselves to become accustomed to lifeless religion. It is lethal to the soul dishonoring to God, and reproachful to Christ.

FEAR CAME UPON EVERY SOUL

“ 2:43a And fear came upon every soul . . . ”

When it comes to the results of repenting and believing the Gospel (Mk 1:15), they are always the same. The effects of being regenerated do not differ from individual to individual. Personalities may differ. Ministries, or assigned functions within the body of Christ, may differ. However, the essential nature of the redeemed is the same. This is seen in the initial response of those within our text. They all repented and were baptized – “every one of you” (Acts 2:38). Everyone who “gladly received his word were baptized” (2:41). Everyone “continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine” (2:42a). Everyone continued steadfastly “in fellowship” (2:42b). Everyone continued steadfastly in “the breaking of bread” (2:42c). Everyone continued steadfastly in “prayers” (2:42d). Now we will be introduced to another thing that was common among them all.

FEAR

“And fear came . . . ” Other versions read, “kept feeling a sense of awe,” NASB “ filled with awe,” NIV “Awe came upon ,” NRSV “ feeling of fear came over,” GWN “And fear was on ,” MRD “ Reverential awe came over,” NET “A deep sense of awe,” LIVING “felt great respect for God,” IE “A sense of reverence seized ” WILLIAMS and “sense of awe (reverential fear).” AMPLIFIED

I must confess that I have never been fully satisfied with the explanations I have heard concerning this kind of “fear.” Perhaps the words “reverence,” “awe,” and “respect” are etymologically correct, but in our culture they do not have much of an impact upon the human spirit. We are living in a time and place where the concepts of reverence, awe, and respect are hardly known. It is a self-centered society in which self has been enthroned in the place of God. That is the reason for the dominance of indulgence, entertainment, sports and various forms of, what is called, addiction. All of these are driven by the perception that “self” is the center of the world, and nothing really matters but self-satisfaction. In this kind of society, “fear” means very little. It is only associated with things that are harmful and overpowering – whether a force of, what is called, “nature,” of some facet of human abuse and oppression.

As used in this text, “fear” is a noun (as opposed to the verb usage “they feared”) and has a very strong meaning. Coming from the Greek word fo,boj (fob-os, from which we get the word “phobia”), it includes the ideas of “dread, terror,” THAYER “causing fear, source of fear, terror . . . dread, alarm,” FRIBERG “a state of severe distress, aroused by intense concern for impending pain, danger . . . troubled in every way,” LOUW-NIDA “panic, fear . . . terror, properly of the outward show of fear, and so distinguished from the sensation of fear . . . to strike terror into one,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “terror,” LEH “a terror . . . fear, alarm, fright.” GINGRICH

One lexicographer observes, “In a number of languages there is no noun-like word for ‘fear.’ Accordingly, expressions containing such a noun in Greek must often be restructured so that the corresponding semantic unit may be expressed by a verb. Therefore, instead of ‘fear,’ one may have expressions such as ‘be afraid,’ or ‘to fear.’ Instead of ‘fears within (2 Cor 7:5), one may translate ‘in our hearts we were afraid.’” LOUW-NIDA

As the next phrase will confirm, this is not a human response, but something that comes upon the individual. It is a consequence of being in the presence of Divine working, and knowing that this is the case. Where the truth of God is proclaimed, and the works of God are being wrought, this kind of “fear” is realized.

This exposes the fallacy of much of the modern praise movement , which tends to promote casualness that is totally foreign to this text. We are being exposed to a record of genuine Divine working, bona fide repentance, and actual spiritual effects. These circumstances are unsullied with religious tradition and corruption. Such intrusions will eventually find their way into the church – even in its early days. But they are totally absent in our text.

This is something outside of men that comes upon them – “fear came upon every soul.” There are a number of places in Scripture where this same type of thing occurred – fear imposed upon men from outside of themselves.

CAME UPON EVERY SOUL

“ . . . upon every soul . . .” Other versions read, “everyone,” NASB “every mind,” MRD and “every person.” IE

Keep in mind that this is a noun, not a verb. Strictly speaking, as I have already said, in this text it is not a human response. This is something outside of men that comes upon them – “fear came upon every soul.” There are a number of places in Scripture where this same type of thing occurred – fear imposed upon men from outside of themselves.

- ZECHARIAS. “And when Zacharias saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him ” (Lk 1:12).

- THOSE IN THE HILL COUNTRY OF JUDEA. “And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill country of Judaea” (Lk 1:65).

- DURING JESUS' MINISTRY. "And there came a fear on all : and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people" (Lk 7:16).

- WHEN ANANIAS WAS STRUCK DEAD. "And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things" (Acts 5:5).

- AFTER SAPPHIRA WAS STRUCK DEAD. "And great fear came upon all the church , and upon as many as heard these things" (Acts 5:11).

- WHEN THE SONS OF SCEVA WERE OVERCOME BY A DEMON-POSSESSED MAN . "And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all , and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified" (Acts 19:17).

Eliphaz the Temanite described to Job the kind of fear in our text, saying he personally had experienced it. It was a fear that came upon him. "In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men, Fear came upon me, and trembling, which made all my bones to shake. Then a spirit passed before my face; the hair of my flesh stood up: It stood still, but I could not discern the form thereof: an image was before mine eyes, there was silence, and I heard a voice, saying, Shall mortal man be more just than God? shall a man be more pure than his maker? Behold, he put no trust in his servants; and his angels he charged with folly: How much less in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth? They are destroyed from morning to evening: they perish for ever without any regarding it. Doth not their excellency which is in them go away? they die, even without wisdom" (Job 4:13-21).

On the banks of the Red Sea, when Moses led Israel in the song of triumph, they insightfully said of their enemies, " Fear and dread shall fall upon them; by the greatness of Thine arm they shall be as still as a stone; till Thy people pass over, O LORD, till the people pass over, which Thou hast purchased" (Ex 15:16). Jeremiah spoke of a fear that seized Damascus. "Damascus is waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her : anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail" (Jer 49:24). David said of the enemies of the Lord, "fear took hold upon them " (Psa 48:6).

This is the kind of fear that brings with it the utmost sobriety. Those upon whom such a fear comes do not speak hastily, stand in judgment of God, or treat His people with contempt. They become keenly aware of their own weakness, and the irresistible and mighty power of the great God. The frailty of humanity is seen in the light of the all consuming presence of God. That is why we read of people being "taken with great fear" (Lk 8:37), and "great fear" falling upon people (Acts 5:5,11; Rev 11:11).

This "fear" cannot be induced by men. This is the result of the perceived working of the Lord. In the case of our text, it was not an awesome judgment, like the death of Ananias and Sapphira. Rather, it was the conviction and conversion of sinners, and the displaying of Divine power in the mighty deeds wrought by the Apostles. It was clear to all that God Himself was among them! This is why Paul spoke of a stranger coming into an assembly of the righteous and being convinced by their speaking that God was among them. "But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth" (1 Cor 14:24-25). That is the effect of the kind of fear to which our text now exposes us.

We must ever keep before us that we are being introduced to real conversion and its very real effects. These are the kind of results that proceed from believing and obeying the Gospel of Christ, and receiving the Holy Spirit. It is glaringly obvious that there is a total absence of the dreaded presence of institutionalism in this text. Jesus Christ has truly “apprehended” these people (Phil 3:12).

MANY SIGNS AND WONDERS WERE DONE

“ 43a . . . and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles.”

Here the focus is the confirmation of the apostles as messengers sent forth by Christ Jesus Himself. There is also a matter of confirming that the word was from God, and was to be heeded. In this kind of miracle, the point was not the miracle itself, but something of even greater import.

Commencing with the fourteenth verse of this chapter the apostles have risen to prominence. In fulfilment of Joel’s prophecy, other “sons” and “daughters” and “young men” and “old men” had spoken. But now, the foundation-layers, in whose doctrine the people “continued steadfastly,” are in the spiritual limelight. Everyone who is saved is in the body of Christ, but they are not all equal as regards their ministry. The Holy Spirit speaks of a certain ranking in the body of Christ. “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues” (1 Cor 12:28). Note that godly “teachers” rank higher in the body of Christ than those with “gifts of healing,” administrators, and those who can speak a multiplicity of languages through the power of the Holy Spirit.

MANY WONDERS AND SIGNS

“. . . and many wonders and signs . . .” Other versions read, “many wonders and miraculous signs,” NIV “all sorts of wonders and signs,” BBE “many amazing things and miraculous signs,” GWN “many signs and prodigies,” MRD “many signs and miracles,” NJB “many miracles,” LIVING “many powerful and amazing things,” IE and “many marvels and signs.” WEYMOUTH

“Wonders”

A “wonder” is “something so strange as to cause it to be watched and observed.” THAYER Other lexical meanings are “something so unusual it arouses close observation.” FRIBERG Here, the emphasis is on the nature of the thing that is wrought. It is outside the sphere of creation and the ordinary, and thus demands the attention of the people. Especially at the beginning of the New Covenant era, the apostles wrought “many wonders,” drawing attention to the uniqueness of this time and the nature of Divine involvements with men. In their very essence, “wonders” are something visible to the eye, for their purpose is to capture the attention of men. Technically, all miracles are not “wonders” – designed to capture the attention of the people. Some were wrought out of the Lord’s compassion, as when He fed a multitude of five thousand men, besides women and children (Matt 15:32). Other miracles were wrought in relative seclusion, not intended to get the attention of the people – as when He raised Jairus’ daughter, Mk 5:40 and Peter obtain a coin from a fish. Matt 17:27

“Signs”

A “sign” is a miraculous work by which “a person or thing is distinguished from others and known” THAYER Other lexical meanings include, “what serves as a pointer or means of confirmation,” FRIBERG “that by which something is known or distinguished,” UBS and “an event regarded as having some special meaning.” LOUW-NIDA

Here the focus is the confirmation of the apostles as messengers sent forth by Christ Jesus Himself. There is also a matter of confirming that the word was from God, and was to be heeded. In this kind of miracle, the point was not the miracle itself, but something of even greater import. An example is the healing of the impotent men who had been let down through a roof to the feet of Jesus. On that occasion Jesus said, "But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house" (Matt 9:6).

"Many"

The word "many" comes from the Greek word polla, (pol-lah), which means, "much, multitude, many, numerous . . . abundant plenteous," THAYER "of extent or magnitude great, large, much, many, plentiful . . . things that occur in a mass or in large quantities," FRIBERG "much more, all the more,, many more," UBS "a great number of," LOUW-NIDA "great populous," LEH and "very great, very large." GINGRICH Sometimes men refer to things being "many," when there is only a nominal number of them. They use the word relatively, speaking of things that do not really appear to be numerous or abundant: "many people are saying," or "many surveys confirm." However, the Holy Spirit does not speak in this manner. He is not given to exaggeration, hyperbole, or overstatement. Both the number and nature of these works were extraordinary, matching the uniqueness and effectiveness of the New Covenant being implemented through the apostles.

Thoughts on Many Miracles

The word "miracles" (plural) is mentioned four times in Genesis through Malachi (Num 14:22; Deut 11:3; 29:3; Judges 6:13). Other versions employ the word once, NKJV six times, NASB ten times, NIV and five times. NRSV/RSV Alternate words used in the KJV for these are "wonders" (Ex 3:20), "marvels" (Ex 34:10), "signs" (Psa 105:27), "marvelous things" (Mic 7:15), "marvelous works" (Psa 105:15), and "wondrous works" (Psa 106:22). Throughout the Old Covenant Scriptures there is not a single reference to "many miracles," or "many signs," or "many wonders" in any standard version of Scripture.

I mention these things to show the uniqueness of our text. The word "miracles" is mentioned twenty-three times in Matthew through Revelation (John 2:11,23; 3:2; 6:2,26; 7:31; 9:16; 11:47; 12:37; Acts 2:22; 6:8; 8:6,13; 15:12; 19:11; 1 Cor 12:10,28,29; Gal 3:5; Heb 2:4; Rev 13:14; 16:14; 19:20). There are also ten references to "mighty works." Add to that the twenty-five references to "signs" and "wonders," and you see the significance of the New Covenant era.

Prior to Jesus, there were a few individuals through whom great miracles were wrought: Moses, Joshua, Elijah, and Elisha. Samson accomplished several feats of unparalleled strength. But I do not believe there were ever two persons who were working miracles simultaneously. Joshua's feat of making the sun and moon stand still took place after Moses died (Josh 10:12-14). All of Elisha's miracles were accomplished after his predecessor Elijah had been translated. There were no miracle workers who were contemporary with Samson.

But with Jesus, the rarity of miracles came to an end. Even His enemies confessed that He did "many miracles." Once He sent out His twelve apostles to work miracles – "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils." Another time He sent out seventy disciples, telling them to "heal the sick."

But with Jesus, the rarity of miracles came to an end. Even His enemies confessed that He did "many miracles" (John 11:47). Once He sent out His twelve apostles to work miracles – "Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils" (Matt 10:8). Another time He sent out seventy disciples, telling them to "heal the sick" (Lk 10:9). When they returned, saying even the demons were subject to them, He told them, "Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you"

(Luke 10:19). Never before in the history of the world had there been such an assault on the kingdom of darkness! Many miracles by many people.

WERE DONE BY THE APOSTLES

“ . . . were done by the apostles.” Other versions read, “were done through the apostles,” NKJV “were taking place through the apostles,” NASB “were being performed through the apostles,” CSB “took place through the apostles’ means,” DARBY “happened through the apostles,” GWN “were [wrought] by the hand of the legates in Jerusalem,” MRD “came about by the apostles,” NET “the apostles worked ,” NJB “the apostles performed ,” NLT “were showed by the apostles,” TNT “were being done through the apostles,” YLT “God used the apostles to do,” IE and “were performed through the apostles (the special messengers).” AMPLIFIED

A point is made of this confirmation in several different texts of Scripture.

- “And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen” (Mark 16:20).
- “And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch” (Acts 5:12).
- “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing them witness , both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will?” (Heb 2:4).

These particular “wonders and signs” were not simply a ministry among the people. In fact, although there was ministry in them, that was not their primary purpose. Just as God had “approved” of Jesus “by miracles and wonders and signs” (Acts 2:22), so He was approving of the Apostles and their message through these means. The “power of God unto salvation” is not through “wonders and signs,” however voluminous and epochal they may be. It is the message that is the power, and these “wonders and signs” buttressed the message delivered by the Apostles. In the words of Scripture God “confirmed the Word” (Mk 16:20), and was “bearing witness” to the veracity of the apostles and their message (Heb 2:4).

Again, I want to underscore that, in my persuasion, the modern church has not been persuaded of the need of the “apostles’ doctrine.” This is confirmed by their general ignorance of it, even though it has been made accessible to them. Some might imagine that this condition requires the working of many wonders and signs again, to confirm that the message is true. This, however, is not the case. When Israel came to despise the Law, they were not required to return to Sinai and see the thunderings and lightning again. God did not speak out of heaven to them once again. When the church drifted from the truth, it was not necessary to have Jesus rise again, or that Pentecost be experienced once again. Surely this is evident to everyone.

The reason for this condition is plain. Once the Apostles and their message had been “confirmed,” the church became a custodian of confirmed word. The world does not need eye witnesses of the resurrected Savior in every generation. It is not necessary to have the word confirmed over and over again, because it has been invested with power. Now, the people who embrace that Gospel become a living “epistle of Christ” themselves – letters that are “known and read of all men” (2 Cor 3:2-3).

All miracles, signs, and wonders are not devoted exclusively to confirming the Word of God, even though some suppose this to be the case. God “set” the gift of working miracles in the church “after” the apostles (1 Cor 12:10,28,29; Gal 3:5). Those workings were not placed there to further confirm the Word. That has already been done. Such miracles are not in the same category as the “signs of an apostle” (2 Cor 12:12). They are given at the Lord’s discretion (1 Cor 12:5-11,18), over which men have no control, and for the good of the whole body.

THEY WERE ALL TOGETHER

“ 44 And all that believed were together, and had all things common.”

Remember, we are reading of the effects wrought by repentance, remission, and the gift of the Holy Spirit. These experiences had a transforming effect upon the people.

ALL THAT BELIEVED

“And all that believed . . .” Other versions read, “all those who had believed,” NASB “All the believers,” NIV “all those who were of the faith,” BBE “All who shared the faith,” NJB “all those believing,” YLT “all who believed (who adhered to and trusted in and relied on Jesus Christ),” AMPLIFIED and “all the ones believing.” ALT

The Spirit is very precise in the statement concerning the church. He does not say “all the members,” or “all who had joined the church,” or “all who were baptized.” To be sure, all of them were part of the church, and all them had been baptized. Here, however, we get to the heart of the matter. There may very well have been some pretenders who

33,000+ DENOMINATIONS OF PROTESTANTISM, AND COUNTING

David Barrett, et al, does indeed refer to "over 33,000 denominations in 238 countries." (Table 1-5, vol 1, page 16). This refers to his unique definition of a "Christian denomination" but does not include small ones (congregations of a couple hundred or less), which would dramatically increase this number beyond all imagination.

Denominations / Paradenominations:

1995: 33,820

The definition of a denomination, as used by David Barrett, is this: "an organized Christian Church or tradition or religious group or community of believers or aggregate of worship centers or congregations, usually within a specific country, whose component congregations and members are called by the same name in different areas, regarding themselves as an autonomous Christian church distinct from other denominations, churches and traditions." For my part, this is an acceptable definition.

liked to think of themselves as part of the number. The situation, however, is stated as it should be: “all that believed .” That is, all who had perceived the truth and embraced it; all who had heard the Gospel and obeyed it; all who were trusting in the Lord and not leaning to their own understanding.

Ponder this in view of the condition of the professed church in our day. The World Christian Data Base records 9,000 major denominations within the Christian community.

WERE TOGETHER

“ . . . were together . . .” Other versions read, “kept together,” BBE “were in one place,” GENEVA “met together in one place,” NLT “kept themselves together,” PNT “were at the same place,” YLT “met together constantly,” LIVING “stayed together,” IE “lived together,” WILLIAMS “were united and [together],” AMPLIFIED and “continued together in close fellowship.” GNB

Real faith unites all those who possess it! That is why we read of “the unity of the faith” (Eph

4:13). Where there are divisions (something the Lord strictly forbids – 1 Cor 1:10), it can always be traced to unbelief, for faith never divides those who have it. Considering that all who are in Christ Jesus also have received the Holy Spirit, their unity is accented all the more by the expression “the unity of the Spirit” (Eph 4:3).

The unity of reference was not merely creedal, and it surely was not theoretical, or just something people talked about. These people wanted to be together, and therefore they stayed together. That is the practical circumstance that confirms whether real unity exists or not: do the people want to be together? People who do not want to be together are not truly united.

“Together”

There is a considerable emphasis on togetherness in the epistles. It is clear that a “common salvation” (Jude 1:3) and a “common faith” (Tit 1:4) unites people, bringing them together. After all, there is a certain singleness associated with salvation that makes for “the unity of the Spirit” : “There is ONE body, and ONE Spirit, even as ye are called in ONE hope of your calling; ONE Lord, ONE faith, ONE baptism, ONE God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all” (Eph 4:4-6). How is it possible for such realities to in any way contribute to division, dissension, or a lack of harmony?

What caused this selfless spirit to assert itself, and why was it done so willingly? This remarkable circumstance was not a response to a commandment. Those who teach that we can only offer to God what he has commanded or authorized, or serve Him in strict accord with specific directives, could not possibly be more wrong.

Ponder how much is said about the matter of being “together.” For many, this is an ambition or goal. In our text this was actually happening.

- Being “comforted together ” by “mutual faith” (Rom 1:12).
- Believers will be “glorified together ” (Rom 8:17).
- The church can “strive together ” in focused prayer (Rom 15:30).
- Saints can be “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).
- Believers are said to be “gathered together ” (1 Cor 5:4).
- The church can “come together for the better” (1 Cor 11:17).
- God has tempered, or combined, the body of Christ “ together ” (1 Cor 12:24).
- “Believers are said to “come together in one place” (1 Cor 14:23).
- Needy brethren can be helped by brethren praying together (2 Cor 1:1).
- Believers are said to be “workers together with Him” (2 Cor 6:1).
- The church is described as a building “fitly framed together ,” and “built together for an habitation of God through the Spirit” (Eph 2:21-22).
- The “whole body” of Christ is intended to be “fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth” (Eph 4:16).
- Saints are to “stand fast in one spirit, striving together for the faith of the Gospel” (Phil 1:27).
- The saved are to be “comforted, being knit together in love” (Col 2:2).
- As we cling to the Head, Jesus Christ, individual believers have “nourishment ministered,” and are “knit together ” (Col 2:19).

- In their assemblies, the faithful comfort themselves “ together , and edify one another” (1 Thess 5:11).
- Solemnly we are told “Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together ” (Heb 10:25).

There is a sense in which our individuality is minimized in Christ’s body, thereby allowing for a very real togetherness. Therefore those in Christ are admonished, “Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves ” (Phil 2:3). And again, “Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others ” (Phil 2:4). And again, “Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another ” (Rom 12:10). Where such a condition exists, division is not possible, and the “unity of the Spirit” is inevitable.

In Christ Jesus our attention is turned toward Him, not ourselves. In fact He died and rose again that this might be the case. As it is written, “And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). In our text there was a certain purity that did not allow for self-interests to be present. Such would soon be found in the church (chapter five), but had not yet made its entrance at the time covered in this passage.

THEY HAD ALL THINGS COMMON

“ . . . and had all things common.” Other versions read, “had everything in common,” NIV “they shared everything with each other,” GWN “whatever belonged to them, was of the community,” MRD “shared everything they had ,” NLT “held all they had as common goods to be shared by one another,” WILLIAMS “shared everything on common ,” PHILLIPS “they were having all [things] common,” ALT and “ shared their belongings with one another.” GNT

What caused this selfless spirit to assert itself, and why was it done so willingly? This remarkable circumstance was not a response to a commandment. Those who teach that we can only offer to God what he has commanded or authorized, or serve Him in strict accord with specific directives, could not possibly be more wrong. Such barbaric teaching is from Sinai, and lacks both the quality and effectiveness of teaching that comes from “mount Zion,” to which we “are come” (Heb 12:22). Those who embrace a Sinaitic approach to newness of life only confess they do not have genuine spiritual life, for that is not how it is lived out. If, at some time, such poor souls were, in fact, “born of God,” then they have gone backward, are withdrawing from God, and moving closer to perdition (Heb 10:38-39).

There is not the slightest hint that Peter and the rest of the apostles required this of the people, or implied that it was essential to their acceptance by God. This was rather the voluntary response of the “new creature” (2 Cor 5:17) – the “new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24), and is “renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10). This was an expression of the “newness of life” in which these new converts were walking (Rom 6:4).

When a person, or group of persons, is “joined to the Lord,” becoming “one spirit” with Him (1 Cor 6:17), a radical change takes place within. Old things had really “passed away,” and “all things” had become new (2 Cor 5:17). Their former nature, now their “old man,” had been “crucified” with Christ (Rom 6:6), and they were no longer the center of their world. Now it was no longer them that was living, but Christ within them (Gal 2:20). Rather than serving God “in the oldness of the letter,” they were serving Him “in newness of the Spirit” NKJV (Rom 7:6).

THE CIRCUMSTANCE

Some sophists, cavorting about on the surface of truth (if there be such a thing), have concluded that this was a form of communism – communal living where no one had any possessions of their own. However, that is a grossly corrupted view. Some time later, there were great numbers of these very people who still had personal possessions (Acts 4:34-37). Years later, when Paul taught the Corinthians, he admonished to give proportionately to what they possessed (1 Cor 16:2; 2 Cor 8:12). When these people were converted, it did not become sinful for them to keep and maintain their possessions.

Their whole lives were changed. Now, after the Passover and after Pentecost, they were still going to the Temple every day, and from there moving about from house to house. It was time to go home, but it was obvious they did not desire to do so. It is also clear that the converts from Jerusalem did not want them to leave either.

This was no ordinary circumstance. High Jewish feasts had been observed: the Passover and Pentecost. Multitudes of people had come in to Jerusalem for the occasion – “devout men, out of every nation under heaven” (Acts 2:5). It had certainly been an eventful series of days. Not only had the Passover occurred, but “Jesus of Nazareth” had supposedly been found guilty of blasphemy and was crucified. This had taken place with their consent, as well as their insistence that He be crucified, while Barabbas, a murderer, was chosen for release (Mk 15:10-14). Now, on the day of Pentecost, they had witnessed miraculous phenomenon and heard the exposition of Jesus’ death, burial, and resurrection. Their hearts had been pricked, and, upon being told what to do, they repented, were baptized, and received the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Their whole lives were changed. Now, after the Passover and after Pentecost, they were still going to the Temple every day, and from there moving about from house to house. It was time to go home, but it was obvious they did not desire to do so. It is also clear that the converts from Jerusalem did not want them to leave either.

If they brought resources with them for the feasts, they had run out by now. They were not from that area, and thus were not employed there. What will they do? Those who were from that area, and any wealthy people who came in from afar, refused to let go of their brethren. They looked upon their own possessions as a resource for their brethren as well as themselves. Everyone who believed stayed together, pooling their resources and having everything common. They simply did not want to separate from one another. They had one faith and one hope, and thus were united.

CONCLUDING THOUGHTS

There is a unity that transcends anything men can accomplish. This is a unity that is created, not achieved. Once that unity is destroyed by the intrusion of flesh, it must be earnestly sought once again. When professed Christians are divided, that means they are not united, for that is what division is. When that condition exists, the Divine mandate is, “Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10). That is not an option, and must not be treated as though it was. Here is the word of the Spirit delivered by Paul.

- Speak the same thing.
- Have no divisions among you.
- Be perfectly joined together in the same mind.
- Be perfectly joined together in the same judgment.

Is there any soul who is at liberty to ignore this summons, and still remain in Divine favor? When we came into Christ we did not come in divided, but were “one body in Christ” (Rom 12:4-5). We were “one spirit” with the Lord – and He is not divided (1 Cor 6:17; 1:13). Although “many,” we were “one body” (1 Cor 10:17; 12:20). All believers were “called in one body” (Col 3:15). That is the way every single person in Christ started newness of life. If, after some time, there is friction, division, and even hostility, it is not owing to God’s “great salvation” (Heb 2:3). It is not the nature of “newness of life” to finally break up, divide, and become separate warring factions. The Holy Spirit certainly does not promote separation among those who are united to Christ. If that condition is found, “an enemy hath done this” (Matt 13:28). None of this existed at the time of our text. It is as though the devil had been caught off guard, neutralized by the striking blow of Christ’s heel on his head, the disruption in the regions of the dead, and the leading of captivity captive when Jesus rose triumphant, defeating the grave and taking the spoils of battle.

THE ABSENCE OF A COVETOUS SPIRIT

“ 45 And sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.”

Remember, we are not witnessing the implementation of a new law, but the expression of newness of life.

The body of the redeemed is “in the world,” but it is not “of the world” (John 15:19). For this reason, the “newness of life” cannot be lived while one is dominated by “this present evil world.” In Christ we are, in fact, “delivered from this present evil world” – from its thinking and its ways. However, because of our close proximity to the world, and the presence of our “adversary the devil,” there are strong influences exerted upon us to move closer to the world, once again adopting its ways and its manners. The struggle against these inclinations is called “resisting the devil,” “abstaining from all appearance of evil,” wrestling “against principalities and against powers,” and “fighting the good fight of faith” (James 4:7; 1 Thess 5:22; Eph 6:12; 1 Tim 6:12). If we fail to resist these inclinations, we will modify our mindset with notions from the world order – maintaining a religious stance, yet allowing worldly ways of thinking into our thought processes. This, in turn, modifies our conduct, causing us to become basically selfish, or self-centered. The more the carnal mind dominates men, the more like the world they become, and the less they are like Christ. In such a stance, they once again become the enemies of God.

In our text, these withdrawals had not yet begun to happen. Newness of life was pure and uncontaminated, as is evidenced by the manner in which these brethren conducted their affairs.

Once again, this is not a standard to be adopted, but is a revelation of real newness of life. The intent of the passage is not to provide a pattern for all churches to follow. It rather reveals to us how “the newness of life” responds to unplanned situations or crises. There will be times when uncomely responses to such situations will occur – such as in the sixth chapter of Acts, when “there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations” (Acts 6:1). However, in that circumstance neither the neglect nor the murmuring were expressions of newness of life. Those were expressions of the flesh, which, in our text, had not yet made its way into the church. Our text is an exhibit of “pure religion and undefiled” (James 1:27). It was not the result of an admonition, a commandment, or an exhortation. It was real, unsullied, and without hypocrisy.

THEY SOLD THEIR POSSESSIONS AND GOODS

“And sold their possessions and goods . . .” Other versions read, “began selling their property and possessions,” NASB “exchanging their goods and property for money,” BBE “sold their possessions and substance,” DARBY “were selling their possessions and belongings,” ESV “sold their property and other possessions,” GWN “they sold . . . the things they owned,” IE “they sold their lands and other property,” WEYMOUTH “they made it their practice to sell their possessions and goods,” ISV “they continued to sell their property and goods,” WILLIAMS and “they sold their possessions (both their landed property and their movable goods).” AMPLIFIED

Here is an example of the robust and aggressive nature of spiritual life. It is a stark contrast of the being driven by Law. Here is what happens when the law is written upon the heart, and put into the mind I(Heb 8:10; 10:16). At once you see that spirituality in no way promotes or maintains “covetousness, which is idolatry” (Col 3:5). It confirms how a person reacts to the circumstances of our text when they “love not the world, neither the things that are in the world” (1 John 2:15). Here, the love of the brethren is lived out, and there is no need to exhort the people to do so. The text is not a theoretical statement concerning unity. It is not a summons for those professing allegiance to Christ to unite. This is the report of people who were actually united, and of the effects that unity produced.

Something had happened among these people to cause them to devalue worldly possessions for self. They now saw “treasures upon earth” as a means to minister in the name of the Lord. Their definition of family and household had changed.

AND PARTED THEM TO ALL MEN

“ . . . and parted them to all men . . . ” Other versions read, “ divided them among all,” NKJV “ sharing them with all,” NASB “gave to everyone ,” NIV “distribute the proceeds to all ,” NRSV “ distributed them to all,” RSV “they made a division of it among them all ,” BBE “distributed the money,” GWN “distributed the proceeds among them all,” WEYMOUTH “distributed the price among all,” AMPLIFIED and “divided the proceeds among the fellowship .” PHILLIPS

I am quick to point out that this is not to be construed as an attack upon the practice of ministering to the poor in general. However, as confirmed in this text, the thrust of godly philanthropy concerns the people of God, to whom we are especially to do good

Although it may not be popular to say so, distribution was not made among the poor of the community. It was made among the brethren. Even though there is nothing wrong, and everything right, with assisting the poor in general, the emphasis in Scripture has always been placed upon assisting the poor among God’s people. Even when reference was made to “strangers,” it was always those among the people of God (Lev 19:10; 23:22; Deut 14:29).

Under the Law

- “And if thy brother be waxen poor, and fallen in decay with thee; then thou shalt relieve him: yea, though he be a stranger, or a sojourner; that he may live with thee” (Lev 25:35).

- “If there be among you a poor man of one of thy brethren within any of thy gates in thy land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not harden thine heart, nor shut thine hand from thy poor brother: but thou shalt open thine hand wide unto him, and shalt surely lend him sufficient for his need, in that which he wanteth” (Deut 15:8).

Under the New Covenant

- “Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to hospitality” (Rom 12:13).

- “Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye” (1 Cor 16:1).

- “And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision. Only they would that we should remember the poor; the same which I also was forward to do” (Gal 2:9-10).

- “As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10).

- “But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?” (1 John 3:17).

I am quick to point out that this is not to be construed as an attack upon the practice of ministering to the poor in general. However, as confirmed in this text, the thrust of godly philanthropy concerns the people of God, to whom we are especially to do good (Gal 6:10). Of course, if the New Covenant provides the guarantee of prosperity here and now, and all-sufficiency in this world's goods, then such admonitions would be pointless. In such a case, it would only be contributing to the unbelief of the those who were not prospering, or stood in lack. Such a thought is utterly absurd!

AS EVERY MAN HAD NEED

“ . . . as every man had need.” Other versions read, “as anyone had need,” NKJV “as anyone might have need,” NASB “according as any man had need,” ASV “as anyone had a need,” CSB “as everyone had need,” GENEVA “ according to what each man needed,” NJB “those in need,” NLT “according to everyone’s necessities,” WEYMOUTH “as anyone had special need,” WILLIAMS “just as anyone from time to time had need,” MONTGOMERY and “according to individual need.” PHILLIPS

Remove from your mind the notion that everyone in our text divested themselves of all wealth, and pooled it, dividing it up equally among all the brethren. Possessions were not the point, but necessities – and there certainly is a vast chasm between those two conditions.

Remove from your mind the notion that everyone in our text divested themselves of all wealth, and pooled it, dividing it up equally among all the brethren. Possessions were not the point, but necessities – and there certainly is a vast chasm between those two conditions. The objective was not for everyone to have the same amount of money or other resources. Rather, it was that no one would suffer lack, or be without the things required for life – “ need.”

In Christ, “Need” Is Redefined

In the American society, need is often equated with comfort and preference. Thus people speak of needing a new car, a larger house, a new television, or the likes. Often need is associated with convenience and ease. The legitimacy of such things is not to be questioned, and that is not the issue here. The mega-church mentality, together with the human sanctification of the opulence that accompanies it, has caused people to think of need quite differently than the way it is used in our text. Even in seemingly legitimate Christian enterprises, need is often related to large and comfortable buildings for orphans, new media production studios, and four-wheel all-terrain vehicles. Once again, it is not that these things are of themselves wrong. The issue is whether or not they can be defined as needs .

Jesus spoke of “need” as eating, drinking, and being clothed. “Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat ? or, What shall we drink ? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed ? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things” (Matt 6:31-32). Even then, the accent was not to be placed upon these “things,” although they may have been scarce. Jesus continued, “But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you” (Matt 6:33). Here, “need” is related to the maintenance of life, not the comfort and ease of life. Jesus said, “But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick” (Matt 9:12). Others are said to have Had “ need of healing” (Lk 9:11). John spoke of those with substance seeing the “need” of a brother, and ignoring it (1 John 3:17). He was speaking of the necessities of life – things required to maintain life.

In Christ, the concept of “need” obtains a new perspective. This is because the accent is placed on “things above,” and not on “things on the earth” (Col 3:2). While “newness of life” does not sanctify poverty and the lack of any conveniences, neither does it sanctify their abundance.

Once, when Paul was in prison, he wrote to Titus, telling him to assist Zenas the lawyer and Apollos to come to him. “Bring Zenas the lawyer and Apollos on their journey diligently, that nothing be wanting unto them. And let ours also learn to maintain good works for necessary uses, that they be not unfruitful” (Titus 3:14). Other versions read, “to meet urgent needs,” NKJV “to meet pressing needs,” “to help cases of urgent need,” RSV and “in order that they may provide for daily necessities.” NIV Here, “good works” refers to honest trades, or a way of earning a living that is honorable before God. The reason for engaging in such a posture is twofold. First, to provide for the necessities of life, including the need of Kingdom servants as well as their own. Second, that their lives may be fruitful, and not unproductive. That is, that they might be noted for assisting the people of God, as well as being in situation where they did not require assistance themselves.

Our Text

When our text speaks of distributing goods “as every man had need,” it is referring to those who did not have the regular requirements of life – food, drink, and clothing. I assume that some form of shelter is also included. This had particular reference to the brethren from other parts of the world, who had remained in Jerusalem.

This text also reveals freedom from covetousness, although that dreaded trait will soon surface among the disciples (Acts 5). When Jesus walked among men He said, “Beware of covetousness” (Lk 12:15). Now, under the influence of the newness of life, there was a freedom from that vice. Paul admonished the Ephesians to see to it that “covetousness” was not named among them – even one single time. “But . . . covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints” (Eph 5:3). The Colossians were instructed to mortify, or put to death, “covetousness” (Col 3:5). Believers are also exhorted to let their entire manner of life be “without covetousness” (Heb 13:5).

In the beginning, there was a certain purity and holy innocence that is refreshing to ponder. We are being given a view of newness of life itself, before the church became contaminated by various individuals like Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5:1-10), Hymanaeus and Alexander (1 Tim 1:19-20), Phygellus and Hermogenes” (2 Tim 1:15), certain in Corinth (1 Cor 5:1-8), the Galatians (Gal 1:6), Demas (2 Tim 4:10), and others.

We are being exposed to the Kingdom norm, or standard of conduct. In our time, the norm has become drawing back, but it was not so in the beginning, nor is it now. This text is telling us HOW newness of life makes itself known – at least one of the ways. The life that is given to us in Christ Jesus is not an inconsiderate one. It is not one that focuses upon self, and wants a lot of this world. It is Christ’s own life that is given to men, and is made manifest in their conduct. Thus it is written, “Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus’ sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh” (2 Cor 4:10-11). That is the life that is being revealed in our text.

DAILY CONTINUANCE

“46a And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple . . .”

Already we have read that these early believers “continued steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers” (Acts 2:42). They did not blow hot and cold, or tend toward inconsistency and a lack of involvement with one another. That is not the nature of “the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus” (Rom 8:2). Later in this book, believers will be persuaded to “continue in the grace of God” (Acts 13:43). Others will be exhorted to “continue in the faith” (Acts 14:22). We are told that “eternal life” will be given to those who “by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality” (Rom 2:7). We are told they will not be cut off the source of life “if thou continue in his goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off” (Rom 11:22). We will, in fact, be presented to the Lord “holy and unblameable and unproveable in His sight: if ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel” (Col 1:22-23).

Sporadic discipleship, though quite common in our day, is wholly unacceptable in Christ’s Kingdom. That is not the way Jesus is. It is not the way the Spirit operates. It is not the kind of life that is given to believers. Therefore, we ought to expect continuance to be prominent in the early days of the church, before Satan regrouped, as it were, and sowed tares among the wheat.

THEY CONTINUED DAILY

“And they, continuing daily . . .” Other versions read, “So continuing daily,” NKJV “day by day continuing,” NASB

“every day they continued,” NIV “day by day continuing steadfastly,” ASV “every day they devoted themselves,” CSB “every day, being constantly,” DARBY “each day,” NLT “regularly . . . each day,” LIVING “day by day attending constantly,” WEYMOUTH and “day after day.” AMPLIFIED

What Do We Have Here?

There are at least two ways that we can look at this fact. First, some are quite comfortable with seeing this as the initial response of new life – a beginning that, by its very nature, will finally cool, as the people return to a normal way of living. Those who embrace this view – and legion is their name – see such continuance as unusual, inconvenient, and only intended to get things started. They see it as a possible aspect of novicehood – something that is not required, and is not even consistent at the beginning of spiritual life. Even then, it is a rare circumstance. Second, we can view this as a normal expression of spiritual life that is intended to be preserved. In this case, this becomes one of the means of sustaining the life that is realized in Christ Jesus. It accompanies the awakening of a voracious appetite for the word of God, a remarkably strong love for the people of God, and a fervent desire to understand things pertaining to life and godliness.

If we choose to accept the first view, then we must also conclude that “newness of life” ebbs and flows, and tends to diminish and wane in its effects upon the individual. I do not know how any person could support such a view, and what would really be accomplished if they did manage to support it.

Another alternative is to see the life given on the day of Pentecost as being of a different order than normal spiritual, and therefore intended only for that time. Again, I do not know how a person could hope to defend such a postulate, which has all manner of unacceptable ramifications.

I will proceed accepting the view that this was genuine spiritual life that did not differ from the life that is granted to all who are in Christ Jesus. Like all gifts that come from God, life is characterized by purity, an unwavering trait of the Divine nature. Where this purity is lacking, it is not owing to any deficiency in the life that is realized in Christ Jesus. When the people of God become lacking in any way, it is due to the intrusion and dominance of the flesh. What is born of God cannot decline or be corrupted, because the “wicked one” cannot “touch” that begotten life. As it is written, “We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not” (1 John 5:18).

This was confirmed when Jesus Himself walked among men. It is written that He “ increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man” (Luke 2:52). That is what Divine life in human form does – wherever it is found. The nature of spiritual life is thus described as one of increasing change: “And all of us, with unveiled faces, seeing the glory of the Lord as though reflected in a mirror, are being transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another ; for this comes from the Lord, the Spirit” (2 Cor 3:18). The reflection of the glory of God is seen “in the face of Jesus Christ” NRSV (2 Cor 4:6). The transformation that results is found in “the new man,” who grows and matures in the prospect of being finally “conformed to the image” of God’s Son, Jesus Christ (Rom 8:29).

Where there are no obstacles, or where the Holy Spirit is not grieved or quenched (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19), spiritual life advances and expresses itself in ways that are pleasing to God, advantageous to the individual, and beneficial to the body of Christ.

The Conclusion of the Matter

And what can we say is the conclusion of this whole matter? What we have in our text is the expression of the newness of life – an expression that perfectly agrees with the advancing and continuing nature of spiritual life. The continuance of these people was not their response to a command to keep on meeting together. It was not adherence to a special series of ordinances that were bound upon them by the apostles. Rather, when two or more people are born again, this is the kind of thing they are prone to do – continue “together.” They have been placed in “one body,” have received the same Spirit (1 Cor 12:4), and were “called in one hope” of their calling (Eph 4:4). Why would they not continue together? It is reasonable for them to do so, and unreasonable for them not to do so. This is confirmed in the words that follow.

WITH ONE ACCORD

“ . . . with one accord . . . ” Other versions read, “with one mind ,” NASB “to meet together,” NIV “ spent much time together ,” NRSV “going in agreement together,” BBE “had a single purpose ,” GWN “with one soul ,” MRD “by common consent ,” NET “with one heart ,” NJB “with the same purpose ,” IE “with united purpose ,” AMPLIFIED and “ as a group .” GNB

Here we have a group or meeting defined by the unanimity of the people. It was their minds that brought them together. It was their hearts that drew them together. They were in agreement, and it compelled them to come together. They all consented to do so, being driven by a common purpose. They were thinking in the same direction. Their affection was centered on the same thing.

When the disciples prayed together prior to Pentecost, they were in “ one accord” (Acts 1:14). When the day of Pentecost commenced, these same disciples “were all with one accord in one place” (Acts 2:1). Now, every day they are still “in one accord ” (Acts 2:46). Later, when they were threatened by the Jewish leaders, they lifted up their voice to God “with one accord ” (Acts 4:24). After the incident with Ananias and Sapphira, “they were all with one accord in Solomon’s porch” (Acts 5:12). When Philip went and preached in the city of Samaria, “the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake” (Acts 8:6). When Barnabas and Paul were sent out, they were sent out by brethren that were “of one accord ” (Acts 15:25).

The Philippians were admonished to be “ likeminded” and “of one accord ” (Phil 2:2), and that they would be found standing “fast in one spirit , with one mind striving together for the faith of the Gospel” (Phil 1:27). The desire of Paul was that the Romans would glorify God “with one mind and with one mouth ” (Rom 15:6). The Corinthians were urged to be “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment ” (1 Cor 1:10), and to “be of one mind ” (2 Cor 13:11). Paul said to scattered believers, “be ye all of one mind” (1 Pet 3:8).

Institutionalized religion has made it convenient to maintain different ways of thinking – to have divided thinking, even though it is contrary to both the nature of spiritual life and the Word of the Lord. Even though it involves division, heresy, sectarianism, and a party spirit, men can gather together under the banner of humanly devised theological systems. They call themselves by different names, and maintain separate theological schools to perpetuate their peculiar way of thinking. Oh, they all say they are right, and are ready to take God’s word in their mouth as though it was written to support their view.

My point in bringing up this miserable and reproachful condition is that it cannot be found in our text. We are considering the real thing – genuine spiritual life, or “newness of life” as it really is. The continuing together of our text was not the result of organization. It was not the consequence of sectarianism, or an effort to promote an institutional agenda. They continued together because they were united by their faith (Eph 4:14), and their possession of the Holy Spirit (Eph 4:3).

IN THE TEMPLE

“ . . . in the temple . . .” Other versions read, “in the temple courts ,” NIV “ attending the temple,” RSV “t o the temple,” BBE “In the temple complex ,” CSB “in the temple area ,” NAB and “in the temple courtyard .” IE

Keep in mind the number of brethren involved in this text. The number started with at least one hundred and twenty. Three thousand were added, and daily additions were being made “to the church.” We have no idea of the exact number, but it was well over 3,100 at the very least. If the response of the people to Peter’s initial words was so significant, we could very well be talking about a number in the vicinity of 3,500-4,000.

But do not be distracted by the number itself. All of these brethren were continuing to meet together every day! They did not meet in a coliseum, but in the Temple, which had been used of God to introduce the glorious things to be realized in the New Covenant. They did not meet in the Temple proper, where only priests were allowed to minister. They were, rather, in what might be called the temple complex, courtyard, or area. Rather than seeing their new lives as a contraction of the things related to the Temple, they now doubt saw the types and figures that were embedded in the Temple service as now being fulfilled: sacrifice, lambs, shedding of blood, a High Priest, intercession, cleansing, prayers, service, worship, and much more.

Herod’s temple itself, according to some historians, had the same dimensions as that of Solomon: 60 cubits long (90 feet), 20 cubits wide (30 feet), and 30 cubits high (45 feet). A number of courts, porches, and other structures surrounded the Temple itself, creating a rather large complex. You may recall that the disciples once showed Jesus the “ buildings of the temple” (Matt 24:1; Mk 13:1). Within the Temple there was also “Solomon’s porch,” in which Jesus walked (John 10:23). This appears to have been a rather large area. When Peter healed the man at the Temple gate called “Beautiful,” many people “ran together” to Solomon’s porch I(Acts 3:11). In the fifth chapter of Acts, Ananias and Sapphira were struck dead for lying to the Holy Spirit, the disciples were in Solomon’s porch (Acts 5:12).

Thus, the Temple area clearly could accommodate great crowds of people. Historians tell us that the wall around the Temple complex was 600 cubits square. The minimum measurement assigned to a cubit is eighteen inches. That would make the area nine hundred feet square, or an area in which nine football fields could be placed. Some affirm that a royal cubit, which it is likely that Herod used, is 20.67 inches in size. That would make the Temple area 1,033.5 feet square, or nearly 15% larger. We are speaking of an enormous area.

One section of this massive wall remains to this day. The section is referred to as “the wailing wall,” and is referred to as ‘the holiest shrine of the Jewish world.’ ZOLA LEVITE MINISTRIES
The wall is presently about sixty feet high (equivalent to a six story building).

My point in spending an unusual amount of time on this is to accent the nature of real spiritual life. Brethren want to be together! After all, they are headed for a place where they will “go no more out” (Rev 3:12), either from the conscious presence of the Lord or from one another. It makes a lot of sense that kindred spirits do not want to be separated from one another. Therefore, these brethren sought means to be together, and they found them in the Temple area.

For general information “the Temple” is mentioned twenty-four times in the book of Acts (2:46; 3:1,2,3,8,10; 4:1; 5:20,21,24,25,42; 19:27; 21:26,27,28,29, 30; 22:17; 24:6,12,18; 25:8; 26:21). Peter and John went there “at the hour of prayer” (3:1). The angel of the Lord told the apostles, “Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life”, which they did (Acts 5:20,21,25). When the apostles had been released from prison, they were found “daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ” (Acts 5:42). Paul went to the Temple (21:26,30). He prayed in the Temple (Acts 22:17).

This does not suggest that the Temple was intended to remain in place, or that the Lord dwelt there in a unique and special way. It does suggest, however, the early believers were able to make holy associations, and took advantage of them to meet together. They were not against buildings, and took measures to ensure that they could be together in one place. Those who imagine that there is more sanctity and advantage in dividing the saints into small numbers will not be able to account satisfactorily for this refreshing record.

People who have one mind, or are of “one accord,” perceive being “together” as a most pleasant advantage. They do not attempt to limit the number with whom they meet, but seek to gain every possible benefit.

BREAKING BREAD FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE

“ 46b . . . and breaking bread from house to house . . . ”

Even after they spent time “together” in the Temple, the freshness of salvation, and the vigorous nature of “newness of life” compelled them to spend more time together. Again, this was not a matter of law, or of apostolic requirement. Those who only spend time together because they have to do so will seek opportunity to separate for a season. These people sought opportunities to be together.

This is an expression of new life, especially at its inception. It should be contrasted with a new converts in our time who become part of a group that meets from 1-3 hours a week – and even that time is often bereft of food for the soul and profitable fellowship.

I must take care to confirm that the events taking place in our text are not the establishment of a standard, or norm. Neither are they the response to a particular apostolic directive – unless it be to save themselves from that “untoward generation” (2:40). This is an expression of new life, especially at its inception. It should be contrasted with a new converts in our time who become part of a group that meets from 1-3 hours a week – and even that time is often bereft of food for the soul and profitable fellowship. Such a circumstance is a religious aberration – an abnormality from which nothing of lasting goodness will emerge. It assumes that new life progresses without involvement in the body of Christ to which it has been joined. By way of contrast, we are reading of how real believers, responding to the real Jesus, were compelled to conduct themselves.

BREAKING BREAD

“. . . and breaking bread . . .” Other versions read, “they broke bread,” NIV “taking broken bread,” BBE “they received their food,” ESV “did eat their meat,” GENEVA “they ate,” GWN “broke bread and took food,” MRD “taking their meals together,” NAU “ate together,” NIB “for the Lord’s Supper,” NLT “met in small groups . . . for Communion,” LIVING “they ate,” ISV “they practiced breaking their bread together,” WILLIAMS and “they broke bread [including the Lord’s Supper].” AMPLIFIED

There is by no means agreement among the commentators on whether this refers to the Lord’s Supper, or to a common meal enjoyed by the people. However, in the wake of the sudden burst of spiritual life, it would not be strange for disciples to frequently partake of the table of the Lord, at which a most blessed remembrance of the Savior was the focus.

- This ordinance provided a vivid depiction of the marvelous unity, or oneness, that they were enjoying. As it is written of the ordinance, “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ? For we being many are one bread, and one body: for we are all partakers of that one bread” (1 Cor 10:17).

- The matter of resolution and commitment also takes place at this table as we recall, “Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord’s table, and of the table of devils” (1 Cor 10:21).

- There is also the matter of discernment, when the Lord Jesus is seen more clearly, and understood more precisely: “But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord’s body” (1 Cor 11:28-29).

- There is even a proclamation in the observance of the Lord’s Supper, as we declare the Lord’s death, doing so in the prospect of His coming: “For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord’s death till he come” (1 Cor 11:26).

- There is also a very real participation in the benefits that were realized by means of Christ shedding His blood, and bearing the sins of the world in His body on the tree: “The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?” (1 Cor 10:16). In the place of “communion,” other versions read “sharing,” NASB “participation,” NIV “give us a part,” BBE “fellowship,” YLT “joint-participation,” WEYMOUTH and “participate in and share a fellowship.” AMPLIFIED

I doubt that these early disciples had a cognitive grasp of all of these things. Yet, as they entered into the ordinance they were realizing all of these marvelous benefits, being drawn into more intimate involvement with the Savior Himself, and realizing more fully the marvelous unity they were experiencing in Christ Jesus. I know from experience that the effects of such realities upon the soul brings with them a fervent desire to be with those of kindred spirit. All of this is accented by the Lord’s promise to be among those who meet together in his name, or because of Him and for His sake (Matt 18:20). If the ultimate objective of salvation is that Deity will dwell among them (Rev 21:3), then salvation itself is bound to promote a longing for such a presence. There is no better precursor to this aim than saints assembling together – particularly in remembrance of Christ.

In my own judgment, both the Lord’s Table and the eating of common meals are included in the activity of this verse – just as it was on that marvelous evening when Jesus ordained this feast. Ponder the wonderful things that took place at that occasion – when they ate together, and first observed the Lord’s Table.

In my own judgment, both the Lord’s Table and the eating of common meals are included in the activity of this verse – just as it was on that marvelous evening when Jesus ordained this feast.

Ponder the wonderful things that took place at that occasion – when they ate together, and first observed the Lord’s Table.

- Jesus washed their feet (John 13:4-12).
- Jesus confirmed that He had chosen them (John 13:18; 15:16).
- Jesus revealed the one who would betray Him, even though it was not understood by the disciples (John 13:21-27).
- He gave them a new commandment, that they love one another as He had loved them, declaring their connection to Him would be made known in that love (John 13:34-35).
- He revealed He was going away to prepare a place for them, so they could be with Him (John 14:1-3).
- He declared Himself to be the only means of gaining access to the Father (John 14:6).
- He told them He was going to send a Comforter to them, the Spirit of truth, who would abide with them forever (John 14:16-18).
- He told them the day was coming when they would know He was in the Father, they were in Jesus, and Jesus was in them (John 14:20).
- Jesus declared that the person who had His commandments and kept them would be loved by Him, and that He would reveal Himself to that person (John 14:21).
- He revealed that the person who loved Him and kept His words would be loved by the Father, and that the Father and the Son would make their abode with that person (John 14:23).
- He told them the Comforter, when He was come, would teach them of all things, and bring to their remembrance His life-giving words (John 14:26).
- He declared He was going to give them His own peace (John 14:27).
- He told them He was the Vine, and they were the branches, and developed the implications of those realities (John 15:1-8).
- He revealed that the Holy Spirit would testify of Him to them, making them competent and effective witnesses (John 15:26-27).
- He unveiled the convicting ministry of the Holy Spirit (John 16:7-11).
- He affirmed that the Holy Spirit would guide them into all truth, withholding nothing from them that He was given to say (John 16:13).
- The Holy Spirit would glorify Christ by taking what He had given, and showing, or unveiling, it to the disciples (John 16:14-15).
- He promised that He was going to speak plainly to them of the Father (John 16:25-26).
- He revealed that the Father loved them because they loved Him, and believed that He came out from God (John 16:27).

All of that was done BEFORE Jesus died, before the sin of the world was taken away, before the devil was destroyed and principalities and powers were plundered. It was said before Jesus made peace, before He reconciled the world to God, and before he blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us. These things were said before Jesus rose from the dead, before He ascended into heaven, and before He was exalted, being made both Lord and Christ!

Now that He has been exalted above every name than is named, will Jesus do less when He is among those who eat at His table, and joyfully eat together as His disciples? All of this was done during a meal, and when they first took of the Lord's Supper. What may we expect Him to do now when His disciples come together to remember Him?

In view of this, consider something Jesus said after the memorable institution of the Lord's Supper. "But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom" (Matt 26:29). "Verily I say unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God" (Mark 14:25). To what time was Jesus referring? Was it to the world to come? Will we require that ordinance to assist us in remembering Jesus when we are with Him face to face? Did Jesus not tell these people they would see the Kingdom of God come with power (Mk 9:1)? If this table involves communing with Christ's body and blood, is He not there among us, eating and drinking in a "new" way with us?

The Relevancy of This

There is a certain relevancy to be seen in this brief diversion. In keeping with the nature of the Kingdom and spiritual life, these people did not know one another "after the flesh" (2 Cor 5:16). That is, their closeness was not owing to fleshly friendship, or institutional camaraderie. They were one in Christ Jesus, and therefore their activities tended to center in Him, not in natural relationships and activities.

FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE

"... from house to house..." Other versions read, "in their homes," NIV "at home," RSV "in their houses," BBE "at each other's home," GWN "met in homes," NLT "every house," TNT "in private houses," WEYMOUTH and "in their own homes." MONTGOMERY

Leaving the Temple, the disciples, now well over 3,100, meet in smaller groups in various homes. It is likely that this was determined more by the area in which they resided, rather than mere fleshly acquaintance. Just as in our times, it is apparent that some homes were more commodious, and able to house more. As you can see, these disciples did not view their houses as their own alone, but shared them with their brethren. It is also likely that some of the "devout men out of every nation under heaven" needed places to stay. It is not unlikely that local brethren opened their homes to such.

By saying "from house to house," a certain movement is implied. That is, there were no cliques, sects, or isolated groups. The expression used here "from house to house" comes from an interesting Greek expression. The word "from" comes from the Greek preposition kat (kot), which "denoted motion of diffusion or direction from the higher to the lower... down from," THAYER "generally downward movement" FRIBERG

The idea is that the environment and benefits realized when the disciples were all together in the Temple, went with them as they met in various houses.

Here is another place where true spiritual life radically differs from institutional hype. For example, it would not be difficult to conceive of professing Christians going straight from a Lord's day assembly to an athletic event, or some family outing, or an amusement park. Life after the average assembly – assuming it is an assembly with any degree of substance – is anything but a continuance of the spirit of the assembly. For example, the concept of praise and worship that is being hawked in the churches today is one of entering into an activity, then leaving it. There is absolutely no need for a praise and worship leader after the gathering. Further, things that take place in the assembly are generally of a different gender than things outside of the assembly. Should there be some kind of break from routine in the assembly, it is not surprising to find people speaking of things wholly unrelated to life and godliness. All of this is generally accepted being normal among modern professing Christians.

However, would you expect that sort of conduct among the disciples of our text? Do you imagine they went from continually meeting in the Temple to descend together into the quagmire of purely earthly interests? Is there any record of Jesus Himself ever wholly devoting Himself to such interests – or the twelve apostles, or Paul, or Timothy, or anyone else of Scriptural record? Is there any record of believers becoming absorbed with politics, or business, or community events, or any other form of ordinary life?

The sophist will object, saying that I am suggesting they never did such things – that all believers were totally divorced from any lawful involvements with the world. However, that is not at all what I am saying. I rather suggest that such involvements were always secondary, and never primary. I am saying that “newness of life” is, by its very nature, is fundamental, primary, and principal.

The Kingdom of God, together with all of its facets, is to be sought “first” – not secondarily or as some other subordinate interest. That is why we are admonished, “Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God” (1 Cor 10:31). And again, “And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him” (Col 3:17). And again, “And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men” (Col 3:23).

This is why Jesus died and rose again, “that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). This is involved in presenting our bodies as “a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service” (Rom 12:1). Simply put, this is the way life in Christ Jesus is lived. It is the manner of regenerated life. What we are witnessing in this text is the expression of that life. In our day, it will take different forms. We may not meet in the Temple, but we meet. We will take the benefits received when we meet together and carry them into our homes, which will be open to all of our brethren. That is newness of life! That is simply how it functions. It is not self centered, but Christ centered. It sees God’s people as the primary people.

EATING WITH GLADNESS AND SINGLENES OF HEART

“ 46c . . . did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart . . . ”

This is a unity that continues because it produces gladness. It is not cumbersome. It does not tax the patience of those who possess it. It is not forced upon men, so that they must continue together out of obligation, whether they like it or not. It is not a theoretical unity that men only talk about, but which is never evidenced in their daily lives.

The unity that is accomplished in Christ Jesus – the “unity of the Spirit” – is very real. It is not institutional unity that is turned on and off as men deem appropriate. This is a unity that continues because it produces gladness. It is not cumbersome. It does not tax the patience of those who possess it. It is not forced upon men, so that they must continue together out of obligation, whether they like it or not. It is not a theoretical unity that men only talk about, but which is never evidenced in their daily lives. Behold how glorious it is to be of “one heart and of one soul” (Acts 4:32).

DID EAT THEIR MEAT WITH GLADNESS

“. . . did eat their meat with gladness . . . ” Other versions read, “they ate their food with gladness,” NKJV “they were taking their meals together with gladness,” NASB “ate together with glad . . . hearts ,” NIV “ partook of food with glad . . . hearts,” RSV “they took their food with joy ,” BBE “they received their food with gladness,” DARBY “they were joyful . . . as they ate,” GWN

“took food rejoicing,” MRD “they ate their meals with exultation,” NAB “sharing their food with glad . . . hearts,” NET “shared their food gladly,” NJB “shared their meals with great joy,” NLT “eating their good with joyful hearts,” IE “took their meals with great happiness,” WEYMOUTH “partook of their food with gladness,” AMPLIFIED “sharing their meals with simple joy,” PHILLIPS and “sharing food with great happiness.” ALT

This is newness of life in its purest form. It will not be long until the old serpent will corrupt the church with his ministers and their doctrine. Later, in Corinth, they ate together, but there was a total absence of the spirit made known in this text. Paul chastens that wayward assembly. “When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper. For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken” (1 Cor 11:21). Oh, when they met, they did take the Lord's Supper – but not in the proper spirit. They had a meal together also, but they did not eat their food with gladness. Instead, everyone thought only of themselves, eating their own food sumptuously while poorer hungry brethren sat right next to them. What happened in Corinth? Why was it so contradictory to what is happening in our text? I will tell you why. They had heard about and received another Jesus, another Gospel, and another Spirit (2 Cor 11:4). That reception caused differing and contradicting attitudes to arise among them. Those attitudes did not come because they were believing, or loved the brethren, or were worshiping God. They were expressions of people who were regressing, walking in the flesh, and quenching the Spirit.

However, in our text, life was fresh, dominating, invigorating, and refreshing. This is real life, and their devotion was real devotion. There is no simulation here, no pretension, no hypocrisy. Those dreadful traits will soon enter, but it will not because it is the nature of spiritual life to allow them.

Here we read of the meals of the brethren. This is in addition to the breaking of bread, which, in the least consideration, included the Lord's table. Now, they share their food, and do it gladly. They did not leave their gladness in the Temple, but brought it into their houses. God is said to fill men's heart “with gladness” (Acts 14:17), and indeed He does! Jesus was anointed “with the oil of gladness” (Heb 1:9).

Gladness has always been a mark of the godly. In Nehemiah's time, when a revival took place, “there was very great gladness” (Neh 8:17; 12:27). When Divine deliverance was experienced by the Jews of Esther's time they had “gladness and joy” (Esther 8:16,17). David sang that God had “put gladness” into his heart (Psa 4:7), and even “girded” him with gladness (Psa 30:11). God is to be served “with gladness” (Psa 100:2). When God brings forth His people, whether it is Israel being brought from Egypt, or the those in Christ being brought from the world and sin, it is “with joy” and “with gladness” (Psa 105:43). Isaiah prophesied of the day of salvation, saying the people would “obtain joy and gladness” (Isa 35:10; 51:3,11). Jeremiah spoke of the coming age as one in which “the voice of joy and the voice of gladness” would be heard (Jer 33:11).

It ought to be noted that this is not a gladness brought on by a drum roll and a pounding base. In scripture, “gladness” is rational, and is the result of insight, perception, and understanding. It is not simply a feeling that is caught, so to speak, by being in a tumultuous environment, or the result of being led into a frenzied state by a charismatic personality.

The word “gladness” is an especially strong one, as you might suppose. Coming from the Greek word avgallia,sei (ag-al-lee'as-ei), it means “exultation, extreme joy,” THAYER “gladness, (extreme) joy, feeling of great happiness,” FRIBERG “extreme joy or gladness,” UBS “a state of intensive joy and gladness, often implying verbal expression and body movement (for example, jumping, leaping, dancing) – to be extremely joyful, to rejoice greatly, extreme gladness,” LOUW-

NIDA “great joy, exultation.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

It ought to be noted that this is not a gladness brought on by a drum roll and a pounding base. In scripture, “gladness” is rational, and is the result of insight, perception, and understanding. It is not simply a feeling that is caught, so to speak, by being in a tumultuous environment, or the result of being led into a frenzied state by a charismatic personality. That is why it is wed to such things as light, joy, and honor (Esther 8:16), rejoicing (Psa 45:15), the upright in heart (Psa 97:11), holy solemnity (Isa 30:29), thanksgiving (Isa 51:3), and the love of truth and peace (Zech 8:19).

It is what these believers had received and understood that made them glad. It was not a gladness that created distraction and chaos, for they “ate their food with gladness,” and that is an orderly involvement.

AND SINGLENESS OF HEART

“ . . . and singleness of heart . . . ” Other versions read, “ simplicity of heart,” NKJV “ sincerity of heart,” NASB “sincere hearts,” NIV “ generous hearts,” NRSV “ true hearts,” BBE “ humble hearts,” NET “ generosity ,” NLT “ thankfulness ,” LIVING “ single-heartedness ,” WEYMOUTH “simple hearts,” WILLIAMS and “ undivided hearts.” MONTGOMERY

A single heart is an uncluttered one. The phrase “singleness of heart” is mentioned three times in Scripture (Acts 2:46; Eph 6:5; Col 3:22). Under the law, the matter of a “singular vow” was addressed (Lev 27:2), meaning dedicated vow that was unmixed with any other commitment. Jesus spoke of commitment to a single objective as having an eye that was “single” (Matt 6:22; Lk 11:34). The word used here means “simplicity,” or “plain,” like soil without rocks , THAYER “smoothness, evenness, hence sincerity of heart, humbleness,” FRIBERG and “humility associated with simplicity of life – humility, humbleness, simplicity.” LOUW-NIDA

The idea is that the people had no ulterior motives, hidden objectives, or secret ambitions. There was no exploitation, or shrouded intentions. No person was trying to get on the good side of another, or plotting to gain some sort of advantage. Friends were not sought for personal gain.

These brethren were not driven by a lifeless institutional agenda, or humanly conceived laws. They were glad to share their homes and their food, and happy to be together, focusing on the apostles’ doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers.

PRAISING GOD

“ 47a Praising God . . . ” Other versions read, “ Giving praise to God,” BBE “ At the same time they praised God,” GWN “all the while praising God,” NLT “the believers were praising God,” IE “they kept praising God,” ISV “ constantly praising God,” WILLIAMS and “they praised God continually .” PHILLIPS

Right here we confront something with which the modern church has great difficulty. For the most part, it has allowed the young and unlearned to shape their thinking on praise. This was not a separate activity, with a separate specialized leader. It does not say they were singing, although that certainly would not have been strange. As some versions indicate, they were praising God throughout their sundry activities. They praised Him in the Temple. They praised Him as they went from house to house. They praised Him when they broke bread. They praised Him when they ate their food with gladness and singleness of heart. What is there about praise like this that would require a leader, and how would he go about leading such praise should such a person be required?

WHAT IS PRAISE?

Precisely what does it mean to praise God? You will note from the text that this was not their response to a commandment, or a procedure, or to some form of human leadership. Whatever had happened to these people had set them to praising God.

Coming from the Greek word aivnou/ntej (ahee-noon-tes), “praising” means, “extol,” THAYER “praise, speak in praise of, in the NT used only of praise for God,” FRIBERG “to speak of the excellence of a person,” LOUW-NIDA and “to glorify.” LEH

As is common with all spiritual expressions, praise is characterized by both truth and perception. Praise is the result of perception – perceiving the work of God. When men praise God, like their perception, it flows from faith, for praise is the eye and hand of the soul, that takes hold of the things of God.

As used in this text, this word occurs nine times in Scripture.

- When Jesus was born, the shepherds heard “multitude of the heavenly host praising God” (Lk 2:13). Their words were insightful: “Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men” (Luke 2:14).
- When the shepherds returned from seeing the holy child, they did so “glorifying and praising God” (Lk 2:20).
- When Jesus came into Jerusalem in fulfillment of Zechariah’s prophecy, “the whole multitude of the disciples began to rejoice and praise God with a loud voice for all the mighty works that they had seen” (Luke 19:37). Their words were also insightful: “Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest” (Luke 19:38).
- After Jesus was risen from the dead, and ascended into heaven, it is said of the disciples, “And were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God. Amen” (Luke 24:53).
- When the lame man was healed at the gate Beautiful, it is written, “And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God” (Acts 3:8).
- When Paul was commenting on the acceptance of Gentiles, he sited a text from the 117 th Psalm: “And again, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud Him, all ye people.” (Rom 15:11; Psa 117:1).
- From the Isle of Patmos, John the beloved heard a voice coming out of the Throne: “Praise our God, all ye His servants, and ye that fear Him, both small and great” (Rev 19:5).

As used in all of these texts, there were expressions of refreshing insights concerning the Person, purpose, and accomplishments of God Almighty. Understanding was reflected in the words, as well as appreciation and thankfulness.

I have lamentably noted over the years how very little insightful speech is found among professing believers. Only recently I was with a group of Christian leaders where insight into the Person of God was glaringly absent. If you have ever been part of a meal attended by church folk, you probably heard very little “praise” for God – very few words of understanding concerning holy involvements with the sons of men.

However, if you had been with those early believers – thousands of them – you would have heard them praising God. They would not have been speculating about why He did this or that, or allowed something they did not understand. Even though those saints lived in politically difficult times, you would not have heard them philosophizing about why Pilate was allowed to mix the blood of certain Galileans with their sacrifices (Lk 13:1). You would not have heard them speaking about the miserable architects of the day whose tower collapsed on eighteen people, killing them all (Luke 13:4). Something had happened to those early believers that transformed how they saw things, as well as the things on which they focused.

As I have already emphasized, we are being exposed to real conversion and the impact their transformation had upon them. If their conduct is at variance with that of modern day professed believers, what kind of person would assume it was because the times have changed, and people are no longer so radical. Who would say that those early believers tasted of something unique – something that was not intended for all time? Of course, if that really is the case, then precisely what is there about salvation that is “common” (Jude 1:3). And, how can faith be “common,” yet yield such dramatically different results (Tit 1:4). These are things to ponder.

CONTINUAL PRAISE

Believers are admonished, “By Him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to His name” (Heb 13:15). Praise is one thing, “continual” praise is something else. A person may be able simulate praise for a short time, but the person who cannot perceive the working of the Lord cannot praise Him “continually.” For such pretenders, praise is not “fruit,” but only pretension.

Without apparent prodding, the disciples of our text continued to praise the Lord – in the Temple, and from house to house. They did not see it as a duty, but as something their hearts compelled them to do. It was not an activity to which time was assigned, or that required a leader and instruction. Their praise was the spontaneous and insightful expression of their faith. They had a “like precious faith” just as the apostles (2 Pet 1:1), who would say later, “For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard” (Acts 4:20). That involves praising as well as preaching.

ONE MORE WORD ABOUT PRAISE

In all of these texts, the people themselves become “a praise.” That is, they are seen as the work of God, and thus produce praise to God in those who see them. That praise is primarily in heaven, among the hosts who have a clearer and more extensive view of the greatness of the work of God than ordinary men.

Because of the current teaching concerning praise, it is necessary to say few more words about this matter. Through the prophets, the Lord foretold a time when the people of God themselves would become “a praise.” The apostles confirmed that this occurred in those who are joined to Christ Jesus, and thus participate in both His death and His life.

The Prophets

- “And give Him no rest, till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth” (Isa 62:7).
- “For as the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto me the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Judah, saith the LORD; that they might be unto me for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear” (Jer 13:11).
- “And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honor before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them: and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it” (Jer 33:9).
- “At that time will I bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD” (Zeph 3:20).

The Apostles

The apostolic equivalent of this is stated in the following manner.

- “Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, to the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6).
- And again, “That we should be to the praise of His glory, who first trusted in Christ” (Eph 1:12).
- And again, “Which is the earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory” (Eph 1:14).
- And again, “Being filled with the fruits of righteousness, which are by Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God” (Phil 1:11).
- And again, “That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:7).

It should be apparent, and yet it is necessary to say it, this is the only kind of people that can praise God – a people who themselves have been “made a praise.” All other purported praise is pretentious, and is actually obnoxious to the Lord.

In all of these texts, the people themselves become “a praise.” That is, they are seen as the work of God, and thus produce praise to God in those who see them. That praise is primarily in heaven, among the hosts who have a clearer and more extensive view of the greatness of the work of God than ordinary men. The praise will also be upon earth among those who perceive that the people of God are, in fact, the work of God.

Expressions of This Praise On Earth

Remembering that giving thanks is expressly said to be “praise” (Heb 13:15), an expression of this kind is found in Paul’s letter to the Ephesians. “Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers” (Eph 1:15-16). A similar expression or praise was expressed to the Colossians. “We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints” (Col 1:3-4). Another such expression related to the Thessalonian saints. “We give thanks to God always for you all, making mention of you in our prayers; remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labor of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ, in the sight of God and our Father; knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God” (1 Thess 1:2-4).

In these three cases, Paul perceived the work of God in the people. It was obvious to the eye of faith that God had “created them in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:10). It was evident that they had passed from death unto life, and that God was working in them “that which is well pleasing in His sight” (Heb 13:20). The people had become “a praise.”

The Relevancy to Our Text

It should be apparent, and yet it is necessary to say it, this is the only kind of people that can praise God – a people who themselves have been “made a praise.” All other purported praise is pretentious, and is actually obnoxious to the Lord. Both the prophets and Jesus spoke of such a thing in these words: “This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth Me with their lips; but their heart is far from Me. But in vain they do worship Me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men” (Matt 15:8-9).

The seriousness of the condition is accented by the prophets. “Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs ; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols” (Amos 5:23). And again, “That chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of music, like David” (Amos 6:5). And again, “And the songs of the temple shall be howlings in that day , saith the Lord GOD: there shall be many dead bodies in every place; they shall cast them forth with silence” (Amos 8:3). The people had simulated praise. They used instruments like David, but it was for their own satisfaction, and not for the Lord. What the people called praise, God called “noise” and “howlings.” It all sounds like a page out of modern times.

The point is that the people of our text had really been made new. They had once been charged with killing Jesus, now they had been forgiven and liberated by Him, and they knew it. The product of that was their praise – daily praise, and continual praise.

Today the professing church is being taught by sophists that praise is the secret to receiving from God. It is like a key that unlocks heaven, and causes God to come and dwell among the people. The whole matter is presented leaving the impression that praise makes a people, rather than a people making praise. It is a serious error praise is purported to be coming from a people in whom the working of God is not evident. A people whose very appearance and manners is a distraction to godly minds cannot possibly be found in “the courts of the Lord” (Psa 84:2). It is not possible for a people to truly praise God who are not continuing steadfastly in the apostles doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread and in prayers. It is time for godly teachers and leaders to rise up and insist that people be “holy in all manner of conversation,” or “conduct” NKJV (1 Pet 1:15). This is God’s requirement, and it must be ours as well. If men object, saying it is not possible to determine who is really holy, they should be removed from positions of leadership. God has not put them there, for He places no members in functions for which they are not suited (1 Cor 12:28).

Of course, in our text, such unsavory conditions had not yet arisen. That is the whole point of saying these things. We are beholding true purity.

HAVING FAVOR WITH ALL THE PEOPLE

“ 47b . . . and having favor with all the people.” Other versions read, “enjoying the favor of all the people,” NIV “having the goodwill of all the people,” NRSV “having the approval of all the people,” BBE “were looked up to by everyone,” NJB “the whole city was favorable to them,” LIVING “All of the people liked them,” IE “regarded with favor by all the people,” WEYMOUTH “being in favor and goodwill with all the people,” AMPLIFIED and “all the people respected them.” PHILLIPS

Here is a phenomenon that is most arresting to consider – “favor with all the people.” This confirms that God does not produce a people whose appearance and manner of life is offensive to others. Christians are not social oddities, who look like fools and conduct their lives as though they did not have good sense. It is their doctrine that causes all of the trouble, not their appearance. Solomon once said, “Let not mercy and truth forsake thee: bind them about thy neck; write them upon the table of thine heart: so shalt thou find favour and good understanding in the sight of God and man” (Prov 3:3-4).

The people of Jerusalem looked favorably upon this growing body of believers. There was a certain comeliness in their conduct that reflected the working of the Lord. They were not seeking their own. They were not moved to exploit others. There was no cause for legal restraint among them. The city was not made worse because of their presence. No one’s possessions were in jeopardy because of their presence. They did not engage in disruptive or abusive conduct. Thus, the people looked favorably upon them. That does not mean they all rushed to embrace the truth that had liberated these souls, and that is not what our text means. It rather highlights that even the inhabitants of Jerusalem saw that the people were better, not worse.

This assisted the church in its beginnings, as the Lord protected them from harsh opposition at the first. In due time, because of their aggressive preaching and testimony, much of this favor would be lost. However, that would not be due to the way they lived, or to any adverse effects their lives had upon others. True godliness is of such an order that it is written, “Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ ” (1 Pet 3:16).

The Working of the Lord

From one point of view, this “favor with all the people” was the working of the Lord, who gave the new disciples favor in the eyes of the people. When God appeared to Moses and told him He was going to deliver Israel from Egypt,. He said, “And I will give this people favor in the sight of the Egyptians : and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty” (Ex 3:21). When the time of deliverance came, this is precisely what he did: “And the LORD gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians ” (Ex 11:3). And again it is written, “And the LORD gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians, so that they lent unto them such things as they required. And they spoiled the Egyptians” (Ex 12:36).

It is also written of Joseph, “And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him, and delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt ; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house” (Acts 7:9-10). As young Samuel advanced in years, it is said of him, “And the child Samuel grew on, and was in favor both with the LORD, and also with men ” (1 Sam 2:26). It is also said of Esther, “And Esther obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her ” (Esther 2:15).

However, when men look unfavorably upon us, it must not be because of the way we live, or because of our behavior among men. It is wrong for believers to be criticized for their work ethic, or because they are lazy, or because they cannot be trusted. Our light shines through our works, thus adorning the doctrine

The Example of Jesus

When the very nature and life of God was embodied a person, the Lord Jesus Christ, it is said of Him, “And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man ” (Luke 2:52).

On one occasion, the Jews took up stones to kill Jesus. At this time Jesus asked them which one of His “good works” had provoked them to such action. Here is the record. “Then the Jews took up stones again to stone Him. Jesus answered them, Many good works have I showed you from My Father; for which of those works do ye stone Me? The Jews answered him, saying, For a good work we stone thee not; but for blasphemy ; and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God” (John 10:33). It was what Jesus SAID that brought men to oppose Him. As for His life itself, it was not offensive to ordinary men – not even men like Pilate. When Pilate looked for some deed or expression in the life of Jesus that would justify His death, even he had to twice acknowledge, “I find no fault in Him” (John 19:4,6).

True Godliness

When the redeemed live their lives within the context of righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit, there is a sense in which they are “approved of men.” Thus it is written, “For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men ” (Rom 14:17-18). When admonishing the Corinthians, Paul urged them to provide “for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men ” (2 Cor 8:21). Jesus said, “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works , and glorify your Father which is in heaven” (Matt 5:16).

It is not that we are to do things to please men, for that is a wholly improper motive (Gal 1:10). Rather, it is that true godliness is not of itself offensive to men. It is the reason and objective of godliness that causes the offense, particularly as it is expressed in preaching.

A Word to the Wise

We are not to be naive or overly simplistic in our view of this matter. There is no guarantee that you will experience overwhelming acceptance by everyone around you, and you should not expect this to be the case. However, when men look unfavorably upon us, it must not be because of the way we live, or because of our behavior among men. It is wrong for believers to be criticized for their work ethic, or because they are lazy, or because they cannot be trusted. Our light shines through our works, thus adorning the doctrine (Tit 2:10).

Likewise, when we find favor with men, let it not be because we keep silence about the truth, or because we present the truth so that it is more palatable to men. And, even in our speech, may it be said that we have “sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you ” (Titus 2:8).

We can be assured that when it is appropriate, and when it is best for our own advancement and the glory of God, our Lord can still give us favor with all of the people. We can let it rest at that.

ADDITIONS EVERY DAY

“ 47c And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved. ”

Those who are looking for a pattern in the book of Acts, or for precedents established for all time, will surely have a difficult time with this text. I do not know that I have ever heard someone say that daily additions are the standard for all churches – even though, considering that “the field is the world” (Matt 13:36), this is surely happening. The very fact that this is something that the Lord did confirms that it is not subject to systemization or exploitation by men.

THE LORD ADDED TO THE CHURCH

Here we have the first time the words are used with particular reference to the body of Christ, those who have been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son

“And the Lord added to the church daily . . . ” Other versions read, “the Lord was adding to their number daily,” NASB “ day by day the Lord added to their number,” NRSV “every day the number . . . was increased by the Lord,” BBE “the Lord added to them,” CSB “the Lord added to the assembly daily,” DARBY “the Lord increased daily together ,” DOUAY “every day the Lord saved people ,” GWN “the Lord added to their community ,” NJB “each day the Lord added to their fellowship ,” NLT “the Lord added to the congregation daily,” TNT “ each day God added to them,” LIVING “every day the Lord continued to add to them,” WILLIAMS and “the Lord added to their group .” GNB

Luke is not speaking of a church roster, or a set of books on earth. It was the assembly itself that as increased – “the church.” This is only the second time the expression “the church” is used in the New Covenant Scriptures. Jesus referred to “My church” in Matthew 16:18, speaking of a time to follow His enthronement in glory. He referred to “the church” in Matthew 18:17, where he was addressing the matter of one brother trespassing against another. His immediate reference was not to “the church” as comprehended in the apostles’ doctrine – that is to say, His body – even though the principle continues to apply.

Here we have the first time the words are used with particular reference to the body of Christ, those who have been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son (Col 1:13).

As used in this text, there has been considerable dialog among believers concerning the word "church." Some have chosen to use it in reference to the structure in which the people of God meet. There is, however, no Scriptural basis for such a use, and it contradicts the way the word is employed by the Holy Spirit.

The word "church" is translated from the Greek word evkkhhsia (ek-lay-see-ah). The foundational, or root, meaning of the word is, "called out, or called forth." THAYER The predominate idea in the word is that of an assembly – a group people that have been "called out." This the lexical definition of its use is, "a gathering of citizens called out from their homes into some public place; as assembly," THAYER "the assembled Christian community," FRIBERG "congregation of Christians, implying interacting membership," LOUW-NIDA "community, congregation, church," LIDDELL-SCOTT "assembly," LEH "church or congregation; as a church meeting." GINGRICH While there are other uses of the word like a political gathering (Acts 19:39), the gathering of Israelites at Sinai (Acts 7:39), and an unruly assembly of people (Acts 19:32), the emphasis is always on the gathering – an assembly . Even when the "church" is used of the body of Christ in general (Col 1:18), the emphasis is upon the people being called out of the world and assembled together in Christ.

Therefore, when our text says the Lord "added to the church daily," the immediate reference is to an increase in the assembly – in those who were continuing "steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers" (Acts 2:42). The larger implication is that the body of Christ – the people called out of the world and set in the heavenly places – was increasing daily.

Note that it was the Lord who was doing the adding. This means that His criteria for addition had been met. Other expressions that speak of the Lord adding to the church are as follows.

- "But of Him [God] are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption" (1 Cor 1:30).
- "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body , as it hath pleased Him" (1 Cor 12:18).
- "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body , whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit" (1 Cor 12:13).
- "Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son" (Col 1:13).
- "I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase " (1 Cor 3:6).
- " For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Cor 4:6).
- "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy He saved us , by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Savior" (Titus 3:5-6).

Ultimately, the things required for our salvation are accomplished by God, through Jesus, and in the Holy Spirit. Some of the accomplishments include the following.

- Reconciled (Col 1:21).
- Washed (1 Cor 6:11).
- Sanctified (1 Cor 6:11; Jude 1:1).
- Justified (1 Cor 6:11).
- Purged (Heb 1:3).
- Purified (Acts 15:9; Tit 2:14).
- Delivered (Gal 1:4; Col 1:13).
- Translated (Col 1:3).
- Called out (1 Pet 5:10; 2 Pet 1:3).
- Joined to the Lord (1 Cor 6:17).
- Baptized into one body (1 Cor 12:13).
- Drink in one Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
- Baptized into Christ (Gal 3:27).

Those who have experienced such things, by the very nature of the life given to them, are drawn together. They have all been “added” to the church, being made a part of Christ’s body. Further, their “common salvation” and “common faith” bring them together

Enlightened (Heb 6:4).

- Tasted of the heavenly gift (Heb 6:4).
- Made partakers of the Holy Spirit (Heb 6:4).
- Tasted of the good word of God (Heb 6:5).
- Tasted of the powers of the world to come (Heb 6:5).

Those who have experienced such things, by the very nature of the life given to them, are drawn together. They have all been “added” to the church, being made a part of Christ’s body. Further, their “common salvation” and “common faith” bring them together (Tit 1:4; Jude 1:3).

SUCH AS SHOULD BE SAVED

“ . . . such as should be saved.” Other versions read, “those who were being saved,” NKJV “those that were saved,” ASV “those who had salvation,” BBE “those that were to be saved,” DOUAY “those destined to be saved,” NJB “those whom He was saving,” WEYMOUTH “those who were being saved [from spiritual death],” AMPLIFIED and “those who were finding salvation” PHILLIPS

As you can see, there are a number of differing perspectives reflected in the various translations. Note the different emphases.

- DIVINE DETERMINATION: “should be saved,” KJV “were to be saved,” DOUAY “destined to be saved.” NJB
- THE PROCESS OF BEING SAVED: “were being saved,” NKJV “He was saving,” WEYMOUTH “who were being saved.” AMPLIFIED
- A RESULT OF SALVATION: “who had salvation.” BBE
- HUMAN INVOLVEMENT: “who were finding salvation.” PHILLIPS

Obviously, some of these versions are actually commentaries rather than translations, for words themselves cannot have such a diverse meaning. My purpose here is simply to determine as best I can what the verse is actually saying. You may be sure that it will perfectly agree with the Scriptural doctrine of salvation itself.

The word “added” (the Lord added) is an imperfect active verb. That is, it is an action that is continuing – as though the text read “kept on adding.” The words “should be saved” are derived from a single Greek word, swlzome,nouj (sozo-amen-ous). From the standpoint of linguistics, or the structure of language, this is a present perfect participle. This means it is referring to an action that was complete at the time of writing – something that had already happened.

Putting the concepts of “adding” and “should be saved” together, the text means that God kept on adding to the church those who had been saved . That is, salvation was required for them to be added to the church, or made a part of the assembly. Simply stated one might say, “upon being saved, God added them to the church.”

Divine Determination

He is the One who is the “Author and Finisher of our faith.” He is also the One to whom all judgment has been committed. He, therefore has the last word on who is and who is not a part of His church. He is the One who is building it, adding to it daily all are appropriately described as “saved.”

Here is where ones theology can dictate the meaning. For example, if a person accepts the view that Divine determination is the driving force, the text will be perceived as saying God added to the church every day those who were “ destined to be saved.” NJB There are texts that suggest this is the case. “And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed ” (Acts 13:48). “No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day” (John 6:44). “And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd” (John 10:16).

The Process of Being Saved

This meaning emphasizes that being added to the church is part of the process of salvation itself: “were being saved.” NKJB Salvation itself is often viewed as a process, commencing with the new birth, and culminating when the Lord returns . “For the message of the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God” NKJV (1 Cor 1:18). “For we are to God the fragrance of Christ among those who are being saved and among those who are perishing” NKJV (2 Cor 2:15). “Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling” (Phil 2:12). “Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time” (1 Pet 1:5).

The Result of Salvation

This perspective would view salvation as something completed, the result of which was being added to the church: “who had salvation.” BBE There are also texts that view salvation from this perspective. “Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved) ”(Eph 2:5). “Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost” (Titus 3:5).

Human Involvement

This view traces the cause of being added to church to what men have done: “were finding salvation.” PHILLIPS The Scriptures also view salvation as the result of what men do. “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Rom 10:13). “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved ; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:16). “And being made perfect, He became the Author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey Him ” (Heb 5:9).

Conclusion

As you can see, there is a sense in which each one of these meanings is true. I have taken the time to briefly delineate them to confirm why men translated the text differently. They were looking at it from differing angles.

As for the text itself, and what it is intended to convey, it seems to me that the paramount consideration is the Lord Himself – referring to the Lord Jesus Christ. Peter said He had been made “both lord and Christ,” and thus He is involved in the affairs of the Kingdom. It is He who addressed the matter of sin, taking it away. He is the One who sent out the messengers to deliver the good news. He is the One who is the “Author and Finisher of our faith.” He is also the One to whom all judgment has been committed (John 5:22). He, therefore has the last word on who is and who is not a part of His church. He is the One who is building it (Matt 16:18), adding to it daily all are appropriately described as “saved. ” It is not possible to be “saved” without being “added to the church,” and no one is a part of the church who is not, by Divine definition, “saved. ” There is no point or facet of salvation in which it becomes institutional. No part of it is confined within a routine or a procedure. Nothing about salvation is disassociated from the One who has wrought it.

CONCLUSION

Thus we conclude our considerations of the second chapter of Acts. It is to the church what the six days of creation are to the universe. For the body of Christ, it is the beginning, paralleling Israel coming out of Egypt, crossing the Red Sea, and commencing the journey to Canaan. We have been exposed to the ruling Christ, the working Spirit, and the consequent preaching and response of men. Christ’s influence upon earth was confirmed when He, being exalted to the right hand of God, poured out the Holy Spirit upon men (verse 33). The convicting power of the Holy Spirit working through the Gospel has been seen (verse 37). We have been exposed to how men respond when they are convicted – pricked in their hearts – and how aggressive they are to appropriate salvation (verses 38 and 41). It has been made clear that the matter of salvation involves being separated from the world as well as having one’s sins forgiven (verse 40). The fact that the Word of God is gladly received when it is believed has been confirmed (verse 41). The impact of the truth upon human hearts is seen when men continued steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine, fellowship, breaking of bread, and prayers (verse 42). The unity of believers and their lack of covetousness was confirmed (verse 43-45). The unanimity that results from the common faith and common salvation was clearly corroborated (verse 46). The effect of real salvation was evidenced by continual praise (verse 47).

These are all realities, not mere creedal statements or theological positions. Jesus did not come to institute an organization or a program, but that men might have “life, and have it more abundantly” (John 10:10). This did not mean the accumulation of worldly goods, for these brethren sold their goods, distributing to their brethren as they had need. Individuality was not the main thing, but joint-participation. This has all been lived out in this chapter.

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #13

“ 3:11 Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour. 2 And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple; 3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms. 4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. 5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them. 6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. 7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. 8 And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God. 9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God: 10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him. 11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.” (Acts 3:1-11)

THE HEALING OF THE LAME MAN

INTRODUCTION

In the process of honoring and serving God, Peter and John confront a man who has been lame from birth. The man, who is a beggar, does not know these two apostles, or that they are representatives of Christ. He obviously concludes that if they are going to the Temple at the hour of prayer, they are kindly disposed to the needy, as are others who will confront him here. The discernment required for Divine assistance will be on the part of Peter and John. Their perception of the circumstance, their gift, and their faith will determine the outcome of this

CONTENTS

- PETER AND JOHN GO INTO THE TEMPLE (3:1)

- A CERTAIN LAME MAN SEES PETER AND JOHN (3:2-3)
- “LOOK ON US!” (3:4-5)
- WHAT I HAVE, I GIVE (3:6)
- SOMETHING HAPPENS IMMEDIATELY (3:7)
- LEAPING UP, ENTERING, WALKING, AND LEAPING (3:8)
- ALL THE PEOPLE RECOGNIZED HIM (3:9-10)
- THE PEOPLE RUN TOGETHER, GREATLY WONDERING (3:11)
- CONCLUSION

confrontation. The consequence of the incident confirms that it was driven by Divine purpose, not mere human need, and was primarily for the glory of God.

In His first message, Jesus confirmed that the heavenly Kingdom is not driven by human need, and that there is no satisfying earthly rationale for His working. You will recall that He said there were “many widows in Israel,” but God sent the prophet to a Gentile widow, who herself was sustained with Elijah during a grievous famine. He also said that “many lepers were in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian” – a Gentile (Luke 4:24-27). These Israelite widows and lepers were among God’s own chosen people, yet, in these two cases, the Lord chose to bestow His favor upon Gentiles. His Kingdom is not driven by human need – and there are other factors to consider.

THE REASON FOR DIVINE ACTIVITY

The reason for Divine activity is sometimes associated with the will and word of holy men (as Moses – Ex 32:31-34), but it is not driven, or governed by that means. There is a high and holy purpose that ultimately determines what God does. Further, it is the reconciling work of Christ that causes that work to be done in a righteous manner. It is the awareness of this circumstance that moved men to say, “It is the Lord: let Him do what seemeth Him good” (1 Sam 3:18), “The will of the Lord be done” (Acts 21:14), and “let Him do to me as seemeth good to Him” (1 Sam 15:26).

It represents a significant leap forward when the individual is brought to a productive awareness of the fact that the kingdom is the Lord’s, and He is the Governor among the nations” – including our own nation (Psa 22:28). As long as men are taught that they plot their own earthly future by what they say and do, they will not give themselves wholly to the Lord. They will view their own purposes and condition as primary, and will consider God as the means of implementing their own desires. This is not a pleasing posture for men to hold before God, and yet it is being heavily promoted throughout the land.

It is necessary to say these things because our text deals with the healing of a single man in the whole of Jerusalem. We know this was not the only sick person around Jerusalem, for later we read, “There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one” (Acts 5:16). The reason for this healing, therefore, cannot be merely that the man was infirm. This matter was driven by the will of God, and His glory was the primary objective of it all. This will become more clear as we witness the significance of this man’s man healing from our text through the twenty-second verse of the fourth chapter.

DUMBED DOWN LANGUAGE

The reason for this healing, therefore, cannot be merely that the man was infirm. This matter was driven by the will of God, and His glory was the primary objective of it all.

I am compelled to say a word about the current dumbing down of language, so that words no longer appear to have the significance given to them by the Holy Spirit. There are a number of special words throughout the book of Acts that speak of heightened awareness and impressions. We will confront some of them in this text. It is important that we perceive them as they are intended to be understood. A sampling of the kind of words to which I refer follows.

- “Confounded” (2:6). Other translations include confused, NKJV and bewildered. NASB
- “Amazed” (2:7a,12). Other translations include wondered, GENEVA stunned, GWN and baffled. NET
- “Marveled” (Acts 2:7b). Other translations include astonished, NRSV and wondered. RSV
- “Rejoice” (2:26a). Other translations include glad, NASB and cheered. YLT
- “Glad” (2:26b). Other translations include exulted, NASB rejoices, NIV and full of joy. BBE
- “Full of joy” (2:28). Other translations include full of gladness, NASB and complete joy. GWN
- “Pricked in their heart” (2:37). Other translations include cut to the heart, NKJV pierced to the heart, NASB hearts were troubled, BBE deeply upset, GWN acutely distressed. NET
- “Gladly received” (2:41). Other translations include received, NASB accepted, NIV welcomed, NRSV gave hearing, BBE and readily received. MRD
- “Fear” (2:43). Other translations include a sense of awe, NASB filled with awe, NIV awe, NRSV feeling of fear. GWN
- “Gladness” (2:46a). Other translations include joy, BBE joyful, GWN and rejoicing. MRD
- “Singleness” (2:46b). Other translations include simplicity, NKJV one mind, NASB sincere, NIV and generous. NRSV
- “Praising” (3:9). Other translations include laud. TNT
- “Wonder” (3:10a). Other translations include awe, CSB amazed, GENEVA amazed, GWN and amazement. NAB
- “Amazement” (3:10b). Other translations include surprise, BBE astonishment, CSB sore astonished, GENEVA stunned, GWN admiration, MRD and perplexed. NJB
- “Greatly wondering” (3:11). Other translations include greatly amazed, NKJV full of amazement, NASB astonished, NIV utterly astonished, NRSV and astounded. RSV
- “Marvel” (3:12). Other translations include surprise you, NIV wonder, NRSV greatly surprised, BBE astonished, DARBY and amazed. GWN

All of these words presume the centrality of God’s work, and a focus upon what He is doing. They describe emotions and responses that are focused and single. However, if the language of a people has been reduced to expressions that are limited to known experiences, and require little genuine contemplation, the reflection of that language in Scripture will rob it of its power. Let me be more specific, when words like “awe,” “amazed,” “exciting,” and “awesome” are considered within the context of sports, entertainment, and ordinary worldly experiences, what possible significance will be seen in them when they occur in Scripture? When men are “amazed” at athletic ability, or eat “awesome” hamburgers, or “marvel” at a roller-coaster ride, what will they possibly think when they read in Scripture of people “marveling,” or being “amazed?”

Using Proper words

What is even worse, when men take it upon themselves to put the Scriptures into the dumbed-down language of an alienated society, they rob the people, and may actually misrepresent the Lord. There are certain “words” that are pivotal in Scripture. These are words into which Divine concepts are poured. Scripture refers to them as words “which the Holy Spirit teaches” NKJV (1 Cor 2:13). These are not thoughts that the Spirit teaches, but “words!” They are not ideas, but “words!” The Greek expression for “words” is λογοι (log-oi). It refers to spoken or written expression that embodies a conception of an idea. Its lexical meaning is “a word which, uttered by the living voice, embodies a conception of an idea . . . a distinct word, intelligible speech” THAYER and “of speaking, but always with rational content.” FRIBERG When one perceives the criticality of knowing the mind of the Lord, “words” are perceived as absolutely important. Ponder the things with which “words” are associated: prophecy, commandments, reports, a message, a declaration, a statement, and the Gospel of Christ – to name a few.

The Corinthian text cited above refers to words “which the Holy Spirit teaches.” Paul affirms these were the words he employed to communicate “the things that are freely given to us of God” (1 Cor 2:12). He maintained that by employing words driven by the wisdom of men, the preaching of the cross was rendered ineffective (1 Cor 1:17). He contrasted “enticing words of man’s wisdom” with the “demonstration of the Spirit and of power” (1 Cor 2:4). There is such a thing as “wholesome words” – words that are not sickly with worldly wisdom, or that tend to enticement (1 Tim 6:3). Further, when a person speaks for God, his speaking is to have “the form” [or pattern NKJV] “of sound words” – that is, spiritually healthy words that convey the mind of the Lord.

When men, seeking to reduce Scripture to the language of the street, impose their own wisdom upon the Word of God, they are actually chiseling away its power and effectiveness. Paul clearly states this when he writes, “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect ” (1 Cor 1:17). Again he writes, “And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power: that your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God ” (1 Cor 2:4-5).

This reduction of the power of Scriptural words is done in at least two ways.

- The first is by substituting what is conceived to be parallel words. Often then is done because there is not an equivalent word in the language of the people, so a parallel word is sought. The action taken by early citizens of our country is far better. They shaped the language of the people around Scripture itself – as the Hebrews did with their language, the “Hebrew tongue” (John 5:2; Acts 21:40; 22:2; 26:14).
- The second is to allow the society to change the meaning of the word, so that it no longer carries the idea that Scripture intends. Thus words like “believe,” “faith,” “repentance,” “justify,” etc, become watered down in the minds of the people. This leads to attaching little or no significance to the text of Scripture in which they are found. Pertaining to our text, this would include words like “praising,” “wonder,” and “amazement.”

Our text will use words to describe the effect of the works of God upon men. It is essential that we view those words as they have been intended to be viewed. The witness of the working of God cannot possibly work ordinary effects upon men, for the works themselves are not ordinary. If we do not see this text properly, perceiving human responses as unique and extraordinary, the text will have no power in us, but will appear to be nothing more than an historical account. In our thinking, it will be reduced to nothing more than a record of events wholly unrelated to us.

PETER AND JOHN GO INTO THE TEMPLE

“ 3:1 Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.”

First, there were holy associations with the Temple. Jesus had referred to it as “My Father’s house,” “My house,” and “house of prayer.” Particularly during the last phase of His ministry, He Himself had taught there every day.

Unlike Western civilization, the life of God’s people was built around their religion – or the expression of their commitment to God. This was true in Judaism as well. Key events were identified by their relationship to God, rather than mere self-indulgence. When those with faith considered life, and what was essential to it, they thought altogether differently than the average American Christian. Activities having to do directly with the Lord were not put on the back burner of life. This is particularly noteworthy when we consider the followers of Jesus, for procedural concerns and religious habits receive very little attention in the words of Jesus or apostolic doctrine. Yet, salvation so impacted their lives that their commitment to the Lord was very obvious in their conduct.

PETER AND JOHN WENT UP TOGETHER INTO THE TEMPLE

“Now Peter and John went up together into the temple . . .” Other versions read, “were going up to the temple,” NASB “were going up together to the temple complex,” CSB “were going to the temple courtyard,” GWN “went to the temple,” NLT “were going at the same time to the temple,” YLT and “were on their way up to the temple.” WILLIAMS

From the very outset, Peter and John were found together (Acts 3:1,3,11; 4:13,19; 8:14,25). Even prior to their calling to the apostleship, they were in business together (Luke 5:10). They were also part of the inner circle of disciples, which also included James (Matt 17:1; Mk 5:37; Mk 14:33). When Jesus was arrested and taken to the palace of Caiaphas, these were the only two disciples who followed Him (John 18:15). After Jesus was buried, upon hearing His body was not in the tomb, it was Peter and John that ran to the tomb (John 20:3-4). Following His resurrection, when Jesus caused the disciples to catch a great host of fish, John told Peter it was the Lord (John 21:7).

From this we learn that those who walk together with Jesus are more prone to prefer one another’s company. This is because Jesus draws those who walk with Him together, so that they come to prefer one another. This is actually the secret of unity, which appears so difficult for the Christian world. The reason professed believers are not close to one another is because closeness to Christ Himself is not common among them. That is why oneness is referred to as “the unity of the faith” (Eph 4:13) and “the unity of the Spirit” (Eph 4:3) – both of which are realized in fellowship with Jesus Christ.

“Into the Temple ”

Admittedly, it is difficult for some to understand why these men went into the Temple. There is no record of Gentile believers returning to the temples of their former gods. Why did the early disciples go daily to the Temple (Lk 24:53; 2:46; 5:20,25,42)?

First, there were holy associations with the Temple. Jesus had referred to it as “My Father’s house” (John 2:16), “My house,” and “house of prayer” (Matt 21:13). Particularly during the last phase of His ministry, He Himself had taught there every day (Lk 21:37). Think of the names by which the Temple was called.

- “Temple of the Lord” (2 Kgs 11:10).
- “Holy Temple” (Psa 79:1).

- “Holy House” (1 Chron 29:3).
- “House of God” (2 Chron 23:9).
- “House of the Lord” (2 Chron 23:5).
- “House of the God of Jacob” (Isa 2:3).
- “House of My Glory” (Isa 60:7).
- “House of Sacrifice” (2 Chron 7:12).
- “House of Their Sanctuary” (2 Chron 36:17).
- “Holy and Beautiful House” (Isa 64:11).
- “Palace” (1 Chron 29:1).
- “Sanctuary” (2 Chron 20:8).

The point here is that the Temple was associated with God Himself, and, through Christ, the people had been reconciled to God. While it is true that the Temple would no longer be the center of devotion to God, the fact that His name and glory were associated with it made it a most suitable place for meeting. The religion, or outward expression, of the faith of those early saints was not driven by rules, but by faith – and faith connected with what the Temple stood for.

One other consideration is that devout people came to the Temple. Now, within the framework of a conscience toward God, these people would hear the good news of the Gospel. The outcome of this hearing will justify the propriety of the apostles and early believers going to the Temple. As Jesus would say, “But wisdom is justified of all her children” (Luke 7:35). That is, those who walk in godly wisdom confirm its worth.

AT THE HOUR OF PRAYER

“ . . . at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.” Other versions read, “at the ninth hour, the hour of prayer,” NIV “at the hour of prayer, at three o’clock in the afternoon,” NRSV “at the ninth hour of prayer,” DOUAY “for the three o’clock prayer,” GWN “at the time of prayer, being the ninth hour,” MRD “for the prayers at the ninth hour,” NJB and “to take part in the three o’clock daily prayer meeting.” LIVING

There were apparently three hours of prayer in Jewish life. David refers to such a practice: “Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice” (Psa 55:17). We understand the evening prayer to have taken place at the ninth hour (3 o’clock PM), the prayer at noon at the sixth hour (12:00 PM), and the morning prayer at the third hour (9 o’clock). Even when he was a captive in Babylon, Daniel prayed three times a day: “Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees three times a day , and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime” (Dan 6:10,13). Somewhere between ten to fifteen years after Pentecost, Peter is said to have prayed “about the sixth hour” (Acts 10:9). This was reckoning the day as twelve hours in length (John 11:9), and no part of it was wholly without prayer and supplication to God. That is the manner of life that was cultured in the people God called unto Himself. Sensitive souls were made acutely aware of their dependence upon the Lord. Thus men were taught to associate the beginning of the day with God – when the sun was in the process of rising to its appointed rule over the day. The time of the day when the sun had risen to its meridian, or apex, was also associated with the Lord. The time when the day began to conclude was equally a time during which the people exercised a consciousness toward the Lord.

However, the Law itself contained no commandment to pray. There is no directive requiring the people to “call upon the name of the Lord.” In the Law, there is not even a commandment for the people to “seek” the Lord!

Each of these periods constituted an hour that was devoted to prayer. Thus, every day, devout Jews consecrated three hours to prayer – 25% of the time of light, and 12-½% of the entire day of twenty-four hours. All of this was done under the shadowy administration of the Law – a time that lacked the clarity that is now realized in Christ Jesus. During the Law, the people were taught to begin and end the day with God in mind. Therefore every day there was a morning and an evening sacrifice (Ex 29:38; Num 28:3-4; 2 Chron 31:3).

A legalist might imagine that God had laid down a law that men ought to pray three times a day. However, no such law can be found. In fact, the Law itself contained not so much as one word about prayer. Also, the words “prayer” and “supplication” do not occur a single time in Exodus through Deuteronomy of the King James Version, New King James Version, Revised Standard, or New Revised Standard Bibles. The word “prayer” occurs once in the NIV (Ex 9:29 – “I will spread out my hands in prayer to God” (other versions “in prayer,” reading “spread out my hands”)). The word “entreat,” in its varied forms, and when referring to pleading with God, occurs eight times in Exodus through Deuteronomy – all of them pertain to Pharaoh, his request that Moses plead with God for him, and the actual prayers Moses offered KJV (Ex 8:8,9,28,29,30; 9:28; 10:17,18). The NKJV has six references to that occasion, and also employs the word “entreat” in its varied forms (Ex 8:8,29,30; 9:28; 10:17,18). The NASB has three references to this word (Ex 8:8,9; 32:11). The NIV contains no references to it. The NRSV has one usage (Deut 3:23) – other versions use the word “besought,” KJV and “pleaded.” NKJV

However, the Law itself contained no commandment to pray. There is no directive requiring the people to “call upon the name of the Lord.” In the Law, there is not even a commandment for the people to “seek” the Lord! There is a promise that the people will find the Lord when they seek for Him with their “whole heart,” but there is no commandment that requires that they do so.

This, of course, dashes to the ground the erroneous teaching that one can only offer to God what he has commanded. Those who say it is not lawful to use musical instruments in praise to God affirm this mythical law of prohibition, referring to it as “the law of silence,” or “the law of exclusion.” How will such people explain Peter and John going up to the Temple at the “hour of prayer?”

Peter and John were not compelled by Law to go into the Temple at the hour of prayer. Their faith in the Lord, love for Him, and conscious dependence upon Him drew them into this activity. Their lives centered in the God identified with the Temple. They were also desirous to proclaim the good news of Christ’s enthronement, as will be confirmed in the events that followed.

The newness of life, realized in the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon them, had heightened their awareness of God Himself, His exalted Son, and their access to heaven. That is not what new life ought to do, but what it DOES do!

A CERTAIN LAME MAN SEES PETER AND JOHN

“ 2 And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple 3 Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.”

This is the record of one of the Great epochs of Scripture. It drew the attention of both men and angels. The effects of this encounter are recorded in the next one hundred and five verses (3:1-6:42). I do want to draw your attention to the fact that this all took place while Peter and John were serving God – not indirectly, but directly. I am persuaded that many people are used very little, or perhaps not at all, by God because they are never close enough to Him. Choosing to live on the periphery of spiritual life, they become dull of hearing, their hearts become calloused, and they fail to see opportunities around them in which God can receive glory. It is a tragic circumstance, indeed.

A CERTAIN LAME MAN

“And a certain man . . .” Other versions read, “a man.” NIV

The presence of this man is, indeed, a most interesting phenomenon. It is not coincidence that this man is positioned by the Temple gate precisely when Peter and John are entering into the same gate. This is a classic example of the providence of the Lord – how He works to produce circumstances that will result in His glory. It is written that “Man’s goings are of the Lord” (Prov 20:24). That is, God is at work among the sons of men for His own glory. As for Peter and John, their steps were being “ordered by the Lord” (Psa 37:23). The lame man was being positioned by God for His own glory, for “the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps” (Jer 10:23).

It is written that God is “working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12). Here is an example of some of the ways in which this is being done. Some men bring a lame man to the Temple, arriving at precisely the same time and place as Peter and John – the ninth hour at the Gate Beautiful. This is made all the more remarkable when we consider that historians say Herod’s Temple had eight gates, and possibly ten. Statistically, how likely is it that Peter and John would arrive and enter at this gate precisely when the lame man had been placed there?

All of this is included in God “working salvation in the midst of the earth.” It is an example of what is involved in the drawing power of God (John 6:44). We also see in this something of how God works “all things” together for good to them who love Him (Rom 8:28). The Lord can direct the steps of men, so that Peter and John arrive at the appointed place at the right time (Prov 21:29). This incident provides a small glimpse of the involvements of all things being “of Him, and through Him, and to Him” (Rom 11:36).

The Example of Jesus

The Kingdom of God is not run by happenstance, nor is it governed by circumstance. That is, it is not that the people of God go here and there, confronting random and disorderly circumstances, and responding as they deem most appropriate. It is true that on the surface, it might appear as though that is the way it is. However, we have the manner of the Kingdom lived out in the Person of Christ when He walked among men. He provided an explanation of the effective works He wrought. “I must work the works of Him that sent Me, while it is day:” (John 9:4). “. . . the Father that dwelleth in Me, He doeth the works” (John 14:10). “The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do: for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise” (John 5:19).

While the effectiveness of Christ’s work among men was owing to His power, it was even more because He was in the will of His Father. Jesus never operated independently of the Father, or was moved by a mere human assessment of circumstances. For example, there were many blind people in Israel, yet Jesus spoke of a specific blind man as being blind “that the works of God should be made manifest in him” (John 9:3). He gave the same assessment of the seemingly terminal sickness of Lazarus, whom He would raise from the dead: “This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby” (John 11:4).

Men may view this as fate, saying that there really is no point to doing good, for everything will automatically work out for the glory of God. But this is faulty reasoning, and not befitting of any person who has faith. This is not the way Jesus thought. Even as a young boy, He saw the necessity of personal and willing involvement in the will of His Father: “I must be about My Father’s business” (Lk 2:49). Once, when He was alone with His disciples, he told them, “I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent” (Luke 4:43). Another time He sent word to Herod, saying, “Go ye, and tell that fox, Behold, I cast out devils, and I do cures to day and to morrow, and the third day I shall be perfected” (Luke 13:32).

Jesus did not live casually, walking about and waiting for the Father to move Him, jarring Him out of the normalities of life. It is true that some of His professed followers live in such a manner. However, their ways are a distortion of spiritual life, and not life itself. Jesus moved about in a state of spiritual alertness and commitment. That is why he could say, “I do always those things that please Him.” In fact, He said that is why the Father had not left Him alone (John 8:29).

Assessing Effective Works

When a Jesus is preached that earnestly desires to give people what they want, “another Jesus” is being declared. Jesus has not been exalted to give people what they want, but to grant “the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him”

Proper assessments can only be formed in the high spiritual altitude of the “heavenly places.” When the real work of God is done through men, it is not because they have prevailed upon God to work in their behalf. Men might reason it was because the individual had a strong and consistent faith, and therefore the Lord yielded to his desires. Is that a proper assessment of effective work? I understand there is a sense in which this is true, for “all things are possible to him that believeth” (Mk 9:23). However, our understanding of that statement must not be childish, as though the will of God ever was put into action because of the will of man.

Currently (2006), it is being taught in certain Christian circles that God cannot work on earth until He has a request from men – that He is only moved when men of faith move Him to do so. If this is the case, how do we account for the cessation of the building of the tower of Babel and the scattering of the people (Gen 11:11:7-8)? And what of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah? Who moved the Lord to do that (Gen 18:21)? What man on earth constrained the Lord to do this? Also, precisely who was it that moved the Lord to provide Elijah bread and flesh by means of ravens (1 Kgs 17:4-5)? What of the resurrection of Christ? Who requested that (Acts 13:30).

There is no need to speculate on this matter. The manner of the Kingdom was lived out in the Person of Jesus Christ. Jesus never did say the Father did His [Jesus’] will, but that He did the Father’s will. With great poignancy He declared, “I do always those things that please Him” (John 8:29) – NOT “He always does what pleases me!” Jesus said His “meat” was to “do the will of Him that sent Me” (John 4:34). He clearly declared, “I seek not Mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me” (John 5:30). Again He affirmed, “For I came down from heaven, not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me” (John 6:38).

Is it really possible to harmonize such an approach to living with statements like, “What is your dream? What do you want God to do for you?” I understand that Jesus twice asked people what they wanted Him to do. One request was turned down because, Jesus said, “Ye know not what ye ask” (Matt 10:36-38). The other request was granted because of the person’s faith (Matt 10:51-52). What was the difference between these two requests? One was in the will of God, and one was not. One was prompted by faith, and one was not.

When a Jesus is preached that earnestly desires to give people what they want, “another Jesus” is being declared. Jesus has not been exalted to give people what they want, but to grant “the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him” (1 Cor 2:9). It is true that the real people of God desire these things, but that is not the basic reason for them receiving them.

So, What Am I Saying?

All of this may appear to have little to do with our text. What I am saying is that what follows was the result of Peter and John being in the heart of the “good and acceptable, and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:2). They had yielded their bodies as a “living sacrifice to God,” abandoning their will in favor of embracing the will of the Lord. Thus they were able to walk in the works for which they were created in Christ Jesus. As it is written, “For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10).

One Other Factor

In further consideration of this event, keep in mind that this is after the devil has been cast into the earth, coming down “with great wrath, for he knoweth he hath but a short time.” Men are warned of the danger that this creates for them: “Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! For the devil is come down unto you!” (Rev 12:12). However, his presence and influence present no difficulty to the King of kings and Lord of lords. Even though Satan was, so to speak, on a rampage, seeking to destroy the people of God, the circumstance of our text will be carried out just as though the devil did not even exist – even though Satan’s presence and intentions were very real.

LAME FROM HIS MOTHER’S WOMB

“ . . . lame from his mother's womb . . . ” Other versions read, “ crippled from birth,” NIV “lame from birth ,” NRSV “from birth had no power in his legs ,” BBE “ cripple from his mother’s womb,” GENEVA and “who had been crippled all his life . He couldn’t walk.” IE

Here is a hopeless case. The man had never been able to walk – from the day he was born, his legs were defective. There was, then, nothing at all to start with – no natural aptitude that had ceased, no latent ability that merely needed to be strengthened.

In this we have a most vivid picture of salvation. Although it is not fashionable in many circles to speak of man’s fallen state, the Word of the Lord addresses the matter with unquestionable clarity. Men have chosen to speak of natural human goodness, the age of accountability, free will, and the volitional capacity of men. However, these subjects are never brought up in Scripture – there is no doctrinal presentation of them. Of course, that is why men have had to develop systematic theologies concerning them. A few texts that address this matter will suffice to confirm this man – lame from his mother’s womb – is an accurate depiction of fallen humanity.

- “And the LORD smelled a sweet savor; and the LORD said in his heart, I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth ; neither will I again smite any more every thing living, as I have done” (Gen 8:21).
- “The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God. They are all gone aside, they are all together become filthy: there is none that doeth good, no, not one ” (Psa 14:2-3).
- “Behold, I was shapen in iniquity , and in sin did my mother conceive me” (Psa 51:5).
- “And enter not into judgment with thy servant: for in Thy sight shall no man living be justified ” (Psa 143:2).
- “ Who can say , I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?” (Prov 20:9).
- “For there is not a just man upon earth , that doeth good, and sinneth not” (Eccl 7:20).

that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way , they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one ” (Rom 3:10-12).

- “And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins ” (Eph 2:1).

- “That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world ” (Eph 2:12).

This condition is why we have to be delivered (Gal 1:4; Col 1:13; 1 Thess 1:10; Heb 2:15), raised (Eph 2:6), begotten (1 Pet 1:3; 1 John 5:1,18), born again (John 3:7; 1 Pet 1:23), saved (2 Tim 1:9; Tit 3:5), regenerated (Tit 3:5), and quickened (Eph 2:1,5; Col 2:13). If there were any vestiges of goodness within men, none of these Divine activities would be required. In such a case, all that would be needed is some help, assistance, and additional strength. Of course, it can be argued that if any assistance in any form is absolutely required, then without that assistance recovery is impossible. At any rate, this man – lame from birth – is a precise portrayal of the natural condition of all men – without exception.

CARRIED AND LAID DAILY AT THE GATE

“ . . . was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful . . . ” Other versions read, “was being carried along, whom they used to set down every day at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful,” NASB “was being carried to the temple gate called Beautiful ,” NIV “was being carried in. People would lay him daily at the gate of the temple called the Beautiful Gate,” NRSV “was taken there every day, and put down at the door of the Temple which is named Beautiful,” BBE and “ was being carried along , who was laid each day at that gate of the temple [which is] called Beautiful.” AMPLIFIED

We are not certain which of the eight gates (Josephus says there were ten) leading into the temple complex was called “Beautiful.” Several believe it was the gated commonly called Nicanor, which led from the court of the Gentiles to the court of the women. Others feel it was the gate called Susan, which was the gate at the eastern entrance of the Temple. Its proximity to Solomon’s Court, which is later mentioned, makes this very probable. It is reported that this gate was massive, and of a most splendid appearance, being made of Corinthian brass. Josephus, Jewish Wars, bk 5, chap 5, sec 3 We assume the man was placed there because it was a heavily traveled area.

We will learn that he had been lame all of his life, and was over forty years old (Acts 4:22). How long he had been brought to the gate we do know. However, when we consider that the Lord Jesus had been in the Temple less than two months earlier, going there every day (Matt 26:55; Lk 22:53), it is highly likely that this man had seen Jesus. However, in all of His visits to the Temple, Jesus had not healed this man. Further, when Jesus sent out the twelve, and later the seventy, telling them to heal the sick, neither had they healed him. It is apparent that the Divine arrangement was for this man to be healed by Peter on this day. This will be confirmed by the remarkable events that follow.

TO ASK ALMS

“ . . . to ask alms of them that entered into the temple . . . ” Other versions read, “in order to beg alms of those who were entering the temple,” NASB “to beg from those entering into the temple courts,” NIV “ requesting money from those who went into the Temple,” BBE “There he would beg for handouts from people going into the courtyard,” GWN “so that he could beg from the people going in,” NLT “to ask a kindness from those entering into the temple,” YLT and “so that he might beg for charitable gifts from those who entered the temple.” AMPLIFIED

“GATE BEAUTIFUL: the name of one of the gates of the Temple (Acts 3:2). It was the entrance to the Court of the Women, immediately opposite the Gate of Shushan, the eastern portal through the outer wall into Solomon's Porch (see Strong's Harmony and E position of the Gospels, App. II, p. 33, and Map.) It is evidently the same described by Josephus as immensely massive, and covered with plates of Corinthian bronze (Ant. 15, 11, 5; War, 5:5, 3; 6:5, 3). (See Jour. Sac. Lit. Oct. 1867.)" McCLINTOK & STRONG'S

"The gate itself was of unusual size and splendor. It received the name "Nicanor" from its being the work, or having been constructed at the expense, of an Alexandrian Jew of this name. Lately an ossuary was discovered on Mt. Olivet bearing the Greek inscription: "The bones of Nicanor the Alexandrian, who made the doors." Its other name, "Corinthian," refers to the costly material of which it was constructed--Corinthian bronze. Josephus gives many interesting particulars about this gate, which, he tells us, greatly excelled in workmanship and value all the others (BJ, V, v, 3). These were plated with gold and silver, but this still more richly and thickly. It was larger than the other gates; was 50 cubits in height (the others 40); its weight was so great that it took 20 men to move it (BJ, VI, vi, 3). Its massiveness and magnificence, therefore, well earned for it the name "Beautiful." W. Shaw Caldecott

"Alms" are compassionate gifts, or gifts of charity. To this very day, the word "charity" is often equated with helping the needy. "Alms" are donations given out a sense of pity. Jesus said to give "alms" without trying to gain attention (Matt 6:1-4). He also said, "give alms of such things as ye have" (Lk 11:41; 12:33). Cornelius was a Gentile who was noted in heaven for giving "much alms to the people" (Acts 10:2,31). Paul was noted for bringing "alms" to his needy brethren (Acts 24:17). Dorcas was known for her "almsdeeds" (Acts 9:36). This man, therefore, unable to help himself, was relying on the kindness of people as taught by the law, and confirmed by Jesus.

If, as some modern day teachers allege, poverty is a "curse of the law," then this man was under a Divine curse. Of course, the Scripture does not say poverty is the curse of the Law. It rather defines that curse in this manner: "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse: for it is written, Cursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them" (Gal 3:10). The "curse" is not what the people were in this world, but what they were before God. That is, they were not righteous in his eyes. If poverty is a curse of the Law, then Asaph was right in being envious of the wicked who were prospering, for such would not have been under the curse (Psa 73:3). Of course, such thinking does nothing more than reveal a covetous heart and a confused mind.

There are several beggars mentioned in Scripture: Bartimaeus (Mk 10:46), Lazarus (Lk 16:20), the man in our text (Acts 3:2), and a blind man who was born blind (John 9:8). None of them were rebuked for being beggars, even though their state certainly was not an enviable one. Under the Law, men were to be merciful to the poor, not rebuke them for being poor (Ex 22:-27; 23:11; Lev 19:9,10; 23:22; ; 25:25-28, 35-43; Deut 14:28-29; 15:2-14; 24:12-21; 26:12-13). Jesus said to "give" to such people (Matt 5:42; 19:21; Lk 11:41). The apostles said to "remember the poor" (Gal 2:10). No person of God ever told men to rebuke the poor or consider their poverty to be a sign of them being cursed.

Admittedly, this was a humbling experience – to have to beg for sustenance. It was not a sanctified experience, but one that was required because of his condition.

What About Psalm 37?

An objection may be raised to the legitimacy of begging by citing the thirty-seventh Psalm: "I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread" (Psa 37:25). Does this mean that if a person is reduced to begging, they have been "forsaken" by God? First, the Psalm does not say the "righteous" had not been seen begging bread, but their "seed." Second, Jesus Himself spoke of Lazarus, who was "a certain beggar," and of his happy state after he died (Lk 16:20-22). He was an exception to the general state of the righteous, but he is mentioned to show the worst circumstances in this world are only temporary, and the godly who pass through them will be richly compensated on the other side.

SEEING PETER AND JOHN

“Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms.” Other versions read, “And when he saw Peter and John about to go into the temple, he began asking to receive alms,” NASB “When he saw Peter and John about to enter, he asked them for money,” NIV “He then, seeing Peter and John going into the Temple, made a request to them,” BBE “When he saw Peter and John about to enter the temple complex, he asked for help,” CSB “When the man saw that Peter and John were about to go into the courtyard, he asked them for a handout,” GWN “When this man saw Peter and John on their way into the Temple he begged from them,” NJB “who, having seen Peter and John about to go into the temple, was begging to receive a kindness,” YLT “When he saw Peter and John about to go in, he began to ask them for money,” IE “When he saw Peter and John were about to go into the temple, he asked them to give him something,” ISV and “So when he saw Peter and John about to go into the temple, he asked them to give him a gift.”
AMPLIFIED

Notice that it does not appear Peter and John took special note of him as they were entering. Whether this was the case or not, we do not know. The point to be seen in this text is that this was one of those “ordained” works in which Peter and John were to walk (Eph 2:10). They were busy about their Father’s business, and thus the opportunity will be made evident to them, and they will know what to do.

It is interesting that this crippled beggar associated the people entering into the Temple with kindness and consideration. After all, the Law had instructed the people to make provisions for the poor in the reaping of their own fields (Ex 23:11; Lev 19:9). However, those who were reduced to poverty were also to give what they could to the Lord. They were not exempted from giving, although they were allowed to give a lesser amount (Ex 30:15; Lev 5:7; 14:21).

For this man, it was a glad day when he saw Peter and John! I do not doubt that for the rest of his life he recalled this wonderful day when, at three o’clock in the afternoon, when he was begging as usual, he saw Peter and John. In a few moments, his life would be turned around.

I have often pondered how close the most adequate people are to poverty and begging. A depression, a flood, a war, a famine, thieves and robbers – the possessions of every person can be quickly brought to nothing. A hurricane, a Tsunami wave, a sudden war, and all can be lost. That is not even to mention business collapses, the plundering of retirement funds, a sudden extended illness, etc. Let us give thanks for our daily provisions.

“LOOK ON US!”

“ 4 And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. 5 And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.”

Peter and John were entering the Temple at the hour of prayer, and yet they were not insensitive of their surroundings.

FASTENING HIS EYES UPON HIM

“And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John . . .” Other versions read, “f ixing his eyes on him,” NKJV “fixed his gaze upon him,” NASB “looked straight at him,” NIV “looked intently at him,” NRSV “directed his gaze at him,” RSV “looking steadfastly upon him,” DARBY “earnestly beholding him,” GENEVA “looked directly at him,” NET “ having looked steadfastly toward him with John ,” YLT “looked him straight in the eye ,” ISV “ directed his gaze intently at him,” AMPLIFIED and “Peter looked intently at the man and so did John.” PHILLIPS

Here we will behold another facet of Kingdom work. It is not done inadvertently, or without giving due regard to a matter. The work of the Lord is not accomplished as professing believers stumble through life, living only for themselves. Just as surely as Peter became aware of the circumstances of Pentecost, so he became aware of this poor man, begging at a Temple entrance.

Just as surely as selfishness tends to blindness and obtuseness, so godliness tends to alertness and holy responses.

Additionally, before a work for God is accomplished, attention must be given to it. The godly know that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord and are called according to his purpose (Rom 8:28). They are also aware that the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord (Psa 37:23), and that the Lord directs the upright (Prov 16:9; 21:23). However, this does not mean that everything simply falls together while we stroll inattentively through life, oblivious of what is around us.

Here we will behold another facet of Kingdom work. It is not done inadvertently, or without giving due regard to a matter. The work of the Lord is not accomplished as professing believers stumble through life, living only for themselves. Just as surely as Peter became aware of the circumstances of Pentecost, so he became aware of this poor man, begging at a Temple entrance.

This text does not blend well with the manner of life that is being promoted in our part of the world. Self tends to be at the center of everything – even in religion. It is not unusual to see people walking about with the entirety of their surroundings shut out, devoting themselves wholly to their own pleasure. By way of comparison, Peter is quickly perceives his surroundings, and prepares to minister in the name of the Lord.

LOOK ON US

“ . . . said, Look on us . . . ” Other versions read, “Look at us,” NKJV “ Keep your eyes on us ,” BBE “Look toward us,” YLT “Look here ,” LIVING and “Look straight at us !” PHILLIPS

Perhaps the man was hanging his head, ashamed of his miserable lot in life. He had to be carried wherever he was going, and then commence begging when he got there. It was a humiliating circumstance. Peter, however, insists that the man look to the one from whom his help will come. He was firm in his demand that the man lift up his head and look at them, turning his attention away from his own predicament.

For those who require help or assistance, there does come a time when they have to look away from their circumstance, no longer allowing it to dominate their consideration. Thus God Himself cries out, “ Look unto Me , and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else” (Isa 45:22). Again He calls out to a diminished people, “ Harken to me , ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the LORD: look unto the rock whence ye are hewn , and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged” (Isa 51:1). Micah responded, “Therefore I will look unto the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation: my God will hear me” (Micah 7:7).

As we progress through this book of Acts, it will become apparent that ministering to the needs of people, while essential, is secondary to the “ministry of reconciliation” (2 Cor 5:18). Preparation for eternity is superior to life in this world.

Looking is the posture of expectancy. Believers are looking for that “blessed hope” (Tit 2:13). While they run the race set before them, they are “looking unto Jesus” (Heb 12:2). Even though they are in an evil and decaying world, they are “looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God” (2 Pet 3:12). While keeping themselves in the love of God, they are “looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life” (Jude 1:21).

The very fact that Peter said this confirms that he was walking in the confidence of faith. He knew who he was in Christ, and what he had. It is the peculiar prerogative of faith to grant the confident awareness of these things.

There is another thing to be seen here. While kindness toward the needy is essential, it is secondary, not primary. The second commandment of the law, not the first, is to love one’s neighbor as himself (Matt 22:39). A similar order exists in the New Covenant: “And this is his commandment, That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment” (1 John 3:23). It is only within the greater awareness the Lord Himself that the consideration of men is sanctified. It appears to me that this is becoming more and more obscure in professed Christian work. There is more of a catering to people than to God, and relief work appears to have the dominance over the preaching of the Gospel. As we progress through this book of Acts, it will become apparent that ministering to the needs of people, while essential, is secondary to the “ministry of reconciliation” (2 Cor 5:18). Preparation for eternity is superior to life in this world. It is inevitable that when men major on temporal life, eternal matters become obscure, and are treated only in an accommodating manner.

HE GAVE THEM HEED, EXPECTING TO RECEIVE SOMETHING

“And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.” Other versions read, “So he gave them his attention, expecting to receive something from them,” NKJV “And he fixed his attention on them, expecting to receive something from them,” NRSV “And he gave attention to them, hoping to get something from them,” BBE “But he looked earnestly upon them, hoping that he should receive something of them,” DOUAY “ So the man watched them closely . He expected to receive something from them,” GWN “The lame man looked at them eagerly , expecting a gift,” LIVING “He looked at them, thinking that they might give him some money ,” IE and “So the man watched them closely , expecting to get something from them.” ISV

I do not doubt that the man thought he was going to receive a significant gift from Peter and John. It is equally apparent that he did not know who they were, even though they, together with the other disciples, had been going to the Temple daily (Luke 24:53; Acts 2:46). Considering the number of people involved in that daily Temple gathering (at least 3,120), it is remarkable that it had gone unnoticed by this man. Of course, earthly difficulties and hindrances can blind us to good things that may be going on around us.

Now, having fastened his attention on Peter and John, the man is positioned for the blessing – even though he is not aware of it. He is thinking he will remain lame, but receive a gracious gift of money. For him, that would be quite sufficient. However, he will be proved wrong in both conclusions.

WHAT I HAVE, I GIVE

“ 6 Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.”

Peter’s response will unveil the nature of spiritual life, and where its thrust has been placed. The man speaking is no ordinary disciple. He is not even an ordinary apostle, for Jesus had given him “the keys of the Kingdom of heaven” (Matt 16:19). He was a member of the inner circle of Jesus’ disciples, was the leader by default following Christ's resurrection, and was used to inaugurate the New Covenant on the day of Pentecost. The church is both new and pure. Believers are all together, and are of one mind. They have also been filled with the Holy Spirit. If the condition of a person in Christ ever depicted the ideal situation, surely it will be in this man, Peter.

SILVER AND GOLD HAVE I NONE

“Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none . . .” Other versions read, “Silver and gold I do not have,” NKJV “I do not possess silver and gold,” NASB “I have no silver or gold,” NRSV “I have neither silver nor gold,” CSB “I don't have any money,” GWN “I don't have any silver and gold for you,” NLT “We don't have any money for you,” LIVING and ““If you are expecting silver or gold,’ Peter said to him, ‘I have neither .’” PHILLIPS

Note, Peter admits that he has no money – yet he is not begging ! Remember, the believers had pooled their resources, and gave to every man as he had need. If Peter did have anything, he may have relinquished it, making himself dependent upon the distribution. Also, by saying John and himself had no money, he was acknowledging that if he did, he would have gladly given to the man. It was not his heart that prohibited the giving, but his circumstance.

I also observe that Peter gave no indication of being concerned about his lack of silver and gold. He obviously had not embraced the health and wealth gospel that is making the rounds these days. Nor, indeed, did he go about to defend his status. He knew that “a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth” (Luke 12:15), and that “godliness with contentment is great gain” (1 Tim 6:6).

Although the early disciples had pooled their resources, they were not apparently for beggars, else Peter and John would have alerted the others of the need of this man. This is not intended to suggest that they had no care for the needy. However, it does confirm that those holy and pure brethren were not driven by an awareness of general human need. Rather, as will be confirmed, their attention was upon a higher and lasting order of treasure.

At any rate, it is certain that Peter and John did not have the mindset of the prosperity-mongers of our day. Perhaps, if they were among us today, they would even be ridiculed by some of the televangelists for being so destitute.

Peter did have something – something that was better than silver and gold. In fact, silver and gold could not procure what Peter had. What is even more, Peter was going to give what he had to this poor man.

After everything is said concerning the legitimacy of financial prosperity, and even a Divine desire that this be the condition of the people of God, Peter's word's thunder down to the current century: “SILVER AND GOLD HAVE I NONE.” This is no ordinary man, but is the appointed leading spokesman for Jesus – the man given “the keys of the kingdom of heaven.” Apparently those keys were not intended to unlock financial gain for Peter. He does not speak with any degree of shame – “I don't have any money!” GWN He is not apologetic about the situation – “I have no silver or gold!” WEYMOUTH Try as they can, the marketers of prosperity cannot remove these words from Scripture. Here was the then-leading man of the body of Christ, endued with power from on high and filled with the Spirit, yet his condition contradicts their doctrine!

SUCH AS I HAVE GIVE I THEE

“ . . . but such as I have give I thee . . .” Other versions read, “but what I do have I give you,” NKJV “but I give you what I have,” NRSV “but what I have , that give I thee,” ASV “but what I have, this give I to thee,” DARBY “but I'll give you what I do have,” GWN “but I will give you what I have,” NJB “But I’ll give you something else ,” LIVING “but what I do have, this I am going to give to you ,” MONTGOMERY and “but what I have I will certainly give you .” PHILLIPS

Peter did have something – something that was better than silver and gold. In fact, silver and gold could not procure what Peter had. What is even more, Peter was going to give what he had to this poor man.

There is something else to note here. Peter does not refer to what he can DO, but to what he HAS. He does not say, “I will do what I am able,” but “such as I have I give.” In Christ Jesus, doing flows from possession, and ability is the product of spiritual giftedness. Elsewhere Peter speaks of ministering according to “the ability that God giveth.” This arrangement is in order “that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen” (1 Pet 4:11).

From one point of view, what men are given is their measure of being “made partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14), or being “partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4). It is not that God beefs up human aptitude, but that He gives them something that is not resident in human nature. Flesh cannot produce what God alone gives, for it belongs to the order of the Spirit, with which the flesh has absolutely nothing to do. As Jesus said, “That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit” (John 3:6).

Peter knew what he had been given, and lived his life in view of it. He was keenly aware of an unseen realm that is transcendent to the domain in which silver and gold exist.

IN THE NAME . . . RISE UP AND WALK

“ . . . In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.” Other versions read, “In the name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene – walk !” NASB “in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, stand up and walk ,” NRSV “In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, get up on your feet ,” BBE “Through the power of Jesus Christ from Nazareth, walk!,” GWN “In the name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene, get up and walk !” NLT “in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and be walking ,” YLT and “in the name of Jesus of Nazareth start walking .” WILLIAMS

Before He ascended into heaven, Jesus told his disciples, “Ye shall receive power” (Acts 1:6). Behold how confident Peter is that he had, in fact, received that power. Already “many wonders and signs were done by the apostles” (Acts 2:43), so this was not an experiment. Peter’s words were also something that were said in public, and therefore the honor of Jesus was at stake.

This is not an acceptable manner! Life in Christ is not intended to remain at a juvenile and unlearned level, and those who produce such followers are not doing the work of the Lord. People must be brought to the point where they can stand up and walk.

Peter makes clear that the source of the power is not himself. He is not a superman, so to speak. He declares that this is being done “in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth,” whom he had preached on the day of Pentecost (2:22). That is, Peter was an appointed representative of Jesus, and thus the exalted Christ would work through Him. He was an appointed vehicle through whom the Lord Jesus Himself would work.

This is something no person can do if he does not possess the power. It is not the kind of thing someone would “try” to do. We see here a confirmation of the boldness, or confidence, that faith brings to the one possessing it – “the full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22). Whatever is done in faith – whether it is approaching the throne of grace, or ministering to men – will be done in confidence and assurance. As you already know, this is not something you can develop in the energy of the flesh. A person cannot be trained to have such confidence. It is not developed by means of habit or discipline. It is not the result of positive thinking. It does not ensue from knowing the kind of natural aptitude one possesses, for those in Christ have “no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3).

A Principle to Be Seen

With the fulfillment of this word, the man will be able to provide for himself. He will not become a walking beggar but a walking worker! This is also a principle in spiritual life. Those who are converted become capable of building themselves up on their most holy faith (Jude 1:20). Those in Christ are granted the grace to be personally “Rooted and built up in Him, and established in the faith” (Col 2:7)

A Matter of Concern

One of the weaknesses of many modern mission activities is that the people are not being brought to a point where they can sustain themselves in Christ Jesus. They do not “grow up into Him in all things, which is the Head, even Christ,” even though that is the appointed work of the Lord (Eph 4:15). Therefore these poor souls remain spiritual beggars, depending upon milky morsels that are supposedly brought to them by the missionaries. They remain spiritual toddlers, with little or no understanding of God and the benefits that are realized in Christ Jesus. They are too often woefully ignorant of why they were delivered, and of the exceeding great and precious promises that are their’s in Christ Jesus. They cannot navigate through Scripture, nor are they noted for being “filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). Yet, this is the appointed objective for all who are in Christ Jesus.

This is not an acceptable manner! Life in Christ is not intended to remain at a juvenile and unlearned level, and those who produce such followers are not doing the work of the Lord. People must be brought to the point where they can stand up and walk. While it may sound very holy to say the most important thing is to win souls, the Head of the church said “Go ye therefore and TEACH all nations,” or “make disciples of all nations” NKJV (Matt 28:19). “Disciples” do not stagnate! They are rather brought into the area of Divine tutelage where the knowledge of God is ministered (1 John 5:20), and a change from glory to glory is experienced (2 Cor 3:18). In other words, the real Gospel effectively shouts out to them, “rise up and walk!” Begin moving about in heavenly places! Those who are seated in heavenly places have also been made spiritually mobile, and they are to move about, walking in the light as He is in the light. They are to grow and increase in the faith, walking in the light (1 John 1:7).

SOMETHING HAPPENS IMMEDIATELY

“ 7 And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.”

Here we will see the involvement of Peter in the miraculous working of the Lord. He will speak, and he will act. He is a laborer “together with God” (1 Cor 3:9).

HE TOOK HIM BY THE RIGHT HAND

“And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up . . .” Other versions read, “And seizing him by the right hand, he raised him up,” NASB “Taking him by the right hand, he helped him up,” NIV “And he took him by the right hand and raised him up,” NRSV “And he took him by his right hand, lifting him up,” BBE “And having taken hold of him by the right hand he raised him up,” DARBY “Peter took hold of the man's right hand and began to help him up,” GWN “Then Peter took the lame man by the hand and pulled him to his feet,” LIVING “Then Peter took hold of his right hand and began to help him up,” ISV and “Then he took hold of the man’s right hand with a firm grip and raised him up .” AMPLIFIED

There is not a stereotyped approach to miracles – taking the afflicted by the hand and lifting them up. The Kingdom of God does not operate by lifeless rules and procedures. Once virtue went out of Jesus, healing a woman with an issue of blood, without any visible assistance from Him (Lk 8:46). Another time, a blind man washed clay off his eyes in the absence of Jesus, and his sight was restored (John 9:6-7). Still another time, a man with a withered hand was told to stretch it out, receiving no visible assistance from the Lord (Matt 12:13). When Jesus raised Lazarus from the dead, he came out of the tomb unassisted (John 11:43). On the other hand, when He raised Jairus’ daughter, He took her by the hand (Matt 9:25). He did the same when healing Peter’s mother-in-law of a debilitating fever (Mk 1:31). There are no humanly rational explanations for the difference in these approaches. However, they are a manifestation of God’s “ways,” which are often “past finding out” (Rom 11:33). Those enamored of procedures, laws, and fixed ways of doing things will be confused by Divine workings. Often they are wholly lacking of a perceivable pattern – at least in man’s estimation.

Here, as led by the Holy Spirit, Peter assists the man in getting to his feet. This confirms that it was not the man’s faith that wrought this work, but that of Peter. That is why Peter said, “Such as I have.”

This is not always the way such works are done. In Lystra Paul raised up a man who was also “cripple from his mother’s womb.” It is said of that occasion, that Paul perceived the man himself “had faith to be healed” (Acts 14:9). It is Jesus who is the “Head of the body” (Col 1:18), and the works that are done by the members of that body are according to His will, and through His power. Luke is reporting how Jesus worked on this occasion.

So far as men are concerned, faith is the actuating principle in the Kingdom – whether in the one through whom the work is being done, or the one upon whom the work is done. Although it is quite common to hear modern preachers speak of a point of contact through which faith can be released, no such concept is taught in Scripture.

In His marvelous working, Jesus often employs His people in extended ways, as when those who were present at the raising of Lazarus were told, “Loose him, and let him go” (John 11:44). Jesus could have caused these death-wraps to fall off, just as surely as the chains that bound the imprisoned Peter’s hands “fell off” (Acts 12:7). This time, however, this is not the manner in which Jesus chose to work. The man would be given assistance, and Peter would be the one who is employed by heaven.

Thus Peter takes hold of the man’s hand – a man who was over forty years old, and had never once stood on his feet – not a single time. I do not know if the man had faith, or what the level of his faith was if he had any. Whatever the circumstance, Peter’s action doubtless kindled hope in the man, and assisted his faith to burn more brightly. Perhaps Peter recalled when the blessed Lord took him by the hand and lifted him from the briny deep in which he had sunk (Matt 14:31). Jesus could have caused Peter to simply surface and stand on the water without stretching forth his hand and catching him. However, what blessed accompaniments there must have been when Peter felt the hand of Jesus grasp him and gently hoist him to the surface of the raging sea!

A Principle to Be Seen

It is the Divine nature to extend “grace to help in the time of need” (Heb 4:16). In responding to the commands of the Lord, whether to stand up and walk, or to cast our care upon Him (1 Pet 5:7), encouragements are granted from the Throne. These cause faith and hope to rise to prominence, and enable the individual to put down unbelief and fear. Some professed believers have never seen this because they live in the ordinary. They think in terms of trying, attempting, and experimentation. They never see Jesus as requiring something that is impossible to the flesh, and therefore they never attempt anything that requires grace that helps.

A Point of Contact?

The text says Peter “lifted him up,” or “helped him up.” NIV Some might imagine that the power of God flowed through the hand of Peter, thereby entering into the body of the man. It is not unusual to hear men boast of the power of God being resident in their hand, so that whatever or whoever they touch if impacted by the touch. Such views cannot be clearly supported by the Word of God. So far as men are concerned, faith is the actuating principle in the Kingdom – whether in the one through whom the work is being done, or the one upon whom the work is done . Although it is quite common to hear modern preachers speak of a point of contact through which faith can be released, no such concept is taught in Scripture. I understand that there is a network of reasoning that supports such a view. However, after all is said and done, such reasoning belongs to men, not to God. Men must take care not to shape thoughts by the conclusions of men.

It is necessary to make these observations because of the conditions that exist within the professing church. One segment of believers wholly neglect the matter of miracles, teaching that they belong to an age that has passed away. Another segment affirms that this is not the case, and buttress their position with all kinds of traditional jargon: “release your faith,” “a point of contact,” etc. Such teachings are more related to the occult than to Christ. An unreleased faith is no faith at all, for “faith without works is dead” (James 2:20,26). Too, how likely is it that faith, which is “the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1), would be ministered through fleshly touches or contact? Would not such a circumstance be in contradiction of our Lord’s words, “the flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63)? Is it remotely possible that the flesh could beget or produce something spiritual? Did not our Lord declare, “that which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit” (John 3:6). Thus, the miraculous is not wrought through a physical touch. It is what Peter possessed that wrought this deed. That is precisely what Peter said: “what I do Have, I give to you.” NKJV

Contrary to, and in spite of nature, this man’s “feet and ankle bones” received strength. The man’s condition was changed instantly, with no apparent progression. What is more, it is obvious from what follows that the man knew this had happened. Perhaps for the first time there was feeling in the man’s feet and ankle bones.

IMMEDIATELY HIS FEET AND ANKLE BONES RECEIVED STRENGTH

“ . . . and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength.” Other versions read, “and immediately his feet and his ankles were strengthened,” NASB “and instantly the man's feet and ankles became strong,” NIV “and immediately his feet and ankles were made strong,” NRSV “and immediately his feet and his ankle-bones received strength,” ASV “and straight away his feet and the bones of his legs became strong,” BBE “and immediately his feet and ankles grew strong,” NAB “Instantly his feet and ankles became firm ,” NJB “and presently his feet and ankles were strengthened ,” YLT “And as he did , the man’s feet and ankle-bones were healed and strengthened,” LIVING “Immediately, the man’s feet and legs became strong,” IE “and his feet and ankles instantly grew strong ,” WILLIAMS “And at once his feet and ankle bones became strong and steady ,” AMPLIFIED and “ At once his feet and ankle bones were strengthened.” PHILLIPS

Peter’s faith was evident in his action – he took the man by the hand and lifted him up, confident that he would stand up and walk as he had commanded. The man’s faith was evident in his cooperation with Peter as, for the first time in his life, he made an effort to get up on his feet. Remember he had been “lame from his mother’s womb.” In the flesh, Peter could have reasoned that this was wholly impossible, and the man could have scoffed at the demand that he stand up and walk. However, both men acted upon the word that was spoken.

As soon as Peter extended his hand to raise the man, something miraculous took place. The debilitated part of his body, though never endued with strength “received strength.” It is apparent that the man’s feet and ankle bones were not previously able to support him. This strength did not come gradually, being accomplished by some form of therapy. It was not the result of medication or some physical adjustment of the skeletal makeup of the man. This was strength that was commanded from the Throne of Jesus. David once said, “Thy God hath commanded thy strength” (Psa 68:28). Ezra confessed, “I was strengthened as the hand of the LORD my God was upon me” (Ezra 7:28). Jacob prophesied of Joseph, “the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob” (Gen 49:24). The book of Hebrews testifies of those who “out of weakness were made strong” (Heb 11:34).

Contrary to, and in spite of nature, this man’s “feet and ankle bones” received strength. The man’s condition was changed instantly, with no apparent progression. What is more, it is obvious from what follows that the man knew this had happened. Perhaps for the first time there was feeling in the man’s feet and ankle bones.

PONDER THE POSSIBILITIES

The concept of immediate working must be welcomed into our hearts and minds. Correction does not always require lengthy periods of time, and we should not approach life as though that was the case. A group of people who had called for the death of Jesus can suddenly be convicted, change their minds, and seek to know what they ought to do (Acts 2:37). A persecutor on his way to arrest Christians can suddenly change his mind and seek to serve the One he is opposing (Acts 9:5-6). A jailer who has beaten holy men for their work for God can suddenly cry out “What must I do to be saved” (Acts 16:30). An entire city sitting in the squalor of unbelief can “with one accord” give heed to the preaching of a godly man (Acts 8:6).

We certainly do not want men to live foolishly, imagining they will never experience disadvantages, heartaches, or hindrances. However, the door of hope must be left ajar. Those in Christ must think often, and in an extended manner, of the fact that “with God all things are possible” (Matt 19:26). The pursuing armies of Pharaoh can be suddenly “thrown into the sea” (Ex 15:1,21). Sennacherib’s oppressing massive army can be stricken dead in a single night (2 Kgs 19:35). The miserable plight of four impoverished lepers can be instantly turned around (2 Kgs 7:3-9). It is still true that God can “command deliverances” for His people (Psa 44:4). There is still a generation of whom it is said, “He sent His word, and healed them, and delivered them from their destructions” (Psa 107:20). He can still “rebuke the devourer” (Mal 3:11). It is also said of those whose ways are pleasing to the Lord, “When a man’s ways please the LORD, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him” (Prov 16:7) – and it makes no difference whether those enemies agree with the action or not.

The professing church would do well to be more faithful to remind the people of the greatness of the God to whom Jesus has reconciled and brought them. The more they are conscious and perceptive of God himself, the more clearly their circumstances will appear! Conversely, if the Lord is unclear to men, their condition will appear distorted and exaggerated. Hope will begin to wither, and faith will, at best, be “little.” Life will therefore become a burden.

LEAPING UP, WALKING, ENTERING, WALKING, AND LEAPING

“ 8 And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.”

Where there is life and recognized blessing, there is activity. The activity is the confirmation of the life.

HE LEAPING UP STOOD

“And he leaping up stood, and walked . . .” Other versions read, “So he, leaping up, stood and walked,” NKJV “And with a leap, he stood upright and began to walk ,” NASB “He jumped to his feet and began to walk,” NIV “Jumping up , he stood and began to walk,” NRSV “And, jumping up, he got on to his feet ,” BBE “So he jumped up, stood , and started to walk,” CSB “Springing to his feet , he stood up and started to walk,” GWN “and he sprang , stood up, and walked,” MRD “And with a leap , he stood upright and began to walk,” NAS “Leaping up , he stood upright and began to walk,” WEYMOUTH “and at once he leaped to his feet and started walking,” WILLIAMS and “he positively jumped to his feet , stood, and then walked.” PHILLIPS

The actions are recorded, and all of them took place immediately. The man was not gradually trained to do any of them, even though he had never engaged in a single one of them!

- He leaped up. This expression comes from a word of unusual action. Lexically it means “to leap up,” THAYER “leap or jump up, spring up,” FRIBERG “to leap to a standing position – it is possible that the paralyzed man actually jumped up from the ground,” LOUW-NIDA “to leap out of or forth from a place,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “to leap out of.” LEH Thus, the man bounded to his feet from a possible sitting position.

- He stood. This word means to be made to stand in place, without wavering or being unsteady: “to cause or make to stand; to place, put,” THAYER and “to stand firm, hold one’s ground, stand firmly on one’s feet.” FRIBERG

- He walked. This word speaks of mobility in the environment – being able to go from one place to another without difficulty. Lexically it means “to walk about, make one’s way, progress,” THAYER “go about,” FRIBERG “move about,” UBS and “to walk along or around.” LOUW-NIDA

All of this confirmed that the man’s feet and ankle bones were strong, able to cause him to jump, stand without assistance, and move about with dexterity. There was no question about it: a mighty work had been done.

A Picture of Regeneration

This is a most marvelous and precise picture of the newness of life! There is a resurrection from the dead – a quickening in which the individual leaps to life (Rom 6:4; Eph 2:1,5; Col 2:13). There is a certain stability in which one is caused by God to stand, not being dislodged or moved by trials and oppression (Rom 5:2; 14:4; 2 Cor 1:24; 1 Pet 5:12). There is also a certain mobility in which the person walks in the light, making progress to the eternal inheritance to which he is appointed (Rom 6:4; Rom 8:1,4; 2 Cor 5:7; Eph 2:10; 1 John 1:7). None of these things are the result training or mere human effort. Further, all of them are required for Divine acceptance.

ENTERED WITH THEM INTO THE TEMPLE

“ . . . and entered with them into the temple . . .” Other versions read, “Then he went with them into the temple courts ,” NIV “and he entered the temple complex with them,” CSB and “He went with Peter and John into the temple courtyard .” GWN

The healed man did not run home and show himself to any friends or family that he may have had. Instead, he went into the Temple complex with Peter and John. Keeping in mind how long it takes children to learn to walk, the magnitude of this miracle becomes even more obvious. Immediately the man enters into the Temple complex. Historians tell us that the area into which he entered had fifteen entry steps. PULPIT COMMENTARY Just as surely as this man was remarkably strong and mobile, so those who have been born again are able to move about in heavenly realms in most remarkable ways.

It is interesting to observe that the Temple is not said to be in the midst of other buildings and a courtyard, but that the whole area is associated with the Temple itself (“Temple,” “Temple complex,” “Temple courtyard.” etc). That is, the Temple sanctified the remaining area which was devoted wholly to matters pertaining to the Temple. The people could not enter the Temple itself. This was made evident when an angel appeared to Zacharias, who became the father of John the Baptist. He had gone into the Temple proper to burn incense at his appointed time: “And it came to pass, that while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course, According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord” (Luke 1:8-9). Having a deep regard for this activity, it is written that “And the whole multitude of the people were praying without at the time of incense:” (Luke 1:10). All during the time when an angel was speaking to Zacharias the people “waited” for him, marveling “that he tarried so long in the Temple” (Lk 1:21). When he “came out” of the Temple, they “perceived that he had seen a vision in the Temple” (Lk 1:22). These people were standing in the general area into which Peter, John, and the healed man now entered.

Something to Be Seen

There is a nugget of truth couched in this whole circumstance of the Temple complex. In the courts, provision was made for the people to come and remain close to the Temple. The “courts of the Lord” (Psa 84:2), however, were not a place for activities unrelated to the Lord. That is precisely why Jesus twice cleansed the Temple area of moneychangers and marketers – once at the beginning of His ministry, and once toward its close (John 2:13-16; Matt 21:12).

The same kind of centrality was given to the tabernacle, when Israel was journeying through the wilderness. The various camps of the Israelites were to be pitched around the tabernacle (Num 2:1-17). It was the heart of the encampment, and the Levites, who had charge of the tabernacle, were the inner circle of the encampment, being the closest to the tabernacle. Everyone camped facing the tabernacle so that the cloud that abode over it could be seen (Num 9:20-23). If the cloud moved, the children of Israel moved. If the cloud remained, the Israelites remained. Their lives were determined by the tabernacle.

Likewise the lives of believers are lived out close to the presence of the Lord, with His dwelling place being preeminent. The heart is where Christ dwells. As it is written, “That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love” (Eph 3:17).

The various aspects of life are to be lived within the proximity of Christ's indwelling. The intention is to please Him, follow Him, and fellowship with Him. No facet of life is excluded from these objectives. Likewise, our life in Christ Jesus finds expression in our daily life. In order of importance, this relates to 1 our function in the body of Christ, 2 our general influence in society (both domestic and interpersonal relationships related with life in this world), and 3 personal interests.

All of these areas are to be lived out as to the Lord. As it is written, “Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God” (1 Cor 10:31). And again, “And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him” (Col 3:17). And again, “And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men” (Col 3:23).

WALKING, LEAPING, AND PRAISING GOD

“ . . .walking, and leaping, and praising God.” Other versions read, “walking, jumping , and praising God,” NIV “walking and jumping and giving praise to God,” BBE “walking and leaping and lauding God , TNT “walking and springing , and praising God,” YLT and “where he walked about, leaping and thanking God .” PHILLIPS

The conduct of this blessed man outwardly fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah: “Then shall the lame man leap as an hart” (Isa 35:6). And again, “they shall walk and not faint” (Isa 40:31). Here was a man who had only been near to the Temple court – sitting at the gate. Like the scribe who answered Jesus “discreetly,” it could be said of this man, “thou art not far from the kingdom of God” (Mk 12:34). Now he is in the court, walking about, surveying the glorious sights. Perhaps he thought of the expression of the sweet Psalmist of Israel: “Walk about Zion, and go round about her: tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks , consider her palaces ; that ye may tell it to the generation following” (Psa 48:12-13). What a sight it must have been for him!

The man is vigorous in his expression, leaping, jumping, and springing up and down. This was not the expression of raw and uncontrollable emotion, but of great joy at the working of the Lord. As David had leaped and danced before the returning ark of the Lord, so this man was leaping with joy because of the mighty work that had been done in him. While this is a strange reaction to many, Jesus once said to some disciples who, He said, would experience persecution, “Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake. Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy : for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets” (Luke 6:22-23). It is what they would KNOW that would cause them to leap. And, so it is as with this man. He was not responding to a praise leader, or the rhythmic sounds of a musical instrument. His joy was within, and was the result of his insight concerning what had happened to him.

When professed believers must be admonished to “praise the Lord,” a serious deficiency must exist. In fact, we do not have a single example in all of scripture of Christians being admonished to praise the Lord! There is no record of Jesus ever commanding or admonishing a person to praise God.

We know this is the case because it is written this man was “praising God.” The word used here (aiwnw/n – ai-known) means to “extol,” THAYER “to speak in praise of, in the NT used only of praise to God,” FRIBERG “to speak of the excellence of a person,” LOUW-NIDA “to tell or speak of,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “to glorify.” LEH

Precise what do words like “extol,” “laud,” and “glorify” mean? First, they are all intelligent expressions – the verbalization of understanding. Praising God is not done in grunts and groans, or speaking unintelligibly. If eternal life is knowing God (John 17:3; 1 John 5:20), and the means through which God ministers to us is “the knowledge of God” (2 Pet 1:2,3; 2 Pet 2:20), what possible place can there be for a lack of intelligence in the Kingdom of God?

The Uniqueness of True Praise

To praise, laud, extol, and glorify involves expressing in words what is seen of the Lord. It is the expression of an understanding that has come through the experience of behold and recognizing the hand of the Lord.

When professed believers must be admonished to “praise the Lord,” a serious deficiency must exist. In fact, we do not have a single example in all of scripture of Christians being admonished to praise the Lord! There is no record of Jesus ever commanding or admonishing a person to praise God. As used in this text, the word “praise,” in all of its forms, is used eleven times in Scripture.

- God has “perfected praise” out of the mouth of babes (Matt 21:16).

- Heavenly hosts “praising” God (Lk 2:13).
- The shepherds “praising” God upon their return from seeing the Holy Child Jesus (Lk 2:20).
- Upon receiving his sight, Bartimaeus “gave praise unto God” (Lk 18:43).
- A multitude of disciples who “began to praise and rejoice” when they saw “all the mighty works” of Jesus (Lk 19:37).
- The disciples were found “praising and blessing God” following Christ’s ascension into heaven (Lk 24:53).
- The early disciples were found “praising God” following the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:47).
- The man of our text was “praising God,” and all the people saw him doing so (Acts 3:8-9).
- The glorification of God by the Gentiles is said to fulfill the word of the Psalmist which said , “Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles; and laud Him all ye people” (Rom 15:11; Psa 117:1).
- Upon the announcement of the fall of Babylon the Great those to serve God and fear Him are admonished, “Praise our God” (Rev 19:5).

There are other Greek words that are translated “praise.”

- euvlogw/n (eu-log-own). To speak well of (Lk 1:64).
- e;painon (epa-in-on). To laud, approbation, commendation (Eph 1:6,12,14; Phil 1:11; 4:8; 1 Pet 1:7)
- u`mnh,sw (hum-naa-so). To sing praise (Heb 2:12).
- aivne,sewj (ai-ne-os). A thank offering (Heb 13:15).
- doxa,zhtai (dox-adz-aat-ai). Honor, ascribe dignity to with the tongue (John 9:24; 1 Pet 4:11).

In all of these, understanding and insight are preeminent. None of the references to “praise” are associated with a routine, being led or directed, or a prescribed period of time.

No one told this man to praise the Lord. He did so because of what he had experienced, and because he knew the source of the benefit he received. Peter had spoken to him precisely on the matter: “In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk” (Acts 3:6). Having perceived what Jesus had done, the man commences to praise God, honoring Him publicly.

ALL THE PEOPLE SAW HIM AND RECOGNIZED HIM

“ 9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God: 10 And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.”

This entire incident is being managed from heaven – and that is with the insight and whole-hearted consent of Peter and John. We know this is the case because of the fruit that will come from what has been done. A tree is always known by its fruit!

ALL THE PEOPLE SAW HIM

“And all the people saw him walking and praising God . . .” Other versions read, “All the people saw him walking and heard him praising God,” NLT “And all the people saw him walke and laude

God,” TNT and “and all the people saw him walking about and praising God.” AMPLIFIED

This being “the hour of prayer,” the courtyard was filled with people. Suddenly the people behold this man walking throughout the area, jumping up and down, and praising God. For some, no doubt, it was a disruptive sight. For others, it might have peaked their curiosity. If any of the people that gladly received the word of the Lord on the day of Pentecost were there, they would have understood what was happening.

Here was a man whose candle had been lit by God (Psa 18:28), and he had not placed it “under a bushel” (Matt 5:15). Like a city that is “set on a hill,” this man could not be hid (Matt 5:14). Here was an example of something that was done in relative secret, yet was now being “made known” and “brought out into the open” NIV (Matt 5:17).

Just as surely as Jesus Himself “could not be hid” (Mk 7:24), so His works are luminous, shining forth before the eyes of men. That is the reason it is said of those embracing his Gospel, “Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men ” (2 Cor 3:2).

There is such a sharp contrast between those who are of this world, and those who have been “blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places” (Eph 1:3), that it is exceedingly difficult to conceal life from God. It is possible for such life to be relatively concealed if it does not mature, being conformed to the image of God’s Son (Rom 8:29; 2 Cor 3:18). In such a case, the distinction between “the children of the Kingdom” and “the children of the wicked one” is not so readily apparent, as revealed in the parable of the wheat and the tares. The tares were only distinguishable “when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit , then appeared the tares also” (Mat 13:26). Until the fruit started to appear, no apparent distinction could be seen.

In the account before us, what had been done by the power of God was evident. It was like “fruit” that appeared before the eyes of men, and they saw it.

There is such a sharp contrast between those who are of this world, and those who have been “blessed with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places,” that it is exceedingly difficult to conceal life from God. It is possible for such life to be relatively concealed if it does not mature, being conformed to the image of God’s Son .

It ought to be noted that as long as professed believer remain juvenile and immature, any claim to being “of Christ” cannot be fully substantiated – even though that association may exist. In fabricating and promoting spiritual Babylon, Satan has provided men with a “church” in which growth and maturity are not required. They are not required in the leaders or the constituency. Only identity with the institution is an absolute requirement. The outcome of this Satanic arrangement is universally known. Men have a weak church on their hands that requires all manners of specialists to keep it afloat. Further, very little difference can be detected between Christians and non-Christians. It is a most tragic situation.

THEY KNEW WHO IT WAS

“And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple . . .” Other versions read, “Then they knew that it was he who sat begging alms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple,” NKJV “and they were taking note of him as being the one who used to sit at the Beautiful Gate of the temple to beg alms,” NASB “ they recognized him as the same man who used to sit begging at the temple gate called Beautiful,” NIV “and they took knowledge of him, that it was he that sat for alms at the Beautiful Gate of the temple,” ASV “and they saw that it was the man who made requests for money at the door of the Temple,” BBE and “When they realized he was the lame beggar they had seen so often at the Beautiful Gate.” NLT

In those days, the people went frequently and for extended periods to the Temple area. This man had been seen many times, and, no doubt, over an extended period. He was a man that was begging, but now he was praising. He was lame, but now he was walking and leaping. He had distinguished himself as a beggar, always needing a handout because of his debility. But he is not asking for a handout now, and all of the people have noticed the difference.

It is a glad day when the people among whom we once walked can see a difference in us. When it becomes apparent that we can move about freely in the things of God, and that we are prone to praise, we will surely stand out.

THEY WERE FILLED WITH WONDER AND AMAZEMENT

“ . . .and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him.” Other versions I read, “they were full of wonder and surprise at what had taken place,” BBE “So they were filled with awe and astonishment at what had happened to him,” CSB “and they were amazed, and sore astounded at that, which was come unto him,” GENEVA “The people were

Like a lot of people today, this multitude was not used to anything actually happening when they were at the Temple. Oh, they went about their routines faithfully. At the required times, the priests offered the incense, fulfilling their responsibilities. However, there was not much leaping and praising. Deliverance was not common to most of the people.

amazed and stunned to see what had happened to him,” GWN “and they were filled with wonder and admiration at what had occurred,” MRD “they were all astonished and perplexed at what had happened to him,” NJB “they were absolutely astounded !” NLT “they were shocked and amazed . They couldn’t understand how this could have happened,” IE “and they were filled with wonder and amazement (bewilderment, consternation) over what had occurred to him,” AMPLIFIED and “and they were all overcome with wonder and sheer astonishment at what had happened to him.” PHILLIPS

Like a lot of people today, this multitude was not used to anything actually happening when they were at the Temple. Oh, they went about their routines faithfully. At the required times, the priests offered the incense, fulfilling their responsibilities. However, there was not much leaping and praising. Deliverance was not common to most of the people.

This day, however, the monotony was interrupted by a joyful man walking about the courts, jumping, and praising God. While the man was familiar to the people, his current manner was not. The text says that the people were filled with wonder and amazement because of what had happened to him. He did not have to tell the people, “Look what has happened to me!” It was all very apparent to them. With them, how this had happened was the issue. There was no question in their minds about something significant having really taken place.

A Type of A Dominating Hope

By comparison, Peter confirmed that when believers sanctify the Lord in their hearts, and are dominated by hope, it will become very apparent. Just as surely as the people wanted to know what had happened to this man, those who witness a person living by hope will want to know more about it. Thus Peter wrote, “But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear: having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ” (1 Pet 3:15-16).

Sanctifying the Lord God in our hearts is the inner equivalent of presenting our bodies a living sacrifice to Him (Rom 12:1-2). It is to set Him apart in our hearts, or give Him space to work within us, making no place for the devil (Eph 4:27). This involves being wholly motivated by our consideration of the Lord. As Isaiah would say, “Sanctify the LORD of hosts Himself; and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread” (Isa 8:13). This is why Jesus liberated us from the condemnation of, and servitude to the Law, that we might “live unto God” (Gal 2:19), and “live unto righteousness” (1 Pet 2:24). In Christ, men have a different reason for living. The future has been redefined.

When life is lived in such a manner – with the Lord God being sanctified in the heart – it becomes evident to those who observe us that we have a different reason for living. To them, we are like a former lame man walking, leaping, and praising, and they do not know why. Therefore, they will ask to “give an account for the hope” that is us. NASB Until the manner of our lives has caught the attention of those about us, it is doubtful that any purported testimony will have much effect. If we do not have a different reason for living, then we are really no different than those who are not in Christ Jesus.

THE PEOPLE RUN TOGETHER, GREATLY WONDERING

“ 11 And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.”

Not only is the attention of the people riveted upon the man who was healed, it is also on the men with whom he is walking. Perhaps some had recognized Peter and John as being among that vast multitude who were found every day in the Temple, praising God and having favor with all the people (2:47). At any rate, the trio of men have caught the attention of the people.

THE MAN HELD PETER AND JOHN

“And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John . . .” Other versions read, “held on to,” NKJV “clinging to,” NASB “ clung to,” NRSV “while he kept his hands on ,” BBE “The man wouldn't let go of,” GWN “ held fast to,” MRD “the man was hanging on to ,” NET “the man was still clinging to,” NJB “the man was holding tightly ,” NLT and “Now while he [still] firmly clung to Peter and John.” AMPLIFIED

The idea here is that the man remained closely identified with Peter and John, and would not leave them. The fact that they were representatives of Christ had been confirmed to him, as Jesus had worked with Peter in the healing of the man. He would not be like those thoughtless nine lepers who did not return to Jesus to give thanks (Lk 17:17).

He did not hold on to them for physical support, but because they were precious to him. It certainly was not burdensome for him to be with Peter and John. Some have conjectured that he held on to them because he might have been fearful of his lameness returning to him again. It seems to me to be more comely to think of him as having a deep affection for them, who had ministered the grace of God to him.

I do not doubt that in his praise to God he was thanking the Lord for the men through whom he had received his healing. Others had given him silver and gold, but these men had given him something that changed his whole person within and without.

An Application

It is the manner of those who are blessed from God to want to remain with those through whom they were blessed. When Jesus cured the Gadarene wild man, the man “prayed Him that he might be with Him ” (Mk 5:19). When Jesus healed blind Bartimaeus, he “followed Jesus in the way” (Mk 10:52). When Elijah was about to be translated, he told Elisha, “Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the Lord hath sent me to Jordan.” However, Elisha refused to remain behind saying, “As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee ” (2 Kgs 2:6). When Paul was in Athens, speaking about the things of God, “certain men clave unto him , and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them” (Acts 17:34). They refused to leave the one through whom they had believed. On one occasion, when the multitudes forsook Jesus, He asked His disciples, “Will ye also go away?” It was then that Peter spoke for the holy band of disciples. “Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.” (John 6:68-69).

I have noticed over the years my own attraction to those who minister to my spirit – people through whom the Lord works. While they have been relatively few, their company was much preferred, and there was never any shame in being seen with them. I have also observed the absence of this within the church at large. The inattention of professed Christians to those who preach and teach the truth of God betrays a corresponding absence of either the work of God itself within the people, or of an acute awareness of such a working.

When Paul came to Troas, he spoke to the assembled brethren all through the night (“until midnight”) , and then “talked a long while, even till break of day” (Acts 20:7-11). What kept those people there? They were clinging to Paul because their souls were being nourished, and they did not want to leave.

Once, when Paul was in Miletus, he “called for the elders of the church” in Ephesus (nearly 100 miles away). They came, meeting him and remaining while he spoke to them of many things. Then “he kneeled down and prayed with them all.” Those men “wept sore, and fell on Paul’s neck, and kissed him, sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him unto the ship” (Acts 20:38). Why did they cling so to Paul. Was it a requirement from which they could not escape? Indeed not! It was because he was precious to them. He had been the man who “taught them publicly, and from house to house” (Acts 20:20) for a period of “three years” (Acts 20:31), and they could not easily forget him.

Men may speak of the insignificance of kingdom laborers, or treat them as though they were nothing but peers. But this is not the manner of the Kingdom. Paul once wrote to Jewish believers, “Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation” (Heb 13:7).

When Paul told the Corinthians, “Wherefore I beseech you, be ye followers of me,” he was admonishing them to cling to him like the healed man held on to Peter and John (1 Cor 4:16). He said the same thing to the Philippians: “Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample” (Phil 3:17).

I have found that there are brethren with whom I tend to gain greater benefits. They have seen more, and they minister more. They are to me what Peter and John was to this unnamed man. It is a joy to take every advantage of being with such people. I have also found that very few people within the professed church have such a persuasion.

THE PEOPLE RAN TOGETHER

“ . . . all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's . . . ” Other versions read, “all the people ran together to them at the so-called portico of Solomon,” NASB “and came running to them in the place called Solomon's Colonnade,” NIV “all the people ran together to them in the portico called Solomon's Portico,” NRSV “all the people came running together to the covered way which is named Solomon's.” BBE

Suddenly, the people were drawn together, running at the same time to the same place – and a single man had sparked this aggressive interest! Of course, behind this, God was at work, drawing the people as only He can do (John 6:44). Jeremiah said the “lovingkindness” of the Lord had drawing power (Jer 31:3). Here is an excellent example of this, for the man they were viewing had surely been touched with the lovingkindness of the Lord, and, like David, he had not concealed it (Psa 40:10).

Solomon’s Porch

Solomon’s Porch was a long covered portico, or colonnade. It consisted of a series of columns that held up a roof, covering the area, which was not enclosed with walls. It is purported to have been on the east side of Herod’s Temple, and is not mentioned in connection with the first (Solomon’s) Temple, or the second one (Zerubbabel’s). It is mentioned in the Gospel of John, and in Acts as well. Jesus is said to have personally “walked in the Temple, in Solomon’s porch” (John 10:23). The other mentionings are Acts 3:11 and 5:12 – both gathering places in which the Apostles spoke and worked. It is said to include a portion of the Temple build by Solomon. The International Standard Bible Encyclopedia states the following: “The portico bearing Solomon’s name was that running along the eastern wall in the Court of the Gentiles of Herod’s temple.” The porch is said to have been above 800 feet in length, and supported by 162 pillars, each one being about 100 feet high.

It is interesting to observe that Peter and John did not go to the people. Rather, the people ran to them. While this did not always happen, it occurred quite often. The people came to John the Baptist (Matt 3:5). They also ran to Jesus (Mk 6:33; 9:25; John 8:12). An entire city came out to hear Paul (Acts 13:44-45).

It is fashionable these days to develop strategies through which to reach the people. This is certainly not wrong if it is done by people who have something to say. Jesus did tell His disciples to “go into all the world” (Mk 16:15). However, in our day, the time has come for the professed church to earnestly seek to obtain something that can be given in the name of the Lord. It needs a riveting and undeniable testimony through which people can be drawn to hear the truth.

GREATLY WONDERING

“ . . . greatly wondering.” Other versions read, “greatly amazed,” NKJV “full of amazement,” NASB “were astonished,” NIV “utterly astonished,” NRSV “full of wonder,” BBE “astounded,” ESV “They were excited,” GWN “admiring,” MRD “completely astounded,” NET “in great excitement,” NJB “awed,” LIVING “stunned,” IE “awe-struck,” WEYMOUTH “dumbfounded,” ISV “in utmost amazement,” AMPLIFIED and “in their excitement.” PHILLIPS

The words “greatly wondering” come from a single Greek word: ekqamboi (ek-tham-boi). The lexical meaning of this word is “astonished, amazed,” THAYER “utterly astonished, amazed, awestruck,” FRIBERG “greatly surprised or alarmed,” UBS “amazed, utterly astonished,” LOUW-NIDA and “astounded.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

The idea is that there was absolutely no natural explanation for what they saw. The condition of the once-lame man could not be traced to any quirk of nature. No mere man could have caused this to happen, nor could it be accounted for by any proposed law of nature. However wise any of the people were concerning diseases and physical infirmities, this incident confounded both the wise and the mighty (1 Cor 1:27). In both the Gospel and the works related to it, the saying is fulfilled, “I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent” (1 Cor 1:19; Isa 29:14).

One of the great deficiencies of modern Christendom is that its seeming achievements can easily be traced to human sources. Too many of its works can be explained on a rational and humanistic level. That is one reason why psychiatrists and motivators have become so popular in the churches. They can account for much of what is happening in the churches from a worldly point of view.

But what you do when you face a man who earlier the same day was sitting and begging (obviously crippled) at a gate of the Temple. Now, however, he is walking, and leaping in the Temple court, and praising God rather than begging from men? How do you account for him? How do you explain what has happened to him? The truth of the matter is that this circumstance could not be explicated from a human point of view. That is why the people came running to Solomon's porch "greatly wondering."

An Application

When the promises of Scripture concerning the manner of salvation are actually fulfilled in the church, it will solicit the attention of men. They may be hostile toward the people, but they will not be able to deny that something of great significance has taken place. Perhaps it will be of benefit to cite some of the remarkable promises that are realized in Christ Jesus.

- "The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto Him ye shall hearken" (Deu 18:15).
- "And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live" (Deu 30:6).
- "Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert" (Isa 35:6).
- "And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know Me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more" (Jer 31:34).
- "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them" (Ezek 36:26-27).
- "But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint" (Isa 40:31).
- "For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve Him with one consent" (Zeph 3:9).
- "They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God" (Psa 84:7).

It is not possible for such marvelous things to take place, and yet remain undetected. That would be like a lame being healed, leaping up, standing, walking, leaping, and praising God, and no one noticing it! The Psalmist said, "He hath made His wonderful works to be remembered: the LORD is gracious and full of compassion" (Psa 111:4). If God has, in fact, made His wonderful works to be remembered, then they can be seen.

CONCLUSION

I have sought to emphasize that we are being exposed to "pure religion before God and the Father" (James 1:27). No encroachment of evil has yet taken place. Suppressing influences have not raised their heads. There are no divisions among the people. No controversies have arisen. No heresies have been promulgated. No false apostles have made an appearance. There has not yet been any open resistance of the truth of the Gospel. All of that will come in due time – in fact, it will begin showing very soon. However, at this point, all is well, and a season of uninterrupted blessing is taking place.

WHY MAKE THIS POINT?

I am making this point to underscore that salvation is being wrought within a hostile world that is dominated by the devil. The fact that corruption was introduced at all confirms Satan's subtlety and aggressiveness. The Kingdom of God was not "set up" (Dan 2:44) with seeds of corruption within it. The newness of life does not have inherent flaws resident within it. Spiritual degradation and decline are not Kingdom normalities. Spiritual life is not like a mechanical clock that is wound up at the first, only to begin an unwinding process in which zeal and devotion eventually cool.

However, if we confined our observations to the modern church, we would conclude that spiritual life did wane, and that those who began leaping with joy eventually end up sitting in apathy. The religious world all about us would seem to indicate that monotony is inevitable, and frequent revivals and awakenings are, by the very nature of spiritual life, a necessity. That would require novelty, religious trends, fads, and the likes, else spiritual life will die out.

Of course, none of this is true, and those who are walking in the light know it. Newness of life never wanes – it increases, advancing from one stage of life to another by the power of the Holy Spirit. It is only the introduction of "the flesh" that causes retrogression or spiritual death to begin its work. We know this is the case because it is written, "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh" (Gal 5:16). It is also written that faith always overcomes the world: "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" (1 John 5:4-5). The only way to be overcome by the world is to quit believing, and no longer live in the invigorating persuasion that "Jesus is the Son of God." It is not possible to maintain fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9), and fall into the snare of the devil! You cannot walk in the light and stumble (John 11:9-10). A person cannot walk on the way of holiness and err (Isa 35:8).

If, in fact, professing Christians add to their faith "virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity" – and if those things remain in us "and abound," two things will occur. They will MAKE us, that we will be "neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." They will also guarantee that we will "never fall" (2 Pet 1:5-10). It simply is not possible for these affirmations to be found untrue!

Therefore, what we are seeing in the beginning of the church are the confirmed effects of nourishing, culturing, and maintaining the life that is conferred upon every soul that is begotten of God!

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #14

“ 3:12 And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? 13 The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified His Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up, and denied Him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go. 14 But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; 15 And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses. 16 And His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all. 17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. 18 But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled.” (Acts 3:12-18)

PETER SPEAKS TO THE PEOPLE, #1

INTRODUCTION

How does a man of God speak to people who are attracted by a mighty miracle to come running to him? If he does speak to them, what will he say, and how will he say it? What kind of opportunity will he see before him?

In this text these questions, and more, will be answered. We will find the man of God comprehending the circumstances and delivering words that were “fitly spoken” (Prov 25:11). He will also speak with an acute understanding of the nature of sinful man, the Kingdom of God, and the objectives of salvation. He will have an understanding of what God is doing. He will also face the people with what they did to Jesus, the circumstances under which they did it, and why they did it.

Peter will not allow undue glory to go to himself and John. He also will not permit glory to fail to go to God. He will not let the people to remain in ignorance concerning Jesus – who He was, what

He did, and how God had

CONTENTS

- PETER SAW AND ANSWERED (3:12a)
- WHY MARVEL YE AT THIS? (3:12b)
- THE GOD OF . . . (3:13a)
- GOD HATH GLORIFIED HIS SON (3:13b)
- YOU DELIVERED AND DENIED HIM (3:13c)
- YOU DESIRED A MURDERER AND KILLED THE PRINCE OF LIFE (3:14-15)
- FAITH, FAITH, AND FAITH (3:16)
- THE EFFECTS OF IGNORANCE (3:17)
- GOD SHOWED, AND HE HAS FULFILLED (3:18)
- CONCLUSION

glorified Him. All of this will be accomplished in a single message. It will be delivered with obvious confidence and great convicting power. No worldly agenda will be found in what he says.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF UNDERSTANDING

As we walk through this text, it will be very apparent that a different manner of understanding is being employed than is being touted in the church of our time. We will be exposed to an understanding that has Jesus Christ as its absolute center-point. What men think of Jesus is the key area of thought. How they respond to the Son of God is considered their fundamental response. What they do for Jesus is their primary activity.

Peter will speak from a lofty position in which it is surprising that truth is not perceived, or that wrong conclusions are reached. He is not naive, but informed. It is his grasp of truth that moves him to speak in such a manner.

CURRENT CIRCUMSTANCES

The nominal church has propped itself up on the crutches of scholasticism and the favor of men. Because of this, its leaders, for the most part, are not able to navigate in the ocean of Divine purpose or objective. It is too deep and intimidating for them. Therefore, they have chosen to sail their theological vessels on humanly conceived tributaries of truth – and that is the most favorable view of the situation. To them, truth has to do with what men consider practical. They see relevancy as something that assists men in fulfilling their own ambitions, which relate exclusively to this world. This is a mindset that now dominates the Christian world. It has given rise to a new kind of religious professional – self-acclaimed experts in matters relating to life in the world, yet who function in the name of Christ.

Peter will speak from a lofty position in which it is surprising that truth is not perceived, or that wrong conclusions are reached. He is not naive, but informed.

Religious specialists and counselors now negotiate on the shallow ponds of marital life, political circumstances, organizational issues, and motivational climes. They do this because redemptive matters are too deep for them, and therefore they have no appetite for them. This is because “the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14). Were it not for the corruption of religion, they would have no part in it, for the world is really the field in which they prefer to plow. Of such teachers John wrote, "They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them" (1 John 4:5). Paul said of them, "For they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple" (Rom 16:18). Peter said of them, "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction" (2 Pet 2:1).

Jude spoke of these intruders, describing them according to their character. "Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core. These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever" (Jude 1:11-13). In other words, these pretenders have nothing of spiritual substance to offer the people of God. Their message neither promotes nor maintains faith. A hope that sustains the soul is not obtained through their words.

The passage before us has no relevancy to such men. It is not the kind of text upon which you can build a career, a religious institution, or fame. Yet, we are being exposed to the expressions of men who are filled with the Holy Spirit. In this case, Peter will assess his audience, and deliver words through which the Holy Spirit will work. He is not only handling the truth, he is doing so as one "approved of God" (2 Tim 2:15).

THE NECESSITY OF PROPERLY FOCUSED THOUGHT

Spiritual Babylon brings a different focus – one that is clearly skewed toward this world. Within the professed Christian community, all false doctrine focuses on this world. This does not mean there is no mention of the Lord's return, heaven, rewards, judgment, and the likes. However, they all come behind issues relating to life in this world. The shape of false theology is determined by the here and the now, and life in the body. The real essence of such religion is what occurs in this world, not what will take place in the world to come.

By way of contrast, Apostolic doctrine approaches this life with the life to come in mind. In fact, when boiling down the subject matter of the message of Hebrews, the Spirit makes to succinct statements.

- "For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come, whereof we speak" or "about which we are speaking" NIV (Heb 2:5).

- "Now of the things which we have spoken this is the sum: We have such an High Priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens; a Minister of the sanctuary, and of the true The message preached today is God desires His children to be wealthy. Kenneth Hagin says that God not only wants to deliver believers from poverty, "He [also] wants His children to eat the best, He wants them to wear the best clothing, He wants them to drive the best cars, and He wants them to have the best of everything." (Quoted by D.L. McConnell A Different Gospel p.175) Fred Price agrees and boldly says, 'That's the "Financial prosperity is just as much a part of the Gospel as anything else. ... And I'm going to tell you something right now. I'm with the Apostle Paul in Romans chapter one: I'm not ashamed of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, .. I'm not ashamed of prosperity. I'm not ashamed that Jesus bought and paid for me to be wealthy.... Let me just tell you from the heart of God, "The very first thing on Jesus` agenda was to get rid of poverty! Would you like to know why some people, including ministries, never get out of poverty? Its not because they aren't smart. Its not because they don't have windows of opportunity. Its because they're not anointed. If you're not anointed, poverty will follow you all the days of your life. His first "You will walk in blessings, favor, prosperity, health and wealth, and you will do this without having to pursue wealth. First you must seek God's method of operation and His righteousness. When you find out how to live your life according to the Word of God you will become a money magnet . . . Well, you need to hear about money, because you ain't gonna have no love and joy and peace until you get some money!" (Creflo Dollar, Praise the Lord, "According to Word-Faith theology, financial prosperity and wealth was also included in the Atonement. This is based on an interpretation of the words of the Apostle Paul: 'Yet for your sakes he became poor, that you by his poverty might become rich" (2 Corinthians 8:9). Critics believe Paul was speaking of spiritual riches, rather than material prosperity. Faith proponents support their view by arguing that the context is the giving of material wealth. It is often taught that Jesus and the apostles were rich, and therefore believers should expect the same financial success. Supporters such as Kenneth Copeland have argued that Prosperity Gospel is validated by the teachings of the Apostle John: 'Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth" (3 John 2). Copeland posits that 'as the seeds of prosperity are planted in your mind, in your will and in your emotions...they eventually produce a great financial harvest.'" Wikipedia tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man" (Heb 8:1-2).

Therefore, so far as place is concerned, "the world to come," or the heavenly "sanctuary" is the emphasis. It is referred to as "the world to come" from the perspective of our future presence in, and involvement with, it. It is called the "sanctuary" with Christ's present activity in mind.

With little effort, we should be able conclude that the main place is the heavenly realms – where Jesus presently resides. The main Person is the Lord Jesus Christ, through whom every need, benefit, and advantage come to men. A religion – any religion – that does not lead men to conclude that Jesus Christ is the fundamental and preeminent Man, and that heaven is the primary place, cannot possibly be true. If earth was the main place, Jesus would have stayed here. If life in this world was the main life, then there would be no need for faith and hope, both of which have to do with the unseen realm.

The Word of Faith Movement

In the past few years, televangelists have affirmed that when Jesus said He had been anointed to "preach the Gospel to the poor" (Lk 4:18), that news meant they would no longer be "poor." Officially termed "The Word of Faith Movement," this theological approach affirms that healing and prosperity are in the atonement – that is, that Jesus died to procure bodily health and financial prosperity for Adam's race. In this view, faith has primarily to do with improving one's life in the flesh – life in this world.

This doctrine is built upon two primary texts.

- "Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed" (1 Pet 2:24).
- "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth" (3 John 1:2).

As already stated, a fundamental supposition that theoretically undergirds this corruption is that the blood atonement includes provision for both health and prosperity – that is, that Christ's death paid for, or redeemed from, sickness and poverty. The First Peter text, which alludes to Isaiah 53:5, is affirmed to support this view. It is also stated that Isaiah 53:4 and Matthew 8:17 declare this to be the case: “Surely He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows : yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted” (Isa 53:4). Matthew reads, “When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses ” (Matt 8:17).

Unlike these false prophets, Matthew says that prophecy was fulfilled in Jesus’ earthly ministry, not in His death. His healing of the sick when He “went about doing good, and healing all who were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38) fulfilled Isaiah’s word, not His death upon the cross, or the administration the chastening stripes of God (not those administered by men).

Peter further defines what is meant by were healed: “ For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls ” (1 Pet 2:25). The healing was from straying, not from being sick! That, of course, is exactly what Isaiah said as well: “But He was wounded for our transgressions , He was bruised for our iniquities : the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the LORD hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all ” (Isa 53:5-6). God did not wound Jesus because we were ill, or because we were poor! He was not “bruised” because we were sick, or because we lacked earthly resources. He was not chastened for our health, but for our peace. The Lord did not lay our sicknesses upon Christ, but our “iniquities.” It was not our illnesses He bore in His body on the tree (1 Pet 2:24).

It was not our bodily health that alienated us from God, for that was not the common malady among men. We were not separated from God because we were sick and poor, and it is a gross and deliberate misrepresentation of the case to affirm such a thing. All men are not sick, and all men are not poor – yet Jesus “died for all ” (2 Cor 5:14,15), “gave Himself a ransom for all ” (1 Tim 2:6), and His body was offered “once for all ” (Heb 10:10). Words like “reconcile,” “justify,” “sanctify,” and “wash” do not apply to illness and poverty, but to the guilt and contamination of sin and iniquity. It is “enemies” that are “reconciled” (Rom 5:10). Men are justified from sin (Rom 3:23-24). Sanctification is associated with wisdom, righteousness, and redemption – not health and wealth (1 Cor 1:30). Washing has to do with being cleansed from sin, not sickness or poverty (Acts 22:16; 1 Cor 6:9-11; Rev 1:5).

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

It is necessary to say these things because, in our text, we are being exposed to the setting up of the Kingdom of God (Dan 2:44; Lk 22:18; Acts 28:31). If the above doctrine is true, it will be preached at the beginning, when the foundation is being laid. If deliverance from sickness and poverty is what redemption is all about, then Peter will surely proclaim it with power and clarity, for he has “the keys of the kingdom of heaven” (Matt 16:19). Or, is this a doctrine that was not clear when the Lord Jesus poured out the Holy Spirit, and His disciples were “filled with the Spirit,” and spoke “as the Spirit gave them utterance.”

If Peter did not preach this gospel of prosperity in the beginning, then those who do preach it must be held in account for why they do so. Has God revealed something to them that was not revealed to Peter? Have they received keys that Peter did not receive? Have men now believed on Jesus through their word, instead of through the words of the Apostles, as Jesus said (John 17:20)?

The Rapid Growth of This Group

The New York Times (10/5/2006) estimates that 25% of the total Christian population (2.3 Billion) is in this group (575,000). The most recent survey of ten nations show their remarkable influence.

Nearly all of these people subscribe to and embrace the prosperity gospel. It dominates the air waves of both radio and television. The majority of the mega-churches represent this line of thought. We are not speaking of a small and fledgling movement. By comparison, the Restoration Movement, with its three primary branches, comprise about 3 million people. The movement called “renewalists” has just celebrated its 100 th anniversary, and it is well over 575 million , and growing. Yet, though gaining in size and popularity, it is promoting a primary view that requires one to wrest the Scriptures.

IF THE VIEW IS CORRECT

If the view of health and wealth – the prosperity gospel – is true, it will be made known in the beginning chapters of the book of Acts. This is the record of the beginning of the church Jesus said He would “build” (Matt 16:16). The first outpouring of the Spirit is recorded, as well as the first anointed public proclamation of the exalted Christ. We have the first inspired exposition of Christ’s death, burial, and resurrection. The door of salvation is first opened, and for the first time, inquiring souls are told what to do, and what to expect.

In our text the record of a specific man being healed at a particular time is given. It will prove to be an occasion that will result in Peter delivering a word about Jesus. He will trace Jesus’ sufferings back to the prophets, and deliver an inspired view of what was entailed in that suffering. Individuals will have to judge for themselves whether or not it is appropriate to imagine that a differing view of the purpose of Christ’s death can possibly be delivered later by means of the Holy Spirit. If such a view is entertained, then some form of reasoning must be presented that justifies such a conclusion, particularly when that reasoning clashes with Peter’s preaching.

PETER SAW AND ANSWERED

“ 3:12a And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people . . . ”

One of the confirmations of a person being directed by God is their ability to recognize a situation, and properly respond to it. Our text for this lesson begins with what Peter saw, and the consequent action resulting from that insight.

PETER SAW

“And when Peter saw it . . .” Other versions read, “when Peter saw this ,” NASB “And Peter, seeing it,” DARBY “But Peter seeing,” DOUAY “When Peter saw the people ,” NJB “When Peter saw his opportunity ,” NLT “when Peter saw that ,” TNT “Peter having seen ,” YLT and “and seeing this, Peter.” LITV

Here, however, the emphasis is on him perceiving an open door – an opportunity much like that which took place on the day of Pentecost when “the multitude came together” (Acts 2:6). At that time they were also drawn together by the working of the Lord.

Once the people saw a familiar man leaping, walking and praising God, and recognized that this was the same man who had been regularly begging at one of the Temple gates, “all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon’s, greatly wondering” (3:11). This is what Peter “saw,” and his sight was not limited to what his eyes beheld. He saw what appeared to the eye, but what he took into his heart and mind was more than what his eyes beheld. The word translated “saw” means “to know... to perceive . . . notice, discern, discover.” THAYER

In a rare show of technical accuracy, the New Living Translation correctly renders the sense of the text: “When Peter saw his opportunity .”

The use of this word emphasizes discernment – perceiving the significance of a thing, and seizing the opportunity.

- The wise men who came to worship the Holy Child confessed, “we have seen His star in the east, and are come to worship Him” (Matt 2:2).
- When Jesus was baptized He “ saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him” (Matt 3:16).
- It is said of Jesus prodigious ministry, “The people which sat in darkness saw great light” (Matt 4:16).
- The same word is translated “know” in Paul’s prayer for the Ephesians. “The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling . . . ” (Eph 1:18).
- The word is again translated “know” in the Thessalonian letter, when Paul said he was aware of their election. “ Knowing , brethren beloved, your election of God” (1 Thess 1:4).
- Again, when speaking of the Lord’s return in glory, Paul writes that He will come “In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Thess 1:8).

Therefore, in this text, in saying Peter “saw them,” the Spirit means refers to more than the seeing of the eye. To be sure, Peter witnessed the people running together. Here, however, the emphasis is on him perceiving an open door – an opportunity much like that which took place on the day of Pentecost when “the multitude came together” (Acts 2:6). At that time they were also drawn together by the working of the Lord.

Being himself enlightened, Peter will not turn away the people as the disciples once did when the children were being brought to Jesus (Matt 19:13); or when they asked Jesus to “send away” that “woman of Canaan” who sought for help for her daughter (Matt 15:23); or when the disciples asked Jesus to send away the hungering multitudes that were lingering with Him, so that they could buy some food (Mk 6:36). In all of those circumstances the disciples saw, yet did not perceive.

What was the difference in this occasion? Why didn’t Peter think this crowd to be a distraction? It was because he was “endued with power from on high,” as Jesus had promised (Lk 24:49). This “power” enabled him to discern the circumstances and know what to do when he confronted them. That is an aspect of God working within men that has been largely lost in a time when entertainment and men-pleasing have become dominate.

PETER ANSWERED

“ . . . he answered unto the people . . . ” Other versions read, “he responded to the people,” NKJV “he replied to the people,” NASB “he said to them,” NIV “he addressed the people,” NRSV “he said to the people,” BBE “he answered and said to them,” MRD “he declared to the people,” NET “addressed the crowd ,” NLT and “ spoke to the people.” WEYMOUTH

The word “answered” comes from a Greek word meaning, “to give an answer to,” THAYER and “to reply to a questioner or question.” LIDDELL-SCOTT Here, however, there has been no question addressed to Peter – yet, he is said to have “answered.”

In this text, “answer” does not mean replying to a question or inquiry, but responding to a circumstance. One time, when Jesus was in the process of upbraiding the cities “wherein most of His mighty works were done,” He is said to have “answered” without anyone asking Him a question. “At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight” (Mat 11:25-26). Another time, when the Pharisees sought to lay hands on Him, and without them asking Him anything, “Jesus answered and spake unto them again by parables, and said” (Matt 22:1). Another time, a blind man named Bartimaeus was told that Jesus called for him. He threw off his cloak and came to Jesus. Without the man saying a word to Jesus, “Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?” (Mark 10:51). When Jesus saw a fig tree with nothing but leaves, He “ answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever” (Mark 11:14). When Jesus was arrested in the garden, before anyone asked a question, “Jesus answered and said unto them, Are ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and with staves to take Me?” (Mark 14:48). When Peter cut off Malchus’ ear, “Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And He touched his ear, and healed him” (Luke 22:51).

In all of these case, Jesus was responding to a circumstance, a situation, an opportunity. He perceived the situation and uttered words appropriate for the occasion. Jesus is still this way, answering situations and circumstances, speaking words to the heart when He has been asked no questions.

Thus Peter, having the mind and spirit of Christ, perceives the situation and has something to say. Because he has a grasp of the circumstance, and sees it in view of the purpose of God, he knows that to say. He does not have to ask questions of the multitude, inquiring what is on their minds, or why they have come running to him and John as the former lame man held onto them. Unlike the psychiatrists and counselors of the day, he does not have to probe their background, inquire into their past, and obtain sundry information that will assist him in knowing what to say. He already has a grasp of the situation, and has no need to ask what the people want. He already knows what they need.

Under the New Covenant the people, particularly those chosen to lead, can have a grasp of a situation, knowing what to do. Under the Old Covenant, this was not always the case. For example, under the Law there were occasions when the people had to ask counsel of the Lord. During these times, the judgment of the Lord was often made known in an impersonal manner – by means of “the judgment of the Urim before the Lord” (Num 27:21). This was a stone that, together with “the Thumim,” was kept in “the breastplate of judgment” (Ex 28:20), and very little is known about them. It was one of the means by which an answer from God was obtained. Dreams and prophets were two other means (1 Sam 28:6). These two stones apparently stood for a Divine “Yes” and “No,” with the Urim standing for “Yes.” This means of obtaining direction appears to have been quite similar to the casting of lots.

The thing to be seen here is that men were often directed independently of discernment, or a personal understanding of the situation. During those times, sin had not yet been taken away, and thus men did not participate in the Divine nature. Their hearts had not been circumcised, they did not have a new spirit, and the Holy Spirit did not dwell in them. By way of comparison we are told, “And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect ” (Heb 11:39-40). They did not enjoy the benefits of the New Covenant in which all of the people “know the Lord,” having His laws put into their hearts and written into their minds (Heb 10:16).

We are also told that the purpose of God, as realized in Christ Jesus, was not “made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the spirit” (Eph 3:5). Whatever may be said of the most excellent of the human race prior to Christ, they did not have the advantages that are now realized by all saints, by grace through faith. For this reason Divine direction and confirmation often came by comparatively crude means. It might be a “sound in the tops of the mulberry trees” (2 Sam 5:24), dew seen either on or off of a fleece spread upon the ground (Judges 6:37-40), the casting of lots (Lev 16:8), a personal dream (Gen 46:2-4), or overhearing a man relating a dream (Judges 7:13-15).

I approach this matter with extreme caution, lest I be misunderstood, or leave the impression that men no longer rely upon the Lord. Yet, there is something to be said about possessing “the mind of Christ” (1 Cor 2:16), having the eyes of our heart “enlightened” (Eph 1:18), and being “filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). In Jesus, God has given more of Himself to men, and brought the redeemed into a lofty partnership in which they work together with Him (1 Cor 3:9).

It is not comely for those who are in Christ and have tasted of the heavenly gift to walk about in perpetual ignorance, never knowing what to do, and unable to assess the circumstances in which they find themselves. This is not to say that everything will always be crystal clear to us, or that we will never grapple with ignorance. It IS to say that life in Christ is not lived within the tent of ignorance. We are summoned to so present ourselves to the Lord that we will come to “discern what is the will of God – what is good and acceptable and perfect” NRSV (Rom 12:2).

The Magnitude of the Challenge

In every circumstance of life there are a number of significant factors. There is the presence of diverse personalities. For the child of God, the Holy Spirit is present to direct, illuminate, and empower. Satanic hosts are also present to deceive, blind, and lure into sin. There are also human personalities – “flesh and blood” – against whom we do not wrestle, yet which can capture our attention and distort our judgement.

Behind the circumstance, and hidden from all natural senses, there are certain objectives and tendencies. There is an eternal purpose under which everything is operating (Eph 1:10-11; 3:11). There is also the intention of the devil, who has come down to earth “having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time” (Rev 12:12). Then, there is the matter human nature – a fallen nature that is bent in the wrong direction, seeks self, and has no clear view of humanity, the world, or God Himself. Often, there is also the factor of redeemed men, who are seeking the things above, are strangers in this world, and are seeking “a better country, that is, an heavenly” (Heb 11:16).

With that rather complex set of circumstances, how is a person to know what to do? Regarding our text, how will Peter know what to do? He is with a man whose heart has been touched, and he is leaping and praising God. He is with John, a fellow worker, who thinks as he does. He is confronting some people who have recently called for the death of Jesus, and yet have been intrigued by what is happening before their eyes.

Peter and John do not step to the side, withdrawing from the people to pray and seek Divine guidance. They are not thrown into a state of consternation in which they do not have the slightest idea what to do. They do not run away from the circumstance, being intimidated by it. You at once sense that Peter is actually in charge of the circumstance. He knows exactly what has happened to the man who insists on remaining with them. He knows why that lame man is leaping and praising God. He also knows the people who are running to them, and what they have done in the past. He does not fear that they will kill him and John as they did Jesus. It is not that he is simply a brave soul. He is rather a discerning soul – one who is in fellowship with God’s Son and knows what He is doing from heaven. Peter will therefore speak with discernment and confidence, and therefore with power and effectiveness.

WHY MARVEL YE AT THIS?

“ 12b Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?”

Here we will behold the confidence with which Peter speaks – just as he did on the day of Pentecost. He is not intimidated by this circumstance. He is walking in the light and knows what to do and say. This is one of the remarkable benefits of maintaining the fellowship with Christ into which God has called us (1 Cor 1:9). Peter and John do not have to pray on this occasion, seeking Divine guidance. They do not have to summon the other apostles to assist them in deciphering the proper response to this multitude. Solomon once said, “in the multitude of counselors there is safety” (Prov 11:14; 24:6). Again he said, “in the multitude of counselors they are established” (Prov 15:22). In this case, however, these words have no place, for Peter is in fellowship with the Master Teacher.

John will write later of the advantages of being taught by God – particularly through the Holy Spirit: “But the anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you : but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him” (1 John 2:27). John is referring to the use of the truth rather than its acquisition – to the employment of wisdom in situations for which there are no express instructions in Scripture.

Therefore Peter, with a grasp on the truth and a perception of the opportunity before him, speaks with great assurance and power. It ought to be noted that powerful speaking is always attended by confidence and assurance.

YE MEN OF ISRAEL

Ye men of Israel . . .” Other versions read, “You Israelites,” NRSV “Men, sons of Israel,” MRD “People of Israel,” NLT “Men, Israelites,” YLT “Israelites,” WEYMOUTH and “Fellow Israelites.” ISV

One of the marked distinctions between Peter and John and the modern church is this: the modern church is surprised if anything unusual or supernatural takes place. Peter and John would have been surprised if such things did not take place.

As elementary as it may be, the word “men” is not a description of gender, but is used of all mankind in general. Thus we read of followers of Jesus being “hated of all men ” (Matt 10:22), that “ all men should honor the Son” (John 5:23), and that the crucified Christ would “draw all men unto” unto Himself (John 12:32). With the announced fulfillment of God pouring out His Spirit upon “all flesh,” including sons and daughters, and God’s servants and handmaidens (Acts 2:17-18) , it is not likely that Peter would speak only to males.

Peter addresses the people according to their God-ordained lineage: “men of Israel,” or offspring of Jacob. From a politician’s point of view, they might have been considered vassals of the State of Rome. From the scribes and Pharisees viewpoint, they might have been considered as devotees to the Law. Peter, however, perceives them in their most noble status.

WHY DO YOU MARVEL?

“ . . . why marvel ye at this?” Other versions read, “why do you marvel at this?” NKJV “why does this surprise you ?” NIV “why do you wonder at this ?” NRSV “why are you so greatly amazed at this man ?” BBE “why are you astonished at this ?” DARBY “why are you amazed about this man ?” GWN “why are you so surprised at this ?” NJB “ what is so surprising about this?” NLT and “Why are you so surprised and wondering at this ?” AMPLIFIED

One of the marked distinctions between Peter and John and the modern church is this: the modern church is surprised if anything unusual or supernatural takes place. Peter and John would have been surprised if such things did not take place.

Take hold of the gravity of this situation. A man of over forty years of age, who had been lame from the day he was born, was instantly cured, and is walking, leaping, and praising God in the Temple courts. Seeing this take place, the multitude come running to “them” – the man, together with Peter and John. Boldly, Peter asks them, “Why are you so greatly surprised at this man?” BBE It is as though he asked, “what is all of this excitement about?” This certainly was not the response of Peter and John to the healing of the man. After he had leaped up, they simply proceeded into the Temple as they intended.

The amazement of the crowd confirmed they had not seen God in the matter. They saw this as a worldly phenomenon, and did not connect it with the risen Christ, whom they had crucified earlier through the hands of lawless men. Their eyes were fixed upon the result of the Lord working, and not on the working Lord.

The amazement of the crowd confirmed they had not seen God in the matter. They saw this as a worldly phenomenon, and did not connect it with the risen Christ, whom they had crucified earlier through the hands of lawless men. Their eyes were fixed upon the result of the Lord working, and not on the working Lord. Even though they were in the “courts of the Lord,” they were not conscious of Him, and therefore could not detect His working.

All of this was really inexcusable. The Lord Jesus had been among them, and had healed great numbers of people “in the Temple” (Matt 21:14). He had gone throughout their cities and villages “teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people” (Matt 9:35). His “fame” as a miracle worker had spread throughout the entire region, and even into “all Syria” (Matt 4:24; 9:26-31; Lk 4:37). Now, within a little over fifty days, they had apparently forgotten about Jesus of Nazareth, even though the world had never before, nor since, beheld such a display of Divine power in a Man. In addition to all of this, Pentecost had taken place, followed by the disciples continuing to meet daily in the Temple (Acts 2:46), with “many wonders and signs” being “done by the apostles” (Acts 2:43). Yet, all of this had not impacted this multitude.

Do you wonder at the obtuseness of the flesh? Wonder no more! Even when they are witnessed by unregenerate men, great works of God are easily forgotten. Also, the flesh cannot make an association between the hand of God and the circumstances of life. It is simply blind to such associations.

There is also something to be said about God-consciousness versus man-consciousness: i.e. between perceiving God in a matter and only seeing men. One of the fundamental ministries of Jesus is to make us aware of the Living God, His purposes, and His gifts. Being filled with the Spirit, Peter is keenly aware of this. Therefore he sees this circumstance quite differently than the multitudes. This whole matter has interrupted their religion. Now Peter, perceiving their situation, will speak to them with the wisdom that comes down from above.

WHO DO YOU LOOK EARNESTLY AT US?

“ . . . or why look ye so earnestly on us . . . ” Other versions read, “why look so intently on us?” NKJV “why do you gaze at us?” NASB “why do you stare at us?” NIV “why fasten ye your eyes on us?” ASV “why are you looking at us ?” BBE “why look ye so steadfastly on us,” GENEVA and “why do you keep staring at us?” AMPLIFIED

This is the kind of attention false prophets and charlatans crave. However, Peter and John do not have a lust for attention. They are “ambassadors of Christ,” and they desire attention to be given to Him. That is what godly men do. They do not just talk about Jesus receiving the attention, they see to it that through their words that actually happens – whether the people consent to it or not. It is one thing to talk about Jesus getting the glory, it is quite another to see to it that He does.

POWER OR HOLINESS

“ . . . as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?” Other versions read, “as though by our own power or godliness we had made this man walk?” NKJV “But when Peter saw this, he replied to the people, “as if by our own power or piety we had made him walk?” NASB “as if by our power or virtue we had given him the use of his legs?” BBE “as if by our strength or power we had made this man to walk?” DOUAY “as though we have made him walk by our own power or godly life ?” GWN “as if by our own power or authority we had made this man to walk?” MRD “Do you think this was done because we are good ?” IE and “as though by our [own individual] power or [active] piety we had made this man [able] to walk?” AMPLIFIED

Peter’s words are arresting. He questions why the people are looking upon him and John intently as though they had made this man walk by their own “power or holiness.” That is a most interesting combination of words: “power or holiness,” “power or godliness,” NKJV “power or piety,” NASB or “power or godly life.” GWN

The word “power” comes from a word meaning, “strength, ability, or power residing in a person,” or inherent in their nature, THAYER “a capacity for something, ability, capability,” FRIBERG “capacity,” UBS “ability to perform a particular activity,” LOUW-NIDA “authority.” LEH As used here, this speaks of a natural ability – resident in, and developed by, human aptitude.

The word “holiness” comes from a word meaning, “piety toward God, godliness,” THAYER “behavior directed dutifully toward God, piety, devotion, godliness,” FRIBERG “godliness, godly life; religion; good deeds or godly living,” UBS and “appropriate beliefs and devout practice of obligations related to” God. LOUW-NIDA

Peter is affirming that this man was not made to walk through any natural ability (power) of his own – the art of healing, medicinal expertise, etc. He is also declaring that it was not done because God had given them a special ability because they led disciplined religious lives, keeping all of the rules, and thus becoming worthy of receiving such an aptitude. These are the two areas law-keepers accentuate: having natural gifts, or being rewarded by God for being so good. This power did not come from Peter and John themselves, and it was not given to them because of their excellent works and rule-keeping. Thus, in spiritual wisdom, Peter turns the attention from himself and John. He has “the mind of Christ.” He therefore denies that they are superior by birth or by conduct. What they have done is not owing to their persons or their religious achievements. The Source was of a higher order than nature.

THE GOD OF . . .

“ 13a The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers . . . ”

Peter will now identify the God of whom He will speak. It will not be the God of the Pharisees, who dealt with men according to their excellence. It will not be the God of the scribes, who was devoted to rules and procedures relating to human conduct. He was not the God of the Sadducees, who governed a realm without spirits or angels. He was not the God of the Lawyers who exalted human understanding above Divine intention. Peter will be very precise in his delineation of God.

THE GOD OF ABRAHAM, AND OF ISAAC, AND OF JACOB

“The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob . . .” Other versions read, “The God of Abraham, (the God) of Isaac, and (the God) of Jacob.” NAB

This is the God who made Himself known to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It is the God who chose them, blessed them, and directed them. It is the God they worshiped, obeyed, and served.

The first person to refer to God as the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob was God Himself. He used this phrase when appearing to Moses at the burning bush: “Moreover he said, I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And

This is the God who made Himself known to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It is the God who chose them, blessed them, and directed them. It is the God they worshiped, obeyed, and served.

Moses hid his face; for he was afraid to look upon God” (Ex 3:6). The Lord instructed Moses to refer to Him in this manner: “And God said moreover unto Moses, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath sent me unto you: this is my name for ever, and this is my memorial unto all generations” (Ex 3:15). When Moses told the Israelites God had appeared to him, he was to refer to Him in this manner: “Go, and gather the elders of Israel together, and say unto them, The LORD God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, saying, I have surely visited you, and seen that which is done to you in Egypt” (Ex 3:16). God even gave Moses a special sign to work before the Israelites so they would believe this is the God who sent him: “And the LORD said unto Moses, Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail. And he put forth his hand, and caught it, and it became a rod in his hand: that they may believe that the LORD God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee” (Ex 4:4-5).

Jesus Christ referred to God in this manner: “But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living” (Mat 22:32; Mk 12:26; Lk 20:37).

Stephen also referenced to God in this way (Acts 7:37).

Elaborating on this point, Moses reveals how God heard the groaning of Israel under the oppression of the Egyptians and “remembered His covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob” (Ex 2:24). God also reminded Moses of His personal appearance to these three patriarchs: “And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty, but by my name JEHOVAH was I not known to them” (Ex 6:3). The entrance of Israel into the land of promise was owing to a promise God made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: “And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage: I am the LORD” (Ex 6:8; 33:1; Num 32:11; Deut 1:8; 6:10).

When God promised to enable Israel to drive out the inhabitants of Canaan, it was only because of what He had promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: “Not for thy righteousness, or for the uprightness of thine heart, dost thou go to possess their land: but for the wickedness of these nations the LORD thy God doth drive them out from before thee, and that He may perform the word which the LORD swore unto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” (Deut 9:5).

When Moses pled for God to spare Israel, not destroying them for their wickedness, he did so upon the basis of His commitment to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. “Remember Thy servants, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; look not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to their wickedness, nor to their sin” (Deut 9:27).

When Moses spoke to the people about God establishing them and being a God to them, he reminded them that this was owing to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. “That He may establish thee to day for a people unto himself, and that He may be unto thee a God, as He hath said unto thee, and as He hath sworn unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob” (Deut 29:13).

God revealed to Moses that Israel would depart from Him, and be punished by Him. Yet, if they would repent and turn to Him, even in their captivity, He promised “Then will I remember my covenant with Jacob, and also my covenant with Isaac, and also my covenant with Abraham will I remember ; and I will remember the land” (Lev 26:42).

During their history, when God was gracious to Israel, having compassion on them, it was because of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. “And the LORD was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of His covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob , and would not destroy them, neither cast He them from His presence as yet” (2 Kgs 13:23).

An Application

All of this provides insight into the nature of salvation. With Israel, they were blessed because of others (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob), and not because of their own persons or achievements. How could they boast in such a circumstance? They were sustained because of a covenant made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Likewise, the saved are not blessed because of themselves, but because of Christ Jesus. Strictly speaking, they are not blessed because they have obeyed, but because of the Son of God. God has forgiven them “for Christ’s sake” (Eph 4:32). It is the Father’s love for Christ that has brought the blessing to us (John 15:9), and the Father loves us because we love His Son. “For the Father Himself loveth you, because ye have loved Me, and have believed that I came out from God” (John 16:27).

Whatever you may think of God’s love for you, His love for Jesus is greater! He is the “beloved Son,” and, when we have “received Him” (John 1:12), we are blessed because of that. I am not sure that it is proper to continually speak of how much God loves people. There certainly are not a lot of examples of this kind of speaking in Scripture. Further, when the love of God toward men is mentioned, it is not on a sentimental or emotional level. God’s love is associated with purpose, not mere attraction.

- “For God so loved the world, that he gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life ” (John 3:16).

- “But God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us ” (Rom 5:8).

- “Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver ” (2 Cor 9:7).

- “But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: That in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:4-7).

- “Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace ” (2 Thess 2:16).

- “But after that the kindness and love of God our Savior toward man appeared ” (Titus 3:4).

- “For whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth , and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth” (Heb 12:6).

- “Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God” (1 John 3:1).

- “In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent His only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through Him ” (1 John 4:9).
- “Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins ” (1 John 4:10).
- “ We love him, because He first loved us” (1 John 4:19).
- “And from Jesus Christ, who is the Faithful Witness, and the First Begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth. Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood, And hath made us kings and priests unto God and His Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen” (Rev 1:5-6).

Nowhere is God represented as desiring to be a part of our life, or earnestly wanting to bless us because He loves us so much . Thoughts pertaining to the love of God are crafted much more carefully than that. Men are never left with the thought that there is so much as a spark of Divine love or concern toward them that is not strictly because of Christ Jesus.

Further Development

Like Peter, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob could claim no personal power or holiness as the basis of the Divine favor they experienced. Abraham came from an idolatrous background (Josh 24:2). Isaac had a supernatural birth (Gen 17:15-19; 21:12), and was the Divinely determined seed (Gal 4:28). Jacob also was conceived by Divine intervention (Gen 25:21), and was chosen above his older twin brother Esau before they were born (Gen 25:22-23; Mal 1:2-3; Rom 9:11-13).

Nowhere is God represented as desiring to be a part of our life, or earnestly wanting to bless us because He loves us so much. Thoughts pertaining to the love of God are crafted much more carefully than that. Men are never left with the thought that there is so much as a spark of Divine love or concern toward them that is not strictly because of Christ Jesus.

Peter and John were also chosen by Jesus. The Lord Himself reminded them that they did not choose Him. “ Ye have not chosen Me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you , that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in My name, He may give it you” (John 15:16).

Ultimately, all blessing is traced back to the Son of God. Even in the case of Abraham, it was his Seed, Christ Jesus, who was the cause for Divine beneficence. For those who are in Christ, Jesus Himself is the reason for them being received and blessed. Nothing that they received through their flesh and blood lineage – Adam – brought the blessing to them! Contrary to the statements of some, the secret to blessing is not obedience, and it is not praise. It is Jesus Himself, and our only association with Him is our faith – and even it came from God , as Peter will affirm in this very passage.

THE GOD OF OUR FATHERS

“ . . . the God of our fathers . . . ” Other versions read, “the God of our ancestors ,” NRSV “the God of our forefathers ,” NET “the God of all our ancestors ,” NLT “ and of all our ancestors,” LIVING and “ the same God of all our ancestors.” IE

Here, the expression “our fathers” is not a repetition of “Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.” This rather refers to the mass of the Israelites who had trusted in God. The word “fathers” is frequently used in this sense.

- “But after that our fathers had provoked the God of heaven unto wrath, he gave them into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this house, and carried the people away into Babylon” (Ezra 5:12).

- “ Our fathers understood not thy wonders in Egypt; they remembered not the multitude of thy mercies; but provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea” (Psa 106:7).

- “ Our fathers did eat manna in the desert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat” (John 6:31).

- “ Our fathers had the tabernacle of witness in the wilderness, as he had appointed, speaking unto Moses, that he should make it according to the fashion that he had seen” (Acts 7:44).

- “And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, after that Paul had spoken one word, Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the prophet unto our fathers , Saying, Go unto this people, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and not perceive” (Acts 28:25-26).

- “Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, how that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea” (1 Cor 10:1).

Why Did Peter Speak In This Manner?

Peter does not speak of the God of the human race, or all men, although He is “the Father of spirits” (Heb 12:9) and “the God of all flesh” (Jer 32:27). By referring to the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and the God of our fathers, Peter is distinguishing the God who had revealed Himself to a selected, or chosen, people . He is also distinguishing Him from the idols of the nations.

God had spoken and revealed Himself to other people – Abimelech (Gen 20:3-6), Balaam (Num 22:20), Nebuchadnezzar (Dan 2:45), Cyrus (2 Chron 36:23), etc. But He was not the God of Abimelech, or of Balaam, or of Nebuchadnezzar, or of Cyrus. His covenant of blessing was not through them, and they were not in the Messianic lineage. God was, in a very special sense, “the God of the Hebrews” (Ex 3:16; 5:3; ; 7:16; 9:1,13; 10:3), and “the God of Israel” (Josh 7:13; Judges 4:6; 1 Sam 1:17; 1 Kgs 1:13; Psa41:13).

Peter is going to affirm that the same God who called Abraham, and confirmed His covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, is the God who sent and raised Jesus of Nazareth from the dead.

Something to Be Learned

There is a lesson to be learned here concerning our perspective of Scripture. Some, who are unlearned, speak of the God of the Old Testament, and the God of the New Testament. Even those who acknowledge One God often represent Him as being quite different prior to and during the Old Covenant – more harsh and less tolerant than He is in this day of salvation.

All of this is nothing more than fleshly nonsense, borne out of a gross ignorance of God Himself. Technically, the New Covenant is really the oldest one, having been promised to Abraham. Thus Paul writes, “Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ , the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after , cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect” (Gal 3:16-17). The covenant that is fulfilled in Christ is said to be before the Law, which was given four hundred and thirty years later at Mount Sinai. The Law was a sort of interlude between the promise of salvation through the Seed of Abraham and its actual fulfilment. Its purpose was to clearly identify sin, convincing men of both its nature and dominance. In this way, it prepare the people for a Savior. In fact, the Gospel is said to have been “preached . . . unto Abraham” (Gal 3:8).

He does not refer to the creation of “the worlds” (Heb 1:2; 11:3). He does not refer to the creation of man (Gen 2:7). He does not refer to the institution of marriage (Gen 1:27; 5:2). He does not refer to the giving of the Law (Ex 20:1-17). He does not even refer to the occupation of the promised land by Israel (Josh 21:43). All of these were magnificent works, but none of them were sufficient to redeem men.

Some might imagine that the Law was meaningless, and completely disassociated from the promise made to Abraham. Thus it is written, “Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made . . . Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law . . . But the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe” (Gal 3:19-22).

Now Peter will masterfully declare Jesus Christ to be the One through whom the promises of God are fulfilled, and in whom faith must be placed. This Anointed One has been approved by the God of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, the fathers, and all Israel – the same God they professed to follow..

GOD HATH GLORIFIED HIS SON

“ 13b . . . hath glorified His Son Jesus.”

Having established the God of whom he is speaking, Peter now declares His work. He does not refer to the creation of “the worlds” (Heb 1:2; 11:3). He does not refer to the creation of man (Gen 2:7). He does not refer to the institution of marriage (Gen 1:27; 5:2). He does not refer to the giving of the Law (Ex 20:1-17). He does not even refer to the occupation of the promised land by Israel (Josh 21:43). All of these were magnificent works, but none of them were sufficient to redeem men. Hence, such things cannot be the emphasis of preaching, for none of them is Gospel, and the Gospel is “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16). Suffice it to say, any preaching or teaching that emphasizes the world, man, marriage, the keeping of the Law, or blessedness in this world cannot possibly be true.

HATH GLORIFIED

“ . . . hath glorified . . .” Other versions read, “has given glory,” ASV “has brought glory,” NLT “did glorify,” YLT “He gave glory,” IE “has conferred this honor,” WEYMOUTH “has glorified . . . [doing Him this honor],” AMPLIFIED “who has done this thing to honor,” PHILLIPS and “has given Divine glory.” GNB

If this word was used to describe anyone other than Jesus, I would carry the matter no further. However, since this is descriptive of Jesus, it seems to me that we must extend ourselves to be sure we hold a God-honoring view of the term.

Peter refers to something that God has already accomplished – “hath,” or “given,” ASV “did,” YLT or “conferred,” WEYMOUTH This not something God observed, but something He executed. It was not a joint enterprise, but something achieved by His “own arm” (Isa 63:5).

The accomplishment was glorification – a Person was “glorified.” The word “glorified” comes from the Greek word evdo,xasen (the aorist active tense of doxa,zw – that is, it is an action that has already been accomplished . The word itself means “to praise, extol, magnify . . . to honor, hold in honor . . . restore to a state of glory,” THAYER “as giving or sharing a high status,” FRIBERG “magnify,” LEH and “to clothe in splendor.” GINGRICH

This is not something man does. It is the work of God Himself. It is not glory after the manner of men, who cannot actually invest anyone with glory. It is not mere talk, but the conferment of a high status that can be confirmed by a public showing.

HIS SON JESUS

“ . . . His Son Jesus.” Other versions read, “His servant Jesus,” NKJV “His child Jesus,” YLT and “to Jesus,” His Servant and Son Jesus.” AMPLIFIED

“Son” Versus “Servant”

Nearly all later translations say “Servant” instead of “Son” NKJV, NASB, NIV, NRSV, RSV, ASV, BBE, CSB DARBY, ERV, ESV, GWN, NAB, NAS, NAU, NET, NIB, NJB, NLT, LIVING, IE, WEYMOUTH, ISV, WILLIAMS, and MONTGOMERY. Two of the literal translations (Young’s Literal and Literal Translation of the Bible) translate the word “child.” The Amplified Bible translates it “Servant and Son.”

The Greek word translated “Son” and “servant” is common in all Greek manuscripts. It is pais (pie-dah), and is in the masculine gender. Its lexical meaning is “a child,” with the second usage “servant, slave,” THAYER “in reference to age, child; in reference to descent son, in reference to social position servant, slave,” FRIBERG “servant, slave, child,” UBS “a young person,” LOUW-NIDA “in relation to Descent, a son, in Relation to age, a child, in relation to Condition, a slave, servant,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “child (in relation to parents,” LEH and “boy, son, but even more probable is servant, slave.” GINGRICH

It is clear from the lexical definitions that the meaning of the word is not cut and dried. It is used in a number of differing ways to denote age, descent, and social status. If this word was used to describe anyone other than Jesus, I would carry the matter no further. However, since this is descriptive of Jesus, it seems to me that we must extend ourselves to be sure we hold a God-honoring view of the term.

The complicating factor is the words modified by this expression: “ His Son (Servant) JESUS .”

First, this precise Greek word is used five times in Scripture. Luke 9:42 (“child,” KJV “boy” NASB), Acts 3:13 (“Son,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child” YLT), Acts 3:26 (“Son,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child.” YLT), Acts 4:27 (“Child,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child.” DOUAY), and Acts 20:12 (“young man” named Eutychus, “lad,” ASV “youth,” DOUAY “boy.” NASB

There can be no question about Jesus being God’s Servant. That is how Isaiah spoke of the coming Messiah (Isa 42:1; 49:5-7; 50:10; 52:13; 53:11). Zechariah also prophesied of the Messiah as God’s “Servant the Branch” (Zech 3:8). Matthew specifically confirms Jesus is the “Servant” of Isaiah’s prophecy (Matt 12:16). None of these prophecies had to do with the exaltation or glorification of Jesus. They rather had to do with Him carrying out God’s commission in the earth – accomplishing salvation.

I affirm that, from a technical point of view, Jesus was exalted in the capacity of the Son of God. In this capacity He is the Foundation upon which the church is Built (Matt 16:16-18; 1 Cor 3:11). Our faith involves a persuasion that Jesus is “the Son of God” (John 20:21; Acts 8:37; 1 John 5:5). The text loses nothing by retaining the expression “He Hath glorified His Son Jesus.” KJV, DOUAY, GENEVA, MRD, PNT, RWB, TNT, WEB, BISHOP’S BIBLE, MKJV

The Glorification

The glorification of Jesus involved His exaltation above all others, and the conferment of “all power in heaven and earth” (Matt 28:18). This all has to do with Him being a Man – the “Son of God.” He is, beyond all question, the preeminent Man through whom salvation is realized. Various expressions of that exaltation are as follows.

- He is “by the right hand of God exalted” (Acts 2:33).
- God has exalted Him “with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31).
- God has “set Him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church” (Eph 1:20-22).
- God has “highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name” (Phil 2:9).
- Jesus Has “gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:22).

Thus it is stated that God “hath glorified His Son Jesus” (Acts 3:13). That is, now he is clearly “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). He is no longer in a humbled state, as He was in this world, nor is He in the “form of a servant” (Phil 2:7-8). He is no longer “in all points tempted as we are” (Heb 4:15).

This glorification of Jesus took place after His death and resurrection. Jesus prayed about this in the garden prior to His betrayal. “These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify Thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify Thee . . . And now, O Father, glorify Thou Me with Thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was” (John 17:1,5).

Just as Christ’s entrance into the world as a man concealed who He really was, so His glorification reveals who He really is.

Now, Peter will contrast what God has done with Jesus with what the Jews did to Him. As we would expect, he will do so in a powerful and uncompromising manner. His words will take the form of an affirmation.

YOU DELIVERED AND DENIED HIM

“ 13c . . . whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.”

What will religious men who reject Christ do when given the license to do so? With whom will they form an alliance? How far will they go in their opposition to Jesus? Man may speculate about this matter, but there certainly is no need to do so. God has given us the account of what men will do to Jesus when all restraint is removed.

YOU DELIVERED UP

“ . . . whom ye delivered up . . .” Other versions read, “You handed Him over,” NIV “whom you handed over,” NRSV “whom you gave up,” BBE “whom you indeed delivered up,” DOUAY “you delivered over,” ESV “whom ye betrayed,” GENEVA and “you handed Jesus over.” IE

When we read of Jesus praying, “Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do” (Lk 23:34), we must take care not to form a false conclusion. This does not mean our Lord was indifferent to what the covenanted people were doing. His desire for the Father to forgive them was not the expression of a sentimental attitude. Rather, it was the result of His keen awareness of God’s covenant to them, when He will “take away their sins” (Rom 11:27).

Thus Peter, speaking again while filled with the Spirit, reminds the people that they had delivered up Jesus to the State – to take His life as though He was a criminal instead of a Savior. Therefore it is written, “And when they had bound Him, they led Him away, and delivered Him to Pontius Pilate the governor” (Matt 27:2). Verily, Isaiah had spoken the truth concerning them: “He hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him” (Isa 53:2).

If you wonder what sin can move a people to do, we have a sterling example of such conduct in the Jews handing Jesus over to Pilate.

The zeal with which the Jews carried out their hatred against Jesus is remarkable to consider. Their efforts extended throughout the night, and well into the next day. A brief outline of that period is provided in the box below.

JEWISH OFFICERS ARREST HIM IN GETHSEMANE

Matt 26:47-56

BOUND AND LED TO ANNAS

John 18:12-13

ANNAS SENDS HIM TO CAIAPHAS

John 18:24

EXAMINED BEFORE CAIAPHAS ALL NIGHT

(Matt 26:57-75; Mk 14:53-72; Lk 22:54-62; John 18:13-21; 24-27)

TRIED BY THE JEWISH COUNCIL

Lk 22:66-71

BOUND AND LED TO PILATE

Matt 27:1–2, 11-14; Mk 15:1-5; Lk 23:1-5; John 18:28-38.

PILATE ORDERS HIM SENT TO HEROD

Lk 23:6-11

HEROD, SENDS HIM BACK TO PILATE

Luke 23:12-13

TRIED BY PILATE

Matt 27:15-26; Mk 15:6-15; Lk 23:13-25; John 18:39-19:16

Ponder what the Jews themselves did with and to Jesus before they delivered Him to Pilate. Their actions were involved in delivering Him up.

- They came to arrest Him, armed with swords and clubs (Matt 26:47).
- They “laid their hands on Jesus, and took Him” (Matt 26:50).

- They bound Him and took Him to Annas (John 18:12).
- They “sought false witness against Jesus, to put Him to death” (Matt 26:59).
- Many volunteered, lying about Jesus, yet they could not agree in their lies (Mk 14:56).
- When Jesus declared His words had been public, an officer struck Him (John 18:22).
- They “spit in His face, buffeted Him” and “smote Him with the palms of their hands” (Matt 26:57).
- They “blindfolded Him” (Lk 22:64).
- They challenged Him to prophesy who had struck Him (Matt 26:68).
- They spoke “many other things blasphemously” against Him (Lk 22:65).
- They again bound Him and led Him to Pilate (Matt 27:2).
- When taking Him to Pilate “they themselves went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled; but that they might eat the passover” (John 18:28).

Do you wonder what rejecting Jesus can lead a person to do? Ponder to what extent people – religious people – will go to justify their rejection of Jesus! When Peter charged the people with delivering up Jesus, all of these actions were covered. That included their aggressive arrest of Jesus, even after the arresting multitude drew back and fell on the ground after hearing Jesus say, “I am He!” (John 18:4-6).

These were the people who fulfilled the words of the prophet Isaiah: “I gave My back to the smiters, and My cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not My face from shame and spitting” (Isa 50:6).

YOU DENIED HIM IN THE PRESENCE OF PILATE

“ . . . and denied Him in the presence of Pilate . . .” Other versions read, “ disowned in the presence of Pilate,” NASB “ disowned Him before Pilate,” NIV “ rejected in the presence of Pilate,” NRSV “denied before the face of Pilate,” ASV “” turning your backs on Him,” BBE “rejected Him in Pilate’s presence,” GWN “ denied and rejected and disowned in the presence of Pilate,” AMPLIFIED and “denied [or, disowned] Him to [the] face of [fig., in the presence of] Pilate.” ALT

The actions of the Jews before Pilate were utterly despicable. They revealed how hardened the people were in hearts, and how calloused their consciences had become.

The actions of the Jews before Pilate were utterly despicable. They revealed how hardened the people were in hearts, and how calloused their consciences had become.

- The chief priests and elders accused Jesus “of many things” before Pilate (Mk 15:3).
- They charged Jesus with “perverting the nation” (Lk 23:2a).
- They said had found Jesus “forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that He Himself is king” (Lk 23:2).
- They said He stirred up the people, teaching throughout Jewry, beginning at Galilee to the place occupied by Pilate (Lk 23:5).
- They charged him with being “a malefactor,” or evildoer, NKJV or criminal.” NIV
- They said it was not lawful for them to put a man to death, demanding that Pilate do so (John 18:31).

In all of this, Pilate was unmoved, for “he knew that for envy they had delivered Him up” (Matt 27:18; Mk 15:10). After a preliminary hearing Pilate said, “I find no fault in this man” (Lk 23:4).

Yet, the Jews, filled with hatred, and intent on ridding themselves of Jesus, pressed Pilate in their quest to have Jesus killed.

HE WAS DETERMINED TO LET HIM GO

“ . . . when he was determined to let him go.” Other versions read, “when he had decided to release Him,” NASB “though he had decided to let Him go,” NIV “when Pilate had made the decision to let him go free,” BBE “when he had judged that He should be let go,” DARBY “when he would have justified Him and set Him free,” MRD “after he had given his verdict to release Him,” NJB “when he had judged Him to be loosed,” PNT “he having given judgment to release Him,” YLT and “despite Pilate’s determination to release Him.” LIVING

Pilate’s words on this matter were strong and to the point. “Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: No, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. I will therefore chastise him, and release him” (Luke 23:16). He had, then, made a determination to release Jesus, not being able to find any cause of death in Him. All of this was accentuated by a special message Pilate had received from his wife: “Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him” (Matt 27:19).

The Jew’s response is recorded, and it is dreadful to consider, for it reveals what a person in the grip of Satan can do. “And they cried out at once saying, Away with this man!” (Matt 27:18).

Today, if the real Jesus were being made known – being preached to the people with discernment and power – perhaps some who presently appear to have confessed Him would really reject Him!

YOU DESIRED A MURDERER AND KILLED THE PRINCE OF LIFE

“ 14 But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; 15 And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses.”

Peter is unrelenting in pressing the guilt of his listeners upon them. He knows that if they are going to be extricated from their iniquity, they will have to be more intent than they were in their opposition to and killing of Jesus.

YOU DENIED THE HOLY ONE AND THE JUST ONE

Although they could not get any witnesses to make a legitimate charge against Jesus, and even though Pilate himself had affirmed he found no fault in Jesus, yet the people rejected Him. That is, they rejected Him because of who He said He was.

“But ye denied the Holy One and the Just . . .” Other versions read, “But you disowned the Holy and Righteous One,” NASB “You rejected the man who was holy and innocent,” GWN “But you rejected the Holy and Righteous One,” NET “It was you who accused the Holy and Upright One,” NJB “You didn’t want Him freed – this holy, righteous One,” LIVING “Jesus was holy and innocent, but you said you didn’t want Him,” IE and “But you denied and rejected and disowned the Pure and Holy, the Just and Blameless One.” AMPLIFIED

Although they could not get any witnesses to make a legitimate charge against Jesus, and even though Pilate himself had affirmed he found no fault in Jesus, yet the people rejected Him. That is, they rejected Him because of who He said He was. The High Priest had asked Him, “Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed?” (Mark 14:61). When Jesus responded, “I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven” (Mark 14:62), His words were rejected: “Then the high priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death” (Mark 14:63-64).

Now, before Pilate, when asked if they desired Jesus to be released, they rejected the offer saying, “Let Him be crucified” (Matt 27:22). When Pilate remonstrated, they insisted all the more: “And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified” (Matt 27:23). They “denied the Holy One and the Just One,” insisting that He was worthy of death. None could find any evil or sin in Jesus. Annas could not. Caiaphas could not. The Jewish council could not. The false witnesses could not. Herod could not. And now, Pilate does not. Yet, the people denied Jesus was holy and righteous.

YOU DESIRED A MURDERER

“ . . . and desired a murderer to be granted unto you . . .” Other versions read, “and asked for a murderer to be granted to you,” NASB “and asked that a murderer be released to you ,” NIV “and made request for a man of blood to be given to you,” BBE “ You asked to have a murderer given to you,” GWN “and demanded that a murderer should be released to you,” MRD “ Instead , you demanded the release of a murderer,” LIVING “ You told Pilate to give you a murderer instead of Jesus,” IE “you asked as a favor the release of a murderer ,” WEYMOUTH “you asked a murderer to be pardoned as a favor to you ,” WILLIAMS “and demanded [the pardon of] a murderer to be granted to you,” AMPLIFIED “and begged to be granted instead a man who was a murderer!” PHILLIPS and “and instead you asked Pilate to do you the favor of turning loose a murderer .” GNB

Pilate had made an effort to reach the sensitivity of the people. He knew it was the Passover, and that it was customary for the Jews to ask for the release of a Jewish prisoner at that time. It is written, “But ye have a custom, that I should release unto you one at the passover: will ye therefore that I release unto you the King of the Jews?” (John 18:39). Matthew tells us that Pilate was accustomed to release a prisoner at this particular time, and would therefore do so. “Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would” (Matt 27:15). Luke says, “For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast” (Luke 23:17). This was the politically expedient thing to do.

At that time, a well-known Jewish prisoner was being held – “a notable prisoner, called Barabbas” (Matt 27:16). He had caused a political insurrection in the city, and had even committed murder: “Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison” (Luke 23:19). We are also told, “Now Barabbas was a robber” (John 18:40).

In an effort to reach the people, Pilate first abused Jesus, then presented Him to the people in an effort to touch their sympathy. “Then Pilate therefore took Jesus, and scourged him. And the soldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on His head , and they put on Him a purple robe, and said, Hail, King of the Jews! and they smote Him with their hands . Pilate therefore went forth again, and saith unto them, Behold, I bring Him forth to you, that ye may know that I find no fault in Him . Then came Jesus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate saith unto them, Behold the man! ” (John 19:1-5).

I do not know precisely how the Lord appeared before the people, but it must not have been a comely sight, for He had been “scourged,” or “flogged,” NIV had been pummeled, and had a crown of thorns pushed upon His head. Yet, “When the chief priests therefore and officers saw Him, they cried out, saying, Crucify Him, crucify Him” (John 19:6). As for Barabbas the insurrectionist, murderer, and thief, they “cried out all at once, saying, Away with this Man, and release unto us Barabbas” (Luke 23:18). Matthew says of this, “When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it. Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children” (Matt 27:24-25).

When Pilate told the people, “Take ye Him, and crucify Him: for I find no fault in Him” (John 19:6), the people replied, “We have a law, and by our law He ought to die, because He made himself the Son of God” (John 19:7). Upon hearing this, Pilate “was the more afraid.” Again he went into the judgment hall and examined Jesus asking Jesus where He came from. After Jesus failed to reply, Pilate asked Jesus if He knew who Pilate was, and of the power he possessed. Jesus replied, “Thou couldst have no power at all against Me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered Me unto thee hath the greater sin” (John 19:9-11).

Pilate then made a valiant effort to release Jesus, leaving no stone unturned – at least as far as he was concerned. However, his efforts were met with the reply of the people, “If thou let this man go, thou art not Caesar's friend: whosoever maketh himself a king speaketh against Caesar” (John 19:12).

Philosophically, one might reason that it was impossible to take the life of the “Prince of life” – the One who Himself is the Author of life. However, when we consider that Jesus laid down His life of Himself, and that He came into the world to “give His life a ransom for many,” it becomes apparent why such a thing was possible.

Pilate then brought Jesus forth, and himself sat down in “the judgment seat,” where final determinations were made. Knowing it was the time of the Passover, he cried out to the people, “Behold your king!” The people replied, “Away with Him, away with Him, crucify Him!” Refusing to yield, Pilate said, “Shall I crucify your king?” With the venom of asps dripping from their lips the people responded, “We have no king but Caesar.” Then Pilate delivered Him unto them “to be crucified” (John 18:13-16).

You see, then, with what determination the people delivered Jesus to Pilate and demanded His death. There was nothing casual about their efforts. They barged past obstacle and obstacle, insisting that Jesus was worthy of death, and should therefore die.

YOU KILLED THE PRINCE OF LIFE

“ . . . And killed the Prince of life . . .” Other versions read, “and put to death the Prince of life,” NASB “You killed the Author of life,” NIV “and put to death the Lord of life,” BBE “and you killed the Source of life,” CSB “You killed the Originator of life,” NET “and so, you killed the One who gives life,” IE “The Pioneer of life you put to death,” MONTGOMERY “but you killed the very Source (the Author) of life,” AMPLIFIED and “You killed the One who leads to life.” GNB

Here is the ultimate murder – killing “the Prince of life.” The word “Prince” has a lexical meaning of, “author . . . the chief leader . . . the one who takes the lead,” THAYER “the one who causes something to begin, originator, founder, initiator,” FRIBERG “beginning, originating a thing, a prince, chief, a first cause, originator,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “leader, ruler, prince, or originator, founder,” GINGRICH

The antithesis of their request is staggering: they requested Pilate to release a murderer, and killed the Prince of life! Jesus is, indeed, the Source of life. Thus we read, “In Him was life; and the life was the light of men” (John 1:4). And again, “For the bread of God is He which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world ” (John 6:33). Barabbas took away life, Jesus gives it – and the Jews chose Barabbas over Jesus! By way of contrast, Jesus said, “For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them” (Luke 9:56). Again He said, “The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life , and that they might have it more abundantly” (John 10:10). By comparison Barabbas was both a thief and a killer – yet the Jews preferred him to Jesus!

Philosophically, one might reason that it was impossible to take the life of the “Prince of life” – the One who Himself is the Author of life. However, when we consider that Jesus laid down His life of Himself (John 10:17), and that He came into the world to “give His life a ransom for many” (Matt 10:28; Mk 10:45), it becomes apparent why such a thing was possible.

Yet, this circumstance did not absolve its perpetrators from their guilt. If people are wicked enough to be used to carry out such deeds, none of them can say to God, “Why hast Thou made me thus?” (Rom 9:20). Indeed, these people could not charge that God made them do this – even though it was because of God’s determinate counsel and foreknowledge that Jesus was delivered up (Acts 2:23). God used them because they were wicked – they were not wicked because God used them. In fact, they proved to be worse than Judas, who himself was a “devil” (John 6:70). He confessed, “I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood” (Matt 27:4) – and that was before Jesus died! But these people made no such confession. In fact, they extended themselves to kill “the Prince of life,” barging over repeated obstacles that were thrown in their path.

The confirmation of resurrection was the life that followed. Although none of the Apostles, or anyone else, witnessed the resurrection itself, they had seen, talked with, and handled the risen Christ.

Peter will make no room for them making a mistake, or acting hastily. They did the deed in ignorance, but they did not do it unwillingly. They stooped beneath Pilate, who acknowledged He could find no fault in Him. But their conscience was not pricked by his acknowledgment. Instead, they trumped up lies against Jesus, and hurled false accusations at Him. Now, Peter faces them with their willing and intentional deed, for sin must be acknowledged before it can be forgiven!

GOD RAISED HIM FROM THE DEAD

“ . . . whom God hath raised from the dead . . . ” Other versions read, “whom God gave back from the dead,” BBE “But God brought him back to life,” GWN “God, however , raised him from the dead,” NJB “whom God did raise out of the dead ,” YLT and “but God raised Him from death .” IE

From the standpoint of those hearing Peter, Christ’s resurrection was a Divine reversal of their verdict, which proved they were wrong. From Christ’s standpoint, His resurrection was the confirmation that God had received His atoning death as a just basis for the remission of sins. From our viewpoint, His resurrection validates that he is, in fact, the Son of God with power.

“The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob” is the One who raised Jesus from the dead. Although the people had claimed identity with the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, they had developed and maintained an entirely different view of Jesus of Nazareth than He did . God had publicly “approved” of Jesus by means of “miracles, signs, and wonders” (2:22). Yet, in the hardness of their hearts, they had not only rejected Jesus, but “killed Him.” Now, by raising Jesus from the dead, God has exposed their folly, and condemned their malicious deed.

WE ARE WITNESSES

“ . . . whereof we are witnesses.” Other versions read, “ of which we are witnesses,” NKJV “ a fact to which we are witnesses,” NASB “to this we are witnesses,” NRSV “and we are witnesses of fact,” NLT “And John and I are witnesses of this fact, for after you killed Him we saw Him alive,” LIVING “We saw this with our own eyes,” IE and “a fact of which we are eye-witnesses.” PHILLIPS

The confirmation of resurrection was the life that followed. Although none of the Apostles, or anyone else, witnessed the resurrection itself, they had seen, talked with, and handled the risen Christ. Paul gives an account of the appearances of Christ following His resurrection. “And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures: and that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve: after that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once; of whom the greater part remain unto this present, but some are fallen asleep. After that, he was seen of James; then of all the apostles. And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time” (1 Cor 15:4-8). Later, Peter will give an account of Christ’s post-resurrection appearances to Cornelius and his household: “Him God raised up the third day, and showed Him openly; Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us, who did eat and drink with Him after He rose from the dead” (Acts 10:40-41).

With such a host of witnesses, it would be futile to affirm that Jesus had not risen from the dead. Literally hundreds of eye witnesses would strike down such an affirmation.

An Application

There is a principle to be seen here. The confirmation of Christ’s resurrection was found in His post-resurrection life, not in the witness of the resurrection itself. It is the same with those who are “risen with Christ” (Col 3:1). No man actually witnesses this resurrection “with Christ.” The proof is found in the life that follows.

This is the reasoning employed in the sixth chapter of Romans. Being raised with Christ takes place in our baptism, but baptism itself is not the proof of that resurrection. The life that follows will confirm or deny the reality of being “risen with Christ” (Colo 3:1).

- “Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life” (Rom 6:4).
- “Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with Him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin” (Rom 6:6).
- “For he that is dead is freed from sin” (Rom 6:7).
- “Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with Him” (Rom 6:8).
- “Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord” (Rom 6:11).
- “Let not sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof” (Rom 6:12).

A person or a church that lacks holiness, or is not obviously living to the Lord, should make no mention of baptism. Such people are a living contradiction of baptism, bearing no evidence that they have been raised with Christ. An unholy church contradicts the very purpose of God (Eph 5:27), and therefore can make no claim to having the life of Christ!

“Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God ” (Rom 6:13).

- “Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness ” (Rom 6:18).
- “I speak after the manner of men because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness ” (Rom 6:19).
- “But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life ” (Rom 6:22).

A person or a church that lacks holiness, or is not obviously living to the Lord, should make no mention of baptism. Such people are a living contradiction of baptism, bearing no evidence that they have been raised with Christ. An unholy church contradicts the very purpose of God (Eph 5:27), and therefore can make no claim to having the life of Christ! Ungodliness, worldliness, carnality, and the likes, confirm the ABSENCE of life, not its presence. These are attributes of death, not life. They are the result of rejecting Christ, not accepting Him.

Preferences

It also ought to be noted that when men have preferences other than Christ Himself, they will eventually oppose Christ. That opposition has no known boundaries. In our text, it drove men to kill “the Prince of life.”

Later in this book, this relentless opposition will compel men to persecute and even kill the messengers sent out by Jesus as well.

FAITH, FAITH, AND FAITH

“ 16 And His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all.”

With great strength Peter presses Jesus Christ upon the people. He will not be diverted to other considerations. They “killed the Prince of life,” and God raised Him up. Now, with great insight and power, Peter will show the relationship of Jesus Christ to the miracle the people have just witnessed. As he speaks to them, the proof, or evidence, of the power of Christ is standing with himself and John – a former lame beggar, who was well known to the multitude.

HIS NAME

“And His name . . .” Other versions read, “in the name of Jesus,” NIV “the one named Jesus,” GWN “in Jesus’ name,” NET “Jesus’ name,” LIVING “the authority of Jesus,” IE “It is His name,” WEYMOUTH “It is the name of this same Jesus,” PHILLIPS and “it is the power of His name.” GNB

I do not know why men wax so academic when they refer to “the name of Jesus.” For some, this refers to a formula, as though there was some mystical power released when the name is mentioned. For others, it speaks of authority, like “in the name of the king.” It is true that there is an element of truth in these approaches, but it certainly comes far short of the potency that is proclaimed.

“The name of Jesus” speaks of His Person – more specifically, of the recognition of His Person. If the person does not actually bear the qualities that are declared in “the name,” there is no power in the utterance of that name. Therefore we read of the name of Jesus, “Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given Him a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father” (Phil 2:9-11). This is a name that God Himself has “given” to Jesus. This is not a reference to His birth, when His name was “called Jesus: for He shall save His people from their sins” (Matt 1:21). The Philippian text refers to the exaltation of Jesus, after He had taken away the sins of the world.

There was a sense in which personalities bowed to Jesus even when He was enfleshed among men. An unclean spirit inhabiting a man in a local synagogue once cried out, “Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God” (Mark 1:24). That spirit recognized who Jesus was, although men did not. However, now that Jesus has been exalted, wherever men know they are being exposed to Him, they bow to Him. Ultimately, “every eye shall see Him” (Rev 1:7), and thus “every knee shall bow” before Him (Rom 14:11).

When Jesus was on the earth, He was veiled by the flesh – concealed beneath a body of flesh and blood. However, this is not the case now. The only reason people cannot perceive Jesus now is that He has not yet “appeared.” When He made an appearance to Saul of Tarsus, he bowed (Acts 9:6)! When He made an appearance to Stephen as he was being stoned to death, Stephen asked Him to receive his spirit (Acts 7:59).

Jesus really is invested with “all power in heaven and earth” (Matt 28:18). Angels, authorities, and powers have really been made subject to Him (1 Pet 3:22). The government has really been placed upon His shoulder, and He is really reigning until His enemies are openly under His feet (Isa 9:6; 1 Cor 15:25).

The exaltation of Jesus is not merely part of a creedal statement. He has been exalted, and is governing the Kingdom. Wherever He works, there are results. By referring to “His name,” Peter is affirming that the risen and exalted Christ has been involved in the healing of this man. He has worked in the presence of these people, and no adversarial power could hinder or neutralize that work.

FAITH IN HIS NAME

“ . . . through faith in His name . . .” Other versions read, “ on the basis of faith in His name,” NASB “ by faith in the name,” NIV “by faith in His name,” NRSV “in the faith of His name,” DOUAY “we believe in the One,” GWN “by the faith in His name,” MRD “through faith in Him,” NJB “on the faith of His name,” YLT “this happened because we trusted in the power of Jesus,” IE “faith in that name being the condition,” WEYMOUTH “on the condition of faith in His name,” WILLIAMS “ on the ground of faith in his name,” MONTGOMERY “ through and by faith in his name,” AMPLIFIED and “it is faith in that name.” PHILLIPS

“The name” is the capacity in which He has been revealed. To be precise, “the name” of Jesus is confirmed by “the record” God has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11). It is what God has said about Jesus that clearly defines Him. He has “given Him a name” by associating certain realities with Him. He has affirmed who Jesus is, and what He is doing. The following is representative of what God has revealed about Jesus.

- “For HE IS our peace, who hath made both one, and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us” (Eph 2:14).
- “. . . Christ is the head of the church : and HE IS the Savior of the body ” (Eph 5:23).
- “And HE IS before all things, and by Him all things consist ” (Col 1:17).

- “And HE IS the head of the body , the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things He might have the preeminence ” (Col 1:18).
- “For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, HE IS able to succor them that are tempted ” (Heb 2:18).
- “Wherefore HE IS able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).
- “But now hath He obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also HE IS the mediator of a better covenant , which was established upon better promises” (Heb 8:6).
- “And HE IS the propitiation for our sins : and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world” (1 John 2:2).
- “These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them: for HE IS Lord of lords, and King of kings : and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful” (Rev 17:14).

Faith in Jesus’ name is believing, trusting, and relying on what has been revealed of Him. Where dependence upon Jesus is not found, faith is not present. When men do not lean the weight of their souls upon Jesus, it is because they do not have faith in Him. This is the faith without which “it is impossible to please God” (Heb 11:6).

In this time of the New Covenant, if Jesus is not declared to the people, faith becomes impossible, for it comes by means of hearing the Gospel of Christ (Rom 1:14-17). If a Jesus is being held out to men that is defined by mere human thought, faith will not be possible. Faith – real faith – cannot possibly be in “another Jesus.” That kind of reliance – trust in “another Jesus” – is delusion , not faith. By its very nature, faith must rest on revelation, for it is the “ substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen (Heb 11:1).

Therefore, “faith in His name” is reliance upon the revelation of the exalted Christ. This revelation was brought to its peak when the Holy Spirit was “poured forth.” When He came, He did precisely what Jesus said He would.

- He taught them all things (John 14:26).
- He testified of Christ (John 15:26).
- He guided them into all truth (John 16:13a).
- Whatever He heard, He made known to them (John 16:13b).
- He showed them things to come (John 16:13c).
- He glorified Christ (John 16:14a).
- He received the things of Christ and gave them to the disciples (John 16:14b-15).

That is nothing less than a revelation of the exalted Christ, and Peter now speaks of the effects of having faith in the Christ who had been revealed to him.

HATH MADE THIS MAN STRONG

“ . . . hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know . . .” Other versions read, “which has strengthened this man whom you see and know,” NASB “this man whom ye see and know was made strong ,” NIV “has made this man strong, whom you see and have knowledge of ,” BBE “whom you have seen and known, hath His name strengthened ,” DOUAY “hath made this man sound , whom ye see, and know,” GENEVA “this man, whom you know, was healed , as all of you saw,” GWN “ He hath strengthened and cured this man , whom ye see and know,” MRD “has brought back the strength of this man whom you see here and who is well known to you,” NJB “this man was healed -- and you know how crippled he was before ,” NLT “has healed this man – and you know how lame he was before ,” LIVING “He was made completely well . . . You all saw it happen,” IE “has made this man whom you see and recognize well and strong ,” AMPLIFIED and “which has cured this man whom you see and recognize.” PHILLIPS

Peter is very specific in his utterance: “His name, through faith in His name.” It is the revealed Christ who has done this work, but He did through Peter and John’s faith in Him. That is, Jesus healed the man, but He did so by means of the faith that was found in Peter and John primarily, and the man himself secondarily.

This is the Jesus these people had “killed,” and now He has worked powerfully in their very presence. In this, Peter is giving glory to Jesus – identifying the Source of the miracle. On the surface, it looked as though Peter and John did the deed. Peter, however, affirms that Jesus Himself actually did the work through their faith.

While it is true that faith brings one into the unwavering belief of Scripture, faith itself is larger than that. To be more precise, faith involves believing and relying upon what God has revealed, or said. Thus Abraham had faith before the Bible was written, yet it rested upon what God had said to him.

THE FAITH WHICH IS BY HIM

“ . . . yea, the faith which is by Him . . . ” Other versions read, “Yes, the faith which comes through Him ,” NKJV/NASB/NIV “the faith that is through Jesus ,” NRSV “the faith which is through Jesus ,” RSV “So the faith that comes through Him ,” CSB “the faith that comes through it [the name],” NAB “even the faith that is through Him ,” YLT “faith given us from God ,” LIVING “the faith which He has given ,” WEYMOUTH “yes, faith inspired by Him,” WILLIAMS “[Yes] the faith which is through and by Him [Jesus],” AMPLIFIED and “and the faith which came through Him .” LITV

I must acknowledge that for years I did not see this wonderful expression. I had been taught by the group to whom I belonged that faith did not come from God – that it was simply believing the Bible. While it is true that faith brings one into the unwavering belief of Scripture, faith itself is larger than that. To be more precise, faith involves believing and relying upon what God has revealed, or said. Thus Abraham had faith before the Bible was written, yet it rested upon what God had said to him.

Further, there is a relying or trusting factor in faith – it is not simply giving assent to a matter, or acquiescing with it. Faith is not really faith until the person acts upon it, relying upon the integrity of God and the details of His revelation. If a person does not shape his life around what God has said, he has not really believed it. If he does not do what God has said, He has not believed God.

Because we are dealing with matters outside of the circumference of human experience, faith must be given to us. The reservoir of nature cannot yield faith, or cause us to believe. Knowing this, Peter refers to “the faith which is by Him” – that is, by Christ. The word “by” (faith which is BY Him) is translated from the Greek word δι (die), which is a form of the preposition δια, (dee-ah). There is no way that this word can be made to mean “in.” It does not speak of the object of faith, but of its Source, or the means through which faith is realized. The lexical meaning of this word is, “the Means or instrument by which anything is effected . . . of one who is the author of the action as well as its instrument, or of the efficient cause,” THAYER “of the intermediate agent of an action by, through, by agency of,” FRIBERG “through, by means of,” UBS “casual, through, by . . . of the agent,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “through (the agency of) (personal agent), by (originator of an action),” LEH and “of means, instrument, agency by means of, through, with—of means, instrument.” GINGRICH

But there is more to this than the lexical definition of a word. Doctrine cannot rest upon etymology, for, in the last analysis, that is a human science. Here I have provided the technical definition of the word to confirm that men of integrity and sound scientific approaches will never contradict the word of the Lord.

If faith is not of the flesh, or natural – or if faith delivers the perception of things unseen, enabling one to see the invisible God – it cannot possibly be the exercise of a natural or learned aptitude. It is not possible that faith is dispensed to every person naturally, and is then released by some act of the human will, as some affirm.

Although some of us – myself included – lived for a considerable time in Christ before realizing that faith came from Christ, Peter boldly announces it even before these people have believed. This was part of the Gospel that he preached. It was included in his explanation of the events that had taken place before the eyes of this people. Oh, how far the modern church has drifted from its original moorings! What was once confessed without inhibition must now be buttressed with all manner of doctrine and reasoning – and even then, it is frequently denied. This is another evidence that a “falling away” has, indeed, taken place (2 Thess 2:3). When things that are apparent in the Spirit must be taught, defended, and expounded to the church, a tragic condition exists!

The fact that faith comes to us from outside of ourselves and nature is frequently affirmed in Scripture.

- GIVEN TO BELIEVE. “For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on Him , but also to suffer for his sake” (Phil 1:29).

- BELIEVED THROUGH GRACE. “And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace ” (Acts 18:27).

- FAITH IS OBTAINED. “Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:1).

- FAITH WAS DELIVERED. “Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints ” (Jude 1:3).

- FAITH CAME TO US. “So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God” (Rom 10:17). “But before faith came , we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed” (Gal 3:23). “But after that faith is come , we are no longer under a schoolmaster” (Gal 3:25).

- FAITH IS FROM GOD AND THE LORD JESUS CHRIST. “Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ ” (Eph 6:23).

- FAITH AND SALVATION ARE NOT OF OURSELVES. “For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves : it is the gift of God” (Eph 2:8).

- BY JESUS WE BELIEVE IN GOD. “Who by him do believe in God , that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:21),

If faith is not of the flesh, or natural – or if faith delivers the perception of things unseen, enabling one to see the invisible God – it cannot possibly be the exercise of a natural or learned aptitude. It is not possible that faith is dispensed to every person naturally, and is then released by some act of the human will, as some affirm. Nor, indeed, is faith simply being convinced that a statement is true. Faith brings to the human spirit the reality of something inaccessible to any of the natural senses – “the evidence of things not seen.” Faith includes a fervent desire to possess what has been declared, and is accompanied by the restructuring of life that leads toward its obtainment – “the substance of things hoped for.”

It should be evident that something as effective as faith cannot be the product of human effort. If the things accomplished and appropriated by faith are themselves transcendent to nature, then the means of obtaining them (faith) cannot possibly have its genesis in nature. It is not possible for nature to produce a quality or aptitude that can obtain eternal things.

HATH GIVEN HIM PERFECT SOUNDNESS

“ . . . hath given him this perfect soundness . . .” Other versions read, “ perfect health ,” NASB “ complete healing ,” NIV “made him well ,” BBE “ complete soundness,” DARBY “perfect healing ,” LIVING “ completely well ,” IE “ sound and strong again,” WEYMOUTH “Has given the man this perfect soundness [of body] before all of you,” AMPLIFIED “perfect health and strength ,” PHILLIPS and “ wholeness .” EMTV

Just a few minutes before, this man was a helpless beggar that had to be carried to a gate of the Temple. Now there is not a flaw in him. His condition is perfect. His health is complete. He is thoroughly healed, with no remaining vestiges of the like-long lameness he had.

I have noticed over the years how few things of this sort are being reported. I do not doubt that their infrequency is one of the many results of a massive departure from the faith. The Spirit has spoken “expressly” concerning “the latter times,” that “some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils” (1 Tim 4:1). During such times faith is no longer present – for the departure is from “the faith.” As a result, there is no fellowship with Christ, and grace cannot be received. In that condition, of course, all manner of moral and spiritual imperfection will continue without interruption.

While the Lord is certainly able to give us perfect health, that work does not rank high in the priorities of His will. The reason is that bodily health, as wonderful as it is, is temporary. However, wherever it is found, it mirrors the spiritual health that is realized in Christ Jesus – like a “sound mind” (2 Tim 1:7), a “pure heart” (1 Pet 1:22), and a “good conscience” (1 Tim 1:5). Of course, there is also such a thing as a “single eye” (Matt 6:22), “holy hands” (1 Tim 2:8), and feet that are “shod with preparation of the Gospel of peace” (Eph 6:15). Such things portray an inner health that also comes from the Lord – a health in which the soul is healed (Psa 41:4). There is a spiritually deficient state in which the hands “hang down,” the knees are “feeble” (Heb 12:12), the mind is “double” (James 4:8), the conscience is “seared” (1 Tim 4:2), eyes are “full of adultery” (2 Pet 2:1), and hearing is “dull” (Heb 5:11). How we long for “perfect soundness” to be found in all those who wear the name of Jesus!

IN THE PRESENCE OF YOU ALL

“ . . . in the presence of you all.” Other versions read, “as you can all see,” NIV “before you all,” BBE “in front of you all,” CSB “in the sight of you all,” DOUAY “as all of you saw,” GWN “before your very eyes,” NLT “You all saw it happen,” IE “you all see,” WILLIAMS “before all of you,” AMPLIFIED and “in full view of you all.” PHILLIPS

As Paul said to Festus, who charged him with being “mad,” or out of his mind, NASB “this thing was not done in a corner” (Acts 26:26). The events of the day of Pentecost were public (2:1-12), and so was this miracle. Peter and John did not retire to the back room to exert the power with which they had been endued. When Jesus walked among men, He spoke and worked publicly (Mk 8:32; John 18:20). Boldly Jesus challenged His critics, “Which of you convinceth Me of sin?” (John 8:46).

Every work of Christ will stand the test of human scrutiny. The truth of God will stand up under the most vigorous examination. It is only the works and words of the devil and the flesh that cannot pass honest and thorough examination.

After telling the people that Jesus had been witnessed by them all, and that He had been approved before them all, Peter now affirms that the same Jesus they had “killed” had been raised from the dead, and had, through their faith, given this man “perfect soundness” in their presence.

Men must be brought to confront what the Lord has done in their presence. Holy things that cannot be accounted for by the flesh and natural aptitude must be traced back to their Divine Source, and Peter does not hesitate to do so.

THE EFFECTS OF IGNORANCE

“ 17 And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers.”

Peter now sets out to diagnose the people before him. He will identify why they took, crucified, and killed the Lord’s Christ. Then, much to their consternation, he will affirm that God worked through their ignorance for His own glory and their condemnation.

I WOT

“And now, brethren, I wot . . .” Other versions read, “I know,” NKJV “I am conscious,” BBE “I realize,” NLT “have known,” YLT and “Now of course I know.” PHILLIPS

This is an old English word that means the opposite of “unwittingly.” The English definition is “wist; witting . . . to know, come to know” MERRIAM-WEBSTER The Greek word employed here is oi=da (oi-da), which lexically means, “to perceive, notice, discover,” THAYER “know, understand, perceive,” UBS and “know . . . acquainted with . . . understand, recognize.” GINGRICH

This is not a rhetorical expression, said merely for effect – like casually dismissing something by saying, “I know, I know!” Peter is going to say what he sees, perceives, and understands.

Something To Be Seen

There is a vital Kingdom principle to be seen here. It was revealed in the ministries of John the Baptist, the Lord Jesus Himself, and the Apostles. Those who entered into the work of the Lord labored within the circumference of understanding.

- When many of the Pharisees and Sadducees came to John’s baptism, he said discerningly, “O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?” (Matt 3:7). He had an understanding of the circumstances, as well as his role in the work of the Lord, and what needed to be said.
- The Lord Jesus was always aware of what He was doing. It is said of Him, “as My Father hath taught Me, I speak these things” (John 8:28). It is also written, He “needed not that any should testify of man: for He knew what was in man” (John 2:25). He had an understanding of what He was to say, and of those to whom He said it.
- When Peter dealt with the matter of Ananias and Sapphira, he knew their condition and what needed to be done (Acts 5:3-10). When he confronted a crafty Simon, he knew his condition and what needed to be said and done (Acts 8:18-23).
- When Paul wrote his epistles, he understood what he was teaching (Eph 3:3-4,9). He also had an understanding of the circumstances that required a word from the Lord (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 3:1; 1 Thess 2:13; 2 Tim 1:4).

All of this, as well as our text, confirms that being inspired to speak, or being filled with the Spirit, does not bypass the understanding or powers of reason and discernment. The essential attribute of knowing God that is resident in the New Covenant (Jer 31:34; Heb 8:11), is also found in proper preaching and teaching.

Much of what is being said in the pulpits and Christian literature of the day is characterized by a personal ignorance of the ways of both God and man. The religious schools are filling their students with borrowed knowledge, and a staggering percentage of it is from the world. Their understanding of Scripture has been shaped by hermeneutics and linguistics rather than “wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). Their view of mankind is formed by psychiatrists and analysts rather than the Word of God. To assist professional preachers and teachers to continue their careers in a state of ignorance, there are a multitude of ready-made sermons and lessons that they can deliver without so much as a grain of discernment.

All of this might very well appear to be of little consequence, if it were not for accounts like the one before us. Here is an example of God working through a man. He does not simply cause words to flow out of his mouth independent of understanding – as when king Saul prophesied. It is said of king Saul, “behold he prophesied among the prophets . . . he prophesied in the midst of the house . . . he went on, and prophesied , until he came to Naioth in Ramah. And he stripped off his clothes also, and prophesied before Samuel in like manner, and lay down naked all that day and all that night” (1 Sam 10:11; 18:10; 19:23-24). You will note that the Holy Spirit did not move any man to write a single word of Saul’s prophecies. His understanding did not accompany them, and thus their content remains unknown. Neither, indeed, was he laboring together with God.

Suffice it to say, those who speak for God must have a grasp of the real situation, and be able to deliver words from God that are appropriate to that situation. This will be lived out in our text, and it is imperative that we be able to perceive it.

Now, in Christ Jesus, the manner of the Kingdom is quite different. The people are reconciled to God and His Holy Spirit is resident in them. The New Covenant provides access to God (Rom 5:2; Eph 2:18), learning from Christ (Eph 4:20-21; 1 John 5:20), and the acquisition of knowledge, wisdom, and spiritual understanding (Col 1:9). We also have the Scriptures, which are able to make us “wise unto salvation” (2 Tim 3:15). In view of these realities, it is inexcusable for men to take it upon themselves to preach or teach without understanding. Such persons need to be consigned to the “room of the unlearned” until such time as they can speak properly (1 Cor 14:16).

Much of the miserable condition of the modern church is directly owing to the lack of discerning preaching and teaching that is found within it. Until this situation is corrected – if it is even correctable – the modern church will continue in an ignorant and dead state.

Suffice it to say, those who speak for God must have a grasp of the real situation, and be able to deliver words from God that are appropriate to that situation. This will be lived out in our text, and it is imperative that we be able to perceive it.

THROUGH IGNORANCE YOU DID IT

“ . . . that through ignorance ye did it . . .” Other versions read, “you did it in ignorance ,” NKJV “you acted in ignorance,” NASB “you did this . . . without knowledge ,” BBE “you didn’t know what you were doing,” GWN “through misapprehensions ye did this,” MRD “neither you . . . had any idea what you were really doing,” NJB “you acted in ignorance [not aware of what you were doing],” AMPLIFIED “you had no idea what you were doing,” PHILLIPS “was due to your ignorance ,” GNB and “acted according to ignorance.” LITV

The world has a saying: “What you don’t know won’t hurt you.” It is a foolish saying that imagines that oppositions not obviously aimed at you, and matters in which you are not seemingly involved, really have no impact upon you. Hence, they are things you really do not need to understand. Thus, imagining that not knowing about such things is actually an advantage, the world also says, “ignorance is bliss.” Such people imagine that ignorance is docile, indifferent, and non-disruptive.

Here, however, we see the extent to which ignorance will drive a person. You may remember that Jesus, while on the cross, prayed “Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do” (Luke 23:34). One time, God sent lions among the cities of Samaria, that killed them because they did not know the manner of God. “And so it was at the beginning of their dwelling there, that they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent lions among them, which slew some of them . . . therefore He hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them, because they know not the manner of the God of the land ” (2 Kgs 17:26). Once Jeremiah said of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, “Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God ” (Jer 5:4). Amos spoke of wayward Israel as those who “ know not to do right” (Amos 3:10). Micah accounted for Israel’s waywardness by saying, “But they know not the thoughts of the LORD, neither understand they His counsel” (Micah 4:12).

There is no moral or spiritual depths to which an ignorant soul cannot sink. An ignorant church is capable of astounding things. It can oppose a man who preaches the truth, and rid themselves of him in a manner that is convenient to them.

There is no moral or spiritual depths to which an ignorant soul cannot sink. An ignorant church is capable of astounding things. It can oppose a man who preaches the truth, and rid themselves of him in a manner that is convenient to them. It can condone sin like Corinth (1 Cor 5:1-2), be bewitched like the churches in Galatia (Gal 3:1), and be led to do reprehensible things like the church in Thyatira (Rev 2:20).

In this text ignorance moved the people to listen to their leaders and call for Christ’s brutal crucifixion – apparently without a twinge of conscience (Matt 27:25; Mk 15:11-14). This did not diminish the magnitude of their sin, for there was no excuse for them to be ignorant. God had approved of Jesus by means of “miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know” (Acts 2:22).

YOU RULERS DID ALSO

“ . . . as did also your rulers.” Other versions read, “just as your rulers did also,” NASB “as did your leaders,” NIV “as did also your governors,” GENEVA “as did also your chiefs,” MRD “as did also your heads,” TNT and “ as was the case with your rulers also.” WEYMOUTH

Even though the rulers of the people operated under the cloak of wisdom, they were really ignorant. They spoke with great confidence when they examined Jesus. “Then the high priest rent his clothes, and saith, What need we any further witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned Him to be guilty of death” (Mark 14:63-64). With seeming confidence they told Pilate, “We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that He Himself is Christ a King” (Luke 23:2).

Their assessment sounded as though it was well thought out: “We have a law, and by our law He ought to die, because He made Himself the Son of God” (John 19:7). But this was not sound thinking at all! Rather than breaking the Law, Jesus had actually come to magnify it and make it honorable (Isa 42:21). Rather than making Himself the Son of God, God had twice declared from heaven, “This is My beloved Son” (Matt 3:17; 17:5). Of all of this, they were abysmally ignorant, and thus called for the swift death of Jesus.

Although this was done “in ignorance,” it did not remove them from being murderers. These people were not exonerated because they were ignorant. After all, these were a covenanted people “to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). If ever there was a people on the face of the earth who should not have been ignorant about Jesus, it was this people!

An Added Word

I feel compelled to add one more word to this brief treatise. Jesus spoke of religious leaders who “have taken away the key of knowledge” (Lk 11:52a). Such teachers were a hindrance to anyone who was trying to enter the Kingdom: “ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in ye hindered” (Luke 11:52b). By means of withholding the knowledge of God, they effectively “shut up the kingdom of heaven against men,” or “locked people out of the kingdom of heaven” NRSV (Matt 23:13).

When this condition happens, the door is opened for all manner of foolishness, wickedness, atrocity and injustice. It is not possible to fully state the danger of such a condition. All manner of transgression within the professing church is directly traceable to the ignorance of the people – an ignorance that is the direct result of not hearing sound preaching and teaching.

GOD SHOWED, AND HE HAS FULFILLED

“ 18 But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all His prophets, that Christ should suffer, He hath so fulfilled. ”

Once again, Peter will trace everything concerning Jesus back to God. This will confirm that salvation is wholly of the Lord, with nothing of human origin in it – and that includes Jesus’ vicarious death!

THOSE THINGS GOD SHOWED BY ALL OF HIS PROPHETS

“But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all His prophets . . .” Other versions read, “But those things which God foretold by the mouth of all His prophets,” NKJV “But the things which God announced beforehand by the mouth of all the prophets,” NASB “what He had foretold through all the prophets,” NIV “But the things which God foreshowed by the mouth of all the prophets,” ASV “But the things which God had made clear before , by the mouth of all the prophets,” BBE “But what God predicted through the mouth of all the prophets,” CSB “what He had announced beforehand by the mouth of all the prophets,” DARBY “but those things which God before had shewed by the mouth of all the prophets,” DOUAY “and God, according as He had previously announced by the mouth of all the prophets,” MRD “But the things God foretold long ago through all the prophets ,” NIB “that all the prophets had foretold about the Messiah ,” NLT “the declarations He made through all the Prophets,” WEYMOUTH “what He predicted through the voice of all the prophets ,” ISV “what he by the lips of all the prophets foretold,” WILLIAMS and “But God had foretold through all his prophets .” PHILLIPS

In the determined scheme of things, there was a certain priority assigned to the prophetic office. Often prophets were used to call Israel back to God (Jer 3:12,22). They were counselors to kings (Isa 37:2-3). Concerning Israel, God is said to have “hewed them” by the prophets (Hos 6:5). Nations were often rebuked by the prophets (Amos 1:6; Obad 1:1-8; Nah 1:1; Zech 9:1). God raised up the prophets to denounce the absence of truth, mercy, and the knowledge of God (Hos 4:1). Before God moved in the earth, He made known what He was going to do through the prophets: “Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but He revealeth His secret unto His servants the prophets” (Amos 3:7).

Yet, with all of this activity, the real reason for the Prophets was to prepare the world for the Messiah – the Christ of God. In this text, Peter speaks of “all” God’s prophets speaking of things pertaining to the death of Christ and its accomplishments. Some spoke of these things directly, some in parables, and some in types and shadows. However, if you were to remove Jesus Christ from history, there would be no need for the Prophets. Their ministry was in view of the salvation wrought by Jesus.

It was this condition that enabled Paul to reason concerning Christ “out of the Scriptures” (Acts 17:2-3). Elsewhere Paul said He spoke “none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come” (Acts 26:22).

THAT CHRIST SHOULD SUFFER

“ . . . that Christ should suffer . . .” Other versions read, “that the Christ would suffer ,” NKJV “that His Christ would suffer,” NASB “that His Messiah would suffer,” NRSV “the things . . . that the Christ would have to undergo ,” BBE “the sufferings of His Messiah,” GWN “that His Christ {or Messiah} would suffer,” NIB “that the Messiah must suffer these things,” LIVING “that His Messiah would suffer and die ,” IE “that His Christ (the Messiah) should undergo ill treatment and be afflicted and suffer ,” AMPLIFIED and “that His Messiah had to suffer .” GNB

There are not only words in prophecy, but there is a spirit in it as well – a living principle that drives and directs prophecy. We are categorically told that the spirit of prophecy is Christ Jesus. That is, He is the reason for prophecy, and the ultimate objective of it.

Here, suffering plus death equals suffering. From the redemptive point of view, these sufferings began when Jesus was pinioned on the tree. They concluded when He died. That death was the “baptism” to which Jesus referred when He said, “But I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished!” (Luke 12:50). This was the “baptism” of suffering. That is, Jesus was engulfed by, or immersed into suffering – He died.

In his first Epistle, Peter also refers to the prophets’ emphasis of the sufferings of Christ. “Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you: searching what, or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ , and the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:10-11).

The very first promise of God, spoken to the devil in the presence of Adam and Eve, spoke of the sufferings of Christ as His heel being bruised (Gen 3:15). By way of further example, the twenty-second Psalm provides a remarkably detailed prophecy of the sufferings of Christ (Psa 22:1-21). The sixty-ninth Psalm does the same thing (Psa 69:1-21), as well as the entire eighty-eighth Psalm (Psa 88:1-18). Psalm 109:25 foretold how He became a reproach. Isaiah 50:6 prophesied of Him giving His back to the smiters. Isaiah 52:13-14 provides details about the disfigurement of Jesus during His sufferings. The entire fifty-third chapter of Isaiah even gives the Divine rationale that produced the sufferings of Christ (Isa 53:1-10). Daniel affirmed the effects of His sufferings, and how they eventuated in His death (Dan 9:24-26). Micah 5:1 foretold of Him being smitten on the cheek. Zechariah foretold of His betrayal (Zech 11:12-13), of the wounds in His hands (Zech 13:6), and how the sword of God Himself was directed against Christ (Zech 13:7).

The many sacrifices for sin that were ordained under the Law testified in type of the sufferings of Christ (Lev 4:26, 35,37; 23:19; Num 15:25). The general rejection of and persecution of the Prophets also testified to the suffering of Christ, confirming that those aligned with God are always opposed by the world (1 Kgs 18:1; 19:1,10,14; Jer 2:30; 26:5; Matt 5:12; 23:34; Lk 6:23,26; Acts 7:52; 1 Thess 2:15; James 5:10).

This circumstance does not diminish the guilt of the people standing before Peter. His words are not declared to excuse them from their guilt. The fact that the prophets foretold their deed did not decrease its character. The Divine determination was that Jesus would die for the sins of the world, suffering the curse of the Almighty

There are not only words in prophecy, but there is a spirit in it as well – a living principle that drives and directs prophecy. We are categorically told that the spirit of prophecy is Christ Jesus. That is, He is the reason for prophecy, and the ultimate objective of it. Thus, an angel from heaven told John the Apostle, “worship God: for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy” (Rev 19:10). In other words, the Subject of Scripture is Christ Jesus. Jesus Himself said, “Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of Me” (John 5:39). The Bible is not primarily a manual of human conduct – even though it addresses that subject. However, directions for conduct without empowerment from Christ results in condemnation. This is because Divine requirements exceed the capacity of nature. Apart from Christ, they only confirm that man is in a fallen state, at enmity with God, and a child of wrath.

Therefore, Peter does not launch into a dissertation about how his listeners are to address the challenges of life, or what they are to do to fulfill the Law. He rather speaks of Christ, who is the ultimate Subject. He will measure the conduct of the people by their response of Jesus.

HE HATH SO FULFILLED

“ . . . He hath so fulfilled. ” Other versions read, “He has thus fulfilled,” NKJV “God fulfilled,” NIV “He thus fulfilled,” RSV “He has put into effect in this way,” BBE “God has thus fulfilled,” DARBY “God made . . . come true ,” GWN “hath in this manner fulfilled [it],” MRD “God has brought to fulfillment,” NAB “He has fulfilled in this way,” NET “this is the way God carried out what He had foretold,” NJB “But God was fulfilling all,” NLT “He did thus fulfill,” YLT “God made this happen ,” IE “God has fulfilled what He foretold ,” AMPLIFIED and “He made it come true in this way.” GNB

This is an arresting statement. On the day of Pentecost, Peter also referred to God’s primary role in the death of Christ. “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God , ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain” (Acts 2:23). The people did, indeed, take Jesus, crucifying and slaying Him through the “wicked hands” of the Roman government. The matter, however, was supervised by God, whose purpose was being fulfilled. The people could not go one millimeter beyond the Divine appointment in this matter, nor was it possible for them to in any way come short of it. Even though the death of Christ appeared as though it was governed by men, it was being precisely carried out under Divine control. Every single prophecy concerning that death had to be executed – and there was not a man on earth, or a spirit among the powers of darkness that was intent upon fulfilling prophecy!

Peter does not did not say the Jews fulfilled what the prophets had foretold about Christ’s sufferings! He rather declares that it was God who fulfilled the words of the prophets – God has fulfilled what He foretold.” AMPLIFIED Fulfilled prophecy is not things taking place that God saw ahead of time. With God, prophesying is not a matter of knowing ahead of time what men will do! Prophecy has to do with what GOD will do! Peter announces that it was God Himself who fulfilled what He had purposed. Again, prophecy has to do with Divine purpose, not foresight of what men are going to do.

This circumstance does not diminish the guilt of the people standing before Peter. His words are not declared to excuse them from their guilt. The fact that the prophets foretold their deed did not decrease its character. The Divine determination was that Jesus would die for the sins of the world, suffering the curse of the Almighty (Gal 3:13). The Jews’ purpose in Christ’s death was to rid themselves of His influence – to break His restraining bands from themselves (Psa 2:3). Which purpose prevailed? They did not have a solitary notion of fulfilling the will of God. Thus it was not them who fulfilled the word of the Lord, but God Himself.

God actually overruled the purposes of men, fulfilling His own determinations. In this, the wrath of man praised God. As it is written, “Surely the wrath of man shall praise Thee: the remainder of wrath shalt Thou restrain” (Psa 76:10).

Why, then, does Peter speak in this manner, and why does this message not free the people from guilt? We must see that Peter is confirming that Jesus of Nazareth is, in fact, the promised Messiah.

- First, in order for Him to be the Messiah, or Anointed One, what happened to Him must be traced back to God, not men, for He was “the Lord’s Christ” and “the Christ of God” (Lk 2:26; 9:20).

- Second, God “looketh on the heart” (1 Sam 16:7), and “searcheth the heart” (Jer 17:10). He “weigheth the spirits” of men (Prov 16:2), probing and discerning the “thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12).

And what was found in the hearts of those who took, delivered, crucified, and killed Jesus? Did they contain noble thoughts? Were their intentions to please God? Were humbleness and contriteness found in them? Indeed, their hearts were utterly corrupt. They “despised and rejected” Jesus, just as God had declared (Isa 53:3). They hated Him “without a cause,” as the Psalmist foretold (Psa 69:4). Even though they could find no sin in Him, they “vehemently accused Him” (Lk 23:10). Such corruption within men could not be overlooked, for God is righteous.

Years later, Paul delivered a scathing word to some Jews in Antioch of Pisidia. He told them they had fulfilled the Scriptures in condemning Jesus. “For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew Him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them in condemning Him. And though they found no cause of death in Him, yet desired they Pilate that he should be slain. And when they had fulfilled all that was written of Him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulchre” (Acts 13:29).

There is no conflict between Peter and Paul on this matter. Both said the Jews had done the deed in ignorance:

If the purpose of God could be fulfilled when malice filled their hearts, and they were driven by a depraved nature and the wicked one himself, the mercy of God can surely be awakened toward these very people if they have contrite hearts. God is not only Sovereign in the matter of providing salvation, He is also Sovereign in the matter of fulfilling that salvation.

“through ignorance ye did it,” PETER and “they knew Him not, nor yet the voice of the prophets.” PAUL Both highlight the determination of the Jews: “whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go,” PETER and “And though they found no cause of death in Him, yet desired they Pilate that He should be slain.” PAUL Both emphasized that it was the Scriptures that were fulfilled: “But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer,” PETER and “the voices of the prophets which are read every sabbath day, they have fulfilled them.” PAUL Peter’s point is that the will of the Lord was done. Paul’s point is that the will of the people was not done.

Something To Be Seen

While Peter’s proclamation did not excuse the wicked deeds of the people, or remove guilt from them, there was something it did do. It did, in fact, open the door of hope. If the purpose of God could be fulfilled when malice filled their hearts, and they were driven by a depraved nature and the wicked one himself, the mercy of God can surely be awakened toward these very people if they have contrite hearts. God is not only Sovereign in the matter of providing salvation, He is also Sovereign in the matter of fulfilling that salvation. It is inconceivable that God would provide a remedy for sin, then not be able to effectively apply it.

In every aspect of salvation, the ultimate worker is God Himself. He sent Jesus (1 John 4:14). He drove Him into the wilderness to be tempted by the Devil (Mk 1:12). He dispatched angels to minister to Him (Mk 1:13). He sustained Jesus (John 8:29). He taught Jesus what to say (John 8:28). He directed Jesus in what to do (John 5:36). He is the One who delivered Jesus up (Rom 8:32). He is the One who smote Jesus (Isa 53:4). He is the One who withdrew from Jesus (Matt 27:46). He is the One who raised Jesus (Acts 13:37). He is the One who enthroned and empowered Jesus (Phil 2:9; Matt 28:18). That is why the redeemed shout, "Salvation to our God . . . and unto the Lamb" (Rev 7:10). I know from experience that little spiritual growth can be realized until this marvelous truth is seen with decided clarity.

As long as men associate salvation primarily with their initiatives and activity, they will remain spiritually juvenile.

CONCLUSION

We are being exposed to Peter's second proclamation of Christ. Thus far, in both proclamations, there has been no reference to the love of God, the grace of God, or the longsuffering of God. The reason for Christ's death has been traced to Divine intent, not human need. Both messages have emphasized the vileness of the people their rejection of and opposition to Christ. Both messages have accentuated the words of the prophets. Both have also underscored that God was at work, fulfilling His own determinations.

In all of this, we are beholding what is involved in using "the keys of the Kingdom of heaven" (Matt 16:19). From another point of view, we are beholding the involvements of laying the foundation, and providing something upon which faith can be based.

It is becoming increasingly apparent to me that the modern church has drifted far from its first moorings. The thrust of modern preaching is being placed upon what men need, not what God has done, or what He has provided. By its very nature, the work of God defines what men need. What God has provided precisely identifies what men require.

There is no need to be diverted to contrived and elaborate explanations of what men need, particularly when they are based upon a purely human analysis. Touching the hearts of men is really the work of the Holy Spirit. Only He can effectively convince men of the guilt of sin, the need for righteousness, and the futility of serving the devil (John 16:80-11). Further, His work is realized through the proclamation of Christ, particularly regarding His association with God and the fulfillment of His purpose.

There are two things that Peter is making clear, and they both throw light upon the human condition. (1) What men did to Jesus. (2) What God did to Jesus. So far as intention is concerned, these two areas of activity are at variance with one another. The actions of men were intended to get rid of Jesus. The action of God was to get rid of sin and destroy the devil. So far as outcomes were concerned, the activity of the people was to be able to live without Jesus. The action of God was to provide real life through Jesus.

It seems to me that much of the Christianity of our time is managing to obscure both of these perspectives. The result is a people who have "a form of godliness," yet deny, or reject, "the power thereof" (2 Tim 3:5). In other words, the modern message is man-centered, not God-centered. Relevancy is perceived as having to do with life in the world – the here and the now.

For this reason, I find the book of Acts particularly refreshing. Its water is pure. There are no institutional corruptions in it – no sectarian motives. We are witnessing the expression of genuine spiritual life, and it is comforting and enlivening!

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #15

“ 3:19 Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; 20 And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: 21 Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. 22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. 23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people. 24 Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after, as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days. 25 Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed. 26 Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.” (Acts 3:19-26)

PETER SPEAKS TO THE PEOPLE, #2

INTRODUCTION

Peter masterfully continues to lay the Foundation upon which Jesus is building is own church. His presentation has no corruption within it, and no moral or spiritual taints are upon it. He is not moved along by any humanly devised agenda, but is governed by a heavenly order of business. He is obviously not interested in establishing his own greatness. They are no hoary religious traditions that have shaped the understanding he now possesses. He is “filled with the Spirit,” and the things that he says relate to what the enthroned Christ is doing. Endued with the Spirit, he has been ably proclaiming the exaltation of Christ – an exaltation that took place in spite of the deeds of the people. Jesus was not elevated by the populous, but by God Himself, and it is essential that men have a grasp of this. Their attempted exaltation of Christ was seen in His triumphal entry into Jerusalem. The people shouted out,

CONTENTS

- PETER SAW AND ANSWERED (3:12a)
- WHY MARVEL YE AT THIS? (3:12b)
- THE GOD OF . . . (3:13a)
- GOD HATH GLORIFIED HIS SON (3:13b)
- YOU DELIVERED AND DENIED HIM (3:13c)
- YOU DESIRED A MURDERER AND KILLED THE PRINCE OF LIFE (3:14-15)
- FAITH, FAITH, AND FAITH (3:16)
- THE EFFECTS OF IGNORANCE (3:17)
- GOD SHOWED, AND HE HAS FULFILLED (3:18)
- CONCLUSION

“Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest” (Matt 21:9). Mark records them saying, “And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest” (Mark 11:9-10). Luke records them saying, “Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: peace in heaven, and glory in the highest” (Luke 19:38). Matthew says of this event, “All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, Tell ye the daughter of Zion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass” (Matt 21:5).

It all sounded good, and the words they said were true. However, the multitudes had not seen Jesus as He really was. Just a few days later the same group was crying out “Crucify him, crucify him” (Lk 23:21).

The exaltation of Jesus had nothing whatsoever to do with popularity among men. Jesus had realized unparalleled prominence among the people, and it is often affirmed. “There followed Him great multitudes of people . . . great multitudes followed Him . . .” (Matt 4:25; 8:1). There were times when the people, eager to see Jesus, ran on foot ahead of Him, reaching His destination before He did (Mk 6:33). Once, when He was teaching in a house, the crowd of people was so great there was not room to draw near to Him, even on the outside of the house (Mk 2:2). Frequently, when His enemies sought to lay hold on Him, they were “afraid of the people” because He was so popular with them (Mk 12:12; Lk 22:2). However, such favoritism is not what caused Jesus to be exalted, and Peter will not speak to men as though that was the means to His exaltation.

It is alarming to see how men will bend over backwards to make Jesus popular with the people. They will represent Him as something like a great sympathizer, who is desperately seeking some way to become a part of their lives. He is also presented as the means to domestic and social stability, and even personal health and wealth. No such approaches will be found in the Word of God. We will find that the real Jesus led those whom he sent to forcefully declare the transgressions of the people, and then to announce a remedy for sin – not for social maladjustment, financial deprivation, and physical debility.

It is alarming to see how men will bend over backwards to make Jesus popular with the people. They will represent Him as something like a great sympathizer, who is desperately seeking some way to become a part of their lives. He is also presented as the means to domestic and social stability, and even personal health and wealth.

Men contribute absolutely nothing to the greatness of the Lord Jesus Christ. His supremacy does not depend upon what men do. What men do, however, does depend upon His absolute preeminence. In other words, what God now requires of men can only be achieved through the Lord Jesus, who is presently exalted and over all things.

Now Peter will delineate the proper response to the Gospel. There is something that men are required to do, and no benefit will pass from Christ to them until it is done. It will not be something that is appealing to the flesh, for “the flesh” is quite content to sin, and does not want to die to it. Peter will declare that a response is necessary that involves the heart, attitude, conscience, and will. He will not spell out a mere routine, easily memorized and codified for future generations. If you are familiar with Peter’s instructions on the day of Pentecost, you will recognize that he does not here merely repeat them as though they were a formula. On Pentecost Peter admonished the people to do the following (Acts 2:38-40).

- Repent.
- Be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and they would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.
- Save yourselves from this untoward generation

You will find similarities in the text before us, but it is not precisely the same. Among other things, this confirms the absurdity of developing a “plan of salvation” that consists of a number of steps – most of which can be performed mechanically. In every case where such a “plan” is presented, there is a glaring absence of requirements for the heart. Rather, an emphasis is placed upon precisely conforming to a procedure.

The logic behind such an approach is that the examples of appropriating salvation that are provided in Scripture contain the essential points. I come from a five-point background – that is, of a “plan of salvation” that consisted of five points.

- Hearing the Gospel.
- Believing the Gospel.
- Repentance from sin.
- The public confession of Christ.
- Baptism into Christ.

Some add an addition step: “faithfulness until death.” This is either chosen as a sixth step, or replaces the first step of hearing the Gospel.

However, formulating these into a credal presentation overlooks the involvement of Deity in the process of genuine conversion. Once a person yields his attention to the Gospel, and focuses his heart upon the truth, there are certain things that take place because of Divine working.

As noble as this “plan” may appear, it never occurs as such in Scripture. It is a “plan” that had to be constructed by men. It is also obvious that it is intended to contain, what is conceived to be, the bare minimum requirements. Glaringly absent from it are such things as conviction (John 16:8; Acts 2:37), being called by God (Acts 2:39; Rom 8:28,30), being pricked in the heart (Acts 2:37), inquiring what to do (Acts 2:37; 8:36; 9:6; 16:30), calling upon the name of the Lord (Acts 2:21; Rom 10:12-13), the circumcision of Christ (Col 2:11-12), conversion, or turning back to God (Acts

3:19), etc. Of course, it is exceedingly difficult to codify such things. They require discernment on the part of the preacher or teacher. In fact, there are some inquirers who have been rejected (Matt 3:7; Acts 8:21; 13:46).

Only a fool will deny the necessity of the responses outlined in the five step plan. Hearing the Gospel is a requisite (Rom 10:14-17). Believing the Gospel and believing on Christ is an absolute requirement (Rom 1:16; Acts 15:7). The public confession of Christ is also required, as is seen in the conversion of the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:37), and the affirmation of Romans 10:9-10). Baptism into Christ is clearly involved in the appropriation of salvation (Acts 2:38,41; 10:47; 18:8; 19:5; Rom 6:3-4; Gal 3:27). There is also no question about the necessity of being faithful until death (Heb 6:1-7; 10:36; 2 Pet 1:10; Rev 2:10).

However, formulating these into a creedal presentation overlooks the involvement of Deity in the process of genuine conversion. Once a person yields his attention to the Gospel, and focuses his heart upon the truth, there are certain things that take place because of Divine working. A recollection of a few of them will be helpful.

• THE SENDING OF A PREACHER. “And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!” (Rom 10:15). “Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man ?” (1 Cor 3:5).

• CONVICTION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT. “And when he is come, He will reprove [convict NKJV] the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment: Of sin, because they believe not on me; Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more” (John 16:8-10).

• THE DRAWING POWER OF GOD. “No man can come to Me, except the Father which hath sent Me draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day” (John 6:44).

• OPENING THE HEART. “And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened , that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul” (Acts 16:14).

• BELIEVING BY GRACE. “And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace ” (Acts 18:27). “For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for His sake” (Phil 1:29).

• REPENTANCE IS GIVEN. “Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). “When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life ” (Acts 11:18).

• CONFESSING JESUS AS LORD. “ Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost ” (1 Cor 12:3).

• THE SANCTIFICATION OF THE SPIRIT UNTO OBEDIENCE. “Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto [for NKJV] obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied” (1 Pet 1:2).

IS THIS RELEVANT TO THE TEXT?

It is not my desire to set sail on a mere tributary of thought. I mention these things because our text is not a mere duplicate of Peter’s instructions to the inquirers on the day of Pentecost. The background of Divine activity accounts for WHY the apostles did not present a stereotyped “plan of salvation.” They could perceive the working of the Lord and, in view of that, directed the people accordingly. Furthermore, we do not have a single example of any person who evidenced an inclination to the Gospel rejecting what the men of God told them to do.

Something else will be quite evident in this text. There are no convenient shortcuts to Divine blessing, even though men have done their best to create some. The key matters of alienation from God and the guilt of sin must be addressed before Divine favor can be realized. The people will be given something to do – but not merely something to do. A deliberate, conscious, and sustained change of direction will also be required in their lives. They can no longer live the same.

REPENT THEREFORE

“ 3:19a Repent ye therefore . . . ”

So far as this text is concerned, Peter’s words have not been prompted by an inquiry – as occurred on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:37). However, from the tone and substance of his words, as well as the staggering response to his words (Acts 4:4), he had obviously detected the presence of the same spirit that was demonstrated during that initial outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

REPENT

“Repent ye . . .” Other versions read, “let your hearts be changed and be turned to God,” BBE “Be penitent,” DOUAY “ Amend your lives,” GENEVA “ Change the way you think and act,” GWN “repent of your sins,” NLT “ reform ye,” YLT “ change your mind and attitude to God,” LIVING and “repent (change your mind and purpose). AMPLIFIED

Repentance involves a fundamental change in the way a person thinks – a change that results in an alteration of conduct. Where the conduct is not changed, there has been no repentance, for there is no such thing as a change of mind that does not produce a corresponding change in one’s manner of life.

Although we have done this before, I want to go over the meaning of repentance once again. This is a critical matter. Twice Jesus said, “except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish” (Lk 13:3,5). “Repentance” is something, Jesus affirmed, that is to be “preached” (Lk 24:47). Paul told Agrippa he had preached to both Jew and Gentile “that they should repent and turn to God” (Acts 26:20). Even when Jesus first sent out His disciples, they preached “that men should repent” (Mk 6:12). One of the attributes of God Himself is that He is not “ the son of man that He should repent ” (Num 23:19), nor is He “a man, that He should repent ” (1 Sam 15:29). One of the traits of the reprobate, who are depicted as suffering Divine judgment, is that “they repented not to give Him the glory” (Rev 16:9). Indeed, their hearts were so hardened by the deceitfulness of sin that they “repented not of their deeds” (Rev 16:11). The “goodness of God” is affirmed to lead men “to repentance” (Rom 2:4), so that where there is no repentance, there is no sound view of God’s goodness. Paul set himself against those who had “ not repented of the uncleanness and fornication, and lasciviousness which they have committed” (2 Cor 12:21). Repentance is so critical, that if God does not give it, men cannot “recover themselves out of the snare of the devil” (2 Tim 2:25). Thus, if men are repeatedly overcome by the devil, it is because they have not repented. When addressing the matter of God’s longsuffering toward His people, it is affirmed that it is owing to the fact that God is “not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance ” (2 Pet 3:9).

The fact that so very little is being said about repentance these days is evidence that “a falling away” is taking place (2 Thess 2:3).

Defining Repentance

This technical definition of repentance is as follows. "To change one's mind (to feel sorry he has done this or that), of having offended someone; used especially of those who, conscious of their sins and with manifest tokens of sorrow, are intent; on obtaining God's pardon; To change one's mind for the better, heartily to amend with abhorrence of one's past sins," THAYER "predominately of a religious and ethical change in the way one thinks about or acts, repent, change one's mind, be converted; as feeling remorse regret, feel sorry," FRIBERG "repent, have a change of heart, turn from one's sins, change one's ways," UBS "repent, have a change of heart, turn from one's sins, change one's ways," LOUW-NIDA "change one's mind or purpose," LIDDELL-SCOTT "feel remorse, repent, lit. 'change one's mind.'" GINGRICH

Repentance involves a number of fundamental and perceptible changes in one's character.

- A change of mind for the good.
- Sorry over having offended God.
- An acute consciousness of sin.
- A condition produced by godly sorrow.
- A hearty amending of one's ways.
- An abhorrence of past sins.
- Turning from one's sins.
- The changing of one's ways.
- A godly determination, or purpose, to please the Lord.

There is doubtless more involved in repentance than this. However, this provides a clear index concerning the direction and effectiveness of repentance.

This is not the kind of repentance found in Judas, when he "repented himself." Although he was much more aggressive than many who are professing to embrace Jesus, his was not a repentance unto salvation, and it was not induced by godly sorrow (Matt 27:3-5).

- He "repented himself."
- He brought back the money he had received for betraying Jesus.
- He confessed, "I have sinned."
- He knew what he had done: "I have betrayed the innocent blood."
- He threw down the money in the Temple, disowning any commitment to it.
- He went out and hanged himself.

"Godly sorrow" was not the impetus behind the repentance of Judas, nor did it lead to "salvation." He did not amend his conduct – in fact it is apparent that such amending did not seem possible to him.

A Controversy With Counseling

At its very foundation, psychiatry does not view man as the "offspring" of God, nor is it built upon the fact that man has sinned and comes short of the glory of God. As ordinarily conceived, it gives no weight to the sinfulness of man, the presence of the devil, or the direction of the Holy Spirit.

I am aware that I am attacking a sacred cow when I come against the modern religious concept of counseling. Professed Christian institutions of higher learning have reshaped their curriculum and degree programs to fit the modern concept of counseling. The reasoning behind counseling has been borrowed from the world, who has bowed its knee to the pseudo-science of psychiatry. At its very foundation, psychiatry does not view man as the “offspring” of God, nor is it built upon the fact that man has sinned and comes short of the glory of God. As ordinarily conceived, it gives no weight to the sinfulness of man, the presence of the devil, or the direction of the Holy Spirit. I understand there are those within the Christian community who are engaged in counseling, and yet do acknowledge all of these realities. Yet, they have embraced a science (falsely so called) that makes no room for them. This forces them to trace deviate behavior to earthly circumstances, physiological conditions, fleshly genealogy, or matters of heredity.

In this context “repentance” is often wholly out of order. This is because the reason for sinful conduct is frequently imagined to be circumstances over which the individual has had no control – which circumstances are not considered to be fundamentally spiritual, and having to do with the powers of darkness and man’s natural propensity to iniquity.

Turning Around

The word “repent” does have a secondary meaning of turning around – but that is not its fundamental meaning. The emphasis in repenting is a change of perspective, and the consequent change in conduct that, of necessity, results. There is also a condition of heart that is appropriately identified with sorrow, contrition, regret, remorse, and penitence.

THEREFORE

“ . . . therefore . . . ” Other versions read, “then,” NIV “so then,” BBE “So,” GWN “Now you must,” NJB “Now,” NJB and “So now.” WILLIAMS

Peter is employing wisdom and spiritual understanding. In view of what the people did to Jesus, in consideration of God raising Him from the dead, and in light of Jesus healing this lame man, the demand is for the people to repent. It is evident that they sinned in killing Jesus, for God reversed their judgment, then confirmed He had raised and glorified Christ by the healing of a lame man who was well known to them.

More Than A Commandment

While repentance is certainly a commandment (Acts 17:30), it is more than a commandment. Repentance is reasonable as well as essential. Once the facts in the case are seen, it becomes totally unreasonable not to repent. Men do need to repent of fighting against God, rejecting His Son, and resisting the Holy Spirit. Those are matters with which men cannot be content to live. The flesh must be crucified, and those who are Christ’s have done precisely that (Gal 5:24).

Those who continue in sin after they have heard how God has exalted Christ are guilty of the most heinous sin. They have not believed the record God has given of His Son. They have chosen their will over God’s will. They have also resisted the Spirit of God. It is no wonder Peter tells them to “Repent!”

BE CONVERTED

“ 19b . . . and be converted . . . ” Other versions read, “and return,” NASB “and turn to God,” NIV “and turn again,” RSV “and be turned to God,” BBE “and turn back,” CSB “and convert,” PNT “and turn to Him,” LIVING “Come back to God,” IE “and reform your lives,” WEYMOUTH “and reform,” MONTGOMERY and “turn around and return [to God].” AMPLIFIED

The word “converted” is one that blends well with the revealed purpose of God in Christ Jesus. It is translated from the Greek word evpistre,yate (ep-ee-stref-at-aa). For those who are interested in the use of the word, it is in the imperfect aorist tense. “Imperfect” means the intended action is to be continual . It does not refer to a instant and fixed state. “Aorist” means the condition is something that has actually happened. It is not an objective or a mere idea, but an experience that really takes place. The “imperfect aorist” tense means that the matter under condition actually takes place, and continues to exist. It is not something that wanes, or finally passes away.

Lexically, the word means “to turn to, to cause to return, to bring back; to return, turn back, come back . . . to turn back morally, to reform,” THAYER “moral change, to change one’s ways,” FRIBERG and “to turn towards (God), to turn from error.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

A technical definition of the word, as used in Scripture, is provided in the box below. This is precisely stated, and will assist us in approaching this subject in a proper frame of mind.

CONVERT – CONVERSION

In its more restricted meaning the word denotes the action of man in the initial process of salvation as distinguished from the action of God. Justification and regeneration are purely Divine acts, repentance, faith, conversion are human acts although under the influence and by the power of the Divine agency. Thus, conversion denotes the human volition and act by which man in obedience to the Divine summons determines to change the course of his life and turns to God. Arrested by God’s call man stops to think, turns about and heads the opposite way. This presupposes that the previous course was not directed toward God but away from Him. INTERNATIONAL STANDARD BIBLE ENCYCLOPEDIA

The fact that Peter tells the people to “be converted” substantiates that this is an action in which they themselves are involved. Conversion is the moral change that results from faith and repentance. While being born again involves a change of character, or the essential person, conversion has to do with a firm resolve to appropriate salvation. Acting in faith, the individual sets out to do what is utterly impossible apart from Divine empowerment.

Now, what Peter declares is absolutely essential. There will be no Divine acceptance and remission if these things are not done by the people. What is more, the changes that are made in the people must continue, else they will have no value before God. Salvation is not a sporadic experience, and woe to those who represent it as though it was.

Conversion has to do with an abrupt change in the direction of life – a change that impacts upon both the inward and outward man. Inwardly, the mind is altered to think differently. There are new purpose and objectives, new loves, and new hates. Righteousness is loved and iniquity is hated, which is an expression of the Divine nature (Heb 1:9). These thoughts and sensitivities are carried out in deeds of righteousness – godly expressions in words and deeds. If there is no change in conduct, there has been no inward change. We know this is the case, for “if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new” (2 Cor 5:17). Concerning the transformation of the individual it is also written, “And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). And again, “And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10).

Turning to God (being converted) is a consequence of a change of mind (repentance). It has to do with an actual forsaking of sin. It is turning from the course, or path, of wickedness.

The Greek word used in this text is frequently translated “turn” in the King James Version of the Scriptures.

- “And all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron saw him, and turned to the Lord” (Acts 9:35).

- “And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord” (Acts 11:21).

- “And saying, Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein” (Acts 14:15).

- “Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God” (Acts 15:19).

- “To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me” (Acts 26:18).

- “But showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance” (Acts 26:20).

- “Nevertheless when it shall turn to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away” (2 Cor 3:16).

- “For they themselves show of us what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God” (1 Thess 1:9).

- “For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls” (1 Pet 2:25).

As will be confirmed in the next clause, conversion [as used in this text] is an action that precedes the remission of sins.

To “be converted” is to turn our attention and commitment from one thing to another. It is to redefine what men consider to be their “treasure” – i.e. what is worthy of their attention. There is an adjustment of values, and a change in priorities. Divine acceptance and the remission of sins cannot be received until this change, or turning, occurs.

Even after one has been “added to the church” (Acts 2:47), if a person returns again to a self-centered life, that corrupt commitment must be abandoned if Divine acceptance is to be realized. This is not a matter for conjecture, for God has spoken directly to this matter. The following word was addressed to those who were once washed, sanctified, and justified (1 Cor 6:11). “Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty” (2 Cor 6:17-18).

Men must become conscious of God’s total intolerance of sin. Even when the sins of the world were laid upon His own Son, God cursed Him (Gal 3:13), condemning sin in the flesh of His Son (Rom 8:3). Sin does have separating power, driving a wedge between men and God. The Lord once said, “But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His face from you, that He will not hear” (Isa 59:2). This is precisely why God had to deal with sin. It is the reason for the new birth.

Once a person comes into Christ, God does not relax His attitude toward sin. Jesus has not enabled God to look upon sin without it provoking His wrath! If there is any doubt about this, the record of Ananias and Sapphira should make it clear to us (Acts 5:1-10).

In my judgment, the modern church is not making this clear to the people. Peter’s words would actually be contested in the average church. Doctrinal spears would be hurled at him, objecting that men can come to Jesus as they are, with no turning or changing required on their part. For that matter, the one God sent to prepare the way for Jesus refused to receive people who did not bring forth fruits “meet for repentance,” or “fruit in keeping with repentance” (Matt 3:8). The sophist will object, saying that such a message is no longer appropriate. It is different now. However, Paul gave testimony to Agrippa concerning what he preached several years after the events of our text. “Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision: but showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance” (Acts 26:19-20).

I realize that men can distort this word, teaching that men are saved by mere human effort. However, it must become clear to every person that God does not receive people only to allow them to return to their old manners, asking for some time to clean up their act, so to speak. When men turn to God, they will receive the strength that is required to implement their determination to “sin not.” But that turning is absolutely essential.

THAT YOUR SINS MAY BE BLOTTED OUT

“ 19c . . . that your sins may be blotted out . . . ”

If there is a codified “plan of salvation” – a revealed series of steps by which remission of sins is obtained – then it will be articulated in the book of Acts. If that is really the ordained way of leading people to Christ, then it will be expressed by Peter, who was given the keys to the kingdom of heaven. Later in this book, when Paul becomes the prominent figure, he is sure to speak it out also. To be a legitimate “plan,” it must also be spoken consistently, with no inspired man deviating from it.

Some imagine that truth is always delivered in a prepackaged form – like the Law was delivered. In this view, the same God who gave Ten Commandments has also revealed five steps, or two steps, or three steps . . . etc. This all makes perfect sense to those ensnared by a legal mind-set. But after all is said and done, the plan approach is never found in Scripture, and how to be saved is not presented in a perfectly consistent manner. This does not mean that baptism is not necessary, or that confession can be ignored, or that there is no need to repent. It does mean that these things are not implemented by means of, what men call, a plan . If this is not true, then we will be confused by the instances of obtaining salvation in the book of Acts, for they are not perfectly consistent.

- THE DAY OF PENTECOST (Acts 2:38-40). The people were told to “repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remissions of sins, and they would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit.” Those who “gladly received his word were baptized.”

- OUR PRESENT TEXT (Acts 3:19; 4:4). The people were told to “repent” and “be converted” so their sins would be “blotted out” and “times of refreshing” would “come from the presence of the Lord.” Then God would “send Jesus.” Many of them that heard the word “believed.”

- THE CITY OF SAMARIA Acts 8:5-6,12-13). There is no record of the people being told what to do. The people “with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did.” When they believed Philip, “they were baptized, both men and women.”

- THE ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH (Acts 8:35-38). Philip preached Christ to this man. There is no record of him being told what to do. The Gospel he heard provoked him to ask what was hindering him from being baptized. Philip said if he believed he could. The man confessed that he believed Jesus was the Son of God, and Philip baptized him.

- SAUL OF TARSUS (Acts 22:10-16). When Jesus appeared to Saul, upon being asked by Saul He wanted him to do, He told Saul to go where another man would tell him what to do. When the man came (Ananias), he told Saul why Jesus had called him, and asked him why he was tarrying, saying that he should arise and be baptized, washing away his sins and calling upon the name of the Lord.

• THE HOUSEHOLD OF CORNELIUS (Acts 10:44-48). Peter preached Jesus The book of Acts is the only place in scripture where we have a verbatim record of what was preached, inquiries that were made, and what men were told to do. No Epistle contains instruction concerning how to preach to sinners, or precisely what to

to this household, and while he was preaching to them the Holy Spirit fell on them in an evidential way. There is no record of a plan being presented to them. However Peter did ask who could forbid water that these people should be baptized, He than commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord.

• SERGIUS PAULUS (Acts 13:12). There is no record of this man being told what to do. It simply states that he “believed.”

• LYDIA AND HER HOUSEHOLD (Acts 16:14-15). There is no record of a plan being presented to Lydia and those with her. It is written that the Lord opened Lydia’s heart so she could respond to the things spoken by Paul. It is also written that she was baptized, together with her household.

• THE PHILIPPIAN JAILOR (Acts 16:27-34). This is the only place in all Scripture where the question is asked, “What must I do to be saved?” The answer given was, “Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (Acts 16:31). After Paul preached to the household, they were all baptized.

• CRISPUS AND HIS HOUSE AND MANY CORINTHIANS (Acts 18:8). No record is provided concerning what was said to these people – only that Paul “reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and Greeks.” It is written that Crispus “believed on the Lord with all of his house,” and “many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.”

The book of Acts is the only place in scripture where we have a verbatim record of what was preached, inquiries that were made, and what men were told to do. No Epistle contains instruction concerning how to preach to sinners, or precisely what to say to those desiring to be saved. Things such as “The Plan of Salvation,” “The Sinners Prayer,” “the Roman Road,” and “Four Spiritual Laws” – or anything remotely similar to them – are nowhere stated or outlined in Scripture. Such are all constructed by men, and reflect human understanding. No one in Scripture was ever told to pray for salvation, or to ask Jesus into their heart. No one was ever asked to “repeat after me . . .” Those are just the facts in the case.

By no means does this suggest that every man can do that which is “right in his own eyes” (Judges 17:5; 25). I have said these things only to confirm that a codified or stereotyped approach to being saved is not presented in Scripture. Such an approach has been authored by men, and they must assume the credit for it. The reason for the absence of a fixed procedure ought to be apparent. Coming to Christ involves Divine activity as well as that of men.

- There is a drawing of the individual (John 6:44).
- There is conviction, in which the individual becomes acutely aware of sin, righteousness, and judgment (John 16:8-11).
- There is the ministry of the Law, which is a schoolmaster that brings us to Christ (Gal 3:24).
- There is the reception of “the love of truth,” so that the individual can be saved (2 Thess 2:10).

- It is also given unto men to believe (Phil 1:29).
- Jesus gives repentance to the coming one (Acts 5:31).
- Hearts are opened by the Lord (Acts 16:14).

Instructing people in what to do to be saved involves some measure of discernment concerning the condition of the people. The spouting of a preconceived “plan” can cause none of the above things to take place. They are all the result of delivering the Gospel of Christ, not a plan of salvation. Those who have no understanding in these matters should confine their witness to what they know, and leave the rest to others who better know the manner of the kingdom.

THAT

“ . . . that . . . ” Other versions read, “so that,” NIV “for,” DARBY “to have,” GWN “that so,” MRD “so,” LIVING and “to have.” ISV

Thus far, Peter has told the people to repent and be converted, i.e., change, or turn to the Lord. Now, upon the basis of fulfilling those two requirements he places before the people a most wonderful benefit. Keep in mind, these are the people who “killed the Prince of life.”

SINS BLOTTED OUT

“ . . . your sins may be blotted out . . . ” Other versions read, “your sins may be wiped away,” NASB “your sins may be wiped out,” NIV “your sins may be completely taken away,” BBE “for the blotting out of your sins,” DARBY “that your sins may be put away,” GENEVA “to have your sins removed,” GWN “your sins may be done away,” PNT “so He can cleanse away your sins,” LIVING “He may wipe out your sins,” IE “the record of your sins may be cancelled,” WEYMOUTH “your sins may be erased (blotted out, wiped clean),” AMPLIFIED and “so that He will forgive your sins.” GNB

A great number of preachers that I know could never say these words. They simply could not come out of their mouths. They would have insisted on a more thorough presentation. However, we will give no heed to such men. Peter was filled with the Holy Spirit, they are not. Peter had the keys of the kingdom of heaven, they do not. Peter had discernment of the situation, they do not. The remission, or forgiveness of sins is traced to several things.

• BEING BAPTIZED. “Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost” (Acts 2:38). “And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord” (Acts 22:16).

• BELIEVING IN JESUS. “To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:43).

• BELIEVING. “And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39).

• FOR CHRIST’ SAKE. “And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ’s sake hath forgiven you” (Eph 4:32).

• CALLING UPON THE NAME OF THE LORD. “For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Rom 10:13).

It is challenging to compare Acts 2:37-40 with 3:19-26. If there was a static procedure involved in obtaining the remission of sins, then they would undoubtedly read the same – particularly since the same man is delivering the Word to the people. However the words that were said are not identical, as indicated in the chart below.

These are not two different approaches to obtaining remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit. They rather accent the personal nature of salvation, as well as the effects of discerning the Divine work that has occurred in the background. No point of apostolic doctrine concerning repentance confession, or baptism is ignored. Rather than each account of people obtaining salvation being unique unto itself, they provide differing perspectives of salvation, and of its various involvements. In order to have this kind of view, being saved is not associated with a fixed procedure to be fulfilled by men. Participating in God's "great salvation" involves His activity as well as that of men. Further, we see throughout the book of acts that there is not a single instance of people refusing to do what they were told to do. That fact explains why every word about the "How to" aspect of salvation is not recounted. The obstinance that has become so common among those who say they believe was not a problem at the time of our text.

Blotted Out

This is the language used by the holy prophets when speaking of the totality of Divine remission. David prayed, "blot out my transgressions" (Psa 51:1). Again he prayed, "Hide thy face from my sins, and blot out all mine iniquities" (Psa 51:9). Through Isaiah God said, "I have blotted out, as a thick cloud, thy transgressions, and, as a cloud, thy sins" (Isa 44:22). Translated from the Greek word evxaleifqh/nai (ex-al-i-fo-than-ai), "blotted out" means "removal, to wipe off, wipe away . . . to obliterate, erase, wipe out, blot out," THAYER "do away with, erase, remove, eliminate," FRIBERG "cancel, destroy," UBS and "destroy utterly." LIDDELL-SCOTT

The following Takes place when one's sins are "blotted out."

- In heaven, the record of the sin is totally removed.
- God remembers the sins no more (Heb 8:12; 10:17).
- The sin is removed from the conscience of the transgressor (Heb 9:14).
- The sin is removed from any association with the one who committed it (Psa 103:12; Num 23:21).

Those whose sins have been "blotted out" are said to have been "washed" (1 Cor 6:11), forgiven "all trespasses" (Col 2:13), and "justified from all things" (Acts 13:39). The action is so thorough that it is written, "Who shall lay any thing to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth" (Rom 8:33).

What About Forgiving Yourself

Adopting the jargon of psychiatry, some say they know they have been forgiven by God, but they find they cannot forgive themselves. God's people must avoid using such words, for they cannot contain the truth. Words that find their genesis in human wisdom cannot convey the truth of God.

Scripture never speaks of people forgiving themselves, and neither should we. The Word of God does recognize a condemning conscience, i.e. one that is not purged. That is the kind of conscience that prevailed under the Law. As it is written, "Which was a figure for the time then present, in which were offered both gifts and sacrifices, that could not make him that did the service perfect, as pertaining to the conscience" (Heb 9:9). Again it is written, "For since the Law has merely a rude outline (foreshadowing) of the good things to come—instead of fully expressing those things—it can never by offering the same sacrifices continually year after year make perfect those who approach [its altars]. For if it were otherwise, would [these sacrifices] not have stopped being offered? Since the worshipers had once for all been cleansed, they would no longer have any guilt or consciousness of sin. But [as it is] these sacrifices annually bring a fresh remembrance of sins

[to be atoned for], Because the blood of bulls and goats is powerless to take sins away”
AMPLIFIED (Heb 10:1-4).

This approach to cleansing the conscience is a subtle form of idolatry – attempting to achieve appointed results independently of the God who ordained them. It represents a serious departure from the truth, and is not to be taken lightly.

In the above texts perfection does not speak of a moral condition, but of a cleansed conscience. Under the law, although there was a multiplicity of sacrifices, the offering of them had no effect upon the conscience. Instead of removing guilt, they actually accented it: “But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year,” or “there is a reminder of sins every year” NKJV (Heb 10:3). This is the condition the psychiatrist attempts to explain by the phrase “forgive yourself.” The cleansing of the conscience is thus sought through a therapeutic means.

This approach to cleansing the conscience is a subtle form of idolatry – attempting to achieve appointed results independently of the God who ordained them. It represents a serious departure from the truth, and is not to be taken lightly.

The blotting out of sins includes the purging of the conscience. As it is written, “How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?” (Heb 9:14). The purging is experienced when the truth of justification registers upon the soul. David wrote of this, and Paul confirmed it: “Even as David also describeth the blessedness of the man, unto whom God imputeth righteousness without works, Saying, Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin” (Rom 4:6-8). This state of blessedness belongs to the individual – “the man.” That is, the person is blessed in the realization of this truth.

In his First Epistle, Peter associates this initial condition with baptism. “. . . when once the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 3:21). In this statement Peter affirms that baptism is not an empty ceremony. The “putting away of the filth of the flesh” does not have to do with taking a bath, as some translations infer. It rather speaks of the ceremonial cleansing under the Law (Lev 16:30; Num 8:6-7). The “putting away” of First Peter 3:21 is the perfected conscience of the ninth and fourteen verses of the ninth chapter of Hebrews.

Peter is saying that in baptism a person is making an appeal for a purged, or good, conscience. The New American Standard version reflects this meaning: “an appeal to God for a good conscience.” He also means that God’s response to the obedient soul is the cleansing of the conscience. Thus the King James and New King James read “the answer of a good conscience.” The New International Version represents baptism as the response of a good conscience: “the pledge [response] footnote of a good conscience.” The New Living Translation does the same thing: “but as a response to God from a clean conscience.” This view does not comport with the rest of Scripture. When instructing Saul of Tarsus, Ananias said, “And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord” (Acts 22:16). Peter made the same association in Acts 2:38: “baptized . . . for the remission of sins.” Thus the cleansing of the conscience occurs in the baptism itself. Baptism is not the response of a conscience that has already been cleansed.

After our baptism, the blood of Christ continues to provide cleansing for the believer. We are told, “But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin” (1 John 1:7). Again it is written, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9).

What I am saying is that this cleansing includes the purging of the conscience. I will even wax bold and affirm that God is never represented as forgiving sin without notifying the conscience of the individual that He has done so. Nor, indeed, is any person represented as having been “washed” who, at the time, was not made aware of the cleansing.

This is the manner of the New Covenant. A person with a defiled conscience should not assume that they have been forgiven, but examine themselves to see if they are in the faith.

TIMES OF REFRESHING

“ 19d . . . when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord.”

The greatness of salvation is seen in the various perspectives of it. In Acts 2:38-39, Peter said the people, upon their repentance and baptism, would receive “the gift of the Holy Spirit.” This, he affirmed, was according to the promise of God. Now Peter refers to that benefit from the standpoint of its effects. In other words, this is what happens when a person receives “the gift of the Holy Spirit.”

TIMES OF REFRESHING

The plural use of the term accents a lengthy period of time, not a series of random periods of time. The length of time depicted in this expression precisely parallels living by faith, life in this world, and walking in the newness of life.

“ . . . when the times of refreshing shall come . . . ” Other versions read, “so that times of refreshing may come,” NKJV “in order that times of refreshing may come,” NASB “ so there may come seasons of refreshing,” ASV “and times of blessing may come,” BBE “Then times will come when the Lord will refresh you,” GWN “and times of rest may come to you,” MRD “times of refreshment ,” NAB “the time of comfort ,” NJB “and send you wonderful times of refreshment,” LIVING “that there may come seasons of revival ,” WEYMOUTH and “that times of refreshing (of recovering from the effects of heat, of reviving with fresh air),” AMPLIFIED

This is a most marvelous statement. The described experience is the appointed result of repenting and being converted, or changing and turning. The circumstance now described will never be found in those who do not repent and amend their ways.

Times

Here is a most interesting word. As you will note from the various translations, the word “seasons” is an alternative word. Coming from the Greek word kairoi . (kai-poi), the word is plural: i.e., “times” or “seasons.” It is not in the singular. The lexical meaning of the word is, “a measure of time,” THAYER “times, periods,” GINGRICH As it is used in this text, this word occurs in two other texts.

- “And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.” (Lk 21:24).
- “This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come” (2 Tim 3:1).

The plural use of the term accents a lengthy period of time, not a series of random periods of time. The length of time depicted in this expression precisely parallels living by faith, life in this world, and walking in the newness of life. In other words, it refers to the period of time between our translation into the Kingdom of God’s Son (Col 1:13), and our disembarkment from this world, whether by death (Heb 9:27), or the coming of the Lord (1 Thess 4:17).

These “times” come only after we have repented and been converted – after we have been turned from the power of Satan unto God.

Refreshing

The word “refreshing” comes from a word meaning, “cooling, refreshing,” THAYER “recovery . . . rest,” FRIBERG “Refreshment, spiritual strength,” UBS “relief from distressful, burdensome circumstances – relief, breathing space,” LOUW-NIDA “relief, respite,” LEH “refreshing, relief, rest.” GINGRICH Spiritual life postulates a certain depletion of strength that attends it. The walk of faith produces a kind of wearing down, or eroding of durability. This is owing to having a heavenly treasure in an earthen vessel (2 Cor 4:7), and it is by design.

This condition requires a constant renewal, or refurbishment of our strength. This restoration of spiritual capability occurs in the fellowship of Christ, into which we were called (1 Cor 1:9). In other words, we are as dependent upon Christ to maintain spiritual life as we were when we first received it. Spiritual life does not continue on its own, but is maintained by faith. As it is written, “the just shall live by faith” (Hab 2:4; Rom 1:17; Gal 3:11; Heb 10:38).

This is a side of salvation that has been grossly understated. Somehow, people are being left with the impression that once we come into Christ we are locked into a state of strength and safety. This is a most serious error, for salvation, in all of its facets, is ever “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:8). Just as surely as Deity had to be involved in your reclamation from sin, so Deity must be involved in the maintenance of that condition.

There are two sides to salvation, and both are absolutely essential. One has to do with separating us from sin, and the other has to do with keeping us separate. One has to do with the creation of newness of life, and the other has to do with maintaining that life. One has to do with putting us into Christ’s Kingdom, and other has to do with keeping us there, for we cannot be ultimately saved if we are not consciously under His very real rule.

The renewing of the Holy Spirit refers to the post-regeneration life – after we have been “added to the church.” Renewing is reviving, revitalizing, refurbishing, or refreshing. It involves comfort, encouragement, and the restoration of strength. It is what Isaiah spoke of when he said, “But they that wait upon the LORD shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint” (Isa 40:31). It is what David referred to when he said, “They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God” (Psa 84:7). Paul referred to this as knowing “the power of His resurrection” (Phil 3:10). The renewing ministry of the Holy Spirit accounts for Paul’s testimony: “We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed” (2 Cor 4:8-9).

“Times of refreshing” do not refer to periods of mere exhilaration or excitement. These are times of spiritual productivity when the saved are enabled to continue walking (2 Cor 5:7), running (Heb 12:1), fighting (1 Tim 6:12), wrestling (Eph 6:12), and striving (Col 1:29). No person can complete the race without these “times of refreshing.” However, they will not come unless they are preceded by repenting and converting.

FROM THE PRESENCE OF THE LORD

“ . . . from the presence of the Lord.” Other versions read, “from the Lord,” NIV “from before the face of the Lord,” MRD and “From the presence of God .” PHILLIPS

In salvation, required resources are dispensed from heaven. “Times of refreshing” can come to the earth, but they cannot originate in the earth.

There is a place from which the Kingdom of God is being administrated – and it is not upon the earth. Before Jesus took the reins of the Kingdom, He was seated “on the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Heb 1:3). The “times of refreshing” are sent from there. In order to receive them, one must be within the circumference of blessing, which is identified as “heavenly places in Christ” (Eph 1:3) – where Christ Himself has been seated (Eph 1:20). Believers are presently there by faith (Eph 2:6).

The phrase “from the presence of the Lord” involves not only the direct involvement of the Lord, but His willingness and forwardness to dispense “times of refreshing.” This is part and parcel of the package of salvation, which means we cannot be saved without it. If it seems as though this is not the case, living by faith will confirm to your heart that you do need renewal, reviving, and revivifying. There are times when you need to have your strength “renewed,” and when encouragement will be necessary. When those times come, take heart! There are “times of refreshing!”

HE SHALL SEND JESUS CHRIST

“20a And He shall send Jesus Christ . . .” Other versions read, “And that He may send Jesus,” NKJV “And that He may send the Christ,” NIV :and that He may send the Messiah,” NRSV “and He shall send Him,” DOUAY “He will send you Jesus,” GWN “and He may send to you Him,” MRD “and send you the Messiah,” NAB “Then He shall send you the Christ,” NJB “and He will again send you Jesus,” NLT “and He may send back Jesus ,” WILLIAMS “and that He may send [to you] the Christ (the Messiah),” AMPLIFIED and “then He will send you Jesus, your long heralded Christ.” PHILLIPS .

This promise embraces both “now” and “then” – when we first receive newness of life, and when we are finally gathered unto Him.

NEWNESS OF LIFE

Upon becoming a new creature, and being strengthened by the Holy Spirit in the inward man, Christ dwells in our hearts by faith. That is, He takes up permanent residency in them. The Word of God addresses this matter in these words: “That He would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith . . .” (Eph 3:16-17). That is primary meaning of our text – and “He shall send Jesus.” The context seems to require this meaning, for the second coming of Christ is in no way driven by human response. That appearing will be on a appointed day (Acts 17:31; 1 Cor 4:5; 2 Pet 3:7). It is wholly inappropriate to relate the coming of Christ “the second time” (Heb 9:28) with repenting and being converted. It is true that Christ’s second coming is, sequentially, the third of these three events: (1) sins blotted out, (2) seasons of refreshing, and (3) sending Jesus the second time. However, Peter is speaking of immediate benefits, not the grand scope of things.

In sending forth Jesus to the believer, God is providing for the tutelage required for men to walk in fellowship with Himself. John referred to this teaching in this way: “And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true , and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life” (1 John 5:20). Paul referred to this tutorship in these words: “But ye have not so learned Christ; If so be that ye have heard Him, and have been taught by Him , as the truth is in Jesus: That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man , which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:20-24).

While some men say that we are to ask Jesus into our hearts, Peter says men are to repent and be converted so their sins may be blotted out. Then God will “send Jesus” to them.

THE SECOND COMING

In a secondary sense, this text can relate to the coming of the Lord, at which time those to whom Jesus has been sent will be “changed” outwardly, to fully bear the image of Christ (1 Cor 15:52; 1 John 3:1-2). That sending, however, is not determined by whether or not men repent, are converted, have their sins blotted out, and receive times of refreshing. For them, He will appear “without sin unto salvation” (Heb 9:28), but their acceptable condition is not the only reason for Jesus being sent back. Rather, men will be called into for their response in Christ. They will also be rewarded appropriately, reaping what they have sown, whether in blessing or cursing. He will come, in other words, “to judge the earth” (Psa 96:13; Acts 17:31).

In this world, when men repent, are converted, have their sins blotted out, and experience “times of refreshing,” they commence the time or preparation for the return of the Lord. However, God will not send Jesus the second time because of those experiences. Rather, they are required because He is coming back – in order to involve men in the required change from glory to glory (2 Cor 3:18). While this may appear to be a very small point, it is, in fact, one that has managed to elude many poor souls.

WHICH BEFORE WAS PREACHED UNTO YOU

“20b . . . which before was preached unto you.” Other versions read, “the Christ appointed for you,” NASB “who has been appointed for you – even Jesus,” NIV “who was marked out for you from the first, even Jesus,” BBE “who has been appointed Messiah for you,” CSB “who was foreordained for you,” DARBY “who was made ready for you,” MRD “the Christ He has predestined,” NJB “your appointed Messiah,” NLT “the Christ appointed beforehand form you,” WEYMOUTH “Who before was designated and appointed for you,” AMPLIFIED “Jesus, your long-heralded Christ,” PHILLIPS “who had been ordained to be your Messiah,” EMTV and “who is the Messiah he has already chosen for you.” GNB

Here there is an apparent significant difference in the translations. Jesus is represented as being “before preached unto you,” KJV/NKJVDOUAY/GENEVA/PNT/RWB/TNT/WEB/YLT/BISHOPS/LITV/MKJV and “appointed,” “foreordained,” “predestined,” or “chosen.” NASB/NIV/NSRV/RSV/BBE/DARBY/NJB/NLT/WEYMOUTH/AMPLIFIED

Briefly summarized, the Alexandrian manuscript copy reads “preached,” the Syriac and Arabic copies read “predetermined or prepared for you,” and the Ethiopic copy reads “anointed.”

This is another case of manuscript mania, where differing Greek texts exist. Briefly stated, one set of manuscripts supports the translation “before was preached unto you,” ALEXANDRIAN another supports the translation “predetermined, or appoint for you,” SYRIAC-ARABIC and another “anointed for you.” ETHIOPIC

There is no need to be pressed into choosing one of these statements over another, for there is a sense in which they are all saying the same thing. The sense of the text is this: “God will send the Jesus who was appointed and anointed for you, and then preached to you.” A “Jesus” that is appointed, but not declared, is of no value. Nor, indeed, is a “Jesus” that is anointed, yet is not proclaimed, effective for the people. “Faith comes by hearing,” ROM 10:17 not, by mere appointment or anointing.

The church, which is being initially formed in our text, is built “upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets” (Eph 2:20; 3:5; Rev 18:20). The “apostles” are first in rank, even though, compared with the prophets they were second in appearance and ministry. However, the Jesus they preached, as Peter will affirm, declared the Jesus that was foretold by the prophets (Rom 3:21; 16:26; Heb 1:1; 1 Pet 1:10).

The words “which before was preached unto you” refer to the words of the prophets “from Samuel” through John the Baptist, who most precisely identified the Christ. Peter will later state this to be the case (3:24).

The point of logic here, as will be confirmed by the reasoning that follows, is that the Messiah was foretold by the Prophets in such details as allowed a ready recognition of Him when He actually began to walk among men.

In the interim – between John the Baptist and the death of Jesus – the people were exposed to the real Jesus, who precisely conformed to the proclamations of the prophets. John the Baptist also preached Christ (Matt 3:11; John 1:15,29,36; 3:26-36).

In measure, it is the preciseness of Jesus’ fulfillment of the prophets’ that verified to discerning people that He was Christ. Philip was able to say to Nathaniel, “We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write” (John 1:45). The woman at the well of Samaria said to those of the city of Samaria, “Is not this the Christ?” (John 4:29). After hearing Jesus speak, the Samaritans, “Now we believe, not because of thy saying: for we have heard Him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world” (John 4:42). There was no acceptable excuse for those standing before Peter failing to recognize Jesus.

HEAVEN MUST RECEIVE HIM

“ 21a Whom the heaven must receive until . . .”

Peter will now declare that the sending of Jesus, whom he has just proclaimed, will not be a bodily one – as was His initial appearance during His earthly ministry, and His second appearance, when every eye shall see Him. Those who repent, are converted, and have their sins blotted out will experience Jesus by faith. That is, He will dwell in their hearts “by faith” (Eph 3:17). While Jesus is within them “by faith,” His actual presence is in heaven. Technically, He is not reigning from our hearts, but from His throne in heaven. That is why believers are described as those who are waiting “for His Son from heaven” (1 Thess 1:10).

Having “the keys of the Kingdom of heaven,” Peter will now establish a point of doctrine that is pivotal to the maintenance of faith. It will contrast sharply with certain teachings to which men are presently exposed – and that will become very apparent. This is, however, “sound doctrine,” and anything contrary to it is to be forthrightly abandoned (1 Tim 1:10; 2 Tim 4:3; Tit 1:9; 2:1). If we are going to continue “steadfastly in the apostles doctrine,” then we must view their words as having greater weight than contradicting expressions of secondary expositors. As is characteristic of a real proclaimer of the truth, Peter will make his point with both precision and clarity.

THE HEAVEN MUST RECEIVE

“Whom the heaven must receive . . .” Other versions read, “He must remain in heaven,” NIV “Who is to be kept in heaven,” BBE “heaven must welcome Him,” CSB “whom heaven indeed must receive,” DARBY “whom the haven must contain,” GENEVA “Heaven must receive Jesus,” GWN “whom the heavens must retain,” MRD “whom heaven must keep,” NJB “whom it

behoveth heaven , indeed, to receive,” YLT But Jesus must stay in heaven ,” IE “Whom heaven must receive [and retain],” AMPLIFIED “ although for the time He must remain in Heaven,” PHILLIPS and “whom it is necessary [for] heaven indeed to receive.” ALT

This is a description of the present status of Christ, and our hearts must take hold of it. In order for the salvation of men to be accomplished, heaven had to receive Jesus back – receive Him following His death and resurrection. This is one of the key elements of the Gospel: “So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven , and sat on the right hand of God” (Mark 16:19). When the time of Jesus’ appointed death drew near, Jesus not only thought of the death itself, but also of being received up into heaven. “And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up , He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem” (Luke 9:51). In delineating the Gospel, which Paul referred to as “the mystery of godliness,” he cited Jesus being received up as one of the key points: “And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory ” (1 Tim 3:16).

From the subjective point of view, Jesus was “carried up into heaven” (Lk 24:50). John’s dialog concerning the final hours of Jesus with His disciples began this way, “Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that He should depart out of this world unto the Father , having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end” (John 13:1). That night He said to His disciples, “I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, I leave the world, and go to the Father ” (John 16:28). When Jesus prayed extensively to the Father on the night of His betrayal He said, “And now come I to thee” (John 17:13).

Apostolic doctrine makes much of Christ’s return to heaven, and His present activity there (Rom 8:34; Eph 1:20-22; 4:8-11; Heb 1:3; 4:14; 6:20; 7:25-26; 8:1; 9:24; 10:12-13, 19-22; 1 Pet 3:22).

The receiving of Christ in heaven commenced, for example, the following.

- His governing of the Kingdom (Isa 9:6; Eph 1:22; Col 1:18; 1 Pet 3:22).
- The mediation of the New Covenant (Heb 8:6; 9:15; 12:24)..
- The building of His church (Matt 16:17; Acts 2:47; Eph 3:10).
- His intercessory ministry (Isa 53:12; Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25).
- His care and nourishment of the church (Isa 40:11; John 6:50-51; Eph 5:29).

No person can be repent, be converted, have their sins blotted out, or experience “times of refreshing,” without Jesus being “in heaven.” Those experiences are all administered by Jesus from heaven. That is the only reason they can be realized upon earth.

Must Receive

The word “must” has the following lexical meaning: “it is necessary, there is need of, it behooves, is right and proper.” THAYER In other words, as long as the world remains, and men are tabernacling in a body of flesh and blood, the salvation of men requires the presence of Jesus in heaven. He must be there, or men cannot be delivered from sin and duly prepared for glory.

The word “receive” covers the duration of the reception as well as its commencement. It involves receiving one into a specific environment and among certain personalities. THAYER It means to welcome into a place, not as a visitor, but as a resident. FRIBERG It involves taking and accepting. UBS It carries the idea of being transferred from one realm to another . LOUW-NIDA

As used in this text, “receive” carries the idea of remaining in heaven, as the words that follow will confirm. The word “receive” includes the entire period covered by the present ministry of Jesus. He was not received as a Visitor who was passing through, but One who was commencing an appointed work that must be carried out in heaven.

Thus the word is properly translated “remain,” NIV/NRSV/NIB/NLT “be kept in,” BBE “must contain,” GENEVA “retain,” MRD/WILLIAMS “must keep,” NJB “must stay in,” IE and “receive [and retain].” AMPLIFIED

Therefore, Peter is going to affirm that Christ’s presence is required in heaven until a certain appointed time. That time will be specified with remarkable detail.

An Application

Those who emphasize this world and its experiences, by that very emphasis, obscure Christ’s presence in heaven. Christ is remaining in heaven to fulfill certain appointed objectives. Those objectives required His sufferings, death, burial, resurrection, and ascension. The maintenance of our fleshly status did not require one of these things, much less all of them. The utter absurdity of an earth-centric religion is worthy of nothing more than instant rejection. If such an fatuousness was true, Jesus would have remained on the earth, governing the Kingdom from here, and conducting His ministry in stark contradiction of what He clearly affirmed to Pilate (John 18:36).

UNTIL

“ . . . until . . . ” All versions use “until” or “till.”

The word “until” identifies the duration of a condition. Thus the word “until” marked the conclusion of the time during which the waters of Noah covered the mountains (Gen 8:5). It also identified how long Noah’s raven flew “to and fro, until the waters were dried up from the earth” (Gen 8:7). When Rebekah providentially met Abraham’s servant who was in quest for a wife for Isaac, she told him she would “draw water for thy camels also, until they have done drinking” (Gen 24:19). When the Passover lamb was selected, it was to be kept “until the fourteenth day of the same month,” at which time it was to be killed (Ex 12:6).

Much is also made of the word “until” in the apostolic doctrine. Blindness has happened to Israel in part, “until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in” (Rom 11:25). We are to “judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God” (1 Cor 4:5). The gift of the Holy Spirit is said to be God’s pledge to us “until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of his glory,” which will occur at the resurrection of the dead (Eph 1:14). We are told that God will continue to perform the work He has begun in us “until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6). Paul admonished Timothy to resolutely “keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Tim 6:14). The First Covenant is pointedly said to have been in force “until the time of reformation” (Heb 9:10).

There is no justifiable reason for being ignorant about what the word “until” means. Whether we consider it from the standpoint of the English language, the Greek language, the text of Scripture, or the apostles’ doctrine, it always means the same thing. It marks the conclusion of something.

Now, our text informs us that heaven must receive and retain Christ until a certain time. That clearly means that there is an appointed termination to what he is presently doing. Christ’s current presence in heaven, with His people remaining in this world was never intended to be a permanent condition. Surely, this is clear to all.

It now becomes necessary to accent what Jesus is doing now – His present activity, or ministry. Everything associated with Jesus currently being seated at the right hand of God will cease when Jesus leaves His seat, returning to gather His own unto Himself. So, what is Jesus declared to be doing in His present ministry? Here are a few examples for your consideration.

- Giving repentance and remission of sins (Acts 5:31).
- Mediating the new Covenant (1 Tim 2:5; Heb 8:6; 9:15; 12:24).
- Interceding for those who come to God through Him (Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25).
- Sending the Holy Spirit (John 16:7; Acts 2:33).
- Sending grace, peace, mercy, and faith (Eph 6:23; 1 Tim 1:2; Tit 1:4; 2 John 1:3).
- Bringing many sons to glory (Heb 2:10).
- Expecting until His enemies are made His footstool (Heb 10:13).
- Nourishing and caring for the church (Eph 5:29-30).
- Teaching His people (Eph 4:10-21; 1 John 5:20).
- Dwelling in our hearts by faith (Eph 3:17).
- Speaking to us from heaven (Heb 12:25).
- Giving God a reason to forgive men of their sins (Eph 4:32).

All of these things require the presence of Jesus in heaven. Jesus once said of the sanctifying presence of the Holy Spirit, “if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you” (John 16:7). Peter has, therefore, announced that Christ’s presence in heaven will continue until an appointed time. After that, what Jesus is presently doing in heaven will no longer be done. In fact, it will no longer be required. Christ’s present ministry is designed to accomplish the salvation of God in this present evil world. When He leaves heaven, that ministry will cease. All of this was foreshadowed by the ministry of the High Priest. When He went unto the Most Holy Place, his ministry began. When he left it, it ended (Ex 28:35; Lev 16). Now Jesus is a “Minister of the sanctuary” (Heb 8:2). That ministry pertains exclusively to preparing the saints to be with Him. When He leaves to gather the saints, they will be made known, seeing Him as He is (1 John 3:1-2). At that time, creation will be liberated from “the bondage of corruption,” which liberation that are eagerly anticipating (Rom 8:21-22). Then, being itself loosed from mortality, the earth will no longer be able to be the residence for flesh and blood, or the place where fleshly activities take place.

THE TIMES OF RESTITUTION

“ 21b . . . the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.”

At this point, Peter will speak in glaring contradiction of a host of church doctrines. He will throw down any notion of an earthly kingdom following Christ’s present ministry in heaven. Admittedly, this will oppose many cherished doctrines. Men will thus be faced with a decision – whether to embrace the words of the man who had the “keys of the Kingdom of heaven,” or whether to continue to hold to the cherished traditions of men. Admittedly, this may involve some difficulty, but do not think for a moment that God will be tolerant of any frame of mind that leads a person to ignore what Peter now declares.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS

“ . . . the times of restitution of all things . . . ” Other versions read, “the times of restoration of all things,” NKJV “the period of restoration of all things,” NASB “”the time comes for God to restore everything ,” NIV “ the time of universal restoration ,” NRSV “the time for establishing ,” RSV

“the time when all things are put right ,” BBE “the times of the restoring of all things ,” DARBY “the times of the restitution of all things ,” DOUAY “the time when everything will be restored ,” GWN “the completion of the times of those things,” MRD “the times of universal restoration ,” NAB “ the time comes for God to restore everything,” NIB “the time for the final restoration of all things,” NLT “the time that all things . . . began to be restored again ,” TNT “the final recovery of all things from sin,” LIVING “the time when all things will become whole again ,” IE “the times of the reconstitution of all things,” WEYMOUTH “the time for the complete restoration of all,” AMPLIFIED “until that universal restoration ,” PHILLIPS and “the time comes for all things to be made new .” GNB

This will be disruptive of some very cherished theological views. However, there really is no question about Peter’s insight, spiritual expertise, or authority. We do well to give heed to what he proclaims, for we will eventually face these words once again.

There have been times appointed for certain things to cease. For example, “ until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled” (Lk 21:24), or “ until ye be endued with power from on high” (Lk 24:49), or “ until the Lord come,” 1 Cor 4:5), or “ until the redemption of the purchased possession” (Eph 1:14), or “ till we all come in the unity of the faith” (Eph 4:15), or “ until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts” (2 Pet 1:19). But this is not the kind of “until” in this text – an earthly “until!”

The Restitution

Peter refers to “ the restitution.” The manner in which he speaks makes clear that he is referring to something that is well known – something on which God has spoken with clarity.

The word “restitution” comes from the Greek word avpokatasta,sewj . It has the lexical meaning, “restoration . . . to a perfect state,” THAYER “to restore, to cause again to be.” LOUW-NIDA Being led by the Spirit, Peter will not allow his listeners to speculate about the meaning of his words. He is not speaking of the restoration of Israel, but the restoration of “all things.” He is not referring to the restoration of fallen man, but to the restoration “of all things.” Paul referred to this as “the creation itself” being “delivered from the bondage of corruption,” associating that deliverance with the “manifestation of the sons of God” in a state of “glorious liberty” (Rom 8:19-21). This refers to the time appointed by God when He will “gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him” (Eph 1:10). Even this language, however, is not precise enough, and may leave room for novices and charlatans to draw false conclusions. Thus Peter is very specific about “the restoration” to which he refers. This will be disruptive of some very cherished theological views. However, there really is no question about Peter’s insight, spiritual expertise, or authority. We do well to give heed to what he proclaims, for we will eventually face these words once again.

SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS

“ . . . which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began.” Other versions read, “ about which God spoke by the mouth of His holy prophets from ancient time,” NASB “as He promised long ago through his holy prophets,” NIV “that God announced long ago through His holy prophets,” NRSV “whereof God spake by the mouth of His holy prophets that have been from of old ,” ASV “of which God has given word by the mouth of His holy prophets, who have been from the earliest times ,” BBE “which God spoke about by the mouth of His holy prophets from the beginning ,” CSB “of which God has spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets since time began ,” DARBY “which God proclaimed , speaking through his holy prophets,” NJB “as prophesied from ancient times,” LIVING “ God told about these things long ago when He spoke through His holy prophets,” IE “of which God has spoken from the earliest ages through the lips of His holy prophets,” WEYMOUTH and “that God spoke by the mouth of all His holy prophets for ages past [from the most ancient time in the memory of man].” AMPLIFIED

Peter affirms that Jesus will stay in heaven until these things begin to come to pass. That is, when He leaves heaven, the heavens and the earth as they now are will be terminated.

The Prophets spoke of “the times of the restitution of all things.” It was a time when everything would be renewed, and all issues would be resolved.

- NEW HEAVENS AND EARTH. “For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind” (Isa 65:17).
- A NEW HEAVENS AND EARTH THAT WILL REMAIN. “For as the new heavens and the new earth, which I will make, shall remain before me, saith the LORD, so shall your seed and your name remain” (Isa 66:22).
- HEAVENS AND EARTH CHANGED. “Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old like a garment; as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed” (Psa 102:25-26).
- NO HURT OR DESTRUCTION. “The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust shall be the serpent's meat. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD” (Isa 65:25).
- THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD. “Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust: for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead” (Isa 26:19).
- DEATH SWALLOWED UP IN VICTORY. “He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord GOD will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the LORD hath spoken it” (Isa 25:8).
- SATAN BROUGHT DOWN TO HELL. “Yet thou shalt be brought down to hell, to the sides of the pit” (Isa 14:12-15).
- PRESENT HEAVENS AND EARTH PASS AWAY. “Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands. They shall perish . . .” (Psa 102:26).
- THE WORLD TO BE JUDGED. “But the LORD shall endure for ever: He hath prepared His throne for judgment. And He shall judge the world in righteousness, He shall minister judgment to the people in uprightness” (Psa 9:8).
- ALL FLESH WILL SEE THE GLORY OF THE LORD. “And the glory of the LORD shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together: for the mouth of the LORD hath spoken it” (Isa 40:5).

This is only representative of a host of prophecies having to do with final outcomes. Peter affirms that Jesus will stay in heaven until these things begin to come to pass. That is, when He leaves heaven, the heavens and the earth as they now are will be terminated. This was also revealed to John on the Isle of Patmos. “And I saw a great white throne, and Him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them” (Rev 20:11).

Paul also spoke of the climactic nature of Christ’s appearing. Here are some of the things that will occur, all of which have to do with the “restitution of all things.”

- THE DEAD WILL BE RAISED. “In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed” (1 Cor 15:52). Paul said there would be a single resurrection, including the just and the unjust. “And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust” (Acts 24:15). Jesus Himself said that at the sound of His voice, all of the graves would yield up their dead. “Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation” (John 5:29).

• ALL OF THE RIGHTEOUS WILL BE GATHERED TOGETHER. “And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other” (Mat 24:30-31).

• AT THE SAME TIME, THE WICKED AND ALL THINGS THAT OFFEND WILL BE GATHERED OUT OF THE EARTH. “The Son of man shall send forth His angels, and they shall gather out of His kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth” (Mat 13:41-42).

• THE ARCH FOE OF CHRIST WILL BE DESTROYED BY HIS COMING. “And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders” (2 Thess 2:8-9).

• THOSE WHO KNOW NOT GOD AND OBEY NOT THE GOSPEL WILL BE PUNISHED WHEN JESUS COMES TO BE GLORIFIED IN HIS SAINTS. “In flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ: Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (because our testimony among you was believed) in that day” (2 Thess 1:8-10).

• JESUS WILL RETURN WITH HIS REWARD, TO GIVE TO EVERY MAN. “And, behold, I come quickly; and My reward is with Me, to give every man according as his work shall be” (Rev 22:12).

• AT HIS RETURN, JESUS WILL BRING TO LIGHT THE HIDDEN THINGS OF DARKNESS, AND MAKE MANIFEST THE COUNSELS OF THE HEART. “Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God” (1 Cor 4:5).

The words of our text – “Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things” – affirm that Jesus will not leave heaven until the time when these things are to be fulfilled – things that involve everything the prophets have spoken.

MOSES PROPHESED OF HIM

“ 22 For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you.”

Peter continues to anchor his proclamation in the preparatory word of the prophets, of which Moses was primary. As it is written, “And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face” (Deut 34:10). Now, Peter refers to one of Moses’ key prophecies. His reference is found in the book of Deuteronomy. “The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken . . . I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him” (Deut 18:15,18).

RAISED UP BY GOD

“For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me . . .” Other versions read, “The Lord your God will raise up for you from your own people a prophet like me,” NRSV “The Lord God will raise up for you a prophet from your brethren as he raised me up.” RSV and “A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up to you out of your brethren like me.” DARBY

This “Prophet” would not be one cultured by the Jewish teachers. He would not be a product of the Temple or synagogue systems. He would not be one who rose to prominence through His own natural aptitude. The people would not put this Prophet in the position of prominence. This Prophet would be “raised up” by God Himself.

This “Prophet” would not be one cultured by the Jewish teachers. He would not be a product of the Temple or synagogue systems. He would not be one who rose to prominence through His own natural aptitude. The people would not put this Prophet in the position of prominence. This Prophet would be “raised up” by God Himself. As far as human surroundings were concerned, He would be a “root out of a dry ground ” (Isa 53:2). Concerning his birth, a “ virgin shall conceive and bear a son” (Isa 7:14). As related to the commencement of His salvational work, God “raised Him from the dead ” (Acts 13:30). If we consider His mission, “the Father sent the Son to be the Savior of the world” (1 John 4:14).

Raised Up FOR the People

“ . . . raise up unto you.” Because “the people” were helpless in themselves, Jesus was “raised up” for them. They could not discern the mind of the Lord, so He raised up a Prophet for them – to declare the Father to them (John 1:16). Because their perception of the Law was flawed and unprofitable, God raised Jesus up to “magnify the Law, and make it honorable” (Isa 42:21). If it was not for “the people,” there would have been no need for this “Prophet.” There would have been no need for Him on earth, and the Father would not have needed Him to be His “Lamb” (John 1:29,36) and “Christ” (Lk 2:26; Acts 4:26).

Raised up FROM the People

“ . . . of your brethren.” This “Prophet” would be a Jew, for “salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22). He would be the “Seed,” or offspring, of Abraham, and through Him “all nations of the earth” would “be blessed” (Gen 22:18). His kingly lineage would be through David (Psa 89:35-36; Isa 9:7; Jer 23:5). It was through the nation of Israel that Jesus was given to the world (Rom 9:5).

I affirm that those who are of God DO hear His Prophet, Jesus Christ, just as Moses said they would. I will further affirm that only those who are alienated from God do NOT hear the Prophet God has raised up. Additionally, I will also declare that unless this condition is remedied, there cannot possibly be any hope of being saved.

Does pedigree or ancestry make a difference? When it comes to this “Prophet” it does! Moses told the people He would be “from your brethren.” NKJV

A Prophet Like Moses

This would be a distinct prophet – like Moses was. Like Moses, God would speak “face to face” with Him (Ex 33:11; Deut 34:10). That is, He would not speak to this Prophet by means of dreams and visions, as He did to others. Like Moses it could be said of Him, “If there be a prophet among you, I the LORD will make Myself known unto him in a vision, and will speak unto him in a dream. My servant Moses is not so, who is faithful in all mine house. With him will I speak mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches; and the similitude of the LORD shall he behold: wherefore then were ye not afraid to speak against My servant Moses?” (Num 12:6-8).

Like Moses, this Prophet would be called independently of the people themselves. He would not be called in the midst of the congregation, but in a solitary place (Ex 3:1-4:19).

HIM YE SHALL HEAR

“ . . . Him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever He shall say unto you.” Other versions read, “To Him you shall give heed in everything He says to you,” NASB “you must listen to everything He tells you,” NIV “You must listen to whatever he tells you ,” NRSV “ You shall listen to Him in whatever He tells you,” RSV “ you will give ear to everything which He will say to you,” BBE “Him you shall hear according to all things whatsoever He shall speak to you ,” DOUAY “You must obey Him in everything He tells you,” NET “ you will listen to whatever He tells you,” NJB “You must listen attentively to everything He tells you,” WILLIAMS “Him you shall listen to and understand by hearing and heed in all things whatever He tells you,” AMPLIFIED and “Him you will hear [or, pay attention to] in all [things], as many [things] as He shall speak to you.” ALT

There are two ways in which this text can be taken. First, it can be seen as a prophecy : “you shall . . . you will.” Second, it can be seen as an obligation : “you must.” Both are true. However in this text, the emphasis is on the prophetic, not the obligatory. The responsibility for hearing this Prophet will be accented in the next clause. This word, however, declares the nature of the era of Christ – the time of the New Covenant.

Take, for example, an obligation that the inspired Moses placed upon the people. “Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiffnecked” (Deut 10:16). That was, to be sure, something that had to be done. The circumcision, however, would actually be accomplished during the age of the Messiah. Thus Moses later said, “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6). That was the prophetic sense of the word, just as “ye shall hearken” is in the prophetic sense.

I affirm that those who are of God DO hear His Prophet, Jesus Christ, just as Moses said they would. I will further affirm that only those who are alienated from God do NOT hear the Prophet God has raised up. Additionally, I will also declare that unless this condition is remedied, there cannot possibly be any hope of being saved. Here, in this world, men may learn to countenance an ignorance of God and a lack of appetite for His Word and will. However, this is not the attitude maintained in heaven.

A person may be able to be a member of a local congregation, yet remain fundamentally ignorant of God and essentially anchored to this present evil world. This condition may continue for years, even decades, with the individual being acknowledged as a “Christian” and a church member in good standing. I will now establish that such a condition directly contradicts the prophecy of Moses, the words of Jesus and the doctrine of the apostles, and is therefore totally unacceptable. Remember, we are considering the promise that the real people “shall hearken” to the real Prophet God has “raised up” – the Lord Jesus Christ.

The sheep and their exclusive identity with Christ. “And when He putteth forth His own sheep, He goeth before them, and the sheep follow Him: for they know His voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers” (John 10:4-5). In this remarkable expression, the Lord Jesus reveals a number of things. First, all of the sheep are in the posture of following. They are not seeking their own will, and they have an unmistakable attraction to Christ. Second, in the capacity of a Shepherd, Jesus does not walk by the side of the sheep, but is in a leading stance, and the sheep do follow Him. Third, the sheep have no inclination to leaders other than Jesus. In fact, once they have identified Christ, they will withdraw from pretentious leaders, even running from them. Fourth, when they are summoned to follow other shepherds who do not themselves have the truth, the real sheep refuse to follow them, for there is a strange and offensive sound in their voice.

The dividing line between the real sheep and the pretenders is found in spiritual hearing . . . A failure to believe is directly owing to the inability to hear Christ's "voice." That means that faith is not possible where men have not been drawn to Christ.

Even before they knew of Christ, the real sheep were not enamored of false shepherds. "All that ever came before Me are thieves and robbers: but the sheep did not hear them" (John 10:8). Throughout history, there have been self-proclaimed messiah's – men who affirmed they had the answer to the human dilemma. But they were only interested in what they could get from the sheep, not what they could give to them. Such men could not bring satisfaction to the sheep. Their words had a hollow sound to them, and could not divert the sheep from longing and looking for the Good Shepherd. Even when the sheep were within range of the voice of these shepherds, there remained in their words a tone of spiritual poverty. The sheep knew what they were hearing could not really enrich them, and thus they could not give their undivided attention to these "thieves and robbers."

The singularity of both the fold and the flock is confirmed by the nature of the sheep. That nature is fundamentally revealed in their consistent response to the Good Shepherd. "And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear My voice ; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd" (John 10:16). The appointed means by which the sheep are gathered together is, in this perspective, the "voice" of the Lord Jesus – His words. They prove to be a rallying point for the real people of God.

The dividing line between the real sheep and the pretenders is found in spiritual hearing. "But ye believe not, because ye are not of My sheep, as I said unto you. My sheep hear My voice, and I know them, and they follow Me" (John 10:27). A failure to believe is directly owing to the inability to hear Christ's "voice." That means that faith is not possible where men have not been drawn to Christ (John 6:44; 12:32). That drawing is accomplished through Christ's "voice." That is, the real sheep are attracted to Him because of what He says . This is not the attraction of intellectual intrigue or mere curiosity. Rather, there is a satisfaction realized when the "word of Christ" is embraced. That is why the real sheep allow it so dwell in them "richly" (Col 3:16).

It is not possible to have favorable identity with God if there is not a fundamental propensity toward His Word , particularly as it has been revealed through Christ . " He that is of God heareth God's words : ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God" (John 8:47). Men cannot "live by every word of God" out of a sense of mere obligation. Rather, life is realized through "every word of God" because of insight and preference.

In the New Covenant, God has no children who do not hear Christ's words. They ALL hear Jesus, and they ALL know God. The Father begets no sons who lack an appetite for His Word, or the aptitude to detect when He is speaking. Admittedly, this does have alarming implications.

THE OUTCOME OF FAILING TO HEARKEN TO HIM

" 23 And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."

Do we dare to be casual about this matter of listening to and obeying Jesus? Is there some institutional quality that will make up for not listening to the One through whom God is speaking to us? The words that follow confirm the gravity of the failure to listen to and disobey Jesus. Whatever men may think or say about “unconditional love,” here is something that is absolutely without exclusion. If a person refuses to listen to Jesus, here is what will happen, and there are absolutely no exceptions to it.

IT SHALL COME TO PASS

“And it shall come to pass . . .” Other versions read, “And it shall be,” NKJV “And it will be,” NRSV “From it shall be,” GENEVA “For the time will come,” TNT and “The result will be.” WILLIAMS

What follows will happen. It is based upon Divine determination. If the specified condition is found, there is no possible way to avoid the pronouncement concerning it.

EVERY SOUL THAT WILL NOT HEAR

“ . . . that every soul, which will not hear that prophet . . .” Other versions read, “every soul that does not heed that prophet,” NASB “Anyone who does not listen to Him,” NIV “ everyone who does not listen to that prophet,” NRSV “ every soul that shall not hearken to that prophet,” ASV “every soul who does not give attention to that prophet,” BBE “Those who won’t listen to that prophet,” GWN “every soul that does not heed that prophet,” NAU “Every person who does not obey that prophet,” NET “Anyone who refuses to listen to that prophet,” NJB “everyone, without exception, who refuses to listen to that prophet,” WEYMOUTH “every soul that does not listen to and understand by hearing and heed that Prophet,” AMPLIFIED and “every soul who does not hear [or, pay attention to] that Prophet.” ALT

Those who do not hearken to Jesus will not be accepted by God, and will be held in strict account for their failure to give heed to His words. The prophecy is very precise on this matter.

Those who do not hearken to Jesus will not be accepted by God, and will be held in strict account for their failure to give heed to His words. The prophecy is very precise on this matter

It is difficult to conceive of anything being more serious than refusing to listen to the One through whom God is speaking to us in these “last days.” However, when men listen to “another Jesus,” they fall into this class of people: “whoever will not listen to My words when He shall speak in My name” (Deut 18:19). It seems to me that this requires no further explanation. For God to receive those who have listened to “another Jesus” would be nothing less than a repudiation of His own Son, His death, His resurrection, His exaltation, His mediation of the New Covenant, and His intercession for the saints. In such a case, all of those benefits would actually be received from another “Jesus” who was nothing more than an imposter. Either that, or Jesus would administer the benefits through an imposter – which thought is utterly preposterous. Men are held responsible for listening to the right Jesus – the Prophet of whom Moses spoke.

Moses said the Prophet would speak what God put into His mouth. That removes His words from the arena of interpretation, opinion, and philosophy. It makes His words of the utmost importance, for God is not capable of conceiving or expressing vain, pointless, and irrelevant words.

- “FOLLOW ME” (Matt 16:24; Mk 8:34; Lk 9:23; John 12:26). If we desire the benefits Jesus brings, we have no alternative but to follow Him, pursue Him, and seek to be close to Him. Jesus said this involved denying self and taking up our cross every day. If a person is to serve Christ, He must be a follower of Him.

- “LAY UP FOR YOURSELVES TREASURES IN HEAVEN” (Matt 6 :20; Lk 12:33). This is not a suggestion. This word is preceded by another one: “Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth ” (6:19). At some point men must decide where they are going to make their investment. Will it be in a world that is perishing, or in heaven, that will remain? Jesus gives us no reason to expect that anyone will be in heaven who did not make preparations for it.

- “SEEK YE FIRST THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND HIS RIGHTEOUSNESS” (Matt 6:33; Lk 12:31). Does anyone imagine that Jesus will allow a person to be His disciple, and be blessed by Him, who does have a prevailing interest in God’s Kingdom and the appropriation of His righteousness? This word from Jesus is heard by all of His people. Those who reject it, by that very rejection, confirm that they are not among His sheep, for His sheep “hear His voice.”

- “ENTER YE IN AT THE STRAIT GATE” (Matt 7:13; Lk 13:24). The “strait gate” is the one that makes no provision for the flesh (Rom 13:14). The real sheep follow the real Jesus. They are not seeking a religion that allows them to retain fleshly preferences and worldly status. They willingly enter the gate that does not allow “the flesh,” “the carnal mind,” or “the natural man” to enter.

- “TAKE HEED WHAT YE HEAR” (Mk 4:24). The sheep hear this word and are careful about the stewardship of their minds. They do not allow every religious word to have free course in their mind. When words are spoken in the name of Christ, yet do not promote a fundamental interest in Christ, they turn away, hearkening to this warning word. When they hear a word that sharpens their consciousness of Christ, they give heed to it, having embraced this utterance.

- “COME UNTO ME” (Matt 11:28; John 7:37). The sheep are glad to hear this word, because in this world they have become “weary and heavy laden” because of it’s inability to meet their primary needs and concerns. In Jesus they see a “hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest.” They find in Him “rivers of water in a dry place,” and the “shadow of a great rock in a weary land” (Isa 32:2). They come to Him because they desire to do so. Only those who are not His own fail to do this.

- “WATCH THEREFORE; FOR YE KNOW NOT WHAT HOUR YOUR LORD DOTH COME” (Matt 24:42; 25:13; Mk 13:33). The people of God take this word seriously, because they know this world, and its “fashion,” is passing away (1 Cor 7:31; 1 John 2:17). Their affection has been set on things above, and they are anticipating the return of their Lord – so they are watching. Only those who do not belong to Jesus remain dull and insensitive to this word.

- “IF YE LOVE ME, KEEP MY COMMANDMENTS” (John 14:15). It is one thing to boast of a love for Jesus. It is quite another to confirm it by maintaining a preference for, and a grasp of, His commandments. To the real people of God, Christ’s commandments “are not grievous” (1 John 5:3). His “yoke is easy,” and His “burden is light” (Matt 11:30). Only those who do not love Jesus fail to retain His commandments.

- “ABIDE IN ME, AND I IN YOU” (John 15:4). Backsliding and departing from Jesus may be common in the professing church, but it is not so with the “sheep” – the real people of God. They give heed to this word, remain in Him, and experience the refreshment of Jesus remaining in them. Some people may view this as a goal. It is rather to be regarded as a point at which the profession of being joined to Christ is confirmed. Those who do not remain in Him cannot be identified with Him.

- “TAKE HEED THAT YE BE NOT DECEIVED” (Luke 21:8). It is the responsibility of every person claiming identity with Jesus, or declaring themselves to be Christian, to see to it that they are “not deceived.” This requirement exists even though “many false prophets are gone out into the world” (1 John 4:1). The real people of God “hearken” to this word of Jesus, and therefore He helps them through the power of the Holy Spirit to avoid being swept away in the tide of delusion.

Once a person comes into Christ, the absolute requirement to listen to Jesus does not cease, nor does the curse against such people come to an end. In fact, hearing, or listening to this “Prophet” is one of the appointed means of deciphering who is genuine and who is not.

SHALL BE DESTROYED FROM AMONG THE PEOPLE

“ . . . shall be destroyed from among the people.” Other versions read, “shall be utterly destroyed from among the people,” NKJV “ completely cut off from among His people,” NIV “will be utterly rooted out of the people,” NRSV “shall be destroyed out of the people,” GENEVA “will be excluded from the people,” GWN “that soul shall perish from among the people,” MRD “will be cut off from the people,” NAB “will be completely cut off from God’s people,” NLT “ he will die , cut off from God’s people,” IE “shall be utterly exterminated from among the people,” AMPLIFIED and “shall be separated from God’s people and destroyed.” GNB

The penalty for failing to listen to Jesus is so plain that one must be stubborn and rebellious to miss it. Note the clarity. Such a person will be “destroyed,” NKJV “cut off,” NIV “rooted out,” NRSV excluded,” GWN caused to “perish,” MRD spiritually “die,” IE be “exterminated,” AMPLIFIED and “separated.” GNB

Notice that this will take place “from among the people,” or “out of the people,” GENEVA and “from God’s people.” NLT/GNB That is, they will be removed from the class of individuals identified as THE PEOPLE – the ones who are associated with God. This is not speaking of the people of this world, or sinners in general. In the sense of our text, this is not the people to which Jesus, or “the Prophet,” is speaking. When reference is made to Jesus speaking “from heaven,” it always has reference to Him speaking to His people (Heb 12:25).

A Conclusion

This word dashes all theology to the ground that affirms the indestructibility of anyone who has been identified with God’s people. Once a person comes into Christ, the absolute requirement to listen to Jesus does not cease, nor does the curse against such people come to an end. In fact, hearing, or listening to this “Prophet” is one of the appointed means of deciphering who is genuine and who is not. Although those refusing to listen to Jesus may wear the name “Christian,” and be officially classed among His people, they are really nothing more than intruders. They are “tares” (Matt 13:38-39), “bad fish” (Matt 13:48), and have “neither part nor lot in this matter” (Acts 8:21). They “serve not our Lord Jesus Christ” (Rom 16:18), and are “plants” that the heavenly Father “hath not planted” (Matt 15:13).

If that seems too strong, please know that it is really rather weak. The announced judgment against such people confirms the seriousness of the transgression. Anyone and everyone who is not actively listening to Jesus, receiving His word, and responding in faith to it, stands in jeopardy of losing their soul. They are giving their soul in exchange for some worldly bauble.

ALL THE PROPHETS FROM SAMUEL AND THOSE FOLLOWING

“ 24a Yea, and all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after . . .” Other versions read, “from Samuel and his successors onward,” NASB “all the prophets from Samuel on,” NIV “from Samuel and those after him,” NRSV “from Samuel and those who came afterward,” RSV “from Samuel and them that followed after,” ASV “from Samuel and thenceforth,” GENEVA “Starting with Samuel,” NLT “Samuel and every prophet since,” LIVING “Samuel and all the other prophets after Samuel,” IE “All the prophets . . . from Samuel down,” WILLIAMS “all the prophets from

Samuel and those who came afterwards,” AMPLIFIED and “all the prophets . . . including Samuel and those who came after him.” GNB

FROM SAMUEL

Samuel recorded the kingly aspect of the Messiah, declaring that He would come from David’s lineage and sit upon his throne. The words were actually spoken by Nathan, yet were recorded by Samuel. “I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom. He shall build an house for My name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever” (2 Sam 7:12-13).

Commensurate with Samuel, God began to speak with greater clarity concerning the coming Messiah. From Samuel on, the promised Deliverer was associated with a covenant.

Moses and Samuel are also mentioned together in the Psalms. “Moses and Aaron among his priests, and Samuel among them that call upon his name; they called upon the LORD, and he answered them” (Psa 99:6). And again, Jeremiah makes mention of them as being powerful intercessors: “Then said the LORD unto me, Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people: cast them out of my sight, and let them go forth” (Jer 15:1).

Commensurate with Samuel, God began to speak with greater clarity concerning the coming Messiah. From Samuel on, the promised Deliverer was associated with a covenant. Thus the 89th Psalm says of the promise delivered to David by Nathan, “I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David My servant, Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. Selah . . . Also I will make Him My firstborn, higher than the kings of the earth . . . My mercy will I keep for Him for evermore, and My covenant shall stand fast with Him . . . His seed also will I make to endure for ever, and His throne as the days of heaven . . . My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of My lips. Once have I sworn by My holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and His throne as the sun before Me. It shall be established for ever as the moon, and as a faithful witness in heaven. Selah” (Psa 89:3-4, 27-29, 34-37).

AND THOSE THAT FOLLOW

The role of “the prophets” who followed Samuel in the defining and announcing of the Savior of the world has been greatly neglected by the professing church. They “preached” the coming Messiah with remarkable precision.

- The abundance of revelation concerning Jesus confirms both the sureness and the greatness of salvation. All of the prophecies were, in a way, a challenge to Satan and

- BORN IN BETHLEHEM. “But thou, Bethlehem Ephrathah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be Ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting” (Micah 5:2; Matt 2:5).

- HE WOULD BE DESPISED BY THE PEOPLE. “He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief: and we hid as it were our faces from him; He was despised, and we esteemed him not” (Isa 53:3; Matt 27:25).

- HE WOULD BE HATED WITHOUT A CAUSE. “They that hate Me without a cause are more than the hairs of Mine head: they that would destroy Me, being Mine enemies wrongfully, are mighty: then I restored that which I took not away” (Psa 69:4; John 15:25).

- UNDER OPPRESSION, HE WOULD BE MEEK. “He shall not cry, nor lift up, nor cause his voice to be heard in the street” (Isa 42:2). “The Lord GOD hath opened mine ear, and I was not rebellious, neither turned away back. I gave my back to the smiters, and my cheeks to them that plucked off the hair: I hid not my face from shame and spitting” (Isa 50:5-6).

• HE WOULD BE CUT OFF, BEING PUT TO DEATH, BUT NOT FOR HIS SIN. “And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself . . .” (Dan 9:26; Gal 3:13).

• WHEN YOUNG, HE WOULD BE CALLED OUT OF EGYPT. “When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt” (Hosea 11:1; Matt 2:14-15).

• HE WOULD BE CUT OFF WHEN YOUNG, HAVING NO FLESHLY OFFSPRING. “He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken” (Isa 53:8).

• HE WOULD MINISTER IN GALILEE. “Nevertheless the dimness shall not be such as was in her vexation, when at the first he lightly afflicted the land of Zebulun and the land of Naphtali, and afterward did more grievously afflict her by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, in Galilee of the nations. The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined” (Isa 9:1-2; Matt 4:14-15).

• HE WOULD BE A REDEEMER. “For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth” (Job 19:25).

• HE WOULD HEAL THE SICK. “Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted” (Isa 53:4; Matt 8:17).

• HE WAS A STONE REFUSED BY THE BUILDERS. “The stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner” (Psa 118:22).

• HE WAS FROM THE LINEAGE OF JESSE: “And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots” (Isa 11:1).

• HE WAS NOTED FOR WISDOM. “And the spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the LORD; And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the LORD: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears” (Isa 11:2-3; Matt 13:54).

• HE WAS PRECEDED BY A VOICE CRYING OUT IN THE WILDERNESS. “The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God” (Isa 40:3).

• HE WAS A WITNESS TO THE PEOPLE. “Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people” (Isa 55:4).

• HE WOULD RIDE INTO JERUSALEM ON A FOAL. “Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: He is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass” (Zech 9:9).

The abundance of revelation concerning Jesus confirms both the sureness and the greatness of salvation. All of the prophecies were, in a way, a challenge to Satan and his hosts to do their best to abort their fulfillment.

THEY FORETOLD THESE DAYS

“ 24b . . . as many as have spoken, have likewise foretold of these days.”

Now Peter is even more specific, affirming that the prophets have foretold the times during which Jesus is administering salvation – “these days.”

AS MANY AS HAVE SPOKEN

“ . . . as many as have spoken . . .” Other versions read, “who spoke,” NAB “that have ever spoken,” NJB “as many as spake,” YLT “who spoke for God,” IE and “all who have spoken.”
WEYMOUTH

The phrase “as many as have spoken,” particularly relates to, what Peter called elsewhere, “the glory that should follow” (1 Pet 1:11). As many as spoke of the coming Savior, referred of what would occur during His administration. In other words, the Spirit moved holy men to speak of the times during which men would be delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of God’s dear Son (Col 1:13).

FORETOLD THESE DAYS

“ . . . have likewise foretold of these days.” Other versions read, “announced these days,” NASB “also predicted these days,” NRSV “also proclaimed these days,” RSV “gave word of these days,” BBE “spoke about these days,” GWN “spoke about what is happening today,” NLT “have likewise told you about these days,” PNT “did also foretell these days,” YLT “talked about these days,” IE “have also announced the coming of this present time,” WEYMOUTH and “also promised and foretold and proclaimed these days.” AMPLIFIED

Paul referred to the time as “the accepted time” and “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). He also referred to this as the time when God is speaking through his Son (Heb 1:2). “These days” are those which followed “the fulness of the time,” when God “sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the Law” (Gal 4:4).

And, what did the prophets say of “these days” – these days of salvation, and the open heavens? We will find their words to be most wonderful. They will also be words that will be a confirmation of the blessedness of the time. A few of them will suffice for verification of this.

- “In His days shall the righteous flourish ; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth” (Psa 72:7).
- “They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power” (Psa 145:11).
- “The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto Him shall the gathering of the people be ” (Gen 49:10).
- “And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord’s house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it ” (Isa 2:2).
- “And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and He will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths : for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem” (Isa 2:3).
- “And in this mountain shall the LORD of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things , a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined” (Isa 25:6).
- “Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert” (Isa 35:5-6).

- “ And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness ; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein” (Isa 35:8).

- “And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads : they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (Isa 35:10).

- “ I the LORD have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; To open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house ” (Isa 42:6-7).

“And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them , saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (Jer 31:34).

- “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh” (Ezek 36:26).

- “In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness ” (Zech 13:1).

According to the prophets, during “these days” of salvation the Gentiles will be called (Isa 49:22), Israel will be converted (Ezek 11:17-19), a unity among God’s people will be realized (Zeph 3:9), and the whole earth would be filled with the knowledge of the Lord (Hab 2:14). There would be a change in the character of the people (Ezek 36:25-27). The appointment of beauty, joy, and praise would be realized (Isa 61:3). A remarkable recovery would be experienced (Isa 61:4). A way to God would be found in, what was conceived to be, impossible circumstances – like a way being made in the wilderness, and rivers in a desert (Isa 43:19). The people would receive a new identity (Isa 62:2). A new and better covenant would be put into place (Jer 31:31-34). Iniquities would be subdued, and sins would be cast “into the depth of the sea” (Mic 7:19). There would be “showers of blessing” (Ezek 34:26). “These days” are also referred to as “these last times,” and are described as the period during which Jesus Christ has been made “manifest” (1 Pet 1:20). They are also described as “these last days” during which God is speaking to humanity exclusively through His Son (Heb 1:2).

Self-centered living is wholly inappropriate during “these days” (2 Cor 5:15). Sin in all of its forms is out of order (1 John 2:1). No place has been made for an ignorance of God (Heb 8:11; 1 John 5:20). These are days in which Divine leading has been provided (Rom 8:13). Access to God has been graciously provided (Rom 5:2; Eph 2:18; 3:12). Men can now “obtain mercy and find grace to help in the time of need” (Heb 4:16).

How can it possibly be that a weak and emaciated church could exist in “these days” ? What possible excuse can be offered for continuance in sin? We should discern from both the tone and content of Peter’s message that wholesome responses are expected from men, and he will press the people for such to occur.

It is time for the professed church to cease being tolerant of sin. Let it discontinue its miserable explanations for sin and declare that remission itself proves that sin is always out of place, else it would not need to be forgiven. Let it purge from its ranks those sophists who spend their time promoting sympathy for sinners instead of calling them repentance. We have before us the man with “the keys of the Kingdom of heaven.” Let us hear what he says. The Holy Spirit is speaking through him, and therefore he will speak with insight and depth, precision and power.

YE ARE THE CHILDREN OF THE PROPHETS

“ 25a Ye are the children of the prophets . . . ” Other versions read, “the sons of the prophets .” NKJV “the heirs of the prophets ,” NIV “the descendants of the prophets ,” NRSV “descendants (sons) of the prophets,” AMPLIFIED and “ The promises of God through his prophets are for you.” GNB

The meaning here is not that the people were the offspring of the prophets, or that they were merely in their fleshly lineage. The idea is that they were the proper recipients of the words of the prophets. The prophets were like their instructors, and they were like children being directed by the prophet’s words. They were disciples, or pupils, of the prophets. The Jews, particularly the ones standing before Peter, lived among the people that were addressed by the prophets. They were in the family over which the prophets presided – and the prophets were sent to them by God Himself (2 Chron 24:19; Jer 7:25; 25:4; Zech 7:12).

A PRINCIPLE TO BE SEEN

In our time, it can be said that the churches are the children of the Apostles. God placed them “first” in the church, to ground and settle it in the truth. The “apostles’ doctrine” is the teaching of the church, and they, like the early disciples, are to continue in it

There is a principle seen here that requires brief elaboration. When a word from God is sent to a person or people, they are under obligation to hear it – hearkening to and obeying it. This is why God judged Israel for not giving heed to the prophets. Their word was actually God’s word to the people. God made this clear through Jeremiah. “And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants the prophets , rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear . They said, Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you and to your fathers for ever and ever: and go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt. Yet ye have not hearkened unto ME , saith the LORD; that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt” (Jer 25:4-7).

The failure of Judah to hear the words of God’s prophets was so serious that God sent Nebuchadnezzar against them, to overcome, plunder them, and take them captive (Jer 29:19-23).

God also spoke through Zechariah years later, upbraiding the people for not hearing His prophets. “Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: but they did not hear, nor hearken unto Me , saith the LORD” (Zech 1:4). The prophet cried out, “ Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited the south and the plain?” (Zech 7:7). There was no acceptable excuse for not giving heed to the prophets. That is because the prophets were sent to them – they were “the children of the prophets,” the ones they tutored. God did not give them the option of ignoring His prophets. It may have appeared as though they were free to do so, but they were not. They sinned in not hearing them, and thus were punished.

IN OUR TIME

In our time, it can be said that the churches are the children of the Apostles. God placed them “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28), to ground and settle it in the truth. The “apostles’ doctrine” is the teaching of the church, and they, like the early disciples, are to continue in it (Acts 2:42). The church is “build upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets” (Eph 2:20). They have delivered to the church a message that was hidden from all previous ages (Eph 3:5). Peter said believers are to “be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior” (2 Pet 3:2). They are to remember “the words which were spoken before of the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Jude 1:17).

Is there a person of sound mind in all of the world that is willing affirm that the church is free to ignore the apostles Christ has given to them? Are they at liberty to remain in ignorance concerning their message, or to fail to give heed to it? Jesus said, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth Me; and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me” (John 13:20). Again He said to His disciples, “He that heareth you heareth Me; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me” (Luke 10:16).

Now, I must press this matter because of its seriousness. I am going to say that the professing church is rejecting the Apostles, refusing to hear them, and thrusting their word from themselves. Does that sound too strong? Then let us examine some of the things the Apostles have said.

- GO ON TO PERFECTION. “Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection ; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God” (Heb 6:1).

- LET THERE BE NO DIVISIONS AMONG YOU. “Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you ; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).

- SIN NOT. “Awake to righteousness, and sin not ; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame” (1 Cor 15:34).

- BE NOT CHILDREN IN UNDERSTANDING. “Brethren, be not children in understanding: howbeit in malice be ye children, but in understanding be men” (1 Cor 14:20).

- GROW IN THE GRACE AND KNOWLEDGE OF CHRIST. “But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ . To him be glory both now and for ever. Amen” (2 Pet 3:18).

- ADD TO YOUR FAITH. “And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity” (2 Pet 1:5-7).

- DESIRE THE SINCERE MILK OF THE WORD. “As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby ” (1 Pet 2:2).

- LET THIS MIND BE IN YOU. “ Let this mind be in you , which was also in Christ Jesus” (Phil 2:5).

- HEAR WHAT THE SPIRIT IS SAYING TO THE CHURCHES. “He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches ” (Rev 2:7,11, 17,29; 3:6,13,22).

Seeing that the Lord Jesus has fully provided for the church by giving it the gifts of “apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastors and teachers” (Eph 4:11), how can a condition of ignorance and disobedience be so prominent? It is because those who lack these qualities have, in fact, rejected the apostles, even though they are, so to speak, their sons.

LOVE ONE ANOTHER WITH A PURE HEART FERVENTLY. ‘Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently ” (1 Pet 1:22).

• LET NO IMMORALITY BE ONCE NAMED AMONG YOU. “But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you , as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks” (Eph 5:3-4).

• LOVE NOT THE WORLD. “ Love not the world , neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him” (1 John 2:15).

• COME YE OUT FROM AMONG THEM. “Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? . . . Wherefore come out from among them , and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you” (2 Cor 6:14-17).

• SPEAK PROPERLY. “Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying , that it may minister grace unto the hearers” (Eph 4:29).

Is there any person of faith who is not painfully aware of the poverty of the modern church in all of these areas? And if that assessment is correct, why does it exist? Has not the exalted Christ taken deliberate measures to see to it that these words are fulfilled? Did He not endue His “holy apostles” (Eph 3:5) with power, provide them insight into God’s eternal purpose, and set them in the church to teach it?

Have you not personally encountered professing Christians without number that are not even aware of these words? Seeing that the Lord Jesus has fully provided for the church by giving it the gifts of “ apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastors and teachers” (Eph 4:11), how can a condition of ignorance and disobedience be so prominent? It is because those who lack these qualities have, in fact, rejected the apostles, even though they are, so to speak, their sons. This, in my judgment, is even more serious than the Jews rejecting the prophets.

YE ARE THE CHILDREN OF THE COVENANT

“ 25b . . . and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.”

THE COVENANT WHICH GOD MADE

“ . . . and of the covenant which God made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham . . . ” Other versions read, “of the covenant that God gave to your ancestors,” NRSV “and of the agreement which God made with your fathers,” BBE “and of the covenant that God made with your forefathers ,” CSB “and of the testament which God made to our fathers,” DOUAY “and the heirs of the promise that God made to our ancestors,” GWN “you are included in the covenant God promised to your ancestors,” NLT “You have received the agreement which God made with your ancestors,” IE “and the heirs of the sacred compact which God made with your forefathers,” WILLIAMS “and the heirs of the covenant which God made and gave to your forefathers,” AMPLIFIED “and of the covenant which God covenanted to our fathers ,” ALT and “and of the covenant which God appointed to our fathers.” LITV

Let it be clear that the coming of the Savior into the world depended ONLY upon God! There was no way in which this promise depended upon Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, or the children of Israel – no way at all! This covenant was a promise of what would be – even though all manner of sin was found among the offspring of Abraham.

Peter tells the people they are also the “children” of the covenant God made with Abraham. That is, they are heirs and recipients of it. It properly belongs to them, and they belong to it.

As is apparent in the text, Peter is not speaking about the “First Covenant” (Heb 8:7; 9:1) that was made with the people at Mount Sinai (Gal 4:24). This covenant, we will find, is the very one that is presently being mediated by the Lord Jesus. Paul referred to it in this manner: “Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ. And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect” (Gal 3:17).

Notice that “the covenant” is also called “the promise.” That is, this was a unilateral covenant – a one sided covenant. It was not an agreement, where two parties agreed to terms involving the activity of both. Paul makes a point of this one-sided nature of “the covenant” God made “unto Abraham.” “Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made; and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator. Now a mediator is not a mediator of one, but God is one” (Gal 3:19-20). The Amplified Bible gives the sense of this latter verse. “Now a go-between (intermediary) has to do with and implies more than one party [there can be no mediator with just one person]. Yet God is [only] one Person [and He was the sole party in giving that promise to Abraham.]”

This is, of course, the promise of the coming Messiah, who was the “Seed” to which the promise referred. Of that Seed Paul says, “Now to Abraham and his Seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy Seed, which is Christ” (Gal 3:16).

Let it be clear that the coming of the Savior into the world depended ONLY upon God! There was no way in which this promise depended upon Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, or the children of Israel – no way at all! This covenant was a promise of what would be – even though all manner of sin was found among the offspring of Abraham.

It is true that “salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22). However, that it not owing to their excellence, but is rather according to Divine appointment. The covenant presently being mediated by Jesus is not two-sided, and those who so represent it could not possibly be more wrong. The “promise” given to Abraham was not conditioned upon what men would do, but upon what God had determined to do. This is the only reason these people could be called “the children” of the covenant God made “unto Abraham.” In every other sense, they were disqualified.

ALL KINDREDS OF THE EARTH SHALL BE BLESSED

“ . . . And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed.” Other versions read, “And in your seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed,” NKJV “through your offspring all peoples on earth will be blessed,” NIV “And in your descendants all the families of the earth shall be blessed,” NRSV “And in your posterity shall all the families of the earth be blessed,” RSV “Through your seed a blessing will come on all the families of the earth,” BBE “And in your offspring shall all the families of the earth be blessed,” ESV “through your descendant all people on earth will be blessed,” GWN “to bless the entire world through the Jewish race – that is the promise God have to Abraham,” LIVING “I will bless all nations of the earth. I will use one of your descendants to do this,” IE “all families of the earth are to be blessed through your posterity,” WILLIAMS and “And in your Seed (Heir) shall all the families of the earth be blessed and benefited,” AMPLIFIED

This is the covenant “made with Abraham” (Psa 105:9): “ And in thy seed shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed ” (Gen 22:18). As already confirmed, the “Seed” was the Lord Jesus, not the Jewish race.

There is something else to note here that is essential to an understanding of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus. The promise [or covenant] was made with Abraham and his “Seed, which Seed is Christ” (Gal 3:16). That means that the New Covenant, at the foundational level, has actually been made with Christ Himself. That is the only way the guarantee of blessing can be given. In confirmation of this, God spoke through Isaiah of the coming Messiah. “I the LORD have called Thee [in righteousness, and will hold Thine hand, and will keep Thee, and give Thee for a covenant of the people , for a light of the Gentiles” (Isa 42:6).

It is this condition – the covenant being made with Christ – that accounts for expressions like “in Christ” (Rom 3:24; 8:1,39; Gal 3:26; Eph 1:10; 2:6,10,13; 3:11; Phil 3:14; 1 Tim 1:14), “by Christ” (2 Cor 1:5; Eph 3:21; Phil 4:19; 1 Pet 5:10), and “through Christ” (2 Cor 3:4; Eph 2:7; Phil 4:7,13). Everything related to salvation comes to us because of Christ.

Peter will now confirm that what was promised to Abraham – the blessing of all families of the earth – belonged to those standing before him, and they were the people who had “killed the Prince of life.” They were not workers of good deeds, yet were “children . . . of the covenant” of blessing. It belonged to them, as Peter now affirms. They could partake of the promised blessing!

GOD SENT HIM FIRST TO YOU

“ 26a Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you . . . ”

Peter now declares what is involved in being “the children . . . of the covenant” God made unto Abraham. He has already commanded them to act upon His word by repenting and being converted. Now he will give them a reason to do so.

RAISED AND SENT

“Unto you first God, having raised up His Son Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “ To you first , God having raised up His Servant Jesus,” NKJV “ For you first , God raised up His Servant” NASB “When God raised His Servant, He sent Him first to you ,” NIV “God has brought His servant back to life and has sent Him to you first ,” GWN “It was for you in the first place that God raised up His servant and sent Him,” NJB “When God raised up His servant, Jesus, He sent him first to you people of Israel ,” NLT “And as soon as God had brought His Servant to life again, He sent Him first of all to you ,” LIVING

This text does not refer to Christ’s resurrection from the dead, but to Moses’ prophecy: “thy God will raise unto thee a Prophet . . . I will raise them up a Prophet” (Deut 18:15,18). This has to do with the totality of Christ’s manifestation – including His birth, ministry, death, burial, resurrection, and enthronement. It parallels what Paul referred to as “the mystery of godliness” – “And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory” (1 Tim 3:16).

Also, “having raised up Jesus” includes His accomplishments in His humbled state. These include at the following, and much more.

- Being made sin and enduring the curse of God (2 Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13).
- The removal of sin (Heb 9:26).
- The destruction of Satan (Heb 2:14).
- The plundering of principalities and powers (Col 2:15).
- The blotting out of what was against us (Col 2:14).

- Making peace (Col 1:20).
- Reconciling the world (2 Cor 5:18).
- Satisfying God (Isa 53:11).
- Sanctifying the way to God (Heb 10:20).
- Sanctifying the people (Heb 13:12).

All of these, and more, are involved in God raising up Jesus – that is, bringing Him out of the human race in general, and Israel in particular, then exalting Him at his own right hand. Now, in the capacity of “the Man Christ Jesus,” He can deal more directly with men, and they can thus have access to Him.

God sent the exalted Christ “first” to Israel, for the promise was first to them. God spoke frequently to Abraham of his “seed” – the people that would come from him.

- The Messiah would come through this people – the “seed” (Gen 21:12; 22:18).
- Many of these references had to do with Canaan, the land of promise, and things relating to it. Thus God said He would give “this land” to his “seed” (Gen 12:7; 13:15; 15:18; 17:8; 24:6; 26:3; 28:4,13; 35:12; 48:4).
- He also spoke of making his “seed” numerous, so that they would be a great people (Gen 13:16; 15:5; 16:10; 22:17; 24:60; 26:4,24; 28:14; 32:12; 48:4).
- Additionally, he spoke of Abraham’s “seed” being in the land of Egypt for a season (Gen 15:13).
- The covenant God established with Abraham would also apply to his “seed” (Gen 17:7,).
- There also the covenant of circumcision made with Abraham and his “seed” (Gen 17:9-12).

All of this confirms the absolute priority of the Israelites – the lineage of Abraham, through Isaac, and through Jacob. Everything from God pertained to them. As Paul well said, “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5).

Thus, we read of the Gospel being “the power of God unto salvation, to the Jew first” (Rom 1:16). The punishment of evil doers will also be “of the Jew first” (Rom 2:9). Glory, honor, and peace “to every man that worketh good” will also be “to the Jew first” (Rom 2:10). When Jesus commissioned His disciples to preach the Gospel “among all nations,” it was to be “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47). When Paul and Barnabas went out preaching the Word of the Gospel, they told the Jews that “It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you” (Acts 13:46).

Therefore, Peter preaches with heavenly priorities in mind, thereby fulfilling the will of the Lord. God had prepared this nation for the proclamation of this message.

Peter now provides a grand summary-reason for the raising up of the Lord Jesus.

TO BLESS YOU

“ . . . sent Him to bless you . . . ” Other versions read, “blessing you,” BBE and “to bring you great blessing.” PHILLIPS

This precisely fulfills the promise God made to Abraham: “I will bless ” (Gen 12:2-3); “thou shalt be a blessing ” (Gen 12:2); “ in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed ” (Gen 12:3; 28:14); “all the nations of the earth shall be blessed ” (Gen 18:18); “in blessing I will bless thee” (Gen 22:17).

The word “bless” means, “to confer benefits,” THAYER “act kindly toward,” FRIBERG and “to provide benefits, often with the implication of certain supernatural factors involved,” LOUW-NIDA

Therefore, Peter announces, God has sent Jesus to the people to bless,

Therefore, Peter announces, God has sent Jesus to the people to bless, benefit, and show kindness to them. And how will Jesus do this? What kind of benefit will He bring to the people. What advantage will He give them? In the announcement that follows, we behold the heart and core of salvation.

benefit, and show kindness to them. And how will Jesus do this? What kind of benefit will He bring to the people. What advantage will He give them? In the announcement that follows, we behold the heart and core of salvation. The chief or fundamental benefit will be affirmed, and everyone who believes will at once agree with what is said. Such individuals will therefore energetically seek to obtain the benefit. They will take the Kingdom with violence, seizing it as a prize to be obtained.

TURNING EVERYONE FROM HIS INIQUITIES

“ 26b . . . in turning away every one of you from his iniquities.” Other versions read, “by turning every one of you from your wicked ways,” NASB “in turning every one of you from your wickedness,” RSV “by turning every one of you from his sins,” BBE “by turning each of you from your evil ways,” CSB “by turning each of you back from your sinful ways,” NLT “by turning each one of you from doing evil things,” IE “by causing every one of you to turn from your wickedness,” WEYMOUTH and “in turning every one of you from your wickedness and evil ways.” AMPLIFIED

Peter has already admonished the people to turn, or “be converted” (3:19). That is, they were to amend their ways, and cease from their sinful expressions. However, though necessary, outward reform and inward resolve is not enough. There is a work required within men that can only be done by the exalted Christ. It is something that must be caused by Him! If He does not make it happen, it will not happen. What is more, this is a blessing, benefit, or advantage, of the greatest magnitude.

The key factor, however, in this nonsensical approach to sinful inclinations, is that it is “not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh.” That is, such routines “lack in value in restraining sensual indulgence.” NIV They can stop neither the appetite for sin nor its expression.

What does it mean to turn a person away from their iniquities? This is not a reference to forgiveness, even though forgiveness is surely integral to salvation. This is the removal of an appetite for sin. It is the removal of a stony heart, and the granting of a soft and tender one (Ezek 36:26). It is what moves a person to truthfully confess, “I hate every false way” (Psa 119:104,128). It enables a person to fulfill the admonition, “Ye that love the LORD, hate evil” (Psa 97:10).

This is what moved Paul to say of the eruption of carnal thoughts by means of temptation, “what I hate, that do I” (Rom 7:15). It is what moves the regenerated soul to say of struggles with the flesh, “O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” (Rom 7:24). There is a requisite for this kind of mind-set within the walk of faith. Therefore believers are exhorted, “Abhor that which is evil” (Rom 12:9).

Where this work is not made known, a fundamental deficiency exists that will lead a person to destruction. No individual who “loves the world” loves God. There is absolutely no question about this. The Holy Spirit has embalmed the word in print: “If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him” (1 John 2:15). It is therefore imperative that every person be turned away from “HIS iniquities” – the ones that “so easily beset” him (Heb 12:1).

Perhaps you have heard of someone, or knew one, who said they could not keep from doing this sin or that sin. It appeared to them that they had conquered a certain transgression, only to have it surface once again. They attempted various disciplines and routines to resolve the matter, but only to be frustrated with failure after failure. Why does this circumstance exist? It is because the person has not been turned away from their iniquity. It is still too close to them, too attractive, and too, powerful.

There is no discipline that can rectify this situation. Jesus Himself will have to bless them, in turning them away from their iniquities. Paul precisely addressed this matter in his epistle to the Colossians. They were being tempted to adopt a regimen, or systematic plan, to subdue the tendency to sin. Paul did not commend them for their disciplined approach, but rather sternly rebuked them. “Wherefore if ye be dead with Christ from the rudiments of the world, why, as though living in the world, are ye subject to ordinances, (Touch not; taste not; handle not; Which all are to perish with the using;) after the commandments and doctrines of men?” (Col 2:21-22). Rather than their procedures being a display of excellent resolve, it was a revelation of a possible failure of having died with Christ. If, in fact, they were “dead with Christ,” precisely why were they subjecting themselves to rules of discipline? That is the world’s approach, and has no place in the body of Christ – “the rudiments of the world.”

Further, such an approach requires “the commandments and doctrines of men.” Oh, the commandments may have a real show of intelligence. They may take the form of twelve steps, or forty days, or Journaling, or the culture of some other supposedly effective habits. However, habits, by their very nature, can never be effective by spiritual definition – for, if they were effective, they would not be a habit.

Paul cuts to the chase, and explains why such an approach to moral and spiritual purity is nothing more than foolishness. “Which things have indeed a show of wisdom in will worship, and humility, and neglecting of the body; not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh” (Col 2:23).

- They look wise, but they are not. They are characterized by “will worship,” or “self-imposed worship.” NIV The individual does not serve God out of a basic preference for Him, and thus must be directed by rules.

- Such an approach, because it is against the will and nature of the person, requires “false humility” and “harsh treatment of the body.” NIV – mere external routines that appear smart, but are tedious and laborious.

The key factor, however, in this nonsensical approach to sinful inclinations, is that it is “not in any honor to the satisfying of the flesh.” That is, such routines “lack in value in restraining sensual indulgence.” NIV They can stop neither the appetite for sin nor its expression. They “have no value for holding back the constant desires of your corrupt nature,” GWN and “provide no help in conquering a person's evil desires.” NLT

What, then, is the answer? Peter sets forth the blessedness of the ministry of Jesus. He turns men away from their iniquities, so that they are no longer attractive to them. That, is a sorely needed blessing. It does what no other blessing can do! In this regard, of what value are health and wealth? Can they turn a person from their iniquities? Can they take away the desire to sin, or stop sin from constantly erupting – i.e. “the superfluity of naughtiness” (James 1:21)? Indeed not!

This is a work for the exalted Christ, and God has sent him to do it! If the work is not being done, it is not because God has failed to send Jesus. Nor, indeed, is it because Jesus refuses to do it. Every “broken and contrite heart” has reason to be of good cheer! God has gone on record on this matter. “For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones” (Isa 57:15). And how does He revive those precious souls? It is by sending forth his exalted Son to turn them away from their wickedness – to cause sin to become detestable to them, and righteousness to be attractive! What a marvelous ministry this is, and how essential it is for we poor mortals.

CONCLUSION

We have been exposed to “the mind of Christ” – expressed through a man who was filled with the Spirit, chosen by Christ, and in possession of “the keys of the Kingdom of heaven.” The record was written by a man who had “perfect understanding of all things from the very first” (Lk 1:3). The words have been inspired by the God who has “magnified” His word “above” all His name, so that what “is written” is able to make “the man of God . . . perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17).

It is not possible for a theological view that is in any way at variance with this text to be right. It cannot possibly be right to embrace such a view, for God is “a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is He” (Deut 32:4). No perspective of life that makes sin tolerable, or even acceptable has so much as a grain of truth in it! If men can learn to live with what God hates, they will do so without God and without hope.

The fact that a person may have adopted a view that he does not realize is at variance with the truth does not make the condition acceptable. There is no sanctifying power in ignorance. In fact, ignorance alienates a person “from the life of God” (Eph 4:18). Therefore, wherever there are church leaders who fail to apprise the people of the truth “as it is in Jesus,” the entrance into the Kingdom of God is blocked, and both the leader and the people will fall into the ditch. It is the responsibility of every person to seek the Lord, love and pursue the truth, and prepare to meet God. The Gospel addresses all of those matters.

Just as surely as it was the responsibility of the Israelites to know, understand, and yield to what their prophets said, so it is the responsibility of every Christian to know, understand, and yield to what the apostles have said. They are Christ’s ambassadors, and it is not possible that their word is incorrect, insufficient, or in some way beyond our reach.

To neglect their words is actually to neglect “so great salvation,” and there is no escape from such a dilemma. As it is written, “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him” (Heb 2:3).

Word Of Truth Fellowship, Associated

Presents

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

By: Given, O. Blakely

Lesson #16

THE LEADERS GRIEVED WITH PETER AND JOHN

Although the Gospel is “good news” and “glad tidings of good things,” it is not so perceived by those who have embraced a lifeless religious system. For those who are weary and heavy laden under the burden of the Law, the Gospel of Christ brings a message of hope and deliverance. However, for those who are intent upon being saved by works, and have judged their condition only by their ability to meet outward requirements, the Gospel is a threat. That is why those who attempt to serve God under a system of law rarely speak of the Gospel, the promises, the New Covenant, or the glories of justification. They are occupied with other things, being snared by a mind-set that is focused on things that appear, for there is no other way to embrace a rules-and-regulation approach to religion. The Gospel is thus offensive because it places no value on empty ceremony, but rather offers consolation to those who have a “broken and contrite spirit,” and are seeking for mercy. Neither of these qualities are highly esteemed by men, but are considered to be signs of personal weakness and inferiority. They are the opposite of loving one’s self, and thinking more highly of self than is appropriate. Yet in God’s sight, they are of great price, and draw His attention to the individual possessing them.

Even though the Law said nothing of faith, God confirmed its priority in Abraham. Moses wrote that Abraham “believed in the Lord, and He

CONTENTS

- AS THEY SPAKE (4:1)
- THEY WERE GRIEVED THAT THEY TAUGHT THE PEOPLE (4:2a)
- THEY PREACHED THROUGH JESUS THE RESURRECTION FROM THE DEAD (4:2b)
- THEY LAID THEIR HANDS ON THEM (4:3)
- IN SPITE OF THE LEADERS, MANY BELIEVED (4:4)
- THE OPPONENTS GATHER TOGETHER (4:5-6)
- BY WHAT POWER HAVE YOU DONE THIS? (4:7)
- CONCLUSION

counted it to him for righteousness” (Gen 15:6). Later, in being prepared for deliverance from Egypt, Aaron spoke to the people, telling them everything that God had told Moses about that deliverance, while doing the signs that God had commanded to be done before them. It is written, “And the people believed : and when they heard that the LORD had visited the children of Israel, and that he had looked upon their affliction, then they bowed their heads and worshiped” (Ex 4:31). Later, when they had walked out of Egypt and through the Red Sea, they saw their enemies strewn on the shore the Red Sea. At that time, “Israel saw that great work which the LORD did upon the Egyptians: and the people feared the LORD, and believed the LORD, and His servant Moses” (Ex 14:31). That was the last time Moses said anything about Israel believing (Exodus through Deuteronomy).

Years later, Jehosaphat cried out to Judah “Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; Believe in the LORD your God , so shall ye be established; believe his prophets , so shall ye prosper” (2 Chron 20:20). However, there is no record of them ever having done so (1 Samuel through Malachi).

David, a man “after” God’s “own heart” (1 Sam 13:14; Acts 13:22), sensed the priority of faith and acknowledged, “I had fainted, unless I had believed to see the goodness of the LORD in the land of the living” (Psa 27:13). He also said, “ I believed , therefore have I spoken: I was greatly afflicted” (Psa 116:10), and “I have believed Thy commandments” (Psa 119:66). The next person said to have believed God was Daniel, far removed from David: “So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God ” (Dan 6:23). In a rare showing of the power of faith, after Jonah had preached to the city, it is written, “So the people of Nineveh believed God ” (Jonah 3:5). Also, confirming the priority of faith, God said through the prophet Habakkuk who lived after Daniel “the just shall live by his faith” (Hab 2:4).

You see that, of old time, an emphasis was placed upon faith, yet it did not appear to be an emphasis. That is why people did not pick up on it. Only sensitive hearts detected the priority of faith. Because of this, for the most part, the religion of the people degenerated into nothing more than ritual. Owing to the repugnance of such an approach to God, He often rebuked Israel for their religious service (Isa 1:12-14; 66:3; Jer 6:20; Hos 8:13; Amos 5:21-23; Mal 1:6-8). Their religion became nothing more than a heartless external activity, and they were soundly and repeatedly rebuked by the prophets for it.

Now, as an example, we will see the reaction of the Jewish officials to Peter’s teaching in the Temple. They will actually be grieved by what he is saying, even though he has spoken of sins being blotted out, Jesus being sent, together with times of refreshing.

This manner continued into the time of Jesus. He also rebuked the religious leaders for their vain outward religion (Matt 23:27-28). He said that they “worshiped” in vain, being driven by traditions and the commandments of men (Matt 15:9). This was a trait among the people, and only those who broke away from mere tradition were any different.

The Apostles will face the same dreadful mind-set in the book of Acts, and it will generate hostility toward them – religious hostility. Now, as an example, we will see the reaction of the Jewish officials to Peter’s teaching in the Temple. They will actually be grieved by what he is saying, even though he has spoken of sins being blotted out, Jesus being sent, together with times of refreshing. In preparation for this, I want to say a few words about the clash of truth with stereotyped and traditional religion.

It is important that we see what causes opposition to rise from the religious sector. Many young zealots for Jesus have been confounded when they faced opposition from professing Christians. Countless preachers have been discouraged by the lack of reception of the church itself to the word of God. The records and reports of men and women of God being rejected by the imagined leaders of the church and Christian institutions are voluminous and historical. Laborers for Christ have encountered opposition from those to whom they ministered, just as the holy prophets did (2 Chron 16:10; 24:20-21; 36:16; Neh 9:26; Jer 2:30; Jer 26:8, 21-23; Amos 2:12; Matt 5:12; Acts 7:52; 1 Thess 2:15). In fact, Jesus said, “A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country, and in his own house” (Matt 13:57).

Why is this so? Why has religious persecution historically been among the worst and most extended opposition of the people of God? Why must the messengers of God experience rejection from the people who say they are Christians? Who is the servant of the Lord who has not tasted of this rejection – if not in outright opposition, in being ignored and treated as though they had leprosy? There is a reason for it, even though it is often hard to bear.

THE CLASH OF TRUTH WITH STEREOTYPED AND TRADITIONAL RELIGION

There is an inevitable clash between “the truth of God” (Rom 15:8) and “the tradition of men” (Col 2:8) – between living by faith and living according to “the works of the law” (Rom 9:32). It is not possible to serve God and avoid this conflict. Truth and tradition cannot live peaceably together, anymore than God can dwell among those who honor Him with their lips, yet their heart is “far from Him” (Matt 15:8).

Moral corruption is evil, excluding one from the kingdom of God (1 Cor 6:9; Gal 5:21). However, religious corruption is even worse because it is not obviously wicked. It lulls one into sleep, so that a claim of identity can be made, while the individual is immersed in sin. Corrupt religion is like a noxious salve that, when applied to the conscience, causes the person to imagine God receives them, even while they possess no dominating appetite for His Son or His word.

When I speak of religious corruption, I am particularly referring to systems of thought among those who claim identify with the true God. As represented in Scripture, those embracing these systems of thought fall into two categories: those related to Judaism, and those professing identity with Christ. Wherever they are found, the truth of God clashes with their way of thinking, and therefore they oppose those who express that truth in words.

The following examples confirm that faithful ministers of God are often opposed by those who also claim to be the servants of God.

UNDER THE FIRST COVENANT

- ZECHARIAH. “And the Spirit of God came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? because ye have forsaken the LORD, He hath also forsaken you. And they conspired against him, and stoned him with stones at the commandment of the king in the court of the house of the LORD” (2 Chron 24:20-21).

- JEREMIAH. “Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die . . . Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, This man is worthy to die; for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears” (Jer 26:8,11).

THE LORD JESUS

- “And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy him: for they feared him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine” (Mark 11:18).

- “And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against Him, how they might destroy Him” (Mark 3:6).

UNDER THE NEW COVENANT

- PETER AND JOHN. “But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name. And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus” (Acts 4:17-18).

• STEPHEN. “Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen . . . And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council” (Acts 6:12).

• PAUL . “But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ. And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him: but their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the gates day and night to kill him” (Acts 9:22-24).

All of these conflicts were with the professed people of God. When the pure Word of the Lord was delivered, it sharply contrasted what others were saying, and thus opposition and even persecution followed. Why do such conflicts arise?

This is because erroneous religion moves ones into the domain of “this present evil world,” and consequently into the vicinity of the devil himself (1 John 5:19). God is “the God of truth” (Isa 65:16), and can therefore have no part of a lie, misrepresentation, or delusion. Righteousness and unrighteousness cannot be co-mingled. Light and darkness can have no communion. There can be no accord between Christ and Belial. One who believes God and one who does not believe God can have no part with one another (2 Cor 6:14-15).

The clash of which I speak is not the result of two honest and good people disagreeing. It is not the outcome of two sincere people merely having differing opinions. It is rather the outcome of men embracing conflicting views, and espousing perceptions of God and His purpose that are contradictory in nature. When they are received, views that move one closer to the world cause a person to oppose those who declare the truth of God. This is a conflict that cannot be avoided, for being interlocked with this world puts one at variance with the God of heaven. That is, to be a “friend of the world” is to become “the enemy of God” (James 4:4).

There is form of friendship with the world that has the appearance of being very religious – even godly. It occurs when one chooses to embrace the traditions of men rather than the truth of God. This has a remarkable appeal. Jesus said of such people, “Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do” (John 8:44). Again, “And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not” (John 8:45). And again, “I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you” (John 8:37).

However amiable men may attempt to be, those who embrace and proclaim erroneous teachings cannot be at peace with those who “speak the truth in Christ.” When the truth of God is aggressively and consistently proclaimed, it will greatly agitate those who cling to mere religious tradition.

John said of self-professing Christians who had neither embraced nor declared the truth, “They are of the world: therefore speak they of the world, and the world heareth them” (1 John 4:5). Paul said of them, “For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things” (Phil 3:19). Speaking of their influence, Peter wrote, “But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction” (2 Pet 2:1). Jude said of them, “These are spots in your feasts of charity, when they feast with you, feeding themselves without fear: clouds they are without water, carried about of winds; trees whose fruit withereth, without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever” (Jude 1:12-13).

However amiable men may attempt to be, those who embrace and proclaim erroneous teachings cannot be at peace with those who “speak the truth in Christ” (1 Tim 2:7). When the truth of God is aggressively and consistently proclaimed, it will greatly agitate those who cling to mere religious tradition.

Some, seeking to promote fleshly accord, compromise the truth, tone it down, or altogether cease to proclaim it. In order to avoid the conflict, they may even choose to speak in traditional jargon in order to maintain peace. However, the truth of God will not do its work if it is not declared. When, owing to neglect and even outright rejection, it falls in the street (Isa 59:14), it ceases to work on the hearts of men. We have a case in point in our text. Peter and John continue their preaching, and at last the religious leaders can stand it no longer. Their hearts are revealed as they burst forth in opposition to what is being said, and zealously seek to subdue it.

AS THEY SPAKE

“ 4:1 And as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them.”

Peter and John have been speaking to the people, declaring that the miracle they have just witnessed was done through the exalted Christ – the One the people had “killed.” The Temple courts are ablaze with interest, as the people witness a man leaping and praising God because he has been healed. Because this whole event has extended over some period of time, it now draws the attention of the religious authorities.

AS THEY SPAKE

“And as they spake unto the people . . .” Other versions read, “ as they were speaking to the people,” NASB “ while they were speaking to the people,” NIV “While Peter and John were speaking to the people,” NRSV “While they were still speaking to the people,” NAB “While they were still talking to the people,” NJB “While they were saying this to the people,” WEYMOUTH and “While they were addressing the people.” MONTGOMERY

Peter and John have not been introduced to crowd-drawing techniques, advertizing, and the likes. It is the effective work of the Lord that first captured the people’s attention, and now they are hearing insightful and powerful preaching. Peter and John are not singing, or hyping up the people with some pretentious form of “worship.” They are proclaiming Christ, bringing Him to bear upon the immediate situation. They have not only declared how God has exalted Christ, but how wrong the people were in delivering Him to be crucified.

These holy men knew nothing of abbreviated presentations, tailored for the disinterested. They know that faith “cometh by hearing,” not by seeing, and therefore they are speaking the message through which faith “comes” – “glad tidings of good things” (Rom 10:14-17). Ponder the summation of what they have said to this point.

These holy men knew nothing of abbreviated presentations, tailored for the disinterested. They know that faith “cometh by hearing,” not by seeing, and therefore they are speaking the message through which faith “comes” – “glad tidings of good things.”

The people should not have been marveling at the healing of the Lame man (3:12a).

- They should not have been looking at Peter and John as though this had been done through their own power or holiness (3:12b).
- God had glorified His Son Jesus, whom they had delivered up and denied (3:13).
- The people had denied the Holy One and Just, and desired the release of a murderer

(3:14).

- They had killed the Prince of life (3:15a).

- God raised the Prince of life from the dead, and the apostles were witnesses of Him being alive (3:15b).

- Through Jesus' name, and faith in that name, the man had been healed (3:16a).

- The faith by which the man was standing in perfect health before them had been given by the Lord (3:16b).

- Peter said he knew the people, together with their rulers, had acted in ignorance (3:17).

- God Himself had fulfilled what the prophets had said about a suffering Christ (3:18).

- The people were admonished to repent and be converted in order that their sins might be blotted out (3:19a).

- Upon their sins being blotted out, they would receive 'times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord' (3:19b).

- When their sins were removed, God would "send Jesus" to them (3:20).

- Jesus would remain in heaven until the times of "the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began" (3:21).

- Moses had foretold of the coming of Jesus, affirming that the real people would hearken to Him, and those who did not would be destroyed from among the people (3:22-23).

- All of the prophets, from Samuel and those who followed him, had spoken of the days of Jesus, and His great salvation (3:24).

- The people were the children of the prophets, and therefore were obligated to hear them (3:25a).

- The people were children of the covenant God gave to Abraham, and could therefore receive the promise (3:25b).

- God had raised up Jesus from among their brethren, just as Moses had said (3:26a).

- God had sent the resurrected and enthroned Jesus to them first, in order to bless them (3:26b).

- The blessing ministered by Jesus was summarized in turning them away from their iniquities (3:26c).

The words "as they were speaking" indicate that Peter and John were continuing to elaborate on this subject. They parallel the description of Peter's preaching on the day of Pentecost: "and with many other words he did testify and exhort" (Acts 2:40).

Here we are provided a glimpse of the manner in which the truth of the Gospel is presented. Notice that Peter does not speak in parables. He does not tell stories, give homespun illustrations, or deliver dark sayings. Speaking as a man, he depends upon affirmation to get the point across – the bold and unmitigated proclamation of the truth. In so doing, he has opened the door for the working of the Holy Spirit, for the word of God is "the sword of the Spirit" (Eph 6:17).

PRIESTS, CAPTAIN OF THE TEMPLE, AND SADDUCEES

" . . . the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees," Other versions read, "priests and captain of the Temple guard, and the Sadducees” NASB “the priests, the commander of the temple guard, and the Sadducees,” CSB “the priests, and the officer of the temple, and the Sadducees,” DOUAY “Some priests, the officer in charge of the temple guards, and some Sadducees,” GWN “the priests and the Sadducees and the rulers of the temple,” MRD “the priests . . . accompanied by the captain of the Temple and the Sadducees,” NJB “the priests, and the magistrate of the temple, and the Sadducees,” YLT “the chief priests, the captain of the Temple police, and the Sadducees,” LIVING and “the high priests and the military commander of the temple and the Sadducees.” AMPLIFIED

Having been aroused by the events taking place, the Temple authorities enter the scene.

The Priests

Some versions read “chief priests,” LIVING “Jewish priests,” IE and “high priests.” WILLIAMS/AMPLIFIED These were Divinely appointed servants in the Temple (2 Kgs 23:4; 2 Chron 29:16; Matt 12:5; Heb 9:6). These were probably, what is called, “chief priests” – a term used sixty-four times in the Gospels and the book of Acts. This expression – “chief priests” – is generally taken to refer to the high priests, or the ones under whom the ordinary priests served. These are thought to be former high priests, and members of their families, who maintained significant authority among the Jews. THAYER Others define “chief priests” as principal priests, most important priests. FRIBERG or members of the high priest’s family. UBS At any rate, it appears as though “the priests” do refer to these “chief priests,” who maintained significant authority within the Temple.

The Captain of the Temple

Other versions read, “captain of the Temple guard,” NIV “commander of the Temple guard,” CSB “officer of the Temple,” DOUAY “the officer in charge of the Temple,” GWN “rulers of the Temple,” MRD “magistrate of the Temple,” YLT and “the military commander of the Temple.” WILLIAMS

This office is mentioned again in chapter five: “Now when the high priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow” (5:24). This is not an office defined in the Law, but was added some time later. According to history, the role of this “captain” was to maintain order in the Temple. A brief summary of the office is found in the box below.

CAPTAIN OF THE TEMPLE

The "captain of the Temple," mentioned by Luke (Acts 4:1; 5:24) in connection, with the priests, was not a military officer, but superintended the guard of priests and Levites who kept watch by night in the Temple. The "captains" mentioned in Luke 22:4, were probably his subalterns. The office appears to have existed from an early date the "priests that kept the door" (Kings 12:9; 25:18) are described by Josephus (Ant. 10:8, 5) as "the officers guarding the Temple:" a notice occurs in 2 Macc. 3:4, of a praefect of the Temple; this officer is styled captain by Josephus (Ant. 20:6, 2; War, 6:5, 3); and in the Mishna (Middoth, 1, § 2) "the captain of the mountain of the Temple;" his duty, as described in the place last quoted, was to visit the posts during the night, and see that the sentries were doing their duty (comp. 1 Chronicles 9:11; 2 Chronicles 31:13; 35:8, 9; Jeremiah 20:1). McCLINTOK AND STRONG ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE BIBLE

The very existence of this office suggests the possibility of disruption and disorderliness in the Temple courts. In a way, it is a kind of commentary on the nature of an administration of Law. Such a system cannot remove from men the propensity to unacceptable behavior.

When Jesus was arrested by soldiers in the Garden, it was not a Roman militia, but one from the Jewish high priest. “Judas then, having received a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees , cometh thither with lanterns and torches and weapons” (John 18:3). “And one of them smote the servant of the high priest , and cut off his right ear. And Jesus answered and said, Suffer ye thus far. And He touched his ear, and healed him. Then Jesus said unto the chief priests, and captains of the temple, and the elders, which were come to him, Be ye come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves?” (Luke 22:50-52). Perhaps the “captain” of our text was involved in that night during which “the power of darkness” was given leave to act against the Son of God.

The Sadducees

The “Sadducees” are mentioned fourteen times in Scripture (Matt 3:7; 16:1,6,11,12; 22:23,34; Mk 12:18; Lk 20:27; Acts 4:1; 5:17; 23:6,7,8). Nothing good is ever said about this group of people. John the Baptist rebuked them for coming to his baptism, yet not having works “meet for repentance” (Matt 3:7-8). They tempted Jesus, desiring a sign from heaven (Matt 16:1). Jesus told His disciples to beware of their doctrine (Matt 16:6,11-12). It is pointed out that they said there was “no resurrection” (Matt 22:23; Mk 12:18; Lk 20:27). They are referred to as a “sect” (Acts 5:17). They aligned themselves against Paul (Acts 23:6). Not only did they deny the resurrection of the dead, they also said there was “neither angel, nor spirit” (Acts 23:8). This party is believed to have originated after the dominance of Greece, which was after the time of Daniel the prophet. We first read of them when they confronted John the Baptist (Matt 3:7).

The spiritually depraved condition of the Jews is confirmed by the ready acceptance of the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection, the existence of angels, and the reality of spirits. In our text, we find them consorting with the priests.

CAME UPON THEM

“ . . . came upon them. ” Other versions read, “came up to,” NIV “came to them,” NRSV “confronted them,” CSB “came up to them,” NJB “came over to them,” LIVING “came down upon them,” WILLIAMS “moved towards them,” PHILLIPS “arrived,” GNB and “stood near them.” LITV

Seeing the activity in the Temple court, this motley group makes their way to Peter and John, who are in the process of speaking. To them, this is a disruption. By saying they “came upon them,” Luke means they confronted Peter and John. This is not a casual expression, as though they were walking about in the Temple court and, quite by chance, “came upon” Peter and John.

From the standpoint of language, the words “came upon” mean, “to stand over one, place oneself above,” THAYER “to stand near, be always alert to.” FRIBERG This means that the group intentionally came and stood in front of Peter and John, conducting themselves as though they were superior. This was a confrontation in which they imagined that these two men of God were accountable to them, even though they were only caring for the house of God. These men really were not in charge of it. Jesus referred the Temple complex as “My Father’s house” (John 2:16), and “a house of prayer” (Matt 21:13). When but a boy, Jesus referred to activities within the Temple as “My Father’s business” (Lk 2:49).

These men, however, did not view this area in such a manner. Like many of our day, they had chosen to lord it over those who were in the Temple area, imposing their own will and ignorance upon the people. They will thus oppose Peter and John.

THEY WERE GRIEVED THAT THEY TAUGHT THE PEOPLE

“ 2a Being grieved that they taught the people . . . ”

The Spirit will now explain why the priests, captain of the Temple, and some Sadducees confronted Peter and John. They lacked no boldness, even though an obvious display of power had been wrought in their presence.

BEING GRIEVED

“Being grieved . . .” Other versions read, “greatly disturbed,” NKJV “much annoyed,” NRSV “sore troubled,” ASV “greatly troubled,” BBE “provoked,” CSB “being distressed,” DARBY “taking it grievously,” GENEVA “These religious authorities were were greatly annoyed,” GWN “being angry with them,” MRD “extremely annoyed,” NJB “they were upset,” IE “highly incensed,” WEYMOUTH “Being vexed and indignant through and through,” AMPLIFIED and “thoroughly incensed.” PHILLIPS

Those who have not “received the love of the truth that they might be saved,” are grieved by the truth. Their lack of appetite for, and enjoyment of the truth causes it to be abrasive to them. This is particularly true concerning the Gospel of Christ and its implications. It is possible to speak of the Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and various moral requirements as specified in the Law, and enjoy a rather wide range of receptive people. If you chose to speak of marital relationships, raising children, and employees being honest and industrious, you might find many people who would agree with you, or even support your cause. However, in matters of the Kingdom of God and His great salvation, an entirely different set of circumstances arise. The Gospel of Christ is like a sword that divides the interested from the disinterested.

Many highly successful Christian ministries owe their popularity to the lower nature of the work and their message. While rescuing people from the street, relieving the socially deprived, and assisting in the good work of solidifying marriages are, in a sense, wholesome and good, they are not good enough to be a primary work. They are not of such a magnitude as to require the death, burial and resurrection of Christ. They do not demand an Intercessor in heaven or the indwelling of the Holy Spirit of God.

Those who have not “received the love of the truth that they might be saved,” are grieved by the truth. Their lack of appetite for, and enjoyment of the truth causes it to be abrasive to them. This is particularly true concerning the Gospel of Christ and its implications.

I understand that such statements are exceedingly difficult for some to believe, for they think we are set to oppose such works. However, this is not the case at all. We oppose those things as an emphasis. We oppose them as being representative of the thrust of the ministry of the church. We know this is the case because of the Scriptural accounts of how Jesus directed the church, what he told them to do, and how He is represented in the Word of God.

Take our text as a notable example of these things. As this group confronted Peter and John, they did not do so because they had healed a man who was lame from birth. If they had let the matter drop there, they would not have been opposed. The priests, captain of the Temple, and Sadducees, were not grieved because the former lame man was remaining with Peter and John, and was no longer at the gate Beautiful asking for alms.

The word “grieved” is a very strong word. It means “to be troubled, displeased, offended, and pained,” THAYER and “to be much grieved.” LIDDELL-SCOTT The thing that grieves is like a thorn to the flesh – it hurts because it is a foreign object that penetrates with great pain. It is something contrary to the heart and mind, and therefore it is offensive to hear, and obnoxious to consider.

THEY TAUGHT THE PEOPLE

“ . . . that they taught the people . . .” Other versions read, “they were teaching the people,” NASB “continued to teach the people,” WILLIAMS and “that they should be teaching the people.”

PHILLIPS

As I have already stated, the grief of these men was not caused by the man who was leaping and praising God. Here it is stated that they were grieved because Peter and John were teaching the people. The word “teach” means “to hold a discourse with others in order to instruct them, deliver didactic discourses,” THAYER and “to instruct.” LEH This was not a discussion. It was not a question and answer session. It is not that either of those things is wrong, and God forbid that any should think so. Both of them, however, require some degree of understanding on the side of both parties. Either the person has some understanding of what is being discussed, or they are learned enough to ask the right questions.

In the case before us, the people did not have sufficient understanding to contribute to a discussion. Further, their conduct toward “the Prince of life” confirmed they did not know enough to ask the proper questions. Therefore, Peter and John were instructing them – bringing knowledge to them that they did not possess, and an understanding that was out of their reach.

As used in this text, “taught” carries the idea of delivering a discourse – not an academic discourse, but a spiritual with a sharp focus.

Technically, a discourse is a system of organized knowledge – facts that are interrelated, and contribute to the expansion of one’s understanding. In this case, the facts surrounded Jesus of Nazareth, where He came from, what He did, why He did it, and what He is doing now. Having a grasp of the facts, Peter was able to reason upon them, draw valid conclusions, and call upon men to respond in a certain way.

Throughout the book of Acts we will be subjected to a Kingdom rationale – a spiritual way of thinking. In this manner of thought, there will be certain pillars that hold up sound conclusions. There will also be a focus, which holds all of the reasoning together, leading one to an inevitable conclusion. Sound words will be employed, for unsound words can neither support nor promote the truth. What is said will precisely depict the truth as it is in Jesus, and shed light upon the eternal purpose of God.

THEY PREACHED THROUGH JESUS THE RESURRECTION FROM THE DEAD

“ 2b . . . and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead.”

The particular point of contention will now be mentioned. It is important that we note precisely what is here affirmed, for it will address an error in thinking concerning preaching and teaching that is common among many.

THEY PREACHED

“ . . . and preached . . . ” Other versions read, “and proclaiming,” NASB “and preaching,” DARBY “spreading the message,” GWN “and announcing,” NET “were claiming,” LIVING “and declaring,” ISV “and should assure them,” PHILLIPS and “and announced” LITV

The preceding verse said the opponents were grieved because Peter and John “taught” (didasko) the people. Now Luke affirms that they had “preached” (katagelein). The word used here (preached) means to “announce, declare, promulgate, make known.” THAYER

The movement with which I have been identified, as well as many purported scholars, have labored the point that preaching and teaching are two different kinds of speaking for two different kinds of people: preaching is for sinners, and teaching is for believers. Those who embrace this view say the Gospel is not preached to the church, but to sinners, and teaching is for the church, not for sinners. The thought is that something that is proclaimed, or preached, is being made known for the first time.

However, this is not the case. For example, this same word is used in Paul's instruction concerning the Lord's Table: "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show [proclaim, NKJV] the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor 11:26). Rather than being proclaimed only for the first time, this is a proclamation that takes place every time we eat at the Lord's Table. Paul also used "preach" and "teaching" to describe his work among believers: "Whom we preach , warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus" (Col 1:28).

In our text, the Holy Spirit uses both words to speak of the same discourse given by Peter and John. It was both preaching and teaching – proclaiming and instructing. Preaching is the proclamation of a message through which faith comes and is maintained – an affirmation of accomplished, fixed, and unchangeable realities. Teaching is instruction based upon those realities, yet it is not the means of obtaining and maintaining faith. Instruction declares the implications of the realities proclaimed, making an association between them and the responsibility of those who hear them.

Faith is based upon the affirmation of unchanging realities. It cannot be based upon commandments, exhortations, or admonitions. Correction does not produce or maintain faith. There is a vital role for all of these things, but they necessitate faith, which requires a statement of things that cannot be changed. These relate directly with the Persons of both God and Christ, what they have purposed, and what they have done.

The things that are grasped by faith are, by their very nature, offensive to the flesh – particularly religious flesh. This will be confirmed in the confrontation now described.

THROUGH JESUS

“ . . . through Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “in Jesus,” NKJV “Jesus as the example ,” BBE “ in the person of Jesus,” CSB “by Jesus,” DARBY “in Jesus name,” GENEVA “through Jesus,” GWN “ by the Messiah,” MRD “through the power of Jesus ,” IE “in the case of Jesus,” WEYMOUTH “in [the case of Jesus],” AMPLIFIED and “ had been proved through the rising of Jesus.” PHILLIPS

Peter and John had been preaching something to the people that depended upon the Lord Jesus Christ. He was the primary example of what they were affirming. He was, as well, the proof of it.

Sound preaching and teaching is based upon the foundation of Jesus Christ. The foundation of preaching and teaching cannot differ from the foundation of salvation. If the things being declared and expounded do not relate to Christ Jesus, they cannot possibly relate to the salvation that is in Him. “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 3:11). And again, “Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12).

Profitable preaching and teaching is not based upon impersonal laws or principles, just as salvation itself is not based on such an approach. Doctrine must be ultimately traced back to the Son of God, in whom all the fulness of the Godhead dwells “bodily” (Col 1:19; 2:9). If teaching addresses the proper employment of knowledge, it must be remembered that “ all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” are hidden in Him (Col 2:3). When dealing with the appropriation of resources and the attainment of goals , we are “complete in Him, which the Head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10).

What will be the subject of Apostolic exposition? What will be the point they seek to establish in the hearts of men? Why are the priests, the captain of the Temple, and the Sadducees grieved with what they are saying?

THE RESURRECTION FROM THE DEAD

“ . . . the resurrection from the dead.” Other versions read, “there is the resurrection of the dead ,”

NRSV “the coming back from the dead,” BBE “the resurrection from among the dead,” DARBY “the message that the dead will come back to life,” GWN “the rising again out of the dead,” YLT “people can rise from death,” IE and “proved that the dead will rise to life.” GNB

Peter had affirmed on the day of Pentecost, and here as well, that God had raised Jesus from the dead. “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that he should be holden of it” (Acts 2:24). “This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses” (Acts 2:32). “And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:15). However, the preaching of Christ’s resurrection itself is NOT the point of this text.

Here, Peter and John were teaching the people concerning the dead being raised – “the resurrection of the dead.” They were setting forth Jesus as the cause and confirmation of all of the dead would be raised. First, Jesus Himself was raised, proving that He was superior to death, and that “the keys of hell [Hades] and death” are in His hands (Rev 1:16). Death had no power over Jesus, and therefore could not retain Him in the grave. For that reason, all of the graves will yield to Him, giving forth their dead at His final command (John 5:28). Then, in fulfillment of Isaiah’s prophecy, “the earth shall cast out the dead” (Isa 26:19). This is the resurrection that Peter and John were teaching.

The Resurrection of the Dead

The resurrection of the dead will confirm that existence in this world is not the only existence. It will corroborate that what follows time in this world is more important than what occurs in this world. Then all men will see, whether they are ready for it or not, that life in this world is the time of preparation for “the world to come” (Mk 10:30; Heb 2:5). The resurrection of the dead will be a time when every person will be summoned before the Throne of God for the day of judgment, “that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10).

Revelation of the Fact of the Resurrection Before Jesus

Although the disclosures were few and far between, there were revelations of the coming resurrection in ancient times.

- Before the law, Job was persuaded of the resurrection of the dead (Job 14:12-15; 19:25-27).
- David testified to the coming resurrection of the dead (Psa 16:9-10; 17:15; 49:15).
- Isaiah prophesied of the dead being raised (Isa 26:8,19).
- It was revealed to Daniel that the dead would be raised (Dan 12:2-3,13).
- Hosea prophesied of the dead being ransomed from the grave, and the grave being destroyed (Hos 13:14).

Jesus Spoke of the Resurrection

Commensurate with Jesus, there was an abundance of revelation concerning the resurrection of the dead. You may recall that during His ministry, a very prominent sect among the Jews – the Sadducees – did not believe there was a resurrection of the dead (Matt 22:23). Although familiar with Scripture, they passed over the few references to the resurrection. Although other Jewish teachers and leaders did accept the fact of the resurrection, they had no difficulty receiving the Sadducees. That confirmed the general perception that the resurrection of the dead was not a critical issue. However, Jesus dashed that notion to the ground in His teaching.

- Jesus spoke of things that would occur “in the resurrection” (Matt 22:30).

- He spoke of “the resurrection of the dead” (Matt 22:31).
- He spoke of “the resurrection of the just” (Lk 14:14).
- He spoke of “the resurrection from the dead” (Lk 20:35).
- Jesus taught of “the children of the resurrection” (Lk 20:36).
- He affirmed that “the dead are raised” (Lk 20:37).
- He referred to the dead being raised “unto the resurrection of life” and “unto the resurrection of damnation” (John 5:29).
- He said the day was coming “in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth” (John 5:28-29).
- In His lengthy teaching about Himself being the Bread of life, Jesus thrice affirmed of those who believed on Him, “and I will raise him up at the last day” (John 6:40,44-54).

The Apostles Expressions Concerning the Resurrection

- They preached Jesus and the resurrection. “Then certain philosophers of the some said, What will this babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection . . . And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead , some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter” (Acts 17:18,32).
- The resurrection of the dead is clearly, by nature and necessity, tied to hope. “And have hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead , both of the just and unjust” (Acts 24:15).
- There is a certain logic in the fact of the resurrection that makes it unreasonable to refuse to acknowledge it. “Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead ?” (Acts 26:8).
- God is identified as one that raises the dead. “(As it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before Him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead , and calleth those things which be not as though they were” (Rom 4:17). “But we had the sentence of death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead ” (2 Cor 1:9).
- The Gospel affirms that God raised Jesus from the dead, and that He will also raise us from the dead. “And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power” (1 Cor 6:14). “Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus , and shall present us with you” (2 Cor 4:14).
- An extensive teaching about the necessity of the resurrection, and the different nature of the resurrection body is provided (1 Cor 15:12-57).
- There is a strong affirmation of both the fact and the certainty of the resurrection. “In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible , and we shall be changed” (1 Cor 15:52).
- In redemption, we are said to have been wrought by God to inhabit the resurrection body. “For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens . . . Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit” (2 Cor 5:1,5)
- Paul stated his objective was to be profitably involved in resurrection. “If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead ” (Phil 3:11).

- Jesus shall “change our vile body” at the resurrection, when he comes. “Who shall change our vile body , that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto himself” (Phil 3:21).

- Immortality will to be experienced at the resurrection. “For this corruptible must put on incorruption , and this mortal must put on immortality . So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality , then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory” (1 Cor 15:53-54),

The resurrection of the dead will not transform our spirits. It has to do with our bodies. There will be no change of character at that time. If, while we were “in the body” of flesh and blood, we did not culture an appetite for God and the things of God, we will receive no such appetite at the resurrection.

Immortality has been brought to light through the Gospel. “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began, but is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel ” (2 Tim 1:9-10).

- A distortion of the understanding of the resurrection can overthrow one’s faith. “And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymenaeus and Philetus; who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some ” (2 Tim 2:17-18).

