Here we are not dealing with mere human opinions concerning an individual. Paul had shown a clear acceptance of John Mark in their initial journey into Asia (Acts 13:5). Here, however, a larger matter is under consideration than the recovery or training of John Mark. They will be going into a territory where considerable hostility had been experienced, with the aim to see how the churches are progressing. This mission will require focus and consistency. Therefore, the reason for Paul’s stance on this matter is given to us.

THE REASON FOR THE DISSENSION

“ . . . who departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work.” Other versions read, “deserted them,” NASB “withdrawn from them,” RSV “gone away from them,” BBE “gone off and left them,” CJB “abandoned them,” DARBY and “quit and deserted them.” AMPLIFIED

The word “departed” is a translation of the Greek word avpostanta . The root meaning of this word is “to go away, depart, from anyone . . . to desert, withdraw from, one,” THAYER and “go away, withdraw . . . desert someone” GINGRICH The ideas of revolt, quitting, discontinuing, defection, abandonment, and desertion are in this word. It is by no means mild in its implications. The uses of this term confirm its strength.

- Satan “ departed ” from Jesus after tempting Him for forty days and nights (Lk 4:13).

A.D. 37 – Barnabas takes newly converted Saul, bringing him to the apostles, and standing in his behalf (Acts 9:27-28).

A.D. 43 – After being sent to Antioch by the church in Jerusalem, Barnabas went to Tarsus, found Saul, and brought him to Antioch (Acts 11:25-26).

A.D. 44 – Barnabas and Saul remain in Antioch for a whole year (Acts 11:26).

A.D. 44 – Barnabas and Saul are sent to the elders of the Jerusalem church with relief gathered from the churches (Acts 12:29-30).

A.D. 44 – Barnabas and Saul returned to Antioch from Jerusalem, bringing back John Mark with them (Acts 12:25).

A.D. 45 – Barnabas and Saul are called to a special work by the Holy Spirit (Acts 13:2-3).

A.D. 46 – They went Cyprus, preaching in the synagogues, with John Mark as their helper (Acts 13:4-5).

A.D. 46 – They ministered together throughout Cyprus, and provinces in Asia (Acts 13:6-20).

A.D. 47 – They returned through the regions in which they had preached confirming the souls of the disciples (Acts 13:21-25).

A.D. 47 – They returned to Antioch reporting what God had done through them, remaining there for a long time (Acts 14:26-28).

A.D. 50 – Some years later, they were sent to Jerusalem, together with others from Antioch, about the matter of circumcision and keeping the law being required of the Gentiles (Acts 15:1-21).

A.D. 50 – Paul and Barnabas return to Antioch from Jerusalem with letters of instruction for the Gentile churches (Acts 15:22-34).

A.D. 50 – Paul and Barnabas remain for some time in Antioch teaching and preaching the word of the Lord (Acts 15:35).

A.D. 50 – Paul then determines to revisit all the places there they have preached, to see how the believers have been progressing.

It is translated “fall away” in the parable of those who received the Word like seed on rocky soil (Lk 8:13).

- This is word Jesus used when speaking to those making false claims of doing wonderful works: “Depart from Me . . .” Lk 13:27).

- Paul used it when speaking of an apostasy in which some would “depart from the faith” (1 Tim 4:1).

- It is used in the admonition “depart from iniquity” (2 Tim 2:19).

- It is also used to describe those who evidence unbelief, “in departing from the living God” (Heb 3:12).

Ponder the things with which this word is associated – revealed in both the translations of this verse and the lexical meaning of the word: desertion, withdrawing, going away, abandoning, and quitting.

The account of John departing is found in Acts 13:13. “Now when Paul and his company loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga in Pamphylia: and John departing from them returned to Jerusalem.” This was after Paul and Barnabas had passed through the island of Cyprus, and were on the way to Asia, to which the Spirit had called them. That is when John abandoned or deserted them. It was not merely that he left them, the text continues, but because “he went not with them to the work” – the work to which the Spirit had called Paul and Barnabas, and for which he had joined them as their “minister,” “assistant,” NKJV or “helper.” NASB

It must be remembered that “it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful” (1 Cor 4:2), whether the involvement is at the level of a leader of a helper.

Paul perceived “the work” of the Lord to be too important to involve those whose devotion was questionable. They would be journeying into places where they had faced hostility, and where he himself had been stoned. This was no time to institute a training program for the undependable. Although John Mark would avenge his condition later, proving himself to be trustworthy and profitable (2 Tim 4:11), that dependability had not yet been confirmed. However Barnabas may have considered John Mark, Paul did not regard him after the flesh – and that is the manner of the kingdom (2 Cor 5:16). In this case what was to be done was of greater consequence than focusing on a particular individual. The whole of the work must be considered.

In confirmation that this is, indeed, a proper way of thinking, consider the manner in which Paul dealt the infamous fornicator in Corinth. When confirming why he had spoken as he did, he made it clear that it was the whole church that concerned him. Here is what he said: “So although I wrote to you it was not for the sake of the offender, nor for the sake of the one offended, but that your earnestness on our behalf might be made known to you in the sight of God,” NASB or “to find out how loyal you are to us before God” IE (2 Cor 7:12). To be sure, the “offender” and “the one offended” profited from Paul’s letter to the Corinthians. However, it was Paul’s labors with the entire congregation that was the real issue at stake.

So it is in this text. The work of visiting the churches to see how they were progressing was the greater work. In Paul’s estimation, John Mark came behind that work.

A SHARP CONTENTION CAUSES PAUL AND BARNABAS TO SEPARATE

“ 39 And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other: and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus.”

There are some matters that cannot be settled – this was one of them. No counselors were called in to assist them, for that was apparently not appropriate. Behind the scenes, it seems to me that the Lord was now shifting the emphasis to Paul’s apostleship and leadership. So far as laboring with Paul, the work of Barnabas had apparently come to a conclusion, and he would be used in other ways. Considering that the report of Paul confronting Peter in Antioch (Gal 2:1-13) took place during the meeting recorded in the fifteenth chapter of Acts, this is the last record in the Bible of any activity of Barnabas. The only other mention of him is found in the epistles of First Corinthians and Colossians (1 Cor 9:6; Col 4:10). The Corinthian reference suggests that Barnabas did continue to work for the Lord. It is just that it is not reported.

Here we have an example of two men, both with noble motives – yet one was more interested in an individual, while the other was consumed with the work of the Lord itself.

SHARP CONTENTION

“And the contention was so sharp between them, that they departed asunder one from the other . . .” Other versions read, “such a sharp disagreement,” NASB “the disagreement became so sharp,” NRSV “a dissension,” DOUAY “so stirred,” GENEVA “this strife,” NAB “a sharp irritation,” MONTGOMERY and “a sharp clash of opinion.” PHILLIPS

Being in Christ does not dehumanize us, or cause us to be indifferent about matters that are of importance to us. Neither does it allow us to violate our conscience or indulge in activities we judge to be inappropriate. In this case, both men apparently presented their reasoning, and neither one of them would yield to the reasoning of the other. In this case, it appears that Paul had a more noble motive. The events that follow, together with the Divine record of Paul’s ministry seem to me to justify that conclusion.

BARNABAS TOOK MARK AND SAILED TO CYPRUS

“ . . . and so Barnabas took Mark, and sailed unto Cyprus.”

Cyprus, as you may recall, was the home of Barnabas (Acts 4:36). The original mission trip of Barnabas and Saul took them through Cyprus (Acts 13:4-5). There were cities there where he and Paul had preached. Salamis and Paphos are particularly mentioned. In Salamis they are said to have “preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews” (13:5). Being an island with numerous cities, it is assumed that they preached in several of them as they went “through the isle unto Paphos” (13:6). However, on their return trip, they did not pass through the Isle of Cyprus, but sailed straight from Attalia to Antioch, bypassing Cyprus.

This indicates that Barnabas did not revisit the brethren as Paul had determined, seeing how they were doing, and delivering the letters sent by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem. The purpose stated by Paul, however, will not be neglected. It will be carried forward as he had determined. This leads me to believe the Lord was directing Paul.

PAUL CHOOSES SILAS FOR THE DETERMINED WORK

“ 40 And Paul chose Silas, and departed, being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.”

To me, this is a commentary on the effectiveness of the peace of God keeping one's heart and mind. As it is written, “And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus” (Phil 4:7). After a sharp, and apparently somewhat extended, conflict with Barnabas over taking John Mark with them, and their consequent separation, Paul's heart and mind were still on the work of the Lord. He did not abandon his plans to revisit the cities where they had preached, and see how the brethren were doing. A lesser man would have been distraught over the dispute of reference, and probably required time to be alone. The work may even have been altogether abandoned.

PAUL CHOSE SILAS

“And Paul chose Silas, and departed . . .” Other versions read, “and left,” NIV “and set out,” NRSV and “went forth.” DARBY

In other words, the brethren recognized what Paul was doing to be in harmony with the will and purpose of God. Therefore, they sought the Divine support of the work – that the Lord bless and sustain it.

Paul wasted no time, but chose Silas to take the place of Barnabas, and set out on his mission – to see how the brethren were doing in all of the cities where he and Barnabas had preached. An overly sensitive person might have been cast down because of being separated from a fellow-worker with whom he had spend quite a few years in close and productive labors.

Remember, that original mission was one to which they were called by the Holy Spirit. Furthermore, they had fulfilled that mission, completing it as the Spirit had directed them (Acts 14:26). Yet, the work of the Lord requires more than initiation – and Paul knew it. Every work that is commenced by God is like a plant that is to be tended and nurtured until it is mature.

We know this is the case because of the revealed purpose of God for the saved: to conform them to the image of His Son (Rom 8:29). We know that this is accomplished through the ministry of the Holy Spirit, who changes the reconciled ones from glory unto glory (2 Cor 3:18). However, this is done, according to revelation, as they behold “the glory of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18). That is where valid ministry comes into the picture, for it is through the exposition of the Gospel that what is seen of Christ is enlarged. Men do not grow by instruction, but by spiritual insight. Contrary to the suppositions of the self-help gurus, we are transformed or changed by what we SEE, not what we do (2 Cor 3:18; 4:6; 1 John 3:2).

BEING RECOMMENDED BY THE BRETHERN

“ . . . being recommended by the brethren unto the grace of God.” Other versions read, “being commended by,” NKJV “being committed by,” NASB “commending him to,” NRSV “with the blessing of,” BBE “delivered . . . to,” DOUAY “entrusted him to,” GWN and “having been given up to.” YLT

This is not the first time the brethren commended someone to the grace of God. In their original mission, Barnabas and Saul had been “recommended to the grace of God” (Acts 14:26). This involves committing them into the care of the Lord for His blessing and support in the work. In other words, the brethren recognized what Paul was doing to be in harmony with the will and purpose of God. Therefore, they sought the Divine support of the work – that the Lord bless and sustain it.

While care must be taken not to make more of this than is appropriate, the brethren are not said to have recommended Barnabas and Mark to the grace of God. This again suggests that Paul had the clearer perspective of the the work before him, and those who would be appropriate to participate in it. The considerations that compel me to view the matter in this way are as follows:

- Barnabas chose his nephew, who had not been proven to be reliable at that point.
- Barnabas took Mark to Cyprus.
- There is no further word concerning the ministry of Barnabas.
- Paul had a mind for the work itself, as opposed to an interest in an individual.
- Paul’s choice blends more perfectly with the kingdom trait of not knowing men after the flesh.
- Paul’s choice and destination met with the approval and blessing of the brethren.
- So far as the book of Acts is concerned, from this point on, the accent is on the labors of Paul.

This is not something of which I seek to make an issue. Rather, I intend to show that there are good reasons to consider Paul’s rejection of John Mark as one made with a sound mind, and with a settled interest in the churches.

PAUL AND SILAS GO THROUGHOUT SYRIA AND CILICIA CONFIRMING THE CHURCHES

“ 41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches.”

We will find that Paul’s mission was in strict harmony with the focus of the letters prepared and sent out by the apostles and elders, with the whole church, in Jerusalem. Of that intent it is written, “And they wrote letters by them after this manner; The apostles and elders and brethren send greeting unto the brethren which are of the Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia ” (Acts 15:23). This is the Antioch from which Barnabas and Saul had been sent out (13:1-3). Syria and Cilicia are the general areas where preaching had been done, with Antioch being a part of Syria, and the place where the matter of circumcision first became an issue.

THROUGH SYRIA AND CILICIA

“And he went through Syria and Cilicia . . .” Other versions read, “Paul went,” GWN “Paul and Silas went.” LIVING

Notice, the text reads, “ HE went.” All versions, with the exception of those noted, read “ he went” – i.e., Paul went. He was not traveling alone, but he was the leader of this expedition, God having put it into his heart. This manner of expression is frequently found in Scripture. Often it is written that Jesus went here or there, although His disciples were with Him (Matt 4:35; 9:35; 12:1; 14:14; 15:21; 21:12).

Note, there is no record of them going to Cyprus, where Barnabas took John Mark. After Acts 15:39, there is no record of any special trip being made to Cyprus. It is only mentioned in reference to trips that took vessels past Cyprus (Acts 21:3,16; 27:4). This does not appear to be of any special significance, as though it was wrong for Barnabas to have gone to Cyprus, or that in any way it was not a proper place to preach the Gospel. Those who had been scattered by the persecution that rose over Stephen had preached there (Acts 11:19). It appears, however, that the thrust of Divine activity was in other regions.

Syria was a rather extensive territory, with numerous coastal cities, as the Mediterranean Sea was its Eastern boundary. Cities in that region included Damascus (now over 4,000 years old), Tyre, Sidon, and Laodicea.

CONFIRMING THE CHURCHES

“ . . . confirming the churches.” Other versions read, “strengthening the churches,” NKJV “making the churches stronger in the faith,” BBE “establishing the churches,” GENEVA “consolidating the churches,” NJB “helping the congregations grow stronger,” LIVING “establishing and strengthening the churches,” AMPLIFIED “on standing fast the called,” INTERLINEAR “encouraging the churches,” CEV and “making the assemblies strong,” LITV

The word “confirming” is translated from the Greek word εὑπισθριζων . It is in the present active tense, which means this was a continual work; i.e., it is what Paul did wherever he went. The word itself means, “ to establish besides, strengthen more; to render more firm, confirm,” THAYER “cause to be firm,” FRIBERG “to cause someone to become stronger in the sense of more firm and unchanging in attitude or belief - 'to strengthen, to make more firm.” LOUW-NIDA

This is not strengthening as in recovering weak and backsliding people – which work is essential – but in the sense of maturing, growing up into Christ, and being more partakers of the Divine nature. Technically, this is not stabilizing a bruised reed, or fanning a smoking flax into a great flame. Those activities are essential, but that is not the meaning of “confirming.”

Actually, recovering those held captive by the devil (2 Tim 2:24-26), restoring those overtaken in a fault (Gal 6:1-2), and raising up the fallen (1 Tim 3:6-7), are activities that bring the individual to the point where they CAN grow up into Christ in all things. Once those ministries are fulfilled, the work of the laborer has not finished. Then it is necessary to get on with the work of establishing the people in the faith, or they will fall again, be bruised again, and be snared by the devil again. Let me be clear about this. The person who is dabbling in sin, succumbing to temptation, and following after worldly lusts, has been pulled out of the sphere of spiritual growth. They are on the broad road that leads to destruction.

When “the old man” dominates, “the new man” sits down. It simply is not possible to serve to masters. It is not that we should not serve two masters, it is impossible to do so. If the saints of God are not strengthened and confirmed, they cannot avoid being vulnerable to the “devices” of the wicked one.

Being “confirmed” means the person has a more firm grasp on the truth, being able to hold on to it during the storms and trials of life. Such a person is able to “stand in the evil day,” when the adversary launches unusual and prolonged initiatives against that individual (Eph 6:13). When iniquity abounds (Matt 24:12), the love of the confirmed people will not “wax cold.” In the day of adversity, they will not faint (Prov 24:10).

The “confirmed” soul can “put off the old man,” and “put on the new man” (Eph 4:22-24). They can “fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). They can “run the race with patience,” finishing the course that concludes in the presence of the Lord (Heb 12:1-2). These are the people who have effectively resisted the devil, for which cause they are able to “add” to their faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity (2 Pet 1:5-6). These are the people who are obtaining more from heaven than they are denying from earth, and receiving more of the Lord than they are rejecting from the devil. They are being “taught by God” NKJV (1 Thess 4:9), have “the mind of Christ” (1 Cor 2:16), and are participating in the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4). These are the people who have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil, and have need of “strong meat” (Heb 5:12,14). They cannot subsist on meager spiritual diets. They are “prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21), being “thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17).

CONCLUSION

Our text has exposed us to the proper manner in which we are to think of the churches – all of them. It particularly accents the manner in which men should think of the churches where they have invested of themselves. A church that is not established in the faith, or “confirmed,” is not an exemplary congregation – regardless of how it may appear to men. Its size is of no consequence whatsoever, for no church of Scripture was ever evaluated upon the basis of its size. In fact, we have little or no detailed information on the size of any congregation of Scriptural record, unless it be the church in Jerusalem. There are also some indications that the church in Corinth was of considerable size, although it certainly gave them no spiritual advantage.

The stability and maturity of any congregation can be measured by the kind of diet that sustains it. If, for example, the fundamental ministries of a church pertain to getting people off the streets, aiding the needy, recovering people from moral deficiencies, putting marriages together that are falling apart, and other matters relating to moral and spiritual inadequacies, then the strength of that church is in question. It is not that any of those works are wrong, for they are not. However, not a single one of them have to do with growth up into Christ (Eph 4:15). They all have to do with getting people back on the “narrow” way that leads to life (Matt 7:14).

The stability and maturity of any congregation can be measured by the kind of diet that sustains it. If, for example, the fundamental ministries of a church pertain to getting people off the streets, aiding the needy, recovering people from moral deficiencies, putting marriages together that are falling apart, and other matters relating to moral and spiritual inadequacies, then the strength of that church is in question. It is not that any of those works are wrong, for they are not. However, not a single one of them have to do with growth up into Christ

Those who are classified as Christians, yet who live closer to the world than to heaven, are a living contradiction of “newness of life,” in which all of them had their genesis in Jesus. Our Lord certainly did say that the “sick have need of a physician” (Mk 2:17). However, who is the fool who imagines that the Great Physician leaves them sick, and that He is only a Physician? Did He not come so we could be “made partakers” of Him (Heb 3:14) – and He is certainly not sick! How is it that people who are being oriented for glory can maintain a primary affiliation with the world from which they have been delivered (Gal 1:4)? Life in Christ is calculated to bring us into the objective that God has revealed – to conform us to the image of His Son (Rom 8:29). Such a conformation postulates becoming more like Him, not remaining as we were.

Ponder the advantages realized by those in Christ. These are the matters that are addressed by believers being “confirmed,” or established in the faith. These realities substantiate to us that spiritual advancement is not automatic. It requires the investment of the saved themselves, and the faithful workers who are “laborers together with God” (1 Cor 3:9).

- Every person who is born again, with absolutely no exceptions, are “created in Christ Jesus unto good works” (Eph 2:10).
- They all begin with a clean slate, having been “justified from all things” (Acts 13:39), and forgiven of “all trespasses” (Col 2:13).
- All of them were buried by baptism into the death of Christ, and raised to walk in the “newness of life” (Rom 6:4).
- All of them were “washed,” “sanctified,” and “justified” (1 Cor 6:11).

- Without exception, they were raised up by God to sit together with Christ “in the heavenly places” (Eph 2:6).

- They started their new life with the “old man” crucified (Rom 6:6), and a “new man” that was “created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24).

- All of them had “access” to God (Eph 3:12).

- Because they were sons, God sent His Holy Spirit into their hearts (Gal 4:6), to lead in subduing the flesh (Rom 8:13), and wait for the hope of righteousness by faith (Gal 6:5).

- Jesus Himself performed an “operation,” or work, of circumcision upon them when they were baptized, that successfully separated them from the “body of the sins of the flesh” (Col 2:11-12), so they were no longer debtors to the flesh to be dominated by its impulses (Rom 8:12).

- In addition, the grace of God came, teaching them how to successfully deny, or reject, “ungodliness and worldly lusts,” while living “soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world” (Tit 2:11-12).

- All of the saved were “reconciled to God” (Col 1:20), being no more “enemies” (Rom 5:10), and were “made free” by the Son of God from all that ensnares the soul and separates men from God (Rom 8:36; Gal 5:1).

Those who engage in the noble work of confirming the saints make much of these realities. They engage in assisting believers to see more clearly that they have been called to something that is intended to be appropriated, as well as from something to be avoided. What they have been summoned to is greater in both magnitude and nature than what they have been called from. They have been called to better things.

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

Lesson #68

THE INTRODUCTION OF TIMOTHY

16:1 “Then came he to Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed; but his father was a Greek: 2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium. 3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek. 4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem. 5 And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily. ” (Acts 16:1-5)

INTRODUCTION

In the body of Christ, every member has access to God through Jesus Christ. This access is through the very same faith by which they were justified. Because it was “given” to them to believe (Phil 1:29), and the grace of God that brought salvation (Tit 2:11) “was exceeding abundant with faith” (1 Tim 1:14), there is no question about faith’s effectiveness. No member of the body of Christ is denied this access to God through faith. This means that everything required for growth and stability are well within the reach of those who are in Christ Jesus. This is something of what is involved in Divine power giving us “all things that pertain to life and godliness” (2 Pet 1:3). However, rarely, if ever, is a “newborn babe” aware of these marvelous realities. These are matters that are opened up through teaching. If this is not done, and the Word of God is not regularly ingested, they will not be obvious to the child of God. In such a case, the person begins to live just as though the abundance that is provided in Christ does not even exist. For this reason, the individual begins to live as though mastering life in this world is really the mark of spiritual excellence. To assist such people in living out such a delusion, the professed Christian community is filled with professed experts in human behavior. None of them, however, are capable of doing what is affirmed in our text to have taken place: the establishment of the churches in the faith.

Also, there is no member that is not particularly placed in the body of Christ, or lacks a specific gift that is designed to profit the whole body (1 Cor 12:18). These abilities are developed as the individual lives by faith, walks in the Spirit, and maintains the fellowship with Jesus into which he has been called. This manner of life is helped along by continuance in the apostles doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers (Acts 2:42). No person in Christ can be built up, strengthened, or established, independently of these involvements. While this appears very evident to the person who is participating in these things, it is not at all apparent to the fledgling youth and the immature. That is one reason we are given a record of these things actually being lived out.

It will become apparent in this text that those in Christ are expected to avail themselves of the resources provided for them, and thus advance toward spiritual maturity and productivity.

AREAS OF INEQUALITY

However, there are areas in which an equality does not exist among the members of Christ. Some, for example, are referred to as “first,” “second,” and “third” (1 Cor 12:28). It is possible to “excel” (1 Cor 14:12), be “of reputation” (Gal 2:2), and be “of note” (Rom 16:7). The church in Jerusalem had those who “were of reputation” (Gal 2:2), and were “pillars” (Gal 2:9). Jesus gave Peter “the keys of the kingdom of heaven” (Matt 16:18-19). The church in Antioch had certain among them who were “prophets and teachers” (Acts 13:1). Distinctions such as these are owing to at least two factors.

- Divine Placement. Everyone in Christ does not occupy the same office. Just as the natural body “hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ . . . For the body is not one member, but many” (1 Cor 12:12,14). No member can assume they are not part of the body because they are not the same as others (1 Cor 12:15-18). Nor, indeed, can any member of the body affirm they have no need of the other members (1 Cor 12:21). The distinction of contributive abilities within the church is, in part, owing to their Divine placement within the body (1 Cor 12:18).

- Eager Advancement. In addition to the distinctions traced to their placement in the body, there is also eminence that results from ardent and consistent activity. Paul was such a person, who “labored more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10). The household of Stephanus was also unique, in that they “addicted themselves to the ministry of the saints” (1 Cor 16:15). Paul and Barnabas were of note because they “hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 15:26). In addition to where the Lord had placed them in the church, these brethren have uniquely availed themselves of the resources that are accessible all believers, doing so with uncommon eagerness and consistency.

I have noted over the years that the institutional church makes little room for the kind of people I have just described. Quite frequently such people are virtually ignored, and treated as though they had nothing more to offer than the rank and file of the people. This is because there really is no place in religious institutions for those who are wholly devoted to the Lord, and possess uncommon insight and devotion. Such people are generally regarded as oddities and misfits. If you happen to be such a person, and have been exposed to what I have termed “the institutional church,” you know very well what I am talking about.

Our text introduces us to such an individual – “Timotheus,” the Greek form of his name, also referred to as “Timothy”

Here is a young man who was noted among the brethren, and was immediately recognized by Paul as being worthy of extended involvement in the work of the Lord.

SOMETHING COMMON AMONG BELIEVERS

Additionally, all of the saved have been given a “new man” (Col 3:9-10), are reconciled to God (Col 1:20), and have peace with God (Rom 5:1). From the standpoint of their acceptance by God, there is no difference among them, for in Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek, male nor female, bond nor free (Gal 3:28).

Concerning “the new man,” very few, if any, who are first “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17), are aware that they have two natures and two laws, or principles, resident in their bodies – but that is the case.

Two differing natures reside within the believer, and they are contradictory to one another. Further, this contrariety erupts in hostility. As it is written, “For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh: and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would” (Gal 5:17).

Speaking of his personal involvement in this inner warfare, Paul said, “But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members” (Rom 7:23). By saying “bringing me into captivity to the law of sin,” Paul does not mean that he is forced to sin, but rather that he is forced to deal with this recalcitrant law that militates against his real preferences.

James also speaks of this conflict, emphasizing the strength of the desires of the Holy Spirit for our spirit. “Or do you suppose that the Scripture is speaking to no purpose that says, The Spirit Whom He has caused to dwell in us yearns over us and He yearns for the Spirit [to be welcome] with a jealous love?” AMPLIFIED (James 4:5).

THE POINT OF MENTIONING THIS

The point of mentioning these things is to provide a proper context for the remarkable accounts recorded in the book of Acts. The advances and triumphs that were made were in spite of this inner warfare that is waged in all believers. However, fighting the war is not an end of itself. The triumph over the flesh and its desires – referred to as crucifying the flesh with its affections and lusts (Gal 5:24) – is in order to personal involvement in “that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:2). This, of course, is the great weakness in submitting to the “ordinances” of men that are related to attempting to control sin. Those ordinances consider the subduing of sinful tendencies to be the will of God – and, in a sense, this is true. However, in the most precise sense of the word, the will of God is related to this: “That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honor” (1 Thess 4:4). Sanctification and honor have more to do with Divine employment than controlling the flesh. The denial of ungodliness and worldly lusts is in order that we might engage in the “good works” for which we have been “created” – works “which God hath before ordained, that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10).

It is the participation in these “good works” that is being reported in Luke’s record of the advance of the church. It is most blessed to consider it.

TIMOTHY DISCOVERED IN THE AREA OF LYSTRA AND DERBE

16:1a “Then came he to Derbe and Lystra: and, behold, a certain disciple was there, named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed . . .”

THEN

“Then . . .” Other versions read, “and,” NASB “He also,” NLT “From there.” NJB

The Greek word translated “Then” is de, which means “but, moreover . . . universally, by way of opposition and distinction; it is added to statements opposed to a preceding statement.” THAYER In other words this is not an explanation of the previous statement, but something that is compared with it. The previous statement is, “And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches” (Acts 15:41). This suggests that Paul and Silas had already strengthened the churches in Syria and Cilicia, for Derbe and Lystra were cities in Lycaonia (Acts 14:6). Syria and Cilicia were en route to these cities, In other words, Luke is not providing all of the details related to this trip. He is rather accentuating the events that led to the epochs he will report.

THEY CAME TO DERBE AND LYSTRA

“ . . . came he to Derbe and Lystra . . .” Other versions read, “went on also to,” NRSV “came also to,” ASV “he reached (also),” NAB “from there he went to,” NJB and “He also went to.” ISV

These were the last cities Paul and Barnabas visited on their initial trip (Acts 14:6,21). Derbe was the final city, and from there they had backtracked, visiting Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch of Pisidia, confirming the souls of the disciples (Acts 14:21-22).

Now Derbe and Lystra are the first cities Paul and Silas went to, following passing through Syria and Cilicia, “confirming the churches.”

Lystra was the city where Paul had been stoned during his first trip with Barnabas (Acts 14:8-19). There is where he healed a man who had been “cripple from his mother’s womb” (Acts 14:8). It is also where he and Barnabas barely restrained the citizenry from offering sacrifice to them, for the people there thought Jupiter (Zeus) and Mercurius (Hermes) had come down to them in the persons of Paul and Barnabas (Acts 14:11-18).

It is evident that Paul spoke the truth when he later said to the elders of Ephesus, “But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God” (Acts 20:24). Dominated by “the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus” (Rom 8:2), Paul was moved along by something higher than self-interest.

A CERTAIN DISCIPLE WAS THERE

“ . . . and, behold, a certain disciple was there . . .” Other versions read, “there was a disciple,” NRSV “a disciple was there,” RSV “there was a young disciple,” NLT “a follower,” IE and “he found there.” WEYMOUTH

It seems to me that a measure of a real man of God is a marked tendency to spot devoted followers of Christ and culture an association with them.

Here we are being exposed to the nature of Paul. He was alert for distinguished disciples, as well as believers in general. It seems to me that a measure of a real man of God is a marked tendency to spot devoted followers of Christ and culture an association with them. Jesus Himself had this disposition. When seeing Nathanael, for example, Jesus said, “Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!” (John 1:47). He perceived the remarkable faith of a certain centurion and said, “Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel” (Matt 8:10). He also said to the Syrophenician woman who pressed him for a blessing, “O woman, great is thy faith” (Matt 15:28).

This kind of awareness is also embedded in the very text of Scripture. Those who excelled in matters pertaining to God are duly noted.

- It is said of David that God, “gave testimony, and said, I have found David the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will” (Acts 13:22).
- The mighty angel Gabriel said to Daniel, “I am come to show thee; for thou art greatly beloved” (Dan 9:23).
- It is written of Zechariah and Elizabeth, parents of John the Baptist, “And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless” (Luke 1:6).
- The early church referred to Paul and Barnabas as “Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 15:26).
- Andronicus and Junia were “of note among the apostles” (Rom 16:2).
- Persis, a Persian woman who was a believer, is described as one “which labored much in the Lord” (Rom 16:12).
- James Peter and John were “acknowledged pillars” NRSV of the church in Jerusalem (Gal 2:9).

Now, coming to the region of Lystra and Derbe, there was a young man that stood out – a “certain disciple,” or follower of Jesus Christ.

In his letters to Timothy, Paul admonished him to seek out “faithful men” – those who were reliable . NIV He was to take the things he had heard from Paul and “commit,” or “transmit and entrust [as a deposit],” AMPLIFIED them to others in order that they might “teach others also” (2 Tim 2:2). I do not believe this word has been taken seriously by the modern church. There is too much reliance on methodology, education, and the obtaining of credentials.

The religious professional of our time would probably never have noticed Timotheus. However, a godly man engaged in the work of the Lord would not have passed him by.

TIMOTHEUS, THE SON OF A BELIEVING JEWESS

“ . . . named Timotheus, the son of a certain woman, which was a Jewess, and believed . . .” Other versions read, “the son of a certain Jewish woman who believed,” NKJV “whose mother was a Jewess and a believer,” NIV “the son of a Christian Jewess,” WEYMOUTH and “whose mother was a Jewish Christian.” PHILLIPS

“ Probably Timothy was about eighteen years of age, a convert of Paul's former visit a few years before (1Tim 1:2) and still young twelve years later (1Tim 4:12).” ROBERTSON'S WORD PICTURES

During their first trip into that region, Paul and Barnabas “preached the Gospel” (14:6-7). After Paul had been stoned in Lystra, he and Barnabas had gone to Derbe, “preached the Gospel in that city, and taught many” (14:21). On their returned trip, they had “confirmed the souls of the disciples” in that region, and “ordained elders in every church” (14:23). That is the spiritual culture in which young Timothy matured. Because Paul referred to him as his “own son in the faith,” he was probably converted during one of those visits.

There were at least three years between the initial visit of Paul and Barnabas to that area and this return – and possible as many as five years. Assuming that this was the time of Timothy’s conversion, he had greatly matured during the interim between the first and second visits. All of this being true, and considering the notation of A.T. Robertson concerning the probable age of Timothy at this time, his conversion could have been when he was somewhere between thirteen and fifteen years of age. This is probably the approximate age of Daniel, Hananiah, Michael, and Azariah when they were taken captive to Babylon.

Considering that Paul and Barnabas brought the Gospel to this region, this must also have been the time when Timothy’s mother and grandmother were converted, for the faith that Timothy had first dwelt in them (2 Tim 1:5). If it is true that Timothy, his mother, and his grandmother were converted during Paul’s first tour through that region, those three souls highlight the value of a pure spiritual environment, where saints have been “confirmed,” exhorted to “continue in the faith,” and solemnly reminded that “we must, through much tribulation, enter into the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22). Where such activities are missing, it seems to me that believers are in danger of being shut up to mediocrity, and becoming more vulnerable to the attacks of the wicked one.

Timothy’s Upbringing

Timothy had been nurtured in the Scriptures from the time he was a young child. Paul reminded him in one of his letters, “And that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus” (2 Tim 3:15). This tutelage had come from his mother, who herself was a second generation believer. Paul wrote of her, “When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also” (2 Tim 1:5).

This refers to Timothy’s Jewish upbringing by his mother, prior to him becoming disciple of Christ. Here is a notable example of special education and training in the Scriptures themselves. This was a Jewish manner, who maintained their own schools, and centered their learning in the Scriptures. Ordinarily, they were never absorbed into the culture where they were found, but remained unique within it. This tendency continues to this very day.

This was a Jewish manner, who maintained their own schools, and centered their learning in the Scriptures. Ordinarily, they were never absorbed into the culture where they were found, but remained unique within it.

It was this faithful upbringing that led Timothy to believe the Gospel that Paul had preached in that region. Elsewhere Paul said of his preaching. “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come ” (Acts 26:22). This kind of preaching is exceedingly rare in our day. Under the leadership of the mega-church and media ministers, the thrust of preaching has been focused on meeting the perceived needs of the individual rather than declaring the Lord’s Christ. This kind of emphasis sounds noble only to those who are fundamentally ignorant of the Scriptures, which are able to “give you the wisdom that leads to salvation” NASB (2 Tim 3:15). This is the kind of departure of which Peter wrote: “But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you : whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not” (2 Pet 2:1-3).

Paul’s References to Timothy

Paul's references to Timothy confirm his uniqueness.

- “My own son in the faith” (1 Tim 1:2).
- “My beloved son” (1 Cor 4:17).
- “My workfellow” (Rom 15:21).
- “My brother” (2 Cor 1:1).
- Uniquely “likeminded” with Paul, who “naturally cared” for the state of God’s people (Phil 2:19-22).
- “He is doing the Lord's work, as I also am” NASB (1 Cor 16:10)
- “Minister of God and fellow laborer in the Gospel of Christ” (1 Thess 3:2).

All of this confirms that Timothy was just as unique as he first appeared to be. He had availed himself of the spiritual advantages that were given to him. There was spiritual substance to him, and it was duly noted by Paul.

BUT HIS FATHER WAS A GREEK

“ 1b . . . but his father was a Greek.” Other versions read, “was a Gentile,” DOUAY and “was a Grecian.” GENEVA The idea is that his father was neither a Jew nor a believer in Christ, for he is contrasted with Timothy’s mother who was “a Jewess, and believed.” By contrast – “but” – his father “was a Greek.” A contrast between Jew and Greek is often found in Scripture.

- “And it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed” (Acts 14:1).
- “And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks ” (Acts 18:4).
- “And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks” (Acts 19:10).
- “And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified” (Acts 19:17).
- “Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks , repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 20:21).
- “For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek ” (Rom 1:16).
- “For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him” (Rom 10:12).
- “For the Jews require a sign, and the Greeks seek after wisdom: But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness ; But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks , Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God” (1 Cor 1:22-24)
- “There is neither Jew nor Greek , there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus” (Gal 3:28).
- “Where there is neither Greek nor Jew , circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free: but Christ is all, and in all” (Col 3:11).

Some have surmised that Timothy’s father had died, leaving him alone with his mother. However, I do not see this as a tenable view. The fact that a point is made of his father being a Greek, and that special action will be taken in view of that fact, suggests that he was still alive. Further, I do not know why a point is made of his mother being a believer but his father a Greek if he was no longer alive. The comparison is not between a wife that was alive and a husband that was dead, but between someone who believed and someone who did not.

However a person chooses to view the situation, it does confirm that a child can, if required, be raised in the faith without a believing father. What is more, the upbringing can be extraordinary, yielding results that were duly noted by the apostle to the Gentiles.

HE WAS WELL REPORTED OF BY THE BRETHERN

“ 2 Which was well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium.” Other versions read, “well spoken of,” NKJV “had a high opinion,” BBE “spoke highly,” CSB “had a good testimony,” DARBY “gave good testimony of him,” MRD “well thought of,” NLT “respected Timothy,” IE “highly regarded,” ISV “had a high reputation,” WILLIAMS “was attested to,” INTERLINEAR “said good things about,” CEV and “held in high regard.” PHILLIPS

As used in this text, the word translated “well reported of,” has the following lexical meaning: “to be continuously well reported of . . . giving honorable testimony,” THAYER and “receive a good report, be well-spoken of, be approved, have a good reputation.” FRIBERG

Here was a young man, probably in his teens, who, within a relatively short period of time (2-4 years) had captured the attention of the believers in that region. Such a phenomenon would be even more extraordinary in our time than it was at the time of our text. However, this is a sterling example of what the grace of God will do in a person who is wholly given to the Lord – a person who avails himself of the Scripture and those who have insight into them.

The “brethren” were continually speaking well of Timothy, noting his spiritual excellence. The tense (perfect) of the Greek word here (evmarturei/to), indicates a continual witness. Robertson, in his “Word Pictures,” makes a special note of this: “ (emartureito). Imperfect passive. It was a continuous witness that was borne the young disciple both in his home town of Lystra and in Derbe. Already he had so borne himself that his gifts and graces for the ministry were recognized.” It also ought to be noted that a person who has not distinguished himself among local disciples, will probably not be able to do it anywhere else.

Like young Samuel, Timothy excelled his peers. Like Daniel and his three fellows, he stood out in comparison to others of his age. Although it ought to be evident, the reputation of Timothy did not pertain to athletic, scholastic, or musical skills – although it is remotely possible he may have excelled in such things. This commendation, however, had to do with the things of God. He had already begun to live out what Paul would later buttress in a special letter to him: “Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity” (1 Tim 4:12). It is refreshing to note that we have some younger brethren among us who are following in the train of such notable disciples.

Although I want to avoid appearing overly negative, I feel compelled to note the general absence of this kind of youthful response in the churches of our time. Under the incapable leadership of religious professionals, the younger brethren have been isolated from the more mature believers. It appears this has been done in order to appeal to their vernal interests. Such an approach is wholly without any Scriptural suggestion or precedent. I am not aware of any text of Scripture that suggests any spiritual aptitude or maturity can be achieved independently of the body of Christ, Imagine the laughter that would be elicited if someone suggested the eye could be better developed if all of the eyes were put together; or that a keen ear could be acquired by putting all of the ears together. The notion of regularly, and even permanently, isolating a body of people within the church – any people – in order to focus attention upon them, is questionable, to say the least.

By becoming absorbed in the youthful culture of our time, many Christian young people have, in fact, separated themselves conceptually from the body of Christ. More and more, they are not viewed in association with the body of believers.

By becoming absorbed in the youthful culture of our time, many Christian young people have, in fact, separated themselves conceptually from the body of Christ. More and more, they are not viewed in association with the body of believers. However, the word to young people is still, “Be thou an example of the believers” (1 Tim 4:12). Note the remarkable extent of Paul’s exhortation. “Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers, in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity.”

- Let no man despise thy youth. Every younger believer is a steward of their youth. They are not to exhibit youthful foolishness, the lack of sobriety that characterizes worldly youth, or one who is dominated by a lust for pleasure.

- Be an example of the believers. The standard of measurement are those who are living by faith (Heb 10:38) – “the believers.” These are “the household of faith” (Gal 6:10), who walk by faith, and not by sight (2 Cor 5:7). Those who believe are those who are properly focused, and live unto the Lord who died for them and rose again.

- Be an example in word. In speech, they are to speak as believers, not in the jargon of worldly youth. They are not to speak in a manner that makes no sense to those who are trusting in the Lord with all of their hearts, and not leaning to their own understanding (Prov 3:5). Their speech is with grace (Col 4:6), and they have a keen awareness that they will be justified or condemned by their words (Matt 12:37).

- Be an example in conversation. Their conversation is their conduct — the manner in which they live. Believers, of which they are to be example, are strangers and pilgrims in this world (1 Pet 2:11). They are in the process of denying ungodliness and worldly lusts. They are living soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, and are looking for Christ’s appearing (Tit 2:12). The believers have a manner of life in which they fasten their gaze upon things that are not seen, rather than what can be seen, and is consequently passing away (2 Cor 4:18).

- Be an example in charity. This is the love that puts the interests of other above self. Charity gives, forgives, and seeks the betterment of others.; (1 Cor 13:1-13).

- Be an example in spirit. This has to do with living a controlled life, keeping under the body and bringing it into subjection (1 Cor 9:27). It has to do with the posture of our life, what motivates us, and how we live before the Lord. A spiritual person is one who is “humble in spirit” (Prov 29:23), is “poor in spirit” (Matt 5:3), and is content with the things they have (Heb 13:5). Having been taught by the grace of God, they deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly in this world (Tit 2:12).

- Be an example in faith. Young believers are to be an example of the believers in their faith – holding up under trials, and not being moved about with every wind of doctrine. The just “live by faith” (Rom 1:17), and they are to exhibit this manner in their lives.

- Be an example in purity. Believers are those who keep themselves “unspotted from the world” (James 1:27). They are busy about cleansing themselves of all filthiness and flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord (2 Cor 7:1). They make it their aim to “walk in the light as He is in the light” (1 John 1:7). They labor at avoiding contaminating and defiling influences. Jesus pronounced a blessing on the “pure in heart,” declaring of such, “they shall see God” (Matt 4:8). Emphasizing the role of purity, Paul also admonished Timothy, “neither be partaker of other men’s sins: keep thyself pure” (1 Tim 5:22).

This is the manner in which youthful believers are addressed. There is no special dumbed-down version of the Gospel for them. They have not been liberated to meander about in the various “youthful lusts” of the flesh. Rather, they have been called into a life that requires the crucifixion of the flesh, and the pursuit of the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. Confirming their oneness with the body of Christ they are admonished, “Flee also youthful lusts: but follow righteousness, faith, charity, peace, with them that call on the Lord out of a pure heart” (2 Tim 2:22).

THE POINT OF THIS

The point of this brief diversion is to emphasize that these are the areas where Timothy had distinguished himself. He had a good report as a believer, not merely as an energetic youth. There is, of course, a lot of unwarranted assumption concerning youthful vigor. During that period of life, children are not noted for their productivity or sustained work and industry. By nature, their energies are ordinarily devoted to passing pleasures. However, with Timothy, this was not the case. The “good report” that was given of him was not merely that he stayed out of trouble and did the bidding of his parents. He was, at a young age, a noble “example of the believers,” and had obtained that reputation among them.

PAUL DESIRES TO GO FORTH WITH HIM

“ 3 Him would Paul have to go forth with him; and took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.”

Being alert to the environment in which he found himself, Paul took due note of Timothy. It is true that walking in the Spirit causes one to be alert to the working of the Spirit in the people of God. The person who walks in the flesh dismisses the presence of godly people as something of little consequence. I have often been in gatherings of professed Christian leaders that appeared to give little regard to especially godly people among them. It is common, for example, for a Christian philanthropist, or one who engages in some form of charitable work, is perceived as being deeply involved in the work of the Lord. As laudable as such works are, serving tables is by no means to be seen as equal to laboring in the Word and in the doctrine (Acts 6:2; 1 Tim 5:17). For example, the thing that distinguished Paul from others was his prodigious labors in preaching and teaching what he had been given to see (Rom 15:19; 1 Cor 2:4; 4:7; 9:27; 15:1,2,10; Gal 1:8; Col 1:28; 1 Thess 2:9).

There is a certain Kingdom awareness that is worthy of note. That is, as we are living in a conscious awareness of the living God and His purpose in Christ Jesus, certain things become obvious to us. Faith causes us to be alert to the presence of the Lord Himself, as well as His people. The presence of faith, hope, love, the fruit of the Spirit, works of faith, the love of the truth, and those who are pilgrims in this world, become very obvious.

By way of comparison, a fleshly mind, sectarianism, and adherence to lifeless religious tradition hide all of these things to us. In such a case, we become blind and insensitive to Divine workings. Like Jerusalem of old, such people do not know the time of their visitation (Lk 19:44).

Spiritual obtuseness is the plague of the church of our time. In order for any semblance of spiritual sensitivity to be aroused, all manner of coaching and stimulus is required. In our time, most of this appears to be artificial, being nothing more than a meager attempt to simulate spiritual life.

In such a surrounding as this, Timothy would have been very difficult to detect. First, it is doubtful that such a young man would choose to be in such an environment – unless it was in the capacity of a speaker like Stephen. Second, Paul would not have been inclined to be in such a place unless he was going to address the people.

If you have not already learned this, you will find that the more your mind is stayed on the Lord, the less you will be attracted to lifeless assemblies, even if they have a lot of outward activity. A love for the truth cultures a certain disdain for a misrepresentation of the truth. A quest for glory develops within the individual a very real contempt for things that cause this world to seem more prominent than it really is. That is the manner of spiritual life.

At any rate, it was in the activity of preaching, teaching, and “confirming the churches” that Paul took note of Timothy (Acts 15:41; 16:1). In this, he followed the example of the Lord Jesus Himself. He chose His disciples while He was in the act of preaching and teaching (Matt 4:17-23; Lk 5:17-27).

PAUL CHOOSES HIM

“Him would Paul have to go forth with him . . .” Other versions read, “wanted this man to go with him,” NASB “wanted to take him along on the journey,” NIV “wanted Timothy to accompany him,” NRSV “was disposed to take with him,” MRD “wanted to have him as a traveling companion,” NJB “wanted him to join them on their journey,” NLT and “asked him to join them on their journey.”
LIVING

Paul was not merely looking to add a young man to the group – a sort of trainee. He had already judged Mark to be unworthy of such a privilege (15:37-38). The idea here is that Paul wanted Timothy to be “with him” in the mission on which he had embarked. That work was to “go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do” (Acts 15:36).

In our time, who has heard of such a mission? To be sure, there are precious laborers engaged in such holy activity, but it is rare, indeed. I know of no Bible College of Seminary that endeavors to prepare students for such a work. It certainly is not common to hear of such a thing in the churches.

The very fact that Paul had a profound desire to take Timothy on such a mission is commentary enough on the spiritual quality of this young man.

We assume that Paul’s request was clearly made known to Timothy and to his mother. It is obvious that there was no reluctance on the part of Timothy, or on the part of his mother or other relatives. This young man was “prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21). He did not draw back like the person who said he would follow Jesus, but requested to go home first, and bid farewell to those of his house (Lk 9:61). Nor, indeed, was he like the would-be disciple who said he would follow Jesus, but asked that he first be allowed to go and bury his father (Lk 9:59). Both of these people were rejected by Jesus. However, there was no hesitation on the part of Timothy. In fact, it appears that he went with Paul immediately.

PAUL CIRCUMCISED HIM

“ . . . and took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters . . .” Other versions read, “because of the Jews in that region,” NKJV “because of the Jews who lived in that area,” NIV “on account of the Jews in the locality,” NJB and “in deference to the Jews of the area.”
NLT

Here we are faced with an action that will confuse the sectarian. It seems inconsistent with the very letters that Paul was carrying to the churches. The apostles and elders in Jerusalem, together with the whole church, had gathered together to consider the matter of circumcision – particularly with regard to it being necessary to be saved. Now, in seeming contradiction of the decree of the apostles and elders, Paul has Timothy circumcised.

This action was taken “because of the Jews which were in those quarters” – not those of “the brethren,” as in 16:2 – but “of the Jews.” The phrase “of the Jews” is mentioned twenty-two times in the book of Acts (10:22,39; 12:11; 13:5,43; 14:1,5; 16:3; 17:1,10; 20:19; 22:30; 23:12, 27; 25:2,8,15,24; 26:2). It always refers to those who were not believers in Christ, but were fleshly Jews .

When the Gospel was first preached to them, probably by Paul, they had believed on Christ, having been taught by the Law and the Prophets to anticipate Him, and to recognize Him when He was preached.

Add to this the fact that Paul had refused to have Titus circumcised during the Jerusalem conference. Of that occasion he wrote, “But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was compelled to be circumcised: and that because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage: to whom we gave place by subjection, no, not for an hour; that the truth of the gospel might continue with you” (Gal 2:3-5).

Something more is involved here than merely following, or not following, a given procedure. Paul’s action was mingled with wisdom, and with a consideration of the impact of this circumstance upon the ministry of Timothy. As we will see, the circumstance was not identical with that of Titus. It is apparent that the Jews whom Paul considered here, were unbelieving Jews, who had not yet obeyed the Gospel.

THEY ALL KNEW

“ . . . for they knew all that his father was a Greek.” Other versions read. “

From this, we can see how Timothy’s mother had distinguished herself among the Jews – they were all aware of her, and of her marriage. Whether this was because of her devotion, or because she married a Gentile is not specified. I suspect that both were involved, with the emphasis being on the former. She had come from a devout Jewish family, whose faith in God was beyond all question. Paul said of Timothy’s mother and grandmother, “When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also” (2 Tim 1:5).

It is apparent that Lois and Eunice were now believers in Christ. However, they had also been devout Jews, and were noted for being so. In them the Scripture was fulfilled, “Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith” (Gal 3:24). Like Zecharias and Elizabeth, they were “both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless” (Luke 1:6). When the Gospel was first preached to them, probably by Paul, they had believed on Christ, having been taught by the Law and the Prophets to anticipate Him, and to recognize Him when He was preached.

Also, in this family, Timothy, as well as the marriage itself, was sanctified by his believing mother . Where there is a peaceful marriage among those who are divided because of faith, the believer, whether husband or wife, makes the marriage to be sanctioned by God. Therefore Paul wrote, “For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband: else were your children unclean; but now are they holy” (1 Cor 7:14). This had taken place in the case of Timothy’s mother, and this he was considered a proper child, even though the circumstances were not ideal. This kind of thinking is very difficult for those who major on the family structure, instead of the believers who are in the family.

Now, in consideration of the Jews in that region, who were acquainted with Timothy’s family, Paul circumcises Timothy. Because of the nature of this circumstance, this was not a private matter, but a public one.

The Circumstances Were Different

In the case of Timothy, Paul's action was in consideration of Jews who were not believers in Christ. He would be journeying among them, with Timothy participating in the work he would do. It was therefore expedient that there be no unnecessary offense among the Jews because Timothy was not circumcised. It is apparent that we are not dealing here with factious Jews who had believed on Christ, yet demanded that uncircumcised believers be circumcised after the manner of Moses. Paul would not have submitted to such a demand.

It is apparent that we are not dealing here with factious Jews who had believed on Christ, yet demanded that uncircumcised believers be circumcised after the manner of Moses. Paul would not have submitted to such a demand.

Thus, as already stated, the circumstance differed from that of Titus, when "false brethren" sought to force Titus to be circumcised. Paul considered such people "false brethren," and would not submit to them for a single hour (Gal 2:3-5).

There are a number of principles to be seen in this text. They all emphasize the necessity of insightful laborers in the Lord's field.

- WALKING IN WISDOM TOWARD THEM THAT ARE WITHOUT.

Believers are admonished, "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time" (Col 4:5). This involves taking care not to cause needless offense. As it is written, "Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God" (1 Cor 10:32). In this case, offending the Jews was the issue – devout Jews, not malicious ones. By circumcising Timothy, Paul was confirming to the Jews that his purpose was not to merely "change the customs" of the Jews – a charge false witnesses raised against Stephen (Acts 6:13-14). Later, Paul affirmed with clarity that he had not gone about to disrupt the customs of the Jews: "Neither against the law of the Jews, neither against the temple, nor yet against Caesar, have I offended any thing at all" (Acts 25:8). In Christ, required changes are made as a result of insight, not the adopting of some new habits or routines.

- NOT SUBMITTING TO SECTARIAN DEMANDS. Being considerate of others, and submitting to the demands of sectarian leaders are two different things. The latter is strictly out of order. A believer may choose to be considerate of the persuasions of others, altering his personal conduct as Paul did when he paid the expenses for a temple vow made by four Jewish men (Acts 21:23-26). In that case, James reminded Paul that those Jews were not binding their custom on the Gentiles. It was strictly a devout personal adherence to the instructions for taking a vow of dedication to the Lord for a season (Num 6:2-7). If, however, this had been a demand placed upon Paul, he would not have done it. It is obvious that wisdom is required in such cases – cases that cannot be settled by rules or routines.

- NOVICES AND MINISTRY. How would a novice have handled such a circumstance? It is obvious that he would not have been able to address the issue wisely. He might have erroneously treated sincere Jews as though they were hypocritical bigots, and cited strong New Covenant teaching to confirm the folly of their thinking. This is why Paul said of spiritual leaders, "Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil" (1 Tim 3:6).

- WHEN YOU ARE INTERPRETED WRONGLY. When honest and good people interpret you wrongly, it is in order to dispel their view by considerate actions. If religious bigots see you in erroneous ways, you are under no obligation to alter your conduct to please them. There is no record of Jesus or the apostles changing their conduct in order to please hypocrites who stood in judgment of them. Of course, there is an obligation placed upon the people of God to be able to distinguish the difference between such critics.

SOMETHING ELSE TO BE NOTED

There is something else here that is worthy of our attention. Notice that precisely twenty-three words are devoted to the report of Timothy being circumcised: “. . . took and circumcised him because of the Jews which were in those quarters: for they knew all that his father was a Greek.”

- Paul circumcised Timothy.
- He did it because of the Jews in those quarters, who knew his father was a Greek.

This is not the manner in which a man of the world would have reported this incident. It is man's nature to emphasize incidentals, drawing attention to things that are not directly related to the purpose of God. However, this is not the Divine manner, and thus the Holy Spirit does not move inspired writers to linger upon such things. This is a remarkably consistent manner, whether the record involves Adam, Abel, Enoch, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, David, or the Prophets. It continues in the reports of men like John the Baptist, the apostles, Stephen, Philip, Barnabas, Silas, Timothy, etc. For that matter, what do we know of the Lord Jesus Himself that is not directly related to the reason for which He was sent to men? What incidentals we do know are few and far between. They are not sufficient to write a detailed biography of their lives.

We should learn from this to avoid the inclusion of a lot of earthly incidentals in our preaching and teaching. They have a distracting quality about them, and often require an inordinate amount of explanation.

THEY DELIVERED THE DECREES

“ 4 And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.”

Having selected an additional companion, and removed unnecessary obstacles, Paul and company commence the further fulfillment of their mission: “to visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do” (15:36).

Behold the interest of the man of God in those upon whom he has bestowed labor! Paul is keenly aware of the Divine agenda, which is for the Son to bring many sons to glory (Heb 2:10). He also knew that his commission involved ensuring that those who turned from darkness to light, will receive the inheritance “among them which are sanctified by faith” (Acts 26:18). It was not enough to bring them to a point where they ceased to live after the manner of the Gentiles. It was not sufficient for them to merely adopt a new kind of life that included various sanctified activities. The aim was for the converts to be among those who would ultimately be presented to the Lord “not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing” (Eph 5:27). It was for the believers to have “boldness in the day of judgment,” and be ready for the appearing of the Lord (1 John 4:17).

AS THEY WENT THROUGH THE CITIES

“And as they went through the cities . . .” Other versions read, “while they were passing through the cities,” NASB “as they traveled from town to town,” NIV “as they went on their way through the cities,” RSV “as they visited one town after another,” NJB and “as they were going on through the cities.” YLT

Again, note the impact of their purpose upon their mission. I do not doubt that there were many interesting sights in these cities. However, that is not what had captured the attention of this holy entourage. It was the clusters of believers in the cities that were the object of this mission. Once they were visited, there was no further reason to linger in the cities. They simply passed through them.

THEY DELIVERED THE DECREES

“ . . . they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem.” Other versions read, “they were delivering the decrees,” NASB “the delivered the decisions,” NIV “they delivered to them for observance the decisions,” NRSV and “they instructed them to observe the decrees.” DARBY

When the apostles and elders sent the letters to Antioch, they addressed them to “the brethren which are Gentiles in Antioch and Syria and Cilicia” (15:23). There were a number of cities in the region, Lystra and Derbe being two of them. Now they went throughout the region, delivering the decrees that had been “ordained of the apostles and elders in Jerusalem.” Those decrees were as follows.

- “That ye abstain from meats offered to idols.”
- “That ye abstain . . . from blood.”
- “That ye abstain . . . from things strangled.”
- “That ye abstain . . . from fornication.”

General Requirements

The original question raised in Antioch concerned circumcision. The apostles dismissed the question by saying the issue was not raised with their consent. It was wholly spurious, and the Gentiles were to disregard it. However, there were matters that did pertain to them – matters that related more to God Himself than to men. They were to guard against developing any consciousness of idols, for God has no equals or competitors (Psa 86:10). They were to maintain a high regard for life, for it is God who “giveth to all life, and breath” (Acts 17:26). They were also to refrain from the prostitution of the body, for “the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord; and the Lord for the body” (1 Cor 6:13).

These were not regional directives, but applied to all of the churches. Right and wrong, and acceptable and unacceptable are not defined by varying standards. Where differing responses are acceptable (as in Romans 14), one’s conscience toward God is the determining factor. That must be characterized by a full persuasion, “for whatsoever is not of faith I sin” (Rom 14:5,23).

There is a reason for this approach. If a person’s thinking is going to be brought into harmony with the mind of the Lord – and that is the ultimate objective – it will be done within the context of faith and of “charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned” (1 Tim 1:5). Spiritual life is not defined more precisely in a “what is right for you may not be right for me” mentality. Differing views of the same matter are to be held tentatively in the prospect of finally arriving at the point where we have the same mind and the same judgment (1 Cor 1:10). Private views are not the best ones, and they are not to be held and maintained as though they were. The Kingdom belongs to the Lord, and His will is the supreme will. In such a circumstance, there is no time when self can be exalted. Even when there is a good conscience about a matter, it is quite possible that continued exposure to the truth will modify that good conscience.

In this case, however, conscience was not the determining factor. The Gentiles of that region had been exposed to teaching that was expressly associated with salvation: “Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved” (Acts 15:1). On matters relating to salvation, there is no room for human opinion. This is because “Salvation belongeth to the Lord” (Jonah 2:9), and will ultimately be ascribed wholly unto Him (Rev 7:10). Like the altar of old, human innovations cannot be employed in God’s salvation. Of that altar it is written, “And if thou wilt make me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it” (Ex 20:25).

Those who themselves require the salvation of God, cannot employ their own methodologies in it. That ought to be glaringly apparent. However, alas, it is not. Men continue to this day to insist on their own devices to rescue men from sin – either initially, or in recovering those who have been “overtaken in a fault” (Gal 6:1). It simply cannot be allowed.

The directives that were given by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem were not originated by them. Further, they had the discretion to see that although circumcision was not essential, keeping the decrees they delivered was essential. After all, they did receive them from the Holy Spirit, as they themselves affirmed: “For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit, and to us” (Acts 15:28).

THE CHURCHES WERE ESTABLISHED IN THE FAITH

“ 5a And so were the churches established in the faith . . . ”

The Spirit now makes a statement concerning the effectiveness of the ministry of Paul and company. Remember, the stated objective was to visit the churches and see how they were doing, progressing, or growing up into Christ in all things. This determination would be made by comparing their state with the revealed objective of God Himself – to conform the people to the image of His Son (Rom 8:29). This conformation would be accomplished through the appointed means: apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastor-teachers” (Eph 4:12). It is through these gifts, that were given to the church through the exalted Jesus, and as they held fast to the Head of the body, that edification would occur. The ordained result – growing up into Christ in all things, and being filled with all the fulness of God (Eph 3:16-19; 4:12-16).

Seeing how the churches were doing in this process involved more than merely observing them. Any deficiencies would be addressed – like the misconceptions addressed by the decrees Paul delivered from the apostles and elders in Jerusalem. The aim, however, was not merely to meet the needs of the saints, or to correct any flawed conduct or perceptions that were found among them. They were not like physicians coming to see how sick the people were, but like husbandmen who were examining the productivity of the vineyards (Lk 13:7-9).

AND SO

And so . . . ” Other versions read, “Accordingly,” CJB “therefore,” DARBY “day after day,” NAB and “then, indeed.” YLT

The expression “so were” is translated from two Greek words: me.n ou=n .

The first word means “truly, certainly, surely, indeed.” THAYER The second word means “then, therefore, accordingly, consequently.” THAYER The meaning of the phrase “and so” is very weighty: Certainly, as a consequence of Paul and company passing through the cities, the following results were realized. This is not the mere opinion of a witness, but is a statement of the fact from heaven’s point of view. The Lord is here informing us of the results of Paul and those with him visiting the brethren. The report is like the trail of a shooting star – a certain glory that resulted from the visits of these holy brethren.

THE CHURCHES WERE ESTABLISHED

“ . . . were the churches established . . . ” Other versions read, “strengthened,” NKJV “made strong,” BBE “confirmed,” DARBY and “grew stronger.” NAB

We have already read of the churches being “confirmed” (Acts 15:32). Although there is some similarity in the expression used here, the word “established” comes from a different Greek word – evstereou/nto , as compared with evpesth,rixan in Acts 15:32. The former word refers to strengthening, like a building being made more firm, or a tree being able to stand against strong gales.

The word used here speaks of strengthening like that of the muscles – to be made more able to be productive in the Kingdom, as compared to standing against assaults by the wicked one.

The aim of the gifts Jesus has given to men is that “the whole body” might be “fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth” (Eph 4:16). That is, as each member holds to the Head, there is a mutual edification that takes place, where the people are “able to admonish one another” (Rom 15:14).

This is establishment like a well tended and nurtured vine that bears abundant fruit – or a cultivated olive tree that produces an abundance of quality fruit. Those who are made strong in this respect are consistent in being productive and beneficial in the body of Christ.

IN THE FAITH

“ . . . in the faith . . . ” All versions read the same, referring to “the faith” as the area in which the churches were made strong and productive. That is, their persuasion of the realities faith grasps became stronger. Their confidence increased in both measure and strength. They were more fully persuaded, and more sure of the accomplishments of Jesus and their own acceptance in the Beloved.

The Domain of Faith

The domain of faith is where salvation is worked out (Phil 2:12). It is not accomplished in the realm of self-discipline, although faith causes a person to be more disciplined than is possible under any other means. Faith has to do with perceiving – being able to see “Him who is invisible” (Heb 11:27). It has to do with being fully persuaded that God is able to do what He has promised (Rom 4:21). Faith secures to the soul what God has promised, and moves the individual to embark on otherwise impossible things – as when Noah “prepared an ark to the saving of his house” (Heb 11:7), or when David ran to meet, and prevailed over, the giant warrior Goliath “with a sling and with a stone” (1 Sam 17:48-50).

There is no scientific method through which a person can come to be “established in the faith.” No man, however astute in intellect and analysis is capable of conceiving a procedure by which establishment in the faith can be achieved. No book has been written on this subject that is capable of delivering the desired results. If a person is ever going to be “established in the faith,” so that spiritual productivity and fruit result, it will have to be God’s way. It is simply not possible for faith to be obtained or maintained in any other way. This is because faith primarily has to do with God. Thus It is written, “But without faith it is impossible to PLEASE HIM : for he that COMETH TO GOD must believe that HE IS , and that HE IS a rewarder of them that diligently SEEK HIM ” (Heb 11:6).

Those who represent faith as primarily having to do with obtaining the things of this world, or being successful in earthly relationships, have seriously misrepresented the case.

In faith, Jesus is preeminent, and coming to God is the immediate objective (Heb 7:25). Faith has to do with things that are “not seen” – things that are “eternal” (2 Cor 4:18).

References to Establishment

A church or a person that is established in the faith does not waver, or vacillate. This state is the objective for every believer. “Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering ; (for He is faithful that promised)” (Heb 10:23). Answered prayer is conditioned upon this unwavering state: “But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering . For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed” (James 1:6). These are souls that are not “tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine” (Eph 4:14). They are not subject to doctrinal confusion or delusion.

It ought to be obvious that establishment in the faith is essential. However, judging from the condition of the nominal church, this is not common knowledge – even though the Spirit has spoken clearly and repeatedly concerning it to the churches.

- ESTABLISHMENT. “Established” (Rom 1:11-12). “Established in the faith” (Col 2:7). To be established is to be solid like a building, fruitful like a healthy tree, and grown up in Christ.

- STRENGTH. “Strong in faith” (Rom 4:20). This is a strength that cannot be shaken by apparent impossibilities. It is one’s faith that is strong, enabling him to take hold of the promises of God, even when all human hope contradicts such a stance.

- STANDING. “Stand fast in the faith” (1 Cor 16:13). The person who “stands” is victorious, remaining upright after the battle. The winds of adversity cannot move such souls. The tide of trial does not move them. With them, weeping may, indeed, endure for the night, but joy comes in the morning (Psa 30:5).

- ROOTING AND GROUNDING. “Rooted and grounded” (Eph 3:17). This is a depiction of deep roots that hold the person firmly, and also obtain the vivifying water that flows beneath the surface of life.

- CONTINUANCE. “Continue in the faith grounded and settled” (Col 1:23). Being grounded and settled is the antithesis of being unstable and wavering. In this case, religion is not by fits and starts, and life is not a series of ups and downs. There is a continuity in both faith and hope that brings glory to God.

- STEADFASTNESS. “Steadfastness of your faith” (Col 2:5). “Steadfast in the faith” (1 Pet 5:9). The person who is steadfast continues to make progress in mountainous terrain. He moves forward when journeying up-hill, so to speak, or against the strong gales of opposition and testing. A person who is steadfast in the faith continues to press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God, even when it is attended by difficulty and inconvenience.

- SOUNDNESS. “Sound in faith” (Tit 2:2). A sound faith has no weak places, or Achilles heel. This is the person who has cast off every weight, and the sin that so easily besets (Heb 12:2). It is a person who has a proper view of God, Christ, and the great salvation that is in Christ “with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10).

- ESTABLISHED IN THE TRUTH. “Established in this present truth” (2 Pet 1:12). “The present truth” is the truth that is brought through Christ Jesus, who is “full of grace and truth” (John 1:14). The truth of God makes sense to such individuals, because they have received the love of the truth (2 Thess 2:10-11). They love the truth “for the truth’s sake,” and not for worldly advantage (2 John 1:2).

- FIRMNESS. “Firm unto the end” (Heb 3:6). Spiritual firmness is to the human spirit what a healthy and mature core is to a tree. In this case, firmness has to do with maintaining a tight and unyielding grip on the confidence that is produced by faith, and the consequent rejoicing of the hope of glory. A person who is holding these “firm unto the end” will say during the most fierce trial, “For I know that this shall turn to my salvation through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:19).

- ESTABLISHED HEART. “Heart be established” (Heb 13:9). Only the grace of God can establish the heart, so that it is not moved about by the varied experiences of life in this present evil world. If a person’s heart is established, their thinking will be solid and God-honoring. A heart that is not established is one that has been penetrated by unbelief, which brings a pervading defilement to the individual (Heb 3:12).

This establishment cannot be accomplished by a human methodology, or a series of supposedly logical steps or procedures. Paul was probably not with these brethren long enough to have instituted an elaborate plan – like a six or twelve month program.

All of this, and more, is involved in the churches being “established in the faith.” This was the result of a proper and insightful ministry. In the last analysis, it is the truth that sanctifies the soul (John 17:17), doing so through one’s faith (Acts 26:18).

This establishment cannot be accomplished by a human methodology, or a series of supposedly logical steps or procedures. Paul was probably not with these brethren long enough to have instituted an elaborate plan – like a six or twelve month program.

Yet, significant results took place as he “went through the cities” (16:4). The reason for the significant fruitage was the message that he delivered. The power of God unto salvation, in all of its marvelous complexities, is in the message of the Gospel, not the methodologies of men. The “Spirit of truth” employs the truth in reaching the hearts of men, illuminating them, and empowering them. If ever religious men will get to the work of insightfully proclaiming the truth, the churches will be established in the faith. Until that takes place, however, God will not allow establishment to take place, for He works only through the truth, and in those who have received a love of the truth.

The role of faith in spiritual life

In order to see the necessity and value of being established in the faith, it is essential to see the role of faith in spiritual life. This has to do with both the obtainment of salvation, and its maintenance – and both are imperative. There is no such thing as an “eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9) that is not first obtained, then maintained.

FAITH IN OBTAINING SALVATION

The obtaining of salvation, or salvation in its initial phase, is inextricably associated with faith. While there are certain responses that are imperative (i.e. repenting, confessing Christ, being baptized into Christ, etc), they are all validated by faith, and are evidences of that faith. The presence of faith does not obviate the need for these responses, but is the Divinely appointed means by which they are accomplished.

Apostolic doctrine is very precise on this point, accounting for the experience of salvation by pointing to our faith.

- Salvation is by grace through faith (Eph 2:8). In its entirety, from beginning to the coming of the Lord, salvation is by the means of the grace of God, which faith alone can access.
- Hearts purified by faith (Acts 15:8). The purification of the heart and the purging of the conscience are uniquely accomplished through faith.
- The righteousness of God is obtained by faith (Rom 3:22). The appropriation of the righteousness of God, which is to be man’s premier pursuit (Matt 6:33), is realized through faith. In fact, faith itself is counted to us for righteousness (Rom 4:5,9).

Salvation is not a once-for-all experience. This is because, as long as we are in the body, it is initiated and maintained in a hostile realm, with the essential treasure being maintained in an “earthen vessel”

Propitiation through faith in Jesus’ blood (Rom 3:25). Propitiation is the merciful covering that frees us from condemnation – like the mercy seat over the ark of the covenant. And, what is it that accesses the marvelous mercy of God? This is the peculiar prerogative of faith!

- Justified by faith (Rom 5:1). To be justified is to be declared by God to be righteous in His sight. There are two sides to justification, and both are essential. The first has to do with the righteous removal of sin: being “justified from all things” (Acts 13:39). The second is to be declared righteous by God, having obtained His very own righteousness. This is done by Divine imputation, where the coin of faith is received as the means through which this very real righteousness is obtained (Phil 3:9).

- Receive the promise of the Spirit through faith (Gal 3:14). The Lord promised through the prophets that He would give His Holy Spirit to His people (Isa 32:15; Joel 2:28-29; Ezek 36:27). This is not done automatically, as some imagine. Rather, as affirmed in the above text, we receive the promised Spirit through the means of faith.

- Children of God by faith (Gal 3:26). While it is true that the appropriation of salvation necessarily involves obeying the Gospel (Rom 10:16; 2 Thess 1:8), we are, in the final analysis, the children of God by virtue of our faith.

- Salvation through faith (2 Tim 3:15). The realization of salvation, with all of its marvelous complexities and benefits, is by faith.

SALVATION IS NOT YET COMPLETED

Salvation is not a once-for-all experience. This is because, as long as we are in the body, it is initiated and maintained in a hostile realm, with the essential treasure being maintained in an “earthen vessel” (2 Cor 4:7). We are not glorified immediately, for salvation involves the following processes.

- BEING CONFORMED. We are being conformed to the image of Christ (Rom 8:29).

- A WORK IN PROGRESS. Being “changed from glory to glory” (2 Cor 3:18).

- IN A STATE OF GROWTH. Growing up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15)

- IN THE PROCESS OF APPREHENDING. Apprehending that for which we have been apprehended (Phil 3:12-13).

- RUNNING A RACE. Running with perseverance the race that is set before us (Heb 12:1-2).

- PERFECTING HOLINESS. Perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord (2 Cor 7:1).

- STANDING AGAINST THE WILES. Standing against the wiles of the devil (Eph 6:11).

- WRESTLING AGAINST AGGRESSIVE FOES. Wrestling against principalities, powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places (Eph 6:12).

- WORKING OUT OUR SALVATION. Working out our own salvation with fear and trembling (Phil 2:12).

- HOLDING FAST. Holding fast the rejoicing of the hope, firm unto the end (Heb 3:6).

- BEING TESTED AND TRIED. Our faith is being tested in the crucible of suffering (1 Pet 1:7; 5:10).

- READYING OURSELVES. Making ourselves ready for being forever with the Lord (Rev 19:7).

- THERE ARE THINGS THAT MUST BE REJECTED. Ungodliness and worldly lusts are to be denied, or rejected, and the deeds of the body put to death (Tit 2:12; Rom 8:13).

- WE ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR DOING CERTAIN THINGS. The “old man” is to be put off, and the “new man” is to be put on (Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:9-10).

- THE DEVIL IS TO BE RESISTED. When we are baptized into Christ, the devil does not cease his initiatives against us. We are responsible for resisting him (James 4:7; 1 Pet 5:8-9).

Who would dare to imagine that these things do not involve a hearty effort, or that there is no chance that we could leave them undone? Yet, there are many who live without any significant consciousness about these requirements.

FAITH IS INVOLVED IN MAINTAINING SALVATION

The maintenance of spiritual life is something that cannot be ignored. Once a person is “added to the church” (Acts 2:47), they cannot live as though the newness of life continues on its own. We do not live in a moral or spiritual vacuum.

Being “established in the faith” is essential because of the integral part faith lays in the maintenance of our lives.

- APPROPRIATING GRACE. Salvation is by grace through faith (Eph 2:8; Rom 4:16).
- SANCTIFICATION. Sanctified by faith (Acts 26:18).
- OBEDIENCE. Obedience comes from faith (Rom 1:5).
- RIGHTEOUSNESS. The righteousness of God is revealed from faith to faith (Rom 1:17a; 4:5,9).
- LIVING. We live by faith (Rom 1:17b).
- JUSTIFICATION. We are justified by faith (Rom 3:28) – both obtaining and maintaining justification.
- STRENGTH. Being strong in faith gives glory to God (Rom 4:20).
- ACCESS TO GOD. We have access to grace by faith (Rom 5:2).
- STANDING. We stand by faith (Rom 11:20; 2 Cor 1:24).
- SPIRITUAL GIFTS. Faith is the means through which spiritual gifts are given, and function (Rom 12:3,6).
- VALIDATION. Whatsoever is not of faith is sin (Rom 14:23).
- WALKING. We walk by faith (2 Cor 5:7).
- HEARING. Profitable hearing is by faith (Gal 3:2,5).
- WAITING. We wait for the hope of righteousness by faith (Gal 5:5).
- BOLDNESS. We have access with boldness by faith (Eph 3:12).
- INDWELLING CHRIST. Christ dwells in our hearts by faith (Eph 3:17).
- PROTECTION. Faith is the shield that protects the believer (Eph 6:17).
- EDIFICATION. Godly edifying is in faith (1 Tim 1:4).

- WISDOM. We obtain wisdom by asking in faith (James 1:6).
- INHERITING THE PROMISES. Through faith and patience we inherit the promises (Heb 6:12).
- UNDERSTANDING. Understanding comes through faith (Heb 11:3).
- DYING. We die in faith (Heb 11:13).
- BEING KEPT. We are kept by the power of God through faith (1 Pet 1:19).

These are all areas in which spiritual growth is realized. The stated objective is for the whole body to be “filled with all the fulness of God” (Eph 3:19). From the individual viewpoint, each member is to grow up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15), advancing to personal maturity in their measure, unto “the fulness of Christ” (Eph 4:13).

The “measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ” correlates with the predetermined objective of God, that the justified ones be “conformed to the image of His Son” (Rom 8:29). In the aggregate, the whole body of Christ, in the glorified state, will be a replica of Christ Himself. Just as the fulness of God dwells in Christ, His fulness is destined to dwell in His body (Eph 1:23).

Each individual member of the body, so far as function is concerned, is a “member” of the body of Christ, and possesses a “measure,” or portion, of the whole. This measure is obtained and maintained by faith, and is referred to as a “measure of faith” (Rom 12:3). By faith, drawing upon the resources that are made available to us in Christ, each member is to mature in their role in the body, so that they function in that capacity as Jesus does. This may seem like a nearly impossible thing to do – but it is not. The point is that we are to advance toward this objective by means of spiritual growth (Eph 4:15). The full measure will be realized when Jesus appears, and, seeing Him as He is, we will, be “like Him” (1 John 3:2). There is no suggestion that this will be realized in those who had the opportunity, but did not “grow up into Christ in all things” during their tenure in this world.

The Point

The point is that this growth, advancement, and spiritual maturity, was the objective of Paul’s ministry. This is what is involved in being “established.”

Being Established in the Faith

I cannot leave this subject without once again drawing your attention to the matter of establishment: “so were the churches established in the faith.” That is, they were made more firm in regard to “things hoped for” and “things not seen” – for “faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1).

- THINGS. The “things” of reference are not nebulous. They are spiritual realities – that is, they belong to another order. They are referred to as “those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1-2). They are to be eagerly sought by all believers: “If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things” (Col 3:1). Our affection, interest, or mind is to be “set . . . on things above” (Col 3:2). However, if the reality of those “things” is in question, they will neither be sought nor desired. These are “things” that come to us from above. They include faith and love (1 Tim 1:14), grace, mercy, and peace (1 Tim 1:2), wisdom (James 3:17), strength (Psa 20:2), Divine fellowship (1 Cor 1:9; 1 John 1:3), grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16), the treasures of wisdom and knowledge (Col 2:3), and “all things that pertain to life and godliness” (2 Pet 1:3). This is not to mention that supreme realities of the Father and the Son Themselves.

- SUBSTANCE. Other versions use the words “the assurance,” NASB “being sure of,” NIV “being confident,” CJB “the reality,” CSB “the substantiating,” DARBY “the ground of things,” GENEVA “the persuasion,” MRD “the realization,” NAB and “guarantee,” NJB Faith gives the substantiality of these realities to the soul, so that they become more real to the believer than this world and all that is in it. All doubt of them is removed while faith takes hold of them. They are realized, enjoyed, and life is lived with a keen awareness and benefit of them. Speaking of this aspect of faith, it is said of Moses that “he endured, as seeing Him who is invisible” (Heb 11:27).

• EVIDENCE. Other versions read, “conviction,” NASB “being . . . certain,” NIV “the sign,” BBE “proof of,” CSB “convinces us,” GWN and “manifestness.” MRD Faith itself is proof of the things on which it lays hold. It is like the hand of the soul, that obtains and uses the unseen realities that are “above.” It brings the kind of persuasion that was required for David to hasten and run to meet Goliath (1 Sam 17:51).

When an individual’s faith is “weak” they lack the conviction and assurance that is required to fight the good fight of faith, run the race with patience, and stand against the wiles of the devil. Spiritual stamina and consistency cannot be developed or maintained while faith remains weak.

In such a case, they are like the servant of Elisha who could not see the angelic hosts that surrounded the prophet. He only saw the Syrian army, and was therefore afraid (2 Kgs 6:14-15). However, the hosts of the Lord were very real – even more real than the Syrian army. It is just that the servant could not see them. However, Elisha prayed that the Lord would open his servant’s eyes to see what was otherwise invisible. When he saw, the servant knew what Elisha meant when he said, “Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them” (2 Kgs 6:16).

Faith does for the believer what the opening of the eyes did for Elisha’s servant. It puts them in the victory posture, for “this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith” (1 John 5:4).

When, therefore, the churches were “established in the faith,” they were made more confident, more sure, more persuaded of the realities that are declared in the Gospel. They were made more capable of what can only be achieved “by faith.” All of the things that are accomplished “by faith” and “through faith” were more readily apparent in them.

You Make the Comparison

How does “established in the faith” compare with the goal of establishing homes, marriages, and personal lives? How does it compare with stabilizing the youth, or enabling people to conquer bad habits? Mind you, it is not that such things are wrong. Rather, it is that they do not qualify as an emphasis, an objective, or focused kingdom labors. They are too low, and can be considered to have been achieved independently of spiritual maturity. Additionally, they are all temporal in nature, having only to do with life in this world.

A religion that majors on correction and outward adjustments in behavior cannot be right. This is primarily because their emphasis is life in this present evil world. Such an accentuation does not require spiritual maturity, but rather stresses outward discipline. Further, the procedures that support this approach [which are called “ordinances” in Scripture, Col 2:20], are not supported by the Word of God. In Scripture, putting away sinful expressions is never proceduralized. Those in Christ are simply told to put them away (Eph 4:31), mortify them (Rom 8:13; Col 3:5), and do them “no more” (Eph 4:26).

From the most favorable point of view, putting away sinful expressions has to do with clearing the pathway so we can run the race that is set before us. In Christ, there is an inward change wrought by becoming a “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17). This creation, referred to as “the new man,” is “created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). He is also “renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10). In addition, faith enables the believer to overcome the world, which attempts to allure the child God back to the temporal order. We are categorically told, “this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith” (1 John 5:4). Further, all desires to sin are associated with the world, whether they are “the lust of the flesh,” “the lust of the eye,” or “the pride of life.” These basic causes of sin are categorically said to be “all that is in the world,” having to do with “the things that are in the world” (1 John 2:15-17).

This simply means that those who are established in the faith are fully willing and capable of accomplishing what the routines of men claim to achieve. The failure of the ordinances of men is found in the fact that they cannot take away the desire to sin. Therefore they seek to conquer the expression of unlawful desires by regimen. This approach does not acknowledge that the one who is in Christ is “dead with Christ” to the rudiments of the world, as stated in Colossians 2:20. In that text, Paul is addressing this very subject.

The point is that by establishing the saints in the faith, all of the practical aspects of spiritual life are effectively addressed. In my judgment, it is a most serious offense to proceed to address daily living just as though this was not the case. In Christ, proper expressions are perfectly united with the heart and the desires that flow from it.

When the early churches received the decrees sent to them by the apostles and elders in Jerusalem, their actions were in perfect accord with their hearts, upon which the laws of God had been written (Heb 10:16).

The Impact of Not Being Established

A word also ought to be said concerning the impact of instability on the individual in whom it is found – the one who is not “established in the faith.” That is a condition in which the individual becomes “unstable in all of his ways.” This is owing to the presence of a double mind (James 1:8), which is the direct result of not perceiving the things of God clearly. Such people are immature, and will be “tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine” – teachings that are contrived “by the trickery of men, in the cunning craftiness of deceitful plotting” NKJV (Eph 4:14). Being “established in the faith” moves the believer out of that category, taking the advantage away from the flesh.

AND INCREASED IN NUMBER DAILY

“ 5b . . . and [the churches] increased in number daily. ” Other versions read, “were increasing in number daily,” NASB “grew daily in numbers,” NIV “grew in number every day,” MRD “grew larger every day,” NLT and “were abounding in number every day.” YLT

This is similar to what happened when the New Covenant was first inaugurated: “And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved” (Acts 2:47). In our text, the daily increase in numbers was not the result of a church-planting program. It was the churches that were being visited, not the cities. It was the disciples that were being addressed, not the community at large. It was the churches that “grew in number every day.” NIV The individual churches were what was growing, and they were doing so on a daily basis. This was the result of the churches being “established in the faith.” It is not said to have been the result of an outreach program. This was not the result of what is called evangelism, but was the consequence of believers being “established in the faith.” That is what the text states. Because the believers grew, maturing in the faith, their numbers grew – on a daily basis!

At this point, it is necessary to define what is meant by “the churches.” We will find that the Scriptures speak of “the churches” quite differently than nominal Christendom does.

The word “churches” is used thirty-seven times in the Scriptures. All of the references are found in Acts through Revelation. Most all of the standard English versions use this expression – “the churches” – in the same verses. The phrase “all the churches” is used seven times (Rom 16:4,16; 1 Cor 7:17; 14:33; 2 Cor 8:18; 11:28; Rev 2:23). The expression “the churches” is used twenty-one times (Acts 15:41; 16:5; 2 Cor 11:16; 14:34; 16:1,19; 2 Cor 8:1,19,23,24; 12:13; Gal 1:22; 1 Thess 2:14; Rev 2:7,11,17,29; 3:6,13,22; 22:16). We read of the following.

- “The churches of the Gentiles” (Rom 16:4)
- “The churches of Christ” (Rom 16:16)
- “The churches of God” (1 Cor 11:16; 1 Thess 2:13; 2 Thess 1:4).
- “All churches of the saints” (1 Cor 14:33).
- “The churches of Galatia” (1 Cor 16:1; Gal 1:2).
- “The churches of Asia” (1 Cor 16:19).
- “The churches of Macedonia” (2 Cor 8:1).
- “The churches of Judaea” (Gal 1:22).

What do the Scriptures mean when they say “the churches”? From the etymological point of view, the Greek word translated “churches” (εὐκκλησίαι) means “called out . . . an assembly of the people.” THAYER As used in Scripture, the “churches” are bodies of believers that have been called together for purposes of edification. Paul referred to it as coming together “in one place” (1 Cor 11:20), when “the whole church be come together into one place” (I Cor 14:23).

When “the churches” come together, more is involved than simply coming together. Their gatherings are “for the better,” and “not for the worse” (1 Cor 11:17). That is, their gatherings are times when they are “edified,” built up, and “established in the faith” – like the churches mentioned in our text. Those who gathered together increased in number daily.

That is, their gatherings are times when they are “edified,” built up, and “established in the faith” – like the churches mentioned in our text. Those who gathered together increased in number daily.

The people who comprised these “churches” are referenced in various ways.

- “Believers” (Acts 5:14).
- “Disciples of the Lord” (Acts 9:1).
- “All that believed” (Acts 2:44).
- Those whom the Lord “added to the church” (Acts 2:47).
- Those who were “added to the Lord” (Acts 5:14).
- Those to whom God had “granted repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).
- Those who have been taken out of the people for God’s name (Acts 15:14).
- Those who have “believed through grace” (Acts 18:27).
- Those whose eyes have been “opened,” who have turned “from darkness to light,” and “from the power of Satan unto God” (Acts 26:18).
- Those who are “called to be saints” (Rom 1:7).
- Those who are “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ” (Rom 6:11).
- Those who have “obeyed from the heart the form the doctrine” (Rom 6:17).
- Those who are “sanctified in Christ Jesus” (1 Cor 1:2a).

- Those who “call upon the name of the Lord” (1 Cor 1:2b).
- Those who are “new creatures” (2 Cor 5:17).
- Those into whose hearts God has sent the “Spirit of His Son” (Gal 4:6).
- “The faithful in Christ Jesus” (Eph 1:1).
- Those who are “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:3).
- Those who, by God, are “created in Christ Jesus unto good works” (Eph 2:10).
- Those who are “taught by Christ” (Eph 4:21).
- Those who were “sometimes darkness, but now are . . . light in the Lord” (Eph 5:8).
- Those who have been “delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the kingdom” of God’s “dear Son” (Col 1:13).
- Those who “know” the Lord (Heb 8:11).
- Those who have “obtained like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1).
- Those who have been “washed” from their sins, and made “kings and priests unto God” (Rev 1:5).

This is only a brief sampling of such texts. These are the kind of people that were becoming more and more in number, and doing so every day. This is not the kind of increase that is realized in developing a mere roster. Further, they felt at home in churches that were being “established in the faith,” for the focus was upon “the churches.”

Those who are guilty of bringing low-grade disciples into the church need to hear and heed the warning of the Lord concerning such activity: “If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are” (1 Cor 3:17). Defiling materials are described as “wood, hay, and stubble,” which are descriptive of people who will not be able to pass through the judgment (1 Cor 3:10-15).

Both acceptable people and unacceptable people are the direct result of the teaching they have received and embraced. In our text, Paul and company delivered sound doctrine, establishing the churches in the faith. That is something that cannot be accomplished by erroneous gospels, spurious Christ’s, and a fictitious Holy Spirit (2 Cor 11:4). Only the truth of God can cause the churches to be “established in the faith” – which faith is sustained solely by means of the Word of God.

With only a few words, Luke has covered a period of time that may very well have been significant. His pungent summation mentioned four things:

- (1) A WISE DECISION. Paul chose Timothy to accompany him in the visiting of the cities where he had previously preached the Word.
- (2) FAITHFULNESS. The , delivering of the decrees from the apostles and elders, which, it appears, was accompanied with some exposition.
- (3) CONFIRMING THE SAINTS. The establishment of the churches in the faith.
- (4) THE MULTIPLICATION OF DISCIPLES. The daily increase of the number of people in the churches.

It is noteworthy that all of this was done in a manner that could not be codified. How would a person go about systematizing such activities? In the fulfillment of the objective, there is no mention of a decision making process – not even the multiplication of counselors. It should be evident that faithfulness cannot be reduced to a code or a series of steps. This is because it is accomplished in an arena of conflict where the precise circumstances cannot be predicted. The confirmation, or establishment, of the saints requires spiritual insight, as well as a heart for the people of God. You certainly cannot proceduralize that. The multiplication of disciples cannot be planned, for it is God that gives the increase. Men can only sow and water the seed. They have no power in the matter of multiplying disciples (1 Cor 3:6-7) – and that is by Divine design.

Thus, we have seen the work of God in process – a work that involves the participation of those with insight, and the response of those of tender heart. How blessed it is to ponder such things!

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

“ 16:6 “Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia, 7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not. 8 And they passing by Mysia came down to Troas. 9 And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us. 10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them. 11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis; 12 And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days. 13 And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither. 14 And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul. 15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us. ”

(Acts 16:6-15)

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF SUMMATION OF THE TEXT As they moved along, visiting the churches, Paul, Silas, and Timothy journeyed throughout the regions of Phrygia and Galatia preaching the Word. At that time the Holy Spirit did not allow them to further preach the word in Asia, which was the larger region in which they were traversing. Again, when they endeavored to go into Bithynia, the Holy Spirit did not permit them to do so.

It is obvious in this text, as well as throughout the Scripture, that the Kingdom of God is one that is being administered from heaven. The King is there, and all of the power comes from there.

Throughout history, this has proved to be a very challenging lesson for men to learn.

A CLASSIC EXAMPLE

One of the classic demonstrations of the need for this fundamental knowledge is found in the history concerning Nebuchadnezzar. The king himself rehearsed the events that led to his tutelage in these matters. It all started with a dream that was given to him, yet which he did not understand. He said it occurred while he was “at rest in my house and flourishing in my palace.” At that time, he said, “I saw a dream which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me.” Although he did not understand the dream, he sensed that it was imperative that the dream be understood. He decreed that “all the wise men of Babylon” be summoned before him, in order to interpret his dream. Not having the knowledge of God, like all who are ignorant of Him, Nebuchadnezzar did not seek for an answer from God. Needless to say, none of these “astrologers” and “soothsayers” could deliver an interpretation of the dream. What comes from God cannot be deciphered by those who are enmity with Him.

Being among the wise men who were called, Daniel at last came in before the king, who told him the dream that so troubled him. In his dream he had seen a great tree “in the midst of the earth.” It was exceedingly great, with an abundance of fruit. The beasts of the earth sought protection under it, and the fowls of the air lodged in its branches. It was, indeed, a notable tree.

However, everything changed when a “a watcher and a holy one” came down from heaven, which is the citadel of all power. That powerful holy one called for the tree to be cut down, its branches cut off, its leaves shaken off, and its fruit scattered. Nevertheless, he decreed that the stump be left, together with its pervasive roots. It was even bound with a strong band of iron and bronze, so it would remain in tact. It was wet with the dew of heaven, and remained among the beasts of the earth, not as a refuge for them, but as a miserable companion.

That tree was then personified by the “holy one” from heaven. “Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him: and let seven times pass over him.” The solemn decree of the watchers identified the reason for this staggering demise: “This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will, and setteth up over it the basest of men ” (Dan 4:17).

The fact that “the Most High rules in the kingdom of men” is not a fact God will tolerate men to perpetually ignore. Heathen kings like Pharaoh, Sihon, Og, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and Herod were taught this truth.

Upon hearing the dream, Daniel “was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him.” Nebuchadnezzar saw that Daniel was troubled, and told him not to let the dream or the interpretation of it trouble him. Daniel answered, “Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, “Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee.” Daniel responded, “My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.”

Daniel then boldly told the king, “It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth.” He told him that a decree had been made in heaven that bore directly upon him. “That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will.” However, Divine leniency would be given to Nebuchadnezzar following his persuasion of the truth he had been ignoring. “Thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule.”

Daniel then delivered a word of counsel to the king. “Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity” (Dan 4:17-34).

Nebuchadnezzar did not heed the admonition of Daniel, but allowed his pride to take hold of him. He was driven from his throne, and dwelt in the fields with the beasts for seven years, until he was able to receive the truth that had been declared to him: “that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever He will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.”

Note, this lesson was not merely for Nebuchadnezzar, but “to the intent that the living may know.” The fact that “the Most High rules in the kingdom of men” is not a fact God will tolerate men to perpetually ignore. Heathen kings like Pharaoh, Sihon, Og, Sennacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and Herod were taught this truth.

WHAT BEARING DOES THIS HAVE UPON OUR TEXT?

On the surface, it may appear as though all of this has little or nothing to do with our text. However, that is not at all the case. Although natural men, or those dominated by the “mind of the flesh,” have no sense of this truth, it is something that must be known. God cannot maintain favorable dealings with men as long as they are in the dark about His government. Many a kingdom has been toppled for the very reason that accounted for the fall of Nebuchadnezzar – even though men are prone to account for such falls by pointing to unwise counsel, and sloppy government.

There is so much revealed on this matter of the prevalence and invincibility of God’s Kingdom that it boggles the mind that such a large percentage of professed Christendom conducts themselves as though this was not the case.

At this point we come to one of the marvelous aspects of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus with eternal glory. The truth that was so difficult for the ancients to learn is perceived and held by the saved ones. This is part and parcel of knowing God, which is eternal life in its essence (John 17:3). Solemnly, and with a note of gladness, the Almighty declares, “They shall all know Me!” (Jer 31:34). That acquaintance with the Almighty (Job 22:21) brings with it a keen awareness that who

He is. The Spirit persuades the heart of the saved that “the kingdom is the LORD'S: and He is the governor among the nations” (Psa 22:28). They know, at least intuitively if not cognitively, “all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay His hand, or say unto him, What doest Thou?” (Dan 4:35). There is so much revealed on this matter that it boggles the mind that such a large percentage of professed Christendom conducts themselves as though this was not the case. Ponder the clear references to Deity.

• “I will destroy man whom I have created . . . I will destroy them with the earth . . . I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh . . . I will cause it to rain” (Gen 6:7,13,17).

• “The Most High” (Gen 14:18).

• “Possessor of heaven and earth” (Gen 14:19).

• “The Most High God” (Gen 14:20).

• “The God of the earth ” (Gen 24:3).

• “I am the Lord in the midst of the earth ” (Ex 8:22).

• “The Lord shall reign for ever and ever ” (Ex 15:18).

• “The Lord is greater than all gods” (Ex 18:11).

• “The God of the spirits of all men ” (Num 27:16).

• “He is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: there is none else” (Deu 4:39).

• “Behold, the heaven and the heaven of heavens is the LORD'S thy God, the earth also, with all that therein is ” (Deu 10:14).

• “God is a God of gods ” (Deut 10:17).

• “God is King of all the earth ” (Psa 47:7).

• “God is the Judge: He putteth down one and raiseth up another” (Psa 75:7).

• “God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings ” (Dan 2:47).

• “I am the first, and I am the last; and beside Me there is no God ” (Isa 44:6).

• “I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by My great power and by My outstretched arm, and have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto Me ” (Jer 27:5).

• “I am the Lord God of all flesh ” (Jer 32:27).

• “I am a great King ” (Matt 1:14).

• “Who has resisted His will?” (Rom 9:19).

• “As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to Me, and every tongue shall confess to God” (Rom 14:11).

• “For the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof” (1 Cor 10:26).

• “One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all” (Eph 4:6).

These representations confirm that from the beginning of God's involvement with men, He made it clear who He was, and that everything is subject to Him. No being, whether angel or man, can ultimately resist Him (Rom 9:19). There is no personality in heaven, or earth, or under the earth that can finally hinder God from doing what He has determined (Job 9:12; 11:10; Isa 43:13).

It is the persuasion that the Kingdom belongs to the Lord, and that His Christ is “over all, God blessed forever” (Rom 9:5) that sustains the saints in both trial and prosperity. This is why they live by faith, not in despair. This is why they seek counsel from the Lord, and not from their peers. The One into whom God has put us (1 Cor 1:30), is the “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). When it comes to ultimate effectiveness, and the execution of His will, there is only ONE Potentate. That is the incontrovertible fact of the matter.

The Spiritual Context of the Text

Our text is set within the context of a keen and unmistakable spiritual awareness. As these brethren went about preaching and teaching, they maintained a certain sensitivity to the Lord that made them guidable. Their composure was based upon their faith, which rested upon God Himself.

All of this is in keeping with life in Christ Jesus. The reconciliation that is realized in Him has opened the door for illumination on such matters. God did not have to send storms, as in the case of Jonah, to get these men where He wanted them. Their hearts had been circumcised, the law had been written upon them, and their consciences purged. That is why they were able to respond as they did.

They Knew Their Work Was Not Finished

Refusing to conclude that their work was completed, they moved toward to the seaport of Troaz. It was there that a vision appeared to Paul during the night. In it he saw a man in Macedonia calling out, “Come over into Macedonia and help us.”

This was a region across the Aegean Sea, and was the first country in Europe visited by Paul. The group immediately took a ship, taking a direct course to the island of Samothracia, and from there sailed to Neapolis, port city of the region to which they had been called. The Gospel now spreads to a new area.

WHEN THEY HAD GONE THROUGHOUT PHRYGIA AND GALATIA

“ 16:6a “Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia . . .” Other versions read, “traveled throughout,” NIV and “went through.” NRSV The words “gone throughout” come from a single Greek word – Dih/lqon . This word has the following lexical meaning. “to go, walk, journey, pass through a place travel through a region,” THAYER and “travel from place to place go about, travel throughout.” FRIBERG

There is no indication of the length of time covered by this rather extensive mission trip – an account reported in twelve words: “ Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia . As you read through Scripture, you will become acutely aware of the fact that the accounts provided are not an end of themselves – that is, this is not a mere historical report. It is the Worker behind the scenes that is the point, and the fulfillment of His determinations. There is a sense in which the laborers, the region, the cities, and the people are incidental. Actually, we are being exposed to the Lord “working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12).

This is the second time Phrygia is mentioned in Scripture – the first being in the second chapter of Acts. There it is recorded that devout Jews were present in Jerusalem from this area of Asia (Acts 2:10). It is the first time that we read of “Galatia” in Scripture – a central district in Asia Minor. The area covered by these two adjacent regions was approximately three hundred miles from east to west, and two hundred miles and twenty-five miles from north to south. The territory covered is almost exactly the same as that of the state of Missouri (300 miles by 240 miles). If Paul and company traveled by foot, as the language suggests, this was a staggering accomplishment – and yet is passed over as though there was nothing extraordinary about it.

It is surmised by many, myself included, that the churches in Galatia were established by Paul during the time reported in this text. If this is true, then during this period Paul become ill in some way, and was forced to spent time in Galatia. It was at that time that he had preached the Gospel to them. This is reported in Galatians 4:13: “Ye know how through infirmity of the flesh I preached the gospel unto you at the first” (Gal 4:13). Referring to this “infirmity of the flesh” other versions read, “physical infirmity,” NKJV “bodily illness,” NASB “an illness,” NIV “bodily ailment,” RSV and “I was ill.” CJB

In this we are introduced to the strength of Paul’s character, and his unwavering commitment to fulfill the work to which he had been called. His commission, given was directly from the Lord Jesus. Paul told Agrippa of his calling, affirming that he was “not disobedient” to it. He said that following identifying Himself as “Jesus, whom thou persecutes,” the Lord said to him, “But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in Me” (Acts 26:18). One might think that a work of that magnitude would require extraordinary health and physical stamina. And, indeed, ordinarily that would be the case. However, because of the abundance of revelations that were given to him, Paul was required to fulfill his mission surrounded by adversity, which was compounded by personal infirmities. This, Paul said, was in order that he not be “exalted above measure,” but that his work might be fulfilled in the grace of Christ and through His power that rested upon him (2 Cor 12:7-9). The “thorn” given to him was not owing to his prodigious mind or extraordinary talent. It was rather because of “the abundance of the revelations” given to him from above. In view of this whole circumstance, Paul said he would “glory” in his infirmities rather than perceive them as a handicap. In my judgment, part of glorying in his infirmities was not drawing undue attention to them, but rather continuing to labor with them. That is apparently what happened during the time he spent in Galatia.

Elsewhere, Paul said that in his travels preaching and teaching the Gospel, he experience a variety of adversities that were separate from persecutions and hostilities from men. They included shipwrecks, isolation in the sea, dangers in rivers, dangers in the country, dangers at sea, weariness, painfulness, hunger and thirst, being cold, and not having sufficient clothing to keep warm (2 Cor 11:25-27). Additionally, he confronted the aggressive opposition of his own brethren, the heathen, and false brethren (2 Cor 11:26).

To me, there is no question that some of these things took place as they went through the regions of Phrygia and Galatia. However, at this point of the narrative, the Spirit focuses on a particular work in which a new initiative would be launched. The Gospel would now be proclaimed in Europe. The text suggests a great hunger was there.

WHERE THEY WERE NOT ALLOWED TO GO

“ 6b . . . and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia, 7 After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.”

This area, referred to as Asia Minor, covered a very large mass of land. Paul and Silas had a desire to permeate the entire territory with the Gospel, and therefore determined to move northward and westward. For the first time, they encounter the prohibition of the Holy Spirit to preach the word. Remember, the Kingdom is being governed by the Lord Jesus, and it is His will that is being carried out. It is true that He commanded, “preach the Gospel to every creature” (Mk 16:15). This text will confirm that this is carried out under His administration.

FORBIDDEN BY THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ . . . and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia . . . ” Other versions read, “kept by the Holy Spirit from,” NIV “did not let them,” BBE “prevented by,” CJB and “having been told by the Holy Spirit not to.” NJB Most versions use the word “forbidden.” This word is translated from the Greek word kwluqe,ntej , which means, “to cut off . . . to hinder, prevent, forbid,” THAYER “restrain,” FRIBERG “keep back,” UBS “to cause something not to happen,” LOUW-NIDA “to withhold.” LEH The New Jerusalem Bible takes too much liberty with the text, assuming that the Holy Spirit forbade them through a prophetic word – i.e. “told by.” However, the word used here does not imply the withholding was by an articulated word. This speaks of restraint by some other means – like taking away the opportunity to do something. Jesus used the word in this way when He said the lawyers “hindered” people from entering the Kingdom (Lk 11:52). They did it by clouding the things of God with their erroneous teaching and emphasis. While it is possible that some words were spoken on this matter, it appears to me that this speaks of the Holy Spirit taking away any opportunity to go into Asia, blocking every attempt to do so.

I gather that in every attempt to enter into Asia, something occurred that prevented them from doing so. This was not the proper time for the Gospel to be preached in that area. There were other priorities. The significance of Asia is seen in some of the cities located in that area – cities that would eventually hear the Gospel. They included Pergamos, Myrna, Laodicea, and Ephesus. Later, Paul will spent three years in Ephesus.

Being Directed by the Spirit

Being directed by the Holy Spirit includes prohibitions as well as the opening of doors. For example, the mortification of the deeds of the body is depicted as a facet of the Spirit’s leading (Rom 8:13-14). This presumes a sensitivity to the Holy Spirit, as well as an acute awareness of His role in living by faith. One of the tragic results of walking “by sight” (2 Cor 5:7) and living “after the flesh” (Rom 8:12), is that it takes away the ability to detect the Spirit’s leading. This is referred to as grieving or quenching the Spirit (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19). Some people are so intent upon doing what is wrong that they break through all restraining influences of the Spirit. Israel of old is an example of this obstinance: “Yet many years didst Thou forbear them, and testifiedst against them by Thy spirit in Thy prophets: yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest Thou them into the hand of the people of the lands” (Neh 9:30). And again, “But they rebelled, and vexed His holy Spirit: therefore He was turned to be their enemy, and He fought against them” (Isa 63:10). This kind of obstinance was found in the Jewish council who tried Stephen. He said to them, “Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye” (Acts 7:51).

Effort is often expended to do this or that with a sole interest in the work of the Lord. However, there are times when our minds are not yet in synch with His. Spiritual sensitivity will allow us to survive such times without wandering outside the perimeter of the will of the Lord.

The effective leading of the Holy Spirit, whether it is through an open door, or the closing of a door, postulates sensitivity on the part of the ones being led. Those who imagine they can follow their own stubborn ways, and yet expect the Lord to make it impossible for them to do what is wrong, have not judged correctly, and they stand on the precipice of ruin.

THE SPIRIT DID NOT ALLOW THEM TO GO INTO BITHYNIA

“ . . . After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia: but the Spirit suffered them not.” Other versions read, “they tried to go . . . but the Spirit did not permit them,” NKJV “were trying to go . . . but the Spirit of Jesus did not permit them,” NASB and “attempted to go . . . but the Spirit of Jesus did not allow” NRSV

Bithynia was in the northern section of Asia. The Spirit did not stop Paul and Silas from going into Asia, but from preaching the word there. Remaining in the region of Asia minor (Turkey), they set their eyes to the Northeast, to the region of Bithynia. This bordered on the Black Sea, and was to the East of Constantinople, one of the famous cultural centers of the world.

On the one hand, they were allowed to go into Asia, but could not preach there. Now, the Spirit does not even allow them to enter into Bithynia. We are not told how they were not allowed to enter. They probably faced one obstacle after another until it became apparent that this was not the will of the Lord. It seems to me that there is a facet of spiritual life that is after this manner. Effort is often expended to do this or that with a sole interest in the work of the Lord. However, there are times when our minds are not yet in synch with His. Spiritual sensitivity will allow us to survive such times without wandering outside the perimeter of the will of the Lord. Also, during times like this, spiritual obtuseness that is brought on by self-centeredness will move a person into an area where God is provoked. Paul referred to this kind of activity in his letter to the Corinthians. “Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?” (1 Cor 10:22). A tender heart knows the answer to this question, for it is a rhetorical one.

Faith enables the child of God to handle frustration in a manner that brings glory to God, and true benefit to the believer. Faith resorts to trust, not the murmuring and discontent. Our text is a noble example of such handling.

THEY CAME DOWN TO TROAS

Mysia was a province occupying the north-west angle of Asia Minor. McCLINTOK STRONG’S It was next to the region of Phrygia, which was immediately joined to the region of Galatia on the west. Paul and Silas had preached in that region rather extensively. Yet, there was a kind of dividing line that separated acceptable regions from forbidden ones. The only known reason for this distinction was the will of the Lord – but that was enough for the group. Further that Divine will was not associated with a rejection of the area. There would be considerable activity in Asia at a later time. By the time John wrote the book of the Revelation, churches had been established in Pergamos, Smyrna, and Ephesus (Rev 1:11).

The region of Mysia was approximately one hundred and fifty miles from east to west. However, having been forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach in Asia, they simply went through that territory, traveling to the east-most part of the region, which was the city of Troas.

YOU HAVE TO BE WHERE GOD IS WORKING OR WILL WORK

In order for Paul and Silas to participate in the work of the Lord, being “workers together with Him” (2 Cor 6:1), they had to be where the work was to be done. At the point of our text, they do not know where that is – only where it is not. Therefore, they continue to move westward until they come to the port city of Troas.

Now, however, we find that the spreading of the Gospel was not left in the hands of men. The Head of the church directed His servants where NOT to go, as well as where to go.

The living God is moved along by His purpose, not by the directives or desires of men. When the New Covenant was inaugurated, there was a place that had been designated for its commencement. The prophets had said that Jerusalem would be the place (Isa 46:13; Joel 2:32). This is why Jesus told His disciples to “tarry in the city of Jerusalem” – that is where the blessing would break forth (Lk 24:49). God would not move the blessing to a place of their choosing. Rather, they must come to the place of His choosing.

This same manner was foreshadowed in the Law. The three feasts that were to be observed annually by all of the men could not be in a place of their choosing. Rather, they were told, “Three times in a year shall all thy males appear before the LORD thy God in the place which He shall choose ” (Deut 16:16). There was also “the year of release,” held every seven years during the Feast of the Tabernacles. At that time “All Israel” was to come “to appear before the Lord . . . in the place which He shall choose ” (Deut 31:11).

When God brought the people into Canaan, they were to establish a place to which they would bring all that God commanded them: their burnt offerings, sacrifices, tithes, and heave offerings. That place was identified as “a place which the Lord your God shall choose” (Deut 12:11; 16:6-7; 26:2).

If men desire to be saved, they must come to the One God has chosen – Jesus Christ (Acts 4:12). If they want to pursue proper things, they must set their affections on the place God has chosen – “Where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1-2).

The same principle holds true in the preaching of the Gospel. It had to begin in Jerusalem, then in “all Judea,” then in “Samaria,” and then “unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8). Even when they went to “the uttermost part of the earth,” it had to be where God was going to work: the road leading to Gaza, on which a man from Ethiopia was traveling (Acts 8:26-39), the house of Cornelius (Acts 19:1-48), and the work in Asia Minor to which the Spirit called Barnabas and Saul (Acts 13:2-3).

Now, however, we find that the spreading of the Gospel was not left in the hands of men. The Head of the church directed His servants where NOT to go, as well as where to go.

How is it that the early church met with such marvelous success? Ponder the expressions of its growth: “believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes of both men and woman . . . the people [of Samaria] with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake . . . much people was added to the Lord . . . the churches...were multiplied . . . many believed in the Lord . . . a great number believed . . . a great multitude both of Jews and also of Greeks believed” (Acts 5:14; 8:6; 9:31,42; 11:21,24; 14:1). There are a number of contributing factors: (1) The true Gospel was preached, (2) It was preached by holy and insightful men, and (3) The hearts of the listeners were tender.

However, it seems to me that over and above these considerations, these were the areas in which the Lord had chosen to work. I do not doubt that many seemingly noble efforts meet with little or no success because they do not represent the will of the Lord. There are visitations by the Lord that are not recognized by men, and thus they miss the blessing – like Jerusalem not knowing the time of its visitation during Jesus’ ministry (Lk 19:44). In that case, the judgment brought upon them was proved to be righteous. In this text, the Lord will close doors to some areas, and move the workers toward the place in which He has chosen to work.

SOMETHING THAT CANNOT BE SYSTEMATIZED

It should be abundantly apparent that we are not dealing with something that can be systematized by men. If you were to determine to outline precisely how a person can be directed by the Lord, you would only be dabbling in vanity. Just as surely as God chooses where He is going to work, He also chooses those through whom He will work. He gives us enough instruction on the matter so we will not waste our time trying to involve ourselves in His work by rote. Here is what He has said on the matter.

• A GOOD MAN. “The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD: and he delighteth in His way” (Psa 37:23).

• A PERSON OF THE WORD. “Order my steps in Thy word : and let not any iniquity have dominion over me” (Psa 119:133).

- A HOLY PERSON. “He will keep the feet of His saints ” (1 Sam 2:9).

- A TRUSTING PERSON. “ Trust in the LORD with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him , and He shall direct thy paths” (Prov 3:5- 6).

- A PERFECT HEART. “For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show Himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him” (2 Chr 16:9).

THE LOGIC BEHIND THIS ARRANGEMENT

The logic behind this arrangement is straightforward – it is God Himself “with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13). Jesus has enabled us to believe in Him (1 Pet 1:21), and is bringing us to Him (1 Pet 3:18). We have been “reconciled to God ” (Rom 5:10), and are His “sons and daughters” (2 Cor 6:18). Further, we have been “called into the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 Cor 1:9). It is within the context of this fellowship that He directs our steps. That is what we are beholding in this text – and the direction is taking the form of leading to, as well as away from. Faith, of course, sensitizes the human spirit to this direction.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

“ 9 And a vision appeared to Paul in the night; There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.”

In keeping with His nature, the Lord does not give specific directions to Paul until he is close to the place that has been chosen. This is much the way in which the Spirit directed Philip. He first sent him in the general direction of a highway that led to Gaza. Once there, the directions were more specific: “Go near, and join thyself to this chariot” (Acts 8:26,29). The saints of God should not expect detailed direction from the Lord until they are properly positioned. It is the unique property of faith to get us going in the right direction, and away from things that are not in the Divine agenda. Of course, when people live for themselves, and without due regard for the One who died for them and rose again (2 Cor 5:15), they should not be surprised when end up out of the way.

Now, Paul is positioned in Troas, right on the coast of the Aegean Sea. Across that body of water lies Europe, which to this point, so far as we know, had not yet heard the Gospel of Christ. The destination to which they will be called is about three hundred miles away, one hundred and seventy five miles of it by water, as the crow flies. That is about one and a half times as wide as Lake Michigan. Now, it is time for further directions to be given.

A VISION IN THE NIGHT

“And a vision appeared to Paul in the night . . .”

During the night, when others were asleep, and the activities of earth had slowed down, Paul had a vision. A vision is a spectacle that can, in some way, be seen.

“A supernatural presentation of certain scenery or circumstances to the mind of a person while awake.” McCLINTOK-STRONG’S “A vivid apparition, not a dream.” EASTON

The word “vision” is translated from the Greek word o[rama] , which has the following lexical meaning: “that which is seen, a sight, spectacle; sight divinely granted in an ecstasy,” THAYER “a supernatural vision , given as a means of divine communication, to be distinguished from a dream,” FRIBERG and “vision as opposed to figment of the imagination.” GINGRICH As is apparent, the lexicographers find it difficult to define this word.

This Greek word is used thirteen times in Scripture.

- Christ's transfiguration is called a "vision" (Matt 17:9).
- The burning bush that Moses saw is referred to as a "sight," or "vision" DARBY (Acts 7:31).
- Through a "vision," Jesus called Ananias to minister to Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:10).
- In a "vision," Saul saw Ananias coming to him (Acts 9:12).
- An angel appeared to Cornelius in a "vision," instructing him to call for Peter (Acts 10:3).
- Through a "vision," the Lord called Peter to go to the house of Cornelius (Acts 10:17,19; 11:5).
- Jesus appeared to Paul in a night "vision," telling him to remain in Corinth (Acts 18:9).
- Paul referred to Christ's appearance to him on the road to Damascus a "heavenly vision" (Acts 26:19).

There is another word translated "vision" (ovptasi,an), which means "apparition" – something made visible. Zecharias saw a vision of the angel Gabriel (Lk 1:22). Sights that John saw on Patmos were referred to as a "vision" (Rev 9:17).

As used in this text, a vision was a supernatural sight of an existing reality.

The word of the Lord came to Abraham in a "vision" (Gen 15:1). God said He would speak to prophets in this manner – although He did not speak to Moses in that way, choosing a more direct method of communication – "mouth to mouth" (Num 12:6). Ezekiel was taken in vision to Chaldea, to those who were captive (Ezek 11:24). He also had "visions of God" (Ezek 1:1; 8:3; 40:1), as well as did Zechariah the prophet (2 Chron 26:5). Daniel saw a vision of competing worldly kingdoms (Dan 8:2), and had other visions as well (Dan 7:1-15). King Nebuchadnezzar had visions that required interpretations (Dan 2:28; 4:5-13). God told Hosea He had "multiplied visions" to the prophets (Hos 12:10). Joel said that the era of the New Covenant would be accompanied by visions (Joel 2:28), and Peter confirmed that to be the case (Acts 2:17). Paul said he had numerous "visions" (2 Cor 12:1).

In summary, and as used in this text, a vision was a means of Divine communication – in this case of directing the one laboring in the Lord's vineyard. There was nothing novel about this vision. It contained a message that was to be acted upon.

This vision appeared only to Paul. It was not a general communication given to Silas and Timothy as well – only to Paul.

A MAN IN MACEDONIA

"There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him . . ." Another version reads, "a certain man." NASB

Macedonia was across the Aegean sea, on the continent of Europe. This would be a call to a new initiative into territory that had not been charted by other believers. The indication is that there was some godly searching that was taking place in that area. There were some people who were ready to hear the Gospel.

Ordinarily, angels, or the Lord Himself, were the spokesmen in visions and dreams (Gen 15:1; 31:11; Num 12:6; Dan 8:16; Matt 1:20; 2:13,19; Lk 1:11,22; Acts 9:10; 10:3; 11:7; 12:9). This time, however, a man from an earthly country was seen.

“Prayed Him”

The man from Macedonia “prayed” Paul to do something. Other versions read, “pleaded with him,” NKJV appealing to him,” NASB “begging him,” NIV “beseeching him,” RSV “requesting him,” BBE “urged Paul,” GWN “besought him,” MRD “implored him,,” NAB “calling upon him,” YLT and “entreating him,” WEYMOUTH

The word “prayed” is translated from a Greek word meaning, “to call to one’s side . . . to beg, entreat, beseech,” THAYER “as speaking with persistence, earnestly ask for, implore, beg,” FRIBERG “request, ask, appeal to,” UBS “as speaking with persistence earnestly ask for, implore, beg,” LOUW-NIDA “to beseech strongly,” LEH and “request, implore, appeal to, entreat.” GINGRICH

This was not a casual appeal, but a persistent and earnest one. There is a note of urgency in the request – a call for immediate action.

COME OVER AND HELP US

This is a higher quest than the resolution of personal, domestic, or social difficulties. There is a human need that transcends temporal circumstances, and it is possible to be keenly aware of it.

“ . . . saying, Come over into Macedonia, and help us.” Other versions read, “give us help.” BBE All versions use the same word: “help.” This word is translated from the Greek word boh,qhson , and means “to run to the cry (of those in danger); hence, universally, to help, succor, bring aid,” THAYER “to supply people with what they need' or 'to give to people what is necessary' or '... what they should have,” LOUW-NIDA and “to give aid, come to the rescue,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

No competent student of Scripture imagines that this was a cry for food and clothing, or for rescue from political or social oppression. That such conditions exist cannot be denied, but this was not the reason why the Lord called Paul to the apostleship, and it is not the reason for this vision.

When Jacob was dying, he blessed Joseph, saying the God of his father would “ help ” him (Gen 49:25). In the twelfth Psalm David wrote, “ Help , Lord!” (Psa 21:1). Psalm 20:2 speaks of “ help ” being sent “from the sanctuary.” The Psalms often find the man of Gold asking God to make “haste” to “ help me” (Psa 22:19; 38:22; 40:13; 70:1,5; 71:12). God Himself is referred to as “a very present Help in trouble” (Psa 46:1). The throne of grace upon which Jesus is presently seated is associated with obtaining “grace to help in the time of need” (Heb 4:16).

Inherent in the word “help” is an acute awareness that the resources that are sought cannot be obtained elsewhere. There is a certain poverty that exists that cannot be addressed in the energy of self, or any earthly locale. From a spiritual perspective, the seeker knows he is in “a dry and thirsty land where no water is” (Psa 63:1). Paul accounted for his prodigious ministry by saying God helped: “Having therefore obtained help of God , I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come” (Acts 26:22).

In this text, “help” has to do with obtaining salvation. It is associated with a hunger and thirst “for righteousness” (Matt 5:10), and feeling after God with the intent of finding Him (Acts 17:27). This is a higher quest than the resolution of personal, domestic, or social difficulties. There is a human need that transcends temporal circumstances, and it is possible to be keenly aware of it.

Unfortunately, we are living in a time when this fact is being obscured in the professed Christian community. There is a concerted effort to present God, Christ, and salvation as the means of resolving difficult and untoward worldly circumstances. However, this is not a fair representation of the salvation of God, and it is not wise to present Jesus Christ as though that was the case.

There is a certain logic, or pattern, of urgency, associated with the salvation of God. If this matter is approached casually, as though there was a lengthy period of time allowed for the appropriate decision and effort, the results will be disastrous.

THE LOGIC OF SALVATION BEING A MATTER OF URGENCY

There is a certain logic, or pattern, of urgency, associated with the salvation of God. If this matter is approached casually, as though there was a lengthy period of time allowed for the appropriate decision and effort, the results will be disastrous.

There Is A Time Limit

First of all, the obtaining of salvation is associated with time – and, so far as men are concerned, the duration of time is uncertain. Solemnly we are told, “now is the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). Again we are told, “Today, if you will hear His voice” (Heb 3:7). The only moment that belongs to us is “now.” That is the only time of unqualified acceptance for those responding to Gospel. If the Divine provision is presented in such a manner as to leave the person thinking he is guaranteed of tomorrow, the wrong impression has been left.

There is also the matter of the return of the Lord Jesus Christ. At that time, the heavens and earth will flee from before His face, for He will appear in all of His glory (Matt 24:30; Rev 20:11). We do not know the hour of that appearing (Matt 24:42), or “when” the Master will be seen (Mk 13:35). In the stirring parable of the ten virgins, Jesus revealed what will happen to those who are not prepared for that time. The “door” of salvation will be shut, and the Lord will say to the unprepared, “I know you not” (Matt 25:1-12). It is no wonder that Jesus said of the day of His appearing, “And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares” (Luke 21:34).

The thing that concerns me about the modern trend of Christian counseling and problem resolution is that it does not take the brevity of time into consideration. It leaves the people thinking that they have time to “work on” their problems, when, in reality, that may not be the case at all. In my judgment, this is why there is a proportionately small number of people in our nation who are calling out like the man in Macedonia. People have a growing satisfaction with religious entertainment and involvement in the unpleasantness of their personal lives. They have been lulled to sleep by the false conception that life in this world is going to last for a while, and that God does not demand an immediate response to the word of His great salvation.

The Church Is Called to Sobriety

Even the church – the body of Christ – is called to sobriety concerning the brevity of time. “And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light” (Rom 13:11-12). And again, “Again, He limiteth a certain day, saying in David, To day, after so long a time; as it is said, To day if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts” (Heb 4:7).

The cry of the man in Macedonia was in perfect harmony with the nature of salvation. The urgent tone elicited in that man’s cry revealed a sense of the urgent need of help. “Come over into Macedonia” was seen to mean “Come now!” We will now see how Paul and those with him responded to this night vision, for he will relate what he saw and heard to his brethren.

AN IMMEDIATE AND INSIGHTFUL RESPONSE

“ 10 And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.”

To this point, we know that at least three people were in the group – Paul, Silas, and Timothy. Now we will see that Paul shared with them how he was being directed. He knew that Kingdom laborers are not mere vassals who are not acquainted with what is being done. This is after the manner of Jesus Himself who said to His disciples, “all things that I have heard of My Father I have made known unto you” (John 15:15). When it comes to participation in the work of the Lord, there are no private revelations – not even to the premier apostle, who “labored more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10).

In passing, I have observed over the years that professed preachers and teachers who major on correcting human behavior have little to share concerning what has been made known to them concerning the things of God. I surmise from this that when men are absorbed with the affairs of their peers, it tends to close off the experience of receiving “wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him” (Eph 1:17).

AFTER HE HAD SEEN THE VISION

“And after he had seen the vision, immediately . . .” Other versions read, “got ready at once,” NIV “straightway,” ASV “straight away,” BBE “lost no time,” CJB and “as soon as.” WILLIAMS

Notice the absolute accord among these brethren. As soon as they knew of the vision, they immediately responded to it in faith. Their acquaintance with God, coupled with the purity of their hearts, enabled them to recognize the Divine summons. They required no additional consultants concerning the advisability of going to another continent. They made no effort to send someone ahead to validate that there was a genuine desire for the Lord in that region. They did not call for a prayer meeting to seek the will of the Lord on the matter. As soon as they knew about the vision, they moved to do what it said.

As soon as Jesus called them, James and John followed Him “immediately” (Matt 4:22). When an angel instructed Cornelius to send for Peter, he did so “immediately” (Acts 10:33). When God was pleased to reveal Jesus “in” Paul, “immediately he conferred not with flesh and blood” (Gal 1:16). When an angel called upon John to “Come up hither,” he testified, “and immediately I was in the Spirit” (Rev 4:2). In the very best view, retarded responses indicate a person is living too close to this world. At the worst, it is a symptom of deadness toward God.

“WE”

“ . . . we . . .” Another version reads, “we [including Luke].” AMPLIFIED

While the name “Luke” is not actually in the passage, this is a proper representation. Luke is the author of the book of Acts, which was a follow-up to his Gospel, which was also addressed to Theophilus (Lk 1:3; Acts 1:1). At this point, he speaks of himself as being with the group – something that was not indicated before this. Beginning at this point, Luke includes himself in many of the historical references (Acts 16:10,11,12,13,16; 20:6,13,14,15; 21:1,2, 3,4,5,6,7,8,10,12,14,15,16,17; 27:1,2,3,4, 5,7,15,16,18,19,20,29,37; 28:10,11,12,13, 14,16).

The manner in which Luke includes himself evinces his personal humility. At no time did he detract from the labors of Paul by drawing attention to himself. Paul, however, in his writings acknowledged Luke’s presence and consistent faithfulness (Rom 16:21; Col 4:14; 2 Tim 4:11).

ENDEAVORED TO GO INTO MACEDONIA

“endeavored to go into Macedonia . . .” Other versions read, “sought to go,” NKJV “got ready . . . to leave,” NIV “tried to cross over,” NRSV “made the decision to go,” BBE “lost no time getting ready,” CJB “made efforts to set out,” CSB “prepared to go,” GENEVA “looked for a way to go,” GWN “were desirous to depart to,” MRD “sought passage to,” NAB “attempted . . . to go,” NET “lost no time in arranging a passage,” NJB “decided to leave for,” NLT “that settled it. We would go to,” LIVING “looked out for an opportunity of passing on to,” WEYMOUTH “laid our plans to get off to,” MONTGOMERY and “made every effort to get on to.” PHILLIPS

The immediacy of their response is challenging to consider – that is, challenging to the mind of the flesh. Paul reports that he had a vision of a man in Macedonia begging them to come over and “help” them. The nature of the “help” is not specified, and there is a sea that lies between them and that area. Yet, their hearts and minds have been so purified that they can reason upon this report and draw a proper conclusion. To be sure, the Holy Spirit is in this scenario. However, He does not force the people, but rather leads them. That leading requires a certain mind-set and spiritual sensitivity. A mind that has been cultured in the ways of the world is not a suitable mind for the direction of the Holy Spirit. That is because such a person minds “the things of the flesh,” and has neither appetite nor ability to respond appropriately to Divine direction (Rom 8:5-6; 2 Cor 2:14).

My point here is that in the modern church-culture, spiritual-mindedness is very much perceived as an unreached goal. Those who dare to emphasize the need for such a frame of mind and spirit view it as something that must be possessed, but generally acknowledge that it has not really been realized by the religious population.

However, in our text, this was the actual condition of the people involved. They were not taking a course that was theoretically designed to lead them in this direction, but were actually in possession of a “sound mind.”

ASSUREDLY GATHERING

“assuredly gathering . . .” Other versions read, “concluding that,” NKJV “being convinced,” NRSV “it seemed certain,” BBE “we inferred,” MRD “being certified,” PNT “we could only conclude,” LIVING “we understood,” IE “confidently inferring,” WEYMOUTH and “we were sure.” CEV

The words “assuredly gathering” are translated from a single Greek word – sumbiba,zontej . The root meaning of this word, as used in this text, is, “to put together in one's mind, to compare; by comparison to gather, conclude, consider,” THAYER “conclude, infer,” FRIBERG “bring together, unite; hold together; advise, instruct, inform; conclude, decide,” UBS and “to bring together, to cause to be a unit, to unite.” LOUW-NIDA

The idea here is that these brethren considered a number of differing circumstances. They were brought into their minds, that were dominated by their perception of the revealed purpose of God, and their personal knowledge of God. Thinking within the perimeter of spiritual understanding, it became apparent to them what God was doing. They were fully persuaded, which is a characteristic of faith (Rom 4:21).

CALLED TO PREACH THE GOSPEL

“that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them.” Other versions read, “God had called us to preach the Gospel to them,” NASB “God had called us to proclaim the good news to them,” NRSV “God had sent us to give the good news to them,” BBE “God had called us to evangelize them,” CSB and “the Lord had called us to announce to them the glad tidings.” DARBY

The Gospel is “preached to the poor” (Luke 4:18), but it is not about the poor. Jesus did not die to supply food for the poor of the world. He was not raised from the dead in order that the sick might be made well. Neither of these conditions required a vicarious sacrifice.

In his vision, Paul was not told to come over to Macedonia and preach the Gospel. The man in the vision pleaded with them, “Come over into Macedonia, and help us” (16:9). As I have already indicated, this cry would be viewed quite differently in our time. In fact, it is my persuasion that it would be rare to find a group of believers who would see that as a call to come and preach the Gospel. Some would conclude there was an urgent need for food, clothing, accommodations, or some other form of relief. I do not mean to be overly critical in this assessment. My persuasion is driven by the current predominance of relief work and benevolence in the mission field. I am by no means suggesting that such works are wrong. They are not, however, to be the thrust of those who have been called to labor in the Word and in the doctrine. The apostles themselves refused to be drawn aside into the legitimate work of providing for widows. When such a need arose they reasoned, “It is not seemly or desirable or right that we should have to give up or neglect [preaching] the Word of God in order to attend to serving at tables and superintending the distribution of food.” NIV (Acts 6:2). Notwithstanding the record of this kind of reasoning, there persists within the modern church an inordinate estimation of this kind of ministry. It must be remembered that something that is necessary is not always preeminent. Our text is dealing with matters of preeminence and focus.

It is essential that we have a clear view of the purpose of God. The Gospel correlates perfectly with the reason for Christ’s death and resurrection. The Gospel is “preached to the poor” (Luke 4:18), but it is not about the poor. Jesus did not die to supply food for the poor of the world. He was not raised from the dead in order that the sick might be made well. Neither of these conditions required a vicarious sacrifice. Neither of them cause people to be alienated from the life of God, or drive a wedge between them and GOD. They did not require Jesus to be made “to be sin for us” (2 Cor 5:21), or to be “made a curse for us” (Gal 3:13). Poverty does not require an atonement. Being ill does not constitute one an enemy of God. However, Christ’s death addressed such matters – matters regarding sin, alienation, and being dead in trespasses and sins – not being dead in poverty and sickness.

Jesus “came into the world to save sinners” (1 Tim 1:15), and the Gospel declares and expounds that fact. God sent His Son into the world “that the world through Him might be saved” (John 3:17). He “sent His only begotten Son into the world that we might live through Him” (1 John 4:9). He “appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself” (Heb 9:26). God was in Christ “reconciling the world unto Himself” (2 Cor 5:19). In His death He “destroyed the devil” (Heb 2:14), “plundered principalities and powers” (Col 2:15), and ended the Law as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4).

These things are consistently taught in Scripture. Christ’s death, resurrection, enthronement, and mediation, are never said to be the appointed means of destroying poverty, or attaining wealth. They are not God’s appointment for the establishment of philanthropy. That is not the good news of the Gospel – although there is nothing inherently wrong with any of those things. However, they are not the reason for the body of Christ, nor did such things require an atoning death and the removal of sin.

WHY SAY THESE THINGS

It is necessary to say these things because of the climate that now dominates the landscape of religion. If many of day had heard a man in a foreign country saying, “Come over and help us,” they would have concluded God was calling to institute a relief program, or to teach people how to worship, or to get wayward youth off the streets. Others would imagine they were being called to heal marriages and teach people how to manage their finances – or perhaps even to establish a theological school or training institute.

The fact that Paul and those with him did not think in this manner leads me to question why men think in this way today.

It is my persuasion that the nominal church has been infected with the virus of erroneous thinking – spiritually illogical thought. It is not being moved along by the considerations that moved the brethren in our text. This is largely owing to its fundamental ignorance of the purpose of God, and the obvious lack of an earnest and unwavering commitment to the One who died for them and rose again.

All of these conditions are directly traceable to a glaring ignorance of God, Christ, and salvation itself. Those are the conditions that cause men to think differently than those of our text. It is also why it is difficult for them to arrive at sound conclusions.

THEY ARRIVE IN PHILIPPI

“ 11 Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis; 12 And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony: and we were in that city abiding certain days. ”

The group wastes no time in commencing their trip to the continent of Europe. That, of course, is an aspect of faith, that moves the one possessing it to act immediately upon a word from the Lord. For example, when God tried Abraham, commanding him to offer Isaac as a burnt offering to Him, “Abraham rose up early in the morning, and saddled his ass, and took two of his young men with him, and Isaac his son, and clave the wood for the burnt offering, and rose up, and went unto the place of which God had told him” (Gen 22:1-3). When Noah was “warned of God of things not seen as yet” – namely an impending flood that would destroy every living thing – he, being “moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house” (Heb 11:7). That is how faith reacts to the word of the Lord. People who say they have faith, yet do not respond to God, living as though He had never even spoken, have lied, and the truth is not in them.

However, there are no pretenders in the group of our text. They will immediately commence to do something they have never done before, venturing into Europe to preach the Gospel.

LOOSING FROM TROAS

“Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia . . .” Other versions read, “sailing from Troas . . . ran a straight course,” NKJV “putting out to sea from Troas, we ran a straight course,” NASB and “setting sail from Troas, we came in a direct course to Samothrace.” NIV

Samothracia, or Samothrace, was a mountainous island in the Aegean Sea that could be seen from Troas, and is said to have been visible from the hills of Philippi. It was a well known island, and a place referred to as “the seat of the worship and mysteries of Cabiri.” McSTRONG The Britannica Encyclopedia describes “the mysteries of Cabiri” as, “ An important group of deities, probably of Phrygian origin, worshiped over much of Asia Minor, on the islands nearby, and in Macedonia and northern and central Greece. They were promoters of fertility and protectors of seafarers . . . The Cabeiri are often identified with the Great Gods of Samothrace, where the mysteries attracted great attention and initiation was looked upon as a general safeguard against misfortune. In the period after the death of Alexander the Great (323 BC), their cult reached its height.”

This is where they anchored on the first day. However, it seems apparent that the group did no preaching or teaching in this citadel of idolatry. They had been called to Macedonia, and were therefore making their journey there as quickly as possible. They certainly would not be turned aside by the novel traits of an island given over to idolatry, and visited by pilgrims from around the world.

THE NEXT DAY

“ . . . and the next day to Neapolis . . .” Other versions read, “and the next day came to Neapolis,”

NKJV “and on the following day to Neapolis,” NASB and “the following day to Neapolis.” RSV

Neapolis was a sea port in Macedonia – the area to which they had been called. As is apparent in the text, it took less than two days for them to make the journey. This is of some significance. Later, as recorded in Acts 20:5, they made this same trip back to Troas. That trip took more than twice as long. It is written, “And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days ; where we abode seven days” (Acts 20:6). This suggests that the winds were favorable for the journey to Macedonia. I gather that this was not a matter of coincidence. The call that had come from that area had an urgent tone to it, and the Master of both the wind and the sea caused them to arrive in a timely manner.

PHILIPPI, THE CHIEF CITY

“And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony . . .” Other versions read, “a leading city of the district of Macedonia, a Roman colony,” NASB

A “colony” consisted of Roman citizens who were military veterans. They were assigned to a portion of a conquered country, and were exempt “from personal and land taxes.” A “colony” is described in this manner: “Originally and properly a colony was a body of Roman citizens sent out as volunteers (Livy, 10:21) to possess a commonwealth, with the approbation of their own state.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S

Here, then, was a significant city with a prominent Roman citizenry, even being the leading city of the “district of Macedonia.” A “district” was a division of a conquered territory that allowed for the orderly control of the Roman empire.

The implication of this circumstance is seen in the nature of the Jewish people. They were provincial in nature, being given a special land by God. When found in other nations, it was generally owing to their dispersion by Divine judgment. Further, when found in other cultures they are consistently represented as maintaining their unique customs, which often involved gathering in synagogues.

Their culture was totally unlike the cultures of other nations, centering in the worship of the one true God. Their Scriptures constituted the Law by which they lived, and it did not train them for trafficking among the kind of people found in Philippi.

Yet, though they were, in a sense, quite different from the society in which they now found themselves, there is not the slightest indication that this group of men approached their assignment with fear and trepidation. Instead, they were forward and eager to get to the work. This was because of their faith, for faith equips the one possessing it to venture into new and challenging territory without being intimidated by it.

To me, this is something worthy of consideration. In our time, and for over one hundred and fifty years, scholasticism and special training has developed a firm grasp upon the church. Although representing itself as religious scholarship and training, the result has been that the necessity and effectiveness of faith has been seen less and less. In most Christian training, faith does not play a prominent place at all. Even a working knowledge of the Scriptures is not perceived as an absolute requisite for the service of Almighty God. It is ever true that any attempt to incorporate the wisdom of the world with faith results in the dominance of worldly wisdom. Faith cannot function in such an admixture, so it gradually diminishes.

Were the assignment of our text given to the average church-leaders of our day, one can scarcely imagine how they would go about its fulfillment. Some would probably weigh it as though they had the option of rejecting it. Others might perceive it as too challenging for them. Others might fear venturing into an environment having such a military presence.

But none of these things are declared to have been present in our text. Under the leadership of Paul, these men, including one who was rather young – Timothy – ventured forth as though they were seasoned veterans. Their faith and their Kingdom experience had doubtless produced in them a great confidence in the Lord. They did not look at opportunities through the lens of the flesh, but through the eye of faith. I believe you will find this to be a consistent pattern throughout the book of Acts. That is because it is the manner of the Kingdom. The “just” – all of them – really do “live by faith” (Heb 10:38). Our text is a living example of that.

THEY WERE THERE SEVERAL DAYS

This being the case, the plea for “help” has obviously come from those who were seeking the Lord, and were aware of their need of Him. These will not be people who are absorbed with the ways of the world, and have no sense of their need for the Lord.

“ . . . and we were in that city abiding certain days.” Other versions read, “staying in that city for some days,” NKJV “we stayed there several days,” NIV “we spent a few days in this city,” CJB and “And there we stayed some little time.” WEYMOUTH

After traveling a considerable distance by sea, the group was not met at the port by the man who appeared to Paul in the vision. After going to the chief city of Philippi – close to fifty miles west of Neapolis – they still did not come into contact with any obvious inquirers. In a sense, this was a test of their faith. They had not been directed to a specific place in Macedonia – like Philip was directed to the desert road leading to Gaza, and Peter to Caesarea. They were not pointed toward a specific man – like Philip to the Ethiopian eunuch, and Peter to Cornelius. Macedonia was an area of significant size. Now, after arriving, there was no immediate evidence of the need declared in Paul’s vision.

Those with a naive view of life in Christ would be thrown into a state of consternation by this circumstance. They see Divine direction as always being very clear, requiring little effort on the part of the Kingdom laborer. However, this text throws such ideas to the ground, for they do not represent the manner of the Kingdom. There are times when holy reasoning must be employed in a search for the proper thing to do. In the search there must be a holy familiarity with the ways of the Lord.

Take this text as an example. The vision given to Paul was that of a man in Macedonia calling out, “Come over into Macedonia and help us.” The vision was not given to a Roman soldier, as though some military assistance was needed. It was not given to a governmental treasurer, as though some money was required. The vision was not given to a food distributor, as though some food was required. It was given to a person who had been commissioned to turn men from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive the forgiveness of sins, and participate in the inheritance belonging to those who are sanctified by faith (Acts 26:18). The call, then, related to that mission, for God does not work in contradiction of His callings.

This being the case, the plea for “help” has obviously come from those who were seeking the Lord, and were aware of their need of Him. These will not be people who are absorbed with the ways of the world, and have no sense of their need for the Lord. It is probable that they will be engaged in some kind of effort to know what they have perceived is from God. With this in mind, it is my persuasion that the initial time spent in Philippi was spent in an attempt to identify such people. That is precisely why Paul would visit the synagogues of a city, for they were places where true seekers were apt to be found (Acts 13:5,14; 14:1; 17:1,10,17; 18:4,19; 19:3). Jesus Himself did the same thing (Matt 4:23; 9:35; 12:9; 13:54; John 18:20).

However, there is no record of a synagogue in Philippi. After leaving there, Paul and company went into a synagogue in Thessalonica (Acts 17:1). Before going to Macedonia, they spent time in Iconium (Acts 14:1). But there is no record of them being in a synagogue in Philippi. This bears on how Paul will approach this work.

This kind of approach to preaching the Gospel presumes that the one who is preaching and teaching is capable of bringing a true inquirer to the “treasure” that he is seeking – for the Kingdom of heaven is like a treasure that is being sought.

I will assume that during the time of reference that was spent in Philippi, an effort was made to identify people who would have a sense of the Lord, and were engaged in some kind of effort to know Him and His will more fully. To me, this passage confirms that this was the kind of quest in which they were engaged.

This blends perfectly with most all of the accounts of preaching and teaching to this point, with very few exceptions.

SOMETHING TO PONDER

This kind of approach to preaching the Gospel presumes that the one who is preaching and teaching is capable of bringing a true inquirer to the “treasure” that he is seeking – for the Kingdom of heaven is like a treasure that is being sought (Matt 13:44). Those who are ready to hear the Gospel are likened to a merchant man who is in the process of seeking “goodly pearls” (Matt 13:45). The quest of such people is driven by a sense of their own spiritual deficiency – a discerned state that is referred to as being “poor in spirit” (Matt 5:3). These are “the poor” that Jesus said would have the Gospel preached to them (Matt 11:5; Lk 4:18). These are not the economically “poor,” for the Gospel does not even address economics. It is the “Gospel of Christ” (Rom 1:15), not of success, and of “the grace of God” (Acts 20:24), not social elevation.

I question the validity of claims to “leading people to Christ” who are from the disinterested sector of society – particular when it involves little more than repeating the hackneyed “sinner’s prayer.” In my judgment there is too much shallowness in contemporary evangelism. It appears to be leaving the door standing ajar for the entrance of those who are neither aware of their sin, nor of the necessity of getting rid of it. However, there is no need to carry this matter further. For those who have ears to hear, our text will powerfully speak to this matter.

ACTIVITIES ON THE SABBATH DAY

“13 And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side, where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.”

It is important to note the time, place, and activity associated with this event. It took place on the Sabbath day. The place was a river outside of the city. The place was one noted for the offering of prayer. Keep in mind that all of this has to do with answering a call to come into Macedonia to minister “help.” This “help” has been defined as “to preach the Gospel unto them” (16:10). This is how Paul, and Silas commenced the fulfillment of that commission.

ON THE SABBATH DAY

“And on the sabbath we went out of the city by a river side . . .” Other versions read, “on the Sabbath day we went out of the city,” NKJV “outside the gate,” NASB “outside the town,” BBE “outside the city gate,” CSB “a little way outside the city,” NLT and “beyond the city gate.”
WEYMOUTH

Some might read this with a mind to enforce the observance of the Sabbath day – but that is not the point of the text, as is apparent by what is said of this occasion. More than a personal observance of the day, which might very well have been observed, this was an attempt to find those whose hearts were being drawn Godward. As I have already indicated, this has been established as a key manner in which the apostles and other messengers made inroads into society. With a few exceptions, they started by addressing those who had demonstrated some propensity toward the Lord, and these were generally Jews.

The fact that they went “out of the city” confirms there was no synagogue within it. Even though it appears there were Jews in that area, they were not of sufficient number to have established a synagogue. Yet, as we will find, while in this Gentile city, they had maintained their faith, and continued to make special prayers on the Sabbath day.

Something To Be Seen

There is something else to be seen here. Drawing close to the Lord was associated with separating from normalities of life. This was established under the Law, where God instructed the people to go to sanctified places to give special honor to Him (Deut 12:5; 14:23; 15:20). When in the wilderness, the tabernacle was the place where the people would meet, which was called “the tabernacle of meeting” NKJV (Ex 27:21; 28:43; 29:4; 30:16; 31:7; 33:7; 35:21; 38:8 40:7,30). Later, the city of Jerusalem was the gathering point (Ezra 7:13; Neh 12:27; Jer 3:17). Within Jerusalem, the Temple was a place of gathering (Isa 56:7; Matt 21:13; John 8:2; Acts 5:20). The glorious events of the day of Pentecost took place in a house, not in the streets (Acts 2:2). The initial pouring out of the Spirit upon the Gentiles took place in the house of Cornelius where the people were gathered to hear words whereby they would be saved (Acts 10:22,27). The disciples in Troas came together on the first day of the week, meeting in a special upper chamber (Acts 20:7-8).

This is not intended to establish some kind of legal system concerning the gathering of the saints. It rather substantiates that there is a certain distracting element in the world – even in legitimate activities that are conducted there. A quest for the Living God does involve getting away from those things. Paul and Silas knew this, and thus went outside the city, seeking to find those engaged in such a pursuit. The Amplified Bible accents this by reading, “And on the Sabbath day we went outside the [city’s] gate to the bank of the river where we supposed there was an [accustomed] place of prayer .”

WHERE PRAYER WAS WONT TO BE MADE

“ . . . where prayer was wont to be made . . .” Other versions read, “where prayer was customarily made,” NKJV “a place of prayer,” NASB “we expected to find a place of prayer,” NIV “where it was the custom for prayer to be,” DARBY “where we thought Jewish people gathered for prayer,” GWN “because a house of prayer was seen there,” MRD “where we thought people would be meeting for prayer.” NLT

The word “wont” comes from the Greek word evnomi,zomen , which means, “to hold by custom or usage, own as a custom or usage; to follow custom or usage,” THAYER In other words, this speaks of something that is normally and consistently done – not a mere habit, but a custom, or manner of life. Whereas a habit can be done by rote, what men are “wont” to do is done deliberately, with thought and intention.

36 16:5 Paul & Silas Derby/Lystra Established Churches

Therefore Paul and company sought out a place where people were noted for coming to pray on the Sabbath day. If someone was ready to hear the Gospel, and there was a sense of urgency about it, as the vision Paul received suggested, these are the kind of people to whom they had been sent. They would, in this case, be Jews, that had been prepared by the “schoolmaster” to hear of Jesus Christ (Gal 3:24-25). We do not know how long Paul and those with him had been in Philippi, but I do not doubt that this was the first Sabbath day of they confronted.

The extraordinary thing about this is that this degree of commitment is not found in the average church. Traditionally, the time of prayer is the time when the least number of people come – and some have abandoned such a time altogether. This suggests a lack of seriousness about the things of God. I do not know how you would go about establishing the validity of a professed faith that did not draw people together for prayer.

SPEAKING TO THE WOMEN WHO RESORTED THERE

“ . . . and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.” Other versions read, “who met there,” NKJV “who had assembled,” NASB “who had gathered there,” NIV “who had come together,” RSV and “who had come to the meeting.” NJB

The word “resorted” means “to come together, to assemble . . . in congregation,” THAYER and “to hold by custom or usage, own as a custom or usage; to follow custom or usage.” LOUW-NIDA This, therefore, was not a group of women independent from one another who just happened to be at the same place at the same time. These women came to be together, and to pray together. They were an assembly – an intentional gathering, coming together for prayer.

These women are the ones to whom Paul and Silas chose to speak. In his vision, Paul saw a man crying out for them to come over into Macedonia and help them. Now they confront a group of women, and they see no contradiction whatsoever. They sat down and spoke to the women. You may be sure, they did not indulge in idle talk – the weather, or the social climate, etc. These women had come to pray, and they apparently had no interest in mere conversation, or the discussion of matters disassociated from the reason they came to the river. It was a perfect context for Gospel proclamation. While the Gospel is for “every creature,” some are more ready to hear it than others.

The devotion of these woman ought to be noted. We do not know the number of them, but they apparently knew each other, and had no doubt maintained their godly associations. They certainly had not become absorbed or distracted by the Macedonian society.

Although there were apparently not enough Jews in the area to justify a synagogue, they still honored the Lord on the Sabbath day . Their presence in a heathen environment did not cause their love to wax cold. We are viewing a cluster of people who were seeking the Lord.

A CERTAIN WOMAN NAMED LYDIA

“ 14 And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshiped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.”

We do not know how many women had assembled by this river. However, now our attention will be turned to one of them.

A CERTAIN WOMAN

“And a certain woman named Lydia . . .” Other versions read, “one of those listening,” NIV “one who heard us,” RSV “one of them,” NAB and “one of these women.” NJB

Paul and Silas sat down and spoke to all of the women present. At this point, however, one of the women is noted above all of the others.

The word “certain” is a technically precise translation denoting a specific woman among several women. According to the text, all of the woman who were present had assembled for the purpose of prayer. Paul and Silas sat down and spoke to all of the women present. At this point, however, one of the women is noted above all of the others. Our attention is drawn toward her. Like the seed that was sown, here was some “good ground” that will receive and act upon the Word (Matt 13:8,23).

There are varying distinctions among people. Here was a group of women who were distinct from others in that they gathered together on the Sabbath for the purpose of prayer. If there was no synagogue in Philippi, as the circumstance suggests, it did not dampen their spirits. They assembled anyway. Like the woman at the well, they gave their attention to the speakers, not recoiling from their presence or speaking. This is the manner of people who are feeling after God – seeking Him out, and endeavoring to do His will (Acts 17:27). Such distinctive people are not offended when men speak to them of the things of God.

Now, we see more prestigiousness within this distinguished group of women. Here was a spiritual woman that was unique among spiritual women. Such distinctions are found throughout Scripture.

- Enoch stood out among men, walking with God (Gen 5:22,24).
- Noah stood out, being distinguished from everyone else in the world (Gen 6:8-9).
- Joseph stood out among the sons of Jacob, being “separate from his brethren” (Gen49:26) receiving a double portion of the inheritance in Canaan in his sons (Josh 16:4).
- Mary stood out among all other women (Luke 1:28).
- John the Baptist stood out among the prophets (Matt 11:11).
- Nicodemus stood out among the Pharisees, who were a strict body of people (John 3:1; Acts 26:5).
- Peter stood out among the twelve (Matt 16:19).
- Paul stood out among the apostles (1 Cor 15:10).
- Timothy stood out among the disciples in Lystra and Iconium (Acts 16:1-2).
- Andronicus and Junia stood out, being of note among the apostles (Rom 16:7).
- James (the Lord’s brother), Peter, and John stood out in the Jerusalem church (Gal 2:9).

The Divine economy is one in which people can excel! Some can press in closer, like the woman with an issue of blood (Mk 5:27). It is possible to linger with Jesus, and receive further explanations concerning mysterious proclamations (Matt 13:36; Lk 8:9). In this record we are being exposed to a woman of spiritual distinction.

A SELLER OF PURPLE

AMPLIFIED

The words “seller of purple” are translated from a single Greek word (porfuro,pwlij). The word means, “a female seller of purple or of fabrics dyed in purple,” THAYER “a woman who specialized in selling purple cloth - 'dealer in purple cloth,” LOUW-NIDA and “a business woman dealing in purple cloth.” GINGRICH

“PURPLE”

There was a great demand for this fabric as it was used on the official toga at Rome and in Roman colonies. We still use the term "royal purple." See on Luke 16:19. Evidently Lydia was a woman of some means to carry on such an important enterprise from her native city. ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

In many of these passages the word translated “purple” means “purple cloth,” or some other material dyed purple, as wool, thread, etc.; but no reference occurs to the means by which the dye was obtained, except in 1 Macc. 4:23, where we have porfu>ra qalassi>a , ‘ purple of the sea” (comp. Diod. Sic. iii, 68; Josephus, War, v, 5, 4). There is, however, no reason to doubt that it was obtained, like the far-famed Tyrian purple, from the juice of certain species of shell-fish – i.e., Tyrian Rock-shell (Murex trunculus). McCLINTOK STRONG’S

It is apparent that this was a woman of means, dealing in a valuable commodity. “Purple” was prominent in the fabrics of the Tabernacle (Ex 25:4; 26:1,31,36; 27:16; 28:5; 36:8,35,37; 38:18; 39:1-8,24,29). It also prominent in the Temple (2 Chron 2:7,14; 3:14). The rich man of Lazarus fame was “clothed in purple and fine linen” (Lk 16:19). When they mocked Jesus in His trial, they “put on Him a purple robe” (John 19:2). Babylon the Great, the great false church, is depicted as a “woman arrayed in purple” (Rev 17:4), also trafficking in “purple” (Rev 18:12).

Lydia, then, was engaged in a most notable business, and was obviously a prominent women, for ordinary people did not use “purple.”

Behold the Woman

And yet, although a traveling business woman, she did not do her business on the Sabbath day. It was her custom to assemble with other women at the river to pray on the Sabbath day. However valuable and demanding her business may have been, it did not capture her attention on the day devoted to the Lord. Away from Israel, and apparently traveling away from her own home, she suspended her business on the Sabbath day in order to pray!

A WOMAN FROM THYATIRA

“ . . . of the city of Thyatira . . .” Other versions read, “from the city of Thyatira.” NKJV/NASB/NIV

Lydia was from the city of Thyatira, which was in the western region of Asia, where Paul and Silas, by the Holy Spirit, had been “forbidden to preach the Word” (16:6). We know that later this city did, in fact, hear the Word of God, and a church was established there. The church in that city was one of the churches Jesus addressed in the book of the Revelation (Rev 1:11; 2:18,24). Whether or not Lydia was instrumental in the formation of that church, I do not know. However, it is not difficult for me to accept this was the case, because this text is the only other text in Scripture where the city is mentioned. Incidentally, the Roman road from Pergamos to Sardis (two other churches mentioned in the Revelation) passed through Thyatira. McCLINTOK-STRONG’S

A WOMAN WHO WORSHIPED GOD

“ . . . which worshiped God . . .” Other versions read “a worshiper of God,” NASB “a God-fearing woman,” BBE “a God-fearer,” CJB “a convert to Judaism,” GWN “who revered God,” NJB and “worshiped the true God.” IE

We understand that Lydia was a Gentile (as her name indicates), and that she was a proselyte, having embraced the “God of the Jews” (Rom 3:29). It must be remembered that during the time of the Old Covenant, there was no known worship or worshiper of God apart from either being a Jew, or being in contact with them. All of the revelation concerning Himself and His will had been vouchsafed to the Jews. Paul makes a doctrinal point of this. “Who are Israelites ; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5).

The word “pertaineth” means “belongs,” NASB “their’s,” NIV “whose is,” ASV and “who have.” BBE The expression indicates that the things that are mentioned belonged exclusively to the Jews. They could neither be known nor possessed without being of that body of people, either by birth or by proselytization. Ponder the extensive nature of what was given to the,

- THE ADOPTION. This speaks of being brought into association with God – like adopted children. This was something God Himself did: “Israel is My son . . . “ye are the children of the Lord . . . I am a Father to Israel” (Ex 4:22; Deut 14:1; Jer 31:9)

- THE GLORY. This has to do with God’s manifestation of Himself. Israel saw His glory at Sinai (Deut 5:24). He spoke to Moses in the Tabernacle (Num 7:89). “The glory of the Lord” filled the Temple (1 Kgs 8:11). They alone saw His “power and glory” (Psa 63:2).

- THE COVENANTS. This included the covenant of a land especially for the Israelites (Gen 15:18; Ex 6:4), the covenant of a Seed through whom the blessing would come (Acts 3:35), and the covenant made with them at Sinai (Ex 19:5; 24:7). All of them belonged exclusively to Israel. Even the New Covenant was promised the “the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah” (Jer 31:31; Heb 8:6).

- THE GIVING OF THE LAW. The Law was given to the Jews, and they were the exclusive custodians of it. This contained a precise definition of sin, defining morality (Deut 4:8,44; 1 Chron 16:17; Rom 3:20). It was also designed to ultimately lead men to Christ, proving to them their need of Him (Gal 3:24-25).

- THE SERVICE OF GOD. This had to do with the worship of God. Under the Law, it was epitomized in the Tabernacle and Temple service, or ministry. Thus devotion to God was referred to as “service” and “the service of the tabernacle” (Ex 12:25-27; 27:19; 30:16; 35:21; Heb 9:6).

- THE PROMISES. These had to do with God’s commitment to bless, and referred to them as a people, and to the world in general as regarded the coming Savior (Psa 98:3; Lk 1:70-75; Acts 2:39).

- THE FATHERS. These are Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the foundational promises were given. The enjoyment of those promises required identity with them (Gen 31:53; 50:24; Ex 2:24; Acts 3:13).

- CHRIST CAME FROM THEM, ACCORDING TO THE FLESH. The promise of the Messiah was given to Israel. Moses prophesied of Jesus, “The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken” (Deut 18:15; Acts 3:22-23; 7:37). He is referred to as a “Son” and a “Child” that was given to them (Isa 9:6). They are the ones to whom He came (John 1:11). Peter declared that God raised Him up as a “Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). Paul declared “He raised up unto Israel a Savior, Jesus” (Acts 13:23).

The truth of the matter is that God cannot be worshiped generically. Worship requires some kind of revelation, and prior to Christ, this came through the Jews.

Now, we are faced with a woman merchant from a Gentile city, coming from a region in which the Holy Spirit had forbidden the Gospel to be preached. Yet, she had been drawn to the Jews and to their God, and had embraced Him as represented by the Law and the Prophets. Now, the Sovereign Lord finds her by a river side, doing the best she could according to the knowledge she had. She has adhered to her persuasion across the sea from her homeland, and in the process of a business that probably brought her into contact with the elite of a secular society. A noble woman, indeed!

SHE HEARD US

“ . . . heard us . . .” Other versions read, “was listening,” NASB “gave ear to us,” BBE “did hear,” DOUAY “She listened to us,” NLT “gave us audience,” PNT “was hearing,” YLT and “she stayed to listen to us.” WILLIAMS

This includes riveting one’s attention on the speaker, sensing the gravity of what is being said, and a willingness to submit one’s mind to the consideration of what is being said. Comprehension is also involved – the kind that perceives what is being said is, in fact, directed toward the hearer.

As used here, the word “heard” is translated from a word with the following meaning: “attentive hearing . . . to comprehend, understand.” THAYER This includes riveting one’s attention on the speaker, sensing the gravity of what is being said, and a willingness to submit one’s mind to the consideration of what is being said. Comprehension is also involved – the kind that perceives what is being said is, in fact, directed toward the hearer. Keep in mind that Paul was not singing, he was speaking, He was not entertaining, but speaking of things pertaining to life and godliness. The verb tense of the word also suggests that she kept on listening, probably staying longer than some of the other women. Paul’s words got the attention of Lydia.

THE LORD OPENED HER HEART “ . . . whose heart the Lord opened . . .” Other versions read, “the Lord opened her heart,” NKJV “whose heart the Lord made open,” BBE “the Lord made her willing,” GWN “the Lord so moved upon her heart,” WILLIAMS and “she opened her heart.” PHILLIPS

Phillips translation is totally wrong. All five Greek versions that I have read exactly the same: “the Lord opened her heart” (ο` ku,rioj dih,noixen th.n kardi,an). She was a worshiper of God, yet required that her heart be opened. She was devout and apparently consistent in her devotion to the Lord, but her heart had to be opened. She was listening intently to Paul, and picking up on what he was saying, yet her heart had to be opened. This was something she could not do, else God would not have done it. She possessed no natural aptitude to do what was necessary. “The Lord opened her heart.”

The word “opened” is translated from the Greek word dih,noixen . The lexical meaning of this word is, “to open thoroughly,” THAYER “enabling one to perceive or understand,” FRIBERG and “to open wide like a folding door.” ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES This is certainly not strange language to the student of Scripture.

• HAGAR, “And God opened her eyes , and she saw a well of water; and she went, and filled the bottle with water, and gave the lad drink” (Gen 21:19).

• BALAAM. “Then the LORD opened the eyes of Balaam , and he saw the angel of the LORD standing in the way, and his sword drawn in his hand: and he bowed down his head, and fell flat on his face” (Num 22:31).

• ELISHA’S SERVANT. “And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes , that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man ; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha” (2 Kgs

• CERTAIN SAMARITANS. “And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, LORD, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria” (2 Kgs 6:20).

• THE TWO ON THE ROAD TO EMMAUS. “Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures” (Luke 24:45).

• ALL BELIEVERS. “The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints” (Eph 1:18).

Insightful men have sought for understanding to be given to them – understanding that cannot be acquired through scholastic acumen (Psa 119:34,73,125,144,169). Even after admonishing Timothy to “consider” what he had written, Paul added, “and the Lord give thee understanding in all things” (2 Tim 2:7). That is precisely what takes place in this text. Lydia listened considerably, and the Lord opened her heart to things that were otherwise beyond her discernment.

What Does It Mean to Open the Heart?

Behind the need for this work is the effect of sin upon the human race. There is a spiritual obtuseness that has enveloped the heart so that it cannot perceive what needs to be ascertained to be saved. Further, “the heart,” out of which the issues of life proceed, does not have the power to motivate the individual appropriately. The response that God requires of men is too lofty for nature.

The opening of the heart is like a double door swinging wide open. Through one door the individual received, and through the other they are enabled to properly respond to what they receive, expressing themselves to the glory of God. This text particularly emphasizes the latter.

SO SHE COULD ATTEND TO PAUL’S WORDS

“... that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul.” Other versions read, “to heed the things,” NKJV “to respond to the things,” NASB “to listen eagerly,” NRSV “to give attention,” BBE “to give heed to,” ERV “to accept,” NJB “accepted all,” LIVING “she believed,” IE and “listen carefully.” ISV

The word translated “attended unto” means “to turn the mind to,” THAYER “to hold on to,” FRIBERG “to be in a continual state of readiness,” LOUW-NIDA and “to give heed to, follow.” GINGRICH This kind of action involves concentration, readiness, and determination. Every obstacle to believing has been pulled down.

Here, much more involved in this expression than mere redundancy. In hearing, as the word indicates, she was attentive, listening carefully and deliberately to what Paul was saying. The use of the word “attend to” shows that she held on to what she heard, not allowing it to be snatched from her.

As the lexical meaning of the word suggests, she was in a state of readiness. It only remained for her to be instructed what to do. She was willing and ready to obey. Further, it was the work of the Lord that gave her the ability to do this.

IF YOU HAVE JUDGED ME TO BE FAITHFUL

“15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us.”

The Spirit does not provide us with all of the details of Lydia's response. However, He does reveal enough for us to see there was no departure from the Kingdom norm. All believers should be able to understand what is said, for it is common to everyone inducted into Christ Jesus.

AND WHEN SHE WAS BAPTIZED

“And when she was baptized, and her household . . .” Other versions read, “and when she and her household were baptized,” NKJV “when she was baptized with her household,” RSV “when she and her family had had baptism,” BBE “After she and the members of her household had been immersed,” CJB “When Lydia and her family were baptized,” GWN and “She and all of the people living in her house were immersed.” IE

There are fifteen times when the baptism of people is described by the words “was baptized” or “were baptized.”

- PEOPLE RESPONDING TO JOHN THE BAPTIST. “They went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judaea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins” (Matt 3:5-6).

- JESUS. “And Jesus, when He was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him” (Matt 3:16).

- JESUS. “And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan” (Mark 1:9).

- PEOPLE RESPONDING TO JOHN THE BAPTIST. “Now when all the people were baptized, it came to pass, that Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened” (Luke 3:21).

- PEOPLE RESPONDING TO JOHN THE BAPTIST. “And John also was baptizing in Aenon near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized” (John 3:23).

- PEOPLE ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST. “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls” (Acts 2:41).

- CITIZENS OF SAMARIA. “But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women” (Acts 8:12).

- SIMON THE SORCERER. “Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done” (Acts 8:13).

- THE SAMARITANS. “For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus” (Acts 8:16).

- SAUL OF TARSUS. “And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith, and arose, and was baptized” (Acts 9:18).

- LYDIA AND HOUSEHOLD. “And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying, If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and abide there. And she constrained us” (Acts 16:15).

- PHILIPPIAN JAILOR. “And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway” (Acts 16:33).

This speaks of a spiritual culture that is most unusual in our time. In those early days, with the preaching of a pure Gospel by insightful souls, whole bodies of people were often converted at one time.

- CRISPUS AND HIS HOUSE. “And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized ” (Acts 18:8).

- EPHESIANS DISCIPLES. “When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus” (Acts 19:5).

- THOSE WHO ARE IN CHRIST. “Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?” (Rom 6:3).

I am not aware of any responsible student of Scripture that would contend any of these verses was speaking about being baptized into or by the Holy Spirit. This is simply not the type of language used to describe those who were baptized “with the Holy Spirit” (Matt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16; John 1:26,33). This text refers to the baptism by which we assume identity with the Lord Jesus Christ. We are, by this baptism, baptized “into Christ” and “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27). This is the point at which we are put into Christ’s death, and out of which God raises us to walk in the newness of life (Rom 6:2-4). Here is where our sins are “washed away” (Acts 22:16), after which we receive the “gift of the Holy Spirit” (Acts 2:38). It is also at this point that we obtain a “good conscience” (1 Pet 3:21).

Not only was Lydia herself baptized, but her household was as well. We do not know if this included any children she may have had. One meaning of “household,” as used here, is “family.” STRONG’S The technical definition is those inhabiting a certain house.

This is not the first nor last incident of a person and their house, or household, being baptized.

- Cornelius and his house (Acts 10:47; 11:4).
- Lydia and her house (Acts 16:15).
- The Philippian jailor and his house (Acts 16:31-34).
- Crispus and his house (Acts 18:8).

This speaks of a spiritual culture that is most unusual in our time. In those early days, with the preaching of a pure Gospel by insightful souls, whole bodies of people were often converted at one time. You can no doubt recall many of those occasions.

- On the day of Pentecost, three thousand gladly received the Word and were baptized (Acts 2:41).

- In what appeared to be a single day, “about five thousand men” heard and believed the Word (Acts 4:4).

- The whole city of Samaria believed the preaching of Philip (Acts 8:6,8,12,14).

- A significant number of people all believed when Peter preached at the house of Cornelius (Acts 10:45,47-48; 11:17).

Now, a number of people respond to the Gospel at the same time. This again confirms the universality of the Gospel, and how kindred spirits, though diverse in many ways, can be of one accord in responding to the Gospel.

SHE BESOUGHT US

“ . . . she besought us, saying . . . come into my house, and abide there . . .” Other versions read, “begged us . . . come to my house and stay” NKJV “Urged us . . . come into my house and stay” NASB “invited us . . . come and stay at my house” NIV “made a request . . . come into my house and be my guests,” BBE “gave us this invitation . . . come and stay in my house,” CJB “entreated us . . . come and take lodging in my house,” MRD “invited us . . . come and stay at my house,” NIB “kept urging us . . . come and stay with us,” NJB “did call upon us . . . having entered into my house, remain,” YLT “earnestly entreated us . . . come to my house and stay,” AMPLIFIED and “appealed to us . . . then come down to my house and stay there.” PHILLIPS

First, this strongly suggests that Lydia and her house immediately responded to the Gospel, being baptized in the very river where they had gathered for prayer. Like all of the conversions recorded in the book of Acts, believing and obeying was upon hearing the word of the Gospel.

First, this strongly suggests that Lydia and her house immediately responded to the Gospel, being baptized in the very river where they had gathered for prayer. Like all of the conversions recorded in the book of Acts, believing and obeying was upon hearing the word of the Gospel.

Once again, we are faced with the eagerness of those of tender heart to maintain continued fellowship. This desire surfaces again and again throughout the Scriptures.

- The interested multitudes once remained with Jesus for three consecutive days (Mk 8:2).
- Upon seeing and hearing Jesus, the Samaritans “besought Him that He would tarry with them” (John 4:40).
- After Jesus had joined the two on the two on the road to Emmaus, and after hearing Hos gracious words, “they constrained him, saying, Abide with us” (Lk 24:29).
- Upon hearing that Jesus was going away, the disciples were sorrowful (John 16:5-6,22).
- The early church continued to subject themselves to the apostles doctrine, and to fellowship with one another (Acts 2:42). They were described as being “together” (2:44).
- Upon his conversion, Saul of Tarsus “remained certain days with the disciples which were at Damascus” (Acts 9:19).
- Upon hearing words whereby they could be saved, and responding to them, those at the house of Cornelius asked Peter and those with him to remain with them for several days (Acts 10:48).
- Barnabas and Saul “assembled themselves” with the church in Antioch “for a whole year” (Acts 11:26).
- In Antioch of Pisidia, after hearing the Word of God, “many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas” (Acts 13:43).
- After “rehearsing all that God had done with them,” Paul and Barnabas stayed a “long time with the disciples” in Antioch (Acts 14:27).
- After obeying the Gospel Paul preached, Lydia “constrained” him and those with him to remain at her house for a time (Acts 16:15).
- After obeying the Gospel, the Philippi an jailor brought Paul and Silas “into his house, and set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house” (Acts 16:34).
- After calling for and speaking to the elders from Ephesus, Paul told them he was departing. They wept freely, “Sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more” (Acts 20:38).
- When Paul was en route to Rome, they landed in Tyre, where Paul found some disciples, who invited them to stay with them “seven days” (Acts 28:13).

Now, in keeping with this manner, Lydia desires to maintain this newfound fellowship. At this time, there were at least four in the number: Paul, Silas, Timothy, and Luke.

THE SPECIFIED CONDITION

“If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord.” Other versions read, “if you consider me to be a believer in the Lord,” NIV “If it seems to you that I am true to the Lord,” BBE “If you're convinced that I believe in the Lord,” GWN “If ye are really persuaded that I have believed in our Lord,” MRD “If you agree that I am a true believer in the Lord,” NLT “If you think that I believe on the Lord,” TNT “If you have made up your mind that I am a real believer in the Lord,” WILLIAMS “If in your opinion I am one really convinced [that Jesus is the Messiah and the Author of salvation] and that I will be faithful to the Lord,” AMPLIFIED and “If you are satisfied that I am a true-believer in the Lord.” PHILLIPS

In a grand display of the transparency of faith, which projects what is in the heart. Lydia calls upon these men to evaluate her faith, determining whether or not she has been trustworthy in her response. As used here, the word “judged” means “to separate, put asunder, pick out, select . . . to approve, esteem . . . deem, think . . . determine,” THAYER “as making a personal evaluation,” FRIBERG “pass judgment on,” UBS and “come to a conclusion in the process of thinking and thus to be in a position to make a decision.” LOUW-NIDA

Lydia submits herself to the judgment of Paul and those with him. She will make her request upon the basis of their conclusion. I can scarcely imagine this kind of statement being made in, what men might call, the conventional “church.” There has been such an emphasis upon profession that little thought is given to the validity of the profession. In my understanding, this is an expression of the confidence of faith. There was no question in the mind of Lydia about being faithful, and she assumes that it is apparent enough to pass the evaluation of those acquainted with the Lord. A professed faith that is so personal and self-centered it refuses to submit to the assessment of the godly is spurious.

The Greek word translated “faithful” is pisth.n, and means “trustworthy, faithful, of persons who show themselves faithful in the . . . execution of commands” THAYER “faithful, trustworthy, reliable,” UBS “trustworthy, worthy of credit,” LEH and “trustworthy, faithful, dependable.” GINGRICH

The words “faith” and “faithful” are not synonymous. Further, as used in this text, “faithful” does not mean full of faith. The word “faithful,” as used here (pisto.j), is also applied to God Himself: “God is faithful” (1 Cor 10:13); “The Lord is faithful” (2 Thess 3:3); “Faithful is He that calleth you” (1 Thess 5:24); “He abideth faithful” (2 Tim 2:13); “that He might be a merciful and faithful High Priest” (Heb 2:17); “He is faithful that promised” (Heb 10:23); “She [Sarah] judged Him faithful who had promised” (Heb 11:11); “a faithful Creator” (1 Pet 4:19); “He is faithful and just” (1 John 1:9). Who would dare to say this means God is “believing,” is a “believer,” or is “full of faith?” These affirmations mean that He is trustworthy and dependable, always doing what is right, and following through with what He says. Knowing this, faith relies upon Him.

The word “faithful” is even applied to the Word of God. “This is a faithful saying” (1 Tim 1:15; 4:9; 2 Tim 2:11; Tit 3:8); “the faithful word” (Tit 1:9). Again, it is obvious this does not mean the Word is believing, but that is trustworthy, dependable, and to be relied on. The various versions of Scripture that use alternative translations misrepresent this text: “to be a believer in the Lord,” convinced that I believe in the Lord,” GWN “that I have believed in our Lord,” MRD “that I am a true believer in the Lord,” NLT “that I believe on the Lord,” TNT and “that I am a real believer in the Lord.” WILLIAMS This is not at all what the text is saying.

Consistently, the word “faithful” is used in regards to one’s acceptable response to a command, or the handling of a stewardship, or some other commission. Thus we read of stewards being “found faithful” (1 Cor 4:2), a “faithful minister” (Eph 6:21), and being “faithful in all things” (1 Tim 3:11).

Synonyms for “faithful” are constant, resolute, steadfast, steady, and true. Related words include dependable, reliable, trustworthy, and devoted.

What Lydia was asking these brethren to judge was her response to the Gospel. Had she carried out what God intended for her to do? Were there some Divine requirements that she had not fulfilled, or had her initial obedience been thorough. A “faithful steward” is one that has fulfilled his stewardship, handling it as the Lord intended. A “faithful minister” is one who delivers the message God has given, properly instructing sinners, and feeding and nourishing the saints of God.

In one place Paul referred to “believing masters” who were “faithful and beloved” (1 Tim 6:2). He was speaking of masters whose conduct matched their profession of faith. In this case, faith is like the root [beneath the surface] which feeds and nourishes the tree, which is above the surface. Lydia was asking that Paul and those with him examine whether not what was seen in her matched what was required within her. That, of course, will be the ultimate assessment that God Himself will make of every professing believer. It is no wonder that we are admonished, “Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith ; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?” (2 Cor 13:5). Such an examination is not confined to the area of thought and affection, but rather focuses on the various expressions of the individual. Are those actions in concert with the declared impact of Christ being within a person?

SHE CONSTRAINED US

“ . . . And she constrained us.” Other versions read, “persuaded us,” NKJV “prevailed upon us,” NASB “made us come,” BBE “insisted till we went,” CJB “urged us much,” MRD “would take no refusal,” NJB “compelled us to come,” MONTGOMERY and “she induced us to do it.” AMPLIFIED

The reason Lydia convinced the men to come into her house and abide for a season was because they did, in fact, consider her to have been faithful to the Lord. The evidence of her faithfulness that is recorded includes the following.

- She came down to the river on the Sabbath day to pray (16:13).
- She “worshiped God” (16:14a).
- She listened intently to what was being said (16:14b).
- The Lord opened her heart so she could respond to the things that were spoken – and she did (16:14).
- She was baptized (16:15a).
- She continued to insist that they abide in her house (16:15b).

To the spiritually minded, by means of these reactions, it became apparent that Lydia loved the Lord, His Word, and His people. Of course, the personal awareness of these Kingdom realities on the part of Paul and Silas is what enabled their proper assessment of Lydia. Those who are lacking in this discernment cannot necessary assessments.

That assessment, in turn, was based upon their own acquaintance with, and preference for, the Lord, His purpose, and His revelation. It was within that framework that they made their assessment.

CONCLUSION

The Gospel had penetrated the continent of Europe, as it continued its spread like leaven throughout the whole of the earth. This kind of increase is according to Divine objective. Even though there have been periods of history in which such increase was rare, God has revealed certain things about His kingdom. A foundational aspect of it was prophesied by Isaiah: “Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end , upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this ” (Isa 9:7).

Jesus spoke of the pervasive nature of the heavenly kingdom, affirming. “The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened ” (Matt 13:33). He also said that, in its beginning, it was like a small and unimpressive mustard. But at its conclusion that would not be the case. “The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown , it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof” (Matt 13:31-32). These statements of the Lord are not a depiction of the worldly church, as some affirm. He categorically states they are rather a characterization of the “Kingdom of heaven” – an appellation never ascribed to anything of this world.

Daniel spoke of this same Kingdom attribute, declaring it to be like an unobtrusive “stone,” hewn out of a mountain “without hands.” The kingdoms of this world appeared quite formidable in comparison to this small beginning. Through a dream, the God of heaven depicted four great world empires (Babylon, Medio-Persian, Grecian, and Roman) as a great image, impressive in appearance, and apparently invincible. What was a small stone in comparison to that? It was revealed that the “stone” of reference began to move across the face of the earth, and finally that very stone “smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth ” (Dan 2:34-35).

In His promise to Abraham, the Lord alluded to the global nature of what would be accomplished in Abraham’s Seed of promise. “Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation, and all the nations of the earth shall be blessed in Him ” (Gen 18:18). And again, “And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed ; because thou hast obeyed my voice” (Gen 22:18). God promised the same to Isaac: “And I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed ” (Gen 26:4). The Lord also made the same promise to Jacob: “And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth, and thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and in thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed ” (Gen 28:14). This representation of global blessing would not appear possible at first. Yet, as time progressed these promises would be obviously realized.

Before Daniel, the Psalmist prophesied of the defeat of world empires, and their subjugation to the King of kings. “He shall cut off the spirit of princes: He is terrible to the kings of the earth ” (Psa 76:12). And again, “So the heathen shall fear the name of the LORD , and all the kings of the earth Thy glory ” (Psa 102:15). And again, “ All the kings of the earth shall praise thee , O LORD, when they hear the words of thy mouth” (Psa 138:4).

Isaiah also prophesied of such a time: “And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord’s house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it ” (Isa 2:2). And again, “And He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people , and the veil that is spread over all nations ” (Isa 25:7).

John the Revelator also spoke of the pervasive nature of the Kingdom, declaring a time when it will be said in truth, “The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ ; and He shall reign for ever and ever” (Rev 11:15). What we have seen thus far in the book of Acts is the gradual spreading of the Gospel, together with a garnering, or harvest, of souls. Up to the point of our text, it started in Jerusalem, spreading throughout Judaea and Samaria. It reached into

THE WOMAN WITH THE SPIRIT OF DIVINATION

“ 16:16 And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying: 17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation. 18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour. 19 And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the marketplace unto the rulers, 20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city, 21 And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans. 22 And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them. 23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely: 24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.” (Acts 16:16-24)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE TEXT

As Paul and Silas spend time in Philippi they encounter a person dominated by the powers of darkness: a woman with a spirit of divination. Their encounter of this woman takes place as they are going to the place of prayer, which appears to have become their base of operation. Eventually, Paul confronts the situation, speaking directly to the spirit, and commanding it to come out of the woman. As soon as the spirit left her, she was no longer the same. The outcome of the whole event was an insurrection against Paul and Silas, for the woman proved to have been a source of income to her owners, for she was a slave. As a result, Paul and Silas are beaten publically by the officials. Then, for the first time, Paul is imprisoned, and Silas with him. They had invaded a citadel of Satanic power, and that moved the people to be hostile against them. This is owing to the aggressive nature of Kingdom labors. And thus, the work was under way in Macedonia, to which the Lord had called them – to “preach the Gospel unto them” (16:10).

In this text we are exposed to the militant nature of Gospel preaching. Being sent to Macedonia to “preach the Gospel unto them,” they were not confined to the act preaching itself. Being in a stronghold of the wicked one, they would confront opposition, and would have to do something about it. This would be a different kind of opposition, being instigated by Gentiles, who knew not God. Prior to this, resistance had largely been instituted by the Jews. In fact, when Gentiles opposed them, it was generally owing to them being stirred up by the Jews (13:45,50; 14:2,5,19). However, in Philippi this was not the case.

THE REALITY OF SATAN

I have found that there is a certain naivete in the Christian community that does not take into account the influence of Satan and his powers in the world. The work of the Lord is often approached as though it only involved dealing with people and their varied problems and circumstances. Ponder what has been revealed about our adversary the devil – things about his nature and his activity. Consider for example, his names, which reveal his character and work:

- Abandon (Rev 9:11): destroying angel.
- Accuser of the brethren (Rev 12:10): raising charges against the saints.
- Adversary (1 Pet 5:8): is set against the believer.
- Apollyon (Rev 9:11): destroyer.
- Beelzebub (Matt 12:24): Dung god, dealing with spiritual refuse.
- Belial (2 Cor 6:15): worthlessness.
- The Devil (Matt 4:1): False accuser, slanderer.
- Enemy (Matt 13:39): hateful and hostile.
- Liar and Father of lies (John 8:44): falsifier, misrepresenting, distorting.
- Murderer (John 8:44): killer, manslayer.
- Prince of the world (John 12:41): chief magistrate of the world order.
- Prince of devils (Matt 12:24): ruler of demons.
- Prince of the power of the air (Eph 2:2): ruler of powerful hosts in an unseen realm.
- Spirit that works in the children of disobedience (Eph 2:2): the predominate worker in those who are disobedient to God, whether knowledgeably or not.
- Tempter (1 Thess 3:5): the author of allurements to sin.

The point of all of this is that when the messengers of the truth invade territories that have been long held by the devil, they will meet with some form of resistance.

- God of this world (2 Cor 4:4): the one who is served by those who are sinners.
- Wicked One (Matt 13:19): the author of all degeneracy and dereliction.

The hosts of the devil are staggering if contemplated apart from the Lord Jesus Christ. A vast number of demons are under his control (Matt 9:34). There is a hierarchy of wicked personalities governed by him. They include:

- Principalities: These are wicked rulers with power, or authority, over regions and vast areas of the world – like Persia and Greece (Dan 10:20).
- Powers: These have authority to execute and promote wickedness among men.
- The rulers of the darkness of this world: These promote and maintain moral and spiritual ignorance, moving faithless men to live as though there was no God.
- Spiritual wickedness in high places: These promote malignity, cruelty, immorality, and other sins of this order, that especially satisfy base desires.

Satan also has a vast host of angels under his command. Whether or not they are separate from the above personalities, I do not know (Matt 25:41; Rev 12:9).

Employing this numberless conglomeration of wicked hosts, he dominates the entire world – all those who are not alive unto God: he “deceiveth the whole world” (Rev 12:9), and “the whole world lies under the sway of the wicked one” NKJV (1 John 5:19). He successfully brought down Adam and Eve, the only morally perfect adults, apart from Jesus, in the history of the world. The only way for anyone to overcome the devil is to possess One within who is greater than him (1 John 4:4). Apart from Christ and the restraining hand of God Almighty, Satan can take men captive – apparently with little effort (2 Tim 2:26).

The point of all of this is that when the messengers of the truth invade territories that have been long held by the devil, they will meet with some form of resistance. It may be single person who has been the tool of the devil in a region – like Simon the sorcerer in Samaria (Acts 8:9). The opposition may come from a group of Jews who themselves have rejected the Christ who was sent to them (Acts 9:23; 12:3; 13:45,50). Under the administration of Satan, and within the framework of the Sovereignty of God, an assault can be made against people that includes the following.

- Violently taking away all the possessions one owns (Job 1:12-17).
- Causing the children of one trusting in God to die (Job 1:18-19).
- Inflicting one with painful disease (Job 2:7).
- Delivering a painful thorn in the flesh (2 Cor 12:7).
- Provoking his vassals to stone one of God’s people (Acts 7:58-59; 14:19).
- Causing one to be bitten by a snake (Acts 28:3).

The point is that we are in a realm that requires a vital connection with the God of heaven! God has nowhere promised to insulate His people against the attacks of the rulers of this world. In fact, Jesus solemnly told His disciples, “In the world ye shall have tribulation” (John 16:33). Paul taught the believers that we have been Divinely nominated for such opposition. He sent Timothy to the brethren in Thessalonica who were suffering for the sake of Christ, in order that they might know this. “Wherefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone; and sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellowlaborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith: that no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto ” (1 Thess 3:2-3).

It is not that we have merely been appointed to suffer, for there is coming a time when we will once and for all be delivered from all suffering, pain, sorrow, affliction, etc (Rev 21:4; 22:3). However, while we are in this world, we are in a domain that is ruled by hostile forces. In the salvation of God, we are “delivered from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), and constituted citizens of heaven (Phil 3:20-21). So far as our association with this world is concerned, Jesus has chosen us “out of the world” (John 15:19), and, in a very real sense, God has taken us out of it for His own name (Acts 15:14).

THE PHILOSOPHY OF KINGDOM LABOR

There is a certain philosophy that guides laborers in the Kingdom of God. By “philosophy,” I mean an overall vision of, attitude toward, and purpose of life in Christ Jesus. It has been revealed the saved have been “created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10). These works are not our ultimate works, but those pertaining to our tenure in this world. In the world to come, we will “reign with Christ,” which will be the apex of work. However, until that time, the work that we are doing is in the world – the world that has Satan himself as its under-ruler.

First, in redemption, it is necessary to extricate us from “this present evil world,” effectually separating us from its order and dominion. In Jesus’ death, He provided the just means through which God could do this (Gal 1:4). So far as our essential life is concerned, we have been “set,” or placed, “in heavenly places” (Eph 2:6). That is the realm of Divine fellowship, as well as the maintenance of spiritual life.

However, when it comes to our work, the present domain is the world – the fallen world. Our fellowship with God and Christ is in the heavenly places, but that is not the place in which our work is presently done. From this circumstance it is apparent that the works to which we have been ordained do not have to do with changing the world, or making the world a better place to live. The world has been cursed, and it is headed for destruction (2 Pet 3:10-12). The role of the saints is not to introduce a means of sustaining the world, maintaining ecological concerns, and the likes. Whatever involvements believers may have in such things, they are not their fundamental concerns, and it is not where grace sustains the soul.

The works for which we have been ordained must be done in the world while maintaining our status in the heavenly realms. The aim is to get people out of the world, not stabilize them in it. By “get people out of,” I mean separate them from the world order or system – from its priorities and concepts. It is in this effort that we inevitably confront the devil and his hordes. This is because the works for which we have been created are disruptive to his kingdom. If we do not tend to interrupt what he is doing in the world, he will not oppose us to any significant degree. With this in mind, it is quite possible that a lack of opposition indicates that Satan is not threatened by what is being done. The only exception to this are those occasions when God grants outward rest and peace to His people, as he did in Acts 9:31.

Let it be clear that opposition by no means suggests that Satan is superior, or that his forces have the dominating power. They do have power, but it is delegated and subordinate power – delegated by the Most High God, and subordinate to His will.

Our text will expose us to the invasion of one of Satan’s strongholds. While there were faithful people there, like Lydia and her household, they were in the decided minority. We know this is the case because Satan’s followers were not hesitant to cast reproach on the work. You may remember that during Christ’s ministry, and prior to the appointed time of His death, Christ’s enemies were not able to put a hand upon Him (Mk 12:12; Lk 19:47-48). Knowing all things, Jesus drew this to the attention of His enemies (Matt 26:55; Mk 14:49). He declared to them that the only reason they were able to take hold of Him during that dark night was because it was their “hour, and the power of darkness” (Lk 22:53).

The principle is the same in our text. When the circumstance appears to find the adversary in the dominant position, it is only because they have been given leave from heaven to operate with relative and controlled freedom. However, their opposition will in no way cause the purpose of God to be pushed to the side.

AS WE WENT TO PRAYER

“ 16:16a And it came to pass, as we went to prayer . . .”

As is customary in Scripture, the significant events are reported, with the omission of mere incidentals. The objective of Scripture is not merely to pass along information. “All Scripture,” we are told, has this target: “That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17). This is accomplished by more than directives on how to live –although the Spirit does address that matter. Scripture not only contains a record of the actions and reactions of men, but of spiritual hosts as well. There is also the matter of revealing how God works, and the efforts and people that Satan employs to hinder that work.

IT CAME TO PASS

“And it came to pass . . .” Other versions read, “now it happened,” NKJV “Once,” NIV “One day,” RSV “it occurred that,” MRD and “it fortunated.” TNT

The phrase, “it came to pass” can refer to some that, in the process of time, eventuated (Gen 4:3; Ex 2:23; Judges 11:4; 2 Chron 21:19). In such a case, the occurrence is more or less incidental. However, that is not always how the phrase is used. In our text, the expression is translated from a single Greek word – Vege,neto . The lexical meaning of the word is, “to come into existence, begin to be,” THAYER “be made, be done, be brought into existence.” FRIBERG

The idea here is that what comes to pass is not mere happenstance. It is rather something that is caused to happen, not something that occurs by chance. In this usage, there is an objective behind what comes to pass. This should not surprise us, for “The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein” (Psa 24:1). In the creation of the earth, there was a Divine objective.

The Broad View

From a broad point of view the Lord says, “For thus saith the LORD that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited : I am the LORD; and there is none else” (Isa 45:18). The earth is not an end of itself – that is, it is not the real point. It was made to be inhabited. Those constituting mankind are the intended inhabitants, even though, because of the purpose being wrought in the earth, there are also unseen visitors: angels, demons, etc. Men are not intended to serve the earth, as the earth-worshippers affirm. Rather, the earth is intended to serve them.

From this broad view, the earth is the intended arena in which the purpose of God is being fulfilled. This has particular regard to His great salvation. That is why He is declared to be “working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12). In this way, and by Divine intention, God “will be exalted in the earth” (Psa 46:10). The purpose of God for the earth has not only been determined, it will be realized. It is said of the Messiah, “He shall not fail nor be discouraged, till he have set judgment in the earth: and the isles shall wait for his law” (Isa 42:4).

Everything Relates to This

Whatever is taking place in this world relates in some way to what God is working in the midst of it. In strict accord with the unseen influence that is driving what takes place, it is either promoting the cause of God, or opposing it. Eventually, what is said to “come to pass” is either contributing to the fulfillment of God’s purpose, or is set against it, and will finally be dashed to the ground and exposed for what it really is. Jesus taught us that this is even applicable at the level of words that are spoken (Matt 12:37). He also made clear that the works of men either glorify God, or are wicked in their nature, competing against both His purpose and glory (Matt 5:16: Lk 13:27).

The Wickedness of Living In Ignorance of the Purpose of God

The world was made by God and belongs to God. It was made to be inhabited by men, in order that the salvation of God might be wrought upon it. That is the way it really is. This being true, living as though the earth was the main thing is wrong. Living as though humanity is fundamental is also wrong. Both views miss the mark, and thus are actually aligned against God.

In our text, something will come to pass within the context of Paul and Silas doing the will of the Lord. Something will take place that was instigated by Satan and his powers of darkness. It will be done to present a corrupted view of what was taking place, and will be done in a most subtle way. The unseen worlds will here be openly set in conflict. They will, so to speak, collide.

These circumstances are what make self-centeredness sinful. Such a life contradicts the purpose of God, and is therefore aligned against Him, against His Son, and against His great salvation. Self-centeredness is the delusion that men live independent of outside influences greater than themselves. That supposition imagines that one’s own desires, needs, and interests are primary, and are therefore to be sought above all other things. Such a view contradicts reality. Furthermore, it has no impact on the real situation, but only puts the individual in a hopeless condition.

Self-centeredness is always wrong – but never more so what when it is within the context of religion. When God Almighty is seen as the means of realizing personal ambition, a sin of unspeakable magnitude has been committed. When the slogan of the church becomes, “We are here to help people,” rather than “We are living unto Him who died for us and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15), then men have fallen on hard times. Every valid work, whether it is ministering a cup of cold water where needed (Matt 10:42), turning men from darkness to light (Acts 26:18), or presenting one’s body as a living sacrifice to God (Rom 12:1-2), is directly related to the glory of God. Of course, for something to accrue to the glory of God, and profit the one doing it, it must be done with the Lord in mind. Further, when it comes to assisting men, we are to, as we have opportunity, “do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10). In the end, Jesus will separate the sheep from the goats upon the basis of what they did or did not do to His own “brethren” (Matt 25:40,45). This is because, of all men, they relate most directly to the Person and purpose of God. The response of men to them reveals how they actually feel about the living God.

In Our Text

In our text, something will come to pass within the context of Paul and Silas doing the will of the Lord. Something will take place that was instigated by Satan and his powers of darkness. It will be done to present a corrupted view of what was taking place, and will be done in a most subtle way. The unseen worlds will here be openly set in conflict. They will, so to speak, collide.

AS WE WENT TO PRAYER

“ . . . as we went to prayer . . .” Other versions read, “as we were going to the place of prayer,” NASB “as we were on our way to prayer.” CSB

Most versions read “place of prayer.” The phrase in the Greek reads, εἰς τὴν προσευχὴν – “into the prayer.” INTERLINEAR The idea is that they were on their way to a place associated with prayer. In Jerusalem, that was considered to be the Temple, which Jesus said was called “the house of prayer” (Matt 21:13). Peter and John once “went up together into the Temple at the hour of prayer” (Acts 3:1).

Jesus had certain places where He went to pray. Once He “went up into a mountain apart to pray,” sending the multitude away in order to do it (Matt 14:23; Mk 6:46). On another occasion, He “withdrew Himself into the wilderness to pray” (Lk 5:16). Another time He “went into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God” (Lk 6:12). When He was transfigured, He had taken Peter, James, and John, and “went to into a mountain to pray” (Lk 9:28). On the night of His betrayal, He took His disciples to Gethsemane to “pray” (Matt 26:36). Scripture apprises us that “Jesus had often met there with His disciples” (John 18:2).

Jesus spoke of some sense in which there were isolated places of prayer when He said, “But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret” (Matt 6:6). While in Babylon, Daniel prayed before an open window that faced Jerusalem (Dan 6:10). The early disciples continued in prayer in an upper room of a house (Acts 1:13-14). After Pentecost, believers gathered at the house of Mary [mother of John Mark] for prayer (Acts 12:12). On one occasion, Peter “went up upon the housetop to pray” (Acts 10:9).

A place associated with prayer, then, is not a strange thing. Such a concept presumes the interruptive nature of ordinary life, and the necessity, at times, of withdrawing from it. This should not be considered a strange thing by those professing faith in God.

It is probable that this “place” was where Paul and company had first found Lydia – at the river, “where prayer was wont to be made” (16:13). They took advantage of that place for God’s glory, continuing to meet the people there.

A WOMAN WITH A SPIRIT OF DIVINATION FOLLOWED THEM

“ 16b . . . a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying: 17 The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation.”

It is apparent that the powers of darkness are monitoring the activities of Paul and Silas. To be sure, they are operating under the government of God, yet they have been allowed a certain perimeter within which they can operate. Now, as the company – probably Paul, Silas, Timothy, and Luke (perhaps with others) – were on their way to the place of prayer, they are met by an individual.

A CERTAIN DAMSEL WITH A SPIRIT OF DIVINATION

“ . . . a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us . . .” Other versions read, “a certain slave girl with a spirit of divination,” NKJV “a slave girl who had a spirit by which she predicted the future,” NIV “a girl with a spirit which gave knowledge of the future,” BBE “a slave girl met us who had a spirit of prediction,” CSB “having a spirit of Python,” DARBY “a certain girl, having a pythonical spirit,” DOUAY “a female servant met us. She was possessed by an evil spirit that told fortunes,” GWN “a slave girl with an oracular spirit,” NAB “a slave girl met us who had a spirit that enabled her to foretell the future by supernatural means,” NET “a slave-girl who was a soothsayer,” NJB “a demon-possessed slave girl,” NLT “a certain damsel possessed with a spirit that prophesied,” TNT “a demon-possessed slave girl who was a fortune-teller,” LIVING “A slave-girl met us. She had an evil spirit in her. This spirit gave her the power to tell what would happen in the future,” IE “a slave girl met us who claimed to be inspired,” WEYMOUTH “a slave girl met us who had the gift of magical fortune-telling,” WILLIAMS “a slave girl who was possessed by a spirit of divination [claiming to foretell future events and to discover hidden knowledge],” AMPLIFIED and “a young girl who had a spirit of clairvoyance.” PHILLIPS

I have given the various translations to show the difficulty some have had translating this verse. This difficulty is not so much with the text itself, as with the implications of the text. To be sure, it does not fit handily into certain Christian traditions. Therefore, some have taken upon themselves to superimpose their theology upon the text. This has been done to ensure that the reader did not obtain a view of the text that contradicted the stereotyped theology of preference.

The Difficult Phrase

The phrase causing the difficulty for these translators is “possessed with a spirit of divination,” also translated “having a spirit of divination.” NASB Those familiar with Scripture know that a person who has a spirit other than the Holy Spirit is possessed by it, being taken captive either at times, or with consistency (Matt 8:28; 9:32; 12:22; 15:22; 17:14; Acts 8:7).

The word “possessed” comes from a word with the following lexical meaning: “to have hold . . . in the sense of wearing a garment . . . to hold fast, keep . . .to own, possess,” THAYER “having control over,” LOUW-NIDA and “to have as one’s own, to possess.” GINGRICH The spirit dominated this girl’s mind and body, at least at times, using her to express itself in its limited manner, yet superior to that of men.

These spirits caused the people to act in an unnatural manner. Some of the things they caused were as follows:

- Wildness and uncontrollable strength (Matt 8:28-29).
- Dumbness, or the inability to speak (Matt 9:32).
- Blindness and dumbness (Matt 12:22).
- Forms of grievous vexation (Matt 15:22).
- Making one lunatic, suffering from seizures, and a compulsion to jump into fire and water (Matt 17:14-15).
- Some form of uncleanness or obvious defilement (Mk 1:23).

Diviners, or those practicing divination, are not omniscient or all-knowing. Everything they say does not come to pass. But that is not owing to their lack of power or knowledge. It is rather owing to the judgment of God who thwarts their predictions (which is within the framework of their power), causing them to fall to the ground.

This circumstance of being possessed required that someone with more authority than the possessing demon cast it out. Jesus had such authority, and is declared to have regularly cast these possessing spirits out of people, commanding them to leave the one they were possessing (Matt 8:16; 9:33; 12:28; Mk 1:25,34,39; 11:15; 5:8; 9:25; Lk 4:35; 11:14).

In view of both the text and doctrine of Scripture, it is inappropriate to represent this text as saying, “who claimed to be inspired,” WEYMOUTH and “a spirit of divination [claiming to foretell future events and to discover hidden knowledge]. AMPLIFIED There are very real “powers” aligned against the work of the Lord, and it is wrong to represent them as merely claiming to have power.

The Spirit of Divination

The versions that translate “divination” as “Python” DARBY and “pythonical,” DOUAY are transliterating the Greek word, merely converting Greek characters to English letters (pu,qwna = poo-thona). In Greek mythology, this word is “the name of the Pythian serpent or dragon that dwelt in the region of Pytho at the foot of Parnassus in Phocis, and was said to have guarded the oracle of Delphi and been slain by Apollo.” THAYER However, as used in Scripture its lexical meaning is “a spirit of divination,” THAYER “fortune-telling spirit, spirit of divination,” FRIEBERG/UBS/LIDDELL-SCOTT “fortune-telling spirit, spirit of divination,” LOUW-NIDA and “a spirit of divination or prophecy, fortune-teller.” GINGRICH

It is apparent that the powers of darkness are monitoring the activities of Paul and Silas. To be sure, they are operating under the government of God, yet they have been allowed a certain perimeter within which they can operate.

There is enough said about divination in the Scripture for us to know it is a very real phenomenon that does NOT come from God, even though it is in ultimate subjection to Him. Whatever power or knowledge is evinced in divination, it is unlawful before God, and is soundly condemned.

- “There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination , or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, Or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer” (Deut 18:10-11).

- “For these nations, which thou shalt possess, hearkened unto observers of times, and unto diviners : but as for thee, the LORD thy God hath not suffered thee so to do” (Deut 18:14).

- “And the Philistines called for the priests and the diviners , saying, What shall we do to the ark of the LORD? tell us wherewith we shall send it to his place. And they said, If ye send away the ark of the God of Israel, send it not empty; but in any wise return him a trespass offering: then ye shall be healed, and it shall be known to you why his hand is not removed from you” (1 Sam 6:2-3).

- “And Saul disguised himself, and put on other raiment, and he went, and two men with him, and they came to the woman by night: and he said, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar spirit, and bring me him up, whom I shall name unto thee. And the woman said unto him, Behold, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath cut off those that have familiar spirits, and the wizards, out of the land: wherefore then layest thou a snare for my life, to cause me to die?” (1 Sam 28:8-9).

- “And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire, and used divination and enchantments, and sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger” (2 Kgs 17:17).

- “That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish” (Isa 44:25).

- “Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination , and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart” (Jer 14:14).

- “Therefore hearken not ye to your prophets, nor to your diviners , nor to your dreamers, nor to your enchanters, nor to your sorcerers, which speak unto you, saying, Ye shall not serve the king of Babylon” (Jer 27:9).

- “For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel; Let not your prophets and your diviners , that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed” (Jer 29:8).

- “For there shall be no more any vain vision nor flattering divination within the house of Israel” (Ezek 12:24).

- “For the idols have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they comfort in vain: therefore they went their way as a flock, they were troubled, because there was no shepherd” (Zech 10:2).

Diviners, or those practicing divination, are not omniscient or all-knowing. Everything they say does not come to pass. But that is not owing to their lack of power or knowledge. It is rather owing to the judgment of God who thwarts their predictions (which is within the framework of their power), causing them to fall to the ground. Thus we read of the Lord making “diviners mad” by frustrating what they predict (Isa 44:25). This is what makes them “divine a lie” (21:29). Sometimes what they move men to say actually does come to pass. However, such works are only the prelude to a call to follow other gods. Therefore it is written, “If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth thee a sign or a wonder, and the sign or the wonder come to pass, whereof he spake unto thee, saying, Let us go after other gods, which thou hast not known, and let us serve them; Thou shalt not hearken unto the words of that prophet, or that dreamer of dreams: for the LORD your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul” (Deut 13:1-3). Therefore, there are times when such spirits are given leave to speak things that contradict the truth in order to test those who profess allegiance to God. Other times, God sends “strong delusion” through such spirits because men have not received the love of the truth (2 Thess 2:11). The prophets referred to this as God choosing “their delusions” (Isa 66:4).

False prophets not only say what is false, they do so while under the power of Satanic influence. When it comes to the propagation of what is not right and true before the Lord, we are dealing with more than intellectual ignorance or misunderstanding. This is why Paul referred to “deceiving spirits and doctrines of demons” NKJV as a very real phenomenon among the sons of men (1 Tim 4:1).

This was a very real opponent, dominated by a very real spirit who had very real power – subordinate power, to be sure, but power that was transcendent to mere human power or aptitude. That is, all of this was inferior, to be sure – but not inferior to men.

When, therefore, we read of a woman who was possessed by “a spirit of divination,” we are to understand that a form of substantive opposition confronted Paul and those with him. This was a very real opponent, dominated by a very real spirit who had very real power – subordinate power, to be sure, but power that was transcendent to mere human power or aptitude. That is, all of this was inferior, to be sure – but not inferior to men. It was actually a power greater than flesh and blood, else the spirit could not have “possessed” this woman.

To be “possessed” is to be dominated by, so that this wicked spirit expressed itself through this slave girl.

SHE WAS A SOURCE OF PROFIT TO HER MASTERS

“ . . . which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying . . .” Other versions read, “who brought her masters much profit by fortune-telling,” NKJV “she earned a great deal of money for her owners by fortune-telling,” NIV “whose masters made great profit from her power,” BBE “brought much profit to her masters by prophesying,” DARBY “brought to her masters much gain by divining,” DOUAY “gave her masters much vantage by divining,” GENEVA and “made a lot of money for her masters by foretelling the future.” NJB

The word “soothsaying” is translated from a word meaning, “to deliver an oracle, prophesy, divine,” THAYER “used of demonic divination in the NT tell fortunes, predict future events,” FRIBERG “tell fortunes, predict the future,” UBS “to function as a more or less professional predictor of future events for the sake of a fee - 'to tell fortunes,’” LOUW-NIDA and “prophesy, divine, give an

oracle.” GINGRICH

Soothsaying and soothsayers are also condemned by God. You may remember that Baalam is referred to as “the soothsayer” (Josh 13:22). God is said to have forsaken “the house of Jacob:” because they were “soothsayers like the Philistines” (Isa 2:6). Babylon was noted for its “soothsayers” (Dan 2:27; 4:7; 5:7,11). God spoke of cutting of witchcraft out of the cities so they would have “no more soothsayers” (Mic 5:12).

Soothsayers deal with unlawful knowledge – unlawful because its source is from the wicked one. The fact that this woman provided a good income for her masters suggests that what she foretold was noted for coming to pass. I hardly see how she could have been a source of excellent income if everything she foretold fell to the ground.

We must learn from this that there is a realm of knowledge that is extraordinary, yet is not right. Things that are declared may be buttressed by very real circumstances, or some form of logic that seems to be flawless. I personally consider some of the sciences of our day to fall into this category – the chief of which is psychiatry. It boasts of an understanding of the human psyche, and what motivates people. It boasts of a knowledge of mental and emotional distinctions, and teaches men to shape their understanding and relationships with mortals upon that basis. However, such knowledge, however valid it may appear to be is not based upon foundational reality – namely, the fact that God made man, and that man is accountable to Him. How can any body of knowledge be correct that is not based upon that foundation?

But let us move on, and see how this “spirit of divination” moves this woman to speak.

SHE FOLLOWED THEM, CRYING OUT

“The same followed Paul and us, and cried . . .” Other versions read, “she kept on crying out,” NASB “Paul and the rest of us, shouting,” NIV “While she followed Paul and us, she would cry out,” RSV “she kept screaming,” CJB “she followed along behind us shouting,” LIVING “followed Paul and us everywhere. She said loudly,” IE “kept following Paul and the rest of us, shrieking,” WILLIAMS “crying out again and again,” MONTGOMERY and “shouting loudly.” AMPLIFIED

The word “cried,” as used here, means “to cry out, cry aloud, vociferate [utter loudly, shout, cry out loudly] . . . call out aloud, speak with a loud voice,” THAYER Thus, the “cry” of reference involved screaming out, shrieking loudly, and shouting. Further, as the tense of the verb indicated, she was doing this repeatedly, following Paul and those with him wherever they went – particularly on this occasion, when they were going to the place of prayer.

Also, note that she was crying out after PAUL, and those who were with him. As in Lystra, he was perceived as the “chief speaker” (Acts 14:12). It was his message that had provoked the “spirit” that possessed this “damsel,” or young female slave.

WHAT SHE SAID

“ . . . saying, These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation.” Other versions read, “who proclaim to us the way of salvation,” NKJV “who are proclaiming to you the way of salvation,” NASB “who are telling you the way to be saved,” NIV “who proclaim to you a way of salvation,” RSV/NAB/YLT/ISV/WILLIAMS and “tell you how to have your sins forgiven.” LIVING

On the surface, this appears to be a statement that is precisely true. First, they were servants of “the Most High God” – a phrase that must have caught the attention of the local citizenry. In this expression the definite article “the” is used: i.e. “THE Most High God” (tou/ qeou/ tou/ u`yi, stou).

Literally, this would read, The [tou] God, The [tou] Highest, or Most High. That certainly appears to be true.

However, when it comes to the reference to the “way of salvation,” the definite article is not present (o`do.n swthri,aj). This phrase literally reads, “ A way of salvation,” for the Greek word o`do.n means “a way,” in distinction from “the way.” THAYER/FRIBERG This may appear to be only a technical point.

When Jesus said He was “THE way,” the definite article was used (h` o`do.j). The same grammatical construction is found in Christ’s reference to “ THE way” that is broad and leads to destruction (h` o`do.j – Matt 7:13), and “THE way that leads to life” (h` o`do.j –Matt 7:14). It is also used in John the Baptists expression, “THE way of the Lord” (th.n o`do.n – Mk 1:3), as well as the reference to Apollo being “instructed in THE way of the Lord” (th.n o`do.n – Acts 18:25). When the definite article is used [THE way], it indicates exclusiveness – there is no other way. When it is not used [A way], one of many ways is specified.

Several versions do reflect this meaning: “a way.” RSV/NAB/YLT/ISV/WILLIAMS/LITV While this is not a grammatical matter to emphasize to the point of distraction, it does seem to me that it merits some thoughtful consideration. While the words this woman shrieked out were correct, they were not thoroughly correct. Technically, they allowed for competing ways, whereas there is, in fact, only one way of salvation. Peter made this clear when he declared, “Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved ” (Acts 4:12). He declared the same to those present at the house of Cornelius: “And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is He which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead. To Him give all the prophets witness, that through His name whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:42-43). Paul declared the same when He wrote, “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ ” (1 Cor 3:11).

But none of this is mentioned by this woman with the spirit of divination – she makes no reference to Jesus Christ at all.

It is certainly not that the dark world of wicked spirits are not aware of Jesus, and precisely who He is. An “unclean spirit” once said to Jesus, “ Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God ” (Mark 1:24). Jesus commanded that spirit, “Hold thy peace, and come out of him” (Mk 1:25). Unclean spirits cried out to Jesus, “Thou art the Son of God!” (Mark 3:11). Jesus immediately commanded them “that they should not make Him known” (Mk 3:11). Perhaps the “spirit” in our text was obeying the commandment of Jesus. I suspect that this could very well have been the case.

Although this “spirit of divination” did not refer to Christ Jesus, we will find that he was out of order making any reference to God or His great salvation. By so speaking, this spirit has associated the salvation of God with the power of darkness, as though it was something, concerning which, knowledge could be obtained from demons.

However, we know this is not the case, for even holy angels are unable to decipher the mysteries associated with salvation, even though, unlike evil spirits, they have a desire to look into, or examine them (1 Pet 1:12). You may be sure that whatever knowledge this spirit had regarding the salvation of God and those who declare it, it was not effective knowledge. It could not result in obtaining salvation, for that requires the involvement of Jesus Christ.

THIS CONTINUED FOR MANY DAYS

“ 18 And this did she many days. But Paul, being grieved, turned and said to the spirit, I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her. And he came out the same hour.”

Here we are exposed to the tenacity of wicked spirits, as well as the effect of their activity upon the sensitive souls of the elect of God.

SHE DID THIS FOR MANY DAYS

“And this did she many days.” Other versions read, “she continued doing this for many days,” NASB “she kept this up for many days,” NIV “she did on a number of days,” BBE “she did this day after day,” NJB “this went on day after day,” NLT and “This she persisted in for a considerable time.” WEYMOUTH

It appears that wherever Paul and those with him went, this woman followed them shrieking out these words: “These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation.” The words were coming out of her mouth, but they were actually the expression of a wicked spirit – a “spirit of divination.” That spirit had no power to restrain Paul from preaching the Gospel, and therefore engaged in a kind of unholy mockery. Notice, that the woman’s masters, who knew that she had a “spirit of divination” made no inquiry into “the way of salvation.” The words of the wicked spirit were impotent. These masters did not ask Paul and those with him to come into their houses, as Lydia did. Further, there is no evidence that the citizenry of Philippi who were exposed to this expression pursued Paul to ask concerning the salvation of which he spake. And why was this so? Why didn’t the people who heard this woman screaming out run to Paul and ask about “the way of salvation?” It was because the word spoken by this woman was powerless. It could solicit no interest in the salvation of God, because the power of God was not in it. The Kingdom of God “is not in word, but in power” (1 Cor 4:20) – and that power was not given to the words of this woman who was “possessed with a spirit of divination.”

PAUL WAS GRIEVED WITH THE SITUATION

“But Paul, being grieved . . .” Other versions read, “greatly annoyed,” NKJV “became so troubled,” NIV “very much annoyed,” NRSV “sore troubled,” ASV “greatly disturbed,” CJB “greatly aggravated,” CSB “being distressed,” DARBY “was indignant,” MRD “was exasperated,” NJB “not content,” PNT “in great distress,” LIVING “This bothered Paul,” IE “wearied out,” WEYMOUTH “wore out,” MONTGOMERY “being sorely annoyed and worn out,” AMPLIFIED and “burst of irritation.” PHILLIPS

The situation was a grievous one, to be sure. Some of its irritating qualities could be found in the following.

- An association was being made between Paul and a woman possessed by a “spirit of divination.”
- The woman was a source of income to faithless men, who were given over to greed and idolatry.
- Here was a woman who was being dominated by, and in bondage to, the powers of darkness.
- A commentary was being made concerning Paul and his message by a spirit aligned with Satan.
- Because of the appearance of this shrieking woman, and the environment it was creating wherever he went.
- Because Paul knew the source of this intrusion, and the wicked intension of the devil who was behind it.

- Because it was disruptive, detracting from both his person and ministry.

All of this, and more, was a source of grief to Paul. It was an irritation, annoyance, and source of vexation. The word “grieved” has the following lexical meaning: “be troubled, displeased, offended, pained . . . worked up,” THAYER “much grieved,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “to be worn out.” LEH

There is a certain sensitivity created by faith that causes the heart to react to influences to which it is subjected. Things relating to God, Christ, the truth, and God’s great salvation, bring comfort, edification, and refreshment to the “new heart.” The things that have the world as their center, and are promoted by the devil and his subordinates are abrasive, causing irritation and grief. This is the result of the clash of the temporal and the eternal, the good and the evil, the righteous and the unrighteous. The true spirituality of a person can be measured by the impact of these influences upon the heart.

As for Paul, the confrontation of this “spirit of divination,” that speaks out things that are technically true, is a source of vexation. To the godly, the container in which truth comes is a vital matter. If Satan quotes the Bible, as he did to Jesus (Matt 4:6-7), it will not, and should not, be received. This is because when he or his hosts appear to speak the truth, there is always a wicked ulterior motive behind it. Satan’s use of Scripture, as he did with Jesus, always constitutes a temptation, never edification. This goes for all of his “ministers” as well (2 Cor 2:13-15).

PAUL SPEAKS TO THE SPIRIT

“ . . . turned and said to the spirit, I command thee . . .” Other versions read, “I charge thee,” ASV “I give you orders,” BBE “I order you,” CJB and “I enjoin thee.” DARBY Notice the authority with which Paul speaks: “command,” “charge,” “give you orders,” “order,” and “enjoin.” The word “command” comes from a word that means, “issuing a directive from an authoritative source command, give (strict) orders.” FRIBERG This is not the expression of a preference that may or may not be rejected. It is not a word that can be obeyed or disobeyed. Power accompanies this word that renders the one to whom it is directed as impotent to reject or disobey that word. It is true that there are commandments issued in a moral and human arena in which they can be obeyed or disobeyed, received or rejected. However, this is not that kind of word. Rather, it is the kind of word that will, in the end, be spoken to all pretenders: “Depart from me” (Matt 7:23). It is the kind of word Jesus spoke to evil spirits when He said, “Hold thy peace, and come out of him” (Mk 1:25). And again Jesus said to a “foul spirit,” “Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him” (Mk 9:25). Such commands cannot be contested, resisted, or disobeyed. It simply is not possible. That is the kind of commandment that Paul spoke.

It is possible to say words like this, yet lack the authority required for them to actually take place. The sons of Sceva found this to be true when they said these words over those who had evil spirits: “We exorcize you by the Jesus whom Paul preaches” NKJV (Acts 19:13). They soon found out that the world of evil spirits know who they must obey. Before soundly trouncing these men, the evil spirit said to them, “Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?” (Acts 19:15). The fact that Satan’s hosts do recognize those to whom power has been given will be confirmed in this text.

A Word of Caution

There are some who take it upon themselves to speak to Satan and his hosts as though they have been given power to do so. Such people often do not appear to be alarmed when their word is not obeyed, and the condition they are rebuking remains. However, when Satan’s hosts do not honor a word addressed to them, it is because that word is not backed by Divine authority. Such words should not be spoken. There are sectarian circles where such feigned speaking is common. However, all such speaking is foolishness, and can even prove dangerous, as the sons of Sceva can testify.

IN THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST

“ . . . in the name of Jesus Christ . . .” Other versions read, “by the authority of Jesus Christ.” IE The other forty-one versions that I have read the same as the Authorized Text: “in the name of Jesus.” Other occasions when this phrase was used include the following.

- COMMAND TO BE BAPTIZED. “Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost” (Acts 2:38).

- COMMAND FOR A LAME MAN TO WALK. “Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk” (Acts 3:6).

- APOSTLES COMMANDED NOT TO PREACH. “And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus” (Acts 4:18). “And to him they agreed: and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus , and let them go” (Acts 5:40).

- PREACHING. “But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus ” (Acts 9:27).

The phrase “in the name of the Lord Jesus” is also used in reference to other matters (Acts 8:16; 9:29; 19:5; 1 Cor 6:11; Col 3:17).

This phraseology shows the criticality of the Person of Jesus Christ. Everything in the Kingdom revolves around Him.

He is the context of all valid preaching, teaching, and labor. He is the One who has established the borders of acceptance – both of persons and the work that they do. It is His Person that empowers and sanctifies. Nothing that cannot be traced back to Him can be valid in the work of the Lord.

That all appears plain enough, and yet there is an alarming absence of Jesus in much of what is being done by those professing to represent Him. There are practices and programs that are being done in the name of worldly wisdom, and appeals are made to that wisdom. Sometimes it takes the form of psychological principles, or some other form of human authority or wisdom. Some attempt to direct the people of God upon the basis of their genetic make-up, or family heritage, or emotional distinctions. However, there is no spiritual power in such things, for they did not originate with Jesus Christ.

“All power in heaven and earth” has been given to Christ Jesus (Matt 28:18). It ought to be glaringly obvious that to make an appeal to any other kind of power or authority in matters pertaining to life and godliness is transgression birthed by unbelief.

Any effective use of the name of Jesus assumes an actual identity with Him – a direct identity. The sons of Sceva sought to do something in the name of Jesus “whom Paul preacheth” (Acts 19:13). The demons refused to honor their word, because they were not, through faith and rebirth, directly related to Jesus. How much less are those related to Jesus who claim association to Him through a human institutions or a humanly devised theological tenet.

She was under the control of a wicked spirit, and there was not a thing she could do about it. Paul, however, having his life “hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3), and been given authority by the King of kings, was able to do something about this situation.

COME OUT OF HER

“ . . . to come out of her.” Other versions read, “go out from her,” DOUAY “leave that woman,” NJB “come forth from her,” YLT and “leave this girl alone.” CEV

The “spirit of divination” had taken over the body of this young woman, and was using it for evil purposes. Her will had nothing whatsoever to do with the circumstance. She was an example of someone “taken captive” by the powers of darkness (2 Tim 2:26). We are given no explanations concerning any reason for this circumstance. It is enough that we know there are very real situations in life that are not created by human submission. Some are the result of being overpowered by dark powers.

It ought to be noted, that this overpowering cannot take place in those who are Christ’s, and are living by faith. The Scriptures are clear on this point: “We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not ” (1 John 5:18). This by no means suggests that Satan and his hosts do not desire to overcome those in Christ. It is rather that they are not able to do so. This is because “Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is He that is in you , than he that is in the world” (1 John 4:4).

However, this was not the circumstance of this young woman. She was under the control of a wicked spirit, and there was not a thing she could do about it. Paul, however, having his life “hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3), and been given authority by the King of kings, was able to do something about this situation.

In, what I conceive to be a burst of insight accompanied with the confidence of a strong faith, Paul commanded this spirit to leave the woman. He ordered that spirit to come out of her.

THE SPIRIT CAME OUT OF HER

“And he came out the same hour.” Other versions read, “came out that very hour,” NKJV “came out that very moment,” NASB “at that moment,” NIV “came out right away,” CSB “As Paul said this, the evil spirit left her,” GWN “came out of her at once,” NET “went out of her then and there,” NJB “instantly it left her,” NLT and “came out immediately,” WEYMOUTH

There was not an ounce of opposition from this spirit! It recognized the association of Paul with the One to whom “authorities and powers” have been made subject (1 Pet 3:22). Therefore, that spirit came out immediately, or at that very moment. The idea is that while Paul was speaking the words, the “spirit of divination” left the woman, making it’s exit with not so much as a single word of objection. That spirit yielded to its King – a subjection that is found in all spirits, be they human or from the unseen world.

WHEN THE MEANS OF GAIN WAS TAKEN AWAY

“ 19 And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the marketplace unto the rulers.”

As soon as this evil spirit left the woman, she was of no further value to her masters. All of the things provoked by this spirit left when the “spirit of divination” came out of her.

It is a principle that holds true under all circumstances, and within all people: when the source of either good or evil is no longer present, the fruit of that source is also gone. As long as the source is present, the work will continue. This is why the following admonitions are given.

- “Quench not the Spirit” . . . “Grieve not the Spirit” (1 Thess 5:19; Eph 4:30).
- “Neither give place to the devil,” or “do not give the devil an opportunity” NASB (Eph 4:27).

When the Spirit has been stifled, the fruit of the Spirit cannot be produced or successfully emulated. When a place for the devil has been given, his work is inevitable. Conversely, when the devil is resisted in faith, he cannot do his work within the individual, but takes his flight (1 Pet 5:8-9; James 4:7).

HER MASTERS

“And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone . . .” Other versions read, “their hope of profit was gone,” NKJV “their hope of money was gone,” NIV “their hope of making money was gone,” NRSV “what had come out was any further prospect of profit for them,” CJB “hopes of wealth were now shattered,” NLT “These men knew that they could no longer use her to make money,” IE and “their hope of making money out of her had disappeared.” PHILLIPS

It is evident from this text that Satanic power can be exploited by wicked men. That is because such men are also under the control of the devil. Therefore, the owners of this slave girl capitalized on her powers of divination. It appeared as though the evil spirit “possessed” the girl from within, working freely through her, and these men were masters over her in the flesh, or from without.

Here was a kind of evil spirit that permitted men to control the one it possessed. This was not true of all people “possessed” by an evil spirit. For example, the demon that controlled the wild man of Gadara did not allow any person to tame or exploit him. No person could publically feature that poor man as a source of personal income. He could not be “tamed” by any man, and no one dared to come through the territory that he occupied (Matt 8:28; Mk 5:3-4). Again, a certain man had a son who was possessed by a “dumb spirit.” The spirit would, it appears, take the child at will and throw him into convulsions. It would also cause the boy to fall into fire and water, apparently seeking to destroy him (Matt 17:15; Lk 9:39). In such cases, a sense of helplessness registered on all who were involved. There was certainly no way for men to make money by capitalizing on the boy who were possessed.

In our text, however, the evil spirit did not work to produce fear, but intrigue and interest. There was actually an appeal to human advantage. What is more, on the surface it appeared as though this girl was actually being controlled by her human masters.

Now, however, it becomes clear that these men had no power at all. Their use of this girl was abruptly terminated when the evil spirit left her. What is more, all of this was very apparent to them. We are not told how they knew the girl had lost her powers. The expulsion of this spirit was attended by a public and audible word by Paul. There must have also been some outward phenomenon that made the ejection of that spirit very apparent. The woman was no longer “possessed,” and her masters knew it. She had been screaming out as she followed Paul and company. Perhaps now she was calm and docile, and, like the Gadarene demonic, very apparently in her “right mind” (Mk 5:15).

Something to Learn

In working salvation in the midst of the earth, because the thrust of attention is placed on the turning of men from the power of Satan unto God, there is a certain tolerance of sinful men that is designed to confirm their depravity.

All of Satan’s hosts serve his interests, but not in the same way. Satan’s first temptation was intellectual – moving Eve to think about a matter in a distorted manner. His next recorded move was quite different, provoking Cain to murder his brother (Gen 4:8; 1 John 3:12). He once moved David to count how many soldiers were in his army (1 Chron 21:1). Again, he moved Ananias and Sapphira to lie about the amount of money they gave to the church (Acts 5:3). There are also demons who promote false doctrine (1 Tim 4:1), while others, like the spirit in this text, promote divining, or fortune-telling.

The world of evil is certainly not one in which men are to traffic. Yet, those who refuse Christ, or do not live by faith, are cast into an arena in which it is not possible to estimate what they will do. Such poor souls are described as “children of disobedience” in whom Satan works at will (Eph 2:1-2; 2 Tim 2:26).

THEY CAUGHT PAUL AND SILAS

“ . . . they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them . . .” Other versions read, “they seized Paul and Silas and dragged,” NKJV “laid hold on,” ASV “took Paul and Silas, pulling them,” BBE “apprehending Paul and Silas, brought,” DOUAY and “grabbed.” GWN

The word “caught” means to “take possession of, overtake, to seize upon.” THAYER In this case, Paul and Silas were apprehended by those with hostile intentions. This is a most unique situation. The devil was driven out by a word from Paul, and yet evil men were not held at bay. Note that these men did not fear Paul and Silas, even though they had been stripped of their means of income by a command from Paul. A wicked spirit obeyed Christ’s servant, but evil men were moved against him.

There is a reason for this seemingly contradictory experience. Jesus revealed that his purpose for entry into the world had fundamentally to do with men – not the unseen world. “To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice” (John 18:37). In His death He did “destroy the devil” (Heb 2:14), and in His cross “spoiled principalities and powers” (Col 2:15). However, the primary work regarded reconciling men to God (2 Cor 5:18-20).

In working salvation in the midst of the earth, because the thrust of attention is placed on the turning of men from the power of Satan unto God, there is a certain tolerance of sinful men that is designed to confirm their depravity. Their nature is on display in order to highlight the depth of their fall, as well as the glory of salvation. Men will be allowed to seemingly dominate Paul and Silas, while an evil spirit will not be allowed to dominate a slave girl. If it all appears unjust, remember that Satan nor his hosts could lay a hand on Jesus, but the Jews and Pilate were allowed to do so – even being motivated by the hosts who were previously restrained.

UNTO THE RULERS

“ . . . into the marketplace unto the rulers.” Other versions read, “to the authorities,” NKJV “to face the authorities,” NIV “to the market square to face authorities,” CJB “before the magistrates.” DARBY

As I understand it, the “marketplace” was what we would call the town square. It was structured around the civil court, like older town squares were build around the court house. It was also the place for public assemblies, debating, and trials. THAYER On the surface, this appears a bit incongruous. The powers of darkness are rendered powerless, and yet human adversaries appear to maintain their authority.

To the mind of the flesh, this all appears incongruous – the spirit of divination was forced to leave, being unable to resist Paul. However, these men, possessing less power than that spirit, take hold of Paul and Silas.

SOMETHING TO REMEMBER

First, the earth is important ONLY because it is the environment in which God is working salvation. As it is written, “For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12). It is quite true that God has made the earth “to be inhabited” (Isa 45:18). However, the salvation He is working directly relates to those inhabitants. Other forms of life are in the earth, including vegetation and animal life – but they are not why the world was made. Their presence is incidental, and they were ultimately made for man (Gen 1:29-30; 1 Cor 6:13; 1 Tim 4:3). Portions of the creation that have no life in themselves, are also part of what has been provided for man. In fact, in the end, when sin shall have been rooted out, and a new heavens and earth are present wherein dwells righteousness, it will all be given to redeemed humanity (Psa 37:9; Isa 60:21; Matt 5:5; Rom 4:13).

The kingdom in all of its greatness and glory will be given to “the saints of the Most High.” As it is written, “And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey Him” (Dan 7:27). Some versions read, “and all dominions shall serve and obey THEM.” NRSV/RSV/CJB/GWN/JPB/TNK/LIVING Ultimately, we understand that all dominions will honor and obey God Himself. However, the saints of God will be His ordained representatives. They will “judge the world,” and “angels” as well (1 Cor 6:2-3). They will be given “power over the nations” (Rev 2:26), and will “reign with” Christ (2 Tim 2:12).

This is why Jesus spoke of “the world to come,” declaring that those who forsook all to follow Him would inherit “eternal life” in its fulness at the revelation of that world (Mk 10:30; Lk 18:30). This was the subject of apostolic exposition (Heb 2:6; 2 Pet 3:13). It is held out as the consummate blessing, when there will be no more repercussions for following Jesus (Rev 21:1,4; 22:3).

And what does this have to do with our text? Everything! If it is true that the objective of our salvation is ahead of us, then we ought to reason that we are not to expect the best of what is promised while we are in this world. The word spoken to Israel is true for us also, and even to a deeper extent: “Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest: because it is polluted, it shall destroy you, even with a sore destruction” (Micah 2:10). Whatever advantages the things belonging to this world may appear to have, they are not permanent, and they bring no increase in heavenly status.

Charlatans may proclaim that God wants us to have “the best of this world,” but that is not what the Holy Spirit has revealed. In fact, this world is where we receive the worst we shall ever experience. This is because the world is “not worthy” of the presence of God’s people (Heb 11:38). This is why some of those who have lived by faith “were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented” (Heb 11:37). The world treated them harshly because they were obviously “not of the world,” and therefore “confessed they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth” (John 15:19; 17:14,16; Heb 11:13).

This should not be difficult for us to receive. When the ultimate Man, Jesus Christ, was in the world, He precisely reflected the nature of God, for “the fulness of the Godhead” dwelt in Him “bodily” (Col 1:19; 2:9). Nowhere is there a record of His enemies marveling at His wealth or His possessions. Of old time, the Philistines envied Isaac because he flourished in the land (Gen 26:14). The Queen of Sheba marveled at the staggering wealth of Solomon. Although she had heard much about his opulence, yet when she saw it for herself she exclaimed, “Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard” (1 Kgs 10:7).

Yet, in all the records of Jesus’ life on earth – 88 chapters of Scripture – there is not a syllable that so describes Jesus. In apostolic doctrine it is written that in coming to the earth Jesus “became poor” (2 Cor 8:9). The “riches” that the redeemed enjoy because of Christ’s condescension are not the riches of this world, all of which are to pass away. Rather, they are “the riches of His goodness” (Rom 2:4), “the riches of His glory” (Rom 9:23), “the riches of His grace” (Eph 1:7; 2:7), “the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God” (Rom 11:33), and “all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Col 2:3). Who among us does not know the truth of these things? Apostolic doctrine speaks of being “rich in good works ” (1 Tim 6:18), and “rich in faith ” (James 2:5). Those believers who are rich in this worlds goods are admonished, “that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate” (1 Tim 6:17-18). Those who are not “rich in this world,” yet desire to be, are told: “they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition . For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows” (1 Tim 6:9-10).

Even though it looks as though it is successful, what the enemies of God do is only tentative, and it cannot impact upon the purpose of God.

Whatever you may think about such texts, it must be acknowledged that they are certainly not promoting the notion of wealth among believers. How can a person reconcile not being of the world, yet pursuing its wealth? How can any individual justify a consistent quest for what is destined to pass away? What can really be said of the person who imagines they can prepare for the coming of the Lord by amassing worldly wealth, or achieving status in the earth? Whatever may be said in justification of worldly prosperity and popularity, both will immediately pass away at the moment of death, or the coming of the Lord – and they are even subject to obsolescence before either of those events.

THIS IS WHY MEN SOMETIMES APPEAR TO HAVE THE UPPER HAND

It is the circumstance of being strangers in the world, and heirs of the world to come, that accounts for the seeming success of the enemies of God’s people. This is why the Jewish leaders could imprison Peter and John. It is why Stephen’s foes could stone him to death. It is why early believers were scattered by a persecution. It is why Herod could behead James. And, it is why these offended business men could lay their hands on Paul and Silas and drag them into the city square on trumped up charges. If they were not strangers in this world, or if their message had catered to the fickle whims of the people, this would never have happened.

Even though it looks as though it is successful, what the enemies of God do is only tentative, and it cannot impact upon the purpose of God. Ultimately “the deceived and the deceiver are His” (Job 12:16), and God will use them for His glory. When what they do no longer works to that end, He will either remove them as He did Pharaoh and Herod, or their cause will dry up.

The ungodly, in their most formidable appearance, are ignoble vessels – and they are being used by God (2 Tim 2:20). If it is Pharaoh, rising up to oppose the people of God, it is God working behind the scenes. He “raised up” Pharaoh “to show” His power in him (Ex 9:16; Rom 9:17). If it is the Gentiles, Herod, Pontus Pilate, and the Jewish rulers rising against Christ, it is only to do whatever God had determined to be done. As it is written, “For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done ” (Acts 4:27-28). Peter also declared this very truth on the day of Pentecost, affirming that Jesus was “delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God” (Acts 2:23).

THINGS ARE NOT OUT OF CONTROL

When the enemy appears to have the upper hand, it is not to be viewed as though things were out of control. In such cases, God has not ceased to work salvation in the midst of the earth. He is still doing what He wills “among the inhabitants of the earth,” as well as “in the army of heaven” (Dan 4:35). He is working in Stephen’s death as well as Peter and John’s deliverance. God’s ultimate will is being done, whether in the beheading of James or the rescue Peter from the same despot.

This is because God's purpose involves more than what is happening upon the earth. While He works among men, He is also making known His "manifold wisdom" to "principalities and powers in heavenly places" (Eph 3:10). Additionally, He is confirming to His people, by means of very real experiences, that His strength is "made perfect in weakness," and that when they are "weak," that is the precise moment when they are really "strong" (2 Cor 12:9-10). The truth of the matter is that Christ's power rests, or dwells, upon us when we are weak, or have no power of our own. There is also the testimony of the reaction of the faithful to difficulty and oppression – such as the patience of Job as seen by succeeding generations (James 5:11). There was also the violent death of Stephen, as seen by Saul of Tarsus (Acts 22:20).

Now, within that context, the seeming success of the enemy looks quite different. It is good for us to refuse to attach too much significance to our own well being. Life is difficult enough, without going through it imagining that we are the center of Divine attention. That is not a proper view of life.

THE CHARGE BROUGHT AGAINST THEM

“ 20 And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city, 21 And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.”

Because the owners of a slave girl have lost their source of income – and for no other reason – that have dragged Paul and Silas before the “magistrates,” or political officials.

THEY BROUGHT THEM TO THE MAGISTRATES

“And brought them to the magistrates . . .” Other versions read, “the authorities,” BBE , “the judges,” CJB “the governors,” GENEVA “the officers,” TNT “the leaders,” IE “the praeters [lower level Roman judicial function],” WEYMOUTH and “chiefs of the police court.” WILLIAMS

These men were charged with maintaining civil order, something that every government of note is constrained to do. Disorder and civil disobedience have been universally viewed as not only disruptive, but conducive to the rise of hostility and insurrection.

It ought to be noted that neither Christ, nor any of His disciples or representatives, ever took up a political cause, or were noted for political disturbance. If social disruption occurred during their ministry, it was always the effects of the preaching of the Gospel and any signs that may have attended it. No man of God has ever set out to overthrow a worldly government, or cause social unrest and discontent. In God's work, when social agitation occurred, it was always because of a clash of the lie and the truth, life and death, and the powers of darkness versus the light of truth.

Worldly Rulers Are Generally Consistent in Their Stand Against the Truth

While it may not be popular to so affirm, the rulers of this world are generally noted for their opposition to the truth. This is owing to the nature of this world and all power that is related to it. Although governmental power is ordained of God, it eventually proves to be hostile against the Lord. Any exception to this is precisely that – an exception.

The Psalmist reminded us that “The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against his anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us” (Psa 2:2-3). This found its ultimate revelation in the conspiracy of political and religious rulers who opposed the Lord's Christ.

God is set forth as being “terrible to the kings of the earth” (Psa 76:12). That is, He is one whom such rulers fear – a fear that causes them to withdraw from Him, and strike out against Him when they are faced squarely with His truth as declared by men.

THE CHARGES

How will these men present their case? Will they admit that Paul had forced an evil spirit to leave the girl who was providing their means of income? Will they confess the superiority of the name of Jesus. Indeed not, for their hearts are corrupt, and they will not acknowledge what they know to be true.

They Are Jews

“ . . . saying, These men, being Jews . . . ”

The Jewish race is the only one of its kind. Its sole distinction is its identity with God – and that identity was one of His own making. Jews are not so identified because of their land, for they obtained their land after they were a people.

The word “Jews,” and its various forms (“Jew” [32], “Jewish” [1], “Jewess” [2], and “Jewry” [3]) is mentioned 275 times in Scripture – with “Jews” referenced 258 times. The word “Jews” has the following lexical meaning: “belonging to the Jewish race . . . Jewish as respects birth, race, religion; a Jew,” THAYER and “Jew in respect to race or religion as opposed to non-Jews.” FRIBERG

The Jewish race is the only one of its kind. Its sole distinction is its identity with God – and that identity was one of His own making. Jews are not so identified because of their land, for they obtained their land after they were a people. They do have a unique language that is not spoken by any other people group – “the Hebrew tongue” (John 5:2; Acts 21:40; 22:2; 26:14; Rev 9:11; 16:16).

In Scripture, the Jews are a race of people associated with God Himself, Abraham, and a land – i.e. “land of the Jews” (Acts 10:39). Their total life revolved around their identity with God – an identity that He Himself created. The Law by which they were governed was not one of their own making, but was given to them by God, and was superior to all other moral codes. Moses reminded the people of that when he said, “And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law , which I set before you this day?” (Deut 4:8). Also, he reminded them of their unique creation, Moses said, “Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee ” (Deut 32:18). God also spoke through Isaiah, reminding the people of their unique formation: “But now thus saith the LORD that created thee, O Jacob, and He that formed thee , O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee , I have called thee by thy name; thou art Mine ” (Isa 43:1).

However, because of their obstinance and hardheartedness, God would cause them to be viewed with disdain throughout the world.

- Moses told Israel of how they would be viewed by the other nations. This was a prophecy that would necessarily follow their lapse into idolatry, and other sins through which they provoked the Lord to anger. “The LORD shall bring thee, and thy king which thou shalt set over thee, unto a nation which neither thou nor thy fathers have known; and there shalt thou serve other gods, wood and stone. And thou shalt become an astonishment, a proverb, and a byword, among all nations whither the LORD shall lead thee ” (Deut 28:37).

- God also told Solomon of the time when Israel would “be a proverb and a byword among all people ” (1 Kgs 9:7; 2 Chron 7:20).

- The Psalms also speak of this experience: “Thou makest us a reproach to our neighbors , a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us. Thou makest us a byword among the heathen , a shaking of the head among the people ” (Psa 44:13-14).

Paul and those with him were not insurrectionists before, at this time, or after this time. They were not noted for causing social agitation. Like Jesus, they “went about doing good,” not purposefully agitating and stirring up the people.

The prophet Jeremiah also spoke of this: “And I will deliver them to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them” (Jer 24:9).

Although it is true that anyone chosen of God will, because of that fact, incur the indignation of the world, the reproach of the Jews as a whole was also owing to their waywardness. In our text, the reference to Paul and Silas as “Jews” was one of derision and reproach. What Moses and the prophets said would come to pass had, indeed, done just that.

The same condition has happened with those who are disciples of Jesus. They too have become a byword – but not because of their obstinance. For the real followers of Jesus, their lack of harmony with the world and its lusts is the reason for them being held in disdain – just as it was with Jesus Himself.

They Trouble Our City

“ . . . do exceedingly trouble our city . . . ” Other versions read, “are throwing our city into confusion,” NASB “are throwing our city into an uproar,” NIV “are disturbing our city,” NRSV “are greatly troubling our town,” BBE “are causing a lot of trouble in our city,” CJB “seriously disturbing our city,” CSB “utterly trouble our city,” DARBY “are stirring up a lot of trouble in our city,” GWN “The whole city is in an uproar because of these,” NLT and “are corrupting our city.” LIVING

There is no record of Paul and Silas causing any disruption or trouble in the city. Some years later, Paul would speak of his manners among the people, and how he was never a rabble-rouser as these men have charged. “And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city . . . certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple, neither with multitude, nor with tumult ” (Acts 24:12,18).

Paul and those with him were not insurrectionists before, at this time, or after this time. They were not noted for causing social agitation. Like Jesus, they “went about doing good” (Acts 10:38), not purposefully agitating and stirring up the people.

The trouble that surfaced in Philippi was the response of greedy men to the liberation of a poor soul who was possessed by a “spirit of divination.” That proved to be troubling to their illicit business, but could hardly be appropriately described as stirring up the city of Philippi. If the whole city was, indeed, troubled, it was owing to the testimony of these bigots who had agitated the people – not to Paul and Silas!

They Teach Unlawful Customs

“ And teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans.” Other versions read, “proclaiming customs which it is not lawful for us to accept or to observe,” NASB “advocating customs unlawful for us Romans to accept or practice,” NIV “advocating customs that are against the law for us to accept or practice,” CJB and “teaching customs that are illegal for us Romans to practice.” NLT

Here is a blatant example of hypocrisy. When the slave they were managing was following Paul crying out, “These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation” (Acts 16:17), these very men did not utter a syllable of objection – and this was something that went on for “many days.” As long as they could obtain financial gain from such words, they registered no objection to what Paul and Silas were saying.

Further, I am of the persuasion that there was nothing illegal about what Paul and Silas was saying – at least not from the standpoint of the Roman government. Pilate, who represented the Roman government, could find no civil or social fault in Jesus (Lk 23:4,14). Herod, another Roman official, also was unable to find any fault in Jesus (Lk 23:15). Had Jesus broken any laws, or advocated some form of illegality, it would have been uncovered. Of course, the Jews sought to persuade Pilate that Jesus “perverted the nation . . . forbidding to give tribute to Jesus” – but they could not substantiate their claim. After hearing their charge and conferring with Jesus, he responded, “I find no fault in Him” (Lk 23:2-4).

The Jews also raised this kind of charge against Stephen, setting up false witnesses who said, “We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.” And again, “This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law” (Acts 6:11,13). Some also opposed Paul by slanderously reporting that he said, “Let us do evil, that good may come” (Rom 3:8). Jesus referred to such words as saying “all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake” (Matt 5:11).

The point here is that the charge was not true, but was wholly a fabrication by these men. Men do seek to justify themselves by casting reproach on what opposes their practices and persuasions . We should not be surprised when some who know us seek to do the same thing. Of course, knowing this tendency of men, we are to conduct ourselves wisely and in a godly manner before all, that no charge of being disorderly and disruptive can be justified.

THEY WERE BEATEN AND SENT TO PRISON

“ 22 And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them. 23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them, they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely: 24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.”

There are times when it appears as though the enemy has the upper hand. False testimony is received as truth, people are effectively joined together, and harm is administered to those who have done good in the name of the Lord. However, we must not be swayed by appearance, as though God had guaranteed us respect in the world. What is reported in this text was unjust. Because of this, the Lord Himself will administer the justice that it requires. This is why it is written, “Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord” (Rom 12:19).

THE MULTITUDE ROSE UP AGAINST THEM

“And the multitude rose up together against them . . .” Other versions read, “joined in the attack against Paul and Silas,” NIV “joined in attacking them,” NRSV “made an attack on them all together,” BBE “ran together against them,” DOUAY “the crowd joined in and showed its hostility to them,” NJB and “A mob quickly formed against Paul and Silas.” NLT

Now, there really is trouble in the city – but it has not been caused by Paul and Silas. Rather, it is the result of false charges being raised against the servants of God – charges that have agitated the people. The only way the opponents could rally this crowd was to say their way of life was being threatened – they “teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans” (16:21).

People can be joined together with a lie as well as with the truth. One thing about Satan’s kingdom, it is not divided. As Jesus Himself said, “Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand: and if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?" (Matt 12:26).

Therefore, although Pilate and Herod were not friends, they joined together in opposition to Jesus Christ (Lk 23:12). The Sadducees and the Pharisees were divided in their doctrine concerning spirits and angels, but they came together to John's baptism, with no repentance in their hearts (Matt 3:7). They also rallied together against Jesus (Matt 16:1), and, for a while, against Paul as well (Matt 23:1-8). Such alliances are really a kind of second level of unity. They are founded upon agreement with Satan, the "prince of this world" (John 12:31). From another point of view, all opposition to the truth is the result of having "the carnal mind" (Rom 8:7), or "the fleshly mind" (Col 2:18).

If men can be brought to think after the flesh, or be dominated by the "carnal mind," they will inevitably unite against the confrontation of Christ, the truth, and the servants of God who declare the truth. Such opposition has no compunction about crossing blood-lines, friendship, nationality, or race. If you have ever engaged in declaring the truth of God, you have encountered such opposition. Jesus said those who follow Him will even have foes from their "own house" (Matt 10:36). The "natural man," or the man whose progenitor is Adam, is described as one who cannot receive "the things of the Spirit of God." In fact, they are "foolishness unto him," and it is impossible for him to "know them" (1 Cor 2:14). This accounts for the extraordinary degree of division, hostility, and spiritual ignorance that exists in the Christian community. In our text, at least the opposition came from outside the professed church.

THE MAGISTRATES COMMANDED THEM TO BE BEATEN

" . . . and the magistrates rent off their clothes, and commanded to beat them." Other versions read, "commanded them to be beaten with rods," NKJV/NASB/NRSV/ASV "be flogged," CJB "scourge them," DARBY "with sticks," GWN and "with wooden rods." NLT

The Greek word translated "beat" is r`abdi,zein , and means "to beat with rods," THAYER "beat with a rod or stick," FRIBERG "to beat or strike repeatedly with a stick or rod," LOUW-NIDA and "to thresh (by beating with a rod)" LEH This was a severe beating in which the victim was struck repeatedly with wooden rods. To this very day, this form of punishment is practiced in Eastern countries.

A particularly painful, though not so deadly, type of flogging is the Oriental bastinado, or blows delivered on the soles of the feet with a light rod or knotted cord or lash. Flogging was formerly executed with great brutality. The backs of the condemned were frequently lacerated, and salt was poured into the wounds to increase the pain. Britannica

Paul testifies that he was "beaten with rods" three times (2 Cor 11:23). No doubt, this was one of those occasions. The severity of these beating can scarcely be understood in the context of our society. Until recent years, the impact of the Scriptures and the way of newness of life has had a pronounced effect upon our society – more than men are willing to acknowledge. In other countries, where the Gospel has not been dominant, and even though a high level of culture may have been maintained, yet there has not been the sensitivity to brutality that has existed in the United States of America.

Of course, all of this is changing. With the emphasis upon fickle youth and entertainment, together with the growing popularity of violence in the entertainment and athletic world, the sensitivity to brutality is rapidly diminishing. Commensurate with this, the appeal of a Savior who is "meek and lowly in heart" (Matt 11:29), and who went about "doing good and healing all who were oppressed of the devil" (Acts 10:38) is also on the wane. As is characteristic of him, the devil has stepped into this moral decline, and moved certain religious charlatans to promote wealth and worldly prosperity in the name of Christ. That kind of emphasis would probably have been welcomed by the businessmen who hauled Paul and Silas into the city square, promoting the people to beat them publically.

MANY STRIPES

“And when they had laid many stripes upon them . . .” Other versions read, “inflicted many blows upon them,” NASB “had been severely flogged,” NIV “had given them a severe flogging,” NRSV “had given them a great number of blows,” BBE “after giving them a severe beating,” CJB “had beaten them sore,” GENEVA “had hit Paul and Silas many times,” GWN and “Again and again the rods slashed down across their bared backs.” LIVING

Under the Law of Moses, those who were guilty of punishable crimes were also beaten severely. However, God enforced some mercy upon the guilty party, forbidding him to be struck more than forty times – that is, the party was struck a maximum of forty times (Deut 23:2-3). In order to avoid the breaking of this law, the Jews only struck a maximum of thirty-nine blows. Thus Paul affirms that, in addition to being beaten with rods three times, he said, “Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one” (2 Cor 11:24).

However, in our text it is not Jews that are beating Paul and Silas, but Romans – and they had no such law. Paul no doubt refers to this excess when he says he was beaten “in stripes above measure” – that is, beyond the Jewish limitation of forty.

Do Not Forget

Do not forget that Paul had seen a vision of a man in Macedonia crying out for them to come over from Asia to Europe to “help” them. Now, after first finding a cluster of women devoted to prayer, they are being publically beaten in a merciless way – with “many stripes.” The word “many” is translated from the Greek word polla,j, which means “of multitude, number, etc., many, numerous, great,” THAYER “opposite of few,” FRIBERG “a great number,” LOUW-NIDA and “abundant.” LEH

A person who was riveted to the flesh, or lacked spiritual understanding, would have concluded either they should not have come to Philippi, or that they had overextended their stay. However, this is not at how Paul and Silas reasoned on the matter.

These holy men knew what Jesus meant when He said, “In the world, ye shall have tribulation” (John 16:33). Also, Ananias had told Paul in the beginning how Jesus had said of him, “For I will show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake” (Acts 9:16). Later he would write to Timothy, who no doubt remembered the very occasion of our text, “Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution” (2 Tim 3:12).

It is difficult enough to live by faith without trying to do so while entertaining the imagination that we are promised happy and prosperous lives in this world. There remains enough of the flesh in every believer to incapacitate their soundness of mind if they do not remain strong in their faith.

Many professing Christians are too surprised when trouble comes their way because of their faith. When they are called to “suffer with” Christ (Rom 8:17), they are too slow to react in a God-honoring way. On the other hand, Paul, because he comprehended what has been revealed, actually sought to fellowship with Christ in His sufferings (Phil 3:10).

There is a reason for unacceptable responses to suffering as a Christian. In our time Christianity has been made popular. There are a number of things that have contributed to this popularity – but none of them include godliness or a love for and propagation of the truth. The entrance of the professional mega-church with its sprawling campus and highly trained staff has presented a wholly erroneous impression. Then there is the matter of attractive religious careers, the allurements of Christian entertainment, and the prestige of a religious education. None of these things are wrong of themselves. However, when attention is drawn to them, they are too lacking in Divine glory to bring true benefit to the people. Most of these attractions are too close to the world, and, consequently, too far from God.

In Our Text

None of these [so-called] Christian distractions were present during the time of our text. There was power, but it was threatening to hosts of darkness and those who were ruled by them. The Gospel of Christ is good news to those who see themselves as they really are. It is always intimidating and hostile to those who have a love for this world and are living in sin.

THEY CAST THEM INTO PRISON

“ . . . they cast them into prison. . .” Other versions read, “threw them into prison,” NASB and “were thrown into prison.” NJB

As it is used in this text, “cast” means “to throw or let go of a thing without caring where it falls.” STRONG’S It includes the idea of violence, with no concern at all for the welfare of the individual. If the prison was a dungeon, as some suppose, Paul and Silas would have been thrown into it, or dropped down on the floor of the prison. This was after they had been beaten with many stripes.

All of this, viewed according to the flesh, would have been difficult enough to bear. However there will be even more harsh treatment

WHERE AND HOW THEY WERE INCARCERATED

“ . . . charging the jailor to keep them safely: 24 Who, having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.”

Keep Them Safely

Other versions read, “keep them securely,” NKJV “guard them carefully,” NIV “Securely guarded,” CSB “keep them diligently,” DOUAY “keep them under tight security,” GWN and “make sure they didn’t escape.” NLT

Here, “safely” does not mean be sure no harm comes to them. Rather, it means to make sure they do not escape, or are not rescued by some sympathizer. The jailor was to take whatever measures were necessary to ensure Paul and Silas remained there.

Thrust into the Inner Prison

Other versions read, “the inner cell,” NIV “the inmost cell,” NRSV “into solitary confinement,” GWN “the inner part of the prison,” MRD and “the inner dungeon.” NLT

Think of this as a place of confinement within a place of detention. It would parallel what is now referred to as “solitary confinement” – a place that was not only located in the heart of the prison complex, but had less space, and was even more secured than the other cells. The picture to the left is a photo of the traditional cell into which Paul and Silas were thrown – only the bars, or gates, have been removed. Picture that place of confinement with thick and strong bars of iron and a locked gate. Surely that will be enough.

Made Their Feet Fast in the Stocks

However, intent upon ensuring his prisoners do not escape, or are not rescued, he locks their feet in stocks. The picture presented here shows Paul and Silas in a very favorable manner. After having their clothes tore off, mercilessly beaten with many stripes, and thrown into the prison, I doubt that they appeared so well. My point here is that I hardly see how any person could be put at a greater disadvantage, or be in a circumstance that could have been more disconcerting. Bruised, bleeding and wounded, there they are in a cold dark, and dank dungeon. Their feet are securely fastened in stocks so that they cannot move about. All of this has occurred after they obeyed the vision given to them to go over into Macedonia and help the people!

How will Paul and Silas react to these conditions? How will heaven respond to what has happened, and what will be the outcome of it all? It may appear as though everything is out of control. However, we may expect God to be glorified in it all!

CONCLUSION

Anyone who tends to be naive or overly simplistic about the work of the Lord will profit very much from this. This is a slice of very real kingdom life, and what can be involved in being a laborer together with God. Ponder some of the things Paul and Silas were required to handle – thinking through them, arriving at a God-honoring conclusion, and following through with the appropriate action.

- The Spirit did not allow them to preach the Word in Asia.
- The Spirit prohibited them from entering into Bithynia.
- They were directed by a vision, through which they were called to another continent.
- After arriving in Macedonia they were not confronted with anyone who seemed to be seeking the Lord.
- They journeyed to the city of Philippi, spending several days there without contacting any seeking souls.
- On the Sabbath day they apparently inquired if there was some place where worshipers gathered.
- Going outside of the city, they found a riverside where people came to pray.
- They spoke to the woman who were gathered there.
- God opened the heart of one of those women – Lydia – so she could respond appropriately to the word delivered by Paul.
- Following her baptism, Lydia asked them to judge her response, and if it was a faithful one, to come into her house and spend some time there.
- Again, while they were en route to the place of prayer, Paul and Silas were followed by a woman who was possessed by a spirit of divination. She was shrieking out: “These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation.”
- This circumstance persisted for several days.
- Paul, being grieved with the whole situation, commanded the spirit to leave the woman, and immediately it did.
- Because this woman was a source of financial gain to her masters, the departure of the spirit that possessed her dried up their business.
- These men laid hold of Paul and Silas, and dragged them to the city square, where they raised charges against them before the magistrates.
- They charged Paul and Silas with troubling their city, and teaching the people to observe customs that were against the law.

- The people all rose up against Paul and Silas, the magistrates ordered them to be stripped and beaten with rods.

- After laying many stripes upon them, the men threw them into prison, charging the prison keeper to make sure they did not escape.

- The prison keeper put them in the inner prison, and fastened their feet in stocks.

Now, that is a breakdown of the answer of faith to the summons: “Come over into Macedonia and help us!” Nothing in the vision suggested these things would happen, yet Paul and Silas did not appear stunned by any of them. They did not have a view of God, Christ, His salvation, or the work of the Lord that caused them to be thrown off course by these things.

- They knew what to do when doors were blocked.

- They knew how to wait when the direction was not clear, occupying their time in a profitable manner.

- They knew what to do when doors were opened.

- They knew how to respond to people who were obviously seeking the Lord.

- They knew how to judge whether or not a person had been faithful.

- They knew how to respond to an invitation to remain with someone who had obeyed the Gospel.

- They could recognize someone who was dominated by an evil spirit.

- They knew how to respond correctly to words that were prompted by a power of darkness.

- They knew how to hold up under erroneous charges.

- They knew how to keep the faith when they were beaten and imprisoned.

There is every reason to believe that you also can respond in God-honoring ways to the circumstances that confront you as you go about your Father’s business! This text has confirmed that is the case, for it was experienced by men who live precisely the same way you do – by every word of God, and by faith. You, as well as all other saints, have access to the very same resources that sustained them.

Lesson #71

THE CONVERSION OF THE PHILIPPIAN JAILER

“ 16:25 And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them. 26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed. 27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled. 28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here. 29 Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? 31 And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. 32 And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house. 33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. 34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house. 35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go. 36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace. 37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out. 38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans. 39 And they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city. 40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed. ” (Acts 16:25-40)

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE TEXT

Having arrived where they had been called by God, Paul and Silas have reaped a preliminary harvest in Lydia and her household, giving the “help” that was called for in Paul’s vision. Now, in the process of going to the place of prayer, they have confronted a woman with a “spirit of divination.” Paul then “helped” that woman by commanding the oppressing spirit to leave her. The outcome, however, was their violent arrest, beating, and incarceration in the inner prison, with their feet in stocks. Here we will find a man and his house who also needed “help” – hungry souls that needed to hear the Gospel. God will intervene in this circumstance, opening the prison, and loosing the bonds that held the prisoners. All of this will be done within the framework of prayer and praise – a spiritual environment that is duly noted in heaven, which is the Control Center of the earth and those who are in it. Things will

REVIEWING THE ORIGINAL CALL

The original call into this region was a vision of “a man of Macedonia” standing and pleading, “Come over into Macedonia and help us” (16:9). As Paul and his companions considered the vision, they immediately “endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them” (16:10). It is possible, within the context of a highly organized and structured religious institution, to envision vast numbers of people in Macedonia, ready to be harvested for Christ. However, to this point, that is not how all of this has played out.

- One woman and her household have been helped, with the Lord opening her heart so she could attend to the Word spoken by Paul (16:14-15).

- A young woman who was possessed by a “spirit of divination” has been delivered after following Paul and company for many days (16:16-18). She had surely been helped.

To this point, there is no further record of any successful ministry in Macedonia. In their brief stay in the home of Lydia, we assume they ministered to the saints. We may also assume that Paul and Silas continued to minister at the river, which was a place of prayer – but there is no record of such a ministry.

Now, in our text, another individual and his household will surface while Paul and Silas are imprisoned, and they will be helped. They will hear the Gospel, obey the form of the doctrine delivered to them, and Paul and Silas will be briefly welcomed into their home. We may assume that Paul and Silas testified to the other prisoners, but we have no record of that kind of activity.

In our text, and after Paul and Silas are released from prison, they return to Lydia's house, comfort them, and depart to Thessalonica, which was approximately one hundred miles southwest of Philippi. It was also in the region of Macedonia.

Therefore, to this point, the reported activities of helping those in Macedonia, and preaching the Gospel to them consists specifically of two individuals and those with them: Lydia, and the Philippian jailer. However many were included in their households also heard the Gospel, possibly some additional women by the river, and prisoners in the jail where Paul and Silas had been incarcerated. I do not know of a religious organization that would consider that kind of success worthy of the investment of at least four men, a lot of inconvenience, and a severe beating. Yet, this is precisely how heaven worked. This is how the Head of the body directed His church. It is how the Holy Spirit directed sensitive souls into the will and purpose of God.

It would not be possible to build an religious institution on a mission like this. Ponder the following.

- If, for example, a mission for the poor is started, it postulates the presence of a lot of poor people. Yet, the God of heaven moved his holy prophet about, focusing on one poor widow, to whom, He gave adequate supplies – and even Jesus made a point of this (Lk 4:25-26).

- If a person wanted to start a ministry to lepers, it would also presume the existence of a lot of lepers. Yet, when God was moved to heal a leper during the time of Elias, He did not select any of the many lepers in Israel, but ministered to one, who was Naaman a Syrian – and Jesus made a point of that also (Lk 4:26-27).

The ministry of Jesus also revealed this manner of Divine working. He would often focus his attention on one person of an area, and then depart.

- On one occasion, He sailed across a sea to the land of the Gadarenes, healed a man who was possessed by a legion of demons, and then returned to his boat and went to the other side (Mk 5:1-21).

- Another time He went into the city of Nain, raised the only son of a grieving widow from the dead, and went His way (Lk 7:11-17).

- Yet another time He went to the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, healed a woman's daughter, and "departed from thence" (Matt 15:21-28).

The point is that God has represented Himself as seeking individuals, not multitudes. In fact, there were times when Jesus "sent the multitudes away" (Matt 14:22-23). One time, when He saw "the multitudes, He went up into a mountain: and when He was set, His disciples came unto Him" (Matt 5:1). Another time, when He saw the multitudes He was moved with compassion, and asked His disciples to pray the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into His harvest (Matt 9:36-38).

Ponder the individuals to whom, Jesus have special attention. Nicodemus, Zaccheus, Jairus, a centurion, a Syrophencian woman, a grieving widow from Nain, an potent man at the pool of Bethsaida, Bartimaeus, a father with a son who was vexed by a demon, a certain leper, and many others. And why was this so? Because there are certain people that draw the attention of Jesus – people who have faith, and seek Him for who He really is.

Ponder the individuals to whom, Jesus have special attention. Nicodemus, Zaccheus, Jairus, a centurion, a Syrophencian woman, a grieving widow from Nain, an potent man at the pool of Bethsaida, Bartimaeus, a father with a son who was vexed by a demon, a certain leper, and many others.

Philip was called away from the multitudes to minister to a single man who was pondering the Scriptures (Acts 8:25-29). Peter was called to go to the house of Cornelius (Acts 10:10-20).

On this matter of Divine quest and preference, God has spoken with remarkable clarity.

- "But now thy kingdom shall not continue: the LORD hath sought him a man after his own heart" (1 Sam 13:14).

- “For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him ” (2 Chr 16:9).

- “For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit , to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones” (Isa 57:15).

- “For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at My word” (Isa 66:2).

- “And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none” (Ezek 22:30).

Our text confirms this is a consistent Divine manner. The Lord is seeking those who are pure in heart, who are suitable to labor with Him. There is no way to fit the events covered in the sixteenth chapter of Acts into an institutional setting. Exactly what kind of organization could you build on this kind of activity? In fact, it would have no appeal to a career or institutionally minded person. However, this did appeal to Paul and Silas, and they entered into the work wholeheartedly. Such people have a different set of values. They see things differently, and define opportunities and duties unlike those who are of the world. They react to circumstances in a way that brings true advantages to men, and glory to God. They are living for different reasons, and have different expectations.

AT MIDNIGHT

“ 16:25 And at midnight Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God: and the prisoners heard them.”

The scene opens with Paul and Silas in the inner prison, bruised and bleeding, and with their feet bound in stocks. It had been a long day for them, having been dragged into the city square, falsely charged before the magistrates of the city, then beaten mercilessly. And all of this occurred while they were fulfilling the mission to which the Lord had called them. How will they react to all of this? Will they be angry with God, or cast down in spirit, wondering why all of these injustices have happened to them? Today, preachers and teachers are telling the people that reactionary responses are normal, and that we should not be surprised when they are found in us. Is all of this really so? Are Paul and Silas supermen, or are they representative of the kind of people that love the Lord and live by faith. Is their reaction the normal one for believers? Indeed, I will unhesitatingly affirm that it is! What we will now read is the account of men who were living by faith and walking in the Spirit. This is how hope impacts the human spirit, and what spiritual insight does for the soul of the redeemed.

AT MIDNIGHT

“And at midnight . . .” Other versions read, “about the middle of the night.” BBE

Midnight is what the name suggests – mid-night, or the middle of the night. It is most dark at that time, and ordinarily movement and activity are unusual then. “Midnight” was the time the Lord went through the midst of Egypt by the hands of his angel (Ex 11:4; 12:29). It was also at that time that Israel made its exodus from Egypt, with Pharaoh and all of Egypt urging them to go Ex 12:31-36). “Midnight” is when Samson got up and carried away the gates of the city of Gaza (Judges 16:3). David thought so much of the Lord that he declared, “At midnight I will rise to give thanks unto thee because of thy righteous judgments” (Psa 119:62). In His parable of the ten virgins, Jesus said that it was “midnight” when the cry was made, “Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him” (Matt 25:6). There was such a hunger for the Word in Troas, that when Paul was there he “continued his speech until midnight” (Acts 20:7).

We can tell from the words that follow that Paul and Silas had not merely been spending the night acutely conscious of pain, wondering why this had happened to them, and where they might have gone wrong. To be sure, they were very aware of their condition in the body, but it was not their dominant consideration. It is one thing to read the words, “For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory; While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal” (2 Cor 4:17-18). However, it is quite another thing for them to be our personal testimony. Such marvelous expressions can be read and considered as a goal, or something that it is best to do. However, that is not how they are written. “Our light affliction” is not a reference to what may come, but what is present. It is not something that is viewed as lengthy and tedious, but “is for a moment.” The affliction is not seen as something that is working against us, but is working “for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.” That is, although it is taking something from us in this world – fleshly strength, abilities of expression, etc. – it is causing a greater measure of glory that is infinitely larger than the affliction. All of this is taking place “while we look not at the things that are seen.” That is, although the affliction is a very real experience, we do not focus upon it. That is not what has captured our attention. It does not dominate our thinking, and is not the subject of our deeper and prolonged contemplation. Our minds, however are not void, but are devoted to the consideration of “unseen things” that belong to us, but are yet to be experienced in their fulness. Faith constrains us to reason in this matter while we are enduring the affliction: “for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal” (2 Cor 4:18).

In fact, affliction, when experienced in faith and hope, actually moves us to consider what is to come. It becomes more prominent in our thinking than the things that are now taking place. Our minds are moved away from this present evil world (in which the affliction is taking place), to the world to come, and the glory that awaits us. Thus faith reasons, “For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens” (2 Cor 5:1). While in the body, and enduring affliction, faith moves us to “groan” under the burden. This is not a groaning like Israel in Egyptian bondage. It is rather the groan of travail in which hope reminds us, “For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens” (2 Cor 5:1). That “house not made with hands” is the “glorious” body that we will receive at the resurrection of the dead, when Jesus comes in all of His glory (Phil 3:20-21). It already exists, “in the heavens,” and is awaiting our occupancy. In that body, there will not be a solitary remnant of death, or the possibility of afflictions and infirmities, which are all facets of, and preliminary to, death.

Now, God has revealed that leaving our present bodies and entering into that “building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens,” is actually why we have been born again, being “created in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:10). We have not been regenerated in order to a more pleasant life in the world – although that is often our experience. It was not in order to a better family life, which may or may not be our portion. It was not in order to financial stability, or various forms of success in this world. All of those things may very well be experienced, but they are NOT the reason for the salvation of God. There is a greater reason.

This is not mere religious conjecture, but is stated succinctly and with great power. “Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit” (2 Cor 5:5). The New American Standard Bible reads, “Now He who prepared us for this very purpose is God, who gave to us the Spirit as a pledge.”

We know from this that the Holy Spirit is given to us to empower and equip us to go through sufferings that would otherwise be intolerable. That blessed Spirit can cause faith and hope to so flourish that it will diminish the strength of affliction. It will enable the contemplation of glory to outweigh the experience of suffering – and that is because the glory itself outweighs all grievous human experience. In other words, when we enter into the glory, even the recollection of the sufferings will be “swallowed up” of life.

Now, that is the doctrine concerning affliction – but the doctrine strictly comports with the experience of the believer. Paul testified in Second Corinthians that this was what he was experiencing under the chaffing voyage through affliction. His words were a personal witness as well as sound doctrine. Moved by the Holy Spirit, he wrote them down so that those who followed him could have the same perspective and experience through their “wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).

Our text lifts the doctrine out of the domain of theory, translating it into life. What we will now read is the record of “the work of faith” being fulfilled by Divine “power” (2 Thess 1:11).

THEY PRAYED AND SANG PRAISES

“ . . . Paul and Silas prayed, and sang praises unto God . . .” Other versions read, “praying and singing hymns,” NKJV/NASB/NIV/NSRV “making prayers and songs,” BBE “in praying, were praising God with singing,” DARBY “prayed and sung Psalms,” GENEVA “prayed and lauded God,” PNT “praying and singing songs,” IE and “praying and singing hymns of praise.” AMPLIFIED

The word “praises” is translated from the Greek word u[mnnoun] (hoom-noon) – the word from which we get the word “hymns.” The word means “a sacred song of praise to God, especially of thanksgiving” FRIBERG “a song with religious content.” LOUW-NIDA

As used in Scripture, a “hymn” is an insightful utterance of praise. It is in no way associated with mimicry, pretension, or some form of vain repetition. The Greek Septuagint version of the Scriptures use the word “hymn” in describing the praises David ordained in the Temple: evn u[mnoij] [hymns] Dauid . It is generally understood that this related chiefly to his Psalmic praises, which were noted for their insight and spiritual precision. They are a Scriptural example of hymnology.

The language conveys the idea of prayer and singing being joined together, so that in their prayers, they broke forth in the singing of praise. Petition was thus blended with praise, and supplication with thanksgiving. Such a marvelous blending of articulation is the fruit of faith and hope, both of which are discerning and precise. When either prayer or praise degenerate into shallow and endless repetition, they cease to have any true value.

Paul and Silas saw beyond their earthly circumstance. They were able to associate what has happening to them with Divine appointments. Early in the history of the church, this was also expressed by the apostles. After being beaten and commanded to speak no more in the name of Jesus, “they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name” (Acts 5:41). The reasoning is based upon the revealed fact – “If we suffer, we shall also reign with him” (2 Tim 2:12). In more detail, Paul wrote to the Thessalonians, “So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer ” (2 Thess 1:4-5). Reasoning from effect to cause, unusual suffering and persecution are evidence of the appointment of unusual glory.

Suffering and affliction also confirm that believers are out of place in this world – that is, they are not of the world. They have been made for another place, where they will fit in perfectly. Thus, from the higher perspective, Paul and Silas had good reason to sing praises to their God.

THE PRISONERS HEARD THE

“ . . . and the prisoners heard them.” Other versions read, “the prisoners were listening to them,” NKJV /NASB/NIV “in the hearing of the prisoners,” BBE “the other prisoners listened attentively.” CJB and “as the prisoners listened.” NAB

As used here, the word “heard” means “to listen to, with the probable implication of one's own interest.” LOUW-NIDA The prisoners were not merely aware of some sounds emitting from the cell of Paul and Silas. They were attentive to, and interested in, what they were saying. This signifies God’s messengers were lifting up their voice, not just mumbling some words. The sound was distinct enough to capture the attention of the other prisoners. In the words of Paul and Silas the prisoners were hearing of the God on whom they relied. They were being exposed to thanksgiving, which was not common among idolaters. They heard men praying and singing who were not in despair, although they had been treated harshly, and were confined in the inner prison, with their feet in stocks.

It is good to remember that those who remain “in the body” (Heb 13:3), are, in a sense, also “prisoners.” It is important that they hear expressions from us that confirm the superiority of life in Christ. No person who wears the name of Christ who grumbles and complains will be able to leave a wholesome influence upon their generation. In such expressions, they only confirm that, at the root, they are no different from other men.

THERE WAS A GREAT EARTHQUAKE

“ 26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.”

In keeping with the Divine manner, a hopeless situation will instantly be changed to one of hope. This will not be something that is gradual, but will take place immediately and effectively.

SUDDENLY

“And suddenly . . .” Every major version reads the same – “suddenly.” As used here, this word means “unexpectedly,” FRIBERG “pertaining to an extremely short period of time between a previous state or event and a subsequent state or event,” LOUW-NIDA and “immediately, at once.” GINGRICH In English, the word “suddenly” means, “marked by or evidencing abruptness or haste . . . made or brought about in a short time.” Synonyms are listed as “short, sudden, unanticipatedly, and unexpectedly.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

In this text, “suddenly” speaks of Divine intervention – a forced intrusion into the affairs of men. Something that happens “suddenly” is immediate, effective, abrupt, and unexpected.

Here, it is God Almighty who acted suddenly, without warning, without prelude, without and prophecy. He caused something to occur in the world He created, at a precise point in time, and in an exact location. That is how precisely He governs the world! So far as we know, there was no indication that He was going to move in such a manner. He did not interrupt the mock trial of Paul and Silas. He did not disrupt their flogging, causing the one doing it to die, or causing his hand to wither – all of which was well within His power. He did not stop the magistrates from having Paul and Silas thrown into prison, or the prison keeper from putting their feet in the stocks. According to appearance, there was nothing that suggested God was going to intervene in this whole matter – but He did!

THERE WAS A GREAT EARTHQUAKE

“ . . . there was a great earthquake . . .” Other versions read, “a violent earthquake,” NIV “an earthquake so violent,” NRSV “an earth-shock,” BBE “a great shaking,” MRD “a severe earthquake,” NAB “a massive earthquake,” NLT and “a violent shock of earthquake.” WEYMOUTH

So far as the ranking of earthquakes, this was not an ordinary one. It was extraordinary, severe, violent, and massive within the context of earthquakes!

Now, at the midnight hour, the Creator of the world interrupts the affairs taking place there. He causes something to happen that was not, strictly speaking, scientific. This earthquake was not one that could have been predicted by an analysis of the arrangement certain plates in the belly of the earth, or certain fault lines that existed. This earthquake started and ended with a Divine word.

It was also very pointed. It occurred on the continent of Europe, in the region of Macedonia, in the city of Philippi, and within a specific prison. It also came at an exact time.

There is also something else to consider. The command for this earthquake passed through the domain of “the prince of the power of the air” (Eph 2:2). The realm occupied by “spiritual wickedness in high places” (Eph 6:12) had to yield to the command, even though it was interrupting what they were doing. This event would reverse the judgment of men who were under Satan’s control – but there was nothing that the powers of darkness could do about it. This is how effectively the God of heaven operates.

Also, consider that, so far as men are concerned, God moved in this manner in the behalf of only two men – not a whole city, not a church, but two men! Do not doubt what heaven will do for those who have put their trust in God, forfeited their own wills, and taken up His cause! Also, do not expect that the Lord of heaven and earth will move in such a manner for those who do not extend themselves for His glory, or live in a manner that is fundamentally self-centered.

THE CALCULATED EFFECTS

“ . . . so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and immediately all the doors were opened, and every one's bands were loosed.”

This was a precisely controlled earthquake, not a chaotic one. This is contrary to the very nature of earthquakes. The effects of earthquakes generally appear to be random, and certainly do not yield advantages to those within the area where it occurs. But that is not the nature of this earthquake. Something specific is accomplished by this quake. It is great, but so focused, that there will be no deaths, and not a single recorded injury.

The Foundations of the Prison Were Shaken

Other versions read, “the base of the prison was moved,” BBE “shook the prison to its foundation,” CJB and “the foundations of the jail shook.” NAB

There are at least two things that ought to be noted. First, it is the structure above ground that is usually shaken by an earthquake. Here, however, it was the foundation of the structure. Secondly, the prison house was not shaken down, which is also the ordinary impact of an earthquake. Here, the house was shaken, but not in a destructive manner. In other words, this was a precisely controlled earthquake.

From the earthly point of view, care is taken to construct houses of incarceration so they are not vulnerable. However, from heaven’s viewpoint, all places of containment are vulnerable. Their purpose can be nullified in a moment of time. Of course, this is true of all forms of restriction, confinement, or containment. It may be an infirm body, a vessel at sea, a sick bed, or some form or moral bondage. It is all subject to the Lord of heaven and earth. How blessed it is to consider such realities!

Also, there is no record of any other part of Philippi being affected by the earthquake. It was strictly localized, which is also a most extraordinary phenomenon. There was a specific purpose being carried out in this earthquake, and that is exactly what will be accomplished by it.

Immediately All the Doors were Opened

Other versions read, “all the prison doors flew open,” NIV “quickly opened,” IE and “instantly the doors all flew open.” WEYMOUTH

This is probably the only time in human history when an earthquake had such an impact. Note, it was not only the doors of the cell in which Paul and Silas were bound that were opened. They were the specific target of Divine attention. However, they had been praising God, and the other prisoners had been listening intently to them. Now, those prisoners will behold the answer of God to those midnight praises. ALL the prison doors were opened – suddenly and decisively. At the word of the King, they all “flew open.” The doors were not destroyed, but they were opened, standing ajar to testify to the power of the Almighty. What kind of natural earthquake could do something like that?

Do you not see that the very existence of a God whose word has such marvelous power makes hopelessness folly to those who believe? This is precisely why hope keeps the soul. It is anchored in heaven, which is the citadel of all power. For those who put their trust in God, there is no such thing as a circumstance that is totally hopeless. Sing, saints of God! Sing at the midnight hour, where everything appears to be against you! Sing when it is the darkest, and you are at the greatest disadvantage! Shout out the words of Isaiah the prophet: “Say to them that are of a fearful heart, Be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance, even God with a recompense; He will come and save you” (Isa 35:4). God can open doors that appear firmly secured – even invincible. Our text is a record of that being wrought in the domain of sight and sense. However, it is a confirmation that unseen doors of confinement can also be opened at His word.

Everyone’s Bands were Loosed

Other versions read, “everyone’s chains were loosed,” NKJV “everyone’s chains were unfastened,” NASB “everybody’s chains came loose,” NIV “everyone’s fetters were unfastened,” RSV “everyone’s chains came off,” BBE “the chains of all were pulled loose,” NAB “the bonds of all prisoners came loose,” NIB “the chains of every prisoner fell off,” NLT “all prisoners were freed from their chains,” IE and “everyone’s shackles were unfastened.” AMPLIFIED

One moment, all of the prisoners were held by chains. The next moment, none of them were bound by chains. They did not break their own chains by a sudden burst of strength – like the Gadarene demoniac. They did not work diligently to saw them in two, or use the forger’s hammer to break them off. They simply “fell off.” NLT How could a natural earthquake do such a thing? Behold the precision and effectiveness of the power of God. He could cause chains to fall off the prisoners without any of them being injured or sustaining a bruise.

There are other kinds of chains that hold men fast – various forms of bondage, or enslavement. Jesus summarized all forms of moral and spiritual bondage in these words: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin.”

OTHER KINDS OF BONDAGE

Of course, there are other kinds of chains that hold men fast – various forms of bondage, or enslavement. Jesus summarized all forms of moral and spiritual bondage in these words: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin is the servant of sin ” (John 8:34). Other versions read “slave of sin,” NKJV/NASB/NIV/NRSV “bondman of sin,” DARBY “bond-servant of sin.” ERV Paul described that condition as living “according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience” (Eph 2:2).

That bondage is demolished instantly when the Son of God makes a person “free indeed” (John 8:36). A person who is freed from sin is under no more obligation to sin that a lame man, who has taken up his bed and is walking, is obliged to spend some time in impotency, once again laying upon that bed. You might as well argue that a blind man who was healed of his blindness must endure periodic seasons of blindness, as that a person freed from sin remains in some sort of bondage to it.

Let no person attempt to persuade us that the iron chains fell off the prisoners in Philippi, but the moral chains remain on those who have been “made free from sin” (Rom 6:18).

I understand that this makes it difficult to explain the presence of an alarming amount of sin in the professed church. Let no one give their ears to the lie that sin, by reason of family background, physiological factors, or social circumstances, overcomes the believer. When sin is found in any person who has professed faith in Christ, there are very real reasons for it. Here are some of them.

- They did not “resist the devil” (James 4:7; 1 Pet 5:7-9).
- They made a place for the devil, even though God told them not to do so (Eph 4:27).
- They did not take advantage of the “way of escape” that comes with every temptation (1 Cor 10:13).
- They did not “obtain grace to help in the time of need” – when they were tempted (Heb 4:15-16).
- They did not heed the instruction of grace, which teaches us to “deny ungodliness and worldly lusts” (Tit 2:11-12).
- They did not follow the leading of the Spirit, mortifying “the deeds of the body” (Rom 8:13-14).
- They were not “steadfast in the faith” (1 Pet 5:8-9).
- They did not “stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free” (Gal 5:1).
- They did not “put on the whole armor of God” (Eph 6:11-18).
- They did not focus their attention on eternal things, but chose to look upon temporal things (2 Cor 4:17-18).
- They were not pressing toward the mark, viewing all competing influences as “dung” (Phil 3:8-14).
- They did not consider their ways (Hag 1:5,7).
- They were not living by hope, which compels the believer to “purify himself, even as He is pure” (1 John 3:2-3).

It is to be understood that none of us can say, “we have no sin” (1 John 1:8). But that is not an excuse for sin! It is not an explanation for sin either. Those of honest heart know that when sin erupts, it is for all of the reasons sited above. It is imperative that we do not allow Satan’s ministers to teach us how to account for sin in other ways – like we cannot help it, or that is just the way we are, or it takes time to conquer out old habits. That is nothing more than fleshly jargon inspired from hell. It teaches people to live with sin, while God says to “mortify it” (Col 3:5), put it off (Col 3:8), lay it aside (1 Pet 2:1), cast it off (Rom 13:12), and “sin not” (1 Cor 15:34; Eph 4:26; 1 John 2:1). Let no man teach us we cannot do what God has commanded us to do! Stop your ears to those to suggest God’s requirements are too difficult. Instead, get to the doing of it, believing what Jesus said, “If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed” (John 8:36).

Let the church send the philosophers, the psychologists, the motivators, and the counselors home! We have no need of them, for our God is “is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us”

Let the church send the philosophers, the psychologists, the motivators, and the counselors home! We have no need of them, for our God is “is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us” (Eph 3:20). What need do those who perceive this have for these worldly experts? If they have no power to get Paul and Silas out of their trouble, how could they possibly have any power to get us out of our trouble? Send them home! Tell them to take their programs with them, for the church needs to rid itself of the arm of the flesh! God will come and save us! With but a word, inhibiting circumstances can be changed – changed instantly and effectively. All manner of chains can fall off at His word, whether they are chains on the body, the mind, or the soul! Circumstance must yield to God! It will not yield to anyone else!

Woe, woe, woe to those purveyors of human resolutions to moral and spiritual problems – who market routines, claiming they have some kind of effective power! Their religion is a subtle form of idolatry, and nothing more, for they teach people to rely on something other than God Almighty. They give too much glory to men, and too little to God. The presence of such men is a blotch on the canvas of religion.

THE PRISON KEEPER WAS AWAKENED

“ 27 And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open, he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.”

The violent earthquake, strictly controlled from heaven, did not cause the whole complex to fall down. It was gentle enough to simply awaken the jailor, yet violent enough to open every door, and cause every chain to fall off the prisoners.

THE PRISON KEEPER AWAKENS AND BEHOLDS

“And the keeper of the prison awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the prison doors open . . .” Other versions read, “roused out of sleep and had seen the doors opened,” NASB and “woke up, and when he saw the prison doors wide open.” NRSV

The prison keeper was asleep in the prison complex, apparently to ensure the persons were kept in the jail, as he was instructed. He did not reckon on this, but while he was asleep something had happened. Note, he was not aroused during the earthquake, but after the Divine objective had been accomplished. He must have been close at hand, for he did not yet have any light, and yet he saw the prison doors standing wide open.

In seeing the “doors,” I gather the jailer beheld the cell doors as well as the main doors to the person. The total security of the prison had been decimated by the earthquake, and yet this man was not jostled out of his bed, or covered with falling debris. Note, that the man did not behold any prisoners, and would thus conclude that they had all escaped.

HE DRAWS HIS SWORD

“ . . . he drew out his sword, and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled.” Other versions read, “had escaped,” NASB “had got away,” BBE and “had been fled.” TNT

Scriptures indicate that it was the practice of Roman officials to take the lives of those who did not manage to keep their prisoners incarcerated. When, for example, Peter was miraculously released from prison by means of a holy angel, Herod inquired into his disappearance. It is written, “And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, he examined the keepers, and commanded that they should be put to death” (Acts 12:19).

In Babylon, even wise men who could not deliver the counsel for which they were responsible were put to death. Once, when the “wise men of Babylon” responded that Nebuchadnezzar had required an answer that no man could provide, it is written “For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon ” (Dan 2:12).

This jailer knew that there could be no satisfactory explanation given to the magistrates about the disappearance of his prisoners. He therefore determined to take his own life. He seemed to sense that referring to a natural disaster would not be sufficient under Roman law.

A Principle to be Seen

In His parable of the “pounds,” Jesus even taught that the Lord Himself operated upon the principle of strict faithfulness being required of His servants. Speaking of ultimate accountability He said of the unfaithful steward, “For I say unto you, That unto every one which hath shall be given; and from him that hath not, even that he hath shall be taken away from him. But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me ” (Luke 19:26-27).

That is a strong word, to be sure, but its significance ought to be duly noted. If responsibility to earthly dignities is required, what ought to be said about the responsibility of men to God Himself? It is good for God’s people to rid themselves of any tendency to make excuses for unfaithfulness. Let them rather devote themselves to the God-honoring responsibility that comes with being a steward of His goods, for they are scheduled to give a strict account to Him (Rom 14:12). In this world, for the faithful stewards, God will do nothing to cause their responsibilities to be taken from them, but will rather give them more, in order that they may be rewarded more in the world to come.

PAUL CRIED WITH A LOUD VOICE

“ 28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here.”

With the jailer fully intending to take his own life, an immediate and convincing response is required, if the action is to be aborted.

PAUL CRIED WITH A LOUD VOICE

“But Paul cried with a loud voice...” Other versions read, “Paul shouted,” NIV “Paul shouted in a loud voice,” NRSV “Paul called out in a loud voice,” CSB “Paul shouted out as loudly as he could,” GWN “Paul called to him in a loud voice,” MRD “Paul shouted at the top of his voice,” NJB “Paul yelled to him,” LIVING “Paul at once shouted out to him,” WILLIAMS and “Paul called out to him at the top of his voice.” PHILLIPS

Keep in mind that this is a man who has been dragged before the city officials, beaten many strokes with a rod, and thrown into prison, with his feet locked in stocks. Now the door to the cell in which he and Silas have been confined is standing wide open, and his shackles have fallen off. By all rules of human thought, he ought to be weak and fatigued. Yet, he cries out with a loud voice. He does not do so in his own interest, but with a mind to save the life of the jailer who had fastened his feet in stocks, and securely locked his cell.

Here is a classic example of a man who did not live for himself, and whose interests did not revolve around his own affairs. That, dear reader, is the Kingdom norm or standard – the way life is intended to be lived.

DO THYSELF NO HARM

“ . . . saying, Do thyself no harm . . .” Other versions read, “Don’t harm your yourself,” NIV “Do yourself no damage,” BBE “Stop! Don’t kill yourself!” NLT “Thou mayest not do thyself any harm,” YLT “Don’t do it!” NIV and “Do yourself no injury.” WEYMOUTH

Some time later, when Paul was a prisoner on a ship that was about to be wrecked, “the soldiers’ counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out, and escape.” It was at that time that, by Divine providence, the centurion that was in charge, “willing to save Paul, kept them from their purpose; and commanded that they which could swim should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land” (Acts 27:42-43). At that time, Paul reaped what he was sowing in this text.

Life in Christ does not yield a cold and heartless spirit. It rather makes for tenderness of heart, with a desire for the showing of mercy. That is confirmed by the loud cry of Paul.

WE ARE ALL HERE

“... for we are all here.” Other versions read, “because all of us are here.” CSB

Paul not only refers to himself and Silas, but to the rest of the prisoners. God had apparently put Paul in charge of the situation, as He did Joseph when he was in prison. I cannot imagine those prisoners remaining in their cells apart from the influence of Paul and Silas. Those prisoners had heard the prayers and praises of these two men. They were also personal witnesses to the response of heaven to the prayers and praises of Paul and Silas. I do not doubt that it made perfect sense to them to yield to their leadership at this time. Therefore, they remained in their cells, while the doors were standing wide open, and their bonds had all fallen away from them.

And for what reason were Paul, Silas, and the other prisoners still present? It was for the sake of this jailer, so he would not take his life!

Different Prison Experiences

The Kingdom of God does operate by principles, but not by specific routines. Every experience of imprisoned saints is not addressed in the same way.

- JOSEPH. Joseph was thrown into prison unjustly, and was put in “fetters” which “hurt” him (Gen 39:20; Psa 105:18). Yet, the Lord had mercy on him in prison, giving him favor in the sight of the prison keeper, who committed all of the prisoners into his hand (Gen 39:21-22). In due time, God moved him to be released from prison, and he became the second man in charge of all of Egypt (Gen 41:39-41).

Now, how could you write a prison deliverance procedure from those accounts? There is little similarity in any of the cases, except the reason for the incarceration, which was unjust. Those who live for Christ must do so by faith. They are not offered a guarantee of immunity, or told they will be the obvious victors in every earthly circumstance.

JEREMIAH. Jeremiah was thrown into prison because of his prophecies. The dungeon into which he was thrown had much mud, into which Jeremiah sank (Jer 38:6). One of the eunuch’s of the king, an Ethiopian, reported Jeremiah’s circumstance to the king., stating that the men who had done this were wicked, and that Jeremiah was about to die of hunger. The king told the eunuch to take thirty men and get Jeremiah out of that dungeon. He did this, and Jeremiah was placed in the courtyard of the prison, where he remained until Jerusalem was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar (Jer 38:8-28).

- JOHN THE BAPTIST. John the Baptist was thrown into prison at the whim of Herod’s wife, remained there for some time, and was finally beheaded at the request of the same woman (Matt 14:3-11).

- THE APOSTLES. The apostles were put into common prison for preaching the Word of God. They were miraculously delivered by an angel of the Lord, and told to return to the Temple and preach “all the words of this life” (Acts 5:18-20).

- PAUL AND SILAS. Paul and Silas were severely beaten, thrown into prison, and their feet placed in stocks. An earthquake was sent from heaven, opening the jail cells and loosing their bonds. They remained in their cells, and were eventually escorted from them by the ones who had sent them there (Acts 16:24-39).

• PETER. Peter was imprisoned at the behest of Herod, who sought to please the Jews. An angel delivered him from the prison, and he walked out of confinement in the presence of the guards who were completely unaware of what was happening. He went to a gathering of the disciples, and then departed for Caesarea (Acts 12:4-19).

• PAUL. Paul was imprisoned in Rome, but allowed to dwell in his own rented house for two years. There he welcomed inquirers, to whom he preached the Word (Acts 28:30-31). Eventually he was martyred, being beheaded by Nero, as history confirms (2 Tim 4:6).

Now, how could you write a prison deliverance procedure from those accounts? There is little similarity in any of the cases, except the reason for the incarceration, which was unjust. Those who live for Christ must do so by faith. They are not offered a guarantee of immunity, or told they will be the obvious victors in every earthly circumstance. While the enemy will ultimately go down in defeat and ignominy, there will be times and seasons when they appear to have the upper hand. That is why Paul testified, “We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed” (2 Cor 4:8-9).

Saints are headed for a place and time when “God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away” (Rev 21:4). There will be no more midnights, restraints, or difficulty, for “there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light: and they shall reign for ever and ever” (Rev 22:5). But until then, while we are in the world, we must determine to respond to trouble and hardship in a manner that glorifies God and puts faith and hope on public display. The display of both faith and hope postulate the presence of adversity, in which they tend to flourish.

THE PRISON KEEPER’S RESPONSE

“ 29 Then he called for a light, and sprang in, and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas, 30 And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?”

What a marvelous depiction of alertness in crisis! A man recently beaten and in shackles, and another man about to commit suicide – and yet both are alert to their circumstances, rational, and capable of precise expression. Among other things, this confirms that it is possible for the mind to triumph over difficult circumstances. It is possible for the powers of attention and focus to remain fully intact even though what is around us call for distraction.

HE CALLED FOR A LIGHT

“Then he called for a light . . .” Other versions read, “called for lights,” NASB “sent for lights,” BBE “having asked for lights,” DARBY “asked for torches,” GWN and “told someone to bring a light.” IE

The jailer does not call for soldiers to again shackle the prisoners. He does not call out for the gate to the prison itself to be re-secured. He rather calls for something that will help him see more clearly. He calls for light, illumination, something that would make the situation more clear.

The jailer does not call for soldiers to again shackle the prisoners. He does not call out for the gate to the prison itself to be re-secured. He rather calls for something that will help him see more clearly. He calls for light, illumination, something that would make the situation more clear. He wants to confirm the prisoners are still there, and to have enough light to conduct himself intelligently. He is clearly eager to get closer to the situation and see what has happened, and even make further inquiry.

HE SPRANG IN

“ . . . and sprang in . . . ” Other versions read, “ran in,” NKJV “rushed in,” NASB “rushing in,” NRSV “leaped in,” GENEVA and “rushed inside.” ISV

The jailor rushed into the prison proper, even though all of the prisoners were loose. At the time, the thought did not occur to him that it was dangerous to enter the prison itself. He did not call for a group of soldiers to accompany him, or to go before him to see to it that it was safe. In this text, we are witnessing the Lord at work, directing and readying the people who are involved. That is why they do not react as ordinary men.

HE TREMBLED BEFORE PAUL AND SILAS

“ . . . and came trembling, and fell down before Paul and Silas . . . ” Other versions read, “fell down trembling before,” NKJV “trembling with fear, he fell down before,” NASB “shaking with fear, went down on his face before,” BBE and “trembling and terrified he fell down before.” AMPLIFIED

This unnamed jailer was fully aware that something had happened that was clearly outside the realm of nature. It had occurred within the domain of nature, and yet was not subject to the laws of nature. The power of an earthquake had been focused, was not primarily destructive, and had resulted in making a prison no longer a prison. Now, it was an open house in which men could move about freely, with no means of confining them. From one point of view, his job and everything that enabled him to do it had been outwardly and apparently nullified.

The jailer falls down before Paul and Silas, not any other the other “prisoners.” There may very well have been political prisoners there, or some other well known criminals. But he does not fall down trembling before them. He is able to associate this whole circumstance with these two men, who were obviously unlike the other inmates. Paul is the one who had shouted out, and the jailer appears to conclude that, so far as the men were concerned, he was really the one who was in charge.

God can orchestrate circumstances so that it becomes very clear who is superior among men. He can clarify that Moses and Aaron are superior in Egypt (Ex 10:16), as well as Joseph was before them (Gen 41:41-42). It can be made clear to Nebuchadnezzar that Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego are superior to the ones who laid charges against them (Dan 3:28-29). Darius can behold that Daniel is greater than the ones who sought to remove him (Dan 7:27-28). A ship master and all who were in his ship can see that Paul is in charge during a storm, and choose to yield to his word (Acts 27:21-43).

This is not the kind of thing that can be scheduled by men. In fact, there will be times when, according to appearance, this does not seem to be the case at all. However, when the time is proper, regardless of the circumstances, God can vault His people to prominence, and everyone will know that He is doing so. History is sprinkled with occasions when He did this. Faith, persuaded that this is the truth, submits to the Lord, moving the ones who believe to cast their burdens and cares upon the Lord.

HE BROUGHT THEM OUT

“ . . . And brought them out . . . ” Other versions read, “brought them outside,” NRSV “escorted them out,” CSB “leading them out of the jail,” WILLIAMS “brought them out [of the dungeon], AMPLIFIED and “he led them outside.” PHILLIPS

The idea here is that the jailer escorted Paul and Silas out of the “inner prison,” where they had been originally placed, into an open area. Whether or not this was completely outside of the prison complex itself, I am not sure. The point is that it was not appropriate for them to remain in their cell – although they did until the time came for them to leave. This was also true of the remainder of the prisoners, of which nothing more is said.

WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?

“ . . . and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?”

“Sirs”

Other versions read, “Men,” RSV “Masters,” DOUAY and “ My lords.” MRD

The Greek word translated “Sirs” is Ku,rioi , which has the following root meaning: “he to whom a person or thing belongs, about which he has the power of deciding; master, lord . . . one who has control of the person, the master.” THAYER Other lexical meanings include, “as a form of address showing respect sir, lord,” FRIBERG and “as a respectful designation used in addressing persons of varying social or political rank, often equivalent to our sir.” GINGRICH

As used here, the word “Sirs” reflects the perception of the jailer. He was not merely addressing them in a respectful way, as his question will indicate. This was not just a courteous way of speaking, or an expression of politeness. While prior to this time, it appeared as though the jailer was in charge, he now knew this was not the case at all. He was really the subordinate, and it now knew it very well. He therefore spoke to Paul and Silas as his superiors. He knew that what had just occurred was for their sake, and not for his.

The Present Day Society

First, let us note that in all of the above cases, as well as that of our text, the inquirer senses that there was something that needed to be done. Also note that none of them were told that there was really nothing they were required to do.

At this point it is important to note how the society of our day has deteriorated. There is a rapid fading of the recognition of Divine power and authority. Now, puffed up with the wisdom of this world, men account for strange happenings by referring us to changes taking place in the cosmos – like the heating up of the earth due to changes brought on by human activity. I am sure that if these experts could have examined the subterranean structure of the area around Philippi, they could not have found anything that could have accounted for that earthquake. Their scopes and measurement devices would probably have declared that such a thing was impossible.

However, during those times that were technologically primitive, there was a logical superiority. Sailors, like those on the ship Jonah took to Tarsus, knew that more was involved in the storm that hit their vessel than a climactic change. They concluded that some “evil” had brought that storm upon them, and therefore “cast lots” to determine the identity of the evil worker (Jonah 1:7). When the Egyptian magicians confronted a power greater than their own, they said to Pharaoh, “This is the finger of God” (Ex 8:19). Although Nicodemus did not know the full identity of Jesus, He was able to recognize that He was someone with whom God was identified (John 3:2).

There is something to be said in favor of an environment where there is a recognition of Divine power – even if it is not characterized by clarity. Such is a surrounding in which the Lord can work to the profit of the people.

“What Must I Do to Be Saved?”

Other versions read, “what have I to do to get salvation?” BBE “what must I do that I may be saved?” DOUAY “what must I do, that I may have life?” MRD and “what is it necessary for me to do that I may be saved?” AMPLIFIED

This is the only place in all of the Scripture where this question is found. On the day of Pentecost, those who believed what Peter had preached asked, “Men and brethren what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37). When Saul of Tarsus was apprehended by Jesus on the road to Damascus he asked, “Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?” (Acts 9:7). However, our text is the only place the precise question was asked, “What must I do to be saved?”

First, let us note that in all of the above cases, as well as that of our text, the inquirer senses that there was something that needed to be done. Also note that none of them were told that there was really nothing they were required to do.

Perhaps this jailer had either heard, or heard about, that damsel who was following Paul everywhere he went, shouting out, “These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation” (Acts 16:17). Perhaps he had also heard Paul; and Silas praying and singing praises prior to him falling asleep. But, why did he ask this question?

Some have conjectured that he was fearful of losing his own life at the hand of the Roman authorities, and thus inquired about how he could escape their wrath. However, I doubt that this is possible, for he had seen not only the door of the prison standing ajar, and the shackles that once held the prisoners apparently lying on the floor, he also saw all of the prisoners still present – probably standing in their cells as Paul and Silas were in their’s. Furthermore, Paul had shouted out that he should do himself no harm, for they were all there. Therefore, there are a number of reasons why this could have been an appeal to be delivered like that young woman had been delivered from a spirit of divination.

- It seems to me that he had been made aware that Paul and Silas had been preaching “the Gospel” in that area, for that is what they had been called to do (Acts 16:10).
- No doubt he also knew of the shrieking cries of that woman who was possessed by a “spirit of divination.”
- In addition, he probably knew that the merchant’s business had dried up because Paul had cast that spirit out of the woman.

When the world is faced with a church that is obviously committed to, and supported by, the Living God, more inquiries will be made.

- As I have already stated, he had probably heard the prayers and praises of Paul and Silas.
- He had seen the prisons doors standing open, with the means of holding the prisoners fallen to the ground.
- The voice of Paul had rang through that prison, telling not to do any harm, to himself.
- Although there was opportunity to escape, all of the prisons were still present.

That is enough evidence to provoke a desire to have what Paul and Silas had. They had delivered a woman who was possessed by an wicked and alien spirit. God had delivered them from a prison that had been made a firm as humanly possible. It was apparently clear to the jailer that they had something he felt he needed also.

Reasons Why This Question Is Not Heard Often In Our Time

I cannot help but wonder why this kind of inquiry is so rare in our time. It seems I am not alone in this. There are all manner of soul-winning techniques being marketed in church circles. There are even clinics that are called “soul-winning clinics.” There are those who regularly upbraid professing Christians for not being better soul-winners, while others are regularly told that the winning of souls is the only reason the church even exists. Apparently, such benighted souls have never heard that the real church is being built “for a habitation of God through the Spirit” (Eph 2:22).

When the world is faced with a church that is obviously committed to, and supported by, the Living God, more inquiries will be made. The Lord Himself spoke to Israel of the time when their eyes would be opened, and they would realize genuine life and a productive association with Himself. Through Zechariah He said, “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you ” (Zech 8:23).

Paul spoke of a similar circumstance to the Corinthian church that was filled with carnality and division. They had been placing an inordinate emphasis on speaking in tongues, and Paul confirmed the vanity of such an emphasis. He rather spoke of the effect of prophecy, which is insightfully speaking unto edification, exhortation, and comfort (1 Cor 14:3). Here is what he wrote: “If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad? But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all: and thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth ” (1 Cor 14:23-25).

Who is able to calculate the effect of a powerless church in which little or no spiritual fruit is evident? What kind of impact does dead religion have upon, what is referred to as, evangelistic and missionary efforts?

The ineffectiveness of the church is certainly not owing to it passing the information, and living it out as well, that holiness is an absolute requirement of the living God – something “without which no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14). The spread of “true religion” (James 1:27) will take place when the church is holy, and is “filled with the fruits of righteousness” (Phil 1:11). Until that time, only spiritual mediocrity will spread, which mediocrity is the bane of the church world-wide. There are exceptions, but those exceptions are owing to the spiritual reality that is found in the lives of people. That is what is being lived out in this text. Paul and Silas were genuine, and they were blessed by God. That was glaringly apparent to the Philippian jailer, and therefore he asked the question.

PAUL’S RESPONSE

“ 31 And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house. 32 And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.”

Both Paul and Silas do not delay to answer the jailer’s question: “ they said.” Whether they said it simultaneously, or Paul alone said it, it still came from them both. They were of one mind and judgment, and spoke the same thing. Imagine what would have been said if the jailer had addressed this question to a local ministerial association, or to a group of theological students! That response would reflect the spiritual posture of the people.

The answer of Paul and Silas will be brief and to the point. It will be an answer that contains more than the words through which it is expressed. It will be an exact answer that will say what God wanted said. It will also be a key, or pivotal, answer on which every other action will depend.

BELIEVE ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST

“And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.”

First, let us settle in our minds that this statement is the truth, not a mere introduction to the truth. It is obviously not an incomplete statement, with some essential element missing. The preaching of the Word will FOLLOW this statement – a presentation of the One on whom the jailer is to believe. In a sense, this word is readying the man to hear. The means of salvation will be presented as the glorified and enthroned Man – “the Lord Jesus Christ.”

“Believe On”

Other versions read, “believe in,” NASB “have faith in,” BBE “Trust in,” CSB “Become a believer,” NJB “Commit yourself to,” IE and “Believe in . . . [give yourself up to Him, take yourself out of your own keeping and entrust yourself into His keeping].” AMPLIFIED

What does it mean to “believe” ? From the standpoint of language itself, it means: “to be persuaded of; to credit, to place confidence . . . The conviction and trust to which a man is impelled by a certain inner and higher prerogative and law of his soul”; thus it stands, absolutely to trust in Jesus or in God as able to aid either in obtaining or in doing something,” THAYER “be convinced of . . . have confidence in,” FRIBERG “entrust to,” UBS and “rely on.” LIDDELL-SCOTT This is how the word “believe” is used in Scripture. The English definition is, “to accept as true, genuine, or real; to have a firm conviction as to the goodness, efficacy, or ability of something.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER I will base my comments on the way in which the Scriptures use the word. Some elements of that usage are reflected in the English definition, but it is not as thorough as the Scriptural usage.

First, let me observe that the concept of “believe,” as used in Scripture, is not at all common among men. It should not be necessary to make such an observation, for we are speaking about obtaining salvation. How is it possible that such a thing could be obtained by ordinary means, or some purely human capability?

Behold the concepts that are inherent in the Scriptural word “believe.” It should at once be apparent that we are not dealing with something simplistic – like a step in an imagined plan of salvation. In our time, there is a great need for the church to be delivered from carnal simplicity and surface thinking. The leprosy of shallowness is so rotting religious thought that there is scarcely a challenge to the mind in much of what is said by the modern church. Believing has to do with the following.

- PERSUASION. This has to do with the total absence of doubt, and the complete assurance that the One on whom we believe is exactly what He is represented to be, and is thoroughly competent to do what He is represented as doing.
- CONFIDENCE. This is associated with making an actual move to rest the weight of one’s soul upon the Lord Jesus. There is assurance that can move a person to actually walk on water like Peter, raise a withered hand like that man in the synagogue, or pick up your bed and walk like the impotent man by the pool of Bethesda.
- CONVICTION. This is a state of soul in which no further evidence is required. The reality of who Jesus is bursts upon the soul, and there is no doubt concerning His identity, what He has done, or what He can do.
- TRUST. This is an ongoing quality in which the individual readies himself for continued and unquestioned dependence upon the Lord. This is not trust for a season, but for a lifetime.
- BEING IMPELLED. This has to do with an inner compulsion that refuses to be denied. Where it is found there is an immediate and thorough response.
- A LAW OF THE SOUL. Believing goes deeper into the human constitution than the mind. It touches the more capable and thorough aspect of man that not only determines what he thinks, but what he does as well.

• ENTRUST TO. This has to do with relinquishing the imagined control of one's life. The entirety of life is handed over to the Lord Jesus with no doubt concerning the advantages that will result.

• RELY ON. Like trust, reliance is an ongoing quality. The reasoning of the believer is so impacted that he confidently depends on what Jesus will do, even though the details of it all are not apparent.

This brief overview, of course, is itself on the surface of thought, This is because believing fundamentally has to do with the heart – for it is “with the heart” that man believes (Rom 10:10).

It should be apparent that believing thoroughly addresses the matter of human response. It is not possible to join believing and being disobedient. They will not blend together. One simply cannot believe, and yet fail to respond in an acceptable manner. It is impossible to believe and doubt at the same time. Those who affirm that believing is not enough have not seen believing properly. Our text is an affirmation that it is enough, and that is because it is more thorough than sophists imagine.

What About Demons Believing?

Some raise the matter of demons believing, as though that confirmed that believing is not enough. This sophistry is based upon a statement made by James: “Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe, and tremble” (James 2:19).

Note, James is not speaking of believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, but believing “that there is one God.” That is a belief that could be found among “the twelve tribes” of Israel, to whom James wrote (James 1:1). Concerning the persuasion that there is “one God,” James states that the demons “also believe AND tremble” – something (trembling) that his readers were not apparently doing. The demons, however, do not “believe” as men do – that is, upon the basis of testimony. They believe because they have knowledgeable encountered the Living God. He has expelled them from His presence, and His Son personally exercised unquestionable authority over them., No demon ever questioned Jesus, disputed with Him, sought to resist Him, offered any opposition, or fought against Him.

This is not the kind of believing that is involved in being saved. Here we are speaking of a persuasion, reliance, confidence, and absolute trust that is based upon testimony . That means it is effective because of the work of God, not the analysis of men. This is speaking of the kind of believing that is “given” to men, as declared in Philippians 1:29.

“The Lord Jesus Christ”

Believing is on a Person, not a system. This Person stands alone – “THE.” He is the absolute Ruler who is over all – “LORD.” He Himself is a member of the human race, although uniquely so, being sent from heaven to be the Savior of the world – “JESUS.” He is the One who has been designated by God, invested with all power, and charged with bringing the sons of God home to glory – “CHRIST.”

If you think of faith as an arrow, it is to be aimed at Jesus Christ, for if it does not land there, it is of no avail. If you perceive it as a hand, it is to be extended to Christ to obtain what He gives. If it is likened to an eye, it is to be fastened on Christ, to perceive Him and His salvation with greater clarity.

Believing is not on Jesus the Helper – although He is surely that. It is not on Jesus the Sympathetic One – although you will find Him to be so. It is not on Jesus the Healer – although He is thoroughly competent in that matter. Believing is “on the Lord Jesus Christ,” which sees Him as God has presented Him. It perceives Him in the capacity ordained by God. It does not see Jesus as the answer to human need, but as the Executor of the will of God.

I am personally persuaded that many within the Christian community know very little concerning the Person, accomplishments, and work of Jesus Christ. This being true, it bears directly upon both the possibility and extent of believing. Men are either advantaged or disadvantaged by the degree of the faith. It is possible to have “little faith” – but that not what saves and keeps a person.

“Thou Shalt Be Saved”

Other versions read, “will have salvation,” BBE “wilt have life,” MRD and “you shall be being saved.” INTERLINEAR

And what does it mean to “be saved” ? The word “saved” carries the ideas of being rescued from destruction, liberated, restored, preserved, and made safe. That, however, is only from the standpoint of language. Spiritually, and from the Scriptural point of view, being “saved” has to do with many things.

The actual experience of these realities does not require the perception of them. In fact, for some, owing to the eroding effects of sectarian influences, it is many years before they perceive what actually took place when they were “saved.” However, when the Word of God on these matters comes home to their hearts, they can at once see the truth of these realities. It is then that they can live in the power of them.

Whether the jailer knew the scope of salvation at the time or not, these things would actually take place through and because of his faith. At this point of our text, it remains for him to hear the Word concerning “the Lord Jesus Christ.” To this point, whatever he had heard was not apparently sufficient. If this was not the case, he would not have asked the question, “What must I do to be saved?”

“And Thy House”

Other versions read, “and your household,” NASB “and your family will have salvation,” BBE “and your entire household,” LIVING “and all the people living in your house,” IE and “and your household as well.” AMPLIFIED

This text has been corrupted by many to mean that the family of this man would be saved upon the basis of his faith. However, that is not the case at all. Those who are “saved” must themselves believe. They cannot be saved by proxy, so to speak, upon the basis of another.

- Cornelius (Acts 11:14).
- Lydia (Acts 16:15).
- Philippian jailer (Acts 16:31,32,34).
- Crispus (Acts 18:8).

Here, the idea is that the same salvation that was set before the jailer was for his household as well. As used here, the term “house” refers to the dwelling place, not a body of people. The word translated “house” is oi=ko,j, and means “an inhabited house . . . any dwelling place.” THAYER As used here, it means everyone who was living in that house, which could have included any servants or staff, as well as his person family. Wherever the Gospel is preached, whether in a house (Acts 2:2,14), a synagogue (Acts 13:42), the Temple (Acts 5:20), a marketplace (Acts 17:17), or a school (Acts 18:9), the Gospel is addressed to all within hearing distance, and the salvation that is declared is also for them all. By the grace of God, the word of salvation is delivered to “all men” (Tit 2:11). In our text, because they were associated with the jailer, all who were in his house will hear the good news.

THEY SPAKE UNTO HIM THE WORD OF THE LORD

“And they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and to all that were in his house.” Other versions read, “gave the word of the Lord,” BBE “told him . . . the message about the Lord,” CJB “spoke the message of the Lord,” CSB “preached the word of the Lord,” DOUAY “spoke the Lord’s word,” GWN “shared the word of the Lord,” NLT “told him . . . the good news from the Lord,” LIVING “told the story of the Lord,” IE “told the Lord’s message,” “told God’s message,” WILLIAMS “declared the Word of the Lord [the doctrine concerning the attainment through Christ of eternal salvation in the kingdom of God],” AMPLIFIED “the message of God,” PHILLIPS “told him . . . about the Lord,” CEV and “preached the Lord’s word.” GW

The word translated “spake,” or “spoke,” is an interesting one. It is not the word translated “preach,” or “teach.” The Greek word used here is evla,hsan, from the root word lale,w. The lexical meaning of this word is, “to utter oneself, . . . to denote the utterances by which God indicates or gives proof of His mind and will, whether immediately or through the instrumentality of his messengers and heralds . . . to announce or preach the word of God or the doctrine of salvation” THAYER and “speak as with a message . . . of persons, speak, tell, with focus on speaking rather than on logical reasoning.” FRIBERG

The word, here translated “spake” is used two hundred and ninety-seven times from Matthew through Revelation. It is used one hundred and thirty-four times in the Gospels, sixty-three times in the book of Acts, eighty-eight times in the epistles, and twelve times in the Revelation. The majority of the time, the word is translated into some form of “speak” [spoke, spoken, speech]. A few times it is translated “talk” [talked] (Mk 6:50), “told” [tell] (Matt 26:13; Lk 1:45), “preached” (Mk 2:2), “say” [said, saying] (Mk 9:6), and “utter” [uttered] (2 Cor 12:4).

The emphasis here is placed upon speaking, or a clear articulation. That is, the message delivered was an intelligent one, and was calculated to be understood. It was not a philosophical statement, or the utterance of a mere opinion. What was spoken is said to have been “the word of the Lord.” From the standpoint of composition, the subject matter was the Lord Himself. From the standpoint origin, it had its genesis in the Lord.

- In Acts 2:4, the “utterance” is said to have been given by the Holy Spirit, just as Jesus promised (Matt 10:19-20).
- In Acts 2:11, what was spoken was “the wonderful works of God.”
- In Acts 2:31, David is said to have spoken “of the resurrection of Christ.”
- In Acts 3:21, God spoke through “the mouth of all His holy prophets.”
- In Acts 4:20, Peter affirmed they would continue to speak “the things which we have seen and heard.”
- In Acts 4:31 they “spake the word of God with boldness.”
- In Acts 5:20 an angel told the apostles to “stand and speak in the Temple all the words of this life.”
- In Acts 11:14 an angel told Cornelius that Peter would “tell” him “words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.”
- In Acts 14:1 Paul and Barnabas “so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed.”
- In Acts 18:25, Apollos is said to have “spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord.”

- In Acts 19:8, Paul “ spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.”

- In Acts 26:22, Paul affirmed that he said , “none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come.”

In these sample references, it is apparent that the speaking was extended, not being a brief statement. We also see that the subject matter was not centered in worldly experience. These days, an astounding percentage of professed Christian speaking focuses on the experiences of men. This is generally the difficult experiences of humanity, because it is exceedingly difficult for charlatans to capitalize on their good experiences. Such messages do not center in the Lord.

That is, in such proclamations, the Lord Himself is not the Subject, nor are His accomplishments set forth as the preeminent ones. It is man that is presented as the primary object, and his experiences as the fundamental focus. Thus the Lord is held out as the means of realizing personal dreams and ambitions, or settling trying circumstances. This is not the message Paul and Silas delivered. Furthermore, it is not to be the message that the church is to be delivering now. Human circumstances, however grievous it may be perceived to be, cannot justify the displacement of the Gospel for another focus. A variant message cannot save – not in any sense! Nor, indeed, can it be blessed and empowered by God.

A BELIEVER’S RESPONSE

“ 33 And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his, straightway. 34 And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them, and rejoiced, believing in God with all his house.”

The sequence of events is noteworthy. The believing of the jailer is not the first thing that is mentioned.

HE TOOK THEM THE SAME HOUR

“And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes. . .” Other versions read, “that very hour . . . and washed their wounds,” NASB “when he had given attention to their wounds,” BBE “at that late hour . . . washed off their wounds,” CJB “at that hour . . . bathed their wounds,” NAB “cared for them and washed their wounds,” NLT “in that hour . . . did bath them from their blows,” YLT and “bathed [them because of their bloody] wounds.” AMPLIFIED

Even though the jailer did not originate the opposition to Paul and Silas, he had participated in it. Here is a display of bringing forth works “meet for repentance.” This is something that John the Baptist preached in preparing people for the Christ. He told some assuming Pharisees and Sadducees, “Bring forth fruit meet for repentance” (Matt 3:8).

On the day of Pentecost, when the people responded to Peter’s message by crying out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” Peter said they should first “Repent” (Acts 2:37-38). That repentance required a change of conduct as well as a change of mind. Some time later, Peter told another group of people, “ Repent ye therefore, and be converted , that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord” (Acts 3:19). Conversion has to do with the alteration of one’s conduct, and it is required in order that sins may be blotted out. Specifically, to “be converted” means to “definitely turn to God in conduct as well as in mind,” ROBERTSON “absolutely, to turn back morally, to reform,” THAYER “of religious or moral change, change one's ways.” FRIBERG When Peter said “repent ye therefore and be converted,” he was calling for outward conduct that coincided with the turning that was taking place in the heart. If it is countered that no man can change without first being born again, or alter his conduct prior to being in Christ, consider a lame man taking up his bed and walking, or a man with a withered hand stretching it out. Fruits that are “meet for repentance” are changes that are begun in obedience to the word of the Lord, then sustained by the Lord.

Paul testified to king Agrippa that, upon his own conversion, he declared the same thing to both Jews and Gentiles. “Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision: But showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance” (Acts 26:19-20). Other versions read, “do works befitting repentance,” NKJV “prove their repentance by their deeds,” NIV “do deeds consistent with repentance,” NRSV “perform deeds worthy of their repentance,” RSV and “do works and live lives consistent with and worthy of their repentance.” AMPLIFIED There is no reason to doubt that when Paul and Silas spoke the word of the Lord that night, they also declared the requirement of works that testified to the legitimacy of repentance.

NOTE: There are at least three categories of works, and their distinction must be known.

- DEAD WORKS. These are works that are associated with spiritual death, and are committed while one is “dead in trespasses and sins” (Eph 2:1). They were committed prior to any faith or repentance, while one was under the domination of sin and death. They are the expressions of death, and are referred to as “sin,” “transgression,” “iniquity,” “wickedness,” etc.

- WORKS ASSOCIATED WITH REPENTANCE. These are works that are stimulated by repentance, and wrought in the strength of it (Matt 3:8; Acts 26:20). They are referred to as works that are “meet,” “befitting,” or “appropriate.” They have to do with conversion, or the outward alteration of one’s life. They actually have to do with what a person stops doing. That stoppage is seen as a “work.” Repentance – genuine repentance – will enable the individual to halt their wayward manner of life – like Saul ceased immediately to persecute the church. That cessation is nothing more than a beginning, and cannot be sustained until the individual is born of water and of the Spirit (John 3:5). Then the Spirit will lead the person in the continual mortification, or crucifixion, of the deeds of the body. A person who says they cannot cease the expression of sin has not repented, for repentance brings the power to abruptly stop such expressions. That cessation, coupled with the determination to obey, constitutes “works meet for repentance” (Acts 26:20).

Thus we have God demanding the abandonment of sin under the Law. John the Baptist required it in his preparatory ministry for the Lamb of God. Jesus Himself required the forsaking of sin. Paul preached it.

WORKS ASSOCIATED WITH FAITH AND SALVATION. These referred to as “good works,” and are associated with regeneration. They have to do with doing what is good and expressing the life that is in Christ Jesus. They are the works unto which, in Christ Jesus, we have been ordained (Eph 2:10). They are the “good works” that follow the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit (Tit 3:5). They are the “good works” for which the Word of God perfects us (2 Tim 3:17). They are the “good works” that are seen by men, which testify to the genuineness of spiritual life (Matt 5:16).

Of old time, God required this from His people – that their works justify their claim of association with Him. He said to them, “Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts : and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon” (Isa 55:7). To the Ephesians Paul wrote, “This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentiles walk , in the vanity of their mind” (Eph 4:17). Peter wrote, “Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men , but to the will of God” (1 Pet 4:1-2).

Thus we have God demanding the abandonment of sin under the Law. John the Baptist required it in his preparatory ministry for the Lamb of God. Jesus Himself required the forsaking of sin. Paul preached it. I hardly see how any person can justify failing to take such words seriously. To be sure, the jailer did, confirming that he will do anything the Lord requires of him.

Today, there is a leniency toward sin that is wholly unjustified. In fact, it is in stark contradiction of the clear mandate of God. This is largely owing to the intrusion of psychological principles into preaching and teaching. It has been fundamentally corrupting, distorting the understanding of spiritual life, and offering convenient excuses for sin and transgression.

When he found him in the Temple, Jesus told the impotent man He had healed at the pool of Bethesda, "Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee" (John 5:14). He told the woman who was caught in the act of adultery, and was brought to Him, "Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more" (John 8:11). Both of those individuals were required to take that admonition seriously, and to see to it that they sustained a whole-hearted effort to do what the Master said. It is then, and only then, that the required grace and Divine direction would be realized. We are also in precisely the same situation.

HE AND ALL HIS WERE BAPTIZED

"... and was baptized, he and all his, straightway." Other versions read, "and immediately he and all his family were baptized," NKJV "immediately he was baptized, he and all his household," NASB "then he and his entire family were baptized without delay," NRSV "he was baptized at once, with all his family," RSV "he and all his family had baptism straight away," BBE "he and all his family were baptized right away," NET "was baptized with all that belonged unto him straight way," TNT "The jailer and all of his people were immersed right away," IE and "he was baptized immediately and all [the members of] his [household]." AMPLIFIED

There are those who insist that baptism is optional, or, at the least, inconsequential. If this view is correct, exactly how do we account for the jailer and all that were in his house being baptized "immediately?" So far as the record is concerned, he was told that he would be saved if he believed "on the Lord Jesus Christ" (16:31). How did he even know about baptism, and why was he and all those with him willing to be baptized a little after midnight? If baptism is really not associated with salvation, how can we account for such an immediate response at such an inconvenient hour, and during such disruptive circumstances?

The answers to these questions is so obvious there is no need to develop them any further. The truth of the matter is that this is an inspired record, and it has those who believed being baptized immediately after hearing the Word of the Lord, and confirming that repentance had taken place.

All of the things that are associated with baptism took place when this household was baptized – whether they knew it at the time or not.

- They were baptized into Christ's death (Rom 6:3).
- They were buried with Jesus by baptism into death, and raised to walk in newness of life (Rom 6:4).
- Having died to sin, they were freed from its dominion (Rom 6:4-7).
- They were baptized by one Spirit into one body, and made to drink in one Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
- They were baptized into Christ and put on Christ (Gal 3:27).
- They were circumcised with the circumcision not made with hands, in putting off the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ (Col 2:11).

- They were buried with Jesus in baptism, and raised with Him through faith in the operation of God (Col 2:12).
- They were saved by baptism, obtaining a good conscience (1 Pet 3:21).

In the process of spiritual growth, these realities become more clear to us, and the magnitude of our salvation is made more apparent to us. The jailer and his family had the same experience.

HE BROUGHT THEM INTO HIS HOUSE

“And when he had brought them into his house, he set meat before them ...” Other versions read, “he brought them up into his house and set food before them,” ASV “brought them into his own house, he laid the table for them,” DOUAY and “took Paul and Silas upstairs into his home and gave them something to eat.” GWN

It is assumed that the jailer’s living quarters were above the dungeon area. Therefore, some versions read that he brought them “up into his house.” Not only did he bring forth fruits meet for repentance, washing their wounds, but he also immediately was hospitable, bringing Paul and Silas into his own abode to feed and nourish them. As Cornelius and Lydia, his home was open to the messengers who brought the word of salvation.

Paul and Silas had endured maltreatment during the day, and fatigue and hunger during the night. The jailer, being mindful of their circumstance, and of his own role in their condition revenged his disobedience, treating the servants of the Lord with respect and care. Again, it ought to be noted that we are being exposed to genuine conversion, and to the impact it registers upon those who experience it.

THEY REJOICED

“ . . . and rejoiced . . .” Other versions read, “rejoiced greatly,” NASB “was filled with joy” NIV “was full of joy,” BBE “he and his family were,” GWN “celebrated their conversion,” NJB “joyed,” PNT “were very happy,” IE “was filled with gladness,” WEYMOUTH “overjoyed,” MONTGOMERY and “leaped much for joy and exulted with all his family.” AMPLIFIED

It appears to me that, as regards our status in Christ, believing in God has been greatly understated – even treated as though it was something short of what is required.

The spirit of rejoicing was found in the entire household – all who had believed and been baptized. They fulfilled what Peter wrote: “in whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory” (1 Pet 1:8). This is not a joy that is stimulated by exhortation, or indulging in some exercise that is calculated to produce happiness. This was the “joy of faith” – that is, the joy that proceeds from faith (Phil 1:25). Paul wrote of a rejoicing in hope that attends having “access by faith” into the grace wherein we stand (Rom 5:2). This is “joy” that is experienced “in believing” (Rom 15:13).

This is a rational joy that results from comprehending, discerning, and being able to see Him who is invisible (Heb 11:27). It springs from the confidence that is produced by persuasion, and the absence of uncertainty.

BELIEVING IN GOD

“ . . . believing in God.” Other versions read, “having believed with all his house,” NKJV “because he had come to believe in God,” NIV “that he had become a believer in God,” NRSV “having faith in God,” BBE “to be believers in God,” GWN “to belief in God,” NJB “that he with all his household believed in God,” PNT “because they now trusted in God,” IE “resting on God,” WEYMOUTH and “that he believed in God [accepting and joyously welcoming what He had made known through Christ].” AMPLIFIED

Here is a description of converts that is not common: “believing in God.” Paul uses this same description in his letter to Titus: “ This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works” (Titus 3:8). Jesus also used this language to His disciples when He said, “Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God , believe also in me” (John 14:1). It appears to me that, as regards our status in Christ, believing in God has been greatly understated – even treated as though it was something short of what is required. The conversion of the Gentiles is reported by saying they “are turned unto God ” (Acts 15:19). Paul’s apostleship involved turning men “from Satan unto God ” (Acts 26:18). Paul declared to both Jews and Gentiles “that they should repent and turn to God ” (Acts 26:20).

Peter put this kind of believing in a proper perspective, when he told believers it was through Jesus that they believed in God. “Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot: Who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, Who by him do believe in God , that raised him up from the dead, and gave him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:18-21).

The Purpose for Salvation Cannot Be Invalidated

In the sense in which Peter wrote, believing in God is something we are enabled to do by Jesus Christ, through whose blood we have been redeemed.

To excuse recalcitrance, disobedience, hesitancy to obey, and defaulting to the flesh is nothing more than yielding to the devil’s reasoning. To state that believers are just like Israel, and that they have similar propensities to walk in their own ways, is to deny the fundamental change that is wrought in the new birth.

Further, God raised His Son from the dead and gave Him glory in order that our faith and hope might be in God . That means that where faith and hope in God is lacking, the purpose of redemption has not been fulfilled in the individual. This perfectly coincides that the stated objective of Jesus, to “bring us to God ” (1 Pet 3:18). However men may choose to explain why professing Christians fail to “live NOT unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them and rose again,” such a circumstance contradicts the revealed purpose of Christ’s death (2 Cor 5:15). There is no argument, however astute and filled with Scripture, that can support such a postulate. After all of the arguments have been presented for God being obligated to save forever those who do not actually live “for Him” NIV who died for them, such a thing necessitates a salvation that is different than the One for which Christ died.

To excuse recalcitrance, disobedience, hesitancy to obey, and defaulting to the flesh is nothing more than yielding to the devil’s reasoning. To state that believers are just like Israel , and that they have similar propensities to walk in their own ways, is to deny the fundamental change that is wrought in the new birth. In the book of Acts we have examples of real conversions. In the epistles we have doctrines delivered to real believers. When sin surfaced among believers, they were told to cease from it (1 Cor 15:34). They were admonished to put off the inclinations of “the old man” (Rom 9:13; Eph 4:22), “lay aside” sins and weights (Heb 12:1), and perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord (2 Cor 7:1). The reason for these admonitions is the reality of salvation, not a theory of salvation. In the salvation of God, there is no allowance for the continuance of sin, and you must embrace such a notion. Rather, men are “freed from sin” (Rom 6:6,18,22). Those who “cannot cease from sin” and have “forsaken the right way,” are likened to “natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed,” who “speak evil of the things that they understand not; and shall utterly perish in their own corruption” (2 Pet 2:12-15). However you view it, that is not good.

No person of sound mind would contend that any sinner can be saved without turning to God and believing and obeying the Gospel of Christ. The very same reasoning that leads to that conclusion, also demands a continuance in the faith, and a refusal to again be dominated by sin.

A MOVE BY THE MAGISTRATES

“ 35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go. 36 And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.”

Paul and Silas, and no doubt the rest of the prisoners, spent the remainder of the night in the prison complex – with the doors removed and their shackles detached. We assume that Paul and Silas remained in the place occupied by the jailer and his family, probably continuing to open the truth to the household.

THE NEXT DAY

“And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying, Let those men go.” Other versions read, “sent their officers,” NKJV “sent their policemen,” NASB “sent the police.” NSRV

The city officials sent the ones charged with maintaining the order in the city with a special message for the jailer. We are not told what prompted this move, but we can surely reason it out at the higher level. If “salvation is of the Lord” (Jonah 2:9), and He is the one that gives “deliverance” (Ezra 9:13), commanding it when He sees fit (Psa 44:4), then this was the result of His doing. He is the One who turned the hearts of the magistrates, like He turns the heart of the king, which is “in His hand” (Prov 21:1). It is declared, “The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the LORD ” (Prov 16:1) – and both are involved in this text. It has even been revealed that God has turned the heart of some to hate His people: “ He turned their heart to hate his people , to deal subtly with his servants” (Psa 105:25). Then, when His people were carried away captive, “He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives” (Psa 106:46). This is the God who is at work in our text, and all of this is on order to the fulfillment of His purpose, and the display of His glory.

The determination to release these men was made by the same ones who decided that they should be thrown into prison. It was not a higher court that overthrew the decision of a lower court. Who but God can work in such a marvelous and orderly manner, moving men to reverse their own judgment!

THE PRISON KEEPER TOLD PAUL

“ And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go: now therefore depart, and go in peace.”

Notice how the jailer at once speaks to Paul, knowing that he was the one God had placed in charge. He also was continuing to operate within the framework of the law, and Paul had made no suggestion that he do otherwise. Although he had been justified by God, and freed from the dominion of sin, the jailer was still obedient to those who were over him. The Gospel he had heard, and the fellowship he had with Paul and Silas had not led him to the conclusion that he was no longer responsible to those who were over him. The Gospel still does not lead men to that conclusion. It is only at the point that there is a clash between the civil law and Divine requirements that objections are in order.

PAUL DOES NOT OVERLOOK THE MATTER

“ 37 But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out. 38 And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.”

We are now exposed to the practicality of a spiritual mind. We will also see the kind of liberty that walking in the Spirit and living unto the Lord brings.

PAUL’S RESPONSE

“But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.”

Beaten Openly and Uncondemned

Other versions read, “beaten us openly, uncondemned Romans,” NKJV “beat us in public without trial, men who are Romans,” NASB and “They have given us who are Romans a public whipping without judging us.” BBE

Some trials and abuse are private – like the night-time trial of Jesus before Caiaphas, and the summoning of false witnesses against Him (Mk 14:54-66). When the Jewish council beat the apostles, they also did it privately, and not before the people (Acts 5:40).

One might ask why Paul did not make this point prior to the beating he and Silas sustained. At that time, there was an awareness that they had been preaching the Gospel, and had cast a spirit out of a woman. It appears that he sought to do nothing that would detract from what they had been doing, as though personal interests and welfare were more important at the time. Thus, it appears, he waits for a more appropriate occasion to register this complaint, removing all doubt that he was driven by purely self-interests.

The thing to note here is that it is to the advantage of Kingdom laborers to be aware of potential advantages that may be available to them. These are not things in which we are to trust. However, they are a part of the world that we can “use,” while not abusing it .

Further, an injustice had been done, and at this time, after the abuse, that would be more readily apparent. Now, it would be more clear that their accusers thought nothing of violating the law they professed to honor, in order to carry out their own private intentions.

Being Romans

Romans were protected from abuse by civil law. Matthew Henry gives the following remarks on this subject. “Now both the lex Procia and the lex Sempronia did expressly forbid liberum corpus Romani civis, virgis aut aliis verberibus caedi — the free body of a Roman citizen to be beaten with rods or otherwise. Roman historians give instances of cities that had their charters taken from them for indignities done to Roman citizens.” MATTHEW HENRY COMMENTARY Cicero wrote, “It is a transgression of the law to bind a Roman citizen: it is wickedness to scourge him.” Orat. pro Rabirio

Thus the accusers of Paul and Silas, motivated by their own greed, had broken the law. They had charged the men of God with being Jews, not taking the time to ensure that they were not Roman citizens. Apparently they found it difficult to think of them as being Romans, according to earthly jurisdiction. Some time later, when Paul was being bound with thongs in preparation for being “examined by scourging,” he asked a centurion that was standing by, “Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?” (Acts 22:25). After reporting the situation to “the chief captain,” Paul was asked if he was, indeed, “a Roman.” Paul said he was, confessing that he was “freeborn,” or a natural born citizen, being of Tarsus.

The thing to note here is that it is to the advantage of Kingdom laborers to be aware of potential advantages that may be available to them. These are not things in which we are to trust. However, they are a part of the world that we can “use,” while not abusing it (1 Cor 7:31).

Let Them Come Themselves

Other versions read, “let them come themselves and bring us out,” NASB “escort us out,” NIV “take us out themselves,” NRSV “lead us out,” NAB “to release us,” NLT and “conduct us out.”
AMPLIFIED

If anyone had cause for shame, it was the magistrates who had proceeded with the beating and imprisoning of Paul and Silas, and doing so without a fair hearing, which Roman Law required. In addition, they had not inquired concerning their citizenship, but had proceeded on the basis of assumption, giving more credit to the accusers than was proper according to civility in general, and Roman Law in particular.

Throughout Scripture, God has revealed His hatred of law-breaking, a lack of justice, and intruding upon others.

God’s Intolerance of Injustice

Throughout Scripture, God has revealed His hatred of law-breaking, a lack of justice, and intruding upon others. In the days of Noah, the description of the world was that of the ultimate intrusion upon others: “The earth also was corrupt before God, and the earth was filled with violence . And God looked upon the earth, and, behold, it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth. And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them ; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth” (Gen 6:11-13). It is expressly stated that He hates the soul that loves violence (Psa 11:5).

Under the Law, injustice was strictly forbidden. “Ye shall do no unrighteousness in judgment ” (Lev 19:15, 35; Deut 16:19; 24:17). In delineating the curses of the Law it was written, “Cursed be he that perverteth the judgment of the stranger, fatherless, and widow . And all the people shall say, Amen” (Deut 27:19).

The Psalmist spoke of God rising up in defense of those who were unjustly oppressed. “For the oppression of the poor, for the sighing of the needy, now will I arise, saith the LORD; I will set him in safety from him that puffeth at him” (Psa 12:5). Asaph challenged the leaders of the people, “How long will ye judge unjustly , and accept the persons of the wicked? Sela. Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy. Deliver the poor and needy: rid them out of the hand of the wicked” (Psa 82:2-4). Solomon wrote, “He that justifieth the wicked, and he that condemneth the just , even they both are abomination to the LORD” (Prov 17:15). An unjust man is also “an abomination to the just” (Prov 29:127).

The prophets thundered out against injustice in the land. “Thus saith the LORD; Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place” (Jer 22:3). Behold how pointedly they spoke: “Forasmuch therefore as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat : ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink wine of them. For I know your manifold transgressions, and your mighty sins: they afflict the just, they take a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right ” (Amos 5:11-12).

God spoke to Israel about preparing for His salvation. “Thus saith the LORD, Keep ye judgment, and do justice : for My salvation is near to come, and My righteousness to be revealed. Blessed is the man that doeth this, and the son of man that layeth hold on it; that keepeth the sabbath from polluting it, and keepeth his hand from doing any evil” (Isa 56:1-2).

In commending Abraham , God said, “For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the LORD, to do justice and judgment ; that the LORD may bring upon Abraham that which He hath spoken of him” (Gen 18:19).

It is also written of David “And David reigned over all Israel; and David executed judgment and justice unto all his people” (2 Sam 8:15).

The Queen of Sheba said of Solomon , “Blessed be the LORD thy God, which delighted in thee, to set thee on the throne of Israel: because the LORD loved Israel for ever, therefore made he thee king, to do judgment and justice ” (1 Kgs 10:9).

When Daniel told Nebuchadnezzar of the impending judgment that would cause him to lose his mind for seven years, and be among the beasts, he added these words “Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by showing mercy to the poor ; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity” (Dan 4:27).

Oppression and Injustice in Religion

Injustice is always wrong, but never more so when it takes place within the professed church. As if it was not enough that history is cluttered with the persecution of the righteous by governments and heathen nations, believers have been oppressed by their own fellows. There are Christian institutions that have treated believers in an unjust manner, doing so in the name of the institution, as though that justified maligning the godly. Countless numbers of faithful preachers have suffered at the hands of men called “elders,” and church boards. It is all conveniently excused in the interest of the betterment of the institution, but it is still wrong. Of course, God is going to avenge all such oppression.

When Defense Is In Order

The determination of the propriety of standing in defense of one’s self is not something that can be decided by rules or procedures. First of all, it can only be done when one is actually living unto the Lord, devoting the whole of their life to Him, and active in doing His will. Second, spiritual perception must dictate the action. If the cause of Christ is subject to disdain, put at a disadvantage by the injustice, or the name of the Lord blasphemed, then it is proper to consider such a defense.

Paul defended himself against who misrepresented what he was preaching (Rom 3:7-8). He defended himself against those who questioned his apostleship (1 Cor 9:1-23). He also defended himself against the false charges brought against him by the Jews in a civil court (Acts 24:12-21). In none of those cases, as well as in the text before us, was Paul advancing his own person, or seeking a worldly advantage.

THE MAGISTRATES FEARED

“And the serjeants told these words unto the magistrates: and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.”

These men did not fear God, but they did fear their government; thus Paul, after a godly sort, took advantage of that fear. He did much the same thing when he was hauled before the Jewish council on erroneous charges. When he

Just as in our text, Paul was wise enough to take advantage of the situation, and do so in a godly manner. It is good for those who labor in the vineyard of the Lord to know how to “walk in wisdom toward them that are without perceived that his accusers were a mixed group of Sadducees and Pharisees, he knew they were actually divided among themselves on theological matters. The account is found in Acts 23:6-10. This is the text from the Amplified Bible. “But Paul, when he perceived that one part of them were Sadducees and the other part Pharisees, cried out to the council (Sanhedrin), Brethren, I am a Pharisee, a son of Pharisees; it is with regard to the hope and the resurrection of the dead that I am indicted and being judged. So when he had said this, an angry dispute arose between the Pharisees and the Sadducees; and the whole [crowded] assemblage was divided [into two factions]. For the Sadducees hold that there is no resurrection, nor angel nor spirit, but the Pharisees declare openly and speak out freely, acknowledging [their belief in] them both. Then a great uproar ensued, and some of the scribes of the Pharisees’ party stood up and thoroughly fought the case, [contending fiercely] and declaring, We find nothing evil or wrong in this man. But if a spirit or an angel [really] spoke to him—? Let us not fight against God! And when the strife became more and more tense and violent, the commandant, fearing that Paul would be torn in pieces by them, ordered the troops to go down and take him forcibly from among them and conduct him back into the barrack.”

Just as in our text, Paul was wise enough to take advantage of the situation, and do so in a godly manner. It is good for those who labor in the vineyard of the Lord to know how to “walk in wisdom toward them that are without” (Col 4:5).

Too often, professing Christians do not fulfill this word, choosing to remain simple about life, and therefore being put at an even greater disadvantage. They are unable to avoid dangers or recognize opportunities. Walking in wisdom toward those who are unbelievers not only involves giving them no occasion to blaspheme, but also not allowing them to put the believer at a greater disadvantage than is necessary.

THEY CAME AND BESOUGHT THEM

“ 39 And they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city.” Other versions read, “pleaded with them . . . and asked them,” NKJV “appealed to them . . . they kept begging them,” NASB “appease them . . . requesting them,” NIV “apologized to them . . . and asked them,” NRSV and “[striving to appease them by entreaty] apologized to them . . . and asked them.” AMPLIFIED

It appears from the text that these men feared Paul and Silas would press charges against them, making a kind of public spectacle of their legal blunder. That, however, was not the purpose of the men of God.

How the countenance, demeanor, and words of these men had changed! All of their legal authority was of no comfort to them now. They, like the centurion who had besought Jesus, knew they were men “under authority” (Matt 8:9). They had violated a precept of their own law, and were well aware of the consequences of such an action. Behind the scenes, however, the Lord had turned their hearts and put fear into them. Furthermore, He did it through the words of His servant, Paul, who had demanded that they themselves come and release them, escorting them from the prison. This would be a public admission of their wrongdoing, yet would not be pressed any further by the apostle.

The wisdom of this action is seen in the fact that it would diminish the possibility of further disruption by the authorities. They would not be easily disposed to come against Paul and Silas again after this humiliating setback.

There is one other thing that I see here that is refreshing to consider. When a man’s ways please the Lord, “He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him” (Prov 16:7). Often, as in this text, He will come to the defense of such a person within a civil context. The extent to which the Lord comes to the aid of those who live by faith can scarcely be imagined. He has been known to support them in famine (1 Kgs 17:4-6,9), put fear into the hearts of their enemies (2 Kgs 3:16-23), shut the mouths of lions (Dan 6:22), and dispatch holy angels to keep them safe in a furnace (Dan 3:25). He can move a military man to receive the counsel of a young boy, and take measures to protect the apostle Paul (Acts 23:16-31). He can move barbarous people to treat shipwrecked foreigners with kindness, rather than exploit and plunder them (Acts 28:2).

However, those foolish souls who choose to “provoke” the Lord by their inconsideration and waywardness forfeit all of these advantages. It is still true, “They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy” (Jonah 2:8). The pure in heart gain all manner of advantage before the Lord. As for others, it is written, “With the pure thou wilt show Thyself pure; and with the froward Thou wilt show thyself froward” (Psa 18:26). All of this is being lived out in our text.

I do not believe enough is being said these days about such matters. While it is not at all fashionable to encourage people to commit sin, a feigned gospel is being preached that teaches them to view sin as something that does not take advantages from them. It is not seen as driving a wedge between men and God, separating them not only from His Person, but from the benefits that come from Him as well (Isa 59:2).

PAUL AND SILAS LEAVE

“40 And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia: and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.”

Where will Paul and Silas go after they are escorted out of the prison? Their action will further acquaint us with the priorities of the Kingdom of God.

WHAT THEY DID WHEN THEY DEPARTED

“And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia . . .” Other versions read, “After Paul and Silas came out of prison, they went to Lydia’s house,” NIV and “leaving the prison, they went to Lydia’s home.” NRSV

The Philippian jailer had somewhat the same experience as the Ethiopian eunuch. The one who was used to convert him was suddenly taken from him.

The Philippian jailer had somewhat the same experience as the Ethiopian eunuch. The one who was used to convert him was suddenly taken from him. The difference here is that a cluster of believers was located in the very city in which the jailer lived. I do not doubt that Paul and Silas made the man aware of the brethren. It is even possible that he and his house went with them to Lydia’s home.

It appears from this text that the house of Lydia was a kind of base of operation during the stay of Paul and Silas in Philippi. As was the custom of those who were “workers together with God,” they preferred the consistent company of the saints.

When Peter and John were released by the Jewish council, “they went to their own company” – the believers in Jerusalem (Acts 4:23). When Peter was miraculously delivered from prison, “he came to the house of Mary the mother of John, whose surname was Mark; where many were gathered together praying” (Acts 12:12). When Paul came to Ptolemais, “he greeted the brethren, and abode with them one day” (Acts 21:7). When he came to Caesarea, he stayed at the house of Phillip (Acts 21:8). When Apollos went into the region of Achaia, it is written, “And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia,

“the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace” (Acts 18:27).

It is truly “good and pleasant for brethren to dwell together in unity” (Psa 133:1-3). That is more than a mere saying, or goal. It is a reality that is brought about because the brethren know of, and have embraced, the realities declared in Ephesians: “There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all” (Eph 4:4-6). This is why Paul and Silas, like other laborers, gravitated to those of “like-precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1). When such a preference is not apparent, both the legitimacy and effectiveness of the purported ministry is questionable.

THEY COMFORTED THEM AND DEPARTED

“ . . . and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.” Other versions read, “encouraged them, and departed,” NKJV “when they had encouraged the brothers and sisters there, they departed,” NRSV “exhorted them and departed,” RSV “gave them comfort, and went away,” BBE “encouraged them once more. Then they left town,” NLT “preached to them once more before leaving town,” LIVING and “they warned and urged and consoled and encouraged them and departed.” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “comforted” is pregnant with meaning. It is a Kingdom word that speaks of a Kingdom concept and necessity. In referring to the progress of the early church, it is written that they “were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied” (Acts 9:31). Thus “comfort” is seen as both an activity and the environment in which the growth that characterizes the Kingdom is realized.

The Greek root word from which “comforted” is translated (parakale,w). is used twenty-one times in the book of Acts. It has a very broad lexical meaning : “to address, speak to . . . exhortation, entreaty, instruction . . . admonish, . . . enjoin a thing,” THAYER “earnestly ask, implore . . . urge, encourage,” FRIBERG “appeal to,” UBS and “strengthen.” LEH

The root meaning of this word is to “call to one’s side.” THAYER The idea is that “comfort” is something that is very personal. The one doing the comforting identifies with the people, aiming to bring certain advantages to them. There is also the idea of moving them in the right direction, or putting them into the path of blessing. In Scripture, “comfort” does not necessarily mean the ones being comforted are experiencing pain or discomfort. It does presume that they require help, assistance, and clarity of vision. In other words, being in the world, they are in a place of jeopardy that requires exhortation, admonition, direction, and consolation – all of which are wrapped up in the word “comfort.”

Below are a few of the texts from the book of Acts in which the word is used as it is in our text. I have accented the English word that is used, and underlined objective of the action.

- SEPARATION FROM A WAYWARD GENERATION. “And with many other words did he testify and exhort , saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation ” (Acts 2:40).
- HOLDING ON TO THE LORD. “Who, when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart they would cleave unto the Lord ” (Acts 11:23).
- CONTINUING IN THE FAITH, AND ENTERING THROUGH TRIBULATION. “Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God ” (Acts 14:22).

The epistles mention this word sixty-one times. Some of its uses are provided below, with the same accents as shown above.

• PRESENT YOUR BODIES TO GOD. “I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God , which is your reasonable service” (Rom 12:1).

• NOTE THOSE CAUSING DIVISION AND OFFENSE. “Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them ” (Rom 16:17).

• NO DIVISION. “Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you ; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment ” (1 Cor 1:10).

• BE RECONCILED TO GOD. “Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God ” (2 Cor 5:20).

• DO NOT RECEIVE THE GRACE OF GOD IN VAIN. “We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain ” (2 Cor 6:1).

• WALK WORTHY OF YOUR CALLING. “I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called ” (Eph 4:1).

• PLEASE GOD IN AN ABOUNDING MANNER. “Furthermore then we beseech you, brethren, and exhort you by the Lord Jesus, that as ye have received of us how ye ought to walk and to please God, so ye would abound more and more ” (1 Thess 4:1).

• WARN, COMFORT, AND BE PATIENT. “Now we exhort you, brethren, warn them that are unruly, comfort the feebleminded, support the weak, be patient toward all men ” (1 Thess 5:14).

• MAKE SUPPLICATIONS, PRAYERS, INTERCESSIONS AND THANKSGIVING. “I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; For kings, and for all that are in authority ; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty” (1 Tim 2:1-2).

brethren, suffer the word of exhortation ” (Heb 13:22).

• ABSTAIN FROM FLESHLY LUSTS. “Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul ” (1 Pet 2:11).

• FEED THE FLOCK OF GOD. “The elders which are among you I exhort , who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you , taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind” (1 Pet 5:1-2).

• CONTEND FOR THE FAITH. “Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints ” (Jude 1:3).

Notice that none of these texts deal with the personal crises or trials of individuals. We have no idea what personal difficulties or challenges any of those meeting in Lydia's house were having. The same characteristic is found in all of the writings to the churches. The apostles did not emphasize extensive involvement with people at the detailed level. This, of course, is in sharp contrast to the manner of contemporary religion, with all of its specialists and programs.

Now, there is a reason for the manner in which “comfort” was ministered in a more general way. Salvation comes with a vast array of spiritual resources. There is no essential need of man that is not addressed by reconciliation to God. The salvation of God is specifically and thoroughly adapted for those who are living on the earth. It is tailored for those who are in the world, yet not of it – who experience oppositions, trials, friction, and hardships that occur in “this present evil world.”

There is access to God that belongs to everyone who is in Christ Jesus (Rom 5:2; Eph 3:12). Because of this, grace can be obtained to give help in the time of need. Every person who is in Christ is “complete in Him” (Col 2:10). There are no essential resources outside of Him. There is no addendum to Jesus, nor has He joined in affinity with something or someone else who also supplies needed resources. Everything that does not originate with Him, yet comes in His name, is nothing more than a delusion. If any person leans on a humanly conceived plan or procedure, it will prove to be harmful, and will pierce through their hand. What was said of Pharaoh, who appeared to have what Israel needed, may also be said of such plans. “Look! You are trusting in the staff of this broken reed, Egypt, on which if a man leans, it will go into his hand and pierce it. So is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all who trust in him” NKJV (Isa 36:6).

The point is that when holy men of God comfort the saints, they deliver words relating to their association with the Lord. Their purpose is not to resolve personal difficulties that are not directly related to that association. I do understand that this is a volatile issue with some. This is largely owing to the careers, materials, and financial involvements related to the hawking of plans and procedures. However, all such plans will eventually bear this epitaph: “This also is vanity” (Eccl 2:1,15,21,26; 4:16; 7:6; 8:14).

Thus “comfort” is seen as both an activity and the environment in which the growth that characterizes the Kingdom is realized.

A Word of Caution

These words are not intended to encourage, or in any way approve of, the neglect of brethren who are in need – such as the “poor saints in Jerusalem” (Rom 15:26). Nor do they minimize the necessity of doing good to all men (Gal 6:10). When any believer sees his brother has need, he is not to shut up the bowels of compassion. He is rather to use his resources to relief such brethren (James 2:16-17; 1 John 3:17-18). My aim here is to confirm that this is not the primary work of the saints, and is not to be approached as though it was.

CONCLUSION

Thus we come to the conclusion of the initial ministry of Paul and Silas in Philippi – a ministry to which Paul was called. If you were to assess this ministry according to an institutional agenda, it would not be impressive. There really was not much on which an organization or ministry, as ordinarily perceived, could be built.

- No one met them when they arrived, even though Paul had a vision of a man in Macedonia crying out, “Come over into Macedonia, and help us.”
- Paul and company made a trip to Philippi, and again they did not encounter anyone who appeared to be in quest of the Lord, or was in any way seeking spiritual assistance.
- After remaining in Philippi for some days, they learned of a place of prayer to which people went on the Sabbath day. They went to that place – by a river – on the Sabbath.
- When they arrived at the place of prayer, there was a group of women who regularly resorted there. There was not man present, even though Paul’s vision was of a man calling out.

- Paul and Silas spoke to the women, during which time at least one of them listened intently to him – Lydia by name, a seller of purple.
- The Lord opened this woman’s heart so she could respond to the message Paul delivered.
- Lydia and her household were baptized.
- Lydia asked Paul to evaluate whether or not she had been faithful to the Lord. If so, she asked him and his company to abide in her house.
- Some time later, when Paul and Silas were returning to the place of prayer, they encountered a woman who was possessed by a spirit of divination. She followed them, shrieking out that they were servants of the most high God, and had come to show them a way of salvation. She was a slave girl, and brought considerable income to her masters through her soothsaying.
- The woman continued following Paul and Silas, crying out the same words, and causing Paul to be grieved, or vexed, within.
- It was then that Paul spoke to the spirit of divination, commanding it to come out of the woman. The spirit immediately left her.
- Now that she could no longer divine, or prognosticate, the source of her master’s livelihood was gone. Angered with the whole incident, her masters laid their hands on Paul and Silas, and dragged them into the city square, putting them before the magistrates.
- They charged Paul and Silas with causing trouble in the city, and demanding that the people do things that were forbidden by Roman law.
- The magistrates, yielding to the owners of this slave girl, commanded that Paul and Silas be beaten with rods many times, and then had them thrown into prison.
- While in the inner dungeon, with their feet in stocks, Paul and Silas prayed and sang praises to God – it was at the midnight hour, and the other prisoners heard them.
- In response to their prayers and praise, heaven sent a great earthquake, which was very focused. It resulted in the whole prison being shaken, but not destroyed. All of the doors were opened, and all of the prisoner’s shackles fell off.
- Upon being wakened, the jailer saw all of the doors opened, and surmised that the prisoners had all escaped. Knowing that he would be held in account for them, he drew his sword and prepared to kill himself.
- Paul saw him, and cried out with a loud voice to do himself no harm. All of the prisoners were still there.
- The jailer called for a light to confirm that situation, then came directly to Paul and Silas. Falling down before them, he asked what he had to do to be saved.
- Paul declared that he should believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and then he would be saved, including those in his house.
- Paul then spoke the word of the Lord to the jailer and all of his house.
- The same hour of the night, in confirmation of his repentance, the jailer washed the wounds of Paul and Silas, and was then baptized, together with all that were in his house.
- The jailer then brought Paul and Silas into his living quarters, placing a meal before them, and believing in God with all of his house.
- The next morning, the magistrates changed their minds about Paul and Silas, and sent word to the jailer to release them.

- When the jailer told Paul, he remonstrated, saying that they had been condemned and beaten publicly without the required trial, reminding him that they were Romans, and had been dealt with illegally. He demanded that the magistrates personally come and escort them, from the prison.

- Upon coming, the magistrates pleaded with them to leave the city.

- Paul and Silas then went to the house of Lydia, comforted the brethren, and departed. Thus concluded this part of their mission.

Can you conceive of this all being reported as a successful mission at a religious convention, or being written up in a brotherhood journal. And yet, the Lord had this written for believers of all ages to read!

Does this sound like the kind of beginning a successful and God-honoring church would have? Who could imagine this being set forth as a church-planting methodology? Yet, this was the beginning of the church at Philippi, which is represented as being distinctive, fellowshiping “in the Gospel,” and continuing in that fellowship, from the very first day they heard it (Phil 1:5).

Does this sound like the kind of beginning a successful and God-honoring church would have? Who could imagine this being set forth as a church-planting methodology?

This is a slice of very real spiritual life – life that is produced and maintained by the holy Spirit. It reveals a number of things worth pondering.

- The Spirit does not always lead in apparent ways.
- Although it is planned out very particularly in heaven, the work of the Lord requires considerable effort on the part of those involved in it.
- Some doors never become apparent until we look for them.
- Those who respond to the Gospel may be quite different than what we first envisioned.
- When God opens a person’s heart, they respond with obedience.
- Those who believe do not balk at any Divine requirement.
- Sometimes it is easier to cast out a demon than to deal with mortals.
- The servants of God are often treated unjustly.
- Faith can produce prayer and praise in the midst of darkness and pain.
- God can change the entire situation in an instant, without any involvement from men at all.
- It is possible to stay in a place where you were once chained, but do so willingly without the chains.
- A person who is intent upon doing what is harmful to himself can be stopped with a word.
- It is possible for oppressors to suddenly become aware of who is really in charge.
- A person who truly repents will confirm it by what he does.
- Those who oppress us can be brought to plead with us.
- Freed souls prefer to be with God’s people.
- Faithful ministers bring advantages to the people of God.
- When the work is completed, it is time to go.

TROUBLE IN THESSALONICA

17:1 “ Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews: 2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures, 3 Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ. 4 And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few. 5 But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people. 6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also; 7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus. 8 And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things. 9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go. 10 And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews. 11 These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so. 12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honorable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few. 13 But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people. 14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still. 15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed. ” (Acts 17:1-15)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE TEXT

Having completed their initial mission to Philippi, Paul and company now move to another region, maintaining their focus on the mission to preach the Gospel to the region of Macedonia. As was their custom, they headed for the synagogue of the region, and commenced powerfully preaching Christ. Just as in other regions, certain of the Jews objected to their message, being moved with envy. Launching a campaign against Paul and Silas, their plans are frustrated because these Jews cannot find God's messengers. The brethren immediately

They examined what Paul and Silas were preaching, searching the Scriptures to see if what they were saying was really true. As a result, many of them believed. Upon hearing of this, the Jews from Thessalonica came, and again stirred up trouble.

RECORDED RESPONSES

To this point – a period covering approximately 30 years – there have been a variety of responses to the preaching of the Gospel. These reactions reveal the nature of the Gospel, as well as the nature of men. They confirm the power of the Gospel, which is the means used to reveal the nature of men as well as the intention of the Gospel of Christ. While you are no doubt familiar with these varied reactions, it is good to peruse them in the form of a cluster. In so doing the magnitude of what is made known in them becomes more evident.

- PENTECOST (2:14-38). Those who gladly received the Word were baptized, and 3,000 were added.

- IN THE TEMPLE (3:1-4:4). The Jewish authorities were provoked to anger and opposed them. Also, above 5,000 men believed at that time.

- BEFORE THE COUNCIL (4:5-21). The word is rejected and Peter and John are threatened.

- IN THE TEMPLE (5:21-25). No response recorded.

- BEFORE THE COUNCIL (5:26-40). The word is rejected, the apostles are beaten, commanded to cease speaking in Jesus' name, and released.

• STEPHEN IN THE SYNAGOGUE (6:9-13). The people disputed with him. But could not resist his wisdom.

• STEPHEN BEFORE THE COUNCIL (7:3-59). His word was rejected, and he was stoned to death.

• PHILIP TO SAMARIA (8:5-13). The whole city believed and were baptized.

• PHILIP TO THE ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH (8:26-39). The eunuch believed and was baptized.

To this point – a period covering approximately 30 years – there have been a variety of responses to the preaching of the Gospel. These reactions reveal the nature of the Gospel, as well as the nature of men.

• PHILIP PREACHING FROM AZOTUS TO CAESAREA (8:40). No record of the response.

• SAUL IN THE SYNAGOGUE (9:20-23). Those who heard him were amazed, he confounded the Jews, and they took counsel to kill him.

• SAUL IN JERUSALEM (9:29). His word was rejected, and the Grecians went about to slay him.

• PETER TO CORNELIUS AND HIS HOUSE (10:34-48). The hearers believed, received the Holy Spirit, and were baptized.

• THE PREACHING OF THOSE SCATTERED BY THE PERSECUTION THAT AROSE OVER STEPHEN (8:4; 11:19-21). A great number believed and turned to the Lord.

• PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF SALAMIS (13:5). No response is recorded.

• PAUL AND BARNABAS TO A GOVERNOR (13:7-12). The governor believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

• PAUL IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA (13:16-52). The Gentiles asked to hear more, and were persuaded to continue in the grace of God. The unbelieving Jews rose up against them, and expelled them from their coasts.

• PAUL AND BARNABAS IN A SYNAGOGUE IN ICONIUM (14:1-5). A great multitude of Jews and Greeks believed, and the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles against Paul and Barnabas, making an attempt to have them stoned

• PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE REGION OF LYCAONIA (14:6-19). The people think Paul and Barnabas are gods come down to earth, attempt to offer sacrifice to them, and Paul and Barnabas scarcely restrain them from doing so. Certain Jews came down and stoned Paul.

• PAUL AND BARNABAS IN DERBE (14:20-21). No response is recorded.

• PAUL AND BARNABAS IN PERGA (15:25). No response is recorded.

• PAUL AND SILAS TO SOME WOMEN IN PHILIPPI (16:13-15). The Lord opened Lydia's heart so she can attend to the word, she and her household believe, and Paul and Silas are welcomed into Lydia's home.

• PAUL AND SILAS TO THE PHILIPPIAN JAILER (16:31-34). The jailer is baptized, believing in God with all of his house.

Notice the divergence of the recorded responses – from hostility to the glad reception of the truth..

- Gladly received the word and were baptized.
- Opposition commenced.
- Many believed.
- Speakers threatened.
- Speakers beaten.
- Hearers dispute against what is said.
- People believed and are baptized.
- Hearers confounded and take counsel to kill the speaker.
- Hearers believe, receive the Spirit, and are baptized.
- A great number believe and turn to the Lord.
- The hearer believes. Being astonished at the doctrine heard.
- Hearers want to hear more.
- Some reject the word and expel the hearers from their coasts.
- Some hearers take counsel to stone the speakers.
- The hearers think the gods have come to visit them, and attempt to sacrifice to the speakers.
 - The heart of the hearer is opened by God, and she and her household are baptized.
 - A jailer washes the wounds of the speakers in his charge (bringing forth fruits meet for repentance), and is baptized, believing in God with all of his house.

It was the Gospel itself that produced these varied responses. All of the contradictory reactions were expressed under the influence of unbelief and the wicked one: opposing, disputing, threatening, beating, stoning, removing from their environment, and assigning the power of the speakers to their own false gods. All of the favorable responses were expressed under the influence of faith and the Spirit of God: gladly receiving, being baptized, believing, turning to the Lord, being impressed with the doctrine, wanting to hear more, bringing forth fruits meet for repentance, and believing in God.

In addition to these occasions, there are a number of instances where preachers and teachers ministered to the saints edifying, comforting, and admonishing them (9:32; 11:26; 14:22,28; 15:3,4,32,41; 16:5,40).

SOMETHING TO BE SEEN

It seems to me that these reports are recorded in a manner that is intended to discourage the development of systems and stereotyped routines. At the same time, there is an evident accent on essential responses: i.e. receiving the Word, believing, turning to the Lord, and being baptized. However, none of these responses were the result of hearing a specified routine declared. Rather, they were the calculated effects of the Gospel, the working of the Lord, and the administration of the Holy Spirit. There were commands delivered (Acts 2:38; 3:19; 10:48; 16:31), but they were all within the framework of the Gospel of Christ, and the manifested interest of the hearers. In other words, men must learn to rely upon the Lord to produce valid responses through His Word and the Spirit. Those responses will not vary from person to person, but will be characterized by a certain consistency that brings glory to God. They will manifest a manner that will not make for confusion, but will rather reflect the mind of the Lord.

THEY CAME TO THESSALONICA

17:1 “Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews.” Other versions read, “traveled through,” NASB “gone through,” BBE “journeyed through,” CSB and “took the road through.” NAB

The idea is that Paul and company did not linger in the cities of Amphipolis and Apollonia. They were not their destination. Rather, the road on which they were traveling led through these locations. In his Word Pictures, A.T. Robertson observes, “They took the Egnatian Way, one of the great Roman roads from Byzantium to Dyrrachium (over 500 miles long) on the Adriatic Sea, opposite Brundisium and so an extension of the Appian Way.”

The trip to their intended destination was one of 75-85 miles – probably on foot. This would have made the journey one of approximately three-to-four days. A day’s journey is estimated to have been 20-25 miles by foot. References to “a day’s journey” are found in the following texts: Num 11:31; 1 Kgs 19:4; Jonah 3:4; Lk 2:44. A “sabbath day’s journey” is estimated to have been a little under one mile (Acts 1:12).

Once again, we see the relative absence of convenience in carrying out the work of the Lord. Whatever was required was simply done, whether it involved sailing across a body of water, or walking an extensive distance. Of course, this was also the manner of Jesus Himself, who moved about from place to place, covering an area approximately 150 miles from east to west, and 170 miles from north to south..

Yet, both Jesus and Paul took advantage of the conveniences available at the time. Jesus often took a boat and sailed across the sea of Galilee, rather than walking around it (Matt 8:23; 9:1; 14:13,32-33; 15:39). Paul apparently did not travel through the wastelands when it was not necessary, but took advantage of one of the great Roman roads available to him. The point is that when a person is devoted to the work of the Lord, that determination will move the person to do whatever is necessary to accomplish the work of God. As simplistic as that may appear, there are many souls who have not yet experienced such devotion.

Amphipolis was about thirty-two miles from Philippi, and three miles from the Aegean Sea, Apolloni was about thirty-two miles from Amphipolis. It is possible that they spent the nights in these cities, either traveling aggressively for one day between each of them, or two shorter days. I suspect the former is the way they traveled. It does not appear that a synagogue existed in either of these cities.

THEY ARRIVE AT THESSALONICA

To Thessalonica (eis Thessalonikên). There was a synagogue here in this great commercial city, still an important city called Saloniki, of 70,000 population. It was originally called Therma, at the head of the Thermaic Gulf. Cassander renamed it Thessalonica after his wife, the sister of Alexander the Great. It was the capital of the second of the four divisions of Macedonia and finally the capital of the whole province. It shared with Corinth and Ephesus the commerce of the Aegean. One synagogue shows that even in this commercial city the Jews were not very numerous. As a political center it ranked with Antioch in Syria and Caesarea in Palestine. It was a strategic center for the spread of the gospel as Paul later said for it sounded (echoed) forth from Thessalonica throughout Macedonia and Achaia (1Thess 1:8). ROBERTSON’S WORD STUDIES

I assume from this statement that there was not a synagogue of the Jews in Amphipolis and Apolloni.

There is said to have been twenty-two Jewish synagogues at Thessalonica after the expulsion of the Jews from Spain in the fifteenth century, and the number at the present time is stated to be thirty-six. PULPIT COMMENTARY

Although I have noted this in previous lessons, I want to again draw attention to how the Gospel was spread during those early days. Being moved along by the Holy Spirit, Paul first sought to establish the Gospel within the Jewish community – even though this was met with considerable resistance.

There are numerous accounts of Paul ministering in Jewish synagogues.

- IN DAMASCUS (Acts 9:20).
- IN SALAMIS (Acts 13:5).
- IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA (Acts 13:14).
- IN ICONIUM (Acts 14:1).
- IN THESSALONICA (Acts 17:1).
- IN BEREIA (Acts 17:10).
- IN ATHENS (Acts 17:17).
- IN CORINTH (Acts 18:4).
- IN EPHESUS (Acts 18:19; 19:8).

Inquiring Gentiles are also reported as being in the various synagogues, and they were generally receptive to the Gospel (Acts 13:42,48; 14:1; 17:4,12; 18:4).

Additionally, those who had believed on Christ were often found in the synagogues. In fact, when Saul of Tarsus launched a campaign against the disciples of Jesus, he looked for them in the synagogues (Act 9:2; 22:19; 26:11).

Thus we see some of the involvements in the Law being a “schoolmaster, to bring us to Christ, that we might be justified by faith” (Gal 3:24-26). The Law not only did this by defining and convicting of sin, but by also identifying the kind of Savior that would deliver men from sin. The Scriptures were central in the synagogues, and this made for more productive preaching. For example, such things as the resurrection of the dead would not be considered strange there, where the people were regularly exposed to Scripture.

However, in the heathen environment, where philosophy tended to dominate, the resurrection of the dead was something with which the people were not acquainted (Acts 17:18,32).

PAUL WENT INTO THE SYNAGOGUE ON THE SABBATH

“ 2 And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures, 3 Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ.”

As we consider Paul’s activities, we will learn much about him. First, we will see the message that was burning in his heart. He does not come as a consultant, or as one who can set everything in order. He is a proclaimer – one who has a message. Second, he gravitates to the place where some preparatory work has already been done – for the message of the Gospel presumes some knowledge on the part of the hearers. Third, he places a high priority on the Scriptures themselves, for they reveal things that cannot be gathered from any other source.

The synagogue provided an excellent environment in which to preach the Gospel. In his expressions concerning Jewish customs, Alfred Edersheim writes the following. “However, the chief element in synagogue worship -- its central factor -- was not ceremonial or display but something which was of vital importance to the shaping of the subsequent life of the local churches upon which the synagogue was so influential. . . . That element was the reading and exposition of Scripture. Worship in the Early Church involved "Word-of-God" services. Ralph Martin very appropriately called the reading and exposition of Scripture 'the center of gravity of the synagogue's service, with the blessings and prayers gathered around it.' . . . The great historian J. Robert Teringo wrote, 'The fixed order of service began, after the customary greeting, with a prayer while the people remained standing facing the sacred Torah scroll. The reading of the law of Moses was next. The Torah scroll was taken from the chest and placed before a reader who read in the ancient Hebrew tongue and immediately translated it into Aramaic, the language of those days. A commentary was always added to this reading. Next, a portion was read from the books of the prophets and, again, immediately translated verse by verse. After a closing prayer, the service was concluded.'" SKETCHES OF JEWISH SOCIAL LIFE, CHAPTER 17

It is especially important to note these manners, developed by a people who were cultured by God Himself. While the Jews were by no means an ideal people, they were a chosen people. They provide us with what an emphasis upon God produces among the people. Although it may have degenerated into an inordinate attachment to the traditions of men, the manners still manifest the impact of a revealed religion. By its very nature, a revealed religion focuses on what has been revealed – and that is always a word.

AS HIS MANNER WAS

"And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them . . ." Other versions read, "as his custom was," NKJV "according to Paul's custom," NASB "as he generally did," BBE "according to his usual practice," CJB "as usual," GWN and "As he customarily did." NET

When the Jews came together in the synagogue, everything was not always ideal. However, there was an intellectual atmosphere in which affirmation, discussion, and an exchange of thought could take place. The synagogue was not an environment in which entertainment was featured, or mindless repetition.

Here we are exposed to the direction of Paul's life, and how it impacted his actions. While the emphasis of the commandment to keep the Sabbath was placed on resting and not working (Ex 20:10; 31:14-15; 35:2; Deut 5:14), that was not the stress of Paul. He saw that the intention of refraining from work was to apply oneself to the acquisition of the knowledge of God –even though the Sabbath commandment never actually said that. This commandment was not given to promote good health, as some suppose. While meeting in the synagogue was, for many Jews, a mere formality, for others, and especially Paul, it was a place to traffic in the things of God. It was also a place where there could be open dialog concerning Christ.

HE REASONED OUT OF THE SCRIPTURES

" . . . and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures . . ." Other versions read, "reasoned with them from the Scriptures," NASB "argued with them fro the Scriptures," NRSV "had discussions with them from the holy Writings," BBE "disputed with them by the Scriptures," GENEVA "discoursed with them from the Scriptures," MRD "entered into discussions with them from the scriptures," NAB "addressed them from the Scriptures," NET "developed the arguments from scripture for them," NJB and "opened the Scriptures to the people." LIVING

The Greek word translated "reasoned" is a large one, pregnant with meaning. The lexical definition of the word is, "to think different things with oneself, mingle thought with thought (cf. dialogi,zomai) ; to ponder, revolve in mind . . . to converse, discourse with one, argue, discuss," THAYER

A.T. Robertson says of the word “reasoned,” “a verb in the active to select, distinguish, then to revolve in the mind, to converse (interchange of ideas), then to teach in the Socratic (“dialectic”) method of question and then simply to discourse, but always with the idea of intellectual stimulus. With these Jews and God-fearers Paul appealed to the Scriptures as text and basis of his ideas.”

ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

I want to emphasize that, although by no means a perfect environment, this is the kind of setting produced by a people who were chosen, taught, and cultured by God Almighty. They had a Law filled with details, which was given to them by the hands of Moses, with whom God spoke “mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches” (Num 12:8). That Law contained “a shadow of good things to come” (Heb 10:1). God “hewed them by the prophets” (Hos 6:5), delivering “the promises” to them. These were a people constantly exposed to the Word of God.

What kind of things were produced by God’s dealings with these people? Their’s was a religion that required thought – extensive thought. It was conducive to reasoning, discussion, and exposition. When the Jews came together in the synagogue, everything was not always ideal. However, there was an intellectual atmosphere in which affirmation, discussion, and an exchange of thought could take place. The synagogue was not an environment in which entertainment was featured, or mindless repetition.

I am sure that if Paul were able to return in the body and visit the average American church, it would have a stifling effect upon him. He would find sparse Scriptural affirmation or exposition, and would find little opportunity for discussion or profitable disputation. In other words, there would be little that would lead to the conclusion that professing Gentile Christians were actually partaking of the “root and fatness” of the Jewish “olive tree” (Rom 11:17). It is most unfortunate that the professed Christians of our time have allowed powerless religion to rise and remain prominent.

One More Thing

Reasoning is the kind of activity that assumes there is a central theme in Scripture – a common thread of thought that permeates “all Scripture.”

Reasoning is the kind of activity that assumes there is a central theme in Scripture – a common thread of thought that permeates “all Scripture.” Paul knows that “the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy” (Rev 19:10), and that the Scriptures in their entirety “testify” of Christ (John 5:39).

OPENING AND ALLEGING

“ . . . Opening and alleging . . .” Other versions read, “explaining and demonstrating,” NKJV “explaining and giving evidence,” NASB “explaining and proving,” NIV “saying to them clearly and openly,” BBE “explaining and showing,; CSB “opening and laying down,” DARBY “declaring and insinuating,” DOUAY “expounding and showing,” MRD “expounding and demonstrating,” NAB “clearly explained, pointing out,” WEYMOUTH “Explaining [them] and [quoting passages] setting forth and proving,” AMPLIFIED and “explaining and quoting passages.” PHILLIPS

This is a breakdown of what was involved in “reasoning with them out of the Scriptures.” Paul did not use the traditions of men as his basic postulate. He was not speaking in defense of some sectarian dogma. Scriptures were the subject matter, not the defense of a man-made theological position, or an established sect.

“Opening”

To “open” something means “to open (thoroughly) what has been closed . . . to cause to understand a thing . . . to rouse in one the faculty of understanding, or the desire of learning.” THAYER This has to do with the mind: comprehending, discerning, and apprehending.

“Alleging”

To “allege” means to “set before in teaching . . . to explain,” THAYER and “expound, point out.” FRIBERG This involves setting the truth before the individual so that it can be seen with clarity and grasped.

A Fact Behind Opening and Alleging

When it comes to what has been revealed about Jesus Christ – “the record that God gave of His Son” (1 John 5:10) – understanding is imperative. Once the message of the Gospel has been heard, salvation makes no provision for remaining ignorant of it. If men, due to their own slothfulness and love for the world, choose to remain in the dark, they will be rendered incapable of understanding it. This is why Jesus said, “When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not , then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side” (Matt 13:19). Paul knew this, and therefore extended himself to put the Word of the kingdom within reach of his hearers – “opening and alleging.”

Professed preachers and teachers who do not do this have proved themselves to be “wicked and slothful servants” (Matt 25:26). Of course, such men do not have the Word of Christ dwelling richly within them (Col 3:16). In assuming the role of a spiritual leader, they have usurped the position, for God brings no such laborers into His vineyard.

THAT CHRIST MUST NEEDS HAVE SUFFERED

“ . . . that Christ must needs have suffered . . .” Other versions read, “had to suffer,” NKJV “it was necessary for Christ to suffer,” NRSV “It was necessary that Messiah should suffer,” RSV “Christ had to be put to death,” BBE “Christ was to suffer,” DOUAY “it was ordained that Christ should suffer,” NJB “it was needful that Christ should suffer,” WEB and “to prove the necessity for the death of Christ.” PHILLIPS

The phrase “must needs have suffered,” covers all of the adverse experiences Jesus had, which were brought to a culmination in His death. Prior to His death, Jesus told His disciples He would “suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed” (Matt 16:21) Again He said, “Likewise shall the Son of man suffer of them” (Matt 17:21). Mark refers to Jesus saying He would “suffer many things . . . and be rejected . . . and be killed” (Mk 8:31). Luke also says this (Lk 9:22). Toward the end of His ministry, Jesus accented that this was something that HAD to happen – not merely that it would happen: “But first must He suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation” (Luke 17:25). Speaking of His eminent death at the Last Supper Jesus said, “With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer” (Luke 22:15).

Christ’s Death Was a Commandment

Confirming the necessity of His suffering and death, Jesus told the people, “Therefore doth My Father love me, because I lay down My life, that I might take it again. No man taketh it from Me, but I lay it down of Myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again. This commandment have I received of My Father” (John 10:17-18).

Following His death, when Jesus appeared to the two on the road to Emmaus, Jesus accented the necessity of His death when He told them, “Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?” (Luke 24:26). During the latter part of Paul’s ministry he testified, “That Christ should suffer” (Acts 26:23).

Born to Die

The book of Hebrews affirms that Jesus “was made a little lower than the angels FOR the suffering of death” (Heb 2:9). In fact, in order for Him to be the Captain of our salvation, He was “made perfect through sufferings” (Heb 2:10).

Divine Determination

In the beginning, when the Gospel was first preached, the necessity and ordination of Christ’s death was proclaimed with power. “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain” (Acts 2:23). With insight, the assembled church prayed, “For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, for to do whatsoever Thy hand and Thy counsel determined before to be done” (Acts 4:27-28).

Note What Was NOT Said

It is first important to note what Paul did NOT say. He did NOT say, “Jesus loved you so much He died for you” – or something similar to that. In fact, there is no public proclamation of the death of Jesus Christ that is so represented – not in all of Scripture. That (that Christ’s love was associated with His death) is a perspective that is given to the church alone – and there is absolute consistency in this matter (Gal 2:20; Eph 5:2,25; Rev 1:5).

The point here is that Jesus died because it was an appointment made in heaven. This was the ordained means through which men would be saved.

Why Was His Death Necessary?

The modern church has not done well in representing the reason for the death of Christ. Too often it appears to be viewed as the death of a martyr, or as though Jesus stepped in front of the impending wrath of God to stop it from falling upon us. It is quite true that there is an element of truth to this, but is by no means the whole of the matter, and should not be presented as though it was.

• SIN HAD TO BE JUDGED BEFORE IT COULD BE REMOVED. Thus it is written, “God . . . condemned sin in the flesh” [of His Son] . . . “He made Him to be sin for us . . . Christ redeemed us from the curse, being made a curse for us . . .” (Rom 8:3; 2 Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13). The righteous nature of God would not permit Him to overlook sin, or to simply exonerate the sinner by a Divine fiat or word.

• OUR JUSTIFICATION REQUIRED HIS DEATH. In order for men to be justified, or made righteous, the penalty for sin had to be paid by the death of Christ, in which He “put away sin” (Heb 9:26). Therefore we read, “being now justified by His blood” (Rom 5:9).

The modern church has not done well in representing the reason for the death of Christ. Too often it appears to be viewed as the death of a martyr, or as though Jesus stepped in front of the impending wrath of God to stop it from falling upon us. It is quite true that there is an element of truth to this, but is by no means the whole of the matter, and should not be presented as though it was.

HIS DEATH WAS REQUIRED FOR GOD TO BE JUST IN THE JUSTIFICATION OF SINNERS. Because of what was accomplished in Christ’s death, God can now be just, or righteous, in justifying sinners. “Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time his righteousness: that he might be just, and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus” (Rom 3:25-26).

• THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS REQUIRED HIS DEATH. The forgiveness of sins, or the elimination of the debt created by transgression, required the death of Jesus. Therefore we read, “In whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace” (Eph 1:7; Colo 1:14).

• IN ORDER FOR US TO BE BEGOTTEN FROM DEATH IN SIN, HE HAD TO BE THE FIRST BEGOTTEN FROM THE DEAD. The resurrection of Christ is essential to our salvation, which was necessarily preceded by His death. Therefore we read that Jesus is, “the Firstborn among many brethren. . . the firstborn from the dead . . . the first begotten from the dead ” (Rom 8:29; Col 1:18; Rev 1:5).

• SATAN HAD TO BE DESTROYED IN THE REALM IN WHICH SALVATION WOULD BE PERFECTED. The realm into which the saved would be raised is “the heavenly places” (Eph 2:6). That is where all of the resources required for life are obtained (Eph 1:3). In order for men to be saved, their arch-enemy must be destroyed, and rendered impotent and ineffective in that domain, and ultimately cast into the lake of fire. Thus we read, “Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same; that through death He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil ” (Heb 2:14).

• PRINCIPALITIES AND POWERS HAD TO BE PLUNDERED. In order for the spiritual powers that dominated the world to be spoiled, or plundered, Jesus had to die, for it is in the cross that this took place. “. . . His cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it” [His cross] (Col 2:14-15).

• PEACE HAD TO BE MADE. All of the things accomplished in Christ’s death on the cross were requisite to us having peace with God. Therefore we read, “And, having made peace through the blood of his cross ” (Col 1:20).

• DEATH HAD TO BE CONQUERED. There could be no salvation without the defeat of death, which had world-wide dominion throughout all time. It was in Christ’s death and consequent resurrection that the death blow was dealt to death itself. Therefore we read, “. . . our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death ” (2 Tim 1:10).

• THERE HAD TO BE A BASIS FOR RECONCILIATION. Salvation also has to do with being reconciled to God, so that there is no more enmity between Him and man. That too was accomplished in the death of Christ. “And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death ” (Col 1:21-22).

• THE SINS OF PAST SAINTS HAD TO BE ADDRESSED. The salvation of God required Him to address the sins of past believers, justly removing them and making the people righteous. We could not receive the inheritance until they were made perfect. This too was accomplished in Christ’s death. Therefore we read, “And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15).

• THE INAUGURATION OF THE NEW COVENANT REQUIRED HIS DEATH. In all of its grandeur, the New Covenant could not be enacted until a death was accomplished that satisfied God. That death was accomplished by Jesus, who Himself is the Executor of the covenant. “For where a testament is, there must also of necessity be the death of the Testator ” (Heb 9:16).

• HIS DEATH WAS REQUIRED IN ORDER FOR HIM TO BRING US TO

GOD. The objective of salvation is to bring men to God, from whom sin has separated them. This could only be accomplished after Jesus died. Therefore we read, “For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the Just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh , but quickened by the Spirit” (1 Pet 3:18).

I do not mean to over accentuate this matter, but it is not right to present the death of Christ as only an expression of Divine love. The love of both God and Christ did enter into the reason for Christ’s death. However, when it comes to the exposition of that death the foundational reasons for it were the nature of God and the nature of sin. The love of God could never have been actually realized by men until those two matters were addressed in such a manner as allowed for the justice of God to be satisfied, and the originator and power of sin nullified. Indeed, as Paul opened and alleged, “Christ must needs have suffered” – not merely because it was predicted, but because it was morally and spiritually necessary. In my judgment, enough has not been made of this in contemporary Christian circles.

THAT CHRIST MUST NEEDS HAVE . . . RISEN FROM THE DEAD

“ . . . and risen again from the dead . . . ” Other versions read, “and rise again from the dead,” NKJV “to rise from the dead,” NRSV “and come back to life again,” BBE “risen up from among the dead,” DARBY and “rise from death.” IE

The resurrection of Jesus was not merely something that took place –it was an event that HAD to take place. This is true not only because the prophets affirmed He would rise from the dead. The salvation of God required that He rise from the dead. Salvation postulates a risen and exalted Christ. If this did not take place, there could have been no redemption, no reconciliation, no justification, and men would still be in their sins.

• VALIDATED THE EFFECTIVENESS OF CHRIST’S DEATH. God Himself had to be satisfied by Christ’s death, and confirm it by raising Him from death. “He shall see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied: by His knowledge shall My righteous servant justify many ; for He shall bear their iniquities. Therefore will I divide Him a portion with the great, and He shall divide the spoil with the strong; because He hath poured out his soul unto death : and He was numbered with the transgressors; and He bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors ” (Isa 53:11-12).

• DECLARED HIM TO BE THE SON OF GOD WITH POWER. In order for a Savior with power to be declared, the “last enemy,” which is death (1 Cor 15:26), had to be conquered. “And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead ” (Rom 1:4).

• BEGOTTEN TO A LIVING HOPE BY THE RESURRECTION. Spiritual begetting, or the new birth, is accomplished by the infusion of resurrection life. “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead ” (1 Pet 1:3).

• MAKES BAPTISM EFFECTIVE. It order for men to be raised up to walk in newness of life, a new kind of life had to exist – resurrection life. “The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ ” (1 Pet 3:21).

• RAISED FOR OUR JUSTIFICATION. The justification of sinners postulates a living Christ who was once dead. “Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification ” (Rom 4:25).

• PRODUCES NEWNESS OF LIFE. The newness of life into which we are raised is the life of the risen Christ, “Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life ” (Rom 6:4).

• BRINGS TO MEN ENABLING POWER. The life of faith can only be lived in resurrection power. “That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, . . .” (Phil 3:10). “. . . the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe . . . which He wrought in Christ, when He raised him from the dead . . . (Eph 1:19-20).

The keys of death could only be received by One who had conquered death by entering its domain, and Himself coming back from it.

CONFIRMED JESUS HAS THE KEYS OF HELL (HADES) AND DEATH. The keys of death could only be received by One who had conquered death by entering its domain, and Himself coming back from it. “I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death ” (Rev 1:18).

• CONFIRMED THAT WE ALSO SHALL BE RAISED FROM THE DEAD. Salvation is not complete until our bodies are raised from the dead. That situation requires that Jesus be the first fruits of them that slept (1 Cor 15:20). “Knowing that He which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus . . .” (2 Cor 4:14).

• GAVE ASSURANCE THAT HE WILL JUDGE THE WORLD IN RIGHTEOUSNESS. God determined that only one who has defeated death would judge the world in righteousness. “Because He hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead ” (Acts 17:31).

• IS THE GUARANTEE THAT MEN CAN RECEIVE THE SURE MERCIES OF DAVID. Salvation is only as sure as the Living Christ. “And as concerning that He raised Him up from the dead , now no more to return to corruption, He said on this wise, I will give you the sure mercies of David ” (Acts 13:34).

• THE RESURRECTION IS A SIGN CONFIRMING JESUS IS WHO HE SAID HE WAS. The resurrection of Christ proves that He is the chosen of God.; “But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth .” (Mat 12:39-40).

• CONFIRMED JESUS WAS SUPERIOR TO DEATH, AND THAT IT COULD NOT HOLD HIM. The only one who can save us is the One over whom death has no power. “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it ” (Acts 2:24). “Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him ” (Rom 6:9).

• WE ARE SAVED BY HIS RESURRECTION LIFE. It is what Jesus is doing now that saves us, and that is based upon what He accomplished in His death and resurrection. “For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life ” (Rom 5:10).

• THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS IS THE “RATHER” ASPECT OF THE GOSPEL. Because of its validation and confirmation, the resurrection of Christ is pivotal to our salvation. “Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again , who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us” (Rom 8:34).

• THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS VALIDATES THE PREACHING OF THE GOSPEL. True preaching and teaching does not consist of lifeless routines and procedures. It must be supported by a living Savior. “But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain ” (1 Cor 15:13-14).

• THE RESURRECTION CONFIRMS THAT THOSE IN CHRIST ARE NO LONGER IN THEIR SINS. There can be no forgiveness if Christ is not risen from the dead – for that would leave death unconquered. “For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised: and if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins ” (1 Cor 15:16-17).

• A MAN BROUGHT SIN INTO THE WORLD, NECESSITATING THAT A MAN BE THE CAUSE FOR THEM BEING RAISED FROM THE DEAD. A man brought the race down, and a Man must bring it up – a risen Man! “For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead . For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive ” (1 Cor 15:21-22).

• THE VERY POWER THAT RAISED JESUS FROM THE DEAD IS THE SAME POWER THAT IS “TO US-WARD WHO BELIEVE.” Whatever power was required to raise Jesus from the dead, is the same power that effectuates salvation. “And what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead , and set him at His own right hand in the heavenly places” (Eph 1:19-20).

• JESUS WAS RAISED FROM THE DEAD IN ORDER TO HAVE ABSOLUTE PREEMINENCE. God could not give all power in heaven and earth to Jesus until all adversarial power had been defeated– including death. “And He is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence ” (Col 1:18).

• JESUS’ RESURRECTION CONFIRMS THAT HE HAS DELIVERED US FROM THE WRATH TO COME. Those who have been liberated from the power of Satan and death, have also been delivered from the wrath to come. “And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead, even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come ” (1 Thess 1:10).

• JESUS WAS BROUGHT BACK FROM THE DEAD THROUGH THE BLOOD OF THE EVERLASTING COVENANT – VALIDATING ITS POWER. God raised Jesus from the dead because He was His Son, and because of what He had covenanted to do through Him. “Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus . . . through the blood of the everlasting covenant” (Heb 13:20).

Divine Logic

There is a Divine logic, or manner of reasoning, that is reflected in the Gospel itself, and expounded in the epistles. It is also affirmed in the various proclamations recorded in the book of Acts. Briefly stated, and in accordance with my own understanding, this reasoning can be stated in this manner.

• Although it did not take God by surprise, sin introduced a situation that was, apart from God, absolutely hopeless.

• It also appeared to have set certain Divine qualities at variance with one another – qualities that had to be united. These included mercy and truth, and righteousness and peace. Truth and righteousness could not overlook sin, yet mercy and peace yearned for the retrieval of man.

• If men were to be rescued from the fall, a means must be provided that allowed for the unqualified harmony of mercy and truth, as well as righteousness and peace. This was a need that God required, and transcended the desperate need of humanity. Unless this need was met, man's need could not even be addressed, much less resolved. God must be thoroughly satisfied with any remedy, with absolutely no exceptions. This was accomplished after Jesus rose from the dead: "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other" (Psa 85:10).

- The means through which these challenges would be met must originate with God alone, with no input of any kind being allowed from the fallen ones. Such input would have a defiling effect which God would not allow.
- The means through which the recovery was accomplished must allow for God to be thoroughly righteous in justifying sinners.
- The salvation must absolutely rescue men from the power of sin as well as its defiling effects and guilt.
- A power must be resident in the salvation that produced a new creation within men, without destroying their identity.
- The purpose originated by God must be superior to any attempted encroachments of the devil. In fact, there must be within the execution of that purpose, the thorough defeat of the devil and all of his powers.
- The purposed salvation must allow men to remain for a season in the cursed realm, drawing upon Divine resources, and confirming in their lives the effectiveness of the salvation by God.

The salvation of God is no stronger than the foundation upon which it rests. Of course, that foundation – in summary, the death and resurrection of Christ – has impacted both heaven and the powers over which Satan presides. Heaven has been thoroughly satisfied, and Satan and his powers have been thoroughly defeated. It seems to me that it ought to be obvious that both of these realms are vastly superior to humanity itself. It is therefore inconceivable that the work that satisfied God and frustrated the devil would be ineffective among those for whom it was wrought. Any suggestions that it is ineffective – whether by word or by life – is a thorough misrepresentation.

The Implications

By implication, this means that those who teach sin is something from which men cannot refrain are wrong. Those who tell us our lives are to be lived in a continual state of repentance and brokenness have only confessed their blindness to what Jesus has done. How can it be that His marvelous work could address the dilemma sin created for God, but not do so for what sin did to men? Precisely what kind of salvation is it that leaves men alive to sin when the work of Jesus is declared to make them "dead indeed unto sin" (Rom 6:11).

Do not think for a moment that Jesus "must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead" in order to help men limp to glory! How is it possible for "the power of the resurrection" to fail to address death in trespasses and sins, when it thoroughly decimated the twin sister of sin, which is death – "sin and death" (Rom 8:2).

It is time for the saints of God to rise up and expel from their presence those who major on explaining the continued presence sin! Let them demand that their leaders, preachers, and teachers, expound the salvation of God – "the wonderful works of God" (Acts 2:11). If they cannot do this, it is time for the church to rid itself of them. They are nothing more than obstacles in the path to glory. There is too much "flesh" in what they say – and "the flesh profiteth nothing" (John 6:63). If it is law-keeping flesh, it is unprofitable. If it is psychological flesh, it is unprofitable. If it is scholastic flesh, it is unprofitable. Even if it is religious flesh, it is unprofitable.

If, in order to save us, Jesus had to suffer unto death, and then be raised from the dead, be sure that nothing of the flesh was left behind. If there was so much as a molecule of anything good in man, God could have nourished it, and caused it to flourish. Instead, in the death of Christ, He brought an end to Adam, and in the resurrection of Christ, he brought in “the Second Man” and a new order. That is implicit in the facts of Christ’s death and resurrection!

THIS JESUS . . . IS CHRIST

Implicit in both the promises and the Gospel is the fact that every resolution required to resolve the dilemma of sin would be accomplished through a single Person – and it would be a Man. A brief sampling of the prophecies relating to “the Christ” will confirm this to be the case.

- DEFEAT SATAN. The Seed of the woman who would bruise the serpent’s head (Gen 3:15).
- A PROPHET. A Prophet raised up by God like unto Moses (Gen 18:15,18).
- A GATHERING POINT FOR THE PEOPLE. The gathering of the people would be to Him (Gen 49:10).
- AN EXALTED ONE. An anointed One who would be exalted (1 Sam 2:10).
- ONE WHO WOULD DO THE WILL OF GOD. One who would come and voluntarily do the will of God – particular as it related to taking away sin and establishing the New Covenant (Psa 40:6-8; Heb 10: 7-9).
- ONE ASCENDING INTO HEAVEN. One who would ascend on high, leading captivity captive, and receiving gifts for men (Psa 68:18).
- ONE WHO WOULD RULE. A Son upon whom the government would be placed, and caused to increase (Isa 9:6-7).
- ONE PROVIDING SAFETY. A Man who would be a place in which to hide and be safe (Isa 32:2).
- ONE WITH A MESSAGE. One would come who would preach good tidings to the meek, bind up the brokenhearted, proclaiming liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to those who were bound (Isa 61:1-3).
- THE SERVANT OF GOD WHO WOULD BRING FORTH JUDGMENT. God’s Servant, who would bring forth judgment (Isa 42:1-4).
- A SIN BEARER AND INTERCESSOR. The Arm of the Lord, upon whom the sins of the world would be laid, who would take them away and satisfy God, distribute the spoils, and make intercession for the transgressors (Isa 53:1-12).
- A KING THE PEOPLE WOULD SERVE. God would raise up David their King, whom they would serve (Jer 30:9).
- A RIGHTEOUS JUDGE. The Branch of righteousness, who would execute judgment and righteousness in the land (Jer 32:15).
- ONE GIVEN DOMINION OVER ALL. A Son of Man who would be given dominion, glory, and a kingdom, to whom all people would be subject (Dan 7:13).
- ONE WHO WOULD DIE FOR OTHERS. A Messiah whose life would be cut off, but not for Himself (Dan 9:26)
- A RIGHTEOUS ONE BRINGING RESTORATION. The Sun of righteousness would arise with healing in his wings (Mal 4:2).

The Concept of Christ

It is important that men have a proper concept of “the Christ.” The term itself speaks of a primary relationship to God, not men. He is “the Lord’s Christ” (Lk 2:26), “His Christ” (Acts 4:26; Rev 11:15; 12:10), and “the Christ of God” (Lk 9:20). No person of Scripture ever referred to Jesus as “my Christ,” “our Christ,” or “man’s Christ.” Terms expressing the relation of Jesus to humanity include “Lord” (2 Tim 1:2) “Savior” (2 Tim 1:10), “Leader” (Isa 5r5:4), “Shepherd” (John 10:11), etc. His identity with God the Father is depicted in “Servant” (Acts 3:13), “Christ” (Rev 12:10), “Son” (John 3:17), “Lamb” (John 1:36), etc.

The World Is Not Salvageable

As “the Christ,” Jesus is “the chosen of God” (Lk 23:35) to do His will as it relates to the reconciliation of men. His role is not to resolve all human difficulties, or to make the world a better place to live. Men must come to the realization that “the earth” that is “now” is “reserved for fire, kept for the day of judgment and destruction of ungodly men” NASB (2 Pet 3:7). It is referred to as “this present evil world,” and, as the Lord’s Christ, Jesus has delivered us from it (Gal 1:4). It is under the fire sentence, like the world of Noah’s day was under the flood sentence – which is the precise point that Peter makes in Second Peter 3:5-7.

Noah did not engage in an effort to reform the world. God revealed to him that the world, and the people in it, were unsalvageable. “And God said unto Noah, The end of all flesh is come before me; for the earth is filled with violence through them; and, behold, I will destroy them with the earth” (Gen 6:13). Noah is referred to as “a preacher of righteousness” (2 Pet 2:5). Many assume that this referred to his activity while he was building the ark. At that time, however, God had revealed there was no hope for the world. His Spirit had ceased to strive with them, and He had established His covenant with Noah, to save him, his wife, his sons, and their wives – no more (Gen 6:18). Noah did his preaching prior to the building of the ark. He had no doubt witnessed to his generation as Enoch did to his.

Our day is similar to the days of Noah, yet has been flavored with grace. The present world has been reserved for fire like Noah’s day was for water. It is going to be destroyed. It ought to be abundantly apparent that redemption is not an initiative to improve the world. It is rather a gracious provision to escape from it, and prepare for the new heavens and the new earth, wherein dwells righteousness.

As “the Christ,” Jesus has been designated to establish the basis for providing the means of escaping from the world, then carry it to its fruition in all who believe on Him. He is God’s commissioned Savior, and is doing the will of God. Within the framework of that will, He ministers to men. He does not come to meet the needs of men as they have perceived them, but to address them as the God, from whom sin has separated them, has assessed them. This perspective has been largely obscured by the thrust of the nominal church. However, God’s purpose has not changed, and Jesus still operates within the perimeter of the will of God, which Scripture affirms He came into the world to do. He is still doing executing that will in righteousness.

SOME OF THEM BELIEVED

“ 4 And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few.”

Paul’s reasoning in the synagogue – opening and alleging the necessity of Jesus suffering and resurrection – produced commendable results. The whole city did not believe, as Samaria did in responding to Philip's preaching. However, a significant number of those who heard Paul's proclamation of Jesus did believe. They did not hear a message that focused on the healing of marriages or finances, and heard no stirring oration about prosperity in this world.

SOME OF THEM BELIEVED

"And some of them believed . . ." Other versions read, "were persuaded," NKJV/NASB/NIV/NRSV "had faith," BBE "were convinced," NAB "were won over," WEYMOUTH and "were induced to believe." AMPLIFIED

The "some" who believed were Jews. The word "some" suggests that they were a small percentage of the total number of Jews in that synagogue.

Here, the Greek word translated "believed" is not the ordinary word so translated (pisteu,w –pisteu-o). The root Greek word used here is pei,qw (pei-tho). The lexical meaning of this word is "to persuade, I. e. to induce one by words to believe: absolutely, to cause belief in a thing," THAYER "convince, persuade," FRIBERG "win over . . . satisfy," UBS and "to convince someone to believe something and to act on the basis of what is recommended - to persuade, to convince." LOUW-NIDA This word is translated a number of different ways, all pointing to the same effect. In the King James Version it is translated "trusted" (Matt 27:20), "persuade" (Matt 28:14), "obeyed" (Acts 5:36), "agreed" (Acts 5:40), "yield" (Acts 23:21), "confident" (Rom 2:16), "confidence" (2 Cor 2:3), and "assure" (1 John 3:19). Vine's Greek Dictionary relates it to agreeing and persuasion.

Robertson says of this expression, "Some of them (tines ex autôn). That is of the Jews who were evidently largely afraid of the rabbis. Still "some" were persuaded (epeisthêsan, effective first aorist passive indicative) and "consorted with" (proseklêrôthêsan).

In this text, the hearers have been persuaded that Jesus is the Christ of whom the Scriptures had spoken. Paul had reasoned so powerfully with the Scriptures, showing that Jesus fulfilled what they had said about the coming Messiah, that there was no doubt in the hearers but that He was the Christ. Now, they were ready to hear more concerning His Person and accomplishments.

"Faith" is more a complete word than "believe." It contains more, including the concepts of persuasion, conviction, assurance, agreement, perception, understanding, trust, and confidence. It includes the absence of doubt, and the possession of personal evidence within the soul. Obedience is also inherent in "faith." As faith grows, these various aspects of faith also increase and are brought to maturity.

I have no confidence in the sincerity of any person who does not want more of the truth, or does not attach themselves to those who are noted for speaking it.

As used in our text, "believed" accents the idea of persuasion, or being convinced of the truth of what has been said. It means that those who believed were brought into agreement with what was declared, and were prepared to receive more, fully intending to act upon the truth of which they were persuaded. At this level of faith, if I may so reference it, the mind is fully satisfied concerning the accuracy and relevance of what has been declared. However, there has not yet been a willing response to the truth. Believing, however, always moves the one who believes to act upon what he believes – and that is what these hearers will do. Initially, they will willingly associate themselves with the ones who have made the truth of Christ known.

It is my persuasion that multitudes of professing Christians have never "believed" in the sense of our text. They lack a cogent view of Jesus Christ, and thus have been led to think of Him as disassociation from the Scriptures. The failure to be persuaded of the truth of Jesus Christ accounts for the erratic and even wayward manner of their lives. It is why they are not forsaking all to follow Christ. This is the reason why they are not considering all competing influences as loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus. It is why they are not seeking above all other things to know Him, and it is why they are not pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus (Phil 3:7-14).

AND CONSORTED WITH PAUL AND SILAS

“ . . . and consorted with Paul and Silas . . . ” Other versions read, “joined,” NKJV/NASB/NIV/NRSV “were joined to,” BBE “threw in their lot with,” CJB “joined themselves to,” DARBY “were associated to,” DOUAY “joined in company with,” GENEVA “were persuaded to join,” GWN “adhered to,” MRD “came and companied with,” TNT “attached themselves to,” YLT “became converts,” LIVING and “associated themselves with.” AMPLIFIED

The word “consorted” is translated from a word that means “joined their lot to,” THAYER “join, attach oneself to, throw in one's lot with,” FRIBERG “to begin an association with someone, whether temporary or permanent - 'to join, to join oneself to, to become a part of,” LOUW-NIDA and “be attached to.” GINGRICH

One of the initial expressions of a genuine belief of the Gospel is the desire to be identified with those who delivered the word of that Gospel. For example, after Pentecost, the disciples “continued steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine” (Acts 2:42). That is, they continued to expose themselves to the teaching of the apostles. Following their conversion, those of Cornelius’ house asked Peter and those with him to stay with them “for a few days” (Acts 10:48). In Antioch of Pisidia, after Paul had spoken in the synagogue, “the Gentiles besought that these words might be preached to them the next sabbath.” After the congregation had been dismissed “many of the Jews and religious proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas” (Acts 13:42-43). In Iconium, Paul and Barnabas remained a “long time,” speaking boldly to those who had believed (Acts 14:1-3). When Lydia was converted, she asked Paul and Silas to come into her house and “abide there” (Acts 16:15). After the Philippian jailer believed and was baptized, he brought Paul and Silas into his house, and set a meal before them, “believing in God with all of his house” (Acts 16:34). In Athens, certain men who heard Paul “clave to,” or “joined” NKJV him, “and believed” (Acts 17:34).

This is a consistent mark of those who have been persuaded by the truth of God – they want more of it! This is involved in hungering and thirsting after righteousness (Matt 5:6). It is part of seeking first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness (Matt 6:33). This is characteristic of those who have been convinced of the truth of the Gospel.

I have no confidence in the sincerity of any person who does not want more of the truth, or does not attach themselves to those who are noted for speaking it. It is time to disown any form of religion that allows for disinterest in the truth of God. In the Scriptures, those who had no compelling interest in the truth were not long exposed to it. Jesus told the multitudes that those who desired to follow Him and hear what He taught were unqualifiedly required to “forsake all” that they had and follow Him (Lk 14:33). He declared that all other associations were to be considered secondary, and placed in subordination to one’s identity with Him (Lk 14:26). The one who desires to learn and benefit from the truth must take up his cross every day, crucifying competing desires and interests, and bearing up under the repercussions of following the Lord (Lk 9:23). Those religious leaders who tailor their church programs for the disinterested, reducing the number of their gatherings, and shortening the exposure of the people to the truth have committed a grievous transgression. They have set in motion a process that contradicts the very nature and intent of the salvation of God.

DEVOUT GREEKS AND CHIEF WOMEN

Remember, the results of which we are reading took place in the Jewish synagogue, spanning a period of three sabbath days. These results followed Paul “Opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead.” This is yet another confirmation that the gospel of Christ is, in fact, “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16).

Devout Greeks

Other versions read, “God-fearing Greeks,” NASB ““those who served God,” DOUAY “a large group of Greeks who had converted to Judaism,” GWN and “of the worshipping Greeks a great multitude.” YLT “Devout Greeks” were Gentiles who were Jewish proselytes. Being exposed to the readings and expositions of the synagogue, they had become worshipers of God, abandoning any idolatrous practices they may have had. It appears as though this kind of person was not so enslaved to Jewish tradition. They had actually embraced more of the truth, that was revealed through Moses and the Prophets, than many of the Jews themselves.

Our text says that “a great multitude” of these people believed and joined themselves to Paul and Silas. The word “multitude” means “a great number,” THAYER “magnitude, with a stress on largeness of number,” FRIBERG “crowd,” UBS “a throng.” LIDDELL-SCOTT This gives us an idea of the size of that local synagogue – even the Gentile constituency was significant in number. This also illuminates why Paul headed for that synagogue, probably being led by the Spirit.

On those three Sabbath days, these people came with honest and good hearts, and the Lord saw to it that they were rewarded. They were faithful with the knowledge that they already possessed, and thus it was gracious caused to increase!

To my knowledge, the word translated “devout” is applied only one time to those who served idols (Acts 19:27). The English word “devout” is never applied to an idolater in any major translation of Scripture. That word is found nine times in the King James Version (Lk 2:25; Acts 2:5; 8:2; 10:2,7; 13:50; 17:4,17; 22:12). Other versions of Scripture also use this word: 9, NKJV 9, NASB 7, NIV 11, NRSV 12. RSV The Greek word that is here translated “devout” (se,bomai) is found ten times in Scripture, and is translated in various ways.

- Matthew 15:9; Mark 7:7 – “worship.” ALL VERSIONS
- Acts 13:43 – “religious,” KJV “devout,” NKJV “God-fearing.” NASB

- Acts 18:7 – “worshipped,” KJV “worshiper.” NASB
- Acts 18:13 – “worship.” KJV
- Acts 19:27 – “worshippeth,” KJV “worship.” NKJV

As this word is used in Scripture, it refers to the outward conduct of the person so described. Within the Jewish context, it identifies who observed the outward requirements of the Law, shaping their conduct around the commandments and ordinances. It is possible for outward conduct to be a hypocritical show, as in the case of the Jewish leaders, whose worship was “vain,” or pointless, because it was shaped around their traditions – even though it appeared on the surface to conform to the Law of God (Matt 15:9; Mk 7:7).

For those prone to a legalistic approach to religion, what is outward is fundamental. For those with insight, good outward expression is a revelation of what is within. When there is purity within, even if it is in the beginning stages, further truth will be welcomed, and conduct will be reshaped accordingly. In the case of the Jewish leaders, they were corrupt within. Even though they adhered to proper outward conduct, their failure to embrace the truth as it was revealed by Christ Jesus confirmed their hearts were defiled. In the case of our text, the Gentiles, who were fulfilling the outward requirements of the Law, and were diligent to meet in the synagogue on the Sabbath day, had honest and good hearts. This is confirmed by their attitude toward Paul and Silas, who were bringing the message of Christ to the people.

Spiritual Babylon has introduced, and maintains, an approach to religion that is fundamentally shallow. It consists primarily of outward conduct, with a disproportionately small amount of the truth being made known. Even when the Scriptures are used, it is in a very shallow and surface manner, and with a marked emphasis on brevity and infrequency. As a result of this approach, it is exceedingly difficult to comprehend who is serious about the Lord and who is not. There is not enough said to actually cause the distinctiveness of faith to surface. What is said is insufficient to draw out those who are hungry and thirsty for righteousness. There is not even enough said to draw out the corruption that may be in the hearts of the people. I know of very few assemblies where the speakers of truth are aggressively sought, or the people become “joined” to them. However, these circumstances did not exist in our text. The Seed of the Kingdom was sown, and the various soils were thus made known (Matt 13:3-9, 18-23).

Chief Women

Other versions read, “a number of leading women,” NASB “a few prominent women,” NIV “of noble women not a few,” DOUAY “of the wives of many prominent men,” GWN and “of the principal women not a few.” YLT

One thing is immediately obvious: Paul and Silas did not preach a Gospel that left women in a second-class position. Not only did a number of women join with Paul, they were “chief women,” “leading women,” and “principle women.” The word translated “chief” means “first . . . first in rank, influence, honor, chief, principal,” THAYER “first (of all), foremost, chief, most important of all . . . the most important persons,” FRIBERG and “first, foremost, most important, most prominent.” GINGRICH

Nothing in this text, either etymologically or doctrinally, suggests these were wives of leading men. That may well have been the case, but that is not the point of the text. Neither, indeed, is there any suggestion that these were leaders among the women. The text does not say they were “chief” among the women, but that they were themselves leading figures, not by virtue of their association with someone else, but of themselves.

Woman of this caliber have been mentioned before. There were “devout and honorable women” in Antioch (Acts 13:50). Lydia was a business woman (Acts 16:14). Many “honorable women” in Thessalonica are said to have later believed (Acts 17:12). Phebe was a leading woman whom Paul admonished the Roman brethren to assist “in whatever business she hath” (Rom 16:1-2).

If these women were married, no mention is made of it. Although Gentiles, and prominent in the community, they had displayed a noble interest in the truth of God by coming to the local synagogue. Now, they confirm they have sober and disciplined minds as they recognize that what they heard was true, and desired an extended exposure to it. Therefore, they joined themselves to Paul and Silas.

It is vital that no professing believer adopt an attitude toward women that makes this a difficult passage to accept. It is very straightforward and does not contain a syllable that suggests that women are inferior in matters pertaining to God, or that they are in any way restricted when it comes to the appropriation of the truth of God. In Christ there is no such thing as “female” Gal 3:28. The “new creature” (2 Cor 5:17) is not identified by gender.

THE JEWS WHICH BELIEVED NOT

“ 5 But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.”

Throughout Scripture, the accent is placed on those who respond to the Lord, and the others are treated as exceptions. That is the manner of the Kingdom because it is the heavenly perspective. In the matter of praying for others, the saints have the priority (Eph 6:18; 1 Thess 3:1; 2 Thess 3:1). When it comes to doing good, the people of God are the special ones to whom good is to be done (Gal 6:10). As simplistic as it may sound, those who believe are the ones who receive Divine benefit (Mk 16:16; John 3:18,36; 6:36,47; 7:38; 11:25; 14:12; Rom 1:16; 10:4; 1 Pet 2:6; 1 John 5:5,10). Therefore, in our text, the spotlight was placed on those who believed what was preached by Paul and Silas.

Now, secondarily, our attention will be turned to those who did not believe. We will be shown the impact of their unbelief upon themselves, for by failing to believe, they were excluded from the benefit. Therefore, by default, they took a position against the Gospel.

It is still true that any who have not been convinced of the truth concerning Christ reject it because it is unreasonable to them. In that kind of situation, when the issue of Christ is pressed, as Paul and Silas did, hostility will eventually erupt.

Those who attempt to tailor the Gospel for unbelievers do well to take note of this Kingdom manner. There really is no good message for unbelievers. The word for them is, “shall be damned” (Mk 16:16), “is condemned already” (John 3:18), and “the wrath of God abideth on him” (John 3:36). We will now see how those who have this sentence upon themselves react to the good Word of God and those who bring it.

“But the Jews which believed not . . .” Other versions read, “who were not persuaded,” NKJV “the unbelieving Jews,” CJB/YLT/AMPLIFIED “some of the Jews,” NLT and “the Jewish leaders,” LIVING

Most of the later versions omit the word “unbelieving,” choosing the expression, “the Jews.” While the word “unbelieving” is not in the Greek text, it is there by implication. A small transitional word is used (de.), a adversative participle that indicates a transition. That is, the “Jews” who are mentioned here are being compared with the ones who “believed” (17:4). These Jews, which apparently were the majority, had not been persuaded of the truth of what had been declared. What Paul and Silas had preached contradicted their own way of thinking. They sensed they could not continue holding their thoughts, and yet embrace what had been proclaimed in their synagogue. Therefore, they set out to oppose Paul and Silas.

It is still true that any who have not been convinced of the truth concerning Christ reject it because it is unreasonable to them. In that kind of situation, when the issue of Christ is pressed, as Paul and Silas did, hostility will eventually erupt.

MOVED WITH ENVY

“ . . . moved with envy . . .” Other versions read, “becoming envious,” NKJV “becoming jealous,” NASB “moved with jealousy,” ASV “grew jealous,” CJB “having been stirred up to jealousy,” DARBY “were indignant,” MRD “full of resentment,” NJB “aroused to jealousy,” AMPLIFIED and

“in a fury of jealousy.” PHILLIPS

As used here, the word “envy” means “to be heated or to boil with envy, hatred, anger.” THAYER This was more than an inward feeling. It was more like an erupting volcano, a raging fire, and a ravishing flood. It began within them, but erupted in outward and unbridled hostility. When people are not persuaded by the truth of the Gospel, they are made available for this kind of reaction.

The “envy,” or “jealousy,” that raged within and erupted in the conduct of these people was their reaction to the success of Paul and Silas. They saw them as disrupting their local synagogue. Many of us have seen similar reactions when some of the people in a gathering are persuaded of the truth of the Gospel, while the majority are not.

LEWD FELLOWS FOR COMPANY

“ . . .took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort . . .” Other versions read, “the evil men from the marketplace,” NKJV “wicked men from the market “place,” NASB “bad characters from the market place,” NIV “ruffians in the market place,” NRSV “wicked fellows of the rabble,” RSV “vile fellows of the rabble,” ASV “low persons from among the common people,” BBE “riffraff hanging around the city square,” CJB “scoundrels from the marketplace,” CSB “wicked men of the lowest rabble,” DARBY “wicked men of the vulgar sort,” DOUAY “vagabonds and wicked fellows,” GENEVA “low-class characters who hung around the public square,” GWN “worthless men loitering in the public square,” NAB “troublemakers from the marketplace,” NLT “of the loungers certain evil men,” YLT “worthless fellows from the streets,” LIVING “some ill-conditioned and idle fellows,” WEYMOUTH “some contemptible characters who used to hang out in the public square,” ISV and “getting hold of some wicked men (ruffians and rascals) and loungers in the marketplace.” AMPLIFIED

The word “lewd” means, “bad, of a bad nature or condition . . . wicked,” THAYER and “morally corrupt and evil.” LOUW-NIDA “Fellows” means men. The expression “baser sort” means “morally corrupt and evil.” THAYER “Fellows” means men. The expression “baser sort” means, “of or belonging to the market place 2) frequenting the market place; hucksters, petty traffickers, retail dealers; idlers, loungers, the common sort, low, mean vulgar; generally, proper to the assembly, suited to forensic speaking, business-like transactions,” THAYER “a person who habitually idles in the marketplace - loafer, bum,” LOUW-NIDA These were not socially productive men, but debased men who sought to exploit others, hanging around public places to gain some ill-gotten gain. They were what men might call the “scum” of society – the leeches who are always taking and never giving. Trouble is always in their wake.

There is a certain hierarchy in society. This is from heaven’s perspective, and is not intended to represent a form of fleshly classification.

- Spiritual men are rank the highest – those who are in Christ Jesus, reconciled to God, and have the Holy Spirit.

- There are also “devout men,” who have an introductory knowledge of God, yet are not in Christ Jesus. They have a heart for the truth, yet have not been subjected to the Gospel. Cornelius and Lydia are examples of such people. They are also honest and good people – that is, people who have an “honest and a good heart.” They may not have been exposed to much of revealed religion, yet are ready to receive the truth when it is presented to them. The Philippian jailer is an example of this kind of person.

- There are also philanthropic people who are less self-centered, and willing to invest of themselves in others. The Centurion who built the Jews a synagogue is example of this kind of person, as well as Cornelius.

- There are also the people who hold to a religious tradition that is lifeless, yet are held in high regard. These people reject the truth when it conflicts with their tradition. Because the foundation of their thought is religious, they will go to any length to suppress anything or anyone who violates it – even to the point of crucifying the Lord’s Christ. The Scribes, Pharisees, Sadducees and Lawyers represent this kind of people.

- The lowest level of humanity are worthless – those who are totally unproductive, living only for self-satisfaction and pleasure. These are not only self-indulgent, but aggressively seek illicit means to satisfy their baser desires. They are noted for moral debasement, violence, and the likes. These are the kind of people the rejecting Jews of our text chose to gather together. They were lazy, idle, prone to trouble, and on the bottom rung of the social ladder. They were exploiters, hucksters, and rabble-rousers. Now, however, they became associates of those Jews who had been faithfully meeting in their synagogue, yet were offended by the proclamation of the Christ.

GATHERED A COMPANY

“ . . . and gathered a company . . .” Other versions read, “gathering a mob,” KJV “formed a mob,” NASB “getting together a great number of people,” BBE “collected a crowd,” CJB “making a tumult.” DOUAY

What a motley conglomeration of people! Ruffians and lazy rabble-rousers together with religious men – probably religious leaders. Here are different groups of people that are collected together as a result of the proclamation of the record God has given of His Son.

- Those with honest and good hearts.
- Those with basically corrupt hearts.

When the wicked people gather together they tend to be an uncontrollable “mob,” bent on doing what is wicked. By contrast, when the righteous come together, they unity is “good and pleasant,” bringing great profit

Both of these groups, though they consist of a significant variety of people, tend to unite when the Lord’s Christ is unquestionably set before them. This was precisely what Simeon prophesied concerning Christ when he held Him as a Babe: “And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, “Behold, this Child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against” (Luke 2:34). Peter highlighted the same thing, referring to Jesus as both a Stone that was the Head of the corner, and a stumbling Stone as well: “Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling, and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed” (1 Pet 2:7-8).

When the wicked people gather together they tend to be an uncontrollable “mob,” bent on doing what is wicked. By contrast, when the righteous come together, they unity is “good and pleasant,” bringing great profit (Psa 133).

CAUSED UPROAR IN THE CITY

“ . . . and set all the city on an uproar . . .” Other versions read, “started a riot in the city,” NIV “made an outcry in the town,” BBE “set the city in confusion,” DARBY “they alarmed the city,” MRD “set the city in turmoil,” NAB and “make trouble in the city.” IE

As used here, the word “uproar” means, “turbulent . . . to throw into confusion,” THAYER “to throw into disorder,” FRIBERG and “to cause people to riot against - 'to stir up against, to start a riot, to cause an uproar.” LOUW -NIDA The devil’s work is best accomplished amidst tumult, disorder, and confusion. Remember, this whole circumstance was brought about because the Jews were envious of Paul and Silas. The tumult, or “uproar,” that they cause confirmed the truth written by James: “For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work” (James 3:16).

It ought to be noted here that when people think they are set at a disadvantage, they will react adversely, and in opposition to a matter.

THEY ASSAULTED THE HOUSE OF JASON

“ . . . and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people.” Other versions read, “attacked the house,” NKJV “coming upon the house,” NASB “rushed to Jason’s house,” NIV and “having beset the house.” DARBY

The assaulting of Jason’s house could be described as invading it, or breaking into it. This was done in an effort to find Paul and Silas. This was the reaction of the Jews to the success of Paul and Silas. Since the natural course of events did not fall in their favor, they sought to force their own will into the situation. That is the manner of the flesh.

It appears that “the house of Jason” was where Paul and Silas were staying, or lodging. Some have conjectured that this is the Jason to whom Paul referred in his letter to the Romans. At that time, he was with Paul: “Timotheus my workfellow, and Lucius, and Jason , and Sosipater, my kinsmen, salute you” (Rom 16:21). The book of Romans was written some time after the events of our text (58 A.D. versus around 52 A.D.). This could very well have been the occasion when Jason became familiar with Paul, and possibly even joined those who were traveling with him.

As a point of interest, “Jason” is the Romanized form of “Jesus” (Greek), and “Joshua” (Hebrew).

We have no direct information about Jason himself. However, there are some things that are certainly implied by the text.

- Jason had received what Paul and Silas had spoken.
- He wished to be identified with them, receiving them into his house.
- Following the pattern of other converts like Cornelius (Acts 10:48) and Lydia (Acts 16:15,40), it was not uncommon for those receiving the message Paul preached, to receive him and those with him into their house. The clear inference here is that Jason was now a believer.
- It appears from the text that Jason was a well known person, so that, for many, no further description of him was necessary.
- The fact that the mob was not able to find Paul and Silas suggests that Jason had taken measures to protect them. This was a consistent practice of brethren during Paul’s ministry (Acts 9:25,30; 17:10,14). Brethren took time to care for him.

THE CHARGES MADE AGAINST PAUL AND SILAS

“ 6 And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city, crying, These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also; 7 Whom Jason hath received: and these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus. 8 And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things. 9 And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.”

These people are so intent on their opposition to the message of Jesus that they are even aggressive against those who have identified themselves with Paul and Silas.

JASON AND CERTAIN BRETHREN

“And when they found them not, they drew Jason and certain brethren unto the rulers of the city . . .” Other versions read, “dragged,” NKJV “began dragging,” NASB and “took . . . by force,” BBE

It is obvious that Jason and the brethren were alert to the schemes of the Jews, and had made arrangements for the safety of Paul and Silas, jeopardizing their own lives.

“Jason and certain brethren” were no doubt among those described in verse four: “and some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas.” Now, “the Jews” quite literally drag Jason and some brethren before the rulers of the city. They do this by invading Jason’s house, forcing their way into it, and dragging Jason and others to the rulers of the city. Their only offense was that they had believed what Paul and Silas preached, and been hospitable to them.

THEY TURNED THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN

“ . . . crying, These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also . . .” Other versions read, “have upset the world,” NASB “caused trouble all over the world,” NIV “have set the world in tumult,” DARBY “set the city in an uproar,” DOUAY “have subverted the state of the world,” GENEVA “have terrified all the country,” MRD “have been creating disturbance all over the world,” NAB “have upset the world,” NAU “have stirred up trouble throughout the world,” NET “having put the world in commotion,” YLT “have turned the world topsy-turvy,” WILLIAMS and “have upset the habitable earth.” MONTGOMERY

This is a religious perspective – charges leveled by “the Jews.” By saying Paul and Silas have “turned the world upside down,” these accusers have charged the servants of God with introducing confusion – unsettling and disturbing humanity. This, they will allege, consisted of making the people disobedient to the laws of the land. According to these men, Paul and Silas had thrown the whole world into a state of disorder, causing disruption in the cities and regions wherever they went. In their judgment the things that followed in the wake of their ministry was commotion, disturbance, disruption, agitation, social upheaval, and anarchy.

First, the charges were false. While Paul and Silas did present Jesus as King, He is a King of another order. He is not an earthly King, and, contrary to some of the teaching of our day, will, never be.

Their aim was to present Paul and Silas as political anarchists, set to disrupt social tranquility and foment rebellion against the government. They knew this kind of influence was something the officials would not tolerate.

Of course, the upheaval was really caused by the ones who did not receive the message of the Gospel – not by those who received it (13:45,50; 14:2,4-5; 17:5). The Gospel promotes peace, not unrest – in fact, it is appropriately called “the Gospel of peace” (Rom 10:15). The wisdom that is from above “is first of all pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated” (James 3:17).

Of course, all of this postulates the acceptance of the truth. Those who believe the Gospel and embrace Jesus Christ do not become troublemakers.

JASON HATH RECEIVED

“Whom Jason hath received . . .” Other versions read, “harbored them,” NKJV “welcomed them,” NASB “entertained them as guests,” NRSV and “received them to his house and privately protected them!” AMPLIFIED This confirms that Paul and Silas, and those with them, were staying with Jason, who had welcomed them into his home. The word translated “received” means, “to receive as a guest,” THAYER “welcome, receive, entertain as a guest,” FRIBERG and “to receive into one's house, receive hospitably.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

Because of the fierceness of the opposition Paul and Silas encountered, the text suggests Jason took measures to protect the men of God. As I have already said, this is something that “the brethren” did repeatedly – take special measures to protect Paul and those who were with him (Acts 9:25,30; 17:10,14).

THEY DO CONTRARY TO THE DECREES OF CAESAR

“ . . . and these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus.” Other versions read, “acting contrary to the decrees,” NKJV “defying Caesar’s decrees,” NIV “oppose the emperor’s decrees,” GWN and “ignoring and acting contrary to the decrees.”
AMPLIFIED

First, the charges were false. While Paul and Silas did present Jesus as King, He is a King of another order. He is not an earthly King, and, contrary to some of the teaching of our day, will, never be. Jesus Himself taught that men are to “Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar’s” (Mark 12:17).

We know the apostles, did not teach the people to “defy” governmental rulers, or to be anarchists.

- “Honor the king” (1 Pet 2:17).
- “Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers . For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God : and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation . . . Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake . For this cause pay ye tribute also : for they are God’s ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues : tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor ” (Rom 13:1-6).

Although Christ’s kingdom is not of this world (John 18:36), yet those who remain in this world are subject to civil authority, for it has been ordained by God. No inspired person ever taught or acted in contradiction of civil laws that did not violate the Law of God.

Kingdom Philosophy

There is a certain holy philosophy that attends the concept of kings and kingdoms. First, the Lord Jesus Christ, as the glorified Man, has been exalted over all forms of authority in both the seen and unseen realms. He is, in fact, “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and the Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). Even the angels, who are vastly superior to the kings of the earth, are subject to Him (Heb 1:6). As it is written, “Jesus Christ, who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:21-22). Seated at the Father’s right hand in the heavenly places, He has been exalted “Far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come” (Eph 1:21).

The immediate objective of His reign is to “deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage,” and then to “bring many sons to glory” (Heb 2:10,15). That is the purpose of His Kingdom, which is “not of this world” (John 18:36). In His own words, “To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth . Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice” (John 18:37). That is, “the truth” is the means through which deliverance is wrought, and the delivered ones are safely brought “to glory.”

In saying Jesus is the “King of kings,” it is affirmed that He is also over all civil authority and government, which was ordained by God. The objective of civil government has been revealed:

• TO ENCOURAGE THE DOING OF GOOD. “. . . do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same . . . For he is the minister of God to thee for good.” (Rom 13:4a). Peter also said that kings and governors are intended “for the praise of them that do well” (1 Pet 2:14). This encouragement largely consists of maintaining a peaceful environment. This is why we are exhorted to pray “For kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty ” (1 Tim 2:2).

• TO PUNISH EVIL DOERS. “. . . he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil” (Rom 13:4b). “Evil,” in this context, has to do with breaking the laws, doing violence, encroaching on the rights of others, and being generally disruptive to society. Kings or other political powers who do not carry out the revealed objective of government have been disobedient, and will be judged appropriately for it. The necessity of executing wrath upon “him that doth evil” confirms that evil can in no way be justified. Among other things, the intention of government is to keep the society from erupting into continual violence, as existing in the days of Noah – God’s way of keeping every man from doing what he wills, even it means the violation of others.

Just as many professed believers fail in their responsibilities, so many civil rulers fail to carry out their responsibility. Pilate and Herod, for example, set themselves against the ultimate doer of good, who “went about doing good” (Acts 10:38).

Keep in mind that during the life of Paul, Nero was the ruler of the world. His waywardness will be judged by the God who gave him his authority. However, his wickedness did not obviate the word of the Lord

True Spiritual Life

True spiritual life does not make one contrary to the principle of government. It does not allow for NOT doing good, or for engaging in disruptive and harmful conduct. This is precisely why Paul said in a civil court, “For if I be an offender, or have committed any thing worthy of death, I refuse not to die ” (Acts 25:11). Those who belong to Christ are “the salt of the earth,” which speaks of bringing benefit to men, not the disadvantage of civil unrest (Matt 5:13).

Throughout modern history, some professing Christians have been troublesome, not obeying the laws of the land. Others have willingly chosen to burden society by not paying their bills, not working, and taking advantage of the ignorant. Such things ought not to be.

THEY TROUBLED THE PEOPLE AND THE RULERS

“And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things.” Other versions read, “stirred up the crowd,” NASB “were thrown into turmoil,” NIV “were disturbed,” NRSV “were upset,” GWN “were alarmed,” NJB and “were irritated (stirred up and troubled).”
AMPLIFIED

The way to trouble the city officials was to charge Paul and Silas, and those who had joined them, with political anarchy and social agitation: “ these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus” (17:7). They could have caused no trouble at all if they said these men were telling the people of a Savior from sin, or that there was a means through which men could be justified from all things, and obtain an eternal inheritance. Those things would not have been seen as anything important to the government – even though there are implications in such words that show the inferiority of government.

In opposing those to declare the truth, the opponents must in some way misrepresent them. In the religious world, this is done by associating them with certain positions that are guaranteed to upset the people. For some, the charge of being “Calvinists” will do the work. For others, charging the speakers with being “antinomian,” or “lawless” is sufficient. Some, who have adopted a humanistic view of the love of God, may say faithful preachers and teachers “have no grace,” or are “harsh and judgmental.” Some have even been known to say, “They are not traditional Christians,” or “they are weird,” or “occultic.” Such charges are sure to trouble the people, even though there is not a speck of truth in them. You may rest assured, such opponents will never report what has actually been said by those who proclaim the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

The idea here is that Jason and the brethren gave a good account of Paul and Silas, satisfying the court that they had not violated the law. The court then had them post bail, through which they become responsible for Paul and Silas and their conduct.

THEY TOOK SECURITY OF JASON, AND LET THEM GO

“And when they had taken security of Jason, and of the other, they let them go.” Other versions read, “received a pledge from Jason and the others,” NASB “they made Jason and the others post bond,” NIV and “had taken bail from Jason and the others.” NRSV

Those who had believed, followed, and housed Paul, had to pay their way out of custody – paying bail as though they had actually been guilty of some crime.

The idea here is that Jason and the brethren gave a good account of Paul and Silas, satisfying the court that they had not violated the law. The court then had them post bail, through which they become responsible for Paul and Silas and their conduct. The court was satisfied there would be no further disruption. This was an unexpected expense, to be sure, but Jason and those with him thought Paul and Silas worthy of such support. The city officials simply could not heartily embrace what these offending Jews had said.

THE BROTHERS COME TO THEIR AID

“ 10 And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews.”

Perceiving the nature of the situation, the brethren immediately take the appropriate action. They do not think of themselves, but of the ones through whom they have believed. The immediacy of their action, coupled with the brevity of their discipleship, give an excellent demonstration of the power of the Gospel.

THE BROTHERS SENT PAUL AND SILAS AWAY

“And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea . . .” Other versions read, “as soon as it was night,” NIV “that very night,” NRSV “straight away,” BBE and “at once.” NET

The brethren waste no time in moving Paul and Silas out of the realm of danger. This was an act of godly discretion. There was no consistent revealed procedure on how to respond to opposition. This was done within the framework of Divine fellowship. Notice the different ways in which holy men responded to aggressive opposition, and in which they were directed to respond.

- THE APOSTLES. When the apostles were delivered from prison, an angel of God told them, “Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life” (Acts 5:20) – in Jerusalem, the very place where they had just been arrested (Acts 5:17-18).

- BELIEVERS. When persecution broke out because of Stephen, the believers were “scattered abroad,” leaving the area (Acts 8:4).

• PAUL. When the Jews in Damascus laid wait for Paul, the disciples took him by night and “let him down by the wall in a basket” (Acts 9:24-25).

• PAUL AND BARNABAS. When the Jews of Antioch raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them from their coasts, they “shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came to Iconium” (Acts 13: 50-51).

• PAUL AND BARNABAS. When Paul and Barnabas faced opposition in Iconium, remained a “long time . . . speaking boldly in the Lord’ (Acts 14:1-3).

• PAUL AND BARNABAS. Later, in the same city, when “the Jews with their rulers” sought to stone them, “they fled unto Lystra and Derbe” (Acts 14:5-6).

• PAUL. When certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium stoned Paul in Lystra, leaving him for dead, he arose, went back and “preached the Gospel in that city,” then returned again to Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch (Acts 14:19-21).

• PAUL AND SILAS. When Paul and Silas faced persecution in Philippi, and were beaten and imprisoned, they departed from the region after being released and having visited the brethren at the house of Lydia (Acts 16:40).

Now, faced with danger again, the servants of God are sent away to Berea by night. That involved a journey of about fifty miles. That very well may have been by sea, for both Thessalonica and Berea were on the Aegean Sea.

Again, note the inconvenience to the flesh that was required in carrying out this deliverance. Yet, there appears to have been no thought about such a thing.

If you were to attempt a manual on responding to opposition, precisely how would you go about developing a procedure? As I have already shown, there is no revealed standard – which means there is no revealed standard on this matter.

There are decisions in spiritual life that do not depend on following a routine. They rather depend upon fellowship with the Lord. John refers to this as walking “in the light as He is in the light.”

There are decisions in spiritual life that do not depend on following a routine. They rather depend upon fellowship with the Lord. John refers to this as walking “in the light as He is in the light” (1 John 1:7). In the walk of faith, or when walking in the Spirit, there is an experience referred to as “fellowship of the Spirit,” or “fellowship with the Spirit.” NIV (Phil 2:1). Other versions refer to “sharing in the Spirit,” NRSV and “participation in the Spirit.” RSV

There is a direction that takes place as we walk in the light, by faith, and in the Spirit. To put it another way, direction is given while we are engaged in the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. I gather that this is the kind of direction that dictated the disciples’ action described in this text. Those who choose to walk in, and mind the things of, the flesh forfeit this kind of direction.

THEY WENT INTO THE SYNAGOGUE OF THE JEWS

“ . . . who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews.” Other versions read, “When they arrived, they went into the synagogue of the Jews,” NKJV “On arriving there, they went to the Jewish synagogue,” NIV

Once again, in keeping with the intent of the Gospel, Paul goes “to the Jew first” (Rom 1:16) – even though he has just been rejected by the Jews in Thessalonica. That rejection did not cause him to lose his focus. He no doubt remembered the commission that Jesus gave to him through His servant Ananias: “But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel ” (Acts 9:15).

As I have noted previously, when Paul entered a city, if there was a synagogue there, it was not long until Paul entered that synagogue and preached the word of the Lord.

- IN DAMASCUS, IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWING HIS CONVERSION: “And straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God” (Acts 9:20).

- IN SALAMIS, CYPRUS: “And when they were at Salamis, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to their minister” (Acts 13:5).

- IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA: “But when they departed from Perga, they came to Antioch in Pisidia, and went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and sat down” (Acts 13:14).

- IN ICONIUM: “And it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed” (Acts 14:1).

- IN THESSALONICA: “Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews: “And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures” (Acts 17:1-2).

- IN BEREIA: “And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews” (Acts 17:10).

- IN ATHENS: “Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him” (Acts 17:16-17).

- IN CORINTH: “After these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth . . . And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks” (Acts 18:1-4).

- IN EPHESUS: “And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews . . . And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God” (Acts 18:19; 19:8).

There were powerful reasons why Paul preached to the Jews. First, Jesus had commissioned him to do so (Acts 9:15). Second, the Gospel is God’s power in order to salvation “to the Jew first” (Rom 1:16). Third, his heart was to do this, for he carried a burden for the Jews. He wrote to the brethren in Rome, “Brethren, my heart's desire and prayer to God for Israel is, that they might be saved” (Rom 10:1). Toward the close of his life, after he had arrived in Rome to appeal to Caesar, he called the chief of the Jews in that area together. He then said to them, “For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you: because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain” (Acts 28:20).

Gentiles in the Synagogues

In entering into synagogues of the Jews, Paul was not confining himself to the Jews. Devout Gentiles could also be found there (Acts 13:42-48' 14:1; 17:4,12; 18:4). The synagogue was often the place where inquiring Gentiles learned of the true God. Those who embraced “the God of the Jews” (Rom, 3:29) are referred to as “proselytes” (Acts 2:10; 6:5; 13:43).

The Jewish synagogues were one of the chief means through which God prepared the Gentile world for the Christ. They were scattered throughout the whole world – wherever the Jews had been dispersed by God Himself (Isa 11:12; Jer 9:16; 30:11; Ezek 4:13; 5:10; 6:8; 11:16; 20:23). Already in the book of Acts we have read of synagogues of the Jews in Syria (9:2), Cyprus (13:5), Asia Minor (Acts 13:14; 14:1; 17:1), and Greece (17:10,17). In these synagogues the Scriptures were read every Sabbath day – both from Moses and the Prophets (Acts 15:21). Inquiring Gentiles, awakened by the presence of the Jews and their unique religion, went to the synagogue in order to learn of the true God. Those Jews, though dispersed for their waywardness, were used by the Lord to spread the knowledge of God. In this way, the world was prepared for the Messiah. This is confirmed in the Gentile responses recorded in Acts – with few exceptions in the setting of a synagogue (10:45; 13:48; 14:1; 17:4,12).

THE BEREANS WERE MORE NOBLE

“ 11 These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.”

While the Jews in Thessalonica rejected the words of Paul and Silas, forcing them to leave that area, this was not the response of the Jews in Berea. In Damascus, the Jews took counsel to kill Paul (9:23). In Antioch they contradicted and blasphemed Paul and Barnabas, finally expelling them from their coasts (13:45,50). In Iconium the Jews “stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren,” finally forcing Paul and Barnabas to flee to Lystra and Derbe (14:2,5-6). In Lystra, certain Jews from Antioch came, persuaded the people against Paul, and stoned him (14:19). In Thessalonica, the Jews not only refused to believe what Paul and Silas preached, but gathered a motley group of people and fomented such trouble that the brethren had to send Paul and Silas away to Berea (17:5-10). Now, the servants of the Lord will enjoy a refreshing change in the hearers.

THESE WERE MORE NOBLE

These Jews did not dismiss what they heard simply because it clashed with their present views. They were willing to enter into the exploration of what Paul and Silas preached in their synagogue. They did not brush aside their words as though they were meaningless.

“These were more noble than those in Thessalonica . . .” Other versions read, “were more fair-minded,” NKJV “were more noble-minded,” NASB “were of more noble character,” NIV “were more receptive,” NRSV “were more open-minded,” GWN “noblest of birth,” PNT/TNT “were better people,” IE “were of a nobler disposition,” WEYMOUTH “were better disposed,” WILLIAMS “were better disposed and more noble,” AMPLIFIED and “proved more generous-minded.” PHILLIPS

The word translated “noble” has the following lexical meaning: “well-born, of noble race . . . noble-minded,” THAYER “as a commendable attitude open-minded, without prejudice,” FRIBERG and “noble-minded, open-minded.” GINGRICH

While this word (“noble”) sometimes refers to one’s birth or natural culture, that is not the meaning here. Here it pertains to a certain quality of heart and mind. Their thoughts were more capable of expansion. These Jews did not dismiss what they heard simply because it clashed with their present views. They were willing to enter into the exploration of what Paul and Silas preached in their synagogue. They did not brush aside their words as though they were meaningless. That is what the Jews in Thessalonica did, immediately engaging in aggressive opposition to what Paul and Silas preached in their synagogue.

THEY RECEIVED THE WORD WITH ALL READINESS OF MIND

“ . . . in that they received the word with all readiness of mind . . .” Other versions read, “with great eagerness,” NASB “very eagerly,” NRSV “Gave serious attention to the word,” BBE “eagerly welcomed the message,” CJB “were very willing to receive,” GWN “Gladly heard the word,” MRD “with all willingness,” NAB “welcomed the word very readily,” NJB “listened eagerly,” NLT “with all diligence of mind,” TNT “gladly listened to the message,” LIVING “were very happy to listen,” IE and “entirely ready and accepted and welcomed the message.” AMPLIFIED

The expression “readiness of mind” is translated from a single Greek word (proqumi,aj), which means, “zeal, spirit, eagerness, inclination, readiness of mind,” THAYER and “a determined disposition of mind, readiness, zeal; willingness, eagerness.” FRIBERG This speaks of an attitude that is inclined to the message that was delivered to the people – they liked the sound of it, and wanted to know more of it. They had a disposition of mind that focused on what was said, and were eager and willing to know more of its meaning.

Those who have been involved in preaching and teaching for some time know that this type of hearer is somewhat rare. Some have ministered for long periods of time with very few hearers who could be so described. This situation is so common that some might be led to believe it is the normal stance of professed believers. However, this is not at all the case.

Jesus said that this kind of hearer falls into the category of His sheep – His true followers. “My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me” (John 10:27). This kind of hearing is described in the landmark prophecy of Moses concerning the Lord Jesus: “The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto Him ye shall hearken ” (Deut 18:15). The word “hearken” has the following definition: “to hear, listen to, obey; to hear (perceive by ear); to hear of or concerning; to hear (have power to hear); to hear with attention or interest, listen to.” HEBREW LEXICON The ideas of interest, subjection, and focused attention are in the word. This perfectly coincides with the description Jesus gave of His sheep – those who are received by Him and follow Him.

In a more broad statement of the case, Jesus categorized those who are subjected to the words of God: “He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God” (John 8:47). He also said, “Why do ye not understand My speech? even because ye cannot hear My word” (John 8:43). These statements have some alarming ramifications! They blow away all excuses that are presented for having no interest in the words that come from God.

THEY SEARCHED THE SCRIPTURES DAILY

“ . . . and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.” Other versions read, “examining the Scriptures daily,” NASB “checking,” CJB “Carefully examined,” GWN and “studied.” NJB

In this case, “the Scriptures” were the writings of Moses and the Prophets. That means that the message delivered by Paul and Silas was the declaration of what was foretold by the inspired men of old, and had been fulfilled in Jesus Christ. Toward the close of his life, Paul gave a summation of what he taught, and it is most arresting to consider: “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come ” (Acts 26:22). I will wax bold and say that no other message is sanctioned by God! When Jesus revealed Himself to the two on the road to Emmaus, it is described in these words: “And beginning at Moses and the Prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself” (Luke 24:27).

Paul had no doubt taught precisely as he did in Thessalonica, reasoning “with them out of the scriptures, opening and alleging, that Christ must needs have suffered, and risen again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom I preach unto you, is Christ” (Acts 17:2-3). The Gospel itself is said to be

“according to the Scriptures” (1 Cor 15:3-4).

The Christ of the Gospel is the “Prophet” of Moses, and the “Messiah” of the Prophets. They defined who He was and what He would do. They specified both the need for Him, and His ministry. This was in order that He might be recognized when He came. This is why Philip was able to say to Nathanael, “We have found Him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph” (John 1:45). While, at that time, he may not have comprehended the virgin birth (referring to Jesus as “the son of Joseph”), he was able to recognize Him as the One of whom Moses and the Prophets testified.

In my judgment, a Jesus is being preached today that does not fulfill the prophecies of Moses and the Prophets. It is a spurious “Jesus” that is designed to optimize life in this world, and provide opportunities for exploitation. Were you to go to the Scriptures to confirm that the “Jesus” that is too often proclaimed was prophesied of old, you would experience utter frustration.

But it was not so with the Jews of our text. How refreshing it must have been for them to search the Scriptures in view of what they heard in that Berean synagogue, and have confirming light shed upon those Scriptures by the Spirit! Their’s was a very real introduction to the Christ that God promised, and it wrought the results God intended.

MANY OF THEM BELIEVED

“ 12 Therefore many of them believed; also of honorable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.”

The Gospel of Christ is “the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth” (Rom 1:16). That circumstance substantiates that believing the Gospel is fundamental in the matter of salvation. There is no salvation without believing, for salvation is “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:7).

THEREFORE

“Therefore . . .” Other versions read, “consequently,” CSB “indeed,” DOUAY “as a result,” NLT and “so.” MONTGOMERY

The word “therefore” is translated from the Greek word ou=n . It’s lexical meaning is, “consequently, accordingly.” GINGRICH This is a conjunction found at the beginning of a sentence that marks a certain transition that depends on the previous clause.

The idea here is that what follows the word “therefore” was a consequence of what preceded it. The Gospel was preached to those who had a “ready mind” – a mind that was willing to consider what was said, being convinced that it was worthy of the effort. But the consideration was more than mere speculation, or sifting what was heard through their preconceived notions. Rather, these people resorted to the Scriptures, comparing what they had heard concerning Christ with what Moses and the Prophets had foretold of the Messiah .

This required deliberate and extended effort. It also presumed a certain familiarity with the Scriptures, which were read every Sabbath day in the synagogue. These Jews knew that God had affirmed that any new message had to be compared with what God had already revealed. Thus Isaiah had written, “To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them” (Isa 8:20). The message they had heard had a certain attractiveness to it. It sounded good, and that was because it was good. Additionally, the Holy Spirit worked with the message drawing at the hearts of the listeners because they were “honest and good” (Lk 8:15). What follows is the consequence of such hearts laying the message of the Gospel along side of the Scriptures, and beholding the confirmation of the perfect harmony that existed between

“ . . . many of them believed . . .” Other versions read, “many of the Jews believed.” NASB

The word “many” applies to the Jewish constituency of the synagogue. The context reads, “And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea: who coming thither went into the synagogue of the Jews. These” [Jews] “were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they” [the Jews] “received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so. Therefore many of them’ [the Jews] believed . . .” (Acts 17:10-12).

How refreshingly different were the results in that Berean synagogue, as compared with the ones in Thessalonica!

Believing, as used in this text, has to do with the heart, and speaks of embracing what has been declared, trusting in it, and shaping ones life around it. It speaks of placing confidence in the message.

The word translated “believed” is the ordinary Greek word for believing. This goes beyond the word used in Acts 17:4-5, which speaks of being convinced, agreeing, of assenting to what had been declared. That had to do largely with the mind. Believing, as used in this text, has to do with the heart, and speaks of embracing what has been declared, trusting in it, and shaping ones life around it. It speaks of placing confidence in the message. Lexically, the word is “used in the NT of the conviction and trust to which a man is impelled by a certain inner and higher prerogative and law of soul.” THAYER It goes deeper than persuasion, compelling the individual to act upon the word that was spoken. This is the verb form of faith, and accounts for the response of those who are recounted in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. Their faith is what moved them to act as they did.

- ABEL – By faith Abel offered a more excellent sacrifice to God (11:3).
- ENOCH – By faith Enoch pleased God and was translated (11:5).
- NOAH – By faith Noah built an ark to the saving of his house (11:7).
- ABRAHAM – By faith Abraham left his homeland to go to the land God promised (11:8).
- ABRAHAM – By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise, even though he possessed no part of it (11:9).
- SARAH – By faith Sarah herself received strength to conceive seed when she was past age (11:11).
- ABRAHAM – By faith Abraham, when commanded to do so, offered up Isaac, accounting that God was able to raise him from the dead (11:17-19).
- ISAAC – By faith Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come, even though he did not personally see them come to pass (11:20).
- JACOB – By faith Jacob blessed both the sons of Joseph when he was dying, even though Israel was in Egypt at the time (11:21).
- JOSEPH – By faith Joseph, when he died, commanded that his bones be taken out of Egypt when Israel was delivered from its bondage (11:22).
- MOSES – By faith Moses parents hid him when he was born, refusing to honor the edict of the king (11:23).
- MOSES – By faith Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God (11:24-26).

- MOSES – By faith Moses forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king, enduring as seeing Him who is invisible (11:27).
- MOSES – By faith Moses kept the Passover, and the sprinkling of blood which delivered Israel from having their firstborn slain (11:28).
- ISRAEL – By faith Israel passed through the Red Sea on dry land (11:29).
- ISRAEL – By faith the walls of Jericho fell down, after Israel had marched around them around them for seven days (11:30).
- RAHAB – By faith Rahab received and hid the Jewish spies in peace, thereby being delivered with her household (11:31).
- OTHERS – By faith kingdoms were subdued , righteousness was wrought , promises were obtained , the mouths of lions were stopped , the violence of fire was quenched , men escaped from the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight, and turned to flight the armies of aliens (11:33-34).

Those are examples of real faith. When these people believed, they moved out upon the word they had embraced, and did not hesitate. They did not draw back, but forged forward, even when it appeared to contradict all human reasoning.

This is the kind of believing that took place in our text. It was not mere assent, or being brought to an intellectual agreement with what was said. It rather involved the resetting of their moral compass so that they ceased to live as they once did, reshaping their lives around the Word that was delivered to them.

Those who do not act upon the Word of God have not believed it! In Scripture, the Spirit is very candid about this, stating that such people “believed not” (Psa 78:22,32; 106:24; Mark 16:14; John 6:64; 10:25; 12:37; Acts 17:5; 19:9; 28:24; 2 Thess 2:12; Heb 3:18; 11:31; Jude 1:5). All of this has a strange sound in the religious climate that has been created in our time. A new kind of Gospel is being hawked among the people that allows for a lack of godly response. Employing the corrupt wisdom of men, pleasing explanations for sin and a lack of faith have been concocted that leave men comfortable in their unbelief. Plans ad-infinitum have been developed to correct human behavior without addressing the damning presence of unbelief. All of this is by no means innocent. This entire approach is itself the result of unbelief, and is neither innocent nor tolerable.

Our text is a representation of what you might call the real thing. The real Gospel produced a real faith, which resulted in corresponding real response.

HONORABLE GREEK WOMEN AND NOT A NEW MEN

“ . . . also of honorable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few.” Other versions read, “prominent women as well as men,” NKJV “prominent Greek women and men,” NASB “Greek women and men of high standing,” NRSV “Greek women of honorable estate, and of men,” ASV “Greek women of high position, and of the men,” BBE “Grecian women of the upper classes and men,” DARBY “honest women . . . and men,” GENEVA “influential Greek women and men,” NAB and “a few prominent Greeks, women as well as men.” AMPLIFIED

This is the third time women of distinction have been mentioned. In Antioch, the Jews stirred up “the devout and honorable women” (13:50). In Thessalonica quite a few “chief women” believed “and consorted with Paul and Silas” (17:4). Now many “honorable women” believe the Gospel. These were women of noble rank, prominent in the community.

It is of interest that in two of the three places such women are mentioned, they are mentioned before the men (13:50; 17:12). In 17:4, they are the only gender mentioned. I know of a significant number of professed preachers and teachers who could not even speak in this manner. They could not find the words in their mouths.

However, the text before us is an inspired one, signifying that it is proper to speak of believing women in this manner.

THE JEWS FROM THESSALONICA

“ 13 But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people.”

Paul wrote to the church in Thessalonica concerning the Jews: “. . . the Jews: Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men: Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved, to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost” (1 Thess 2:16). Although Paul had “great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart” concerning the unbelieving Jews (Rom 9:2-3), he did not gloss their condition. He charged them with killing Jesus and their own prophets, persecuting him and those with him, being contrary to all men, and forbidding them to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved. Godly concern and deep affection does not overlook wicked manners. Therefore, Paul spoke plainly about those who opposed him. They had maintained consistent opposition to the truth – both in Jesus, who Himself was the Truth, and in the Gospel, which is the rational declaration of the truth.

In acting as they did, Paul says they did so “to fill up their sins always.” Other versions read, “to fill up the measure of their sins,” NKJV “heap up their sins to the limit,” NIV “make the measure of their sins complete,” BBE “adding to the number of their sins,” CSB “fulfill their sins always,” GENEVA “constantly filling up the measure,” NAB and “they fill up [to the brim the measure of] their sins.” AMPLIFIED

Here is a perspective of sin that is virtually unknown in our time. This is because it does not blend with the spurious gospels and humanistic approaches to religion that are popular. When sin is not forgiven, and continues to be expressed, it is accruing more and more Divine wrath. The breaking forth of wrath takes place when the cup is full. Thus God spoke of the iniquity of the Amorites as “not yet full” (Gen 15:16). This condition allowed for Divine tolerance until such time as their iniquity reached the full measure. James spoke of the continued transgressions of the rich as heaping “together for the last days” (James 5:3). Paul wrote to the Romans concerning those who treasure up to themselves wrath “against the day of wrath” (Rom 2:5).

The picture is a most dreadful one – one of God’s anger increasing more and more, while He endures “with much longsuffering the vessels fitted to destruction” (Rom 9:22). These are vessels that, like the brute beasts, were “made to be taken and destroyed” (2 Pet 2:12). However, because of His righteousness, God does not execute the well deserved judgment until their iniquity has been made full, thereby confirming their corruption to all of the inquiring hosts of heaven.

The Jews in Thessalonica were in this category, and apart from repentance and the belief of the Gospel, the wrath focused upon them was increasing like a growing cloud that hovered over their heads. Those who aggressively oppose those who preach the Gospel are not innocent, as Paul affirmed to the Thessalonians.

THE JEWS OF THESSALONICA

“But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea . . .” Other versions read, “that the word of God had been proclaimed by Paul in Berea also,” NASB “that Paul was preaching the word of God at Berea,”: NIV

Once again, they stirred up the people by introducing the notion that there were significant disadvantages that would result from any association with Paul and Silas. The devil's crowd is still attempting to make this impression upon the people concerning those who preach and teach the truth of God.

and "in Berea as well." NRSV

These Jews were not content to silence Paul in their own town, they did not want him preaching the Gospel in any town. It is apparent that they made it their business to keep track of Paul, for they could not tolerate the message he was preaching.

Something to Note

Here it is said that Paul was doing the preaching, even though others were in a supporting role of some sort (13:46,50; 15:12,35; 16:19,32; 17:4,10. Notwithstanding, the primary speaker was Paul, as affirmed in other texts (13:16; 14:9,12,19; 16:14; 17:2,13-15). Throughout His dealings with men, God has always used leaders – those who were especially conversant with Him and His will. The church is not a democracy in which all hold equal status. It is expressly revealed that "God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that . . ." (1 Cor 12:28). Paul, as well as some others, was in all three of those categories.

Prior to this, the Jews from Antioch and Iconium came to Lystra, and persuaded the people to stone Paul, drag him outside of the city, and leave him for dead (Acts 14:19).

THEY STIRRED UP THE PEOPLE

" . . . they came thither also, and stirred up the people." Other versions read, "agitating and stirring up the crowds," NASB "to stir up and incite the crowds," NRSV "stirring up and troubling the multitudes," ASV "troubling the people and working them up," BBE "agitating and disturbing the crowds," DARBY "moved the people," GENEVA "ceased not to excite and alarm the people," MRD "to cause a commotion and stir up the crowds," NAB and "disturbing and inciting the masses." AMPLIFIED

In this text, the word "people" means "a crowd . . . a multitude of men who have flocked together in some place . . . a throng . . . a multitude." THAYER This confirms the remarkable success Paul and Silas had realized at Berea – a large number of Jews believed, as well as a significant number of Gentile women and men!

These wicked men no doubt hurled the same charges at Paul and Silas that they had voiced in Thesslonica: "these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus" (17:7). Not wanting to be known as political insurrectionists, these accusations troubled the common people from Berea, just as they did those from Thessalonica: "And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city, when they heard these things" (Acts 17:8). Once again, they stirred up the people by introducing the notion that there were significant disadvantages that would result from any association with Paul and Silas. The devil's crowd is still attempting to make this impression upon the people concerning those who preach and teach the truth of God.

The enmity that exists between Jesus and Satan also exists between those who are joined to Christ, and those who are of the devil. God said to Satan, "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed" (Gen 3:15). The enmity was not put there by Satan, but by God Himself – and it cannot successfully be avoided. God has so arranged things that those who embrace Jesus will eventually be opposed by those who do not. There is a hostility that exists between flesh and spirit that cannot possibly be resolved. That is precisely why "flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor 15:50).

THE BRETHREN ARE ALERT

“ 14 And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.”

I am both impressed and challenged with the alertness of those early believers. In the wake of institutionalism and professionalism, this kind of sensitivity has been largely lost. This is because both of these plagues require a center point or emphasis that is other than the Lord Jesus Himself. When lives are lived “unto Him which died for them and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15), a spiritual climate is produced in which there is an acute awareness of the relationship of circumstances to the work and praise of God. This is lived out in our text.

THE BRETHREN SENT PAUL AWAY BY SEA

“And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea . . .” Once the circumstances are discerned (and that was quickly), the brethren waste no time in getting Paul out of danger. They acted “immediately,” making arrangements for Paul to leave that region.

They determined to send him away “by sea,” as his enemies would be less apt to quickly adjust to such a circumstance. Berea was on the Aegean Sea, so that means of travel was readily available. In order to do this, some arrangements had to be made. A ship had to be chosen, and the due fare paid. The distance traveled will be somewhere between 200-250 miles. That, however, did not appear to offer much of a challenge to the brethren. Of course, where there is godly determination, challenges, obstacles, and the requirement for swift and effective action are more readily met. Many lives are lived in uncertainty and in a slovenly manner because the people have never really made up their mind to serve the Lord. Such a state contradicts the nature of salvation, as well as the express requirements for disciples.

SILAS AND TIMOTHY REMAIN

“ . . . but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.” Other versions read, “remained there,” NKJV “stayed in Berea,” NIV “remained behind,” NRSV and “abode in that city.” MRD

It is apparent that Silas and Timothy were exempt from the danger Paul was facing. This was probably owing to at least two things. First, Paul was the leader of this expedition, and had been the chief speaker. Therefore, the attention had been placed upon him. His enemies probably could not conceive of the work continuing without him – but it would! Second, Timothy was probably more of a novice, while Silas was among the “chief men” in Jerusalem (15:22), and could handle the remaining work. All of this was also being governed by the Head of the church, who would see to it that the work was carried forward. He is fully able to convince the opposing Jews that there was no danger posed to them in the presence of Silas and Timothy, even though they would preach the same Gospel. This is a sterling example of how the Lord makes a man’s enemies be at peace with the man whose “ways please the Lord” (Prov 16:7). This, however, is done with Divine discretion. It appears to me that the church in Thessalonica needed these brethren in order to be more firmly established.

In this case, Paul’s life is endangered, but the lives of Silas and Timothy apparently are not. This is all carried out within the context of God’s eternal purpose, and with a strict regard for the ministry given to each of His children. We should not be confounded by Divine strategies, as though God had to clear what He does with His children. There are higher purposes being served in His work than purely human interests. Stephen may die early in his ministry, while Daniel’s ministry spans several generations, and Paul labors into the twilight of his life. James may be removed from the field of labor, while his brother outlives all of the other apostles. Enoch may walk with God, then be translated into heaven at the tender age of three hundred and sixty-five, while Noah does not even begin his assigned work until he was nearly five hundred years old, completing the ark one hundred and twenty years later, when he was six hundred years of age (Gen 7:6).

The person who labors for the Lord must reconcile himself to the element of uncertainty concerning the duration of life. The godly must learn to reason in this manner: “My times are in Thy hand” (Psa 31:15). From our point of view, they are like a “vapor” (James 4:14).

THEY CONDUCTED PAUL TO ATHENS

“ 15 And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens: and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.”

By the providence of God, Paul now goes to the southern part of Greece. The time required for the journey is not known.

THEY CONDUCTED PAUL TO ATHENS

And they that conducted Paul brought him unto Athens . . .” Other versions read, “the men who escorted Paul,” NIV “those who went with Paul,” BBE “those who accompanied Paul,” NET “they that guided Paul,” PNT “the believers who went with Paul,” IE “the men who acted as Paul’s bodyguard,” WILLIAMS “those caring for Paul,” MONTGOMERY and “The men who accompanied Paul took him as far as Athens.” AMPLIFIED

Within a relatively short time, Paul has moved from Philippi in Northern Greece to Athens in southern Greece. He spent three weeks in Thessalonica (17:2), and apparently a very brief time in Berea. Now, some brethren personally conduct him to Athens, actually accompanying him on the trip.

This city was the most celebrated city in Greece, and was founded about “1,556 years before the Christian era.” BARNES The city still exists today, 2,000 years later. Historically it was noted for its “philosophy, learning, and the arts. The most celebrated model of architecture and statuary were there; and for ages it held its preeminence in civilization, arts, and arms.” BARNES The Britannica Encyclopedia says of this city, “Many of classical civilization's intellectual and artistic ideas originated there, and the city is generally considered to be the birthplace of Western civilization.”

Now, this citadel of learning and worldly wisdom will be invaded, as it were, with a superior wisdom that it will consider foolishness. It is of interest that Paul had such confidence in the power of the Gospel that he did not hesitate to take it to the cultural center of the civilized world. It confirms that the Gospel is not tailored for those who are lacking in their ability to think and reason. To be sure, those who have natural disadvantages and incapacities in this area are not excluded from the Gospel. God can enable them to grasp the truth so they too can be saved. However, the Gospel has not been specifically tailored for such souls. No one who is familiar with Moses, the Psalmists, Solomon, the Prophets, John the Baptist, Christ the Lord, the apostles, or other inspired writers have charged them with simplistic teaching.

No serious student of Scripture has every considered them to be sixth-grade reading! Those who insist on always reducing the message so that a child can understand it have betrayed their lack of familiarity with God Himself. Some preachers and teachers insult their listening audience as though they were intellectual children. The Scriptures admonish us to “be men” in our understanding, informing us that there comes a time when childish understanding must be put away.

Joseph Benson, who worked with John Wesley in the mid-1700's, observed: “Paul is generally allowed to have been a man of fine taste and cultivated genius; but his thoughts were too much occupied about more sublime and interesting subjects, to make observations on these elegant or magnificent trifles.” BENSON’S COMMENTARY

“Philosophy and sensuality, science and lawlessness, atheism and superstition, may join hands and combine to remove the candlestick of God’s Church; it will but shed its light brighter and wider in the places where God wills it to shine, until at last the whole earth shall be filled with the knowledge of God’s glory, as the waters cover the sea.” PULPIT COMMENTARY

True men of God avoid unprofitable involvements – particularly those dictated by worldly wisdom, and driven by human agendas.

A COMMANDMENT FOR SILAS AND TIMOTHY

“ . . . and receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timotheus for to come to him with all speed, they departed.” Other versions read, “as soon as possible,” NASB “quickly,” BBE “as quickly as possible,” CSB “at once,” GENEVA and “as soon as they could,” NJB and “hurry and join him.” NLT

This passage reminds me of the words of David to Ahimelech: “the king’s business required haste” (1 Sam 21:8). One senses that real Kingdom laborers place the highest priority on the work of the Lord – which is at it should be.

This word leads us to believe that it took some time, probably in terms of days, or even weeks, for Paul to get to Athens. I am sure that ships did not run on a daily schedule. In those times, there were special times and seasons when ships came in and departed, so that it might very well have taken weeks, or even months, for Paul and those escorting him to arrive in Athens. Likewise, the return trip would probably take considerable time, as they waited for a return voyage.

On this occasion, it appears that Paul felt enough time had been spent with the brethren in Thessalonica. They were a reasoning people, so would grow quickly. In fact, in his letter to the Thessalonians he described how they had received the Word of God.

- They bore the evidence of having been elected by God: “Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God ” (1 Thess 1:4).

- “For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power , and in the Holy Ghost , and in much assurance ; as ye know what manner of men we were among you for your sake. And ye became followers of us, and of the Lord , having received the word in much affliction, with joy of the Holy Ghost ” (1 Thess 1:5-6).

- And again, “For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God , which effectually worketh also in you that believe. For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews” (1 Thess 2:13-14).

- And yet again, “But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another” (1 Thess 4:9).

Therefore, Paul calls for Silas and Timothy to come to him “with all speed,” or as quickly as they could. We are not sure why he gave this word. Perhaps he felt the work in Athens would be significant, requiring their assistance. Later, we know that he sent Timothy back to Thessalonica from Athens: “Wherefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone; And sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellowlaborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you, and to comfort you concerning your faith” (1 Thess 3:1-2).

Now, we will see how a man with a Jewish education in the flesh, and the revelation of Christ from heaven, will fair among the world's most astute intellects. Here, we will, find a noble confirmation that spirituality benefits the mind.

CONCLUSION

We have been exposed the work of the Lord being carried out in an arena of conflict. Although there is the precious fruit of ready minds, submission to the truth, believing, and obedience, there is also the presence of hostility, uncertainty, and hindrances. The arena of godly labor is an intensely active one!

The book of Acts contains the accounts of various adverse reactions to the preaching of the Gospel. This message is a good message – “glad tidings of good things” (Rom 10:15). It announces a righteous amnesty for sinners, and the opportunity to be “made the righteousness of God” (2 Cor 5:21). However, none of this has any appeal to those who are wedded to this world and ruled by unbelief.

THE RECORD OF ADVERSE RESPONSES TO THE MESSENGERS OF THE GOSPEL

Ponder the inspired record of some of the adverse and hostile reactions to Kingdom laborers – even though they delivered a marvelous message of hope.

- Arrested – “And they laid hands on them . . . And laid their hands on the apostles . . . And when he had apprehended him . . . And when her masters saw that the hope of their gains was gone, they caught Paul and Silas, and drew them into the marketplace unto the rulers” (4:3; 5:18; 5:27-28; 12:4; 16:19).

- Formally judged without due cause – “And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem . . . And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this? . . . And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them, saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us , , , and brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city” (4:5-7; 5:27-28; 16:20).

- Incarcerated – “. . . and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide . . . and put them in the common prison . . . he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him . . . they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them safely” (4:3; 5:18; 12:4; 16:23).

- Beaten – “. . . when they had called the apostles, and beaten them . . . And when they had laid many stripes upon them . . . and when they saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left beating of Paul” (5:40; 16:23; 21:32).

Ponder the inspired record of some of the adverse and hostile reactions to Kingdom laborers – even though they delivered a marvelous message of hope.

- Disputed against – “Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen . . . And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians . . . spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming . . . the Jews spake against it” (6:9; 9:29; 13:45; 28:19).

- Misrepresented and falsely accused – “For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us . . . And brought them to the magistrates, saying, These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city, and teach customs, which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans . . . these all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus” (6:14; 16:20-21; 17:7).

- Stoned – “And they stoned Stephen . . . having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead” (7:58-59; 14:19).

- Commanded not to speak in the name of Jesus – “And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus . . . Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name?” (4:18; 5:28).

- Beheaded – “And he killed James the brother of John with the sword” (12:2).

- Subjected to public ridicule – “And the multitude rose up together against them: and the magistrates rent off their clothes . . . But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans” (16:20-23,37).

- Persecution raised against them – “ the persecution that arose about Stephen. . . and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas” (Acts 13:50).

- Expelled – “. . . and expelled them out of their coasts” (13:50).

- Forced to flee – “Then the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket . . . They were ware of it, and fled unto Lystra and Derbe . . . And then immediately the brethren sent away Paul to go as it were to the sea: but Silas and Timotheus abode there still” (9:25; 14:6; 17:14-15).

- The Jews caused agitation in the environment – “And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes . . . But the Jews stirred up the devout and honorable women, and the chief men of the city . . . But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren . . . And they troubled the people and the rulers of the city . . . they came thither also, and stirred up the people . . . when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people” (6:12; 13:50; 14:2; 17:8,13; 21:27).

- Hounded from city to city – “And there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people . . . But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people . . . Whereupon certain Jews from Asia found me purified in the temple” (14:19; 17:13; 24:18).

- Mocked – “ And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. . . much learning doth make thee mad” (17:32; 26:24)

- Charged with insanity – “You are out of your mind, Paul” NIV (26:32).

- Council taken to kill them – “. . . the Jews took counsel to kill him . . . they watched the gates day and night to kill him . . . but they went about to slay him . . . And as they went about to kill him . . . and we, or ever he come near, are ready to kill him . . . laying wait in the way to kill him . . . For these causes the Jews caught me in the temple, and went about to kill me” (9:23,24,29; 21:31; 23:15; 25:3; 26:21).

There are those pretentious religious philosophers who, with an intellectual tone, ask why bad things happen to good people. I have noticed over the years that such people never bring up those of Scripture who endured such suffering.

THE REACTION OF THE WORLD TO JESUS

Of course, all of this is trumped by the record of the suffering of our Lord Jesus – sufferings that preceded the cross, on which He wrought salvation.

- He suffered many things of the elders, and chief priests, and scribes (Matt 16:21).
- He endured the contradiction of sinners against Himself (Heb 12:3).
- He was charged with being a Samaritan (John 8:48).
- He was charged with having a demon (John 7:20; 8:48,52).
- His own family thought He was beside Himself (Mk 3:21).
- Repeated efforts were made to take His life prior to the appointed time (Matt 26:4; Lk 22:2; John 5:18; 7:1).
- He was persecuted (John 15:20).
- He was hated (John 15:18,25).
- He was misrepresented, and false charges were leveled against Him (Mk 14:58).
- People were offended by Him (Matt 13:57; Mk 6:3).
- People “laughed Him to scorn” (Matt 9:24).
- Some said they knew He was a sinner (John 9:24).

THE NATURE OF KINGDOM WORK

Kingdom work, or work that is in alignment with, and complementary of, God’s eternal purpose, is being carried out in this world, yet is separate and distinct from it. What God is doing in Christ Jesus is not focused upon making the world a better place to live, or its inhabitants happy and successful in its domain. If a person begins with the supposition that this is the Divine objective, life will be confusing discouraging, and tedious.

All of this is covered well in the Pauline expression, “But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us” (2 Cor 4:7). The treasure of reference is not only the essential experience, but is the objective of all Kingdom labors: “to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ” (2 Cor 4:6). That is, the comprehension of this glory is only possible by an in-depth awareness of the Person of Jesus Christ. The “glory of God” is primarily in heaven, and secondarily upon earth. The knowledge of that glory has to do with who God is and what He is doing in the Person of His Son.

This remarkable treasure – “the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ” – is presently deposited in a frail earthen vessel: our bodies. This is contrary to the wisdom of the world. In this world, valuable commodities are not put into frail containers. To keep them in such a housing would jeopardize the contents, and make it easier for enemies of take them for their own. However, in the Divine economy, the purpose is NOT to protect the treasure, but to maintain it through use. That can only be done through Divine help – and that is stating the case mildly.

So it is that all who labor in the vineyard of the Lord must do so in a world that is condemned, and is filled with hostility and opposition. All of this is designed to promote faith and a lively awareness of the One to whom we belong, and where we are going. If these things had been lacking in Paul and those with him, they would have been overthrown by the circumstances they faced. That fact also accounts for professed believers who are derailed by circumstances. Either they never had the treasure at all, or they selfishly conducted their lives while neglecting the treasure. There really is no other way for men to fail in their labors for the Lord. It is written, “Your labor is not in vain in the Lord!” (1 Cor 15:58).

The records reported in the book of Acts reflect the very real and effective nature of the Kingdom of God and those who are willingly participating in it. This is not a kingdom that is “of the world,” or after the worldly manner of kingdoms. It does not function as the governments and businesses of this world, and woe be to that person who attempts to impose such manners on the work of the Lord! The very fact that the King of the kingdom is not in this world, but seated at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens, confirms that His Kingdom is not of this world – else He would have remained here. But He left!

Knowing that it is beyond all disputation that Jesus is no longer here as He was before, some teach that He will return and set up an earthly empire. In this, they are revealing the unacceptable manner in which they think. They try to impose this perspective on Scripture, wresting certain texts to agree with their corrupt understanding. However, God has spoken to this issue with unmitigated clarity – and He did so early in the history of the church.

THE REVEALING WORD

With the keys of the Kingdom in his hand, Peter boldly affirmed of Jesus, “Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:21).

- The words “whom the heaven must receive” refer to the ascension of Christ, when He was “received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God” (Mk 16:19).
- The word “receive until” speaks of more than a mere welcome. There is a point at which He will leave the heavens to gather His people unto Himself. The period between His ascension and that time is the “until” of the text. Jesus was “received” in heaven to administer the Kingdom, and to do so until the consummation of all things. He did not return to wait for a kingdom! Other versions capture this sense of the text: “He must remain in heaven until,” NIV/NSRV “who is to be kept in heaven till,” BBE “He has to remain in heaven until,” CSB “heaven must contain until,” GENEVA “whom heaven must keep until,” NJB “Jesus must stay in heaven until,” IE and “heaven must receive [and retain] until.” AMPLIFIED I have provided these various translations to confirm that there is no doubt concerning the actual wording of the text. There is a time set when Jesus will leave His present position. The only thing to be determined is when and why that is.
- The terminal point of “until” is specified as “the times of the restitution of all things, which God has spoken by the mouth of His holy prophets since the world began.” Other versions read, “restoration of all things,” NKJV “to restore everything,” NIV “universal restoration,” NRSV “the time for establishing all,” RSV “the time when all things are put right,” BBE “The completion of the times,” MRD “the final restoration,” NLT and “the complete restoration.” AMPLIFIED

This speaks of the fulfilment of God’s purpose, not a utopian society upon this present earth. Elsewhere it is referred to in these words, “That in the dispensation of the fulness of times He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him” (Eph 1:10). Jesus referred to this as “the regeneration” (Matt 19:28). Peter referred to the environment as “new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness,” stating that this will follow the destruction of the present heaven and earth (2 Pet 3:10-13).

The terminal point will involve a total change, not a partial one. It will be universal not provincial, global, and not regional. It will involve the whole world, not just Israel or the body of Christ. When Jesus leaves heaven, He will deal with both the tares and the wheat, and the faithful and the unfaithful (Matt 13:40-41; 2 Thess 1:9-10). Everything the prophets said will be fulfilled, not merely a portion of their words. Keep in mind some of the things that the prophets foretold.

- The perishing of the earth and the heavens (Psa 102:25-26; Isa 24:19-20; Isa 51:6).

- The destruction of death itself (Hos 13:14).
- The resurrection of the dead (Job 14:12-16; Psa 17:15; 49:15; Isa 26:19; Dan 12:2; Hos 13:14).
- The swallowing up of death in victory (Isa 25:8).
- Wiping away tears from all faces (Isa 25:8).
- The day of judgment (Psa 96:13; 98:9; Dan 7:9).

All of these things will preclude the coming of the Lord, for they are essential to the fulfillment of His purpose.

It ought to be obvious that the things in heaven and the things in earth cannot be perfectly united. They are contradicting orders, and cannot be merged. When Jesus left heaven, He had to empty Himself of certain Divine appearances and prerogatives, else the world would have been destroyed by His glory (Phil 2:8; Rev 20:11). Eternality and temporality, the realms and inhabitants of mortality and immortality, cannot merge. Divine glory and flesh and blood cannot blend. A glorified Christ cannot visibly cohabit with unregenerated men in temporal bodies. That ought to be apparent enough to require no further explanation.

My point in mentioning this is that the messengers of Christ labor with a mind to the passing of the present heavens and earth, not the establishment of ideal circumstances in them. That is precisely what we are being exposed to in the book of Acts. Furthermore, even the “enemies of the cross of Christ” (Phil 3:18) picked up on the clash between the Kingdom those men preached, and the kingdoms of this present evil world – or the worldly manner of rule and government. They were cognizant of the sharp contrast between the facts and values they ministered and those of this world. It is ironic that many professing Christians are ignorant of such things. It is my persuasion that this is largely owing to the prevalence of a false Gospel.

PAUL IS STIRRED IN ATHENS

“ 17:16 Now while Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. 17 Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him. 18 Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him. And some said, What will this babbler say? other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection. 19 And they took him, and brought him unto Areopagus, saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is? 20 or thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean. 21 For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing. ” (Acts 17:16-21)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE TEXT

As Paul awaited the arrival of Silas and Timothy, he apparently spent time, among other things, looking about in the city. He is chagrined when he sees the city completely given over to idolatry. He cannot overlook the matter as it chaffs against his spirit. Immediately he heads for the Jewish synagogue, and engages in disputation with the Jews, as though to rebuke them for not addressing the prevalence of idolatry in the city in which they lived. He also disputed with the devout people, no doubt addressing the same matter. He even spoke daily in the market place with those who met with him, taking up the matter of the prevalence of idolatry in Athens. Eventually he confronts some philosophers who are intrigued by what he has been declaring. It all sounds strange to them, and they ask for a meeting in which he will expound what he means by the strange teaching he is delivering. Here was an open door, and the Apostle will eagerly enter into it.

MORE EXPOSURE TO REAL SPIRITUAL LIFE

As we proceed through this book, we are being exposed to real spiritual life. Both the manner and focus of life in Christ Jesus is being made known and confirmed in human experience. It has become fashionable in certain Christian circles for spirituality to be a kind of adjunct, or appurtenant to life. It is set forth as another dimension of living, but not as the main focus. These days, the actual amount of time that a professing Christian spends feeding the soul, examining oneself, and engaging in a quest for glory is minimal, to say the least. The religion of the day has actually been tailored so this view can be maintained without a twinge of conscience. It is not unusual to hear of gatherings of believers being reduced so they can supposedly spend more time with their families. More and more, the church is providing extracurricular activities for its members – and that is generally the quality time they spend together. A relevant assembly is perceived as having all kinds of community activities designed to draw people into its membership. Everything from organized sports to exercise centers and clubs are quite common within the prominent churches of our time.

THE IMPACT OF DIVINE CHOICE

It certainly is not that such things are of themselves unlawful – at least that appears to be the safe thing to say. However, there is absolutely nothing like this in all of Scripture. When God chose Israel as His own people, He tailored all of their activities around Himself. Their feast days were in honor of His work. Their rest was devoted to a recollection of His Person as well as a cessation from work. They were taught to give their best to the Lord – the first fruits of their substance. They were taught that their first love belonged to the Lord. Their language – “the Jews language” (2 Kgs 18:26,28; Neh 13:24) was actually a theological language. They were taught to define good and evil within the context of God Himself. Their Law was given to them by God. Their leaders were given to them by God. Rather than raising up entertainers and business men for them, He raised up prophets who kept God before them.

A PEOPLE FOR HIMSELF

We belong to God, not to the world, and certainly not to ourselves. We are His by creation, and His again by redemption. The Lord has “bought” us, and we belong to Him. We must not allow this reality to be buried beneath the rubble of supposed religious practicality and life in this world! It is true that we ARE the “salt of the earth” and “the light of the world” – but that is solely because of our identity with God through Christ.

The Lord spoke clearly on His reason for choosing Israel. “This people have I formed for Myself ; they shall show forth My praise ” (Isa 43:21). In assessing the purpose of Israel and their deliverance David confessed, “And what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God went to redeem for a people to Himself , and to make Him a name . . . ” (2 Sam 7:23). Their obedience and covenant keeping was to be in view of their association with the Lord Himself: “Now therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people: for all the earth is Mine” (Exodus 19:5).

In Christ Jesus, the same objective is set forth, except it is even more full, because of the settling of the sin-issue. “Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will” (Eph 1:5). And again, “Who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works” (Titus 2:14). And again, “Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for His name ” (Acts 15:14). And finally, “For none of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself. For whether we live, we live unto the Lord ; and whether we die, we die unto the Lord : whether we live therefore, or die, we are the Lord's ” (Rom 14:7-8).

We belong to God, not to the world, and certainly not to ourselves. We are His by creation (Psa 100:3; 1 Pet 4:19), and His again by redemption (Eph 2:10; 1 Pet 1:18). The Lord has “bought” us, and we belong to Him (1 Cor 6:19-20).

We must not allow this reality to be buried beneath the rubble of supposed religious practicality and life in this world! It is true that we ARE the “salt of the earth” and “the light of the world” (Matt 5:13–14) – but that is solely because of our identity with God through Christ. “Salt” and “light” are the consequence of what we are in Christ, not the objective of life. That is a must critical distinction!

JESUS SPEAKS ON THE MATTER

When Jesus chose His disciples – twelve of them – it was so they “should be with Him , and that He might send them forth to preach” (Mk 3:14). When speaking to the multitudes about following Him, the Lord was straightforward about what was required.

- JESUS IS TO BE THE MAIN PERSON. “If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:26).

- BEARING ONE’S OWN CROSS IS ESSENTIAL. “And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after Me, cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:27).

- SELF DENIAL AND DAILY CROSS BEARING IS IMPERATIVE. “And He said to them all , If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow Me” (Luke 9:23).

- NO OTHER ALLEGIANCE IS TO BE GIVEN PRIORITY. “So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:33).

Paul is a sterling example of someone who took these words seriously. He explained to the Philippian church something he did not, so far as the record is concerned, share with any one else.

CLARIFIED IN APOSTOLIC DOCTRINE

The apostles left no doubt about the manner in which men are to live. Men are strictly prohibited from living for themselves. Prior to being in Christ, it was their predominate interest in self that condemned them, moving them to become the servants of sin. However, God will not accept a people who lives for themselves.

- JESUS DIED AND ROSE AGAIN TO MOVE MEN AWAY FROM THIS KIND OF LIVING. “For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead: and that He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:14-15).

• IN CHRIST WE BECOME SERVANTS TO GOD. “But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life” (Rom 6:22).

• HOLINESS IS IMPERATIVE. “As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance: But as He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy” (1 Pet 1:14-16).

• THE REST OF OUR LIVES ARE TO BE LIVED UNTO THE LORD. “Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God” (1 Pet 4:1-2).

Paul is a sterling example of someone who took these words seriously. He explained to the Philippian church something he did not, so far as the record is concerned, share with any one else. Their spiritual consistency “from the first day” of their new life appears to have qualified them to hear such a marvelous testimony. Philippians 3:7-14 contains a most marvelous testimony that confirms why Paul lived the way he did.

• HE DISCARDED ALL COMPETING INTERESTS, COUNTING THEM LOSS FOR CHRIST. “But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ” (Phil 3:7).

• HE FORFEITED AN ENTIRE RELIGIOUS CAREER IN ORDER THAT HE MIGHT COME TO KNOW CHRIST. “Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ” (Phil 3:8).

• HIS CONSISTENT QUEST WAS TO BE FOUND IN CHRIST POSSESSING A RIGHTEOUSNESS THAT WAS FROM GOD BY FAITH. “And be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith” (Phil 3:9).

• HE DID THIS IN ORDER THAT HE MIGHT PARTICIPATE IN THE LIFE OF CHRIST. “That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death” (Phil 3:10).

• HIS AIM WAS FOR THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD TO BE AN ASSET TO HIM. “If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead” (Phil 3:11).

• HE KNEW HE HAD NOT YET TAKEN HOLD OF EVERYTHING FOR WHICH CHRIST HAD TAKEN HOLD OF HIM, AND SO FOLLOWED EAGERLY AFTER CHRIST IN ORDER TO DO SO. “Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus” (Phil 3:12-14).

This was not a posture of life intended to be uncommon among believers – even though that is how it appears in our time. To confirm that this is, in fact, the standard, or norm, for life, Paul adds these words. “Let us therefore, as many as be perfect, be thus minded.” Knowing that some were not yet living in this manner, he adds this word: “and if in any thing ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you .” That is, God will confirm to the hearts of those who are serious toward Him that this is really the only acceptable way to live! However, those who are not yet able to take hold of what he had said were not to sit idly by. Instead, they were to live up to the level of understanding that they had, living solely for the Lord. Thus he adds, “Nevertheless, whereto we have already attained, let us walk by the same rule, let us mind the same thing ” (Phil 3:16). The teaching is that as this kind of

When Paul dealt with issues of life, he always did so within the context of the responsibility of men to God, and the fact that they would eventually stand before Him. There is unvarying consistency in his approach to life, which is as it should be.

life is maintained, it will be the context in which the Lord will confirm the absolute necessity of living in this manner – He will “reveal even this unto you!”

WHAT DOES THIS HAVE TO DO WITH OUR TEXT?

All of this is not far removed from the text we are considering. This is the kind of life that is being recorded. The way Paul lives, and the reason for it, is why he was stirred within when he saw vain living. It is why he had a fervent zeal to correct flawed thinking, and establish sound thought. It is why he was concerned for the churches, and why he would not keep quiet, even when it put his life in jeopardy. It is why you never read of him getting caught up in domestic, social, or political crisis.

When Paul dealt with issues of life, he always did so within the context of the responsibility of men to God, and the fact that they would eventually stand before Him. There is unvarying consistency in his approach to life, which is as it should be. All of this is being lived out in our text.

PAUL WAS WAITING FOR THEM

“ 17:16a Now while Paul waited for them at Athens . . . ” Other versions read, “while Paul was waiting,” NASB “was waiting for Silas and Timothy.” GWN

The word Greek translated “waited for” is evkdecme,nou , and means “to look for, expect, wait for, await,” THAYER “wait for, expect to happen,” FRIBERG “look forward to,” UBS and “to remain in a place and/or state, with expectancy concerning a future event.” LOUW-NIDA This has more to do with an attitude than with the physical stance – although it does involve Paul remaining in Athens, the designated place of meeting (17:15). This is waiting with expectancy, looking forward to something that is going to take place. The various places this word is used in Scripture confirms its meaning.

- THE IMPOTENT FOLK AT THE POOL OF BETHESDA. “In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, WAITING for the moving of the water ” (John 5:3). These people waited expectantly for the opportunity to be healed.

- WAITING FOR ONE ANOTHER AT THE LORD’S TABLE. “Wherefore, my brethren, when ye come together to eat, TARRY one for another ” (1 Cor 11:33). This involves anticipating the rare fellowship believers have around the table of the Lord.

- PAUL’S ANTICIPATION OF SEEING TIMOTHY. “Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do. Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me: for I LOOK for him with the brethren” (1 Cor 16:10-11). Paul anticipated seeing Timothy and the brethren hearing their reports, and enjoying their fellowship.

- JESUS WAITING FOR HIS ENEMIES TO OPENLY BECOME HIS

FOOTSTOOL. “But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God; From henceforth EXPECTING till his enemies be made his footstool” (Heb 10:12-13). Jesus is looking forward to the time when His enemies will be openly made known, and will publicly bow the knee to Him and confess His name.

• ABRAHAM, LOOKING FOR A CITY. “For he LOOKED for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God” (Heb 11:10). Abraham knew there was a residence that was permanent, where unhindered fellowship with God would be enjoyed. He looked forward to being a part of that city.

• PATIENTLY WAITING FOR THE LORD. “Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold, the husbandman WAITETH for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain” (James 5:7). The anticipation of believers for the return of the Lord is mirrored in the expectancy of a husbandman who has faithfully cultivated his vineyard, and now looks forward to eating the fruit of it.

The “fulness of Christ” is poured forth into His body, which consists of “many members” spanning many ages, and in varied locations. Thus Christ ministers to His people through His people, each one contributing what their particular measure of faith is designed to do. It is not possible to circumvent, or sidestep, this means, and yet grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE LONGSUFFERING OF GOD WAITING IN THE DAYS OF NOAH. “Which sometime were disobedient, when once the longsuffering of God WAITED in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water” (1 Pet 3:20). While Noah built the ark, the Lord patiently endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath, fitted for destruction. He did this in the glad prospect of the purging of the world its defiling inhabitants and the saving of Noah.

Thus Paul waited expectantly for Silas and Timothy, looking forward to seeing them. This doubtless had respect to their labors in the Lord specifically, and their love for one another secondarily. Paul was especially endeared to these brethren because they had labored with him in the Gospel. Our love of the brethren is directly related to our involvement in the “good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:2). It is within the framework of the work of the Lord that the love of the saints for one another is cultured.

THE INTER-DEPENDENCE OF THE MEMBERS OF CHRIST’S BODY

According to Divine purpose, there is an inter-dependence that exists among the members of the body of Christ. This is the means through which the limited capacity of individuals is addressed. By “limited,” I mean no person is capable of receiving all that God had provided in Christ Jesus. The fulness of the Godhead could only dwell “bodily” in Jesus Christ (Col 1:19; 2:9). In His infinite wisdom, God has provided a bride for His Son that consists of “many members” – and yet together they are “one body.” As it is written, “For as we have many members in one body, and all members have not the same office: So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another” (Rom 12:4-5). And again, “For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body: so also is Christ . . . But now are they many members, yet but one body” (1 Cor 12:12,20).

The “fulness of Christ” is poured forth into His body, which consists of “many members” spanning many ages, and in varied locations. Thus Christ ministers to His people through His people, each one contributing what their particular measure of faith is designed to do. It is not possible to circumvent, or sidestep, this means, and yet grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is precisely how spiritual growth and sustenance is achieved. Paul speaks of this in Ephesians 4:15-16: “But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into Him in all things, which is the head, even Christ:

From whom [Christ, the Head of the body] the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth [the point at which members minister to one another] , according to the effectual working in the measure of every part , maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love ” (Eph 4:15-16).

THE POINT OF THIS

The point of these observations is that Paul was not waiting for mere friends, but for those who could join him in the work, and minister to him as well. Embracing the nature of life in Christ Jesus, he did not know them “after the flesh,” or “from a human point of view” NRSV (2 Cor 5:16). Some Pauline expressions will confirm that this is the way he thought.

- “Greet Priscilla and Aquila my helpers in Christ Jesus ” (Rom 16:3).
- “Greet Mary, who bestowed much labor on us ” (Rom 16:6).
- “Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellowprisoners, who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me” (Rom 16:7).
- “Salute Urbane, our helper in Christ, and Stachys my beloved” (Rom 16:9).
- “Timotheus my workfellow . . .” (Rom 16:21).
- “Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear: for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do ” (1 Cor 16:10).
- “But I trust in the Lord Jesus to send Timotheus shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. For I have no man likeminded, who will naturally care for your state ” (Phil 2:19-20).
- “But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you . For indeed he accepted the exhortation; but being more forward, of his own accord he went unto you” (2 Cor 8:16-17).

Paul’s desire for Silas and Timothy is firmly set within the circumference of the will and work of God. For a season, this was not the kind of companionship he could have with John Mark. At one time he forsook the work of the Lord, and thus Paul did not desire his companionship when he determined to revisit the churches to see how they were doing (Acts 15:38). By the grace of God that circumstance did change, for Mark did come to his right mind (2 Tim 4:11). Paul did not overlook either his decline or his recovery.

HIS SPIRIT WAS STIRRED BY WHAT HE SAW

“ 16b . . . his spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.”

As Paul was waiting for Silas and Timothy, he sees the city of Athens from a different viewpoint. Here is a man of God with the Spirit of God, who is engaged in a fervent quest to know Christ at all cost, and be found in Him having the righteousness that comes from God through faith (Phil 3:7-9). What does a man like that see in the great city of Athens, and how does he respond to what he sees? Here we will see how deeply the human spirit is impacted by fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9).

HIS SPIRIT WAS STIRRED

“ . . . his spirit was stirred in him . . .” Other versions read, “his spirit was provoked,” NKJV “his spirit was being provoked,” NASB “he was greatly distressed,” NIV “he was deeply distressed,” NRSV “his spirit was troubled,” BBE “his spirit within him was disturbed,” CJB “his spirit was painfully excited,” DARBY “this upset him,” GWN “he was pained in his spirit,” MRD “he grew exasperated,” NAB “his whole soul was revolted,” NJB “his spirit was stirred to its depths,”

WILLIAMS and “his spirit was grieved and aroused.” AMPLIFIED

The word “stirred” is translated from a word meaning, “to irritate, provoke, rouse to anger,” THAYER “arouse, excite, stimulate; in a negative sense provoke, irritate, cause to be upset,” FRIBERG “to anger, provoke, irritate, exasperate,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “provoke to wrath, irritate pass. become irritated, angry.” GINGRICH

Paul’s reaction to what he saw reflected his participation in the Divine nature (2 Pet 1:4). It was a godly reaction, and, for that reason, is to be duly noted by us.

When a person is born again, he is immediately set at variance with the world. This is because “the new man” is created “in righteousness and true holiness” – neither of which is in the world. We are categorically told, “all that is in the world . . . is not of the Father, but is of the world” (1 John 2:16). By comparison, those who are abiding in Christ, and have fellowship “with the Father,” are continuing “in the Father” (1 John 2:24), and “God dwelleth in him” (1 John 4:15). This circumstance puts the believer at variance with the world. The more evident the world becomes, the more pronounced is the variance. Therefore, what Paul saw in Athens provoked his spirit. It was a clash of natures – the mundane with the Divine, the false with the true, and delusion with illumination.

The absence of this kind of sensitivity is a revelation of a carnal mind and an alienated spirit. The presence of such a reaction is confirmation that one is in fellowship with the Son of God. On one occasion, when Jesus was at the tomb of Lazarus, He took special note of Mary weeping, and “the Jews also weeping.” It is written when He saw this hopeless weeping, “He groaned in the spirit, and was troubled” (John 11:33). Other versions read, “was deeply moved in spirit, and was troubled,” NASB “was greatly disturbed in spirit, and deeply moved,” NRSV and “He was deeply moved in spirit and troubled. [He chafed in spirit and sighed and was disturbed.]” AMPLIFIED As Jesus went to the grave, amidst all of this weeping, it is written that He came to it “again groaning in Himself” (John 11:38).

HE SAW THE CITY

“ . . . when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry.” Other versions read, “given over to idols,” NKJV “beholding the city full of idols,” NASB “all the town full of images of the gods,” BBE “subject to idols,” GWN “idols he saw everywhere in the city,” NLT “the city given to worshiping of images,” TNT and “completely steeped in idolatry.” WILLIAMS

Pliny wrote that at the time of Nero Athens had 30,000 public statues, “besides countless private ones in homes.” The sight of such statuary was oppressive to Paul’s spirit, and very troubling, for they were all tributes to false gods. The insensitive soul would see them as a cultural phenomenon, and probably marvel at the precision of the art – but that is not how Paul viewed those images.

The Scriptures never refer to idols as art-forms, or the expression of various cultures. Jacob commanded his household, “Put away the strange gods that are among you” (Gen 35:2). The Law commanded, “Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of any thing that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth” (Ex 20:4). “Ye shall not make with Me gods of silver, neither shall ye make unto you gods of gold” (Ex 20:23). “Thou shalt make thee no molten gods” (Ex 34:17). “Ye shall make you no idols nor graven image, neither rear you up a standing image, neither shall ye set up any image of stone in your land, to bow down unto it: for I am the LORD your God” (Lev 26:1). “Take ye therefore good heed unto yourselves; for ye saw no manner of similitude on the day that the LORD spake unto you in Horeb out of the midst of the fire: lest ye corrupt yourselves, and make you a graven image, the similitude of any figure, the likeness of male or female, the likeness of any beast that is on the earth, the likeness of any winged fowl that flieth in the air, the likeness of any thing that creepeth on the ground, the likeness of any fish that is in the waters beneath the earth: And lest thou lift up thine eyes unto heaven, and when thou seest the sun, and the moon, and the stars, even all the host of heaven, shouldest be driven to worship them, and serve them, which the LORD thy God hath divided unto all nations under the whole heaven” (Deut 4:15-19). God referred to such images as “abominations” (Deut 27:15; 32:16).

“Rackham grows eloquent over Paul the Jew of Tarsus being in the city of Pericles and Demosthenes, Socrates and Plato and Aristotle, Sophocles and Euripides. In its Agora Socrates had taught, here was the Academy of Plato, the Lyceum of Aristotle, the Porch of Zeno, the Garden of Epicurus. Here men still talked about philosophy, poetry, politics, religion, anything and everything. It was the art centre of the world. The Parthenon, the most beautiful of temples, crowned the Acropolis . . . The superstition of this center of Greek culture was depressing to Paul. One has only to recall how superstitious cults today flourish in the atmosphere of Boston and Los Angeles to understand conditions in Athens. Pausanias says that Athens had more images than all the rest of Greece put together. Pliny states that in the time of Nero Athens had over 30,000 public statues besides countless private ones in the homes. Petronius sneers that it was easier to find a god than a man in Athens. Every gateway or porch had its protecting god. They lined the street from the Piraeus and caught the eye at every place of prominence on wall or in the agora.”

ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

I believe it was John Bunyan who once said, “You can tell how close a man is to God by how he shudders at the word ‘world.’ Like godly men before and after him, he knew the impact of the glory of God upon the spirit of the redeemed ones. After all, it was the “light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ” that initially transformed them (2 Cor 4:6). Further, it is as they continue “beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord” that they are “constantly being transfigured into His very own image in ever increasing splendor and from one degree of glory to another” AMPLIFIED (2 Cor 3:18).

Now, imagine someone involved in that kind of transformation suddenly being confronted with the sight of multitudes of idols everywhere he went. Because these idols were actually tied to demons (2 Chron 11:15; Psa 106:7; 1 Cor 10:20), the sight of them constituted an assault upon the spirit of Paul, and he was troubled, disturbed, and pained in his spirit because of it.

Unfortunately, there has been a kind of Christianity perpetrated in our day that allows people to feel at home in place like Las Vegas, that is given over to gambling. Professing Christians are often not offended by the theater marquees, literature on display in retail stores, and the indecent display of flesh in the streets. They have become accustomed to seeing such things, and even though they may not partake of them, they are not offended by them. A great tragedy has taken place in the professing church when such spiritual dulness and insensitivity is common within it.

If men are not offended by sin, they will more easily indulge in it. This is a good reason to learn to “hate evil,” which we are admonished to do (Psa 97:10), and which “the new man” does (Eph 4:24).

HE DISPUTED IN THE SYNAGOGUE

“ 17a Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews . . . ” Other versions read, “he reasoned,” NKJV “was reasoning,” NASB “he argued,” NRSV “had discussions,” BBE “he debated,” NAB “he reasoned and argued,” AMPLIFIED and “He felt compelled to discuss the matter with the Jews in the synagogue.” PHILLIPS

The word “disputed” comes from a Greek word that means, “to converse, discourse with one, argue, discuss: absolutely, with one drawing arguments from the Scriptures,” THAYER “of disputations contend, argue, dispute . . . of speaking to someone in order to convince address, speak, reason with,” FRIBERG “debate,” UBS and “of disputations contend, argue, dispute . . . of speaking to someone in order to convince address, speak, reason with.” LOUW-NIDA

Other places this word is used are as follows. I have highlight the English word that is translated from the above Greek word.

- “But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves, who should be the greatest” (Mark 9:34).
- “And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures” (Acts 17:2).
- “Therefore disputed he in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him” (Acts 17:17).
- “And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks” (Acts 18:4).
- “And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews” (Acts 18:19).
- “And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God” (Acts 19:8).
- “But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus” (Acts 19:9).
- “And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight” (Acts 20:7).
- “And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead” (Acts 20:9).
- “And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city” (Acts 24:12).
- “And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee” (Acts 24:25).
- “And ye have forgotten the exhortation which speaketh unto you as unto children, My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked of him” (Heb 12:5).
- “Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee” (Jude 1:9).

Reasoning and disputation assume that opposing and contradicting ideas are present – misconceptions and delusions. The kind of disputation mentioned in this text releases the truth in such an environment. Contradicting ideas are not always held by hostile or obstinate hearts. There are always people like Saul of Tarsus who are wrong about Jesus and “the way” (Acts 24:14), yet are living “in all good conscience before God” (Acts 23:1). In fact, Paul reflected on that time of his life before king Agrippa: “I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth” (Acts 26:9). In his mind, he was serving God within the framework of the Old Covenant, completely unaware of what had taken place when Jesus died and rose again – that there was a new and better covenant in place, and that the “old is ready to vanish away” (Heb 8:6,13). Such people can be persuaded by the truth.

In This Text

In this text, the subject matter was unquestionably Jesus Christ. However, he no doubt introduced that grand Subject by addressing the matter of idolatry, for Paul's spirit had been stirred with the sight of its prevalence in Athens. What had the Jews been saying about this – those who had the stewardship of the Law, which forbade idolatry? How is it that idolatry could flourish in the presence of God's covenanted people?

Lawful and Unlawful Controversy

While the insightful preacher and/or teacher does not look for controversy, he is not afraid of it. Truth is superior to the lie, and enlightenment to ignorance. When Stephen "disputed" with certain Jews in a synagogue of the Libertines, "they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake" (Acts 6:10). Even in his early days, and within Jewish "synagogues" that were not amiable, Paul "confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ" (Acts 9:20,22).

Paul wrote to Titus, declaring that the shepherds of the flock must be "Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers" (Titus 1:9). He also wrote concerning false teachers "whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake" (Titus 1:11). Both of those activities involve lawful disputation and reasoning. I say "lawful," because there is a form of disputation that is not lawful, because there is no way that it can be profitable. That sort of discussion involves "foolish unlearned questions . . . genealogies, and contentions and striving about the law" (2 Tim 2:23; Tit 3:9). Such discussions have nothing to do with the Lord's Christ, salvation, or eternal things, and therefore they are unprofitable. Not only that, they have a defiling and distracting impact upon both the heart and the spirit, causing men to leave the narrow way that leads to life.

Many a poor soul has missed much needed spiritual resources because they have been distracted from them to lesser things. The people of God are to choose carefully the things about which they reason and dispute.

HE DISPUTED WITH DEVOUT PERSONS

"17b . . . and with the devout persons . . ." Other versions read, "Gentile worshipers," NKJV "God-fearing Gentiles," NASB "God fearing Greeks," NIV "God-fearers," BBE "those who worshiped God," CSB "them that served God," DARBY "them that were religious," GENEVA "converts to Judaism," GWN "God-fearing Greeks in the synagogue," NET "the worshiping persons," YLT "Greeks who worshiped the true God," IE "devout proselytes," MONTGOMERY and "those who worshiped there." AMPLIFIED

The words "devout persons" are translated from the single Greek word sebome, noij (seb-om-ah-ee). As used here, its lexical meaning is "to feel awe" . . . before God . . . 'to worship,' is translated 'devout,' VINE'S GREEK DICTIONARY "to revere, the worship . . . proselytes . . . men that worship God," THAYER "as a religious technical term applied to Gentiles who accepted Judaism's belief in one God and attended the synagogue but did not become Jewish proselytes by undergoing male circumcision," FRIBERG "to worship, be religious," LIDDELL-SCOTT "to worship, to revere (God)," LEH and "Godfearers, worshipers of God, unconverted Gentiles who were attracted to the legacy of Israel but did not assume all the obligations of the Jewish law," GINGRICH "'pious,' 'dutiful,' 'reverential' . . . probably, though not necessarily, proselytes of the gate, heathen by birth, who attended the synagogue services and worshiped God." ISBE The English word "devout" means, "1. devoted to religion or to religious duties or exercises 2. expressing devotion or piety 'a devout attitude' 3. devoted to a pursuit, belief, or mode of behavior." MERRIAM-WEBSTER

The “devout persons” were those who gave outward evidence of a persuasion of the truth they had heard. How is it that they could endure the prominence of idolatry? Had not these images chafed against their spirits? Or, were they aware of how serious it is to flaunt false gods before the face of the God of heaven? I do not doubt that Paul’s dialog was laced with spiritual logic, and peppered with gentle rebukes.

ON BEING DEVOUT

The way “devout” is used in Scripture emphasizes the outward conduct of the individual. Having embraced the concept and Person of God, these people shape their lives around what they have come to know about Him. Such people engage in a hearty and sincere effort to please Him. Thus other versions employ the words “worshippers,” NKJV “God-fearing,” NASB “served God,” DARBY and “religious.” GENEVA

Being Devout and Being Religious

As used in Scripture, the words “religion” and “religious,” like “devout,” have to do with outward conduct. Although these words are often used in a derogatory manner by modern

While contemporary teachers are frequently heard explaining the flawed conduct of professed believers, the God of those believers is admonishing them to live an exemplary manner. They are to “walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing” (Col 1:10), and “walk worthy of God, who hath called you into His kingdom and glory” churchmen, they are basically good words, and do not necessarily imply hypocrisy or a lack of genuineness. Some of its uses are as follows.

- “Which knew me from the beginning, if they would testify, that after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee” (Acts 26:5).
- “If any man among you seem to be religious , and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain” (James 1:26).
- “Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world” (James 1:27).

The kinship between these two words (“devout” and “religious”) is confirmed by the translation of a form of the same Greek word used in this text (sebome,nwn). It is found in Acts 13:43, and is translated “religious.” Once again, it is emphasizing the outward conduct of those so described.

Living Up to What Is Known

In a nutshell, so to speak, “devout” people are living up to the level of their understanding of God and His requirements. They are living in a good conscience, and shaping their lives by their perception of both the nature and will of God. This, of course, is not a static condition, for the knowledge of God is a sphere of increase and advancement. This is so much of a reality, that only those who DO live up to their measure of understanding will be given more. The King Himself affirmed, “unto you that hear shall more be given . For he that hath, to him shall be given : and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath” (Mark 4:24-25). “Devout” people fall into that category.

Being Devout and Being Blameless

Circumspect and pious men were referred to as being “devout.” These are people whose devotion could be observed . They include Simeon (Lk 2:25), the Jews present on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:5), the men who carried Stephen to his burial (Acts 8:2), Cornelius (Acts 10:2), and Ananias, who was sent by the Lord to Saul of Tarsus (Acts 22:12). Their manner of life could be described as “blameless,” for they did not intentionally walk contrary to the Lord. In this sense Zecharias and Elizabeth are described as being “both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless ” (Luke 1:6). Paul said of his life prior to being in Christ, “Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is in the law, blameless ” (Phil 3:6). Paul also alluded to this condition when he wrote to the Philippians, “Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless , the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world” (Phil 2:14-15).

While contemporary teachers are frequently heard explaining the flawed conduct of professed believers, the God of those believers is admonishing them to live an exemplary manner. They are to “walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing” (Col 1:10), and “walk worthy of God, who hath called you into His kingdom and glory” (1 Thess 2:12).

In Our Times

It ought to be noted that the “Devout” people will receive more, because they have handled what they have been given with integrity and consistency.

prominence of psychiatry, which is a human effort to understand human makeup, has thrown a shroud of obscurity over the necessity of being “devout.” It actually brings nothing to the table of salvation, but only seeks to slightly subdue the expression of uncomely manners. It offers explanations for unseemly conduct that salve the conscience, and make unholy conduct appear differently than it really is.

The Bar of Devotion Has Been Raised

However, in Christ Jesus, the bar of devoutness has been greatly elevated. A number of things have taken place that accounts for this higher standard of conduct. These are all effective in those who are in Christ Jesus.

- Jesus has taken away the sin of the world (John 1:29; Heb 9:26).
- Jesus has reconciled men unto God (Col 1:21).
- Peace has been made between God and man (Col 1:20).
- Men are a new creation in Christ Jesus, with new capacities and desires (2 Cor 5:17; Eph 2:10).
- Men now have access to God, and can come boldly to the throne of grace to obtain mercy, and find grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16).
- God has sent His Holy Spirit into the hearts of those in Christ (Gal 4:6).
- Jesus ever lives to make intercession for those who are coming to God through Him (Heb 7:25; Rom 8:34).
- The Holy Spirit within makes intercession for them concerning things of which the believer is not even aware (Rom 8:26-27).
- The “new man” has the kind of knowledge that is found in the Lord Himself (Col 3:10).
- The “new man” is created in “righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24).
- As we behold the glory of the Lord in the face of Jesus, the Holy Spirit is changing us from one increasing stage of glory to another (2 Cor 3:18).

If the tutelage of the elementary schoolmaster, the Law, could provide enough incentive for the ancients to be “devout,” what will be the glorious enablement of life in Christ Jesus? How will any professing believer be able to stand before God and account for a life that did not measure up to that of Job, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, David, and the Prophets? Those, and others like them, are described as those who “should not be made perfect apart from us” NKJV (Heb 11:40). That is, they did not have the advantages of the salvation that is in Christ Jesus. Yet, it is generally accepted that they did more with the introductory things they had, than masses of professed Christians have done with the vast riches that are in Christ Jesus.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to find “devout” people within the professed church. Further, the last two or three generations have very little acquaintance with the very concept of being “devout.” This condition is generally known among leaders in the Christian community. That is why they have invented all manner of incentive, motivational, and corrective programs to straighten out the lives of the people. However, God will not allow any humanly-conceived procedure to do what He alone can do. Further, any effort that does not depend upon the presence and glory of Jesus cannot work – God will not allow it to do so! Men are changed by beholding the glory of the Lord, not the fading glory of a law – any law.

“Devout” people will receive more, because they have handled what they have been given with integrity and consistency. That is the manner of the Kingdom, and a clear record of it is provided in the book of Acts. When you look at men, look for devoted people.

HE DISPUTED IN THE MARKET PLACE

“ 17c . . . and in the market daily with them that met with him.” Other versions read, “in the marketplace daily with those who happened to be there,” NKJV “in the market place every day with those who chanced to be there,” RSV “the market square,” CJB “in the marketplace every day with them that met with him,” ERV “ held discussions every day in the public square with anyone who happened to be there,” GWN “in the market-place with them who daily assembled there,” MRD “in the market place he debated every day with anyone whom he met,” NJB “in the market daily with them that came unto him by chance,” TNT “in the business district of the city, with people who just happened to be there,” IE “ in the marketplace [where assemblies are held] day after day with any who chanced to be there,” AMPLIFIED and “in the open market-place with the passers-by.” PHILLIPS

The word “market” is translated from the Greek word avgora/l (ag-or-ah). Its literal meaning is, “any collection of men, congregation, assembly . . . place where assemblies are held; in the New Testament the forum or public place, where trials are held, and the citizens resort, and commodities are exposed for sale,” THAYER “a place for trading and business, especially as the center of public life forum, public square,” FRIBERG “the place of Assembly; used not only for debating, trials, and other public purposes, but also as a market-place, like the Roman Forum,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “the center of civic life.” GINGRICH

We must not think of the “marketplace” of Scripture as though it was a modern-day shopping mall. Although commerce did take place, that was not the primary activity of the ancient marketplace. It was primarily a place where people exchanged ideas, and an interchange of thoughts occurred – a place where people marketed ideas, and discussion occurred . A “marketplace” was not an entertainment center or a game room. It was a place where people congregated for interchange – primarily intellectual reciprocation, or the exchange of thought. This ranged from civil trials to philosophical debates and general discussions. Being the cultural center of the world, there was a certain quest for knowledge that characterized Athens. It was not always a quest for proper knowledge, and often lacked true sincerity. However, it was the kind of environment in which the truth could be presented with the expectation of response.

My Own Experience

When I was a young boy, I recall our family taking trips to Southwest Arkansas, where my parents Fred and Rubye had been reared. Saturday was the day everyone went to the small town of Delight. There I sat with my father many times at, what was called, a cracker-barrel. This was a large wooden barrel that held crackers on which the men snacked as they talked with one another. It was quite common for lengthy discussions and debates concerning the Scripture to be taking place in several of these locations. I would listen as my father would debate the Scriptures with others. It was all done in a congenial atmosphere, as men tested their ideas against one another. I do not recall those occasions as being accompanied with any hostility and rudeness. The people seemed to be in quest of Scriptural knowledge, and eager to talk to one another about the variance nuances of Scriptural understanding.

Of course, in our time, this kind of thing has given way to other interests – interests that focus more in pleasure and feeling than in thought and cogitation. I seriously doubt that Paul would be attracted to the shopping malls of our day. They would bear more likeness to the idol-filled hills of Athens than to its marketplace.

Throughout my life, I have found the incalculable value of holy discussion. Here in Joplin, the Word of Fellowship meets frequently for the purpose of discussion, and the exchange of spiritual thought. Such occasions always yield long-term benefits, and the delightful expansion of spiritual understanding.

A RELIGION OF THOUGHT

Throughout God's dealings with humanity, thought has played a prominent role.

In the Beginning

In the beginning, the first command the Lord gave to Adam required sober thought. "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat: but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Gen 2:16-17).

Having chosen Israel for His own inheritance (Isa 19:25), God gave them a law with its attending judgments and statutes. It was a Law that emphasized thinking, for God said of it, "And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart"

God brought "every beast of the field, and every fowl of the air . . . unto Adam, to see what he would name them: and whatsoever Adam called every living creature, that was the name thereof" (Gen 2:19). That required thought, for I assume Adam named them in strict accord with their nature and appearance.

When the Lord made a wife for Adam, and presented her to him, Adam gave a thoughtful analysis of her and her role: "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh: she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of Man. Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh" (Gen 2:23-24).

The first temptation was one involving thought: "Now the serpent was more subtle than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? . . . And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die" (Gen 3:1-4). That very day, wrong thinking led to the entrance of sin and death into the world.

The first promise of one who would spoil the Tempter was one that appealed to the processes of thought: "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel" (Gen 3:15).

The Calling of Abraham

The calling of Abraham was an epoch in which the purpose of God was made known more fully. It involved promises and commitments that were conducive to thought, meditation, anticipation, and hope (Gen 12:3; 13:16-17; 15:5-21; 22:17-18).

The Giving of the Law

Having chosen Israel for His own inheritance (Isa 19:25), God gave them a law with its attending judgments and statutes. It was a Law that emphasized thinking, for God said of it, “And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart” (Deut 6:6).

They were to teach these words to their children, talk about them when they were sitting in their houses, and when they walked by the way, when they were lying down, and when they got up. They were to display them prominently so they would think about them (Deut 6:7-9). Their’s was a religion of thought – holy and God-centered thought, and it was to be their constant recourse!

The Prophets

God guided, informed, and rebuked His people Israel through the Prophets (Isa 58:1; Jer 1:10,18; 7:25; 25:4; 26:5; 29:19; ; 35:15; 44:4; Dan 9:6,10; Hos 6:5; 12:10; Amos 3:7; Zech 1:6; 8:9). Their messages were appeals to the hearts and minds of the people, and were designed to be brought into the thought processes.

The entire ministry of Jesus was conducive to thought, meditation, contemplation, consideration, and cogitation. Everything He said and everything He did promoted sound thinking.

The Lord Jesus

The entire ministry of Jesus was conducive to thought, meditation, contemplation, consideration, and cogitation. Everything He said and everything He did promoted sound thinking. In fact, when He was but a Babe, devout Simeon declared He would deal with the thoughts of men: “that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed” (Lk 2:35). It is said of Jesus that He knew “their thoughts” (Matt 9:4; 12:25), and “perceived their thoughts” (Lk 5:22). He challenged people by asking, “What do you think?” NKJV (Matt 18:12; 21:28; 22:42).

The Apostles

Who has ever given serious consideration to Apostolic words and writings without being aware that they require serious and protracted thinking? Various forms of the word “think” and “thought” are used thirty-four times in the epistles. Various forms of the word “mind” are used sixty-three times in the epistles. Thinking is integral to spiritual life. Words such as “consider” (2 Tim 2:7; Heb 3:1; 7:1; 12:3), “remember” (Eph 2:11; 2 Tim 2:6; Jude 1:17; Rev 2:5; 3:3), “know” (Rom 6:3,6,16; 8:22,28; 1 Tim 1:9; James 1:3; 2 Pet 1:20; 3:3), “understand” (1 Cor 12:3; 14:20; Eph 1:18; 3:4; 5:17; Col 1:9; 2:21 John 5:10), “comprehend” (Rom 13:9; Eph 3:18), “discern” (1 Cor 2:14; 11:29; Heb 5:14), “perceive” (1 John 3:16), and “meditate” (1 Tim 4:15) – all postulate thought. We are even admonished concerning the things that are to occupy our thought-life (Phil 4:8).

Our thinking and understanding is not to remain at a juvenile level. Rather, we are to excel in the use of our minds, • UNDERSTANDING. We are admonished. “in UNDERSTANDING be men!” (1 Cor 14:20).

• COMPREHENSION. We are to be able to “COMPREHEND with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height” (Eph 3:18).

• KNOWLEDGE. We are to “KNOW the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge” (Eph 3:18).

• DISCERNMENT. We are to have our senses exercised to “DISCERN both good and evil” (Heb 5:14).

• PERCEPTION. The love of God, as profound as it is, is to be “PERCEIVED” (1 John 3:16).

• CONSIDERATION. We are to CONSIDER profound realities: “the Apostle and High Priest of our profession” (Heb 3:1), and “Him who endured such contradiction of sinners” (Heb 12:3).

Does anyone really wonder why Paul went where the thinkers were gathered, and where sober discussion was allowed? This is the kind of climate in which the Lord makes Himself known. Many religious gatherings are nothing more than cesspools of questionable emotion – emotion that does not yield godly manners or quests. The intellectual drivel that flows out from many pulpits is disgraceful, insulting the Divine imagery in man, and representing God and His salvation in a wholly inappropriate manner. Those who are familiar with the times in which we live will recognize that the Paul of our text would not even be permitted to speak in the average church. There is no atmosphere that would allow for him to do so, and his Christian credentials would not be officially recognized. We know this is the case because, even now, there is a prevailing ignorance in the modern church concerning Paul’s writings.

Whether in the synagogues or in the city square, Paul went where thinkers could be found. That is because he preached a thoughtful message – one that engaged the highest capacities of men. He had no word that did not require extended and sober thinking.

ENCOUNTERED BY CERTAIN PHILOSOPHERS

“ 18a Then certain philosophers of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks, encountered him.”

The picture here is of repeated gatherings and discussions – things that were taking place on a “daily” basis (17:17). Apparently the citizenry became generally aware of these discussions, and soon a number of people were drawn into them. Here we are confronted with some Athenian philosophers.

PHILOSOPHERS

“Then certain philosophers . . .” All other versions that I have, read “philosophers.” with the following exceptions: “supporters of the theories,” BBE and “teachers.” GWN

The word “philosophers” is a transliteration of the Greek word filoso,fwn (phil-os-o-phone). The lexical meaning of the word is, “one given to the pursuit of wisdom or learning . . . in a narrower sense, one who investigates and discusses the causes of things and the highest good,” THAYER “scholar, one given to the pursuit of wisdom and learning, often from a particular world view,” FRIBERG “a person of professional or semi-professional status regarded as having particular capacity or competence in understanding the meaning or significance of human experience,” LOUW-NIDA and “one who speculates on the nature of things and truth.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

In English, the word means, “pursuit of wisdom . . . a search for a general understanding of values and reality by chiefly speculative rather than observational means . . . an analysis of the grounds of and concepts expressing fundamental beliefs . . . a system of philosophical concepts . . . a theory underlying or regarding a sphere of activity or thought.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

The Britannica Encyclopedia says of philosophy: “(from Greek, by way of Latin, philosophia, “love of wisdom”) the critical examination of the grounds for fundamental beliefs and an analysis of the basic concepts employed in the expression of such beliefs. Philosophical inquiry is a central element in the intellectual history of many historical civilizations.” This word is used only one other time in Scripture, where believers are warned against its corrupting influences: “Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ” (Col 2:8). Other versions read “cheat you,” NKJV “takes you captive,” NASB “makes a prey of you,” RSV “takes you away by force,” BBE “lead you away as a prey,” DARBY “rob you,” GWN and “carries you off as spoil or makes you yourselves captive.”
AMPLIFIED

This is a part of, what Paul referred to as, “science falsely so called” (1 Tim 6:20), or “contradictions of what is falsely called knowledge.” NKJV This is a wisdom that “descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish” (James 3:15). The idea of “philosophy,” by definition, excludes technical precepts and practical arts MERRIAM-WEBSTER – that is, it is not a body of knowledge that is supported by facts, but is either a humanistic interpretation of facts, or the creation of pure imagination.

In the sense of this text, a philosopher is like a blind man groping in the night for wisdom. He is attempting to acquire foundational knowledge independently of the Fount of knowledge, and Him in whom are hidden “all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Col 2:3). He attempts to comprehend the universe without learning from the One who spoke it into existence, framing the worlds by His word (Heb 11:3). He makes an effort to discern man independently of the One who created Him, attempting to figure out the purpose of man, as well as his assets and liabilities. Charles Darwin speculated about the origin of species without consulting with the author of life, or giving any heed to the revealed origin of life – particularly human life. Sigmund Freud compiled a system of knowledge that supposes to account for human motivation, and the manner in which nab thinks. He also ignored what God has revealed about man’s intellectual and emotional makeup, and disregarded the eroding and corrupting influences of sin. Neither Darwin nor Freud dealt satisfactorily with the purpose of life, for they did not have any cogent or stable thought on the matter.

It is wrong to develop a philosophy about something that has been revealed – particularly when it relates to matters of morality, causes, and effects. Today, within the professed church, there is an astounding amount of philosophizing – and that during the time of the greatest amount of revelation that is in Christ Jesus.

World Views

Every so often, the modern church increases its vocabulary crystalizing some of its erroneous concepts. It does so in such a manner as to leave the people thinking the terms are inspired, and are taught in the Scriptures. A few years ago, the expression “unconditional love” became a staple part of the modern Christian vocabulary. During recent times, the phrase “world view” has been vaulted into prominence. According to Wikipedia (the encyclopedia written by the people), this is the definition of the expression: “A x comprehensive world view (or worldview) is a term calqued from the German language word Weltanschauung. Welt is the German word for ‘world,’ and Anschauung is the German word for ‘view’ or ‘outlook.’ It is a concept fundamental to German philosophy and epistemology and refers to a wide world perception. Additionally, it refers to the framework of ideas and beliefs through which an individual interprets the world and interacts with it.” Epistemology is “the study or a theory of the nature and grounds of knowledge especially with reference to its limits and validity.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER Men who attempt to sanctify the expression “world view” are extending themselves into forbidden areas, and are unwise in doing so.

This really has nothing foundational to do with the manner in which those in Christ think. The primary quest of their knowledge is Christ Himself: “that I may know Him” (Phil 3:10). The possession of eternal life is the summation of all legitimate quests, and eternal life is knowing “the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom” He “has sent” (John 17:3). The objective of the believer is not to interact with the world, but to capitalize on the realities and personalities to which God has brought them : “But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel” (Heb 12:22-24).

Actually, the sons of God are cutting loose from this world, and preparing to participate in the world to come , for in Jesus they are no longer “of the world” (John 15:19; 17:6). The world is not a worthy focus for the people of God. God has revealed that it has been scheduled for destruction (Psa 102:25-26; Isa 24:19-20; 51:6; Matt 5:18; 24:3; Mk 13:31; Heb 1:10-12; 2 Pet 3:10-13; Rev 20:11; 21:1). Any view of the world that does not take that appointment into account cannot possibly be valid. Anyone who takes the revealed appointment seriously will diminish any interaction with “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4).

Now, Paul will confront some Athenian philosophers – those who have adapted a strictly mundane view of things that is wholly based upon conjecture, opinion, and speculation.

EPICUREANS AND STOICKS

“ . . . of the Epicureans, and of the Stoicks,” Other versions read “Epicurean and Stoic philosophers.” NKJV

Epicureans

The Epicureans followed the teaching of Epicurus. His philosophy was divided into three parts: Theology, Ethics, and Physics. Briefly summarized, here are the views.

• THEOLOGY. “Epicurus acquiesced in the existence of the gods, but denied them any participation in the process of the universe . . . He ascribed to them immortality and human form, and assigned to them attenuated and spectral bodies . . . He accords to them indestructibility, immutability, and the serene happiness of eternal repose. Their tranquillity would have been disturbed by any care; accordingly, they are entirely unconcerned with everything that falls under human apprehension .”

SUMMATION

That Deity exists, but had no part in bringing the world into existence, has a human form though immortal, and entertains no interest at all in humanity.

• ETHICS. “Without divine sanction, without responsibility or existence hereafter, with neither reward nor penalty in a future life for "deeds done in the body," no real system of ethics is conceivable. There is no constraint, no obligation to rectitude ; there is no moral compulsion; there is no domain for conscience ; there can only be a more or less judicious and provident adaptation of actions to the judgments or dispositions of men, and to the supposed satisfaction of the individual . . . A tranquil and pleasurable existence becomes the summum bonum of the sage; the gratification of every passion as it arises is the sole duty of an eager and undisciplined nature. ”

That pleasure is the chief objective for men, being accomplished in an environment in which PHYSICS. “The Physics of Epicurus were devised as a means of escape from all divine authority and superintendence. . . . The leading lines of his physical doctrine are that matter is uncreated and indestructible . Its primitive elements are indivisible particles — atoms — . . . which are eternal and imperishable , passing through various combinations, and assuming new properties and forms according to these mutable compositions.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S

SUMMATION

That matter is uncreated and indestructible, continuing on without end, and changing into variable forms. This is the philosophy that allowed for the entrance of the theory of evolution.

It is apparent that Satan is still promoting this view of things.

Stoicks, or Stoics

This body of philosophers claim descent from Socrates. This sect was founded in Athens by Zeno of Cilium during the fourth century before Christ. In general, the Stoics believed that “what is important is the pursuit of wisdom and virtue, a quest that is open to all human beings because of their common capacity for reason, no matter what the external circumstances of their lives.” They followed the reasoning of Plato who “held that human passions and physical desires are in need of regulation by reason. The Stoics went farther: they rejected passions altogether as a basis for deciding what is good or bad. Although physical desires cannot simply be abolished, the wise person will appreciate the difference between wanting something and judging it to be good. Only reason can judge the goodness or badness of what is desired. If one is wise, he will identify himself with reason rather than with desire; hence, he will not hope for the satisfaction of physical desires or worry that they might not be satisfied. The Stoic will feel physical pain as others do, but he will know that physical pain leaves the true reasoning self untouched. The only thing that is truly good is to live in a state of wisdom and virtue. In pursuing such a life, one is protected from the play of fortune that afflicts those who aim at physical pleasure or material wealth, for wisdom and virtue are matters of the intellect and under the individual's control. Moreover, if matters become too grim, there is always a way of ending the pain of the physical world. The Stoics were not reluctant to counsel suicide as a means of avoiding otherwise inescapable pain. BRITANICA ENCYCLOPEDIA

SUMMATION

That human reasoning is the superior reasoning, and the means through which all good can be done, and all evil avoided. If this fails, there is no further purpose to live.

The Stoic view, though slightly modified, is the basis for most recovery programs. The world still imagines that those living in a deviate manner can correct themselves if they are exposed to more facts concerning their condition and the documented results of continuing to live in such a manner.

As is apparent, the Stoics adopted views that were the antithesis of those held by the Epicureans. Both views, however, postulated the centrality of human desire. Neither centered in God, or acknowledged any obligation to Him. The satisfaction of self was the primary thing. It was only the means through which this was realized that differentiated the two views.

Now, those who have embraced these philosophies will confront Paul. How will they react to him? Will they feel as though they have something in common with him, or that their views are in any way harmonious with his? It will be interesting to see what Paul says to them, and how all of this plays out.

ENCOUNTERED HIM

“ . . . encountered him.” Other versions read, “were conversing with him,” NASB “began to dispute with him,” NIV “debated with him,” NRSV “met him,” RSV “supporters of the theories . . . had a meeting with him,” BBE “started meeting with him,” CJB “argued with him,” CSB “had discussions with him,” GWN “engaged him in discussion,” NAB “were meeting together to see him,” YLT “encountered him again and again,” MONTGOMERY and “began to engage him in discussion.” AMPLIFIED

By saying these philosophers “encountered” Paul, the text does not mean they simply came across him, or happened to become suddenly aware of him. As used here, the word “encountered” means “to throw together, to bring together . . . to dispute with . . . to confer with one another, deliberate among themselves.” Inherent in the word is the idea of considering and pondering adversarial ideas, THAYER “to think about seriously, quarrel, dispute,” FRIBERG “discuss, debate, confer,” UBS “to give careful consideration to various implications of an issue - 'to reflect on, to think about seriously, to think deeply about,” LOUW-NIDA “to come together, meet,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “to compare with,” LEH and “to draw conclusions about.” GINGRICH

Paul had gone to the place where men were trafficking in ideas – and he was declaring things that so obviously contradicted what they had embraced they could not ignore it. He did not stoop down to their level and talk in philosophical language. There was no guesswork in what he was declaring, but an obvious note of certitude was heard in his words. Not willing to walk away from their own ideas, they disputed with Paul – all in the name of intellectuality.

Since both the Epicureans and Stoics had adopted views that placed natural human desires at the heart of everything, the words of Paul were in stark contrast with their thoughts, for he was affirming realities that had to do with Another, even the God of heaven. His message had to do with abandoning self interests and adopting the agenda of Someone else, to whom men are ultimately accountable.

Human adaptation is the ruination of religion. This is owing to the fact that our humanness is our weakness, and is the cause which necessitates regeneration. Contrary to “the doctrine of Christ,” philosophy relies on the inferior part of man to support what it conceives to be the superior. This approach is far too common in contemporary religion, and it is not to be overlooked as though it was harmless.

WHAT WILL THIS BABBLER SAY?

“ 18b . . . And some said, What will this babbler say?” Other versions read, “what does this babbler want to say,” NKJV “what would this idle babbler wish to say,” NASB “what is this talker of foolish words saying,” BBE “What is this pseudo-intellectual trying to say,” CSB “what would this chatterer say,” DARBY “what is it that this word sower would say,” DOUAY “what is this babbling fool trying to say,” GWN “What does this word-monger mean,” MRD “what is this scavenger trying to say,” NAB “What can this parrot mean,” NJB “what would this seed picker wish to say,” YLT “he’s a dreamer,” LIVING “what is this beggarly babbler to say,” WEYMOUTH “what is this blabbermouth trying to say,” ISV “what is this scraps-of-truth-picker trying to say,” WILLIAMS “what is this beggarly fellow to say,” MONTGOMERY and “What is this babbler with his scrap-heap learning trying to say.” AMPLIFIED

Here, in Athens, was worldly wisdom at its finest – honed to a fine intellectual edge. Now it was facing spiritual wisdom at its finest, initiated by revelation and amplified by the Holy Spirit of God. This is not the wisdom of peers, but is the superior wisdom that comes down from above. It will eclipse the fading embers of worldly wisdom. They clash head-on, and Paul is considered nothing more than a blithering idiot: a babbler, speaker of foolishness, pseudo-intellectual, a fool, blabbermouth, and dreamer! This assessment is strictly owing to the comparison of the manner and content of his speech with their own. They made no effort to probe into what he said, or examine it in view of its actual content. Paul spoke of things that simply did not fit into the intellectual framework of their own making. To say it another way, their own concept of truth was the standard by which they measured and valued what Paul was saying.

AN INTELLECTUAL ECLIPSE

There is a principle embedded in nature that depicts certain moral and intellectual conditions. It is the phenomenon of an eclipse. In astronomy, an eclipse occurs when three celestial objects become aligned. In such a case, what is the closest obscures what is the farthest away, which is generally actually the larger object. When, therefore, the moon comes between the earth and the sun, the larger sun cannot be seen. You can produce a kind of artificial eclipse by holding a penny before your eye while looking toward the sun. Although the sun is infinitely larger, that small penny will obscure your vision of it, and may altogether hide it. It is an inviolable principle in physics that the further away an object is, the smaller it appears. It the same in the Spirit.

This same principle holds true in matters pertaining to the heart and mind – particularly in things concerning life and godliness. If Jesus Christ Himself, and the “things of the Spirit of God” are kept at a distance from the heart and mind, they cannot be properly seen . At the very best, they will appear distorted, compelling the individual to draw wrong conclusions because things are not seen clearly. Erroneous deductions are the direct result of faulty vision, and faulty vision is the result of a misplaced emphasis. Whatever captures the attention of men, therefore, has a direct bearing upon their ability to perceive and reason upon the things of God. This is something that cannot be avoided.

For this reason, when anything from the earth captures our attention, regardless of what it is, “heavenly things” (John 3:12; Heb 8:5; 9:23) become obscure, and can be altogether hidden. In such a case, the wisdom of God appears to be foolishness, while the foolishness of the world appears to be wisdom.

In our text, this is precisely what has taken place. The Athenian Epicureans and Stoics have been absorbed with the philosophy of this world, and for that very reason, “the mind of the Lord” has been eclipsed to them. The meaning of the English word “eclipse” is very appropriate: “to cause an eclipse of: as a: OBSCURE, DARKEN b: to reduce in importance or repute c: SURPASS.”

MERRIAM-WEBSTER The philosophy these men had embraced did the following:

- Obscured the truth of God.
- Darkened their understanding.
- Caused the truth to appear unimportant.
- In experience, folly surpassed wisdom.

That is why they referred to Paul as a “babbling” – they had been blocked off from the truth. Their hearts had been captured by something else – something that was foolish and perishing.

THIS IS THE MANNER OF WORLDLY WISDOM

It is the manner of worldly wisdom to stand between men and the truth of God, causing it to be hidden. When, for example, professing Christians attempt to mingle the wisdom of this world into their religion, they cannot avoid the truth being pushed further away from them. In direct proportion to the amount of worldly wisdom they embrace, they become incapable of comprehending the truth. This is the mindset described in the words, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them , because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14). The “natural man” is the one who is shut up to natural resources. He cannot obtain heavenly resources because they are obtained by faith – which faith can only come to the individual by means of the grace of God (1 Tim 1:14). Further, grace can only proceed from God and Christ. No work of grace can be done through natural means.

A SETTER FORTH OF STRANGE DOCTRINES

“ 18c . . . other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods: because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.”

Not only do these philosophers charge Paul with being a babbler, they also give their assessment of his message.

A SETTER FORTH OF STRANGE GODS

“ . . . other some, He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods . . .” Other versions read, “proclaimer of foreign deities,” NKJV “proclaimer of strange deities,” NASB “advocating foreign gods,” NIV “proclaimer of foreign divinities,” NRSV “preacher of strange gods,” BBE “a propagandist for foreign gods,” CJB “announcer of foreign demons,” DARBY “setter forth of new gods,” DOUAY “propagandist for some outlandish gods,” NJB “tidings bringer of new devils,” TNT “of strange demons he doth seem to be an announcer,” YLT “he’s pushing some foreign religion,” LIVING and “His business . . . seems to be to cry up some foreign gods.” WEYMOUTH

In this text, the Greek word translated “gods” is daimoni,wn (dai-mon-ion). This is the word ordinarily translated “demons.” However, because its use here reflected a Gentile concept, the translators wisely chose the word “gods” lest it gender confusion. With the Greeks, “demons” were not necessarily evil – something that is firmly declared in Apostolic doctrine. In truth, demons are associated with Satan, do his work, and are hostile toward humanity (Matt 4:24; 8:29; 12:45). They are associated with idolatry (Lev 17:7; Deut 32:17; 1 Cor 10:20-21). They are also perpetrators of false doctrines (1 Tim 4:1). None of these things are acknowledged by heathen philosophers. This is an inspired view of the spiritual underworld, which the Greeks took to be a domain of “gods.”

The proper concept of God is one that has been revealed , not discovered by means of philosophy or any other sphere of human wisdom or aptitude. Among the heathen, there is a general concept of God that is fairly consistent. It is that there is really one supreme God, invested with all of the powers of Deity. However, he is withdrawn from His creation. And is inaccessible to them. The dealings men have with Deity is with a kind of second-class, or lesser god – generally one that has advanced from some lower stage to that of a minor deity. On this, the Britannica Encyclopedia records the following.

“Though the pattern varies from people to people, the High God usually is conceived as masculine or sexless. He is thought to be the sole creator of heaven and earth. Although he is omnipotent and omniscient, he is thought to have withdrawn from his creation and therefore to be inaccessible to prayer or sacrifice. Generally, no graphic images of him exist, nor does he receive cult worship or appear in the mythology. If he is invoked, it is only in times of extreme distress, but there is no guarantee that he will hear or respond. His name often is revealed only to initiates, and to speak his name aloud is thought to invite disaster or death; his most frequent title is Father. In some traditions he is conceived to be a transcendent principle of divine order; in others he is pictured as senile or impotent and replaced by a set of more active and involved deities; and in still other traditions he has become so remote that he is all but forgotten. . . . any benevolent or malevolent spiritual being that mediates between the transcendent and temporal realms.” BRITANNICA ENCYCLOPEDIA

The word translated “gods” (daimoniwn) denotes properly “the genii, or spirits who were superior to human beings, but inferior to the gods.” It is, however, often employed to denote the gods themselves, and is evidently so used here. The gods among the Greeks were such as were supposed to have that rank by nature. The demons were such as had been exalted to divinity from being heroes and distinguished men.

ALBERT BARNES

While these people delighted in borrowing gods from the Greeks and the Romans, thinking nothing of it, they were not so amiable toward Paul. This is because of the firmness with which he preached. He gave no allowance for competing gods, or the rights of people to choose their own god.

Paul decimated their view of Deity in the sermon he delivered later “in the midst of Mars Hill” (17:22ff). He declared the God they themselves acknowledged they did not know – which happened to be “the true God” (2 Chron 15:3). As it is written, “The Lord is the true God” (Jer 10:10). Jesus referred to Him as “the only true God” (John 17:3). Distinguishing Him from all false representations, Paul referred to Him as “the living and true God” (1 Thess 1:9). John declared that the God that Jesus Christ gives us to understand is “the true God” (1 John 5:20).

The above statements are not philosophical statements. They are not the result of men searching for God, or studying the conceived evidences of Deity. These are conclusions that have been revealed.

HE PREACHED UNTO THEM JESUS AND THE RESURRECTION

“ . . . because he preached unto them Jesus, and the resurrection.” Other versions read, “was preaching.” NASB “was telling,” NRSV “he proclaimed,” CJB and “he announced” DARBY

The substance of Paul’s preaching consisted of the Person of Jesus, and the resurrection of the dead. It is interesting that the philosophers concluded that he was speaking of Deity. This means that the proper presentation of Jesus Christ will lead to the conclusion that He is more than a Man. The “fulness of the Godhead” dwells in Him “bodily” (Col 1:19; 2:9).

What IS Done When Jesus Is Preached?

Precisely what do men do when they preach Jesus? What is an appropriate description of that activity? Peter referred to the words of the Prophets when he told the people God would “send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you” (Acts 3:20). The apostles “ceased not to teach and to preach Jesus Christ” (Acts 5:42). Philip “preached Jesus” to the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:35). Paul addressed the synagogue in Thessalonica, saying “this Jesus, whom I preach, is Christ” (Acts 17:3). Paul wrote to the brethren in Rome, telling them God had power to “stablish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ” (Rom 16:25). Paul wrote to the Corinthians that Jesus Christ “was preached among you by us” (2 Cor 1:19). Again he wrote to them, “we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord” (2 Cor 4:5).

But what does all of that mean? What is done when Jesus is preached, proclaimed, announced, or declared? What is said in such declarations?

It should not surprise you that Jesus is not generally the subject of the preaching of our time. However, He was the subject of apostolic declaration, as I have already affirmed.

First, preaching Jesus involves saying what God the Father has said about Him. John referred to the preaching of Jesus as “the record that God gave of His Son” (1 John 5:10). If you were to boil it down to one succinct statement, it is this: “And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son” (1 John 5:11). If what a person is saying about Jesus does not fit into that summation, it is not possible that what is being said is the truth.

When Jesus made Himself known, He did so by means of the Scriptures: “And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, He expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself” (Luke 24:27). Later, Jesus spelled it out with even more specificity: “And He said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the psalms, concerning Me” (Luke 24:44).

Through Moses and the Prophets, God prepared the world for the coming of His Son. He told them what to expect when the Messiah came, and what He would do. He acquainted them with His accomplishments in the ceremonies of the Law, and cultured their appetites with the various promises delivered by the Prophets. The manner in which the Christ would think and speak were made known in the Psalms, as well as His experience in death and the resurrection. The need for Jesus was expounded by the Prophets – a need that was found in both God and man.

Paul did not philosophize about Jesus, but declared Him as He was.

He Preached the Resurrection

Some versions read, “and His coming back from the dead,” BBE “and saying that people would come back to life,” GWN and “and His resurrection.” MRD/NLT/LIVING

I fear that the preaching of the resurrection sounds nearly as strange today as it did to those ancient Athenians. There is not a lot being said about it, for it does not blend well with the direction of contemporary Christian efforts. The things that take place in this world have been set forth as primary, and all specialists focus on the temporary – even though real life is set forth as looking “NOT on the things that are seen”

In the text, both the English and the Greek, the article is used “THE resurrection.” Most of the time this phrase is used, it refers to the general resurrection of the dead. When referring to Jesus’ own resurrection, it is made very clear: “His resurrection” (Matt 27:53; Acts 1:22; Rom 6:5; Phil 3:10), “the resurrection of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:3; 3:21), etc. Jesus Himself spoke frequently of “the resurrection” (Matt 22:30,31; Lk 14:14; Lk 20:35-36; John 5:29). The apostles “preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead” (Acts 4:2). Paul taught extensively on the subject of the resurrection (1 Cor 15:21-57). In stating his own objectives, he said he was seeking to “attain unto the resurrection of the dead” (Phil 3:11) – that is, that he would realize his finest hour at that time. Jesus spoke of the resurrection of “they that have done good” as being the “resurrection of life” (John 5:22). That is compared to the resurrection of those who “have done evil,” which, He said, was “the resurrection of damnation.”

For those in Christ Jesus, the resurrection of the dead marks the beginning of total wholeness, when their bodies will “put on incorruption ” (1 Cor 15:54-54). For them, that will be the “redemption of the purchased possession,” which is their body (Eph 1:14). Happy day, indeed!

The Implications of the Doctrine

The implications of the resurrection of the dead are strong, with powerful incentives. A few observations will suffice.

- It confirms this life is not the only life.
- It confirms life does not end when men die.
- It confirms men are accountable to God, and will stand before Him.
- It confirms that death will be finally and totally defeated.
- It confirms that men are to prepare for what follows death.
- It undergirds the real reason for living.

Paul reasoned that if the dead did not rise, there was really no cause for separation from the world or facing jeopardy for Jesus’ sake. “If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die” (1 Cor 15:32). The “hope and resurrection of the dead” was reason enough to submit to persecution, dangers, and death itself for Jesus’ sake.

I fear that the preaching of the resurrection sounds nearly as strange today as it did to those ancient Athenians. There is not a lot being said about it, for it does not blend well with the direction of contemporary Christian efforts. The things that take place in this world have been set forth as primary, and all specialists focus on the temporary – even though real life is set forth as looking “NOT on the things that are seen” (2 Cor 4:18). However, it is only in this posture, while we are focused on the things “which are not seen,” that our inner man can be “renewed day by day” (2 Cor 4:16). Judging from the direction of today’s church, one would never suspect that the resurrection is one of the elementary points of the doctrine of Christ – something everyone should know, and know very well (Heb 6:2). It is one of the pillars of sound reasoning.

THEY BROUGHT HIM TO THE AREOPAGUS

“ 19 And they took him, and brought him unto Areopagus, saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?”

Because of their penchant for novelty and knowledge, the philosophers of Athens will ask Paul to elaborate on what he has been declaring publicly.

THEY BROUGHT HIM UNTO AREOPAGUS

“And they took him, and brought him unto Areopagus . . .” Other versions read, “to the Areopagus,” NASB “to a meeting of the Areopagus,” NIV “to Mars’ Hill,” BBE “brought him before the High Council,” CJB “into Mars Street,” GENEVA “the place of judgments called Areopagus,” MRD “a meeting of the Areopagus Council,” IE “to the city auditorium,” WILLIAMS and “the 10Areopagus [Mars Hill meeting place].” AMPLIFIED

There is a two-fold reference here. First, to the place – “Mars Hill” (17:22). Second, it refers to the people who gathered there in a council – “Areopagus.” This was also called the “Upper Council.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S This was a place where serious matters were taken into consideration, and even major trials were held here. It is described as “The most venerable of all the Athenian courts, consisting of all exarchons of blameless life. It was the Upper Council, to distinguish it from the five hundred, who met in the valley below.” FAUSSET

Those who doubt the mental and scholastic superiority of the Gospel do well to note how it had captured the attention of these ancient thinkers. No one should ever yield to the notion that the truth of God is simplistic, or that it does not engage the most noble and astute abilities of humanity. I know of no person of insight who has ever said the Scriptures are written in a simplistic manner, or that they contain only rudimentary knowledge. The most developed and disciplined minds in history have found the Scriptures challenging. People who devote themselves to the reading and consideration of the Word of God will find their thinking challenged and their contemplative skills awakened.

MAY WE KNOW OF THIS NEW DOCTRINE?

“ . . . saying, May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is?” Other versions read, “what this new doctrine is of which you speak,” NKJV “what this new teaching is which you are proclaiming,” NASB “what this new teaching is you are presenting,” NIV “make clear to us what is this new teaching of yours,” BBE “tell us these new ideas that you're teaching,” GWN “tell us more about this new religion,” LIVING and “May we know what this novel (unheard of and unprecedented) teaching is which you are openly declaring.” AMPLIFIED

Here we see the obvious clash of the wisdom that comes from God with the wisdom of the world. As elementary as the message of Jesus and the resurrection of the dead may seem to you, it was astounding for its strangeness to the intellectual hub of Athens.

God's Revelation to Israel

God established the Israelites as the premier nation in the world. He “chose” them “to be a special people unto Himself, upon all people that are upon the face of the earth” (Deut 7:6). He “set” His love upon them, and particularly chose them (Deut. 7:7). In truth He said to them, “You only have I known of all the families of the earth” (Amos 3:2). As confirmed by the apostle Paul, every advantage belonged to them : “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5).

As a consequence of His choice of them, the Israelites had things revealed to them that were withheld from others.

- The origin of the cosmos (Gen 1-2).
- The nature of the true God (Gen 6:3; Ex 34:6-7).
- The origin of man (Gen 1:26-27; 2:7; 5:1; Deut 4:32).
- The origin of sin (Gen 3:1-19).
- The reality of the devil (Gen 3:11 Chron 21:1; Job 1:1-12; 2:1-7; Psa 109:6; Zech 3:1-2).
- The definition of morality (Ex 20:1-17; Deut 4:8).
- The abomination of idolatry (Ex 20:3-4; 23:13; Lev 17:7; Deut 32:17).
- The reason for death (Gen 2:17; 3:19).
- The need of salvation (Gen 49:18; Ex 14:13; 15:2; Deut 32:15; Psa 3:8; Isa 12:3; 45:8).
- The need for a Savior (Isa 19:20; 25:9; 43:11; Hos 13:4).
- The resurrection of the dead (Job 19:25-27; Psa 16:10; 30:3; Isa 25:8; 26:19; Hos 13:14; Dan 12:2-3).
- The day of judgment (1 Chron 16:33; Psa 9:7; 96:13; 98:9; Eccl 3:17; Dan 7:9-10).

None of these things were known by the heathen – not to any degree. Their wise men and philosophers could not uncover these realities, regardless of their intellectual superiority. Those who trafficked in the dark world of evil spirits were not told these things, nor could they discover them.

The nature and work of the Savior (Gen 3:15; 12:3; 49:10; Isa 11:1-16; 28:16; 32:2; 40:3-4,11; 42:1-4; 49:1-26; 53:1-12; 55:3-5).

None of these things were known by the heathen – not to any degree. Their wise men and philosophers could not uncover these realities, regardless of their intellectual superiority. Those who trafficked in the dark world of evil spirits were not told these things, nor could they discover them. However, God chose to reveal them to Israel, and none of these things were totally strange to any informed member of that nation.

But these were “strange” things to the Athenians, representing an entirely new line of thought and teaching to them. It was outside the perimeter of their knowledge. They therefore ask Paul to provide them with further explanations.

STRANGE THINGS TO THEIR EARS

“ 20 For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know therefore what these things mean.”

CERTAIN STRANGE THINGS

“For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears . . .” Other versions read, “some strange ideas,” NIV “it sounds rather strange to us,” NRSV “strike us as strange,” CJB “certain new things,” DOUAY “strange notions,” NAB “surprising things,” NET “seemed startling,” NJB “we have never heard these things before,” IE and “startling things, foreign and strange.” AMPLIFIED

The strangeness of Paul’s words was owing to the fact that they spoke of a differing order of things. They were quite literally words from another world that speaks a different language, with a different focus, and supporting realities that are unknown to those who are of this world. These men could immediately recognize that Paul was speaking about something concerning which they knew nothing. Among other things, this confirms that Paul did not water the message down, or reduce it so men of this world could understand it. He did not speak in Athenian colloquialisms, or borrow his language from the philosophers with whom they were familiar. Oh, in his message, he will refer to certain of their “own poets” (17:28) – but that will only be because what was said was in harmony with truth, even if the poet was not fully aware of it. In fact, it was the very strangeness of Paul’s speech that provoked this inquiry.

Jesus Explains

Although Jesus did not speak to heathen philosophers, He did speak to some Jewish ones who were skewed the wrong way in their thinking. They also had difficulty understanding what He was saying. It was not their kind of speech. Jesus, however, told them the reason for their inability to comprehend what He said. “Ye are from beneath; I am from above: ye are of this world; I am not of this world” (John 8:23). He later further explained: “Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word” (John 8:43). There are some people who cannot hear what is being said by godly men. They do not have “ears to hear.” It can be said of them as Moses said to wayward Israel, “Yet the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day” (Deut 29:4).

There are at least five things that prove to be barriers between the flesh and the Spirit, the saved and the lost, the carnal and the spiritual. There are no doubt more, but these will suffice to account for the strangeness of Paul’s words to the Athenian philosophers.

- FOCUS. There is a different focus in Divine communication. Man is not the central figure, and the earth is not the primary place. The Gospel is a message that focuses on the Person of Christ, what He has accomplished, and its appointed relevance to men. Any person lacking this focus will not be able to derive any benefit from the Gospel of Christ.

- PERSPECTIVE. There is a different perspective that is initiated and cultured by the Word of God. Truth is seen against the backdrop of man’s fallen condition, the presence of a conquering adversary, and coming day of judgment. If men do not take these things into account, the Word of God will have little or no meaning to them. It speaks with the inevitabilities of death and judgment in mind, and the means God has provided for safely passing through them both.

- OBJECTIVE. The objective of God’s Word involves getting people safely out of this present evil world – uprooting them from the temporal and anchoring them in the eternal. If men treat religion as a novelty, as did the Athenians, they will be confused by Paul, for the seriousness and gravity of his words were very apparent.

• LANGUAGE. Words like “THE Christ,” “resurrection,” “judgment” and “righteousness” are not within range of the world’s frequency – they cannot hear them with discernment. They do not represent the values of this world, and therefore the world cannot take hold of them. In a very real sense, they are foreign to everyone who does not have the Spirit of Christ.

• SUPPORTING REALITIES. The world equates reality with what can be accessed by the human senses. But that is not how reality, or truth, is viewed by the Word of God. The ultimate realities are God and Christ, and everything else relates to them in either an acceptable or unacceptable manner. There are real places like heaven, hell, the throne of judgment, and the presence of the Lord. There are spiritual realities like grace, truth, love, and Divine power. However, these are not after the worldly order, thus making it impossible for the worldly-minded to take hold of the Word of the Lord.

Jesus told His disciples, “If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you” (John 15:19). There you have the described condition with which the world cannot contend. Paul had been taken out of the world, and they have been left in it – absorbed with what is going on there, with no interest in the unseen realm. He had been “delivered from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), and they had not. He was not confined to this world, and they were. What is more, in their own strength, and with all of the resources that were available to them, there was not a thing they could do about the situation. Yet, they were completely unaware of their real circumstance.

Add to this the fact that a lack of understanding is not the root of the matter – as though these philosophers could be taught in such a way as to make the truth at least palatable. That is not the case at all. It is ever true, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14). As long as a person is in the category of “natural man” these things cannot be perceived, and consequently cannot be received. That is precisely what Jesus revealed when He said, “Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God” (John 3:3).

In view of this stark reality, we must question the effort to make spiritual things plain to carnal people. Such efforts, wherever they are found, display a fundamental lack of understanding. They are a display of ignorance, not nobility or concern.

The novice will question, therefore, why we should preach at all. After all, if men cannot understand, what is the use of declaring the truth. However, that is too simplistic for informed people to embrace. First, we cannot always identify the people who are in this category. Some who appear to be interested may not be at all, and others who seem to be indifferent may be pondering what is said with an honest and good heart. As we deliver the truth, we must do so with spiritual expertise, knowing how to handle the Word of truth (2 Tim 2:15). Then, we must rely on the Holy Spirit to use that word, probing the inner recesses of men, and discerning the thoughts and intents of the heart (Heb 4:12).

WHAT DO THESE THINGS MEAN?

“ . . . we would know therefore what these things mean.” Other versions read, “we would like to know what they mean,” NIV “we have a desire to get the sense of them,” BBE “we want to know what these ideas mean,” CSB “want to know what its all about,” NLT “we want to hear more,” LIVING “want to know what this teaching means,” IE and “should therefore like to be told exactly what they mean.” WEYMOUTH

These men had heard enough, that they knew there was something more to what was being said than they had perceived. That tells us they did not think that Paul was a raving madman. There was rationality and intelligence in what he said – they just could not discern it. The fact that they asked for more will remove from them all excuse for not embracing the truth. It will, also provide an opportunity for Paul to wield the sword of the Spirit with expertise.

Unlike Felix, unwilling to wait, they asked to hear more immediately. Perhaps Felix saw more of what Paul said than they did. When Paul “reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee” (Acts 24:25). However, these men took Paul to the place where things were weighed and pondered, and decisions were made. Paul is neither ashamed nor afraid to speak in such an environment. We will find, however, that their motives were not noble. Their cause was not a proper one.

TELLING OR HEARING SOME NEW THING

“ 21 For all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing. ” Other versions read, “doing nothing but talking about and listening to the latest ideas,” NIV “spend their spare time talking or hearing about the latest intellectual fads,” CJB “looked for opportunities to tell or hear something new and unusual,” GWN “nothing else were at leisure but to say something, and to hear some newer thing,” YLT and “spent all their leisure time in nothing except telling or hearing something newer than the last.” AMPLIFIED

It was not a thirst for truth that drove these men, but rather an insatiable appetite for novelty. They delighted to hear of the newest ideas, read the latest books, and be exposed to new views about this or that. This attitude is the result of idleness, for when men are idle, they are attracted to the novel, and are prone to babble. One of their own, Demosthenes, said, “we, says he (for the truth shall be said), sit here, doing nothing” — — inquiring in the court, whether any new thing is said.” Respons. ad Philippi Epistolam Kuinoel observes, “I bear witness to the garrulity, and curiosity, and intemperate desire of novelty among the Athenians, by which they inquired respecting all things, even those in which they had no interest, whether of a public or private nature.” ALBERT BARNES

A PENCHANT FOR NOVELTY

The request of the Athenians was not driven by a “love of the truth,” the appointed means through which men are saved (2 Thess 2:10-11). Rather, it was their inordinate appetite for hearing new ideas and perspectives – intellectual dainties that added nothing to men.

Of course, it is one thing to read of the Athenians having this dreadful thirst for novelty, with no genuine interest in what they hear. It is quite another for this spirit to be found among professed believers.

Novelty, by definition, is

It is possible for a person to get all caught up in hearing these various views, with no real intention of taking hold of the truth, In fact, the more you submit your mind to such things, the more the facts of Christ’s return and the end of the world recede into the background of your thinking.

something old put into a new form. “Some new thing” is not really something that is “new” in the sense of Scripture. It is nothing more than a different twist on something that is already known. From the higher perspective, it is nothing more than the flesh dressed up in a way that is appealing because it appears different. In matters of religion, it would be a human opinion of something – a notion that represents what men think of a matter, and not the matter itself. For the Athenians of our text, they were thinking of a new idea about religion and the gods that were embraced. Their’s was not a quest for truth itself, but a great delight in hearing differing human opinions concerning the matter under consideration.

A modern religious quest that is much like that of our text is, what men refer to as, Eschatology: the study of last things. There are a remarkable variety of ideas on the subject that are afoot in the Christian world. They involve such things as:

- Soul sleeping.
- Purgatory.
- The state of the dead prior to the coming of the Lord.
- The end of the world.
- The day of judgment and the manner in which it will be carried out.
- The concept of rewards.
- The great tribulation.
- The length of the tribulation.
- The rapture.
- The time of the rapture: before, during, or after the tribulation.
- The reign of Jesus on the earth.
- The mingling of glory and flesh in that reign.
- How the subduing of Satan for a season will be known.
- How the saints will reign with Christ.

On these facets of last things, there is an endless parade of human ideas, all claiming to be based upon what has been revealed in the Scriptures. However none of them are clearly taught in Scripture. All of them tend to detract from the coming of the Lord Himself, the judgment of all men, and the end of the world. Yet, such things have caught the attention of men who have an inordinate interest in human opinion.

It is possible for a person to get all caught up in hearing these various views, with no real intention of taking hold of the truth, In fact, the more you submit your mind to such things, the more the facts of Christ's return and the end of the world recede into the background of your thinking. In this case, it is the novelty that appeals to the curiosity of men, and is the means through which they are actually led away from the truth.

Apostolic doctrine warns believers of the distracting influence of things that have no inherent value. These are things that only appeal to human curiosity, and the desire to enlarge the scope of knowledge. They have nothing whatsoever to do with profit, benefit, edification, or spiritual growth and advancement.

• THINGS THAT MINISTER QUESTIONS. “Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do” (1 Tim 1:4).

• THINGS THAT ARE PROFANE OR WORLDLY. “But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness” (1 Tim 4:7).

• THINGS THAT ARE NOT PROFITABLE. “Of these things put them in remembrance, charging them before the Lord that they strive not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers” (2 Tim 2:14).

• THINGS THAT GENDER STRIFE. “But foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes ” (2 Tim 2:23).

• THINGS THAT ARE VAIN. “But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law; for they are unprofitable and vain ” (Titus 3:9).

I remember very well my renewed exposure to the Christian academic world, after having been isolated from it for some time. Having spent some thirty-five years trafficking in the truth of Scripture, and among a people who found delight in the discussion and perception of the Word of God itself, I suddenly found myself in the scholastic realm again. The contrast was so apparent that it was staggering. There was more of an Athenian spirit among the people than that of the early disciples of our Lord. A tremendous amount of interest was given to varying human views of things expounded in Scripture. There was a very apparent interest in the books of men that caused the people to often look with disdain upon anyone whose concepts had been formed by the Scriptures themselves. In fact, there was a marked tendency to think that such a thing was not even possible. In such an environment, there was a pronounced ignorance of things that were obviously unrelated to this world: i.e. the coming of Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the day of judgment, reigning forever with Christ, etc. As soon as any discussion drifted outside the parameters of human experience, there was a certain uncomfortableness that gripped the people. Often there was even a persuasion that such things were not relevant, and only dealt with the theoretical. This was a difficult period of my life, with many accompanying sorrows and frustrations.

THE PRECIOUS COMMODITY OF TIME

Particularly in Christ, time is a precious commodity in which men are to invest wisely. It is to be perceived as a period of opportunity to gain advantages, and make wise investments of our persons and time. Apostolic doctrine speaks of this as “redeeming the time, because the days are evil,” or “making the most of our time,” NASB (Eph 5:16). By saying “the days are evil,” Scripture means there is a disproportionate amount of evil present, so that the good things of God are not easily detected. Jesus said that the spreading and abounding of iniquity would actually cause “the love of many to wax cold” (Matt 24:12).

Time is not to be taken for granted. Even in spiritually primitive times, Moses sensed this and prayed, “So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom ” (Psa 90:12). David wrote, “My times are in Thy hand” (Psa 31:15). “Times” are the divisional breakdown of “time.” It is important for God’s people to be like the children of Issachar, who had an “understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do” (1 Chron 12:32).

There are times when dangers are more prominent, and times when blessings are more abundant. How blessed it is to know what to avoid and when it ought to be done, and to know when spiritual manna is abundant on the ground of occasion, and is to be gathered.

It is possible for someone who has been given thirty years, to live as though they had been given ninety – thus squandering time. On the other hand, it is also possible for a person given ninety years, to live as though he had only been given thirty, and thus miss countless opportunities that are set before him. Those who are attracted to novelty will squander the time that is given to them, thereby falling into snares they could have avoided, and missing benefits they could have appropriated.

We are living in a time when the Christian community is being inundated with all kind of religious fads and trivia. Passing trends and temporal circumstances have captured the attention of authors, and they are cranking out record numbers of books that will be obsolete before too many years pass away. It is the spirit of the Athenians being revived, and it is not good. It is time to sound the warning to the people concerning investing their minds in things with brief and passing relevance. Our investments are to be in eternity – laying up treasures in heaven, where there will be no novelties, but only true and lasting substance. There is where treasures are to be laid up, and laid up for ourselves.

CONCLUSION

The universal application of the Gospel is refreshing to consider. Who but God Himself could produce a message that was itself tailored for all people, bringing hope and satisfaction to all who embrace it. It is a message adapted to humanity itself, rather than certain kinds of people. The Gospel in its essential form is addressed to those with differing fleshly status.

- Male and female.
- Bond and free.
- Jew and Gentile.
- Educated and uneducated.
- Married and unmarried.
- Young and old.
- Mature and immature.
- Novices and the learned.

The reason for this universal adaptation is that the above distinctions, as well as others like them, are only surface distinctions. They do not represent fundamental differences. For example, those who say that men and women are fundamentally different are not correct in that supposition. At the core of their being, the distinction of male and female does not exist. The spirit of a person is not defined by gender. That is a distinction that exists primarily in the body, and secondarily in the soul. Add to that the factor of faith, by which men are brought into affiliation with the Lord. Faith impacts the soul, but is superior to it – and it has nothing whatsoever to do with gender, or any other fleshly distinction. The Gospel is addressed to the essential part of man, not his surface or secondary parts. This is confirmed in the various accounts of the preaching of the Gospel that have been recorded to this point in the book of Acts.

- Devout Jews (2:5; 9:22).
- Citizens of various countries (2:8-11).
- Parents and children (2:39).
- Jews and Gentiles (2:39).
- The lame and infirm (3:1-11; 14:8-10).
- Worshipers in the Temple (3:12-26; 5:25).
- Jewish religious leaders (4:9-12; 5:29-32,42).
- The disciples of Jesus (4:31-33; 11:26; 15:14-19,32; 16:41).
- In various houses (5:42).
- In synagogues, to mixed crowds (7:1-53; 9:20; 13:5,14-42; 14:1; 17:1-3,10-11; 17:17).
- Everywhere (8:4).
- In cities, to the general public (8:5,12,40; 14:21,25).
- A government official (8:30-39; 13:12).
- A Gentile military man (10:36-47).
- Households (10:22).
- Greeks (11:20).

- Gentile proselytes (13:43).
- Regions, with mixed multitudes (13:49; 14:6-7).
- Idolaters (14:11-17).
- Some women worshipers (16:13-15).
- A business woman and her household (16:13-15).
- A prison keeper and his household (16:30-34).
- Public gathering places (17:17).
- Philosophers (17:18).

Although covering a vast array of differing personalities and people, it was a singular Gospel that was preached. The same Jesus was preached. The same salvation was declared. The same means of appropriation was declared. The same promises were given. The Gospel itself does not address people according to their gender, social status, ethnicity, age, or political environment. Nor, indeed, is it declared to them in accordance with their social, economical, or scholastic achievements. All of those distinctions are on the surface of humanity, and therefore are not common to all. The dilemma that is addressed by the Gospel is a common one: sin. At the root of the matter, sin has produced the same results in all of the people.

- Death in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1).
- Mortality (1 Cor 15:22).
- Under the dominion of the devil (Eph 2:2).
- Alienated from the life of God (Eph 4:18).
- Enmity against God (Rom 5:10; 8:7).
- Spiritual obtuseness (1 Cor 2:14).
- Enslavement to sin (Rom 6:17).
- A state of hopelessness (Eph 2:12).

None of these conditions are directly related to being a man or a woman, a Jew or a Gentile, or being a slave or a master. They did not result from a lack of education or a lot of it. They cannot be traced back to being married or single. The existence of sin is not related to being old or young, or being under an ideal government or one that is despotic in nature. The problem with humanity is found at the foundational level, and is therefore common to everyone. As soon as men make an attempt to tailor the Gospel for men in their secondary status, they will be forced to distort it.

Although this may seem quite apparent, there are approaches to Gospel preaching that totally obscure both its nature and intent. Let it be clear that a certain oneness is reflected in the Gospel. It is spelled out in Ephesians 4:4-6: “There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all.” No person in Christ is excluded from any of these realities – not a single one! Whatever salvation itself brings is for all who receive it. There are no secondary citizens in Christ’s Kingdom.

When men make efforts to adapt the Gospel, and even spiritual life, to circumstances other than those declared in Scripture to be related to that Gospel, they have taken from the Gospel. They have injected the virus of human thinking into the message, thereby rendering it useless. Their opinions concerning human need are like hewn stones that are attempted to be placed into the altar of God (Ex 20:25). They pollute the message.

I say these things because there is a total absence of such attempts in the inspired record of preaching and teaching. I have shown the variety of people to whom the Gospel was preached. So far as the personal circumstances of the people, hardly any information at all is provided. We know of a government official, a military man, a business woman, and a jail-keeper. But only a minimal amount of information is provided.

This by no means suggests that the Lord has no interest in the lives of His people. However, it does suggest that those matters are worked out within the framework of Divine fellowship. For this reason, we have been called into “the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 Cor 1:9), and “the communion of the Holy Spirit” NKJV (2 Cor 13:14). As men live by faith and walk in the Spirit, personal and effective teaching will take place concerning their lives. However, it is not the business of the ministers of God to enter into that arena with a mind to resolve human challenges and difficulties. By so doing, they are interfering with the manner of the Kingdom. Such approaches may be conducive to career development and the building of apparently great ministries. However, those who embark on such pursuits are conducting themselves in contrariety to the revealed record. The saints are not to submit to them, but rather are to turn from them (2 Tim 3:5).

PAUL SPEAKS IN THE AREOPAGUS

“ 17:22 Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. 23 For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you. 24 God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that He is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; 25 Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though He needed any thing, seeing He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; 26 And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; 27 That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him, though He be not far from every one of us: 28 For in Him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also His offspring. 29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device. 30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent: 31 Because He hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead. 32 And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. 33 So Paul departed from among them. 34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.” (Acts 17:22-34)

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF SUMMATION OF THE TEXT

Being brought by the philosophers to the place where sayings were considered, Paul seizes the opportunity to present a proper perspective of life. His words sharply conflicted with their penchant for looking for some new thing. He declares the focus should be on the Person of God, not things, affirming that this was the intent for which man was made in the first place. This message is a hallmark presentation that clears the fog of delusion created by both idolatry and philosophy. Paul again declared the resurrection of the dead, and again stumped his hearers, who said they would give him another hearing. However, they would not be given another opportunity, for Paul would not consent to their procrastination. Following the surfacing of a handful of people who embraced what Paul declared, he left the area and headed for Corinth. Like the Jews in the Antioch synagogue, the Athenian philosophers had judged themselves unworthy of eternal life (Acts 13:46).

THE CONSIDERATION OF DEITY

Throughout Scripture, Deity Itself is the heart of proclamation. Prior to Christ, the fundamental message pertained to God Himself – His will, His purpose, His Law, and His promises. Further, the primary promises pertained to the One God would send into the world from heaven to fulfill His will. Following the enthronement of the Son of God, Jesus Christ was also prominent in all declarations, set forth as the preeminent expression of God and His purpose. He is set forth as the exclusive means of coming to God and receiving from Him. In fact, He is the One who is bringing men “to God” (1 Pet 3:18), and through whom we come to “the Father” (John 14:6).

Now, all of this is fully acceptable to religious men as long as it is confined to a creedal statement. They are quite content to acknowledge this is what they “believe,” and, for the most part, they are willing to put this in writing and be duly noted and included it in their formal statement of faith. However, when it comes to what they regularly say, what is declared in their pulpits, and chronicled in their books, this is not at all their primary message. This is because, in practicality, this message is not perceived as relevant to everyday life. Domestic, social, and political life is perceived as being “where the rubber hits the road.” We certainly do not hear of workshops on the character and purpose of God, or the accomplishments and ministry of Jesus Christ. However, that IS what we read about in the Scriptures.

- Jesus preached “the gospel of the Kingdom,” which primarily had to do with God

(Matt 4:23; 9:35; 11:5).

- Matthew says Jesus began to “preach” that “the Kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt 4:17).

- When Jesus sent out His disciples, He told them to preach “The Kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt 10:7). Luke says “He sent them to preach “the Kingdom of God” (Lk 9:2).

In the Gospels alone there are 469 references to God (God, Father). There are 208 references to “Lord.” They also contain 837 direct references to Jesus (Jesus, Son, Christ). Additionally, they contain 2,887 pronouns that speak of Deity (He, Him, His, Thou [You] and Thine [‘Yours]).

- John the Baptist preached “the Kingdom of God” (Mk 1:14).

- Jesus said that since John the Baptist “the Kingdom of God is preached” (Lk 16:16).

- In the book of Acts, “Jesus” was the subject of preaching (3:20; 4:2; 5:42; 8:5,35; 9:20; 10:36,42; 11:20; 13:36; 17:3,18; 19:13), as well as “the Kingdom of God” (8:12; 20:26; 38:31).

- The “word” that was preached was “the word of the Lord” (Acts 8:25; 11:16; 13:48,49; 15:35,36; 16:32; 19:10) and “ the word of God” (4:31; 6:7; 8:14; 11:1; 12:24; 13:5,7,44,45; 17:13; 18:11; 19:20).

- Acts contains 167 references to God (God, Father), 111 references to “Lord,” 68 references to “Jesus,” 31 to “Christ,” and 14 to the “Son.” There are also 578 pronouns that reference Deity.

- The Epistles and Revelation contain over 774 references to God (God, Father), and 357 to “Lord,” There are 530 direct references to Jesus (Jesus, Christ, Son). There are also 1,723 pronouns that refer to Deity.

- These references do not include other ways in which Deity is referenced: like Most High, Lamb, Mediator, Testator, etc.

Although this is a rather cursory observation, it serves to illustrate the obvious focus of inspired utterance and writing. If the subject was working or achievement, the emphasis was placed on what God and Christ have done. If it was on speaking, it was what the Lord had said that was the point. When it came to objective or purpose, it what the Lord had determined. If the “will” was being expounded, it was the will of God. If realizing pleasure and satisfaction was the point, the issue related to what pleased God. If kings and government were addressed, the Lord and His dominion were declared. If the kingdoms or rule were the point, the Kingdom and rule of God were affirmed. These things are so obvious that it almost appears foolish to even draw attention to them. However, when theology is skewed in the wrong direction, all of these surface observations cannot even be seen, and they certainly are not the objects of extended thinking.

In the matter of preaching and teaching, there are certain priorities, and it is essential that men have some kind of understanding of them.

First, at the heart of everything God has revealed Deity itself is the point. So far as the New Covenant perspective is concerned, that consists of the Persons of God the Father and Jesus Christ His Son. God has nothing to say that does not issue forth from Them, and point back to Them, No Divine word or work is performed independently of Them or without a due regard for Them.

Second, all revelation and all Divinely initiated work is within the context of God’s eternal purpose. This is a purpose conceived before the world began (Rom 8:28; Eph 1:11; 3:11; 2 Tim 1:9). What God is doing is the point.

Third, within the context of God’s eternal purpose, the Kingdom of God is the point . That involves God focusing His Divine qualities toward the fulfillment of an objective. Because it is an “eternal purpose,” it has more to do with eternity than with time. This is an “everlasting Kingdom” (2 Pet 1:11).

Fourth, within the context of the Kingdom of God, the specific work that is being wrought is the salvation of God. In this salvation, all of the foundational work has been done by Jesus Christ, and in strict accord with the eternal purpose itself, which is a perfect expression of God’s own Person. This salvation is an ongoing work, commencing with the exaltation of Jesus throughout the history of the world.

Fifth, within the context of the salvation of God, an order has been established that is designed to perfect the saints, thereby orienting them for glory. In this perfection they are delivered from the world, receive a “new man,” and commence working out their own salvation with fear and trembling. The objective is for them to be ready to finally leave the world, stand before the Judge of all the earth, and reign forever with Jesus Christ, into whose image they are being conformed.

Sixth, there is the matter of living wholly unto the Lord. This involves the daily subjugation of the flesh, or the mortifying of the deeds of the body. It also involves putting on the new man, adding the graces given for that purpose, and perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord.

THE PERSPECTIVE

One cannot focus on the lives of the saints unless it is within the context of their perfection and preparation for eternity. It is not possible to concentrate on the perfection of the saints, if it is not strictly within the context of God’s great salvation. To emphasize the salvation of God without it being within the context of the Kingdom of God forces the individual to live only in view of this world and becoming a supposedly better person. Should any person think of the Kingdom of God apart from the eternal purpose of God, they will drift toward novel and unproductive views of Divine rule. Finally, to ponder the purpose of God without some kind of comprehension of His Person thrusts the individual into a fruitless endeavor.

THE RELEVANCE OF THIS

It is important to grasp at least the intellectual form of these things, for it will assist you in making more sense of Paul’s sermon. What he did was begin with the core reality with which they had the most familiarity – the existence of Deity. He then reasoned from that pivotal point in such a manner as to provoke godly inquiry among the listeners. It set before them unvarying realities upon which to think. It is a sterling example of godly reasoning.

PAUL SPEAKS IN THE MIDST OF MARS HILL

“ 17:22 Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill, and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.”

Paul’s reasoning in the public square has drawn the attention of the Athenian philosophers. He has been preaching “Jesus and the resurrection.” This is doubtless the same kind of preaching that is elsewhere described in this way: “preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead” (Acts 4:2).

Notice, whether in Jerusalem by Peter and John, or in Athens by Paul, preaching led the people to a consideration of what will happen AFTER death! That is preaching with perspective! Paul will not now, nor did the faithful before him or contemporary with him, preach within the primary context of life in this world or in the flesh.

CONTEXTUAL PREACHING

The context of preaching is the background against which it is presented. That is, there are facts and circumstances that necessitate the message that is being delivered. From the standpoint of the factual environment, there are primarily God, Christ, the purpose of God, and the salvation of God. An example of surrounding circumstances is the dilemma created by sin. There is also an experiential backdrop that necessitates preaching. This has to do with appointed circumstances, not those that can be called “every day circumstances.” The two preeminent circumstances that require preaching have not yet occurred. However, they have been Divinely appointed, and will take place. They are the resurrection of the dead and the day of judgment. Both of these have to do with all men confronting the God who both made and purchased them.

Paul will preach within the context of these appointed realities. Only a modicum of thought will confirm to your heart that very little of the preaching of our time are within this context. In fact, these appointed realities are not even viewed in the category of experience – at least not in any productive way. There is a reason for this situation. Men can in no way capitalize on these appointments in a fleshly manner. They can design no program calculated to ready men for them, and they are well aware that they cannot. No religious career can be established in this arena. Yet, Paul will drive home these realities with great power. They are among the things that make Christ Jesus relevant to all men.

MARS HILL

“ 17:22a Then Paul stood in the midst of Mars' hill . . . ” Other versions read “in the midst of the Areopagus,” NKJV “in the meeting of the Areopagus,” NIV “in front of the Areopagus,” NRSV “in the council meeting,” CJB “in the middle of the court” GWN “before the whole counsel of the Areopagus,” NJB and “the Areopagus [Mars Hill meeting place].” AMPLIFIED

Mars' Hill was the place, and the Areopagus was the gathering of intellectually astute council. Here Paul is not defending himself, as he did before Agrippa and Fetus. He is not answering false charges against himself that he was a rabble-rouser causing social disturbance. That happened at Philippi and Thessalonica, but is not the circumstance in Athens. From the Athenians point of view, “To that hill the apostle Paul was led, not to defend himself before the judges, but that he might set forth his opinions on divine subjects to a greater multitude of people, flocking together there and eager to hear something new.” THAYER “The court of Areopagus was one of the oldest and most honored, not only in Athens, but in the whole of Greece, and indeed in the ancient world.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S It is understood that the citizenry of Athens stood on the steps and in the area surrounding the sitting council, or Areopagus. Paul is addressing those regarded as the intelligentsia of Athens – yea, also even of the whole world. They are people capable of profound and extended thought, and which have a penchant for learning. I cannot help but think that Paul rejoiced at the opportunity to lay before such men things that transcended human wisdom, yet could be understood by the faith that is “obtained through the righteousness of God and of our Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:1).

TOO SUPERSTITIOUS

“ 22b . . . and said, Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.” Other versions read, “in all things are very religious,” NKJV “are very religious in all respects,” NASB “extremely religious in every way,” NRSV “you are overmuch given to fear of the gods,” BBE “given up to demon worship,” DARBY “in all things ye are excessive in the worship of demons,” MRD “extremely scrupulous you are in all religious matters,” NJB “you are in every respect remarkably religious,” WEYMOUTH and “I perceive in every way [on every hand and with every turn I make] that you are most religious or very reverent to demons.” AMPLIFIED

The word “superstitious” is translated from the large Greek word deisidaimoneste,rouj . The lexical meaning of the word is, “reverence for the gods, piety, religious,” THAYER “pious attitude toward divinities,” FRIBERG “a set of beliefs concerning deity, with the implication of corresponding behavior,” LOUW-NIDA and “fear of the gods” LIDDELL-SCOTT

“It seems unlikely that Paul should give this audience a slap in the face at the very start. The way one takes this adjective here colours Paul's whole speech before the Council of Areopagus. The comparative here as in verse 21 means more religions than usual (Robertson, Grammar , pp. 664f.), the object of the comparison not being expressed. The Athenians had a tremendous reputation for their devotion to religion, ‘full of idols’” (verse 16). ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

I understand Paul’s opening words to refer to the obvious commitment of the Athenians to devotion and a respect for what they believed to be gods. They possessed, as the word itself indicates, a “fear of the gods.” LIDDELL-SCOTT The Athenians did have erroneous views of Deity, perceiving anger as the chief attribute of the gods. To them “fear” meant erecting some image or idol in honor of the gods, in an apparent attempt to appease them. One’s devotion was then measured by the commitment of the individual to that image. I understand this to be a universal misconception held by those who do not know God, yet entertain an acute awareness of the existence of Deity.

Of course, this is distinguished from the fear of the Lord, which is based upon God’s revelation of Himself, not on a human conception.

Paul will preach within the context of what the people sense, even though it has been wrapped in the rags of ignorance. He will begin where they are – being very religious, or extremely devoted to what they conceived to be Deity. He preached to the Jews within the context of the knowledge they had. He spoke to the churches in view of the understanding they had obtained. It is in this sense that He became “all things to all men, that” he “might by all means save some” (1 Cor 9:22). Contrary to the misrepresentations of some, this does not mean that he adorned himself with the kind of clothing others wore, or that sort of disguised himself so they would think he was one of them. Paul became “weak unto the weak” by refraining from things like eating meat offered to idols, in order that he offend not the consciences of weaker brethren (1 Cor 8:13). He would pay for the Temple vows of some Jews, even though it was not necessary for Him to do so, in order to fulfill avow to the Lord (Acts 21:26). In every case, he was dealing with someone whose religion, or outward devotion, was driven by their conscience. In no case was Paul attempting to conform his conduct or manners to those who were wallowing in sin, and did not live with any kind of conscience concerning Deity. None of these instances was an attempt to assume an outward identity that was wholly unrelated to religious manners.

When Jesus admonished, “Let your light so shine before men,” He was speaking of how they appeared before men – of what men saw in them (Matt 5:16). When Paul described faithful disciples as those who “shine as lights in the world,” he was speaking of how they appeared before men (Phil 2:15). It is godly manners and appearances that distinguish the people of God in the world. The ungodly cannot see the hearts of the saints, or perceive their conscience, or motives, or intentions, or hope. They cannot detect faith, or the new birth itself. They must make some correlation between the appearance of the saints and their profession.

It is inconceivable that altering one’s appearance in order to appeal to the fundamentally ungodly could possibly be the means by which God would reach their heart. I find such imaginations highly offensive, and indicative of a degree of spiritual ignorance that cannot possibly be justified.

How to become all things to all men cannot be contained in a code of conduct. This is something that requires discernment of the circumstance, a deep devotion to the God of heaven, and an understanding of His will. Where these qualities are not found, men have no business speaking about the adaptation of their conduct to any worldly circumstance in the name of the Lord. It is time to thrust such thinking from us.

THE UNKNOWN GOD

“ 23 For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you.”

Paul has made an observation concerning the extreme devotion of the Athenians to the consideration of, what they perceived to be, deities. He will now confirm that this reflexion was based upon a thoughtful diagnosis of their manners. He will not begin by pointing out the various false gods to whom images had been reared. Instead, he will begin with a point of reason that will permit him to proceed toward the consideration of the one living and true God. It should be apparent that this is a wonderfully proper way of reasoning. One should never imagine that it is possible to begin with something obviously unrelated to God, and proceed from that point to the consideration of the true God. Those who seek to clarify the Lord to others must give due thought to where they begin their effort.

I BEHELD

“ For as I passed by, and beheld...” Other versions read, “considering,” NKJV “examining,” NASB “looked carefully at,” NIV “looked carefully at,” NRSV “observed,” RSV “seeing,” DOUAY “looking closely at,” GENEVA “viewing,” MRD “beheld the manner how,” PNT “contemplating,” YLT and “carefully observed.” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “beheld” means, “look at attentively, to observe accurately, consider well,” THAYER “look at again and again, examine attentively, observe carefully; of mental attention consider, reflect,” FRIBERG “observe closely; reflect upon,” UBS “to observe closely and give serious consideration to, suggesting the possibility of something unusual - 'to observe, to notice,” LOUW-NIDA and “look at or examine carefully.” GINGRICH

The idea is that Paul carefully studied these idols, reading their inscriptions, and gathering a sense of the nature and seriousness of the Athenian’s approach to religion. Much could be learned by how they spoke of their gods, and which ones they chose to honor.

A Brief Observation

During my travels, I have often made it a practice to visit cemeteries in the area, noting the various inscriptions written on the grave-markers and stones. I have observed that much can be known of the spiritual culture of the area by reading their perspectives of death. There is a general consistency in these expressions, with some standing out because of the insight reflected in them. Some areas reflect hope in their inscriptions, while others articulate hopelessness and confusion. In national and military cemeteries, the sense of national pride is generally the theme.

The point is that formalized statements that have been set in stone reveal something about those who wrote them. That is, in my understanding, what Paul was perceiving as he passed among these images, carefully examining what was written on them.

YOUR DEVOTIONS

“ . . . your devotions . . .” Other versions read, “the objects of your worship,” NKJV/ASV/NASB/NIV/NRSV “the things to which you give worship,” BBE “your shrines,” CJB “your idols,” DOUAY “the temples of your worship,” MRD “your sacred monuments,” NJB and “your gods.” PNT

The word “devotions” is a noun, and refers to “whatever is religiously honored, an object of worship . . . of temples, altars, statues, idolatrous images.” STRONG’S In this case, it could refer to images, altars, shrines, and even temples, that had been erected in honor of some perceived deity. The Greek word from which “devotions” is translated is found only one other time in Scripture. There it is translated, “that is worshiped ” (2 Thess 2:4).

THE UNKNOWN GOD

“ . . . I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.” Other versions read, “an unknown god,” NASB “the god of whom there is no knowledge,” BBE “to the hidden god,” MRD “to god – unknown,” YLT and “the god who is not known.” IE

With remarkable consistency, later versions translate the phrase “AN unknown god.” In my judgment, this is a misrepresentation of what Paul was saying. First, the precise Greek phrase is VAgnw, stwl qew/lA with the word God (qew) being in the singular. The absence of the Greek article for “the” by no means suggests that the “god” of reference is one of several, or “ an unknown god.” Secondly, in referring to the words of the inscription, Paul refers to a specific entity: “Whom.” He will also develop a point that requires this phrase to be understood as referring to a particular god, who was unknown. Although some historians (Apollonius Tyanaeus, Philostratus, Pausanias) GILL/BARNES affirm that Athens had altars erected to a plurality of unknown gods, Paul did not refer to them. He rather chose an altar to a single unknown god as his point of reference, lest he leave his audience with the conclusion that he was speaking of one god among many others.

An “unknown god” is one of whom nothing whatsoever is known, and is so confessed. The existence of such a god is not questioned, but it is acknowledged that nothing is known of him.

The existence of such an altar confirmed the seriousness of the Athenians in their religion, even though they were deceived. They apparently did not want to take a chance of offending even an unknown god, and therefore reared an altar in honor of it, and gave devotion to it. Now, Paul will capitalize on that circumstance in a most remarkable display of godly wisdom.

Something to Remember

In Christ Jesus, and within the framework of the New Covenant, an unknown God is strictly forbidden. In fact, we are forthrightly told that Christ will come “in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God . . . Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power” (2 Thess 1:8-9). In reality, eternal life is defined in these words: “And this is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent” (John 17:3). Further, one of the hallmarks of the New Covenant is this: “for all shall know Me, from the least to the greatest” (Heb 8:11).

IGNORANT WORSHIP

“Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, Him declare I unto you.” Other versions read, “worship without knowing Him,” NKJV “worship in ignorance,” NASB “what you worship as something unknown,” NIV “without knowledge give worship to,” BBE and “reverence, not knowing Him.” DARBY

True worship cannot be accomplished within an environment of ignorance. In fact, men are “alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them” (Eph 4:18). If eternal life is knowing God (John 17:3), and if Jesus has come to give us an understanding, that we might know God (1 John 5:20), then the most serious of all ignorance is the ignorance of God! If, when Jesus comes, He is going to take vengeance on those who know not God, then knowing God is surely the most critical area of knowledge. There is no form of ignorance that is more dangerous than the ignortance of “the true God” (1 John 5:20).

This, then, is the God Paul will declare to the Athenians. He will not do this merely to increase their knowledge, which is what they were seeking. Rather, he does this because this is the area in which God will measure men, determining whether they will remain with Him through eternity, or be thrust out from His presence. Paul has been alarmed and stirred within by the sight of their idols – not because of the existence of he idols alone, but because it was confirmation that they did not know God! The ONLY reason any individual or group of individuals erect something in the place of God is because they do not know God. That kind of ignorance is responsible for all distorted theology, sectarianism, compromise, and borrowing from the wisdom of this world.

When a person is fundamentally ignorant of God, their efforts to maintain devotion fall short of genuine productivity. That is because such ignorance raises an impenetrable wall between man and God. That wall cannot be pierced by worship, devotion, or any form of religious activity. God is the “God of truth” (Isa 65:16), and as such cannot be accessed by erroneous means. Therefore Paul will acquaint his hearers with the God of heaven, meeting them at the point where their knowledge proves to be something with which he can work.

THE GOD THAT MADE THE WORLD

“ 24 God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands.”

While the Athenians were uncertain about Deity, even erecting an altar to “the unknown God,” this is not the case with Paul. He will speak with a certitude these philosophers had never before witnessed. He will address them with confidence concerning Deity – something that is still seen as impossible by many – even some professing Christians. It is important to know how He speaks to this Subject.

GOD MADE THE WORLD AND ALL THINGS THEREIN

“God that made the world and all things therein . . .” Other versions read, “made the world and everything in it,” NKJV “made the earth and everything in it,” BBE “made the universe and everything in it,” CJB “made the world and all that are in it,” PNT “made the world and all that it contains,” WILLIAMS and “produced and formed the world and all things in it.” AMPLIFIED

The word “world” is translated from the Greek word ko,smon , from the root word ko,smoj (kosmos). The root meaning of this word is “an apt and harmonious arrangement or constitution.” THAYER As used in Scripture primarily refers to “the world, I. e. the universe.” THAYER It is also used to express the inhabitants of the world (1 Cor 4:9), and the mass of ungodly and alienated humanity (John 7:7; 16:8; 1 John 4:5). In every case, this word emphasizes an harmonious arrangement that works together, having certain traits and functions that work together. Therefore we read of the tongue being “a world of iniquity” –something that must be controlled because of its natural manner (James 3:6). There is also “the world of the ungodly,” a term that expresses the commonality and unanimity of the wicked (2 Pet 2:5).

Here, however, the emphasis is the material world and everything in it , the creation of which is revealed in Genesis 1:1-2;4,7-9,19,21-23; 5:1-2. The creation consisted of “the heaven and the earth,” and everything created to be sustained in them. The whole of this marvelous creation is thus described as “the world and all things therein.”

The fact of God creating the world is frequently articulated in Scripture.

- Hezekiah confessed to God, “Thou hast made heaven and earth” (2 Kgs 19:15).
- Hiram said, “Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, that made heaven and earth” (2 Chron 2:12).
- Nehemiah confessed, “Thou, even thou, art LORD alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all” (Neh 9:6).

- The Psalmist wrote, “Thou hast formed the earth and the world” (Psa 90:2); “Of old hast thou laid the foundation of the earth: and the heavens are the work of thy hands” (Psa 102:25); “. . . the LORD which made heaven and earth” (Psa 115:15) “. . . God . . . which made heaven, and earth, the sea, and all that therein is: which keepeth truth for ever” (Psa 146:5-6).

- Solomon wrote of God making the earth (Prov 8:26).

- Isaiah said, “Thou hast made heaven and earth” (Isa 37:16). He also said God “created the heavens,” and “formed the earth and made it,” creating it “to be inhabited” (Isa 45:18).

- Jeremiah said, “He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his discretion” (Jer 10:12; 32:17; 51:15).

- God Himself said, “I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm” (Jer 27:5).

- The Lord is described in the Revelation in this manner: “who created heaven, and the things that therein are, and the earth, and the things that therein are, and the sea, and the things which are therein” (Rev 10:6).

- All the earth is admonished, “God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters” (Rev 14:7).

The Scriptures further affirm that the creation of the world was accomplished by Divine wisdom: “The LORD by wisdom hath founded the earth; by understanding hath he established the heavens” (Prov 3:19). That is, there was an objective that undergirded the creation, and for which its harmonious workings were established. Happenstance, randomness, and extended development were not part of creation. God did not create a process through which the world came into being. By His word it was made in all of its completeness. So that everything that was birthed thereafter was according to established order. This not only rules out the possibility of an evolutionary process, but renders it an utter absurdity, because purposes cannot be carried out by disorder and randomness. Those professed believers who embrace a view of creation that attempts to blend revelation with science do well to study God rather than nature. When men are diverted to considering creation from the standpoint of its imagined development, they must look at what was created rather than Who created it.

In my judgment men do not do well to major on reasoning from effect to cause. In order for that can be done properly, there must be some understanding of the cause. This is precisely how Paul now reasons. He first establishes the true Origin of the entire cosmos and everything in it. Then, He affirms the following.

HE IS LORD OF HEAVEN AND EARTH

While there is a sense of Deity resident in the unseen makeup of men, sin has brought confusion in that area, so that even the concept of God has become distorted. Further, sin will not allow men to search aggressively for God, even though that is man’s appointed vocation.

“. . . seeing that He is Lord of heaven and earth . . .” Other versions read, “since He is Lord of heaven and earth,” NASB “being Lord of heaven and earth,” RSV “who is Lord of heaven and earth,” CJB and “is Himself Lord of heaven and earth.” NJB

The word “seeing” emphasizes that it is apparent that God is over what He has created. It is totally unreasonable to think in any other way – as though what took place in the created realm was independent of its Creator.

Heathen gods were generally said to be over some aspect of the creation. This ranged from fertility, to fire, water, etc. While there is a sense of Deity resident in the unseen makeup of men, sin has brought confusion in that area, so that even the concept of God has become distorted. Further, sin will not allow men to search aggressively for God, even though that is man's appointed vocation. These conditions are addressed by a clear word about God, which tends to dispel the fog created by transgression. It clears the mental haze enough so that men can, in fact, engage in a fervent quest to find God. Paul is providing that word.

Of first importance is that the true God has made everything that had a beginning independent of man himself. Second, it is vital that God be seen as Lord over all. Of course, if He is Lord over all that was made independently of man, you may be sure He is Lord of everything man appears to have made.

DWELLETH NOT IN TEMPLES MADE WITH HANDS

“ . . . dwelleth not in temples made with hands.” Other versions read, “does not live in temples built by hands,” NIV “does not live in shrines made by human hands,” NRSV “is not housed in buildings made with hands,” BBE “does not live in man-made temples,” CJB “doesn't live in shrines made by humans,” GWN and “does not make his home in shrines made by human hands.” NJB

The word “dwelleth” means to “dwell or settle in . . . inhabit,” THAYER “live in,” UBS and “dwell in a place in an established or settled manner - 'to live, to dwell, to reside.” LOUW-NIDA This is the opposite of sojourning, visiting, or being transitory.

When Solomon built the Temple, he made clear that it was not intended to be a residence for God Himself: “But will God indeed dwell on the earth? behold, the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?” (1 Kgs 8:27). Again it is written of that occasion, “And the house which I build is great: for great is our God above all gods. But who is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? who am I then, that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?” (2 Chron 2:5-6). Through the Spirit, Isaiah also spoke of this matter, adding that God takes particular note of humble and contrite spirits: “Thus saith the LORD, The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the LORD: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word” (Isa 66:1). When Stephen preached to the Jewish council, he made reference of this fact: “But Solomon built him an house. Howbeit the most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands; as saith the prophet” (Acts 7:47-48). Paul made clear that the people of God are His “temple” (1 Cor 3:16).

This, then, was a well established fact in both the Jewish and Christian communities. However, this was not known in the heathen world. Throughout the whole of Athens, Paul had seen statuary and shrines erected to the honor of gods. Those places were equated with the gods themselves. Now Paul declares to them that God cannot be localized. His dwelling place is in heaven: “God is in heaven” (Eccl 5:2). His “throne is in heaven” (Isa 11:4). We pray to Him as “Our Father which art in heaven” (Matt 6:9).

A Seeming Contradiction Considered

Some have taken the statement of this text to mean that God is completely disassociated from any and all buildings. However, as seen in both the Tabernacle and the Temple, this is emphatically not the case. Concerning the building of the Tabernacle God said, “And let them make Me a sanctuary; that I may dwell among them” (Ex 25:8). Jehosaphat said of the Temple, “Art not Thou our God, who didst drive out the inhabitants of this land before Thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham Thy friend for ever? And they dwelt therein, and have built Thee a sanctuary therein for Thy name, saying” (2 Chron 20:7-8). Jesus referred to the Temple as “My Father’s house ” (John 2:16).

In all of these texts, the structure was not God’s exclusive or permanent dwelling. Rather, it was a place He visited (Ex 40:34-35; 1 Kgs 8:11), and where He met those ordained to speak with Him (Ex 25:22; Num 7:89; 1 Sam 4:4; 2 Sam 6:2; 1 Chron 13:6).

This, then, was a well established fact in both the Jewish and Christian communities. However, this was not known in the heathen world.

Now, since Christ has been exalted (Phil 2:9), and the Holy Spirit has been sent into the hearts of the sons of God (Gal 4:6), God dwells within His people (1 Cor 3:16; 1 John 3:24; 4:15). It is the gathering of the saints together that fulfills the requirement for the Lord to dwell among them. As Jesus Himself said, “For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them” (Matt 18:20). Paul referred to this blessing when he wrote of the observation of a stranger, who witnessed God working among them, “ and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth ” (1 Cor 14:25). That was a time when “the whole church” had “come together into one place” (1 Cor 14:23). This same kind of gathering took place when the believers in Troas “came together to break bread.” It is written that they were in an “upper room” that required “many lamps” (Acts 20:7-8). Whether it was the brethren in Corinth, apparently a rather large assembly, or the one in Troas, which also appeared to be sizeable, the presence of the Lord was associated with the people, not the structure . This is a concept totally foreign to the heathen.

GOD IS NOT WORSHIPED WITH MEN’S HANDS

“ 25 Neither is worshiped with men's hands, as though He needed any thing, seeing He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things.”

The externals of worship – how and where it takes place – has been an issue with religious men from long ago. You may recall that the woman at the well asked Jesus about this very thing: “Our fathers worshiped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship” (John 4:20). Jesus responded to her statement by saying a new day was about to arrive – one in which worship would not be approached in such a manner. “Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe Me, the hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. Ye worship ye know not what : we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship Him. God is a Spirit: and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth” (John 4:21-24). The Athenians and the Samaritans had this in common: they did not know the God they worshiped. Because such people still exist, the words recorded in this text are pertinent to our time as well.

NEITHER IS WORSHIPED WITH MEN’S HANDS

“Neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though He needed any thing . . .” Other versions read “served by human hands,” NASB “dependent on the work of men's hands,” BBE “ministered to by human hands,” MRD “human hands can't serve his needs,” NLT and “doesn't need any help from men.” IE

The word “worshiped” is Today, there are some men teaching that God cannot do anything upon the earth unless there is a petition that comes to Him from men. The above affirmations cast that imagination to the ground. Beside that, God speaks of those who find Him, even though they did not seek Him: “I am sought of them that asked not for me; I am found of them that sought me not:

translated from the Greek word qerapeu,etai (thera-peue-tai) – the word from which “therapeutic” comes. The idea here is that God is not made better, helped, increased, or advantaged by what men do. Because service, or ministry, is a prominent part of “worship,” that word was chosen to convey the activities to which Paul referred. He is referring to all of the work related to building and maintaining the idols, offering sacrifices upon them, together with all of the actions that took place in the shrines that had been reared up to idols. The heathen had the idea that all of this was meeting the needs of their various deities. In fact, to this very day “The idea is prevalent among the Hindus that the sacrifices which are made, and which are offered in the temples, are consumed by the gods themselves.” ALBERT BARNES

God Is Never Advantaged or Disadvantaged By Man

The phrase “neither is worshipped by men’s hands” is a statement that affirms God is not personally advantaged or disadvantaged by what men do. His abundant resources – “the riches of His glory” – are not increased or depleted because of human activity. Men may receive more from God, but it is not because God obtained more from their service. They also may receive less, but it is never because there is less to give. This is humiliating to the flesh, to be sure. It is also one of the fundamental reasons for Jesus saying, “The flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63).

The doctrine of Scripture is that God is never Himself advantaged by what man does. Advantages and benefits always flow from God to man, and never from man to God. There are numerous revelations of this in Scripture.

- Eliaphaz posed the question, “Can a man be profitable unto God ” (Job 22:2).
- Elihu asked, “If thou sinnest, what doest thou against him? or if thy transgressions be multiplied, what doest thou unto Him ? If thou be righteous, what givest thou Him ? or what receiveth He of thine hand ?” (Job 35:6-7).
- God said to Job, “Who has preceded Me, that I should pay him ? Everything under heaven is Mine” NKJV (Job 41:11).
- David said, “O my soul, thou hast said unto the LORD, Thou art my Lord: my goodness extendeth not to thee ” (Psa 16:2).
- Paul asked, “For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been His counselor ? Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again ?” (Rom 11:34-35).
- Paul reminded the Corinthians that they had nothing they had not received – nothing really started with them, particularly in matters pertaining to God. “For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?” (1 Cor 4:7).
- God Himself affirmed through David that He is never put into a position of having to ask something from men. “He shall call to the heavens from above, and to the earth, that he may judge his people. Gather My saints together unto Me; those that have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice. And the heavens shall declare his righteousness: for God is judge Himself. Selah. Hear, O My people, and I will speak; O Israel, and I will testify against thee: I am God, even thy God. I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices or thy burnt offerings, to have been continually before Me. I will take no bullock out of thy house, nor he goats out of thy folds. For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee : for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof” (Psa 50:4-12).

Today, there are some men teaching that God cannot do anything upon the earth unless there is a petition that comes to Him from men. The above affirmations cast that imagination to the ground. Beside that, God speaks of those who find Him, even though they did not seek Him: “I am sought of them that asked not for me; I am found of them that sought me not : I said, Behold Me, behold Me, unto a nation that was not called by My name” (Isa 65:1; Rom 10:20).

HE GIVES TO ALL LIFE, BREATH, AND ALL THINGS

“ . . . seeing He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things.” Rather than receiving anything from man that brings advantage to Him, He is the sole giver of “life, and breath, and all things.” Other versions read, “life and breath and everything else,” NIV “life and breath and everything,” RSV “life, breath, and everything they have,” GWN “life and breath and everything to everyone,” NET “everything – including life and breath – to everyone,” NJB “life and breath to everything, and He satisfies every need,” NLT and “life and breath to all, everywhere.” PNT

Life

In its essence, life is the ability to respond to the environment in which one is placed. It involves animation, vitality, productivity, and sensitivity. It applies to both the body and the soul, including thoughts as well as words and deeds, and desires as well as bodily senses. Life pertains to the domain of the flesh and of the spirit as well.

Breath

This is “the breath of life” that was originally breathed into Adam’s nostrils (Gen 2:7), causing him to be a living soul. That breath is given to everyone who is born, so that they begin immediately to function in the domain of earth. Breath also has to do with the maintenance of life. It also provides a commentary on the tenuous nature of earthly life. There is not a deposit of breath into man – a quantity that gradually is depleted until it is finally expended. Rather, breath is given to everyone, one breath at a time. Thus the prophet Isaiah depicted the frailty of man by saying his breath was “in his nostrils” (Isa 2:22). The phrase “life and breath” also pertain to the period of time when the soul and body are united.

All Things

This expression confirms that men have nothing on their own. Whatever they have is received (1 Cor 4:7). This being true, what men give to God is only what they have first received from Him. Therefore, after collecting goods for the building of the Temple, David prayed, “But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of Thee, and of thine own have we given Thee” (1 Chr 29:14). We must guard our hearts and minds lest we draw contradicting conclusions about this. What we have, was obtained from God!

THE ORIGIN AND PLACEMENT OF MAN

“ 26 And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation.”

Paul knows God created the world “to be inhabited” (Isa 45:18), and that the revelation of God directly bears upon those inhabitants – humanity. To philosophize about God apart from involvement with Him is without profit. The Living God is not merely a subject to be discussed, or an area of passing interest. Paul will now make known the relation of the true God to mankind.

ALL NATIONS MADE OF ONE BLOOD

“And hath made of one blood all nations of men . . .” Other versions read, “He made from one, every nation of mankind to live on all the face of the earth,” NASB “From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth,” NIV “From one ancestor He made all nations to inhabit the whole earth,” NRSV “He made from one the whole human race to dwell on the entire surface of the earth,” NAB “He created all the people of the world from one man, Adam, and scattered the nations across the face of the earth,” LIVING “He caused to spring from one forefather people of every race, for them to live on the whole surface of the earth,” WEYMOUTH and “and He made from one [common origin, one source, one blood] all nations of men to settle on the face of the earth.”
AMPLIFIED

“One of the greatest proofs of the oneness of man’s nature is the power of intermingling the blood in generation. It is a general, if not universal, test of a species that the sexual union be fertile. All the varieties of man are by this test proved to be the same species; and all other earthly beings are by the same test excluded from humanity.” Daniel D. Whendon

Adam can be referred to as “blood” because “the life of the flesh is in the blood” (Lev 17:11). The blood of humanity is unique among what is said to be alive. There is not a separate blood for races, ethnic groups, political groups, or gender. Those who throw dust in our eyes by saying men and women are fundamentally different must account for the commonality of their blood, for that is more fundamental, having to do directly with their origin. The blood from one person can be given to another if the type is the same. That type is not determined by gender, race, or color. All men, regardless of their location and appearance, can trace their origin back to Adam. The only exception to this is the Lord Jesus Christ, who is technically not a member of Adam’s race. He was not a sinner, nor did He fall short of the glory of God like all other people. But as for the rest of the human race, they have a solitary Creator, and can be traced back to a single man.

Notice also that Paul refers to “the nations,” not to individuals – although his words also apply to individuals. This word, however, would show how foolish it was for one nation to exalt themselves above another, or suppose they are superior to another. If one sites Israel as an example of a superior nation, it must be remembered that it was God’s choice that gave them status, not their own accomplishments or nature. Throughout their history, they confirmed that their natural makeup was no different than the other peoples of the world. It would take a “new creation” to make an essential difference in men (2 Cor 5:18; Eph 2:10). That, of course, is realized in Christ Jesus.

- ALL MEN HAVE THE SAME BASIC CONSTITUTION. “He fashioneth their hearts alike; he considereth all their works” (Psa 33:15).

- THERE IS NO FUNDAMENTAL DIFFERENCE. “The rich and poor meet together: the LORD is the maker of them all ” (Prov 22:2).

- NATURALLY, ONE MAN IS A REFLECTION OF THE OTHER. “As in water face answereth to face, so the heart of man to man” (Prov 27:19).

- WE ARE ALL THE WORK OF GOD’S HAND. “But now, O LORD, thou art our Father ; we are the clay, and Thou our potter ; and we all are the work of Thy hand ” (Isa 64:8).

- OUR SIMILARITY IS OWING TO OUR COMMON ORIGIN. “Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us ” (Mal 2:10).

This fact makes racial prejudice nothing more than human foolishness. We have all been made from the same lump, so to speak.

The point here, however, is not Adam himself, but the One who uniquely made Adam – the one True God.

TO DWELL ON THE FACE OF THE EARTH

“ . . . for to dwell on all the face of the earth . . .” Other versions read, “to live on all the face of the earth,” NASB “that they should inhabit the whole earth,” NIV “living on the entire surface of the earth,” CJB “to live all over the earth,” GWN and “to settle on the face of the earth.” AMPLIFIED

God intended that the entirety of the earth be occupied by the offspring of Adam. They are the primary inhabitants of the earth, and eventually even the new earth will be placed in their charge (Psa 37:11; Matt 5:5). In this way, the ancient promise can be fulfilled, “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (Hab 2:14; Isa 11:9). Again it is written, “All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD: and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before Thee” (Psa 22:27).

The dispersion of the human race over the face of the earth was done in consideration of the fulfillment of this promise.

TIMES AND BOUNDS APPOINTED

“ . . . and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation.” Other versions read, “has determined their preappointed times and the boundaries of their dwellings,” NKJV “determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live,” NIV “allotted the times of their existence and the boundaries of the places where they would live,” NRSV “having determined allotted periods and the boundaries of their habitation,” RSV “ordering their times and the limits of their lands,” BBE fixed the limits of their territories and the periods when they would flourish,” CJB “assigned the seasons which were ordained before, and the bounds of their habitation,” GENEVA “He has given them the seasons of the year and the boundaries within which to live,” GWN “decreed the times and limits of their habitation,” NJB “decided beforehand when they should rise and fall, and he determined their boundaries,” NLT “decided exactly when and where they must live,” IE “marked out for them an appointed span of life and the boundaries of their homes,” WEYMOUTH and “definitely determined [their] allotted periods of time and the fixed boundaries of their habitation (their settlements, lands, and abodes).” AMPLIFIED

The word “determined” is translated from a word meaning, “to mark out the limits or boundaries, determine, appoint,” THAYER “fix, appoint, designate, decide, determine,” FRIBERG “designate,” UBS “to set limits on, to decide, to determine,” LOUW-NIDA and “determine, fix, set.” GINGRICH The word “appointed” comes from a word meaning, “to place before, to appoint beforehand,” THAYER “determine beforehand, prearrange,” FRIBERG “to appoint or determine beforehand,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

What Godly Men Have Said

About This Text

Daniel D. Whedon (Wesleyan) wrote, “God has not abandoned man, like a pile of crawling maggots, to pure random. He has preconstructed for his race a scheme and a history, with predetermined periods of time and boundaries in space.” NEW TESTAMENT COMMENTARY

John Gill (English Baptist), Charles Spurgeon’s predecessor, said of this text, “how long the world he has made shall continue; and the several distinct periods, ages, and generations, in which such and such men should live, such and such nations should exist, and such monarchies should be in being, as the Assyrian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman, and how long they should subsist; as also the several seasons of the year, as seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night; and which are so bounded, and kept so distinct in their revolutions, as not to interfere with, and encroach upon each other; and likewise the several years, months, and days of every man’s life; (see Job 7:1 14:5) to which may be added, the times of the law and Gospel; the time of Christ’s birth and death; the time of the conversion of particular persons; and all their times of desertion, temptation, affliction, and comfort; the times of the church's sufferings." NEW TESTAMENT COMMENTARY

Matthew Henry (English Nonconformist) wrote, "He made them not to live in one place, but to be dispersed over all the earth; one nation therefore ought not to look with contempt upon another, as the Greeks did upon all other nations; for those on all the face of the earth are of the same blood. COMMENTARY

Albert Barnes (Presbyterian) wrote, "This evidently refers to the dispersion and migration of nations. And it means that God had, in his plan, fixed the times when each country should be settled, and the rise, the prosperity, and the fall of each nation. The different continents and islands have not, therefore, been settled by chance, but by a wise rule, and in accordance with God's arrangement and design." COMMENTARY

W. Clarkson wrote, "He is the Divine Provider and Arranger of all human affairs (ver. 26). His intelligence has foreseen, and his wisdom directed everything." PULPIT COMMENTARY

J.W. McGarvey (Restoration Movement), wrote "These facts demonstrate his entire independence of human ministrations, and exhibit, in a most striking manner, the dependence of men upon him. They not only sustain the point of contrast presented by Paul, but they involve an assumption of the most special providence of God. By special providence, we mean providence in reference to individual persons and things. If God gives to all men life and breath and all things, he acts with reference to each individual man, to each individual breath that each man breathes, and to each particular thing going to make up all the things which he gives them. Again, if God appoints beforehand the "periods" of the nation (by which I understand all the great eras in their history,) and the "boundaries of their habitations," he certainly directs the movements of individual men; for the movements of nations depend upon the movements of the individual men of whom they are composed. Sometimes, indeed, the movements of one man, as of Christopher Columbus, determine the settlement of continents, and the destiny of mighty nations. In view of these facts, we must admit the most special and minute providence of God in all the affairs of earth. ACTS COMMENTARY

JOHN WESLEY (Methodism). "That it is God who gave men the earth to inhabit, Paul proves from the order of times and places, showing the highest wisdom of the Disposer, superior to all human counsels." COMMENTARY

I have taken the time to share these various comments by a diversity of men to show there is general agreement as to the meaning of the text. This indicates that the language itself is clear, leaving no room for doubt as to what this text actually says. Coupled with the various translations of the text, it is quite plain that the following is true.

- There is no happenstance reflected in the positioning of nations in time and place.
- A Divine determination was made before the world was created concerning when and where men would be placed.

Moses provided additional information on this matter in his valedictory address to Israel. There he spoke of the deliberate assignment of the bounds of the various people. "When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when He separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel" (Deut 32:8). Every major version reads the same way, confirming that there is Divine order in the placement of the various people groups, or nations, of the world. Now Paul will elaborate on the reason for this Divine arrangement.

Divine appointments of this kind should not cause us to stagger. God made the Garden of Eden, "and there He put the man whom He had formed" (Gen 2:8). God placed Israel in the land of Canaan, even driving out its former inhabitants (Gen 12:7; 13:15; 15:18; 17:8; Lev 25:38). The nations are categorically said to have been divided their inheritance by God Almighty, when He "set the bounds of the people” (Deut 32:8).

Once men comprehend that the Lord God “made the world and all things therein,” and that He is, in fact, “Lord of heaven and earth,” giving “to all life and breath, and all things,” this text should pose no difficulty for those who believe. If there is the slightest tendency to philosophize about this passage as though it encroached upon the imagined free will of men, that tendency is to be crucified, along with the rest of unprofitable flesh (John 6:63).

THE APPOINTED VOCATION OF MAN

“ 27 That they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us.”

The deliberate placement of the nations was in order to the fulfillment of a Divine objective. Here we see the primary activity in which men are to engage. The reason for the creation of man is seen in this objective, as well as the absolute seriousness of not pursuing this aim.

THAT THEY SHOULD SEEK THE LORD

“That they should seek the Lord...” Other versions read, “God did this so that men would seek Him,” NIV “so that they would search for God,” NRSV “might make search for God,” BBE “so that people would look for Him,” CJB “that they might inquire and search after God,” MRD “so that they might seek the deity,” NJB “His purpose was for the nations to seek after God,” NLT and “He wanted the people to look for Him” IE

The text teaches that the “all nations of men” were deliberately and specifically positioned by God in both time and location in order that they might “seek the Lord.” While this is no doubt true of individuals, the stress is placed on “nations,” – which is the organization of individuals with the intent to pursue legitimate interests, to subdue evil, and to promote good. Although the gathering of peoples together by no means eliminates self-centeredness, in a crude way it diminishes that kind of quest.

God Is Not Evident to Fallen Man

This statement also confirms that God is not evident to fallen men. Sin has raised a wall between men and God. While they are in the world, that wall actually protects them, for God being righteous finds unrighteous man contrary to His own nature, and therefore offensive.

God is Merciful and Gracious

Even though man is fallen, the God he has been placed to seek, is merciful and gracious. It is only because the Lord is “merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth” (Ex 34:6) that He has found a way to resolve the dreadful human dilemma.

In the Divine Image

Man – all men – have a distinct advantage in this quest: he has been created in the image of God (Gen 1:26,27; 9:6), in the glory of God (1 Cor 11:7), bears His similitude (James 3:9), is in His likeness (Gen 5:1), and is His offspring (Acts 17:29). Even though man has sinned and comes short of the glory of God, there is enough of the likeness remaining to promote a quest to “find” God, and men are expected to do so.

Deity in the Most Rudimentary Form

The Greek word translated “LORD” differs in the various Greek manuscripts. In some it is qeo,n

(God), and in others ku,rion (Lord). In both cases, the word preceded by the article “the,” signifying the quest for a single Deity. The words “God” and “Lord” are the most general terms for Deity, underscoring the Sovereignty and power of God, but providing no insight into His character or purpose. The idea here is not to come into the fellowship of God, but to come to the point where men acknowledge that “He is ” (Heb 11:6). Men will proceed no further in their quest for the Lord until this is acknowledged. In fact, it is that acknowledgment that causes individuals to maintain their quest.

This also postulates that all men have been made to think beyond themselves. However, sin has greatly reduced this capability, causing men to be more like the beasts of the earth than the One in whose image they were created.

An Environment Suitable for Seeking

This also confirms that an environment that has some semblance of order (i.e. “nations”) is conducive to the conclusion that Deity is at the helm of creation, including humanity. Even men lacking astuteness of thought recognize that order cannot result from chaos or randomness. This also postulates that all men have been made to think beyond themselves. However, sin has greatly reduced this capability, causing men to be more like the beasts of the earth than the One in whose image they were created.

The Environment of Creation

Over and above all of these considerations, the creation itself bears witness to God’s “eternal power and Godhead” (Deity). There is enough evidence for men to begin seeking, for “ The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth His handiwork” (Psa 19:1). Further, it is a consistent and universal witness. As it is written, “Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard” (Psa 19:2-3).

The Fact That Man Has Fallen Has Not Altered the Purpose of God.

Men may reason that the fallenness of man excuses him from the obligation to seek after the Lord. However, this is not so. The objective for mankind was not abandoned when sin and death entered into the world. Rather, all hope of man recovering himself was lost, requiring that the required recovery be instituted and carried out by God Himself. If this was not the case, there would be no point to a quest to find God. It is in the quest for God that men, in a manner of speaking, enter into the arena in which the purposes of God are carried out.

FEEL AFTER HIM AND FIND HIM

“ . . . if haply they might feel after him, and find him . . .” Other versions read, “grope for Him and find Him,” NKJV “reach out for Him and find Him,” NIV “if possible, to get knowledge of him and make discovery of him,” BBE “by means of his creations, might find him,” MRD “by feeling their way towards him, succeed in finding him,” NJB and “in the hope that they might feel after Him and find Him,” AMPLIFIED

As used here, the word “feel” is translated from a word meaning “mentally to seek after tokens of a person or thing,” THAYER and “grope one's way, like a person who is blind or in the dark,” FRIBERG The picture is that of men blinded by sin, feeling across the creation like a blind man gropes about a wall to find a door. According to appearance, if they found a door, it would be by mere happenstance, for there was no proof evident to them through any of their senses. However, in the Divine economy, it is quite another picture. God works in an environment where men are seeking Him. Jesus Himself said, “For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened” (Matt 7:8). This is not so merely because of the of human persistence. It is rather owing to the faithfulness of God, who desires to be found by those who seek Him.

What About “There Is None that Seeketh”?

Perusing the human race independently of Divine revelation, it is written, “there is none that seeketh after God” (Rom 3:11; Psa 14:2-3; 53:2-3). Apart from a Divine initiative toward men, this state would have continued uninterrupted. However, even at the threshold of history, God gave a revelation of the ultimate defeat of the devil (Gen 3:15). For those who were mindful of that word, a seeking spirit could be obtained. Apparently that is what took place during the time of Enosh, son of Seth. It is written that when he was born, “men began to call upon the name of the Lord” (Gen 4:26). Jewish chronology estimates that this took place about 235 years after the fall. I assume that because Seth was the offspring through whom the promised Seed would come, that God awakened his generation in this matter of seeking. If it is true that sin introduces moral and spiritual decline, it seems to me that this would be necessary.

God Revealed Himself to Individuals

Later, both Enoch and Noah “walked with God” (Gen 5:22-25; 6:9). Both of them were given revelations by God (Enoch – Jude 1:14-14; Noah – Gen 6:8,13-7:4; 8:15-17; 9:1-17). Later God revealed Himself to Abraham (Gen 12:1,7; 13:14-17; 15:1-21; 17:1-21, etc). The Lord also appeared to Jacob, revealing much to him (Gen 31:3; 35:10-13). God revealed to Moses that He had “appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob” (Ex 6:3). Centuries later David reminded the people of the covenant God “made with Abraham, and of His oath unto Isaac, and hath confirmed the same to Jacob” (1 Chron 16:16).

God Revealed Himself to Israel

Then, there was the covenant made with Israel, who were made the custodians of the Word of the Lord (Ex 34:27; Deut 29:1; Rom 9:4). Further, owing to their own sin, this people was scattered throughout the nations, taking their religion and customs with them (Psa 44:11; Jer 50:17; Ezek 6:8; 11:16; Zech 7:14).

Knowledge Dispersed Throughout the World

These revelations provided some incentive to seek the Lord in all who were told of them. The possibility of men feeling after God was enhanced with each revelation God gave of Himself. Add to this the fame of Solomon (1 Kgs 4:34; 10:1), the universal decree of Nebuchadnezzar concerning the true God (Dan 4:1-37), the universal decree of Darius concerning the Lord God (Dan 6:25-27), and the universal decree of Cyrus concerning his charge to see to it that the Temple was rebuilt (2 Chron 36:23; Ezra 1:2-4).

Note The Divine Objective Again

Once again, note the Divine objective: “So that they should seek God, in the hope that they might feel after Him and find Him.” AMPLIFIED God’s revealed purpose is for men to “find Him.” It is not to resolve the problems of the world. It is not for men to realize a happy life in this world, or to obtain what men refer to as success. The objective does not revolve around men, but around God. It is not for men to know themselves, but to know God. It is not for men to find their place, but to find God. That is the secret to the realization of every legitimate objective, and the appointed means through which all valid knowledge is acquired. This is made known in the Scriptural affirmation, “For with thee is the fountain of life: in thy light shall we see light” (Psa 36:9). That is, God, who Himself “is light” (1 John 1:5), clarifies everything else. What we must perceive is made perceivable by the knowledge of God Himself, so that when we “find” Him, the whole universe of knowledge is illumined. Although this may appear quite evident for those in Christ, this is largely unknown in modern Christian circles.

HE IS NOT FAR FROM EVERY ONE OF US

“ . . . though He be not far from every one of us.” Other versions read, “not far from each one of us,” NKJV “never far from any one of us,” GWN “not afar off from each one of us.” MRD

“Though”

The word “though” is significant in this text. It comes from the Greek word kai, toige , which has the following lexical meaning: “and yet, even,” FRIBERG “although and yet,” UBS “markers of concession, with the probable implication of an additional component of contrast - 'although, even though, and yet,” LOUW-NIDA and “and yet.” GINGRICH This is a word of contrast between the actual presence of the Lord and men’s lack of perception of Him. Their appointment is not to “feel after” a God that is far from them, or in some remote area, but the One who is nigh at hand, or right under their noses. Jesus declared the Kingdom of God to be of this order – in the midst of the people, yet undiscerned by them: “Neither shall they say, Lo here! or, lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you.” or “in your midst” NASB (Luke 17:21).

How is it possible for the great God of heaven to be “not far from every one of us,” and yet the human spirit be oblivious of His presence? It is because of the effects of sin. The separation of men from God is not one of space, but of consciousness, harmony, and sensitivity. The distance between God and man is one of hostility and variance. When it comes to seeking the Lord, men grope in moral and spiritual darkness, for the light of insight left them when sin entered into the world.

Note that Paul started his reasoning by pointing the Athenians to “nations of men.” Now, however, he speaks of “every one of us,” confirming that the quest to find God is one of personal responsibility – one from which no individual is exempt. Even though it appears to human logic hopeless, yet men are to feel after God, hoping to find Him. In order to fuel that desire, it is affirmed that God “is not far from every one of us,” so that men ought to hope to find him.

Behind the scenes, of course, God Himself is at work, orchestrating the affairs of men so that seekers will be assisted, and their paths crossed with men of spiritual understanding. If this postulate is true, then those who have not found God are the very ones who have not sought Him.

THE OFFSPRING OF GOD AND ITS IMPLICATIONS

“ 28 For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring. 29 Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.”

IN HIM

“For in Him . . .” Other versions read, “because of Him,” GWN “it is in closest union with Him,” WEYMOUTH “He gives us the power to,” CEV “Certainly we.” GW

This is a most marvelous statement. Even though sin has separated men from God consciously and experientially, yet there is a sense in which humanity remains associated with Him. Nearly all versions use the words “in Him.” There is a mystical tie between God and all men, so that their very existence is owing to Him. In Christ, this is enhanced with the added dimensions of fellowship, illumination, and guidance. But even apart from Christ, no man is totally divorced from God, and thus remains strictly accountable to Him. The details of this association is spelled out in the next clause.

WE LIVE, AND MOVE, AND HAVE OUR BEING

“ . . . we live, and move, and have our being . . . ” Other versions read, “live and move and exist,” NASB “have life, and motion, and existence,” BBE “live and move and are,” DOUAY “live, love, and exist because of Him,” GWN “live and move about and exist,” NET and “we live, we walk, we are.” IE

“We Live”

This has to do with the initiation and maintenance of life in the body . Scriptures refers to it as “the breath of life” (Gen 2:7; 6:17; 7:15,11). It also includes the capacities and abilities that are necessary to life such as eating, drinking, and general bodily functions. All of this takes place “in Him,” even though the vast majority of the human race are unaware of it. This mysterious union is expressed in the words of Abigail to David: “ . . . but the soul of my lord shall be bound in the bundle of life with the LORD thy God” (1 Sam 25:29). Other versions read “bundle of the living with the Lord.” NKJV/NASB/NIV The idea is that life exists because of identity with the Living God.

“We Move”

Moving has to do with our mobility, being able to adapt, carry out objectives, and be productive. It deals with the expressions in the body in particular, as well as the soul. It also has to do with the processes of the mind, where the greater mobility can be found. Moving from place to place, carrying out our objectives, being productive – they all are the expressions of life that is strictly owing to the God of heaven.

“We Have Our Being”

All personhood, if I may use that term, can be traced back to God, who is the ultimate Person. In the ordinary course of life in this world, our individuality is owing to our connection with God Almighty. At this point, this is not a redemptive association.

Humanity is not a mere mass of living creatures. It is comprised of individuals with unique traits. Our “being” includes our essential person – something that can be named, have a particular purpose, and fulfill personal objectives. David referred to his life, with all of its aims in these words: “while I have any being” (Psa 146:2). All personhood, if I may use that term, can be traced back to God, who is the ultimate Person. In the ordinary course of life in this world, our individuality is owing to our connection with God Almighty. At this point, this is not a redemptive association. However, redemption is for those who “live” and “move” and have their “being.”

WE ARE ALSO HIS OFFSPRING

“ as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring . . . ” Other versions read, “His children,” CJB “His generation,” GENEVA “From Him is our descent,” MRD and “the sons of God.” LIVING

Historians say this “poet” is “Aratus , , an Athenian, who lived almost three hundred years before this time. The words are also to be found, with the alteration of one letter only, in the hymn of Cleanthes to the Supreme Being, one of the purest and finest pieces of natural religion in the whole world of pagan antiquity.” ALBERT BARNES The view that this suggests Paul was a student of Grecian literature cannot be supported. This could very well have been a statement inscribed in some public place. It could also have been something to which those with whom he had debated had referred during the previous days. I do not know how a person could substantiate that a Jewish Pharisee was educated in the ways of the world, or how that would harmonize with the entire concept of God forming a people for himself. The fact that Paul was from Tarsus by no means suggests that he had taken advantage of its heathen school.

Tarsus

“In the time of Paul, Tarsus, the home of famous Stoic philosophers . . .” BRITANICA ENCY In his article, The Early Years of Saul of Tarsus, David Padfield writes, "The university of Tarsus was not as distinguished as the universities of some of the older cities. However, Strabo, the Greek historian, geographer, and philosopher, described Tarsus as having surpassed Athens, Alexandria, or any other place that can be named where there have been schools and lectures of Philosophers (Strabo, Geography, 14.5.13). However, there is not the slightest hint that Paul attended that university, even though many theologians are fond of saying he did. As for Paul himself, he associated his academic learning with Gamaliel, a strictly Jewish teacher, affirming that he had been “taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers” (Acts 22:3).

“Offspring”

The word “offspring” comes from the Greek word γενος. This word is not properly translated “children” or “sons.” It is a more general word. Of the twenty-one times it is used in Scripture, it is translated as follows. “Kind” (5 – Matt 13:47; 17:21; Mk 9:29; 1 Cor 12:10; 14:10), “Nation” (2 – Mk 7:26; Gal 1:14), “Kindred” (3 – Acts 4:6; 7:13,19), “Country” (1 – Acts 4:36); “Stock” (2 – Acts 13:26; Phil 3:5); “Offspring” (3 – Acts 17:28,29; Rev 22:16), “Born” (2 – Acts 18:2,24); “Diversities” (1 – 1 Cor 12:28); “Countrymen” (1 – 2 Cor 11:26) “Generation” (1 – 1 Pet 2:9).

The emphasis of this word is on a larger group than is perceived in the words “children” or “sons.” The idea is commonality with God rather than merely coming from God, or having commonality with one another. That is, the Divine image is found in men. They are in His likeness, although each one is characterized by individuality. Further, the likeness, or image, has been marred, but enough of it remains for it to be respected. In fact, God Himself spoke to Noah about how a murderer was to be treated. “Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed: for in the image of God made he man” (Gen 9:6). James said it was inappropriate to curse men “which are made after the similitude of God” (James 3:9).

You see, then, that man being in the image of God is a basis for sound reasoning. Paul therefore brings the matter of men being God’s offspring – a point from which He will reason with the Athenian philosophers.

A Point to Be Made

In our time there has been a departure from this form of reasoning within the professed church. People are now viewed through psychological glasses, which has led them to some erroneous and unprofitable ways of thinking. In my judgment, the seriousness of this departure cannot be overstated. The body of Christ should not allow its leaders to foist upon them views of humanity that fail to make much of the Divine imagery in men.

WHAT WE OUGHT NOT TO THINK

“Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device.” Other versions read, “we should not think,” NIV “it is not right for us to have the idea,” BBE “we shouldn’t suppose,” CJB “we shouldn't think,” CSB “we must not suppose,” DOUAY “we have no excuse for thinking,” NJB “So you must not think,” IE “we ought not to imagine,” WEYMOUTH and “we ought not to be thinking.” ALT

There are proper and improper ways of thinking. This becomes a most critical matter when it comes to the ideas men have about God Himself. God has never condoned erroneous views of Himself, and this is even more true now that the fullest revelation has been given of Him in Christ Jesus . Here is a realm where men are not permitted to philosophize. In fact, He reproved His people for NOT knowing Him (Psa 95:10; Isa 1:3; 5:12; 40:28; 45:4,5; Jer 4:22; Hos 5:4). The heathen were also rebuked for not knowing God (Psa 79:6).

Here Paul informs the Athenians that, in view of the fact that men have a certain identity with God through creation and sustenance, it is not right to think of Him as being like things men have crafted, Men are made, not God! Men have been formed, not God! By saying “the Godhead,” Paul means “Divinity,” DOUAY “the Divine nature,” NKJV or “Deity.” NRSV This refers to “God’s essence,” CJB or His ultimate and essential nature. This refers to who is He, versus His various attributes, which are perfectly consistent with who He is.

Associating God with Statuary

Idolatry is an attempt to Deify the perception of God, as compared with worshipping the Lord Himself. Idols made of gold and silver are an effort to display God as valuable, while stone accents solidity or permanence. However, the weakness of both forms is that they are not living – and there is no point to a lifeless God . Accepting the fact that men are God’s offspring ought to at least lead men to the conclusion that God Himself is living. Therefore, men “ought not to think of the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man’s device,” or “skill.” NIV Although the practice has been historically common, continuing until this day, man does not have the right to invent his own God.

Misconceptions of God Are Wrong

Misconceptions of God are always serious. Professing Christians ought to know this, for it was their former ignorance of God that alienated them from His life, accounting for their death in trespasses and sins (Eph 2:1; 4:18). In fact, being ignorant of God is a sin, from which men must be justified if they are to be saved. Also, in the end, the damnation of all who “know not God,” as well as “obey not the Gospel,” is certain (2 Thess 1:8). Further, in describing the Gentiles, their chief trait is that they “know not God” (1 Thess 4:5).

And what does it mean to “know not God” ? It is to be unfamiliar with His Person, His thoughts, and His ways (Isa 1:3; Jer 9:3; Psa 95:10; Isa 55:8-9),

The Example of Israel

For example, David extolled the Lord in the 95 th Psalm, contrasting Him with the despicable conduct of His own people. He stated that it appeared God was indifferent to the whole matter – yet, that was an erroneous assessment of the situation. “These things hast thou done, and I kept silence; thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself : but I will reprove thee, and set them in order before thine eyes” (Psa 50:21). Other versions read, “You thought that I was altogether like you,” NKJV “You thought I was just like you,” NASB “you thought I was one like yourself,” RSV “it seemed to you that I was such a one as yourself,” BBE “thou thoughtest unjustly that I should be like to thee,” DOUAY “That made you think I was like you,” GWN “thou thoughtest wickedly that I should be like thee,” SEPTUAGINT “Do you think that I am really like you?,” NJB and “you thought I was once entirely like you.” AMPLIFIED The flawed assessment of Israel worked against them. God declared of that situation, “But [now] I will reprove you and put [the charge] in order before your eyes.” AMPLIFIED

On another occasion Israel pondered their situation and concluded God had forgotten them: “Then said He unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great , and the land is full of blood, and the city full of perverseness: for they say , The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and the LORD seeth not” (Ezek 9:9; 8:12). What a tragic misconception, for the Lord continued, “And as for Me also, Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity, but I will recompense their way upon their head” (Ezek 9:10).

Zechariah also indicted Israel for their false view of God. “ And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are settled on their lees: that say in their heart, The LORD will not do good, neither will he do evil ” (Zeph 1:12).

The Reasoning of the Wicked

The Psalmist wrote of the wicked oppressing the righteous laying snares for them, boasting in their heart, and promoting covetous practices. Their erroneous perception of God drives their wicked ways. “He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten: He hideth His face; He will never see it . . . Wherefore doth the wicked contemn God? He hath said in his heart, Thou wilt not require it ” (Psa 10:11,13). Again they reason, “Yet they say, The LORD shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob regard it ” (Psa 94:7).

Some Modern Misconceptions

From this perspective, the vital issue is not what God thinks about us, but what we think about God. If that appears strange, consider that an ignorance of God alienates us from Him, and that men need to be reconciled to God if they are to be accepted by Him and experience His favor.

The flawed views of God that exist in any given generation always match the prevailing character of that generation. For example, a fundamentally self-centered society, such as the one in which we live, develops ideas about God that tend to condone their manners. The following statements represent a misapprehension of who God is. Yet they not only exist, but are increasing in their popularity.

- “God loves everyone the same.”
- “God’s love is unconditional.”
- “God can handle your sin.”
- “You cannot do anything that will make God love you less.”
- “God hates the sin but loves the sinner.”
- “God has a wonderful plan for your life.”
- “God loves you just the way you are.”
- “God wants you to realize all of your dreams.”
- “God wants you to have the best in this world.”
- “God’s longsuffering never runs out.”
- “There is no sin God cannot forgive.”
- “It is alright to be angry with God. He can handle that.”

It seems to me that this is a wholly inappropriate way to think about the God from whom we came, who gives life and breath and all things to us, and in whom we live, and move, and have our being. From this perspective, the vital issue is not what God thinks about us, but what we think about God. If that appears strange, consider that an ignorance of God alienates us from Him, and that men need to be reconciled to God if they are to be accepted by Him and experience His favor.

All of this will become increasingly apparent as we proceed through the message Paul delivers to the Athenian philosophers.

GOD HAS WINKED AT HUMAN IGNORANCE – BUT NO MORE

“ 30 And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent.”

According to the manner of the Kingdom, Paul not only points out the facts of the case, and what is not appropriate, but also provides the rationality of the whole matter. There are some things about God Himself and what He has purposed that does not allow for a continued ignorance of Himself and His ways. Further, in my judgment, many of the versions have done a miserable job in representing this verse. They smack more of philosophy than of a declaration of the truth.

Let it be clear that the basis for this statement concerning “ignorance” is the particular idolatry to which Paul initially referred: “an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD” (17:23).

TIMES OF IGNORANCE

“And the times of this ignorance . . .” Other versions read, “Those times when men had no knowledge,” BBE “the times when people didn't know any better,” GWN “the times of this error ,” MRD “such times of ignorance,” NET “such ignorance,” NJB “people’s ignorance about these things,” NLT “man’s past ignorance about these things,” LIVING “men didn’t understand God,” IE “those times of ignorance,” WEYMOUTH “such [former] ages of ignorance,” AMPLIFIED and “people did not know what they were doing.” CEV

The point here is that the ignorance the Athenians acknowledged in the altar to the unknown God belonged to a period that no longer existed. It was an age that was of necessity characterized by the ignorance of God. He was not known because He had not revealed Himself to the world at large. Even in its intellectually rudimentary form, the knowledge of God was deposited only with the Jews, coming in “the covenants, and the giving of the Law, and the service of God, and the promises” (Rom 9:4). The rest of the world was left in spiritual stupor. That ignorance was embodied in the phrase “unknown God.” However, not only had the Athenians, and others before them, acknowledged this ignorance, but even worshiped it, rearing up an altar to the God they did not know.

WINKING AT TIMES OF IGNORANCE

“ . . . God winked at . . .” Other versions read, “overlooked,” NKJV “regarded not,” GWN “God hath made to pass away,” MRD “tolerated,” LIVING “ignored,” IE “view with indulgence,” WEYMOUTH “ignored and allowed to pass unnoticed,” AMPLIFIED and “forgave all this.” CEV

The words “winked at” are translated from a single Greek word (u`peridw.n), which means “to overlook, take no notice of, not attend to,” THAYER The idea is that of God’s scanning eye, “running to and fro throughout the whole earth” (2 Chron 16:9). It is written, “The LORD looketh from heaven; he beholdeth all the sons of men” (Psa 33:13). However, in times past, when He was confronted with those who were ignorant of Him, He “winked,” not beholding the condition with His piercing vision. The word “ignored” is not an appropriate description of this circumstance, for that postulates looking at a thing, yet not considering it. However, that is not the kind of action being described. The point here is that God did NOT look on the condition, but rather closed His eye, so to speak, to the situation. This was done because the nature of God is agitated, awakening His wrath, when He is not known. This will be confirmed in the day when the Lord Jesus comes in all of His glory, destroying those who “know not God” (2 Thess 1:8).

Although it appeared as though God was tolerating this ignorance, or overlooking it, or even indulging it, that was not the case at all. In a grand display of mercy, He refused to look straight at that condition. That is the only reason He did not deal extensively with the heathen prior to the coming of Christ, holding them accountable for their ignorance of Himself.

However, wherever God had revealed Himself, He did not “wink” at the ignorance of the people. He said of His own people Israel, “My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge : because thou hast rejected knowledge , I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to Me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children” (Hosea 4:6). He declared that He had “a controversy with the inhabitants of the land” of Israel, because there was “no knowledge of God in the land” (Hos 4:1). Having invested in them, and revealing Himself to them, He desired to see “the knowledge of God” in them (Hos 6:6). He did not “wink” at their dulness. He said of them, “they know not Me” (Jer 9:3), He had spoken to them, but they did not hearken, or incline their ear to Him (Jer 7:26). He did not wink at their ignorance!

BUT NOW

“ . . . but now commandeth all men every where to repent.” Other versions read, “God is now declaring to men that all everywhere should repent,“ NASB “now He commandeth men that they should all everywhere repent,” ASV “now He gives orders to all men in every place to undergo a change of heart,” BBE “now He is commanding all people everywhere to turn to him from their sins,” CJB “now enjoins men that they shall all everywhere repent,” DARBY “now He admonisheth all men every where to repent,” GENEVA “doth now command all men everywhere to reform,” YLT “now He commands everyone to put away idols and worship only Him,” LIVING “God commands every person in the world to change his heart,” IE and “now He charges all people everywhere to repent (to change their minds for the better and heartily to amend their ways, with abhorrence of their past sins).” AMPLIFIED

The words “but now” have strictly to do with what the Lord has done. It marks the time when God intervened into history in such a way as to impact the eternal destiny of men. This has nothing to do with the supposed improvement of man – something that is inherent in the theory of evolution and the social sciences. Man has no power to change the times, so that we can say “but now.” Here, “now” is the time following the death, burial, resurrection, enthronement, and intercessory ministry of Jesus. From the standpoint of the children of God, this is the time of the mediatorial ministry of Jesus. From the standpoint of the government of God, this is the time of the reign of Jesus who is bringing all of the sons to glory.

The ignorance of God may appear to have been tolerated until “now.” Actually, God was not looking at it, winking until the time when Jesus would take away the sins of the world, thereby enabling God to reveal Himself more fully. What was not demanded from all men before, IS demanded of them now.

Repent!

Now that heaven as moved to clarify the human situation, provide a God honoring response, and enjoy Divine acceptance, men are commanded to repent. This is not an option, or a mere suggestion – and it is at the ground level of things having to do with man’s acceptance by God Almighty: “REPENT!”

Now, I suppose there have been so many efforts to define the word “repent” that it appears futile to make any effort to do so once again. However, because of the gravity of this text, and its absolute essentiality of what it demands, it will be good to test our own ideas on the matter.

The Academic Approach

First, let’s dispense with the academic approach. There are certainly some things to be gleaned here, even though they are, in a sense, secondary. The word “repent,” as used in this text, is translated from the Greek word metanoei/n . The lexical meaning of the word is, “to change one’s mind . . . to change one's mind for the better, heartily to amend with abhorrence of one's past sins,” THAYER “change one's mind, be converted . . . as feeling remorse regret, feel sorry," FRIBERG "have a change of heart, turn from one's sins, change one's ways," UBS "to change one's way of life as the result of a complete change of thought and attitude with regard to sin and righteousness - 'to repent, to change one's way," LOUW-NIDA "to change one's mind or purpose" LIDDELL-SCOTT

The tense of the word is "present active infinitive," which means it is a "permanent command of perpetual force." ROBERTSON That is, this speaks of a manner of life that is initiated, and continues in force. In other words, whatever produced the need for repentance must cease to take place.

The word "repent" involves the following facets.

- POINTING TOWARD GOD. Turning toward God.
- NEW ESSENTIAL THOUGHT PATTERNS. A change of mind for the better.
- CORRECTION OF MANNERS. The amending of life that is attended with an abhorrence of the sins that required repentance.
- A NEW DIRECTION. The manner, way, or direction of one's life is altered, placing it in alignment with the will of God.
- NEW MANNER OF THINKING. A completely new way of thinking concerning both sin and righteousness.
- NEW PURPOSE FOR LIVING. The change of the purpose for living.
- CHANGE OF FOCUS. A change of heart.
- NEW ATTITUDE TOWARD SIN. Turning away from sin.

The change involved in repentance includes the seen and unseen parts of men. It is not possible for there to be an inward change, but no outward change. Where such a thing is professed, the problem still exists within – the problem that alienated men from God in the first place.

Before Jesus came into the world, the Lord sent one to prepare the way for Him. Several hundred years before that time, God revealed to the prophets this was going to happen. One would come described as "of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the LORD, make straight in the desert a highway for our God" (Isa 40:3). And how would the way be prepared for the Lord. What kind of highway would be reared up that would lead men to God? When that messenger came, he was specifically identified as John the Baptist. Matthew wrote of him that he came "preaching in the wilderness of Judea," just as Isaiah had said. His message was, "REPENT ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matthew then records, "For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight" (Matt 3:3). Jesus followed John, preaching the same message: "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, REPENT: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt 4:17). During Christ's prodigious ministry He told the people, "except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13:3,5).

Repentance was not the way to receive Jesus, but was rather what was necessary to PREPARE for Him. This is also what Peter told the people on the day of Pentecost. The first thing they were to do was "REPENT." Then, and only then, were they to "be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38). Peter told another group a short while later, "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord" (Acts 3:19). He added the word "be converted," accenting the necessity of change prior to one's sins being blotted out – at least that is what He said: "that your sin may be blotted out." Other versions read, "so that your sins may be wiped out." NIV/NRSV

People must be told that they are expected to change their manner of life before they are baptized into Christ. God's people, on the other hand, are to be wise enough to be able to discern the evidence that this has taken place.

Furthermore, the change that is wrought by repentance is to be observable. This is why John the Baptist told the Pharisees and Sadducees who came to be baptized, “But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance,” or “fruit in keeping with repentance” NASB (Matt 3:7-8). The Amplified Bible reads, “fruit that is consistent with repentance [let your lives prove your change of heart].” These men refused to change, as Luke confirmed when He wrote, “But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him” (Luke 7:30).

Understanding that men, with their traditions, can expand this requirement beyond all boundaries of reason, it is still a word that is to be heeded. People must be told that they are expected to change their manner of life before they are baptized into Christ. God’s people, on the other hand, are to be wise enough to be able to discern the evidence that this has taken place.

Paul required of the Athenians the same action that took place in Thessalonica. They the people “turned to God from idols” (1 Thess 1:9). That is, they moved from their allegiance to, and worship of, idols in order to come to God. I gather this means they ceased being idolaters at that precise point, else the text makes no sense at all.

If those charged with warning the people, clearly informing them of God’s requirements, do not do so, the unwarned will die in their iniquity, but it will be required at the hands of those given the work of warning. This is the meaning of God’s word to Ezekiel: “Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at My mouth, and give them warning from Me. When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul” (Ezek 3:18-19).

The professing church could do much better in this regard. To often they have emphasized coming to the Lord as the people are. That may have a pleasant sound to it, but I do not know what word of God can be used to justify such an emphasis. We may come weary and heavy laden, or with ashes on our heads and mourning, but we dare not come to Him without making a hearty effort to eliminate from our lives what alienated us from Him in the first place. Rest assured, that conscientious efforts to come away from things that repel the Lord will be matched with the strength to required for the task. It will be like the woman with the issue of blood pressing through the crowd, the man with a withered hand stretching it out, or a paralyzed man on a pallet extending himself to pick up his bed and stand up.

THE PROSPECT OF THE DAY OF JUDGMENT

“ 31 Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead.”

BECAUSE

“Because . . .” Other versions read, “for,” NIV “inasmuch,” ASV “seeing that,” WEYMOUTH and “since.” WILLIAMS

The word translated “because” is the Greek word dio,ti . Some alternate Greek manuscripts use the word kaqo,ti . A review of the meanings of these words confirm they mean about the same thing.

dioti means “on this account, that, because,” THAYER AND “because, for that, inasmuch as.” FRIBERG kaqoti means “according to what . . . because that, because.” THAYER “because, in view of the fact that,” FRIBERG

The fact that God has “commanded all men everywhere to repent” should be enough incentive to do so. However, this is the day of salvation, when more information is given, and strong reasons and incentives are provided. Once what is here proclaimed is grasped by faith, failing to repent is nothing less than an act of insanity.

AN APPOINTED DAY

“ . . . He hath appointed a day . . .” Other versions read, “fixed a day,” NASB “set a day,” NIV and “established a day.” NAB

Who but God can do such a thing as this – appoint a day on which something will occur – then bring it to pass at the precisely appointed time? Keep in mind that Satan himself, together with principalities, powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, spiritual wickedness in high places, and demons are eager to thwart this day. If they thought they could abort the mission of Jesus, I do not doubt they also are seeking to forestall this day, even though they know their end is coming.

In the process of revealing Himself to Israel, God pointed to His ability in the matter of appointments. Right here it ought to be said that the word “ability” is a rather crude word when referring to the Lord. With God, ability has to do with His nature. It is not with God as it is with man, who have to develop their abilities. Divine aptitude does not improve with use. Contrary to some theological views, God is not growing, maturing, or in any way advancing in His Personhood. It is the revelation of God that increases, not His Person. In this matter of ability, or power, the Lord said to Israel, “Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done , saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all My pleasure: Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth My counsel from a far country: yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it ” (Isa 46:9-11). While this text is specifically speaking of the Divine summoning of Nebuchadnezzar to do His work at a specific time, the point is that, unlike all other gods, and man himself God was ABLE to do this. He can appoint something for the future, then cause it to take place at the exact time He appointed without any modification, adjustment, or compromise. Further, He confirmed this in several different ways. Here is a brief sampling.

- Noah entered the ark on the very day God had appointed, as revealed to him one hundred and twenty years earlier (Gen 7:3).
- God appointed the time of Isaac’s birth (Gen 18:14).
- God appointed the set time of the plagues in Egypt (Ex 9:5).
- Israel was delivered from Egyptian bondage on the precise day God had appointed (Ex 12:51).
- God appointed the defeat of the good counsel of Ahithophel (2 Sam 7:10).

Everyone will eventually confront the God who made them – and they will all do it together, and at an appointed time. This makes perfect sense in view of what Paul has said to this point.

False gods are not noted for speaking, let alone making appointments. Within the context of the consideration of the true God, it is said of idols, “But our God is in the heavens: he hath done whatsoever he hath pleased. Their idols are silver and gold, the work of men's hands. They have mouths, but they speak not : eyes have they, but they see not : They have ears, but they hear not :

noses have they, but they smell not : They have hands, but they handle not : feet have they, but they walk not: neither speak they through their throat” (Psa 115:3-7).

However, this is not true of the God that Paul proclaims. He has already told the Athenians of the true God who is “unknown” to them,

- CREATOR OF THE WORLD. “ Made the world and all things therein” (17:24a).
- SOVEREIGN. “ Is Lord of heaven and earth” (17:24b).
- SELF-SUFFICIENT. Is not “worshiped with men’s hands as though He needed anything ” (17:25a).
- GIVES. “ Giveth to all life, and breath, and all things” (17:25b).
- MADE THE NATIONS FROM ONE MAN. “Hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on the face of the earth” (17:26a).
- DETERMINES AND APPOINTS. “Hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation” (17:26b).
- OMNIPRESENT. “ Is not far from every one of us” (17:27).
- SOURCE OF LIFE. “ In Him we live, and move, and have our being” (17:28).
- BEGETS. “We are His offspring ” (17:28).
- CHOOSES NOT TO RESPOND. Has “ winked ” at “the times of this ignorance” of Himself, as displayed in the Athenian altar to “the unknown God” (17:30).
- COMMANDS. “Now commands all men everywhere to repent” (17:30).

Now, that is the kind of God that not only makes appointments, but has the right to make them, and the power to bring them to pass as well. Paul now reveals precisely why all men have been commanded to repent. Everyone will eventually confront the God who made them – and they will all do it together, and at an appointed time. This makes perfect sense in view of what Paul has said to this point: (1) God made the world and everything in it. (2) God made man. (3) God placed man where He wanted him in both time and location. (4) God gives life and breath and all things, (5) Man was created and placed in order to seek the Lord. (6) Man lives and moves and has his being in God. (7) Man is appropriately called “the offspring of God.” It is perfectly reasonable, therefore, that he should be judged by God.

JUDGING THE WORLD IN RIGHTEOUSNESS

“ . . . in the which He will judge the world in righteousness . . . ” Other versions read, “judge the world with justice,” NIV “have the world judged in righteousness,” NRSV “the world will be judged in righteousness,” BBE “judge the inhabited world, and do it justly,” CJB “judge the world in equity,” DOUAY “judge all the earth with righteousness,” MRD “the whole world will be judged in uprightness,” NJB “judge the world according to righteousness,” TNT “justly judging the world,” LIVING “judge the whole world. He will be fair,” IE and “judge the world’s people with fairness.” CEV

As I understand it, the greater context of this judgment in righteousness will take into consideration the times during which the ones being judged lived. Those, for example, who lived during the period of the New Covenant will not be judged like those who lived during the days of Noah.

“The World”

Some of the versions butcher this verse, not giving the true sense of it at all: “the inhabited world.” CJB “inhabitable earth.” DARBY Even though the word translated “world” (oivkoume,nhn) means

“the inhabited earth,” THAYER , here it is used “by metonymy,” to mean “the inhabitants of the earth, men,” “as the inhabitants of the world humanity, mankind, people,” FRIBERG “mankind,” UBS and “World in the sense [of] humankind.” GINGRICH The idea is that God will judge the ones whose appointed residence was the world, or earth, where they were placed in order to seek Him. This will include all of the earth’s inhabitants from Adam to the end of the world.

Prior to the coming of Christ as the Savior of the world, God revealed this judgment – the judgment of the world.

- “Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein. Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the LORD, because He cometh to judge the earth ” (1 Chron 16:32-33; Psa 96:12-13).

- “Let the floods clap their hands: let the hills be joyful together before the LORD; for He cometh to judge the earth : with righteousness shall he judge the world, and the people with equity” (Psa 98:8-9).

- “For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil” (Eccl 12:14).

- “I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened” (Dan 7:9-10).

When Jesus walked among men, He made pointed references to “the day of judgment” (Matt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; Mk 6:11). Among the Jews, who were custodians of the Word of God, this was common knowledge. The apostles were given to see its truth more fully, and thus expounded some of the rationale behind it (Rom 2:2-3; 14:10; 2 Cor 5:10; Heb 9:27; 2 Pet 2:9; 3:7; 1 John 4:17; Jude 1:6).

“In Righteousness”

The judgment of the world will be in strict accord with righteousness – true righteousness, or God’s righteousness. There will be no favoritism or respect of persons. The bar of righteousness will not be lowered for anyone. There will be no such thing as a people who “are sinners like everyone else, just forgiven.” God will not abandon His character when He judges every offspring of Adam that ever inhabited the earth. He will not compromise His righteousness. He will not overlook what He has said He hates, or refuse to honor what He has said He loves.

As I understand it, the greater context of this judgment in righteousness will take into consideration the times during which the ones being judged lived. Those, for example, who lived during the period of the New Covenant will not be judged like those who lived during the days of Noah. Those who have heard the Gospel will not be judged with the same criteria as those who have not heard it. Those who had access to the vast reservoir of the wisdom in Christ Jesus will not be judged like those who did not have access to it. Those who lived in the blazing glory of the reign of the Son of God will not be judged like those who had only the creation for a witness. Those who were given much will not be judged in the same way as those who were given little. Those who had many opportunities will not be evaluated as those who had few. Those in Christ will not be judged with the same expectation as those who lived when such a benefit was not possible.

The appointed judgment will not be according to men’s moral standards, or their concept of right and wrong, but in strict accord with God’s righteousness, of which Christ is the embodiment.

THAT MAN

“ . . . by that man whom He hath ordained . . . ” Other versions read, “Man whom He hath appointed,” NASB “Man who has been marked out by Him for this work,” BBE “Man whom He has designated,” CJB “a man to do this. He chose this man a long time ago,” IE “ man whom He has predestined to this work,” WEYMOUTH and “a Man Whom He has destined and appointed for that task.” AMPLIFIED

This is something the prophets did not stress – that a “Man” would judge the world. The reference, of course, is to the Lord Jesus Christ, whom God has appointed to judge all men. How often the Scriptures make a point of this.

- JESUS WILL REWARD EVERY MAN. “For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works” (Matt 16:27).

- ALL NATIONS WILL BE GATHERED BEFORE HIM FOR THE FINAL SEPARATION. “When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats” (Mat 25:31-32).

- THE FATHER HAS GIVEN ALL THINGS INTO CHRIST’S HAND. “The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand” (John 3:35).

- JUDGEMENT HAS BEEN COMMITTED TO THE SON. “For the Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son” (John 5:22).

- THE SON HAS BEEN GIVEN AUTHORITY TO EXECUTE JUDGMENT. “And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man” (John 5:27).

- GOD ORDAINED JESUS TO BE THE JUDGE. “And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify that it is he which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead” (Acts 10:42).

- JESUS WILL JUDGE THE SECRETS OF MEN. “In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel” (Rom 2:16).

- THERE IS THE JUDGMENT SEAT OF CHRIST. “But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou set at nought thy brother? for we shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ” (Rom 14:10). “For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10).

- JESUS WILL JUDGE THE LIVING AND THE DEAD AT HIS APPEARING. “I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom” (2 Tim 4:1).

Here, the assurance is not that Jesus has raised from the dead – although that is certainly true for all who trust in Him. It is rather the confidence and sureness of the determined day of judgment that is the point.

This is a most gracious provision for men – that they will be judged by “the Man” who was “tempted in all points like as we are” (Heb 4:15). He “suffered being tempted” (Heb 2:18), and “endured the contradiction of sinners” (Heb 12:3). This will not mitigate the fact that judgment will be according to righteousness. It does, however, give a decided advantage to those who have lived by faith and walked in the Spirit.

These days there is not a lot of preaching concerning Jesus judging the world, or of Him being ordained to do so. Peter told those at the house of Cornelius that God had commanded them to testify that God had ordained Jesus to “be the judge of the quick [living] and the dead” (Acts 10:42). On the day of judgment, it will certainly not go well for those who represented themselves as speaking for God if they ignored that word.

THE ASSURANCE GIVEN

“ . . . whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead.” Other versions read, “furnished proof,” NASB “given proof,” NIV “given a sign,” BBE “giving the proof of it all,” DARBY “giving faith to all,” DOUAY “he turneth every man to faith in Him,” MRD “provided confirmation,” NAB “publicly proved,” NJB and “offered faith to all men.” PNT

The word “assurance” is translated from the Greek word πιστις, which is ordinarily translated “faith.” This Greek word, in this precise form, is used fourteen times in the Gospels, and is always translated “faith” (Matt 8:10; 9:2,29; 17:20; 21:21; 23:23; Mk 2:5; 4:40; 11:22; Lk 7:9; 17:5,6). The book of Acts uses the same word three times, two of them are translated “faith” (14:9; 20:21) and in our text it is translated “assurance” (17:31). The Epistles contain this word forty times. In Titus 2:10, it is translated “fidelity” (“faith” in the NASB). In the other thirty-nine verses, it is translated “faith” (Rom 1:17; 3:3; 14:22; 1 Cor 13:2; Gal 1:23; 3:23; Eph 1:15; Col 1:4; 1 Thess 3:5,6; 1 Tim 1:19; 5:8,12; 6:11,21; 2 Tim 2:18,22; 3:8; 4:7; Tit 1:1,4; Phil 1:5; Heb 11:7,13; 13:7; James 2:1,14,18; 1 Pet 1:21; 2 Pet 1:1). The book of the Revelation contained the word three times, and all of them are translated “faith” (Rev 2:13,19; 14:12).

There is sound reasoning for the use of the word “assurance” in most of the versions. The point being made in the text is that men can now be confident of the reality of the day of judgment. Faith itself is not the point, but the conviction and assurance that it works in the heart concerning the day of judgment. The idea is that once death had been conquered, the surety of the day of judgment was firmly fixed, for “It is appointed unto men once to die, and after this the judgment” (Heb 9:27). Here, the assurance is not that Jesus has raised from the dead – although that is certainly true for all who trust in Him. It is rather the confidence and sureness of the determined day of judgment that is the point. In other words, from the viewpoint of the listeners, the Man ordained by God to execute the judgment of the world has been raised from the dead, and is fully qualified and ready to commence with it at the appointed time. The only ones who lack readiness are men living in the world. At the time, Paul is stressing that this includes the Athenians in particular.

When He walked among men in the flesh, Jesus told the people, “An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth” (Mat 12:39-40). The raising of Jesus from the dead was that sign. For those to whom Jesus was speaking, it was the sign that He was, in truth, the Son of God. For the Athenians, it was the proof that He was really going to judge the world in righteousness.

In other words, the resurrection was the portal through which all men would enter the day of judgment. It was also the means through which Jesus entered into the role of the Judge of all men.

Paul’s approach to this correlated perfectly with what he had been publically declaring: “Jesus and the resurrection” (Acts 17:18). In other words, the resurrection was the portal through which all men would enter the day of judgment. It was also the means through which Jesus entered into the role of the Judge of all men.

The only reasonable thing to do now, was to prepare for that inevitable day by aggressively seeking God, inquiring into the identity of the appointed “Man.”

SOME MOCKED, SOME WANTED TO HEAR MORE, BUT PAUL DEPARTED

“ 32 And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked: and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter. 33 So Paul departed from among them.”

The Athenians had asked to hear more of the message Paul had been preaching – more of the reasoning that supported it, and the foundation upon which it was resting. They were intending to view the whole matter philosophically as they had other new messages that had been brought to Athens. However, this message will be different, for it will declare a reality that is foreign to them – something that only faith can grasp. We will now read of the immediate response of the people – a response that was expressed while Paul was yet upon Mars Hill.

SOME MOCKED

“And when they heard of the resurrection of the dead, some mocked . . .” Other versions read, “began to sneer,” NASB “scoffed,” NRSV “made sport of it,” BBE “began to ridicule him,” CSB “began joking about it,” GWN “burst out laughing,” NJB and “laughed in contempt.” NLT

Keep in mind that Paul had been speaking of weighty matters.

- The creation of the world and all with it (17:24).
- The nature of God (17:24).
- The worship of God (17:25).
- The maintenance of the world and everything in it (17:25).
- The creation of man (17:26).
- The purpose for man’s placement in time and location (17:27).
- The closeness of God to every man (17:27).
- The absolute dependency of man upon God (17:28).
- The fact that man is God’s offspring – a fact certain of their own poets acknowledged (17:28).
- Why idols are unreasonable, even from a human point of view (17:29).
- The fact that God no longer tolerates an ignorance of Himself (17:30).
- The fact that God commands all men everywhere to repent (17:30).
- The fact that God has appointed a day in which all men will be judged (17:31).
- The fact that judgment will be strictly according to righteousness or uprightness (17:31).
- The fact that this judgment will be executed by a Man who has been raised from the dead, and is ready to proceed with that judgment (17:31).

Now, any one of these considerations is worthy of sober and extended thoughts, to say nothing of them all. Yet, there were some who, when they heard the words, “hath raised Him from the dead” (Paul’s last words), completely disregarded everything that he had said. With disdain, they rejected what had been said, scoffing as though someone without a sound mind had been speaking to them. Their erroneous philosophies had made no room for such a teaching, so they thought that it was foolish. It did not blend in with their manner of thought, so they mocked, scoffed, and jeered at Paul as though he was nothing more than a demented Jew.

Even though the nature and content of the message by no means encouraged a delayed response, these men treated it as a mere intellectual novelty. They were like Felix who told Paul, “Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee”

Of course, this is the way of the flesh, which considers the things of God to be “foolishness” (1 Cor 2:14). Let a skeptic find a single statement he feels is folly, and he will reject the whole of the revelation of God. That is why people do not believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. That is why some who feign association with Christ refuse to live wholly for Him. He has said or required something that does not fit into their way of thinking. Oh, they do not always scoff as the Athenians. Sometimes they simply “deny Him” in their “works,” “being abominable, and disobedient, and unto every good work reprobate” (Titus 1:16). Such people are to be classed with these jeering Athenian philosophers.

WE WILL HEAR THEE AGAIN

“ . . . and others said, We will hear thee again of this matter.” Other versions read, “we want to hear you again on this subject,” NIV “Let us go more fully into this another time,” BBE “We'll hear you talk about this some other time,” GWN and “We should like to hear you on this some other time.” NAB

Even though the nature and content of the message by no means encouraged a delayed response, these men treated it as a mere intellectual novelty. They were like Felix who told Paul, “Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee” (Acts 24:25). Paul said no more to him, and there is no record that Felix ever called for him. Those who treat the message with this kind of polite disdain will have it taken from them. It ought to be noted that this kind of response is quite common in the churches. That is the reason for scheduling convenient and infrequent gatherings where the truth of God is to be proclaimed.

PAUL DEPARTED

“ . . . So Paul departed from among them.” Other versions read, “At that, Paul left the Council,” NIV “At that point Paul left them,” NRSV “So Paul went out from among them,” RSV “so Paul went away from among them,” BBE “With this response, Paul left the court,” GWN “That ended Paul's discussion with them,” NLT and “That ended Paul's discussion with them.” MONTGOMERY

The word “depart” means that Paul left under his own initiative and accord. He saw no further reason to remain, or to schedule some future meeting. The Athenian philosophers had responded to his message, and now he reacts to their response by leaving the premises. Jesus frequently did the same thing, getting up and leaving certain places (Matt 4:12; 11:1; 13:53; 14:13; 19:1; Mk 5:20; 6:46; Lk 4:42; 4:43; 6:15).

Jesus did not alter His conduct in order to be popular with the people, or to indulge their lethargic spirits. You will find the apostles also reacted in this manner when sufficient interest in the truth was not perceived. An interest in truth determines how much he is given.

SOME BELIEVED AND CLAVE TO HIM

“ 34 Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.”

Although the level of interest did not justify Paul continuing with the philosophers, and ultimately in Athens itself, his labor was not in vain. There were some who refused to leave him.

CERTAIN CLAVE TO HIM AND BELIEVED

“Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed . . .” Other versions read, “some men joined him and believed,” NKJV “a few men became followers of Paul and believed,” NIV “and became believers,” NRSV “gave him their support,” BBE “stayed with him and came to trust,” CJB “adhering to him, did believe,” DOUAY “attached themselves to him and became believers,” NJB and “were on his side and joined him and believed (became Christians).” AMPLIFIED

The word “clave” means “to glue together . . . fasten firmly together . . . to join oneself to, cleave.” THAYER This is the word used to report an angel telling Phillip to “join” himself to the chariot of the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:29). It is translated “keep company” in Acts 10:28, where Peter said it was unlawful for a Jew to keep regular company with someone from another nation. Paul used it when admonishing believers to “cleave to that which is good” (Rom 12:9). It is used in First Corinthians 6:16 to describe someone who is “joined to the Lord.”

The idea here is that these “certain men” did not simply shake Paul’s hand and walk a brief distance with him. Rather, they followed him and would not leave him. They stuck with him, unwilling to be separated from him. As has been mentioned in earlier texts, this was a common response of those who believed the word of the Gospel (Acts 2:42; 10:48; 13:43; 16:15,34).

I have noted over the years a certain consistency in those who are growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. They are always eager for an extended exposure to the truth. I have also noted that those with meager appetites rarely, if ever, display any growth in Christ Jesus.

DIONYSUS, DAMARIS, AND OTHERS WITH THEM

“ . . . among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.”

AN AEROPAGITE

“A member of the court of AREOPAGUS. This, as constituted by Solon, consisted of the nine archons (chief magistrates) for the year, and the ex-archons. The latter became members for life; but before their admission, they were submitted, at the close of their annual magistracy, to a rigid scrutiny into their conduct in office and their private morals. Proof of criminal or unbecoming conduct was sufficient also afterward to expel them.”

McCLINTOK & STRONG’S

The two people who are named were probably significant people in the area. An “Aeopagite” was a member of the high court or council, previously described as the “Areopagus.” That council was comprised of men of noble character, noted for their wisdom. History affirms that by the appointment of Solon “the nine archons [chief magistrates of the court] became for the remainder of their lives Areopagites, provided they had well discharged the duties of their archonship, were blameless in their personal conduct, and had undergone a satisfactory examination.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S Dionysius, then, was an esteemed and noted man in Athens.

The fact that only one of the council is said to have joined himself to Paul and believed confirms that “not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called” (1 Cor 1:26). It is not that the truth of God has nothing for men of mental aptitude. Rather, it is that the wisdom of the world, not those with gifted minds, causes the Truth to appear foolish by way of comparison. However, where a keen intellect is joined with a humble spirit, the things of God will draw at the heart, supplying food for thought and cogitation that transcend all that the world has to offer. I have long been chagrined by those who attempt to speak

ABOUT DIONYSIUS

“Eusebius (Hist. Ecclesiastes 3, 40, and 4:23) tells that Dionysius of Corinth names "Dionysius the Areopagite" (whom Luke has recorded in the Acts) as the first bishop of the Church in Athens. Suidas gives a fuller account, according to which Dionysius was born in Athens, studied there and in Egypt, and became eminent for learning; and while at Heliopolis, in Egypt, seeing an eclipse of the sun, he exclaimed to a friend, "Either the Deity is suffering, or sympathizing with some sufferer;" and this eclipse took place at the time of the death of Christ. Returning to Athens, he became an Areopagite, was converted under Paul's discourse, and was made bishop of Athens by Paul. So far Suidas. On the authority of Aristides the Apologist he is said to have suffered martyrdom at Athens."

of the things of God in dumbed-down speech, appealing to only the most crude and uncultured minds. You may be sure that these Athenian philosophers who heard Paul speaking in the public, would not have inquired further into some simplistic and juvenile presentation of the things of God. I do not know how one could really begin to develop such a presentation on the grand themes of Jesus and the resurrection.

"A woman named Damaris" is also mentioned. Neither Scripture nor history supply any further information about this woman – yet God saw fit to mention her. Apparently she was also an individual capable of profound thought. How else could you account for her being interested in pursuing a message concerning Jesus and the resurrection. What kind of appeal does the day of judgment have to a person not given to thought, deliberation, and the pursuit of the truth?

Luke then adds, "and others with them." Other versions read, "and a number of others," NIV and "some other people." GWN Although not inherent in the word "others," that word can suggest the additional people were not as aggressive in their pursuit of the truth as were Dionysius and Damaris. The word itself is translated from a Greek word meaning "one not of the same nature, form, class, kind, different." THAYER Rather than the difference being in their interest of the truth, it appears to me that these were not members of the high court, not having the same cultural status as the two who are mentioned, yet having an unrelenting interest in the truth Paul was proclaiming. These additional people also joined themselves to Paul, followed him, and "believed." That is, they were convinced of the truth that Paul had declared, and embraced it with their hearts. They also sought for more exposure to the truth. I do not doubt that Paul opened many other things to them. Although they were but a handful of people amidst the teeming multitudes of Athens, now they were the first fruits unto God from that region, even as "Epaenetus," who was "the firstfruits of Achaia unto Christ" (Rom 16:5). They were among the "few" that are chosen from among the "many" who are called. While they remained with Paul, Paul remained no longer with those remaining members of the Areopagus.

CONCLUSION

GOD IN ACTS 17:22-31

In closing, I want to briefly encapsulate the marvelous message Paul delivered to this group of astute intellects. The particular point I want to stress is his emphasis upon Deity. Those familiar with the writings of Paul know that this was true of everything he wrote, as well as the records of everything he said.

This is representative of preaching with a proper perspective. The only reference Paul makes to the Athenian culture is the public display of its ignorance of God. He honors their pursuit of Deity, but does not recognize their pursuit of wisdom. He gives no dignity to their court, but mentions the court of God in which the Man Christ Jesus will judge the world. He does not speak of theories of the world's beginning, or the origin of man, but affirmed what God had revealed on both of those matters. He does not speculate about life, but declares the Divine purpose that undergirds life. He does not engage in various ethnic views of humanity, but announces that all men came from a common source, and have been assigned a common vocation. He does not breathe a word about the self-worth of men or success in the world, but delivers a word concerning men's accountability to God.

Lesson #75

“ 18:1 After these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth; 2 And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome:) and came unto them. 3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tentmakers. 4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks. 5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ. 6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles. 7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue. 8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized. 9 Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: 10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city. 11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them. ” (Acts 18:1-11)

PAUL PREACHES IN CORINTH

INTRODUCTION

BRIEF SUMMATION OF THE TEXT

Following his experiences in Athens, Paul “came to Corinth.” Immediately he found some brethren, Aquila and Priscilla, who had recently arrived from Rome. He stayed with them, laboring as a “tentmaker,” a craft they all knew. Again, he spent the Sabbaths in the synagogue, persuading both Jews and Greeks. Following the arrival of Silas and Timothy, Paul was “pressed in the spirit” to elevate his dialog with the Jews, testifying that “Jesus was Christ.” This resulted in the eruption of fierce opposition. He then entered into a house that adjoined the synagogue. This resulted in the ruler of the synagogue, Crispus, and “many” of the Corinthians believing. In a night vision, the Lord

SOMETHING ABOUT JESUS THAT MUST BE SEEN

There is a lot of religious folklore in the church concerning the kind of people the Lord prefers, and those He chooses to be around. It is not uncommon to hear people say Jesus preferred to be with the low-lifers, sinners, prostitutes, and the likes. This is based upon a statement found in Matthew 11:19 and Luke 7:34. There Jesus is referred to as “a friend of publicans and sinners.”

Ponder Who Made the Statement

First, consider the text that is cited as proof of this representation of Christ: “And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners?” (Matt 9:11). This is a statement of Jesus’ enemies. They referred to the time when

The Scriptures tell us why Jesus chose these men. The words are very specific: “And He ordained twelve, THAT THEY SHOULD BE WITH HIM, and that He might send them forth to preach”(Mark 3:14). He taught them things He did not make known to the multitudes

Jesus was in Matthew’s house just after Jesus had called him. Matthew, himself being called from being a publican, had made a feast for Jesus, “and many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Him and His disciples” (Matt 9:9-10). Jesus did not go to them – they came to Him! Later Jesus said of His critics, “The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!” (Luke 7:34). Were His critics also right when they said Jesus was “a gluttonous man and a wine bibber”? Is the statement that He was “a friend of publicans and sinners” ever affirmed in Jesus’ doctrine, or in apostolic doctrine? Did the prophets ever foretell that as a trait of the coming Savior? Jesus Himself defined His “friends,” and He was very precise about it: “Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you” (John 15:14).

People Jesus Preferred

There were certain people whom Jesus preferred – people He chose to be continually with Him, and whom He might send forth to preach. He had many disciples, or followers – people who inconvenienced themselves to follow Jesus so they could be taught by Him. However, Jesus selected some from this large number, vouchsafing to them the privilege of being with Him all of the time. Here is the record. “And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples: and of them he chose twelve, whom also he named apostles; Simon, (whom he also named Peter,) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, Matthew and Thomas, James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon called Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James, and Judas Iscariot, which also was the traitor” (Luke 6:13-16).

The Scriptures tell us why Jesus chose these men. The words are very specific: “And He ordained twelve, THAT THEY SHOULD BE WITH HIM, and that He might send them forth to preach” (Mark 3:14). He taught them things He did not make known to the multitudes (Matt 13:11; Mk 4:34). He took them with Him wherever He went, the only exception being times of isolated prayer (Matt 14:23), or when he sent the disciples to another place while He prayed (Mk 6:46-47). It ought to be obvious that Jesus preferred to be with them above all other people.

First and foremost, these twelve disciples were those with whom Jesus preferred to be. They did not merely spend some time with Jesus, but were with Him continually. They left everything to follow Him. Peter referred to this when, speaking for all of the twelve, he said to Jesus, “Lo, we have left all, and have followed Thee” (Mk 10:28 and Luke 18:28). That was not said of everyone who followed Him. When Matthew made a great feast for Jesus, we read that “many publicans and sinners came and sat down with Him.” However, the Scriptures do say that they “sat down with Him AND HIS DISCIPLES” (Matt 9:10).

He Took His Disciples With Him

When Jesus withdrew from the multitudes, He did so “with His disciples” (Mk 3:17). A great multitude from Galilee followed Him, but He took His disciples with Him. After Jesus had raised Jairus’ daughter from the dead, He returned to His own country, and His disciples were with Him (Mark 6:1). When He took a ship to another region across the Sea of Galilee, He took His disciples with Him (Mark 8:10). It is recorded that, on another occasion, Jesus “went into a ship with His disciples: and He said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And they launched forth” (Luke 8:22). He never did anything like that with publicans and sinners! When He went into the northern regions of Canaan, into Caesarea Philippi, He took His disciples with Him (Mark 8:27). When He went to Jericho and returned from it, His disciples were with Him (Mark 10:46). When Jesus was invited to a wedding feast, His disciples were called as well, and went with Him (John 2:2). When Jesus entered into the Temple, and cleansed it of merchants and their wares, His disciples were with Him (John 2:12-17). When He went into Judea to preach and baptize the people, He took His disciples with Him (John 3:22). As the time of His betrayal drew near, Jesus withdrew to a city named Ephraim, continuing there with His disciples (John 11:54). On the eve of His betrayal, when He was going to observe the Passover feast, Jesus said to His disciples, “With desire I have desired to eat this passover WITH YOU before I suffer” (Luke 22:15). Is there really any question about the people-preferences of Jesus?”

Just where did Jesus prefer to be, and where did He do most of His teaching? As we consider these things, keep in mind that the church is to follow His example, not pursue the ideas and traditions of men.

Places Jesus Preferred

Just where did Jesus prefer to be, and where did He do most of His teaching? As we consider these things, keep in mind that the church is to follow His example, not pursue the ideas and traditions of men. On the Sabbath day, you were sure to find Jesus in the synagogue, where devout Jews gathered on that day. Thus it is written, “And they (Jesus and His disciples) went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day He entered into the synagogue , and taught” (Mark 1:21). Again, “And when the sabbath day was come, He began to teach in the synagogue ” (Mark 6:2). And again, “And he came to Nazareth, where He had been brought up: and, as His custom was, He went into the synagogue on the sabbath day, and stood up for to read” (Luke 4:16). And again, “And it came to pass also on another sabbath, that He entered into the synagogue and taught ” (Luke 6:6). We also read statements like this: “Jesus went about all of Galilee, teaching in their synagogues” (Matt 4:23). Again, “And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues ” (Matt 9:35). And again, “He preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee” (Mark 1:39). And again, “And He taught in their synagogues , being glorified of all” (Luke 4:15). And again, “And He preached in the synagogues of Galilee” (Luke 4:44). And again , “And He was teaching in one of the synagogues on the sabbath” (Luke 13:10).

At other times, Jesus could be found in the Temple, with His disciples. It is written, “And Jesus went into the Temple of God” (Matt 21:12). Again, “And Jesus entered into Jerusalem, and into the temple” (Mark 11:11).; And again, “And they come to Jerusalem: and Jesus went into the temple ” (Mark 11:15). And again, “And they come again to Jerusalem: and as He was walking in the temple ” (Mark 11:27). Mark 12:35 refers to Him teaching in the Temple . The fifth chapter of John tells us of Jesus healing an impotent man, then finding him later “in the Temple ” (John 5:14). John 7:14 says, “Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up into the temple , and taught.” When Jesus cried out for people to come to Him and drink, promising they would receive the Holy Spirit, John informs us that He cried out while He was “in the Temple ” (John 7:28). John 8:2 says that Jesus came into the Temple “early in the morning,” and that all the people came to Him there. John 8:20 informs us that Jesus “taught in the Temple .” John 10:23 says that “Jesus walked in the Temple , in Solomon’s porch.” Knowing He was there, the people came to Him: “And the blind and the lame came to Him in the temple ; and He healed them” (Matt 21:14). When He was arrested in the Garden, when Judas betrayed Him, He told those who came, “I sat daily with you teaching in the temple , and ye laid no hold on me” (Mat 26:55). Summarizing His ministry, Jesus said to His enemies, “I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple , whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing” (John 18:20). Why do we not hear these sophists speaking of Jesus choosing to be in the synagogues and the Temple? Whose books have they been reading? Certainly not God’s!

And why was Jesus found so frequently in the synagogues and the Temple? It was because these were places where devout people were more apt to gather. Oh, He did encounter unbelieving people and hypocrites in those places, but they did not belong there, and He would tell them so. The synagogue and Temple were not places for publicans and sinners to gather, but where prayer was made and the word of God read and taught. These places were established for seeking the Lord, calling upon His name. When men made the Temple a place of commerce, selling their wares, and providing proper currency exchange, Jesus drove them out. They did not belong in these places, but Jesus did, and that is where you could find Him. Luke speaks particularly of the last period of Christ’s life, summarizing what He did when He was in Jerusalem: “And in the day time he was teaching in the temple ; and at night he went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives ” (Luke 21:37). Such times represented the thrust of His ministry – the general rule, or what He ordinarily did.

Other Places Jesus Was Found

Of course, there were times when He taught and ministered to the people elsewhere. Matthew 5:1 says He went up into a mountain , and His disciples followed Him, and He taught them. Matthew 15:29-30 also says He went up into a mountain near to the sea of Galilee, and great multitudes came to Him. Mark 3:13 says He went into a mountain “and called to Him those He Himself wanted.” Mark 2:13 states that Jesus went “ by the seaside , and all the multitude resorted to Him.” Another time Jesus began to teach by the seaside , and the people gathered to Him in such great numbers He had to teach them while sitting in a boat (Mark 4:1-2). When Jesus went “beyond Jordan into the place where John first baptized , many resorted unto Him ” (John 41). Once Jesus went into a desert place by Himself, and the people heard of it and followed Him on foot out of the cities (Matt 14:13). Luke tells us, “And when it was day, He departed and went into a desert place : and the people sought him, and came unto him, and stayed Him, that He should not depart from them” (Luke 4:42). He then tells us of Jesus’ reply, and what He did: “And He said unto them, I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent. And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee” (Luke 4:43-44).

The People Came to Jesus

Now, you will notice something very consistent in these matters. Jesus did not go to the people, but the people were gathered to Him. Oh, there were places Jesus went, departing from the people. Once He went to Gadara, healed a man who was possessed of a legion of demons, and then He immediately left (Mark 5:1-18). Another time He went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, healed a woman’s daughter who was vexed with a demon, and then immediately left the area (Mark 7:24-31). Yet another time, He journeyed to the city of Nain, raised the dead son of a poor widow, and departed the region (Luke 7:11-16).

Jesus Went Where He Was Invited

We also know that He went to places where he had been invited. There was the wedding feast in Cana of Galilee, where He went with His disciples (John 2:1-11). Following his calling, Matthew prepared a feast for Jesus (Matt 9:9-10). He was invited to the house of a man known as “ Simon the leper” (Mark 14:3). Martha received Jesus into her house (Luke 10:38). He was also in house of Peter (Matt 8:14), and the house of Zacchaeus as well (Luke 19:5). While He was at Peter’s house, during the latter part of the day, “all the city gathered together at the door” (Matt 8:33). All of these people had some interest in Jesus. Once, when it was known that Jesus was in a certain house, “many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and He preached the word unto them” (Mark 2:2). This was the occasion when four men let a palsied man down to Jesus’ feet from the roof. Just as when Jesus went into a mountain, by the sea shore, and in the desert, the people came to Him. When word got out where He was, the people came.

Why Do People Misrepresent Jesus?

Who do people misrepresent Jesus by saying He preferred to be around publicans and harlots? The answer is twofold. First, they do not know Him. Second, because they have superimposed their view upon Scripture, they do not have a grasp on the record God has given of His Son. They have only spouted what other ignorant people have said. However, the fact that they have presented a distorted view of Jesus is not at all innocent. That luxury is simply not permitted among the sons of men.

Why Say These Things?

It may appear nothing more than a jaunt into the controversial to say these things. However, there is good reason for drawing attention to the truth about Jesus – particularly as it regards having to do with people. The book of Acts is a record of how men who possessed Christ conducted themselves. His life was being lived out in them.

Precisely the same preferences as were revealed in Jesus are confirmed in the record of the apostles in the book of Acts. From the second chapter through this text, the following accounts reveal their where they preached and the results that were realized.

THE RECORD OF PREACHING AND PEOPLE OF PREFERENCE IN ACTS

Precisely the same preferences as were revealed in Jesus are confirmed in the record of the apostles in the book of Acts. From the second chapter through this text, the following accounts reveal their where they preached and the results that were realized.

- PENTECOST (2:14-38). Those who gladly received the Word were baptized, and 3,000 were added.

- IN THE TEMPLE (3:1-4:4). The Jewish authorities were provoked to anger and opposed them. Also, above 5,000 men believed at that time.

- BEFORE THE COUNCIL (4:5-21). The word is rejected and Peter and John are threatened.

- IN THE TEMPLE (5:21-25). No response recorded.

- BEFORE THE COUNCIL (5:26-40). The word is rejected, the apostles are beaten, commanded to cease speaking in Jesus' name, and released.

- STEPHEN IN THE SYNAGOGUE (6:9-13). The people disputed with him. But could not resist his wisdom.

- STEPHEN BEFORE THE COUNCIL (7:3-59). His word was rejected, and he was stoned to death.

- PHILIP TO SAMARIA (8:5-13). The whole city believed and were baptized.

- PHILIP TO THE ETHIOPIAN EUNUCH (8:26-39). The eunuch believed and was baptized.

- PHILIP PREACHING FROM AZOTUS TO CAESAREA (8:40). No record of the response.

- SAUL IN THE SYNAGOGUE (9:20-23). Those who heard him were amazed, he confounded the Jews, and they took counsel to kill him.

- SAUL IN JERUSALEM (9:29). His word was rejected, and the Grecians went about to slay him.

- PETER SPENDS TIME WITH THE SAINTS IN LYDDA (9:32-35). Heals the lame man Aenas, and all Lydda and Saron see him and turn to the Lord.

- PETER GOES TO THE HOUSE OF DORCAS, WHO HAD JUST DIED (9:39-42). Raises Dorcas from the dead, it is known throughout Joppa, and many believe in the Lord.

- PETER GOES TO CORNELIUS AND HIS HOUSE (10:34-48). The hearers believed, received the Holy Spirit, and were baptized.

- THE PREACHING OF THOSE SCATTERED BY THE PERSECUTION THAT AROSE OVER STEPHEN (8:4; 11:19-21). A great number believed and turned to the Lord.

- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF SALAMIS (13:5). No response is recorded.

1. PAUL AND BARNABAS TO A GOVERNOR (13:7-12). The governor believed, being astonished at the doctrine of the Lord.

Our text will reveal a remarkable consistency of the preferences revealed in both Christ Jesus and those He invested with power to carry on His work. A priority, though not exclusivity, will be placed on those who are acquainted, with and committed to, the truth of God. Others will be given opportunity to hear as long as they respond appropriately.

PAUL IN ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA (13:16-52). The Gentiles asked to hear more, and were persuaded to continue in the grace of God. The unbelieving Jews rose up against them, and expelled them from their coasts.

- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN A SYNAGOGUE IN ICONIUM (14:1-5). A great multitude of Jews and Greeks believed, and the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles against Paul and Barnabas, making an attempt to have them stoned

- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE REGION OF LYCAONIA (14:6-19). The people think Paul and Barnabas are gods come down to earth, attempt to offer sacrifice to them, and Paul and Barnabas scarcely restrain them from doing so. Certain Jews came down and stoned Paul.

- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN DERBE (14:20-21). No response is recorded.

- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN PERGA (15:25). No response is recorded.

- PAUL AND SILAS TO SOME WOMEN IN PHILIPPI (16:13-15). The Lord opened Lydia's heart so she can attend to the word, she and her household believe, and Paul and Silas are welcomed into Lydia's home.

- PAUL AND SILAS TO THE PHILIPPIAN JAILER (16:31-34). The jailer is baptized, believing in God with all of his house.

- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER THE HOUSE OF LYDIA (16:40). Following their imprisonment they went to Lydia's house, comforted the brethren, and departed.

- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER A SYNAGOGUE IN THESSALONICA (17:1-4). Opened and alleged that Jesus must needs have suffered and risen from the dead. Some of them believed and consorted with Paul and Silas. Unbelieving Jews launched an initiative against them.

- PAUL AND SILAS STAYED WITH JASON, A JEW (17:5-6). Jason's house is assaulted as the Jews seek Paul and Silas. He is arrested, and assures the authorities that Paul and Silas are not trouble makers.

- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER A SYNAGOGUE IN BEREIA (17:10). These Jews are more noble, searched the Scriptures to confirm what Paul said was true, and many of them believed.

- PAUL DISPUTES IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF ATHENS (17:17a). No response is reported.

- PAUL DISPUTED WITH THE DEVOUT PEOPLE IN ATHENS (17:17b). No response is reported.

- PAUL DISPUTED IN THE PUBLIC SQUARE WITH DISCUSSIONS WERE HELD (17:17c). The hearers feel that a strange God is being preached, having never heard of such things.

- CERTAIN PHILOSOPHERS IN ATHENS ASK PAUL TO ELABORATE ON WHAT HE WAS PREACHING (17:18-32). Having heard Paul preach of Jesus and the resurrection, these men asked Paul to tell them more. Paul preaches to them on Mars Hill, expounding the nature and activity of God, and the responsibility of men.

- PAUL REASONS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF CORINTH (18:5-6). The listeners opposed themselves and blasphemed.

- PAUL ENTERS THE HOUSE OF JUSTUS, WHO WORSHIPED GOD (18:7-8). Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed with all of his house, and many of the Corinthians as well believe and are baptized.

Our text will reveal a remarkable consistency of the preferences revealed in both Christ Jesus and those He invested with power to carry on His work. A priority, though not exclusivity, will be placed on those who are acquainted, with and committed to, the truth of God. Others will be given opportunity to hear as long as they respond appropriately. Ignorance and dishonesty are in those who attempt to represent holy men of God as reflected the views of twentieth century sophists. This is not something that is innocent, nor is it a mere mistake in judgment. It is inexcusable to misrepresent God-ordained men!

PAUL DEPARTS FROM ATHENS AND COMES TO CORINTH

AFTER THESE THINGS

“After these things . . .” Other versions read, “After this.” NIV The manner in which Luke refers to the whole experience of Paul in Athens provokes sober thought. After arriving in Athens Paul did the following.

- His spirit was stirred when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry (17:16).
-]He disputed in the synagogue (17:17a).
- He disputed with devout persons (17:17b).
- He disputed daily in the marketplace, where sundry discussions were held (17:17c).
- In these places he preached Jesus and the resurrection (17:18).
- Certain philosophers heard Paul, and referred to him as a “babbler,” because it seemed to them he was setting forth strange gods (17:18).
- Paul was brought to the place where new ideas were heard and evaluated. There he was asked to elaborate on what he had been preaching (17:19-21).
- Standing boldly before the intelligentsia of Athens, Paul declared God, His works as they related to both nature and humanity, the day of judgment, and the resurrection of Jesus who would judge the world in righteousness (17:22-31).
- Some mocked when they heard of the resurrection (17:32a).
- Others said they would consent to hearing more about these things some other time (17:32b).
- Certain people remained with Paul, including a member of the Athenian counsel, a prominent woman, and others –all of them believing (17:34).

Now, all of these events are simply referred to as “these things.” A mere man would have written a large volume concerning those events, including in it the picture or drawings of the various sites in the city. However, Paul’s preoccupation was with things pertaining to the Kingdom. He was not easily impressed when considering the works and intellectual astuteness of men. Further, the results that were yielded did not appear to justify remaining any longer in the city. He apparently entertained no hopes of great numbers of these intellects turning to the Lord. This is because he knew the manner of the Kingdom. How succinctly he stated this in his letter to the Corinthians – the city to which he will now go. “For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh , not many mighty, not many noble, are called: But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen , yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: That no flesh should glory in His presence ” (1 Cor 1:26-29).

Any unusual Divine working among people such as those in Athens would have been confirmed by a significant number of those people abandoning their quest for the novel, and engaging in one for the eternal verities Paul had been proclaiming. However, when such an interest was not stirred, Paul knew it was time to move on. His understanding of the manner of the Kingdom compelled him to do so, as well as His sensitivity to the directing of the Holy Spirit. It seems to me that any other conclusion would be very difficult to justify. Protracted preaching and teaching where disinterest prevails cannot be justified – at least not with the Word of God.

The Grecian city of Corinth is about 48 miles west of Athens. It was destroyed by the Romans in 146 B.C. and was rebuilt about a century later. It became under the Romans the seat of government for Southern Greece or Achaia. Corinth was noted for its wealth and immorality. Sexual sins were widespread, in part, due to a temple located in the city dedicated to Venus (that is, to lust). This temple employed the services of more than one thousand "priestesses," who were nothing more than common prostitutes.

EATON'S DICTIONARY

PAUL DEPARTED

“ . . . Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth. . .” Other versions read, “and went to Corinth.” NKJV

The idea here is that Paul’s trip to Corinth was a deliberate one. It was not simply the next stop on a haphazard trip. Paul is in the center of the will of God, moving about as Jesus did, doing the works to which He had been ordained (John 5:36; Eph 2:10). We are not told precisely what moved Paul to go to Corinth. However, the recorded events that follow confirm to us that he was, indeed, in the heart of the will of God.

Thus far in this book, Paul’s travels have taken him a number of places. Being called by the Holy Spirit to a special work (13:2), Paul and Barnabas preached in the Island of Cyprus, ministering in a synagogue in Salamis (13:5), throughout the island (13:6), and in the city of Paphos to the governor of the island (13:6-12). From there they ministered in a synagogue in Antioch of Pisida (13:14), throughout that region, a synagogue in Iconium (14:1), Lystra, Derbe, and the region around them (14:6). They preached the Word in Perga (14:26), which concluded their mission trip. Paul and Silas revisited the churches where he and Barnabas had preached (15:36). They also went throughout Syria and Cilicia (15:41), and throughout the regions of Phrygia and Galatia (15:6). They went into Macedonia, preaching in Philippi (16:12), a synagogue in Thessalonica (17:1-2), a synagogue in Berea (17:10), a synagogue in Athens (17:17), and to the philosophers of Athens (17:22).

Thus far, Paul has traveled well in excess of one thousand miles, enduring all manner of opposition, including being charged falsely, being stoned, humiliated, and publically beaten and incarcerated. Yet, because he is living by faith, he cannot be deterred from being steadfast and unmoveable, always abound in the work of the Lord (1 Cor 15:58).

HE FOUND SOME BRETHREN

“ 2 And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome:) and came unto them.”

The body of Christ is unique – and we should expect it to be. After all, it is not only the means through which Jesus Christ expresses Himself, but all of its members are Divinely certified and placed. First we are “made accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6), and “qualified. . . to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light” NKJV (Col 1:12) – certified . Second, God Himself has “set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18) – placed . The association of the members is more than a mere formality or doctrinal technicality. The affiliation that they have with one another is very thorough – so much so that it is written, “we are members one of another ” (Eph 4:26), and again, “So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another ” (Rom 12:5). Some versions read, “each member belongs to the others,” NIV “individuals who are connected to each other,” GWN “individually parts of one another,” NAB “we are all joined to one another,” NJB and “we are parts one of another [mutually dependent on one another].” AMPLIFIED

THE ONENESS OF THE CHILDREN OF GOD

The oneness of the children of God – those who are in Christ Jesus – is marvelous to consider.

- ONE BODY: From the standpoint of functionality , although they are “many,” they are “one body” (Rom 12:5). This is the people into whom the Lord Jesus pours His “fulness” (Eph 1:23). Paul is the only Scriptural writer that refers to the saints of Christ’s “body,” and he does it frequently (Rom 12:4,5; 1 Cor 12:13-27; Eph 1:23; Ep 2:16; 3:6; 4:4, 12,16; 5:23,30; Col 1:18; 2:19; 3:15).

- THE CHURCH: Considering them from the standpoint of togetherness , or an assembly, they are “the church” – or gathering of ones called out of the world (Acts 2:47; 5:11; 20:28; 1 Cor 10:32; 12:28; 15:9; Gal 1:13; Eph 1:22; 3:10,21; Eph 5:23,24,25,29,32; Phil 3:6; Col 1:18,24; 1 Tim 3:15; Heb 2:12), and “the general assembly” (Heb 12:23).

- FAMILY: Considered from the standpoint of immediate relation to one another under Christ, they are “the whole family in heaven and earth” (Eph 3:15), “the house of God” (1 Tim 3:15; Heb 10:21; 1 Pet 4:17), “the household of God” (Eph 2:19), and Christ’s “house” (Heb 3:6).

- FLOCK: Viewed as being the custodianship of Jesus, they are “the flock of God” (1 Pet 5:2). These are care for by Jesus Himself.

BRIDE/WIFE: Seen as being intimate with Christ , they are “the bride of Christ” (Rev 21:9), “the bride” (Rev 22:17), and Christ’s “wife” (Rev 19:7; 21:9).

- NEW MAN: Perceived as a composite of both Jews and Greeks, the church is said to be “one new man” (Eph 2:15).

- HUSBANDRY/BUILDING: Seen as the people among whom God is working and dwelling, they are Gods “husbandry” (1 Cor 3:9) , “building” (1 Cor 3:9), “temple” (1 Cor 3:16-17; 2 Cor 6:16), “a spiritual house” (1 Pet 2:9), “the habitation of God” (Eph 2:22), and “God’s heritage” (1 Pet 5:3).

- CUSTODIAN OF TRUTH: Seen as having the responsibility of guarding and proclaiming the truth, the saints are called “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15).

As used in the above texts, none of these expressions can be described in the plural: i.e. bodies, churches, flocks, wives, men, husbandries, buildings, pillars etc. The only term used in the plural is “church.” When the word “churches” is used (Acts 9:31; 1 Cor 7:17; 11:16; 14:33; Rev 2:23), it has no reference to a special body of beliefs, unique doctrines, creeds, or theological systems. Rather, it refers to the people of God geographically, and to their representation of the whole church.

This is a Kingdom perception that has been clouded by the very existence of sectarianism and denominationalism. Of course, the divisional view of the body of Christ is essential to the maintenance of groups that do not have Christ as their Head.

The Purpose for This Observation

Our text will confirm Paul's keen perception of the oneness of those in Christ Jesus. He will seek out brethren, or those inclined to the Lord, staying and working with him in the supply of his "necessary uses" (Tit 3:14).

A CERTAIN JEW AND HIS WIFE

"And found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla . . ."

Corinth was a metropolitan city, with much activity. Finding specific people within its confines would require diligence. We do not know if Paul knew of these people before. However, in due time, he "found" a couple – Aquila and Priscilla. We are told that Aquila was from "Pontus," which was a region in Asia Minor. There were some people from this region present on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:9). It is quite possible that they could have been converted at that time.

Aquila was born in Pontus, a region adjacent to Bithynia, into which the Spirit had forbidden Paul and those with him to enter.

Elsewhere Paul refers to Aquila and Priscilla as "my helpers in Christ Jesus" (Rom 16:3), also referring "the church that is in their house" (1 Cor 16:19). He also exhorted Timothy to "salute" them (2 Tim 4:19). They will be mentioned two more times in this chapter (18:18,26).

COMMANDED TO DEPART

FROM ROME

" . . . (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome) . . ."

Commentator John Gill observed, "it is thought that the reason of this edict was, that the Jews in Rome continually opposing and disputing with the Christians, about Jesus being the Messiah, Claudius, who was of a timorous disposition, was afraid of a tumult, and that it might issue in his detriment, and therefore banished all the Jews, with whom the Christians were involved; for by the Heathens they were all called Jews, the first Christians being Jews."

Suetonius mentions the fact, but unfortunately does not say in what year of Claudius's reign it took place. His account is that, in consequence of frequent disturbances and riots among the Jews at the instigation of Chrestus, Claudius drove them from Rome. The quotation is as follows: "expelled the Jews from Rome, who were continually making tumults, being moved thereunto by one Chrestus," In Vita. Cluadii, c. 25

If these reports are true, they reflect the effects of contentions among those who claim identity with God. While the truth of the Gospel did cause some disruption, it was generally the reaction of the Jews themselves that wrought tumult (Acts 13:50; 14:2; 17:13; 21:27) – the exceptions being the masters of the woman with the spirit of divination in Philippi (Acts 16:19-22), and the silversmiths in Ephesians who made images of the goddess Diana (Acts 19:24-26). Even in these exceptions, the apostle Paul and those with him did not stir up social agitation. It was the people who could not receive them that initiated and pressed the contention.

Servants of God are reminded, "the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men" (2 Tim 2:22). Again it is written, "But unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath" (Rom 2:8). In our text, and according to historical accounts, contentious Jews became the cause for the expulsion of all Jews from Rome. May this never be said of professing Christians.

AND CAME UNTO THEM

“ . . . and came unto them.” There is no record that Paul had a previous acquaintance with Aquila and Priscilla. Yet, he found them – apparently as he sought for kindred spirits. Having found them, “Paul went to see them.” NIV Other versions read, “went to visit them,” NAB “Paul approached them,” NET and “became acquainted with.” NLT

Some have suggested this couple was converted by Paul during this initial trip, but that is not likely. A short time later, according to verse twenty-six, Aquila and Priscilla proved competent enough to instruct Apollos more perfectly in the way of the Lord. Thus they were not only believers in Christ, but mature ones who knew the way and word of the Lord, being capable of leading others into a mature understanding of the Lord. I doubt that this could be said of new converts – at least not ordinarily.

Once again, behold how Paul sought out those with inclinations toward God – whether Jews in the synagogues, devout men, or brethren in Christ Jesus. It seems to me that this is an excellent example of establishing oneself in a new community, whether in a Gospel initiative, or moving to a new area – as did Aquila and Priscilla. It is good to conduct one’s affairs in such a way as to come into contact with such people. That is the result of letting one’s light shine.

HE WROUGHT BY OCCUPATION

“ 3 And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tentmaker.”

You can tell the seriousness of any Kingdom laborer by the extent to which they will go to preach the Gospel and feed the flock of God. Here we learn something about Paul of which many are not aware. We will also behold the practicality that accompanied his presence in the city of Corinth.

HE WAS OF THE SAME CRAFT

“And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought...” Other versions read, “of the same trade . . . worked,” NKJV “he was a tentmaker . . . worked with them,” NIV “same occupation,” CSB “they made tents for a living as he did,” GWN and “ they worked [together], for they were tentmakers by trade.” AMPLIFIED

In 44 BC Julius Caesar reestablished Corinth as a Roman colony. The new Corinth flourished and became the administrative capital of the Roman province of Achaia. The city is known to readers of the New Testament for the letters addressed to its Christian community by the apostle Paul.

BRITANNICA ENCYCLOPEDIA

How long it took Paul to locate this holy couple, we do not know. The size of the city of Corinth, together with the amount of activities that went on there, would make this a challenging thing to accomplish. Corinth was an administrative capital, and a seat of idolatry that was unparalleled. The extent of the activity there can be measured by some of the structures that have been excavated, “The remains of other temples, villas, a theater, shops, public baths, pottery factories, a gymnasium, a large triumphal arch, and other buildings dot the site, which since 1896 has been extensively excavated.” BRITANNICA

Yet, because of his holy preferences, and the value he placed upon the saints of God, Paul found this couple. I know of few people who are characterized by this kind of diligence.

It is assumed that the tentmaking occupation of this couple was of sufficient size, seeing it was adequate to support themselves, Paul, and perhaps many others. We learn something from this also. Having been expelled from Rome,, Aquila and Priscilla were able to establish themselves in a business, like Lydia did in Philippi. They apparently knew that work is something ordained by God as a consequence of the curse (Gen 3:19).

THEY WERE TENTMAKER

“ . . . for by their occupation they were tentmaker.”

Some of the things made by tentmaker include the following: tents “either for the soldiers, and which were made of sack cloth of hair, or of leather, and of the skins of various animals, sewed together; hence the phrase, ‘sub pellibus’, ‘under the skins’, is used for to lie in tents: or those tents they made, were canopies made of linen, and other things, which were erected in the summer season to shade and screen from the heat of the sun; though others take them for a sort of tapestry, or hangings, which they made for theaters, palaces, and stately rooms; and according to the Syriac version, they were horses’ trappings which they made. Hicronymi Catalog. Script. Eccels. sect. 54. fol. 96. D. Although of measured significance, this gives us some idea of what could have been involved in this means of providing for one’s “necessary uses” (Tit 3:14).

In his writings, Paul made several references to the fact that he had labored with his hands, supporting himself, and often those with him.

• IN EPHESUS: “I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel. Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have showed you all things, how that so laboring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive” (Acts 20:33-35).

• IN CORINTH: “Even unto this present hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwellingplace; And labor, working with our own hands : being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it” (1 Cor 4:11-12).

• IN THESSALONICA: “For ye remember, brethren, our labor and travail: for laboring night and day, because we would not be chargeable unto any of you , we preached unto you the gospel of God” (1 Thess 2:9).

“Neither did we eat any man's bread for nought; but wrought with labor and travail night and day, that we might not be chargeable to any of you : Not because we have not power, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you to follow us” (2 Thess 3:8-9).

With Paul, preaching and teaching was not accompanied by the crisis of no means to make a living. We have no idea when he learned this particular trade, although Jewish historians say that it was the custom of Jewish leaders to learn an occupation so they would always have a means of support. I prefer the view that Paul did this to see to it that he was never put in a place where he could not preach the Gospel because of lack of support. I have lived in this manner myself.

HE REASONED IN THE SYNAGOGUE

” 4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.”

The focus of the Scriptures is the Lord and His work. While there is history and the accounts of the activities of men within them, they are not the heart of Scripture. During this period, Paul’s entire time in Corinth was a year and a half (18:11). Our attention is now turned to his involvement in fulfilling his commission, personally delivered to him by the glorified Christ: “To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in me” (Acts 26:18). The only extracurricular activities that are reported of Paul during that time is that he “found” Aquila and Priscilla and “worked” with them. No details are provided concerning his activities in tentmaking, or any other daily pursuits. As for himself, Paul spoke the truth when he said, “I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me” (Gal 2:20). And again, “For me to live is Christ” (Phil 1:21),

Sectarian and professional religion have robbed the people of this perspective, even though no other kind of living is acceptable to the Lord who has purchased us. The purpose for Christ’s death includes this glorious reality: “And that He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). You see, then, how even the reports of Scripture, as well as the doctrine contained therein, reflect this priority.

HE REASONED IN THE SYNAGOGUE

“ And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath . . .” Other versions read, “he was reasoning,” NASB “argue,” NRSV “had discussions,” BBE “disputed,” GENEVA “would discuss,” GWN “spoke,” MRD “entered into discussions,” NIB “addressed,” NET “hold debates,” NJB “trying to convince,” NLT “preached,” TNT “tried to persuade,” IE and “discoursed and argued.” AMPLIFIED

This is now the seventh time Paul is said to have attended and spoke in a synagogue (13:5,14; 14:1; 17:1,10,17; 18:4). It is the second time a point is made of Paul reasoning with the Jews (17:2; 18:4). He will do this again in Ephesus (18:14).

As used here, reasoning is a process involving both thought and speech. Reasoning is thoughtful discussion often involving two opposing views. Ideally, it is also involves an environment in which truth can triumph because of its superiority and the integrity of its focus.

The procedures of the synagogue were conducive to an elaboration of the Scriptures and a discussion of them, for it centered around the Scriptures. It should not surprise us that a people who were cultured by God through Moses and the Prophets chose to have this kind of gathering. These people did not come together to resolve one another’s problems. Whether they took it as seriously as they should, or not, there was a general understanding that their identity with God superseded all other matters. Furthermore, what He has said takes the priority over all other words. Jews with honest and good hearts knew that this was true.

HE PERSUADED JEWS AND GREEKS

“ . . . and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.”

Other versions read, “trying to persuade,” NIV “would try to convince,” NRSV “turning Jews and Greeks to the faith,” BBE “exhorted,” GENEVA “tried to win over,” GWN “attempting to persuade,” NET “trying to convert,” NJB “Tried to win over,” WEYMOUTH “and won over,” AMPLIFIED “persuaded,” INTERLINEAR and “was persuading.” ALT

There is a vast difference between passing along some information, and engaging in a focused attempt to persuade the listeners – making every effort to convert them, changing their way of thinking. God has made no provision for us to impose the truth upon people, forcing them to think correctly about critical things.

It is important to note that valid reasoning must be based upon the Scriptures – God’s revelation. Jesus reasoned in this manner (Matt 21:42; 22:29; Lk 24:47,45; John 5:39). This was also the manner of the apostles (Acts 17:2; Rom 15:4; 16:26; 1 Cor 15:3-4). It is unfortunate that today a lot of reasoning being foisted upon God's people is based upon psychological principles, statistics, and other forms of human reasoning. Such approaches should not be allowed among the people of God. If the wisdom of this world is "foolishness with God" (1 Cor 1:20; 3:19), it certainly has no place among those who are in Christ Jesus. Any and all preaching and teaching that is based upon such wisdom is itself foolish.

WHEN SILAS AND TIMOTHEUS CAME HE WAS PRESSED IN THE SPIRIT

"5 And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia, Paul was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ."

As is characteristic of Scriptural accounts, novel details are passed over, and events more directly related to the work of the Lord are covered. It is as though the Holy Spirit seeks to avoid undue distraction to the ordinary and mundane.

As is characteristic of Scriptural accounts, novel details are passed over, and events more directly related to the work of the Lord are covered. It is as though the Holy Spirit seeks to avoid undue distraction to the ordinary and mundane. Over the years I have observed that the interests of those who prefer to live at a distance from the Lord invariably gravitate to the workaday matters of life. It all may appear quite interesting to the mind of the flesh, but for those who are pressing toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus, such considerations are rather boring.

WHEN SILAS AND TIMOTHY WERE COME

"And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia . . ."

In Acts 17:13, it is reported that when Paul, because of opposition, left Berea, he sent word to Silas and Timothy to join him in Athens. The book of Acts does not report them coming to him.

- The books of First and Second Thessalonians included a salutation from Paul, Silvanus, and Timotheus. Silvanus is the Greek form of Silas. THAYER At the time of writing, then, Silas and Timothy were with Paul.

- In his first epistle to the Thessalonians, Paul indicates that Timothy was sent back to Thessalonica from Athens. "Wherefore when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone; and sent Timotheus, our brother, and minister of God, and our fellowlaborer in the gospel of Christ, to establish you . . ." (1 Thess 3:1-2).

- Paul wrote to the Thessalonians that he had sent Timothy to them to establish and comfort them concerning their faith, and that none of them should be moved by their afflictions (1 Thess 3:2-3).

- Timothy had returned to Paul and Silas from his trip to Thessalonica, bringing a good report of their faith and charity. They were noble examples to all who believe, and had sent the word throughout Macedonia and Achaia.

The place from which First Thessalonians was written is not certain. Some feel that it was from Athens, sometime between the time when his soul was stirred within by the pervasive idolatry in the city (17:16), and when he departed for Corinth following his presentation to the Areopagus (18:1). I find this entirely plausible because of the amount of activity that occurred during his stay in Athens.

- He was waiting for Silas and Timothy in Athens (17:16a).
- He had perused the city, beholding how it has been given over to idolatry (17:16b).
- He spent time disputing in the synagogue (17:17a).

- He spent time disputing with devout people (17:17b).
- He spent time disputing in the city square (17:17c).
- Sufficient time elapsed for the Athenian philosophers to encounter Paul and become aware of his message (17:18).
- At the request of the philosophers, he delivered a presentation on Mars' Hill (17:19-31).
- Certain among the Athenians believed, and "became followers of Paul" NIV (17:34).

This could easily have covered a period of several weeks, giving sufficient time for Timothy to arrive, and be sent back to Thessalonica. This being the case, Silas and Timothy would have come to Corinth from Thessalonica, which was in Macedonia. Also, if this was not the actual scenario, I do not know how Silas and Timothy would have known to join Paul in Corinth. I will proceed under the assumption that Paul had conveyed to Timothy his plans to go to Corinth.

At any rate, at the point of this text, the three of them are again united. As one might expect, there was a certain spiritual synergy that took place when they were joined together. You will note that he apparently did not involve them in the tent making trade – at least no point is made of such an arrangement. Rather, upon the arrival of Silas and Timothy, Paul was stirred within – the blessed impact of kindred spirits.

PAUL WAS PRESSED IN THE SPIRIT

"Paul was pressed in the spirit . . ." Other versions read, "compelled by the Spirit," NKJV "began devoting himself completely," NASB "devoted himself exclusively," NIV "was occupied with," NRSV "constrained by the word," ASV "completely given up to the word," BBE "was pressed in respect of the word," DARBY "was earnest," DOUAY "forced in spirit," GENEVA "was impeded in discourse," MRD "became wholly absorbed," NET "spent all his time," NLT "Constrained by the spirit," TNT "pressed in the Spirit," YLT "was preaching fervently," WEYMOUTH "engrossed in his message," MONTGOMERY "was pressed to the saying," INTERLINEAR "held completely by the Spirit," ALT "compelled by the Spirit," and EMTV "pressed by the Spirit." LITV

The word "pressed" is translated from a word meaning, "to hold together with constraint. . . to hold completely, I. e. a. to hold fast . . . to be held by, closely occupied with . . . constrained by," THAYER "devote oneself completely to, be occupied with . . . wholly absorbed in," FRIBERG "devote oneself completely to, be occupied with," LOUW-NIDA "to constrain or force one to a thing," LIDDELL-SCOTT and "urge on, impel or hold within bounds, control." GINGRICH

Notice the different representations presented by the translations.

- That the Holy Spirit compelled Paul. KJV/NKJV/TNT/YLT
- That Paul devoted himself completely to an activity. NASB/NIV/NLT
- Paul was completely given up to the Word. BBE
- Was pressed with respect to the Word. DARBY
- That Paul was earnest. DOUAY
- That Paul was forced by the Holy Spirit. GENEVA
- That Paul was fervent. WEYMOUTH
- That Paul was engrossed in his message. MONTGOMERY
- That Paul was impeded in his discourse. MRD

Here is an excellent example of the confusion caused by the multiplicity of translations – particular regarding wholly different representations. One set of Greek manuscripts used the Greek term for “word” (lo,gwl). Another group of manuscripts use the Greek term for “spirit” (pneu,mati).

Here Paul is apparently moved to declare Christ with even more fervency and directness. This by no means suggests that he had been casual in his reasoning in the synagogue. Up to this point, he had allowed for some two-way dialog that centered in the Scriptures. However, I do not doubt that there was a marked tendency among the Jews to divert the attention from Jesus Christ, and Paul will be moved to bring such diversions to an abrupt halt. He will bring Christ into the heart of the dialog, thrusting all peripheral matters into a secondary position. Those who have had any experience in preaching, teaching, and feeding the flock of God, know that it takes an extraordinary amount of effort to keep things centered on Christ Jesus.

Paul Was Being Directed from Above

First, let us rid ourselves of the notion that this text is speaking primarily of Paul’s personal desires. To be sure, his heart was in this matter. However, in the body of Christ, it is the Head that governs the body. The members do not function on their own. Also, in the ministration of the various gifts dispensed to the body, the Holy Spirit plays a key role. In fact, the entire Godhead is involved in the execution of these gifts. As it is written, “Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit . And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord . And there are diversities of operations , but it is the same God which worketh all in all . . . But all these worketh that one and the selfsame Spirit , dividing to every man severally as He will” (1 Cor 12:4-6,11).

We are further told that each member of the body (and “apostles” are members of the body – 1 Cor 12:28) functions as they are holding to the Head (Col 2:19). The “whole body” functions “from” the Head (Eph 4:15-16). This confirms the statement made in Hebrews 12:20-21: “Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, Make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.” And again it is written, “For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

When there is a minimal amount of fellowship among the brethren, there will be a small amount of work done for the Lord – if any is done at all. If it is true that the Head works within the context of His body, this ought to be glaringly apparent.

Worked Within the Context of Fellowship with the Saints

In this text Paul was driven from within, through the instrumentality of the Holy Spirit, to testify to the Jews. This occurred within the context of fellowship with Silas and Timothy, as well as Aquila and Priscilla. This is the ordinary manner of the Kingdom. It took place on the day of Pentecost, when the brethren were together with one accord (Acts 2:1-4). This is what occurred when the brethren first faced opposition, and came together to seek the Lord (Acts 4:23-31). It also happened in Antioch, while the brethren were ministering to the Lord (Acts 13:1-2).

When there is a minimal amount of fellowship among the brethren, there will be a small amount of work done for the Lord – if any is done at all. Jesus does not ignore His body in the working out of His purpose. If it is true that the Head works within the context of His body, this ought to be glaringly apparent.

TESTIFIED TO THE JEWS THAT JESUS WAS CHRIST

“ . . . and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.” Other versions read, “solemnly testifying,” NASB “preaching,” BBE “testified in depth,” CJB “declaring,” NJB “testifying fully,” YLT

“showed,” IE “solemnly telling,” WEYMOUTH “solemnly assured,” ISV “enthusiastically assuring,” WILLIAMS “earnestly testifying,” MONTGOMERY and “earnestly arguing and testifying.” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “testifying” is diamarturo,menoj . As used here, it has the following lexical meaning: “to attest, testify to, solemnly affirm . . . to give solemn testimony to one . . . Testimony, to testify, cause it to be believed,” THAYER “declare solemnly and emphatically,” UBS “to make a serious declaration on the basis of presumed personal knowledge - 'to declare, to assert, to testify,” LOUW-NIDA “to affirm solemnly.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

It is translated “testify” in the following texts: Lk 16:28; Acts 2:40; 8:25; 10:42; 18:5; 20:21,24; 23:11; 28:23; 1 Thess 4:6; Heb 2:6. It is translated “witness” in Acts 20:23, and “charge” in 1 Timothy 5:21; 2 Timothy 2:14; and 4:1.

A Term Relating to God

Let me again affirm that the word “Christ” speaks exclusively of the relationship of Jesus to God Himself. He is “the Lord’s Christ” (Lk 2:26), “the Christ of God ” (Lk 9:20), “Christ, the chosen of God ” (Lkj 23:35), and “ His Christ” (Acts 4:26; Rev 11:15; 12:10). When elaborating on the term “Christ” we read the following: and “the Son of the living God” (Matt 16:16), “the Son of God” (Mk 1:1; Lk 4:41; John 11:27; 20:31). He is also referred to as “Christ the Son of David,” emphasizing His appointed role as King (Matt 1:1), as well as “Christ the Savior of the world,” another Divinely appointed role (John 4:42).

This differs significantly from the Jesus-will-solve-your-problem mentality – so often presented to the people of our time. Few professing Christians have any lucid idea about how Jesus relates to God Himself. You may recall when God revealed to Peter who Jesus was, Peter confessed, “Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God” (Matt 16:16). Before any progress can be made in the faith, that perception must be acquired, so that the individual thinks of Christ within the context of God – not within the context of perceived human needs. This is seen in the salient statement, “Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God ?” (1 John 5:5). While all of this may seem rather elementary, this is not how Jesus is being presented to the masses. He is rather being perceived as someone that resolves personal and interpersonal problems. However, the primary objective of Jesus Christ is to resolve the dilemma that sin created between man and God. Once that is addressed, the individual is in a position to “obtain grace to help in the time of need” (Heb 4:16).

WHEN THEY OPPOSED THEMSELVES

“ 6 And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed, he shook his raiment, and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.”

Having experienced a good degree of receptivity in the synagogue of Berea (17:11), Paul is again faced with the hostility that frequently characterized the synagogues (13:45; 14:1-2; 17:5).

WHEN THEY OPPOSED THEMSELVES

“ And when they opposed themselves, and blasphemed . . .” Other versions read, “opposed him and blasphemed,” NKJV “resisted and blasphemed,” NASB “opposed Paul and became abusive,” NIV “opposed and reviled him,” NRSV “put themselves against him, and said evil words,” BBE “set themselves against him and began hurling insults,” CJB “opposed and spoke injuriously,” DARBY “gainsaying and blaspheming,” DOUAY “turned against him and started to insult him,” NJB “said contrary, and blasphemed,” PNT and “they kept opposing and abusing and reviling him.” AMPLIFIED

Later versions emphasize that these Jews opposed Paul – and, indeed, that is the case. However, their negation also involved the contradiction of their own Scriptures, and the prophecies that had been vouchsafed to them. The sense of the text is that they set themselves in opposition to what Paul was declaring, and consequently to Paul himself. It was an act of their own will: “they opposed.” They entered heartily into this opposition: “they opposed themselves,” or “they themselves opposed.” The same language is used in Second Timothy 2:25: “In meekness instructing those that oppose themselves.” Other versions read, “who are in opposition,” NKJV/NASB and “opponents.” RSV/NRSV

The idea here is not simply that these Jews had some opposing views. Rather, they themselves were the opponents, and their persons entered fully into the opposition. Their opposition had no lasting effect upon Paul, but it did have one upon them! There was a very real sense in which they did “oppose themselves,” bringing all manner of hurt and disability to their hearts and minds.

As a result of their hostility, they blasphemed, or spoke against Paul himself. That is, they denigrated his person in order to mitigate what he had said – at least that is what they thought their blasphemy would do. This was the tactic Christ’s enemies also used against Him. They said to Jesus, “You have a demon” NKJV (John 7:20); “Do we not say rightly that You are a Samaritan and have a demon?” NKJV (John 8:48). Some of His own family said, “He is out of His mind” NKJV (Mk 3:21).

When men cannot successfully contend against the truth, they will do their best to discredit the character and motives of the one who speaks the truth. Paul referred to this fleshly tendency when he said he had experienced “dishonor” and “evil report” (2 Cor 5:5).

HE SHOOK HIS GARMENT

The reception and treatment of Christ’s brethren is a barometer of how people feel about Jesus Himself, and how they feel about Jesus reflects how they feel about God.

“ . . . he shook his raiment . . .” Other versions read, “he shook his garments,” NKJV “shook out his garments,” NASB “shook out his clothes in protest,” NIV “shook the dust from his clothes,” NRSV “he took his cloak and shook it out in front of them,” NJB “shook off the dust from his robe,” LIVING and “shook out his clothing [against them].” AMPLIFIED

When Nehemiah had taken an oath from the priests to restore the usury they had from the people, he “shook out the fold of” his “garment and said, ‘So may God shake out each man from his house, and from his property, who does not perform this promise. Even thus may he be shaken out and emptied’” (Neh 5:13).

When Jesus sent out the apostles to preach that the Kingdom of heaven was at hand, He told them, “And whosoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, shake off the very dust from your feet for a testimony against them” (Luke 9:5; Matt 10:14; Mk 6:11). When He sent out the seventy, He told them, “But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you” (Luke 10:10-11).

Paul and Barnabas did something similar in Iconium, shaking the dust from their feet “against them” (13:51).

The act, commanded by Jesus to both the twelve and the seventy, signified cutting off all affiliation with the people – having nothing more to do with them. If that appears to be an excessively strong reaction, think again! Men may consider the rejection of God’s messengers and their words to be nothing serious, but that is not how heaven views the matter! Jesus said, “He that receiveth you receiveth Me, and he that receiveth Me receiveth him that sent Me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward” (Matt 10:40-41).

The reception and treatment of Christ's brethren is a barometer of how people feel about Jesus Himself (Matt 25:40,45), and how they feel about Jesus reflects how they feel about God (John 5:23). Therefore, after spending some time with these Jews, affirming that Jesus was the Christ, their rejection of Paul's words constituted a judgment of unworthiness to receive eternal life – even as with the Jews in Antioch (Acts 46). In my judgment, this is a day when skepticism and worldly wisdom have invaded the church. When they erupt at the hearing of the truth, and the people cannot be turned, it should be met with words similar to those of our text.

AND SAID UNTO THEM

“ . . . and said unto them, Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean: from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles.”

Your Blood Be Upon Your Own Heads

Most all versions read as the Authorized Version. Variant versions read, “You're responsible for your own death,” GWN “You're responsible for your own death,” IE “You're responsible for your own death,” WEYMOUTH and “Whatever happens to you will be your own fault!” CEV

When Jesus was being tried before Pilate, the people cried out, “His blood be on us, and on our children” (Matt 27:25). That is, they were willing to bear the responsibility for the death of Jesus, as opposed to holding Pilate responsible for it. In this text, however, the death of Jesus, or the repudiation of Paul, was not the point. Here, their own blood was upon their heads. Their demise would not be ultimately traceable to a superior nation, or military weakness. Judgment would come upon them for rejecting the truth when it was plainly declared to them.

All who come in the name of the Lord are responsible to deliver the record God has given of His Son. No preacher or teacher is free from the blood of men until he has declared “all the counsel of God.” It is incumbent upon them to particularly declare what God has said about Jesus Christ, and to show the absolute necessity of embracing Him whole-heartedly.

This kind of language, including what Paul says of himself, has its root in a word delivered to the prophet Ezekiel. “When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul” (Ezek 3:19). And again, “When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul” (Ezek 3:20-21).

In our time, the seriousness of warnings and exhortations issued from the Lord has been grossly understated. The point here is that heaven will respond to the rejection of men! God will confront those who have spurned His word and maligned His servants. Ultimately, that confrontation will take place on the day of judgment. However, as seen in Israel, there are reprisals for such rejection in this world as well, and men do well to consider it. As great as the grace of God is, it will not cover up the continued rejection of the message of Jesus Christ.

I Am Clean

Other versions read, "I am clear of my responsibility," NIV "I am innocent," NRSV "I am pure," DARBY "I am guiltless," NET "I will go . . . with a clear conscience," NJB "I go blameless," PNT "I have done all that I can do," IE "I am not responsible," WEYMOUTH and "I am not to blame for it myself." WEYMOUTH

All who come in the name of the Lord are responsible to deliver the record God has given of His Son. No preacher or teacher is free from the blood of men until he has declared "all the counsel of God" (Acts 20:27). It is incumbent upon them to particularly declare what God has said about Jesus Christ, and to show the absolute necessity of embracing Him whole-heartedly. Those who are recalcitrant in this duty will be held responsible by "the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (2 Cor 11:31). No person coming in the name of the Lord is free from their responsibility until these things are proclaimed with sufficient power that it solicits a response of some kind from the people.

And what of the preachers and teachers who have not properly represented Christ, or shown the absolute necessity of receiving and following Him? Nothing favorable can be said of such men! They were not sent by God, and they are nothing more than an ungodly intrusion.

I Will Go Unto the Gentiles

It is true that Paul was designated "the apostle to the Gentiles" (Rom 11:13; 1 Tim 2:7; 2 Tim 1:11). Some sophists feel that Paul should have been going to them, and not spending time preaching to the Jews. Such are of the opinion that Jesus commissioned Paul to preach exclusively to the Gentiles. However, this is not at all the case. When sending Ananias to Saul to call him into the apostleship, Jesus Himself said, "But the Lord said unto him, Go thy way: for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel" (Acts 9:15). Therefore, in keeping with his calling, and the very nature of the Gospel itself, which is the power of God unto salvation "to the Jew first," he preached to the Jews.

Paul would not linger where the Gospel was not received – even if that was among the Jews who were considered the "first" to whom it was to be preached. The Gospel was to be preached "to every creature" (Mk 16:15). Elsewhere, when addressing this subject the matter of Israel's rejection of that Gospel, Paul said, "Be it known therefore unto you, that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles, and that they will hear it" (Acts 28:28).

The opening of the door of salvation to the Gentiles not only fulfills the commission of Jesus, it also confirms the promises given by the prophets concerning the salvation of God. Although, prior to Christ, they were "not a people," (1 Pet 2:10), yet God had purposed from the beginning that they would be included in His great salvation.

- All families of the earth would be blessed through Abraham's Seed, which is Christ (Gen 12:3; 22:18).
- God promised He would give the Savior "the heathen" for an inheritance (Psa 2:8).
- All the ends of the earth would turn to the Lord (Psa 22:27).
- Nations would flow into the Lord's house (Isa 2:2).
- The Gentiles would seek the Lord (Isa 11:10).
- The coming Savior would bring forth redemptive judgment to the Gentiles (Isa 42:1).
- The Savior would be a light unto the Gentiles (Gen 42:6).
- God would give light to the Gentiles (Isa 49:6).

- The nations that knew not God would run to Him (Isa 55:5).
- The Gentiles would come to the Lord's light (Isa 60:3), coming to Him (Isa 60:5).
- All the nations would be gathered to the name of the Lord (Jer 3:17).
- All people, nations, and languages would serve the Lord (Dan 7:14).
- Many nations would be joined to the Lord (Zech 2:11).
- Many nations would seek the Lord of hosts (Zech 8:22).
- The name of the Lord would be great among the Gentiles (Mal 1:11).

Therefore, in keeping with the promises given to the patriarchs and through the prophets, Paul affirms that he will go to the Gentiles. While his heart is burdened for the people of Israel (Rom 9:2), he will not limit his labors to the Jewish people. If they will not respond, the opportunity to respond will be removed. This is a consistent kingdom manner.

HE ENTERED INTO A CERTAIN MAN'S HOUSE

“ 7 And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshiped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue. 8 And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.”

At this point Paul does not leave Corinth, but changes his base of operation. He does not cease to preach in the area, but no longer continues reasoning in the synagogue. Later, what Paul appears to sense in his spirit at this time will be fully confirmed by a personal communication from the Lord Himself.

HE ENTERED A CERTAIN MAN'S HOUSE

“And he departed thence, and entered into a certain man's house, named Justus, one that worshiped God, whose house joined hard to the synagogue . . .” Other versions read, “next door to the synagogue,” NKJV “next to the synagogue,” NASB “was very near the synagogue,” BBE “adjoined the synagogue.” DARBY

JUSTUS

Other versions read “Titius Justus,” NASB/NIV/NRSV/RSV/ASV “Titus Justus,” ASV/DOUAY/ERV/AMPLIFIED

The different renderings are traced back to differences in certain Greek manuscripts. This man is described as “one that worshiped God.” It is assumed that he was a Gentile proselyte. This is the exact way in which Lydia was described, who also was a proselyte (Acts 16:14).

The point of the text is that Paul moved the place of his teaching from the synagogue to the house of Justus. Some are of the opinion that he also remained there, no longer staying with Aquila and Priscilla. If this is the case, it would buttress his statement that he was turning to the Gentiles. However, whatever view one chooses to embrace, the emphasis here seems to be that this became the place where Paul taught, continuing his affirmation and reasoning concerning Jesus being the Christ. It may be that Justus had a dwelling that could accommodate a number of people. At any rate, the words that follow confirm that the primary purpose for Paul being there was to teach.

CRISPUS

“ And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house . . .” Other versions read, “the ruler,” NKJV “the leader,” NASB “the official,” NRSV “the president,” CJB “synagogue leader,” GWN “the Warden,” WEYMOUTH and “chief of.” INTERLINEAR

There are other men in Scripture who were rulers of the local synagogue. Jairus, whose daughter Jesus raised from the dead, was “the ruler of the synagogue” (Mk 5:22,36,38; Lk 8:41). When Jesus was “teaching in one of the synagogues on the Sabbath,” He had to confront the “ruler” of that synagogue who objected to Him healing the woman with the bowed back on the Sabbath (Lk 13:14). Later in this chapter, a man named Sosthenes is said to have been “the chief ruler of the synagogue” (Acts 18:17). The role of this person was to maintain order in the synagogue, ensuring that the purpose for meeting was satisfactorily carried out. While this

THE RULER OF THE SYNAGOGUE

“Their duties were to preside in the public services, to direct the reading of the Scriptures and the addresses to the congregation . . . to superintend the distribution of alms, and to punish transgressors either by scourging or by excommunication.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S is not sufficient to establish the necessity of maintaining some semblance of order and purpose in a godly assembly, it is worthy of note. This practice took place among the people who had been chosen by God, and to whom He had revealed both His will and His purpose. Neither Jesus nor the apostles spoke against such a practice. I see no reason for us to do so.

We assume that this man is the same one mentioned in the book of First Corinthians: “I thank God that I baptized none of you, but Crispus and Gaius” (1 Cor 1:14). This appears to be a reference to the event recorded in this text.

Notice how the conversion of this household is recorded: “believed on the Lord.” This kind of language is consistently employed to describe those who were added to the church.

- Those who responded to Peter’s message on the day of Pentecost are described as “all that believed” (2:44).

- The five thousand men responding to Peter’s discourse in Solomon’s porch are said to have “believed” (4:4).

In all of these cases believing and being baptized were the result of hearing a message. In addition, the Holy Spirit inspired a report of these reactions in a manner that left no question about what was done.

The growing and united number of Christians were described as “the multitude of them that believed” (4:32).

- As a result of the report of Dorcas being raised from the dead, it is written that in Joppa “many believed in the Lord” (9:42).

- Those converted at Cornelius’ house are described as those “who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ” (11:17).

- When certain preached the Lord Jesus in Antioch, the hand of the Lord was with them, “and a great number believed” (11:21).

- The deputy on the isle of Paphos is said to have “believed” (13:12).

- Later, in Antioch, “as many as were ordained to eternal life believed” (13:48).

- When Paul and Barnabas preached in Iconium “a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed” (14:1).

- After Paul reasoned in the synagogue of Thessalonica, “some of them believed”

(17:4).

- In Berea, “many of them believed” (17:12).
- In Athens, “certain men,” included Dionysius and a woman named Damaris, are said to have “believed” (17:34).

Now, we read that Crispus and his household “believed in the Lord.” These are the words Peter used when he reported the conversion of Cornelius and those gathered at his house (Acts 11:17).

It is obvious that Crispus left the confines of the synagogue to hear the words of Paul, probably delivered in the house of Justus. Although he was the ruler of the synagogue, he did not go along with the contentions raised by others in the synagogue over which he presided. He was quite willing to separate from those people and give himself to the hearing of the Gospel. It is assumed that Crispus and his household responded in the same manner as the Corinthians, who are now mentioned – believing and being baptized..

MANY CORINTHIANS

“ . . . and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized.”

This is now the ninth time the book of Acts has reported people believing and being baptized. Both Jews and Gentiles were involved.

- On the day of Pentecost, those who believed, having gladly received the Word were baptized (2:41).
- Those of Samaria “believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus,” and “were baptized, both men and women” (8:12).
- Although he was later overcome by pride, Simon initially believed and was baptized (8:13).
- The Ethiopian eunuch believed and was baptized (8:36-38).
- Saul of Tarsus believed and was baptized (9:18).
- The household of Cornelius believed and were baptized (10:48; 11:17).
- Lydia and her household believed and were baptized (16:14-15).
- The Philippian jailor and his household believed and were baptized (16:31-34).
- Now Crispus and his household believe and are baptized (18:8).

In all of these cases believing and being baptized were the result of hearing a message. In addition, the Holy Spirit inspired a report of these reactions in a manner that left no question about what was done. I do not believe it is possible to maintain any semblance of integrity and conclude from these texts that baptism is optional, or has nothing to do with salvation. Without apology I affirm that those who arrive at such conclusions are either ignorant or dishonest – and in this day of salvation, neither condition can be justified. This is how the Spirit reported the conversion of people, and it should not be offensive. Of course, where there is a sectarian spirit, there will be opposition to anything that conflicts with the particular views of the sect. That is the nature of division, which men perceive must be maintained at all cost – even that of the truth.

THE LORD SPEAKS TO PAUL IN A NIGHT VISION

“ 9 Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: 10 For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.”

While there has been some good response to Paul's preaching and teaching in Corinth, it has not been so in the synagogue. Having faced such rejection in other cities, Paul might have concluded the same would happen here. After all, the aggression of the Jews had forced him to leave Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, Thessalonica, and Berea (13:50; 14:5-6; 14:19-21; 17:10, 13-15). However, the Lord will give Paul special insights concerning the city of Corinth.

A VISION IN THE NIGHT

"Then spake the Lord to Paul in the night by a vision . . ." Another version read "one night . . . in a vision." NIV

Here the Lord speaks directly to Paul – not through a prophet, or through the Scriptures, but directly, doing so through a vision.

God Has Spoken to Individuals

- God spoke to Adam and Eve (Gen 1:28; 3:13).
- God is said to have spoken to Cain (Gen 4:6,9).
- Noah (Gen 6:3;7;1 7:1; 8:15; 9:8).
- Abraham (Gen 12:1; 13:14; 18:13).

- Jacob (Gen 31:3; 46:2).
- Moses (Ex 4:2,4,11,19,21; 6:1; 7:1,14; 8:16,20; 9:1,8,13,22; 10:1,12,21; 11:1,9; 12:43; 14:15,26,16:28; 17:5,14; 19:9,10,21,24; 20:22; 24:12; 30:34; 32:7,9,23; 33:1,17; 34:1,27; Lev 16:2; 21:1; Num 3:40; 7:11; 11:16,23; 12:14;11; 15:35; 17:10; 21:8,34; 25:4; 27:12,18; 31:14,16). God is said to have spoken directly to Moses 163 times.
- Aaron (Ex 4:27; Lev 10:8; Num 18:1,8,10).
- Balaam (Num 22:12).

There are at least three things to be seen in visions. First, God is a communicating God. Second, visions postulate a degree of sensitivity on the part of the one to whom the vision is vouchsafed. Third, visions pertained to Divine involvements with men, and the working out of God's eternal purpose.

Joshua (Josh 3:7; 5:2,9; 6:2; 7:10; 8:1,18; 10:8; 11:6).

- Gideon (Judges 6:19-20; 7:2,4,5,7).
- Samuel (1 Sam 3:11; 8:7,22; 16:1,7).
- David (1 Sam 23:2; 2 Sam 2:1; 5:19; 1 Kgs 8:18).
- Gad (1 Chron 21:9).
- Solomon (1 Kgs 11:11; 2 Chron 1:11).
- Manasseh (2 Chron 33:10).

- Hosea (Hos 1:2).
- Amos (Amos 7:8).
- Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:6).
- Ananias (Acts 9:11,15).

In this text, the Lord spoke to Paul in a vision – something that was seen – a miraculous visualization. In this case, I assume what was seen was the glorified Christ – something like John saw on the isle of Patmos (Rev 1:12-16).

God has spoken in visions to Abraham (Gen 15:1), Jacob (Gen 46:2), Samuel (1 Sam 3:15), Nathan (2 Sam 7:17; 17:15), Iddo (2 Chron 9:29), Isaiah (2 Chron 32:32; Isa 1:1), Ezekiel (Ezek 1:1; 8:3,4; 11:24; 40:2), Daniel (Dan 2:19; 4:5; 7:1; 8:1; 10:7), Obadiah (Obad 1:1), Nahum (Nah 1:1), Habakkuk (Hab 2:2-3), Zecharias (Lk 1:22), Ananias (Acts 9:10), Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:12), Cornelius (Acts 10:3), Peter (Acts 10:17), and Paul (Acts 16:9-10; 26:19; 2 Cor 12:1). Several of these visions were in the night (Isa 29:7; Dan 2:19; 7:7,13; Acts 16:9; 18:9).

There are at least three things to be seen in visions. First, God is a communicating God. Second, visions postulate a degree of sensitivity on the part of the one to whom the vision is vouchsafed. Third, visions pertained to Divine involvements with men, and the working out of God's eternal purpose. They never dealt with novel interests, or things unrelated to what God was doing among men.

BE NOT AFRAID

“Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace . . .” Other versions read, “Do not be afraid, but speak, and do not keep silent,” NKJV “Do not be afraid any longer, but go on speaking and do not be silent,” NASB “Have no fear and go on preaching,” BBE “Don't be afraid to speak out! Don't be silent!” GWN “Don't be afraid! Speak out! Don't quit!” LIVING “Don't be afraid! Speak out! Don't quit,” WEYMOUTH and “Don't be afraid! Speak out! Don't quit.” ISV

Like other visions, what is communicated to Paul is something that is certain. This is not a word of possibilities, but one that unveils a circumstance around which Paul is to shape his actions.

Jesus means that He is with Paul as he remains in Corinth. The circumstances are not what they appear to be. That is why he is to remain there, even though it looked as though he was being rejected as he was in other regions.

Right here we see the objective of the devil as well as that of the exalted Christ. Paul's commission had to do with speaking – declaring the appointed message through which salvation would be wrought. Paul had not been sent to relieve the poor – although there were times when he participated in such an effort toward the saints (Rom 15:26; 1 Cor 16:1-2; 2 Cor 8:1-9; Gal 2:10). Primarily, however, he had been ordained as a “preacher” and a “teacher” (1 Tim 2:7; 2 Tim 1:11). When Paul and Barnabas were called by the Spirit, and separated for a particular work, it was to “preach the Gospel” (Acts 16:10). He acknowledged that he had been sent “to preach the Gospel” – delivering a message appropriately summarized as “the preaching of the cross” (1 Cor 1:17). When doors were opened to him, it was to “Preach Christ's gospel” (2 Cor 2:12; 2 Cor 10:16). Paul made it his aim “to preach the Gospel.” He aspired to do it where Christ had not been named (Rom 15:20), and to the churches as well (Rom 1:15; 1 Cor 15:1-3).

Now, Paul has faced animosity in Corinth, even as he did in many other cities. He frequently had to leave other regions because of opposition, and until this time, there was no indication that he would not have to do the same in Corinth. He had been stoned, beaten, imprisoned, and maligned in other places, and had to eventually leave.

However, at this point hidden from Paul, Corinth was different. Jesus Himself speaks to Paul in a night vision telling him not to fear, but to keep on speaking, and not quit!

I AM WITH THEE

“For I am with thee . . .”

“I am with you,” Jesus says – with him in his labors! Following His resurrection, Jesus had told His disciples “Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world” (Matt 28:20).

Christ’s promise to Paul was much like the Lord’s promise to Jeremiah: “Be not afraid of their faces: for I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD” (Jer 1:8). As with the prophet, His promised presence was not detected by the human senses. He had rather taken up His abode in Paul, as He said He would do for those who loved Him and kept His words (John 14:23). He was dwelling in his heart by faith (Eph 3:17). Christ was with Him in His faithful intercession (Heb 7:25). As the Head of the body, of which Paul was a primary member, Jesus was with Him (Col 1:18). An innumerable company of angels, all sent forth to minister to those “who shall be heirs of salvation” (Heb 1:13-14), were being managed by Jesus, who was devoted to Paul, His own servant and apostle.

I do not doubt that, technically speaking, Paul knew this. He knew Jesus had not forsaken him, but that He was a “merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God” (Heb 2:17). However, he also knew that, under Christ’s government, he had been prohibited from preaching in Asia, and blocked from going into Bithynia (Acts 16:6-7). There were times when Paul had to escape for his life from the very regions in which he had been preaching (Acts 9:5; 14:6).

Jesus means that He is with Paul as he remains in Corinth. The circumstances are not what they appear to be. That is why he is to remain there, even though it looked as though he was being rejected as he was in other regions.

NO MAN WILL HURT YOU

“ . . . and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee . . .” Other versions read, “no one will attack you to hurt you,” NKJV “no one is going to attack and harm you,” NIV “no one will lay a hand on you to harm you,” NRSV “no one will make an attack on you to do you damage,” BBE “No one will succeed in harming you,” CJB “no one is able to harm thee,” MRD “no one will assault you to harm you,” NET “no one will attempt to hurt you,” NJB and “no man shall invade thee to hurt thee.” PNT

This is not something detected by Divine prescience – as though the Lord had looked into the future and saw what men would not do. This is the announcement of Divine government, for the government is on the shoulder of Jesus ! The glorified Christ would see to it that no one would be able to touch and harm Paul –or even have a compelling desire to do so. The government of Jesus is that precise!

Under the Old and inferior covenant, the Lord protected His people from the enemy. There were three occasions every year when all of the men appeared before the Lord in an appointed place (Deut 16:16-17). During those times, the land appeared to have been left vulnerable, with only the women, children, and aged left. The preciseness of Divine control is seen in God’s promise to Israel concerning those three occasions, when the land appeared to be unprotected . “For I will cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders: neither shall any man desire thy land, when thou shalt go up to appear before the LORD thy God thrice in the year ” (Ex 34:24).

This is the kind of protection the glorified Christ pledged to Paul. Even if his enemies did desire to come against Paul, no opportunity would be given them to do so. The “King of heaven” (Dan 4:37) would so impose His will upon the sons of men, that the wicked would not be able to lift their hand against the apostle Paul! Furthermore, Satan and his hosts, who move men against the truth and those who proclaim it, would be held at bay, unable to carry out any initiative against the apostle.

I HAVE MUCH PEOPLE

“ . . . for I have much people in this city.” Other versions read, “there are many in this city who are My people,” NRSV “for I have a number of people in this town,” BBE “I have so many people that belong to me in this city,” NJB “I have so many people that belong to me in this city,” LIVING and “for I have very many people in this city.” WEYMOUTH

So far as we know, prior to Paul there had not been a major Gospel initiative in Corinth. It is true that Aquila and Priscilla were there, but there is nothing to suggest they had garnered “much people” in the Gospel net. Nor, indeed, was this something that was apparent to Paul.

I gather that this was the same kind of circumstance that was described concerning certain who embraced the Gospel in Antioch: “And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed ” (Acts 13:48). Paul elsewhere stated this fact of Divine knowledge: “But shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness. And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymenaeus and Philetus; who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some. Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are His. And, Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity” (2 Tim 2:16-19). This accounts for why the Gospel was disallowed in some regions (Acts 16:6-7), yet particularly sent to others (Acts 13:2). This is why the Word was specifically sent to the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:26-32), Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:15), and Cornelius (Acts 10).

There is a general sense in which the Gospel is preached “to every creature” (Mk 16:15) and “all nations” (Matt 28:19). The Gospel is the Divinely appointed means of carrying out the “purpose” of God, for we have been “called according to His purpose ” (Rom 8:28; 2 Tim 1:9). Remembering that the government has been placed in the hands of Jesus, He is the One who knows, chooses, calls, keeps, and feeds. He is the One who is bringing “many sone to glory” (Heb 2:10). He is also the one from whom people are removed when they do not abide. People cannot believe if they have not heard. They cannot hear without a preacher. And preachers cannot go unless they are sent by the Lord (Rom 10:14-15).

The Lord knows the end “from the beginning” – and all of that has to do with His “counsel” (Isa 40:10). There have been some people who have been told of God’s appointed purposes for them.

- God told Pharaoh, “And in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up, for to show in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth” (Ex 9:16).

- Before they were born, and in complete disregard of their works, God said of Jacob and Esau, “Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated.” Paul affirms this was done “that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of Him that calleth” (Rom 9:11-13).

- God told Jeremiah, “Before I formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I ordained thee a prophet unto the nations” (Jer 1:5).

- Jesus told His twelve disciples, “Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you” (John 15:16).

- It is written of Paul, “But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace” (Gal 1:15).

In all of these cases, what God had determined preceded the involvement of the people themselves. Our salvation, together with its culmination, is ultimately traced back to Divine purpose, not human response. “And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose” (Rom 8:28). Again it is written, “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9).

While it is true that the purpose of God is implemented through divinely appointed means, it is the purpose that gives meaning to the means, and not vice versa. The statement of our text – “I have much people in this city” – is from the viewpoint of the purpose, not the means. The purpose preceded the call. In fact, that is what made the call effective through the appointed means.

When Paul wrote to the Thessalonians about their own identity with God, he stated that their response confirmed God’s purpose and election. “Knowing, brethren beloved, your election of God. For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance . . .” (1 Thess 1:4-5). In the case of the Corinthians, Paul had no confirming evidence of the presence of the foreknown people of God in that city. However, Jesus revealed to him that such people did exist, and in significant numbers. They would, however, become known to Paul as he delivered the Gospel, which is the appointed means of the people being made known.

I understand that this is a very difficult concept for some to accept – even though considerable revelation has been given on the matter. Just as a large and productive tree does not have its roots above ground, so the works of the Lord are not accompanied by evidences of their causes. The firm and stable foundation of a large building is not apparent when you look at the structure itself. So the supporting purposes and determinations of God are not evident in our ordinary involvements in His Kingdom. It is for this reason that Jesus divulged to Paul that more was involved in Corinth than could be seen with mortal eyes.

HE CONTINUED THERE A YEAR AND SIX MONTHS

“ 11 And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.”

The spiritual progress of an individual can be measured by the degree of their sensitivity and response to Divine directives. King Saul, for example, did not do what he was told to do. Samuel told him, “Wherefore then didst thou not obey the voice of the LORD . . . For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, He hath also rejected thee from being king” (1 Sam 15:19-23). It is apparent that God is not indifferent to men’s response to His commandments.

Scripture records a conversation between two unnamed prophets. One of them was disobedient. Here is the account. “And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee, But camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place, of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; thy carcase shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers. And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back. And when he was gone, a lion met him by the way, and slew him: and his carcase was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcase” (1 Kgs 13:21-24). When the prophet heard of the death of the one to whom he had delivered the word of the Lord he said, “It is the man of God who was disobedient unto the word of the Lord” (1 Kgs 13:26). It is a sad day when those living in the blazing light of the “Sun of righteousness” perceive less than those who lived during the lesser glory of the Old Covenant.

This was the manner of Paul’s life, and it was recognized by the Lord Jesus, who knows all things. Paul testified, “I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has strengthened me, because He considered me faithful, putting me into service.” NASB

During the time of Nehemiah, he sparked a renewal Godward. During that time, Nehemiah accounted for the demise of the children of Israel. “Nevertheless they were disobedient , and rebelled against thee, and cast thy law behind their backs, and slew thy prophets which testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations. Therefore thou deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and according to thy manifold mercies thou gavest them saviors, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies” (Neh 9:26-27). Holy men have been able to correlate the experiences of men with their response to Divine leadership.

Paul’s Ministry

The banner over Paul’s ministry was expressed in truth by himself, and confirmed in his labors. He delivered this word to Agrippa, affirming how he was called, what he was told to do, and how he responded. “And he said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest. But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in Me. Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision: But showed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judaea, and then to the Gentiles , that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance” (Acts 26:15-20). Paul faithfully fulfilled that commission.

This was the manner of Paul’s life, and it was recognized by the Lord Jesus, who knows all things. Paul testified, “I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has strengthened me, because He considered me faithful , putting me into service” NASB (1 Tim 1:12). This is one reason why so much was revealed to Paul (2 Cor 12:1; Eph 3:4).

HE CONTINUED THERE

“And he continued there a year and six months . . .” Other versions read, “he settled there,” NASB “Paul stayed,” NIV “he was there,” ASV “he dwelt there,” ERV “Paul lived in Corinth,” GWN “He resided,” MRD “remained,” WEYMOUTH “settled down among,” WILLIAMS “he is seated,” INTERLINEAR and “stayed on.” CEV

It only took one word from the Lord, and Paul immediately adjusted his life to the will of the Lord. There is an example of presenting one’s body a “living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God”

It only took one word from the Lord, and Paul immediately adjusted his life to the will of the Lord. There is an example of presenting one’s body a “living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God” (Rom 12:1). This is what is involved in living “unto Him which died for them and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). As with all instances of submitting to the will of the Lord, it involved the mortification of “the deeds of the body” (Rom 8:13), resisting the devil (James 4:7), and not quenching or grieving the Spirit (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19). Remaining where the Lord places you requires one to “fight the good fight of faith,” and “lay hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12). It requires men to “put off the old man” and “put on the new man” (Col 3:9-10). The person involved in the will of the Lord must keep under their body, and bring it into subjection (1 Cor 9:17). It is incumbent upon all kingdom laborers that they “seek those things which are above,” and set their “affection” on them (Col 3:1-2).

All of this, and more, was involved in Paul remaining in Corinth for a year and six months. Many do not comprehend the sense of these various requirements because they are not actually involved in what God has called them to do. They are too absorbed in the ways of the world, and its mundane activities. Such poor souls are not living by faith (Heb 10:38), walking in the spirit (Gal 5:16,25), and maintaining the hope and anticipation of Christ's return (1 John 3:2-3). Their spiritual posture is too casual, and they live at too great of distance from the Lord. Their minds are not occupied with the things of God, and they are not living by every word of God.

The tragedy of such circumstances is that few churches would consider such people to be out of the will of God. A "form of godliness" has been adopted that does not require such holy involvements. Of course, this is why the truth lies smitten in the streets, as it did during the apostasy of Israel (Isa 59:14-15). Paul's response is the standard. Every child of God is expected to respond whole heartedly to the word of the Lord. It is never acceptable to fail to do so.

TEACHING THE WORD OF GOD

" . . . teaching the word of God among them." Other versions read, "teaching them the word of God," CJB "and taught the words of God among them," GENEVA "preaching the word of God among them," NJB "teaching the truths of God," LIVING "teaching God's message to the people," IE "went on teaching God's message," WILLIAMS "continued to teach them the word of God," MONTGOMERY and "teaching the Word of God [concerning the attainment through Christ of eternal salvation in the kingdom of God]." AMPLIFIED

As used here, the word "teaching" is translated from a word meaning, "to hold discourse with others in order to instruct them, deliver didactic discourses," THAYER and "to provide instruction in a formal or informal setting - to teach, teaching." LOUW-NIDA

To teach the word of God is to show the sense of it, so that what is declared of the Scriptures can be perceived. For example, Jesus said the Scriptures testified of Him (John 5:39). An angel told the apostle John that "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev 19:10). When the word of God is taught, this becomes clear to those receiving the teaching.

Further, the Scriptures are said to be able to make men "wise unto salvation" (2 Tim 3:15). When the word of God is taught, those who receive the teaching become more thorough in their understanding of salvation. They see more fully the things that are required by and inherent in the salvation of God. They become more conversant with faith, justification, sanctification, and hope. Those who have a desire to comprehend the truth, yet are unable to do so, have not been taught. That is the problem. They are groping about like the eunuch from Ethiopia because no one has expounded the word to them. How tragic that this circumstance is so prominent in the churches of our time.

Imagine the marvelous benefit of being taught by Paul for a year and a half! You could read every one of his epistles in a few hours. What marvelous discourses and discussions must have taken place during that period of time!

Paul's Extended Stays

We are given some information concerning Paul's extended stays in certain areas. We find that it was always with believers – the church.

- Early in his ministry he remained with Barnabas with the church in Antioch for "a whole year," assembling with them and teaching "much people" (Acts 11:26).
- After "a great multitude both of the Jews and Greeks believed," Paul and Barnabas spent a "long time" in Iconium, speaking boldly in the name of the Lord (Acts 14:1,3).

- After fulfilling the mission to which the Spirit had called them, Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch, remaining there a “long time with the disciples” (Acts 14:28).
- After settling the issue of circumcision that had arisen (Acts 15:1), Paul and Barnabas spent an unspecified period of time in Antioch “teaching and preaching the word of God” (Acts 15:35).
- He remained in Corinth for one and a half years (Acts 18:11).
- After spending three months disputing in the synagogue of Ephesus, Paul “separated the disciples” and disputed daily in the school of Tyrannus. This continued for two years (Acts 19:10).
- Paul told the Ephesians elders that he had spent “three years” among them, “warning every man night and day with tears” (Acts 20:31). This was a summation of which two years and three months are explained above (Acts 19:10).
- Coming into Caesarea “Paul’s company” spent “many days” at the house of “Philip the evangelist,” who had four daughters that prophesied (Acts 21:10).
- When in Rome, Paul was under house arrest. He was given leave to have his own hired house, where he remained for “two whole years.” He received all who came to him, “Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 28:31).

There we have seven years and six months of extended time, plus two “long” periods, one stay of “many days,” and another unspecified period of time in Antioch.

Who were the “them” to whom Paul continued teaching the word? Every indication is that it was with the believers. It appears that, as during Christ’s ministry, the burden of the testimony was given to those with a manifested interest in the truth. Outsiders and inquirers, including publicans and sinners, came to these gatherings. Add to this the following facts.

- All of the epistles we have from Paul are addressed to believers.
- Paul, by revelation, had been given to understand “the mystery of Christ,” hidden from previous generations. Yet this was only communicated to those who were in Christ Jesus.
- Special revelations were given to Paul concerning “the unsearchable riches of Christ,” in order to “make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery” (Eph 3:8-9). Yet, there is not a solitary example or hint that he ever divulged such things to anyone outside of the body of Christ.
- The placement of apostles within the church (1 Cor 12:18,28; Eph 4:11) was for the purpose of “perfecting the saints” and “edifying the body of Christ” (Eph 4:11-12).

None of this suggests the Word is not to be preached to those who are alienated from God. However, there is no record of extended periods being spent with such people. It was when there was a favorable response to the Gospel that more was given.

- The fundamental or primary purpose for all spiritual gifts, including that of the apostles, is “for the profit of all” of the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:7).
- Paul did not go into spiritually virgin territory when the church was deficient. He chose to stabilize the church first (2 Cor 10:15-16).

None of this suggests the Word is not to be preached to those who are alienated from God. However, there is no record of extended periods being spent with such people. It was when there was a favorable response to the Gospel that more was given. Further, the level of teaching presented to those who remain dead in trespasses and sins is designed to awaken them to their situation outside of Christ. There is a remarkable consistency in the very few reports of such communication (Acts 17:22-31; 24:25; 26:20,27). When Paul addressed the Jews, he always reasoned around the Scriptures, confirming their historically wayward manners, and then pointing to the promises of a coming Savior (Acts 13:40; 17:2; 24:14).

However, Paul's extended stays and his epistles were devoted to exposition of the Gospel, or the implications that were in it. Ponder the various aspects of the Gospel that were, so far as the record is concerned, only made known to believers.

- The revelation of the love of God in the Gospel (Eph 2:4).
- The fact that Jesus put away sin (Heb 9:26).
- The fact that Jesus destroyed the devil, also plundering principalities and powers (Heb 2:14; Col 2:15).
- That there is a new covenant (Heb 8:8-13; 2 Cor 3:7-10).
- That Jesus is the Mediator of a new covenant (Heb 12:24).
- What was accomplished through the blood of Christ (Eph 2:13; Col 1:20; Heb 10:19; 13:20).
- That the conscience can be purged (Heb 9:14).
- That Jesus was made to be sin, and was made a curse (2 Cor 5:21; Gal 3:13).
- That Jesus ascended up into heaven, and is on the right hand of God (Rom 8:24; Eph 4:8).
- That Jesus has reconciled us to God (Rom 5:10; 2 Cor 5:18; Col 1:21).
- That those in Christ are a new creation (2 Cor 5:17), have received a new man (Eph 4:24), and are no longer what they were (1 Cor 6:11).
- That Jesus ever lives to make intercession for those who are coming to God through Him (Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25).
- The involvements of the resurrection of the dead (1 Cor 15:35-54; 2 Cor 5:1-5).
- That Jesus will come to be glorified in them that believe (2 Thess 1:10).
- That we have been bought with a price (1 Cor 6:20; 7:23).
- The rationale behind Divine chastening (Heb 12:5-13).
- That the Law has been ended as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4).
- That those in Christ have an eternal inheritance (Heb 9:15).
- That we are saved by hope (Rom 8:24).
- That Christ dwells in our hearts by faith (Eph 3:17).
- That God sends the Holy Spirit into the hearts of His people (Gal 4:6).
- That we are saved by grace through faith (Eph 2:8-10).
- That those in Christ are not in bondage to sin (Rom 6:15,22; 8:2,12).
- That Christ frees men in order to walk in freedom (Gal 5:1).
- That Jesus made peace through the blood of His cross (Col 1:20).
- That the devil walks about as a roaring lion, seeking whom, he may devour (1 Pet 5:8-9).

- That men have been given armor in Christ that enables them to stand against the wiles of the devil, and in the evil day (Eph 6:11,13).
- That men can resist the devil (James 4:7).
- That every temptation is common to man and comes with a way of escape (1 Cor 10:13).
- That men can have access to grace (Rom 5:2).

It is my persuasion that no person can be a true evangelist who is inept in the matter of edifying the body. Even “evangelists” are declared to have been given to the church to edify it and bring it to maturity. It is within the context of “the body” that spiritual gifts are matured and honed to their finest edge.

That we are called in one hope of our calling (Eph 4:4).

- That those in Christ are changed from one increasing stage of glory to another by the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 3:18).
- That the victory that overcomes the world is faith (1 John 5:4-5).
- The rationale behind being justified by faith (Rom 3:23-28; 5:1-3; Gal 3:24-25).
- That Jews and Gentiles are one new man in Christ (Eph 2:15).

That will suffice, lest I labor this matter to the point of distraction. The point is that none of these things were declared to those alienated from God. They were only affirmed and expounded to those who had been made accepted “in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6). These are the kind of things that were opened up in Paul’s extended stays with the brethren.

It is my persuasion that no person can be a true evangelist who is inept in the matter of edifying the body. Even “evangelists” are declared to have been given to the church to edify it and bring it to maturity (Eph 4:11-16). It is within the context of “the body” that spiritual gifts are matured and honed to their finest edge. Oh, that this was more fully known!

PAUL’S ACTIVITIES IN CORINTH

It will be of profit to briefly rehearse the activities of Paul in Corinth as gleaned from his letters to them. These are not spelled out in the book of Acts – only that he remained there for a year and six months.

- The people were “called unto the fellowship” of God’s Son, Jesus Christ our Lord (1 Cor 1:9).
- He came to them “declaring the testimony of God,” doing so without the “excellency of speech” to which Corinthians were accustomed, or the “wisdom” that had its genesis in men (1 Cor 2:1).
- While among them, and in view of the licentious nature of the environment, he determined not to know anything them but “Christ and Him crucified” 1 Cor 2:2).
- He was with them “in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling,” making it a point not to rely on the flesh (1 Cor 2:3).
- His speaking was devoid of “enticing words of man’s wisdom” (1 Cor 2:4a).
- His speaking was “in demonstration of the Spirit and of power” (1 Cor 2:4b).
- He ministered among them with a godly awareness of their level of understanding

(1 Cor 9:20-22).

- He delivered “ordinances” to them that related to proper behavior and decorum (1 Cor 11:2).
- He delivered to them the words of Jesus concerning the Lord’s table, the reasoning behind it, and the penalty for its abuse (1 Cor 11:23-29).
- He expounded the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ (1 Cor 15:1-3).
- He spoke in such a manner as would appeal to the spiritually mature (1 Cor 2:6).
- When he had very real needs of the body, he made no effort to make the people support him – even though he would have violated no precept of God by doing so (1 Cor 11:9; 12:13).
- He worked the “signs of an apostle” among them “in all patience,” never seeking personal advantage (2 Cor 12:12).
- They became “the epistle of Christ,” ministered by him, through whom the Holy Spirit Himself worked effectively in them (2 Cor 3:1).

when Paul received some correspondence from those who were “of the house of Chloe,” Paul engaged in a battle for their souls, writing them two epistles – by far the most he wrote to any person or church. This confirms the aggressive nature of his care for and ministry to them.

Thus we can form a profitable view of what Paul did during that the time he spent in Corinth. Although the people were among an especially decadent people, the ministry of Paul was so effective that he could write to them, “So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Cor 1:7). The defection that did take place in Corinth apparently occurred after he had left. However, when Paul received some correspondence from those who were “of the house of Chloe,” Paul engaged in a battle for their souls, writing them two epistles – by far the most he wrote to any person or church. This confirms the aggressive nature of his care for and ministry to them. It also confirms that while in Corinth, the burden of his labors were directed toward the church, and that the church grew during that time.

CONCLUSION

We are being exposed to the spread of the Gospel throughout the world. As Jesus commanded, it began in Jerusalem (Lk 24:47), diffused throughout Judea, spreading northward into Samaria, and then “unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8). All of this was done without the development of a human strategy. There was no form of worldly promotion. There were no Christ universities or colleges. There was no church planting program, no evangelizing workshops, and no church conventions, as we know of them. In fact, God did not employ any tactic that was borrowed from the world. There was no business tactic that was borrowed. The world’s ideas about motivation were not sought. There were no fund raising campaigns. No one spoke of anything similar to the 10-40 window of out time. No pep talks were given concerning the lostness of the world, and the need for the church to send out missionaries. There were no known pleas for funds to do the Lord’s work. Yet, an astounding growth in both numbers and spiritual maturity was taking place.

The fundamental message that was being declared related to the Lord Jesus Christ (5:42; 8:5,12; 9:20; 11:20; 17:3,13) , the resurrection of the dead (4:2), the word of the Lord (8:4,25; 11:19; 13:5; 15:35), the forgiveness of sins (13:38), the Gospel (14:7,21,25; 15:36; 16:10; 17:13), peace (10:36), and the Kingdom of God (8:12; 20:25; 28:31). There was a confidence in their message as they are said to have “affirmed” (25:19), “declared” (13:32; 17:23; 20:27), and “preached boldly” (9:27).

There was a degree of unity among the believers that is virtually unknown in our time. They were “together” (2:44), “assembled together” (4:31; 12:12; 14:27), were of “one accord” (1:14; 2:1; 2:46;

4:24; 5:12; 8:6; ; 15:25), realized “singleness of heart” (2:46), and were of “one heart and of one soul” (4:32). Those who were convicted did not wait for an invitation,. But cried out inquiring, “What shall we do?” (2:37; 8:36; 9:6; 16:30). When people were converted who came from sordid backgrounds, they “came, and confessed, and showed their deeds” (19:18). When people were called by God, they immediately responded gladly, and in faith and with determination (2:41; 4:4; 8:12; 8:36; 9:8;13:2-3; 16:10, 14-15; 16:33; 18:8,9-10).

Why is there such a vast gulf between the nature of those ancient disciples and the nominal Christians of our time? It is certainly not owing to any diminishment in the power and effectiveness of the Gospel of Christ. True spiritual life does not deteriorate with time, or wax and wane with circumstances. Let it be clear that what is being reported in the book of Acts is real, whether it is righteous or evil; whether it relates to wheat or tares;

When contemporary responses are lacking in the qualities that are being revealed in this book, it is because the power is lacking. Furthermore, the power is lacking because the message through which the power is made known is not being declared.

whether it relates to the work of the devil or the work of the Lord Jesus. When contemporary responses are lacking in the qualities that are being revealed in this book, it is because the power is lacking. Furthermore, the power is lacking because the message through which the power is made known is not being declared. The message is so designed that when it is not believed, some form of hostility will erupt, signifying the contrariety of the people. When any form of hesitancy is found in those who profess to be leading the church, it is because they are not willing, for willingness prevails in the day of “His power” (Psa 110:3). Where willingness is lacking, unbelief is dominant.

Professional religious men are fond of trying to find some kind of pattern in the book of Acts – something they can emulate, putting it in some form that can be successfully copied. However, no such patterns are found in Luke’s reports. This is the chronicling of life, not routine. It is the report of Christ Jesus living within men, not men adopting a way of life. Blessed is the person who sees this!

Lesson #76

PAUL SPREADS THE WORD

“ 18:12 And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, 13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law. 14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you: 15 But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters. 16 And he drave them from the judgment seat. 17 Then all the Greeks took Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things. 18 And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila; having shorn his head in Cenchrea: for he had a vow. 19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews. 20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not; 21 But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem: but I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus. 22 And when he had landed at Caesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch. 23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the disciples. ” (Acts 18:12-23)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMATION

Paul was unhindered during the year and six months he spent in Corinth, However, when that period came to a conclusion, the Jews took advantage of the presence of Gallio, deputy of Achaia. They brought Paul to Gallio’s judgment seat. Unwilling to cooperate with their plans, Gallio drove them away, frustrating their diabolical intentions. Paul continued for some time in Corinth, finally taking Aquila and Priscilla and departing for Ephesus. Although he was well received by the Jews there, he informed them he had to keep a certain feast in Jerusalem. However, he said he would return to them. After landing in Caesarea, Paul went down to Antioch, spending some time with the saints.

He then departed for Galatia and Phrygia where he

HOLY PRIORITIES BEING REVEALED

Throughout this book, holy priorities are being made known. If it is true that the church is being directed by its Head, then this is an unavoidable conclusion. People were not charting the course of Divine workings, but were being called into, and directed within, an “eternal purpose.” This is why it is foolish to search for patterns in this book. When it comes to the execution of the will of the Lord, the revelation is not encased in a perceived procedure. If Divine direction was primarily procedural, heavenly teaching and leading would not be required. Of course, those who are caught in the snare of routine are forced to think outside of the perimeter of Shepherd/sheep (Heb 13:30), and Teacher/learner (Eph 4:20-21; 1 John 5:20) arrangements.

Sensing this truth, the Psalmist wrote, “Thy way is in the sea, and Thy path in the great waters, and Thy footsteps are not known” (Psa 77:19). Isaiah expressed the same observation when he wrote, “Thus saith the LORD, which maketh a way in the sea, and a path in the mighty waters” (Isa 43:16). Paul picked up the refrain when he confessed, “O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!” (Rom 11:33).

DIVINE DIRECTION

There should be no question in the mind of any follower of Jesus concerning the possibility of the direction of the Lord. The Scriptures are quite clear about this Divine manner, the Lord extending Him to confirm this truth.

- GUIDED IN STRENGTH. “Thou in Thy mercy hast led forth the people which Thou hast redeemed: Thou hast GUIDED them in Thy strength unto Thy holy habitation” (Exodus 15:13)
- GUIDED ON EVERY SIDE. “Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other, and GUIDED them on every side” (2 Chron 32:22),

• GUIDED IN JUDGMENT. “The meek will He GUIDE in judgment: and the meek will He teach his way” (Psa 25:9),

There should be no question in the mind of any follower of Jesus concerning the possibility of the direction of the Lord. The Scriptures are quite clear about this Divine manner.

GUIDED FOR HIS NAME’S SAKE . “For Thou art my rock and my fortress; therefore for Thy name's sake lead me, and GUIDE me” (Psa 31:3),

• GUIDED WITH HIS EYE. “I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will GUIDE thee with Mine eye” (Psa 32:8),

• GUIDED UNTO DEATH. “For this God is our God for ever and ever: He will be our GUIDE even unto death” (Psa 48:14),

• GUIDED WITH COUNSEL. “Thou shalt GUIDE me with Thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory” (Psa 73:24).

• DIRECTED IN THE PATH. “In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall DIRECT thy paths” (Prov 3:6).

• STEPS DIRECTED. “A man's heart deviseth his way: but the LORD DIRECTETH his steps” (Prov 16:9).

• DIRECTED IN ALL HIS WAYS. “I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will DIRECT all his ways: he shall build My city, and he shall let go My captives, not for price nor reward, saith the LORD of hosts” (Isa 45:13),

• GUIDED CONTINUALLY. “And the LORD shall GUIDE thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones: and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water, whose waters fail not” (Isa 58:11).

• GUIDED IN THEIR WORK. “For I the LORD love judgment, I hate robbery for burnt offering; and I will GUIDE their work in truth, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them” (Isa 61:8).

• GUIDED IN YOUTH. “Wilt thou not from this time cry unto Me, My father, Thou art the GUIDE of my youth?” (Jer 3:4).

• STEPS DIRECTED. “O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to DIRECT his steps” (Jer 10:23).

• FEET GUIDED. “To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to GUIDE our feet into the way of peace” (Luke 1:79).

• WAY DIRECTED, “Now God Himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, DIRECT our way unto you” (1 Thess 3:11).

• HEARTS DIRECTED, “And the Lord DIRECT your hearts into the love of God, and into the patient waiting for Christ” (2 Thess 3:5).

THE RECORD IS IN HARMONY WITH THE KINGDOM MANNER

It is important to note that the inspired historical records are in harmony with the manner of the Kingdom. That is, since the death, resurrection, and exaltation of the Lord’s Christ, this is especially noted.

Prior to Christ

It is an error of significant magnitude to compare those in Christ with those who lived prior to Him, whether before the Old Covenant, during its administration, or even during our Lord's earth ministry prior to His death.

Prior to that, history delivered a stirring account that verified the fallen nature of men. Sin had not been removed, the devil had not been destroyed, and principalities and powers had not yet been plundered. Men were not born again did not have a new nature, and were not indwelt by the Holy Spirit of God. Their sins had not been blotted out, they had not been reconciled unto God, and they did not have eternal life. Thus the history of God's people reflected their sinful condition. The Spirit made no effort to hide this.

- “I have spread out My hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts; A people that provoketh Me to anger continually to My face; that sacrificeth in gardens, and burneth incense upon altars of brick” (Isa 65:2-3).

- “But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart, and went backward, and not forward” (Jer 7:24).

- “And the LORD hath sent unto you all His servants the prophets, rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear” (Jer 25:4).

- “Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled against Thee, and cast Thy law behind their backs, and slew Thy prophets which testified against them to turn them to Thee, and they wrought great provocations” (Neh 9:26).

- “We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from Thy precepts and from Thy judgments: Neither have we hearkened unto Thy servants the prophets, which spake in Thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land” (Dan 9:5-6).

Prior to Christ, there was no practical accord between the people and God because there was no acceptable basis for it. By Divine intent, the people of Israel proved to be a context within which the Messiah could be brought forth. However, very few of them experienced any personal accord with the Lord.

It is an error of significant magnitude to compare those in Christ with those who lived prior to Him, whether before the Old Covenant, during its administration, or even during our Lord's earth ministry prior to His death. While teachers and preachers are often fond of making such comparisons, they are not at all proper. For example, the obtuseness that often characterized the disciples before Jesus died, was not their manner after Pentecost, and is nowhere set forth as though it was. Even those who were spiritual giants during those times excelled when compared with their peers. It is said of those excelling spirits, “And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect” (Heb 11:40).

In Christ Jesus

In Christ Jesus there is a very real change that takes place in men. They become a “new creation” (2 Cor 5:17), are “born again” (1 Pet 1:23), and have their hearts purified “by faith” (Acts 15:9). They are made “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God” (Rom 6:11), and “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27). They possess a “new man” that “after God is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). They are being progressively changed into the image of Christ “from glory unto glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18). That such significant changes could take place without impacting human conduct is inconceivable.

To this point, and in clear confirmation of the reality of this significant change, Divine guidance and direction have been consistently declared in the book of Acts. A brief recollection of this will be helpful.

- Before Jesus ascended into heaven, He told His disciples to wait for “the promise of the Father” (1:4). On the night of His betrayal, Jesus had revealed the teaching/directing ministry of the Holy Spirit, which was “the promise of the Father” (14:16-17; 15:26; 16:13).

- When Peter spoke on the day of Pentecost, he was “filled with the Holy Spirit” (2:4,14).

- When Peter testified in Solomon’s porch, he was “filled with the Holy Spirit” (4:8).

- An angel from heaven directed the apostles on how to proceed (5:19).

- An angel directed Philip to go toward the south to the road leading from Jerusalem to Gaza (8:26).

- The Holy Spirit directed Philip to join himself to a specific chariot (8:26).

- When Jesus appeared to Saul of Tarsus, He directed him concerning what he should do (9:6).

- The Lord appeared to Ananias, directing him to go to Saul, and what to say to him (9:10-17).

- An angel of God directed Cornelius concerning what to do (10:3-6).

- By means of a vision, and the direction of the Holy Spirit, Peter was instructed concerning how to respond to men sent to him from Cornelius (10:11-20).

- After he was imprisoned, “the angel of the Lord” directed Peter concerning what he should do (12:7-11).

- The Holy Spirit directed the brethren in Antioch concerning the activities of Barnabas and Saul (13:2).

- When Paul confronted Elymas the sorcerer, he was “filled with the Holy Spirit,” and therefore knew what to say (13:9).

- Paul is directed through a vision to go into Macedonia, being called to “preach the Gospel unto them” (16:9).

- The Lord speaks to Paul in a vision, telling him to keep preaching in Corinth, for He had “much people” in that city (18:9-10).

Therefore, the promises concerning Divine guidance that were given through the prophets are actually realized in Christ Jesus.

AN INSURRECTION AGAINST PAUL

“ 18:12 And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia, the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, 13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.”

GALLIO

“ And when Gallio was the deputy of Achaia . . .” Other versions read “proconsul,” NKJV “ruler,” BBE “Roman governor,” CJB and “governor.” NLT

GALLIO “was the elder brother of Seneca, and a man of ability, and of a most amiable temper and disposition. His brother Seneca said that he had not a fault, and that everybody loved him. He was called “Dulcis Gallio” by Statius. It is unfortunately not known exactly in what year Gallio became either Consul or Proconsul of Achaia. Had it been known, it would have been invaluable for fixing the chronology of St. Paul's life. Lewin puts it (his proconsulate) in the year A.D. 53, and so does Renan; Howson, between A.D. 52 and A.D. 54. The circumstantial evidence from secular writers corroborating St. Luke's account is exceedingly curious. There is no account extant either of his consulate or of his proconsulate of Achaia." PULPIT COMMENTARY

This passage is the only place in Scripture where Gallio is mentioned (vs 12,14,17). That may appear unworthy of notice. However one cannot take lightly when specific names are found in Scripture. Consider how you would feel if YOU were mentioned one time in the Bible? Would you consider that to be something unworthy of notice?

Gallio was a "deputy," or Roman "Proconsul" in Achaia, the province in which Corinth was found. He was a political dignitary who had charge of that region when Rome ruled the world. He was to Achaia what Sergius Paulus was to Cyprus (Acts 13:7)

Proconsul (ajnqu>patov) was the proper title of the governor of a Roman province when appointed by the senate. Several such are mentioned in the Acts, viz. Sergius Paulus in Cyprus (8:7, 8, 12), Gallio in Achaia (18:12), and the chief officer of Achaia, whose court is indefinitely referred to in ch. 19:38, by the use of the plural."

McCLINTOK & STRONG'S

There is something of significance here that reveals a certain Divine manner. In Scripture, and with remarkable consistency, worldly dignitaries are mentioned only when they interface in some way with the people of God. Otherwise, they obtain no significance in the assessment of the world by God's people.

Following is a sample listing of non-Jewish kings that are mentioned in Scripture. I have limited these examples to kings, but underscore that the same observations made of them also apply to governors, deputies, and other under-rulers.

- A number of kings associated with activities related to ABRAHAM and LOT: Amraphel, Arioch, Chedorlaomer, Tidal, Bera, Birsha, Shinab, Shemeber (Gen 14:1-22).
- Abimelech , king of Gerar, associated with ABRAHAM . (Gen 20:2-18).
- Abimelech , king of the Philistines, associated with ISAAC (Gen 26:1; 26:8-11).
- The king of Egypt , associated with JOSEPH (Gen 40-41).
- The king of Egypt (Pharaoh), associated with the enslavement of ISRAEL and the birth of Moses (Ex 1:15-2:10).
- The king of Egypt (Pharaoh), associated with the deliverance of ISRAEL from Egypt (Ex 3-14).
- The king of Edom , associated with MOSES and ISRAEL (Num 20:1-22).
- Sihon , king of the Amorites, associated with the journey of ISRAEL to Canaan (Num 21:21-29).
- Og , king of Bashan, associated with the journey of ISRAEL to Canaan (Num 21:33-35).
- Balak , king of the Moabites, associated with the journey of ISRAEL to Canaan (Num 22:4-23:7).
- The king of Jericho , associated with ISRAEL 's possession of the promised land (Josh 2:2-3).

- The king of Ai, associated with ISRAEL 's possession of the promised land (Josh 8:1-29)
- Adonizedek , king of ancient Jerusalem, associated with ISRAEL 's possession of the promised land (Josh 10:1-1-23).
- The king of Makkedah , associated with ISRAEL 's possession of the promised land (Josh 10:28).
- Horam , king of Gezer, associated with ISRAEL 's possession of the promised land (Josh 10:33).
- Chushanrishathaim , king of Mesopotamia, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL (Judges 3:8-10).
- Eglon , king of Moab, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL (Judges 3:12-15).
- Jabin , king of Canaan, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL (Judges 4:2-24).
- The king of the children of Ammon , associated with conquests of ISRAEL in Canaan (Judges 11:12-29).
- Agag , king of the Amalakites, associated with conquests of ISRAEL in Canaan (1 Sam 15:15:8-32).
- Achish , king of Gath, associated with the life of DAVID (1 Sam 21:10).
- Hiram, king of Tyre, Associated with the reign of SOLOMON and the building of the Temple(1 Kgs 5:1,11).
- Rezon , king of Zobah, associated with God's chastening of SOLOMON (1 Kgs 11:23).
- Ethbaal , king of the Zidonians, associated with the history of ISRAEL , and the father of Jezebel (1 Kgs 16:31).

There are no purely secular, if I may use that term, accounts in Scripture. All of them are mentioned because they relate to God's workings with His people, or His government among men (as in the tower of Babel, the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the judgment of sinful nations). Even when a record is given of famines and earthquakes, the accounts always relate to something pertaining to the working of the Lord and His people.

The king of Syria , associated with the prophet ELISHA (2 Kgs 6:11-26).

- Shalmaneser , king of Assyria, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL (2 Kgs 17:3-6).
- Nebuchadnezzar , king of Babylon, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL and the Babylonian captivity (Neh 7:6; Dan 2:37).
- Belshazzar , king of Babylon, king of Babylon, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL and the Babylonian captivity (Dan 5:30; 7:1).
- Darius , king of Persia, associated with the chastening of ISRAEL and the Babylonian captivity (Dan 6:1-28).
- Cyrus , king of Persia, associated with the rebuilding of the TEMPLE in Jerusalem (Ezra 1:1-8).
- Herod , king of Judaea, associated the birth of JOHN THE BAPTIST (Lk 1:5-20), and JESUS (Matt 2:1-9).
- Caesar Augustus , associated with the birth of JESUS (Matt 2:1).
- Another king Herod , associated with the arrest and death of JOHN THE BAPTIST (Matt 14:9; Mk 6:14), and the death of JESUS (Lk 23:8-15).

- Yet another Herod , associated with the beheading of JAMES and the arrest of PETER (Acts 12:1-3).
- Claudius , Roman empower, associated with the expulsion of the JEWS from Rome (Acts 18:2).
- King Agrippa , associated with the life of PAUL (Acts 25:13).
- Another Caesar Augustus , associated with the life of PAUL (Acts 25:21-25).
- Aretas the king , associated with the life of PAUL (2 Cor 11:32).

I have taken the time to list several of these rulers (although it is only a relatively small representation of the total), in order to confirm the consistency of this manner. There are no purely secular, if I may use that term, accounts in Scripture. All of them are mentioned because they relate to God's workings with His people, or His government among men (as in the tower of Babel, the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, and the judgment of sinful nations). Even when a record is given of famines (Gen 12:10; 41:30; Ruth 1:1; 2 Sam 21:1; 2 Kgs 8:1) and earthquakes (Amos 1:1; Zech 14:5), the accounts always relate to something pertaining to the working of the Lord and His people. In summary, they pertain to God's eternal purpose, and Divine relationships with people and events. Until this is seen with some degree of clarity, men tend to either neglect or corrupt the text of Scripture.

The Unity of God and His Purpose

Just as in this text, the Holy Spirit did not move holy men to write things merely pertaining to this world, whether they concerned people or events. Everything written in Scripture is within the context of God and His purpose. That is because God and His purpose cannot be separated.

What the Lord has purposed is said to have been "purposed in Himself" (Eph 1:9). Some versions distort the meaning of this text, reading, "purposed in Christ," NIV "set forth in Christ," NRSV "which He had put into His hands," BBE "decided to do through Christ," GWN "determined before hand in Christ," NJB "to plan this in Christ." IE While it is true that this purpose is actually carried out in Christ, that is not the declaration of this text (Eph 1:9). The point is that the purpose proceeded out from God Himself without any other consideration. There was no influence outside of Himself that induced Him to determine this purpose. It was an expression of Himself without regard to any other influences. Paul alludes to the same in his letter to Timothy. "Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to HIS OWN purpose and grace , which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began" (2 Tim 1:9). That purpose was carried out by Christ, and is realized by the recipients of salvation in Christ Jesus. However, the purpose itself is an expression of God Himself. It reflects His Person in all of its magnificent glory.

The Point

The point is that Scripture always reflects the great purpose of God. That purpose is not only the reason that undergirds everything God does, it is also what ties the fabric of Scripture together. If someone could uncover a legitimate flaw or error in Scripture, its entire fabric would be broken down like a wall with untempered mortar. Those who imagine they can select this or that statement of Scripture while discarding others have backed themselves into a corner from which they will not be able to escape. They have embraced a God who allows His word to be wrested, and thus His purpose to be hidden.

INSURRECTION AGAINST PAUL

“ . . . the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat, 13 Saying, This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.” Other versions read, “rose up against Paul,” NKJV “made a united attack against Paul,” NIV “made a concerted attack on Paul,” CJB and “with one consent rose against Paul.” DARBY

One of the burdens of the apostleship was the experience of being charged falsely and misrepresented. Paul referred to this experience, declaring that he was “approved” in his response to malignment. “But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in . . . in distresses . . . by . . . dishonor, by evil report . . . as deceivers . . . as unknown . . . As sorrowful . . .” (2 Cor 6:4-10).

Paul once said of the Jews, “For ye, brethren, became followers of the churches of God which in Judaea are in Christ Jesus: for ye also have suffered like things of your own countrymen, even as they have of the Jews: who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us ; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men: forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they might be saved , to fill up their sins alway: for the wrath is come upon them to the uttermost” (1 Thess 2:14-16). Notice what Paul says of these unbelieving Jews. This applies to everyone who stands in opposition to the Gospel and those who preach it.

- THEY PLEASE NOT GOD. These men would never have acknowledged that they were not pleasing to God – but that is a precise description of them. They work in contradiction of God, and are so regarded in heaven.

- THEY ARE CONTRARY TO ALL MEN. Wherever they are, they put men at a disadvantage, taking the truth from them, and misrepresenting the God of heaven.

- THEY FORBID TO SPEAK THAT MEN MIGHT BE SAVED. They think they are protecting their position. Actually, however, they are making it more difficult for men to be saved.

- THEY ARE FILLING UP THEIR SINS. Everyday they remain in their present condition, their sins are piling up until wrath will erupt upon them. They are like the Amalekites, whose cup of iniquity was not yet full. That is the only reason they were allowed to remain.

Reported in the Book of Acts

Think of how the Jews have been represented as opposing Paul.

- IN DAMASCUS. They took counsel to kill him in Damascus, at the threshold of his ministry. At that time he escaped from them by being let over the wall in a basket (9:23-24).

- IN ANTIOCH. In Antioch, when they saw the multitudes that came to hear Paul, they spoke against him, contradicting and blaspheming (13:45).

- IN ANTIOCH. In Antioch they raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas, expelling them from their coasts (13:50).

- IN ICONIUM. In Iconium they stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil effected against the brethren (14:2).

- IN ICONIUM. In Iconium they sought to have Paul stoned, forcing them to flee to Lystra and Derbe (14:5-6).

- IN LYSTRA. Jews came from Antioch and Iconium to Lystra, and stoned Paul (14:19).

- IN THESSALONICA. In Thessalonica the Jews stirred up the baser people against Paul, forcing the brethren to send him to Berea (17:5-10).

• IN BEREIA. The Jews from Thessalonica came to Berea and stirred up the people against Paul, forcing him to depart to Athens (17:13-15).

• IN CORINTH. In Corinth the Jews opposed themselves and blasphemed Paul; (18:6,12-18).

In his letter to the Corinthians, Paul reminds them that the Jews had him beat with forty stripes minus one on five different occasions (2 Cor 11:24).

There appears to be a prevailing opinion within the professed church that when one is engaged in the will of the Lord, that all will be well. However, we are here exposed to real spiritual life and what attends it. The records itself exposes the error of such thinking.

Paul's apostleship was not accompanied with grandeur, wealth, and worldly fame. He was called to pick up his cross as well as to preach the Gospel – and he did it well. When he said he was “crucified with Christ” (Gal 2:20), with the world being crucified to him and he to the world (Gal 6:14), he was speaking of the kind of opposition he endured while engaged in his calling. It was in the face of the experience of adversity that he said, “Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss . . . that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death” (Phil 3:9-10). Again, when he was in the crucible of suffering he said, “I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus” (Phil 3:14).

There appears to be a prevailing opinion within the professed church that when one is engaged in the will of the Lord, that all will be well. However, we are here exposed to real spiritual life and what attends it. The records itself exposes the error of such thinking.

GALLIO SPEAKS

“ 14 And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you: 15 But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters. 16 And he drave them from the judgment seat.”

Paul is in a court of Roman law, and will find it more congenial than the Jewish courts before whom he has stood. It is remarkable when the world has a better sense of propriety than those who claim identity with the living God – but such is often the case. That is not owing to any deficiency in Divine affiliation. Rather, it is the result of unbelief and hardness of heart among those who claim to be serving God. The absence of wisdom in the church is abnormal (1 Cor 6:4-5).

GALLIO INTERRUPTS THE PROCEEDINGS

“And when Paul was now about to open his mouth, Gallio said unto the Jews, If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness, O ye Jews, reason would that I should bear with you . . .”

Paul Was About to Speak

Other versions read, “as Paul was about to speak,” NIV and “Paul was about to open his mouth and reply.” AMPLIFIED That is, Paul was about to reply to the charges brought against him.

Whether before the apostles or his critics, Paul was ready to stand in defense of what he was doing – not out of a sense of self-vindication, but because he was faithful to his calling. In Jerusalem, he reported what God had done through him and Barnabas (15:12). He elaborated on his message to the Athenian philosophers (18:19-31). He wrote to the Philippians of his “defense and confirmation of the Gospel” (Phil 1:7). He wrote to Timothy of a time when he gave an answer in a legal setting while no other person stood with him (2 Tim 4:16). He defended his posture as a teacher to the Corinthians

(1 Cor 9:1-5). Later, in Jerusalem, Paul would give a lengthy account of his calling, and a defense of his ministry among them (22:1-21). Now, Paul is prepared to speak in his own defense because he has lived in all good consciousness, and has maintained faithfulness to the One who put him into the ministry (1 Tim 1:12).

A Similar Account

Before Paul can mount a defense, Gallio interrupts the proceedings. Here is an experience that parallels that of king Jehosaphat centuries earlier. The Ammonites and Moabites gathered against Israel, and were ready to launch a devastating initiative. Their numbers were impressive, and it appeared hopeless from the human point of view. Upon hearing of the circumstance, Jehosaphat “set himself to seek the Lord, and proclaimed a fast throughout the land.”

After presenting a powerful intercessory prayer to the Lord, heaven responded. The Spirit of the Lord came upon Jahaziel, a Levite of the sons of Asaph. Calling upon the people to give heed to his words he said, “Ye shall not need to fight in this battle.” Instead of fighting, they “appointed singers unto the Lord, and that should praise the beauty of holiness.” It is written that as they sang, “the Lord set ambushments against Junius Annaeus Gallio (originally Lucius Annaeus Novatus), son of the rhetorician Seneca the Elder and the elder brother of Seneca the Younger, was born at Corduba (Cordova) about the beginning of the Christian era.

At Rome he was adopted by L. Junius Gallio, a rhetorician of some repute, from whom he took the name of Junius Gallio. His brother Seneca, who dedicated to him the treatises De Ira and De Vita Beata, speaks of the charm of his disposition, also alluded to by the poet Statius (Silvae, ii.7, 32). It is probable that he was banished to Corsica with his brother, and that both returned together to Rome when Agrippina selected Seneca to be tutor to Nero. Towards the close of the reign of Claudius, Gallio was proconsul of the newly constituted senatorial province of Achaia, but seems to have been compelled by ill-health to resign the post within a few years. During his tenure of office, according to the Bible, he dismissed the charge brought by the Jews against the apostle Paul (Acts 18 (<http://bibref.hebtools.com/?book=Acts&>)). His behaviour on this occasion ("but Gallio cared for none of these things", v. 17) shows the impartial attitude of the Roman officials towards Christianity in its early days. He survived his brother Seneca, but was subsequently put to death by order of Nero (in 65) or committed suicide.

Gallio's tenure can be fairly accurately dated to between 51-52 AD or 52-53 AD. The events of Acts 18 can therefore be dated to this period. This is significant because it is the most accurately known date in the life of Paul. – WIKIPEDIA

Gallio the elder brother of Seneca the philosopher, who was tutor and for some time minister of the emperor Nero. He was "deputy", i.e., proconsul, as in Revised Version, of Achaia, under the emperor Claudius, when Paul visited Corinth (Acts 18:12). The word used here by Luke in describing the rank of Gallio shows his accuracy. Achaia was a senatorial province under Claudius, and the governor of such a province was called a "proconsul." He is spoken of by his contemporaries as "sweet Gallio," and is described as a most popular and affectionate man. When the Jews brought Paul before his tribunal on the charge of persuading "men to worship God contrary to the law" (18:13), he refused to listen to them, and "drove them from the judgment seat" (18:16). Source: EASTON'S 1897 BIBLE DICTIONARY the children of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir . . . and they were smitten” (2 Chron 20:1-22). God fought for them!

This is what took place in our text. Paul did not have to present a defense, even though he was ready to do so. Instead, the God of heaven intervened, turning the heart of Gallio, and causing the dispersion of Paul's enemies.

Gallio Given to See the Situation

At once this ruler recognizes that there was no moral justification for having Paul brought before him. This was not a "matter of wrong or wicked lewdness." Other versions read, "wrongdoing or wicked crimes," NKJV "wrong or vicious crimes," NASB "misdemeanor or serious crime," NIV and "crime or serious villainy." NRSV Gallio was no doubt unaware of the Divine statement of the case concerning civil government: "For he [the civil ruler] is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil" (Rom 13:4). Yet, it appears as though this appointment is written upon the conscience of humanity.

The official charge brought against Paul was, "This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law" (Acts 18:13). The law of the Romans was meant specifically, and the law of the Jews generally. As the Jews who charged Jesus falsely, they sought to establish that the law of the Romans was being contradicted (Lk 23:2).

Nothing could be further from the truth. Rather than that "pure religion" setting people against the civil government, it promotes due honor for it, only prohibiting what requires disobedience to God Himself. In distinction to participating in insurrection, the saints of God are enjoined, "Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom; fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor" (Rom 13:7), and "Honor the king" (1 Pet 2:17). Civil unrest must not be traced to professed believers! Ordinarily, they are to have a calming effect upon society, not one of agitation and turmoil.

There is a civil degeneracy in our time, for this charge would be taken up in the courts of our land, which have stooped beneath the dignity of those Roman courts of law. This circumstance is largely owing to the failure of the professing church to deliver sound doctrine and a godly perspective.

Sometimes Interruptions Are Allowed, and Other Times They Are Not

Not all proceedings against Paul and others were so interrupted. When brought before the Jewish council, Stephen was eventually martyred (Acts 6-7). In Philippi, Paul and Silas were publically beaten and incarcerated – then they were delivered (Acts 16:20-24). Jesus told His disciples of times when they would be delivered over to the councils instead of being delivered from them (Matt 10:17). Felix left Paul bound in prison for two years (Acts 24:27).

Those who labor for the Lord must learn to live by faith, and to adapt to the circumstances in which they find themselves. They may be required to be bound in prison like Joseph before they are exalted (Psa 105:17-19). Or, they may not be exalted at all, but suffer martyrdom like James (Acts 12:1-2). The saints of God must seek deliverance from simplistic views of the kingdom of God.

I WILL BE NO JUDGE OF SUCH MATTERS

"But if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge of such matters." Other versions read, "arguments over doctrine and titles and your own law," NJB "points of disagreement about words and names and your own law." NET

Gallio refused to become embroiled in private Jewish controversies about religious matters. With him, the issue was not forced as it was with Pilate. Pilate also attempted to step away from Jewish controversies (John 18:31). However, because of the nature of Christ's appointed death, Pilate, and Herod as well, were necessarily involved in it (Acts 4:27; Psa 2:2). They could not back away from it.

HE DROVE THEM OUT

“ And he drave them from the judgment seat.” Other versions read, “And he drove them away from the judgment seat,” NASB “So he had them ejected from the court,” NIV and “he dismissed them from the tribunal,” NRSV

The tables were thus turned on the Jews, and they were forced to leave Gallio’s court. They had solicited the aid of the Romans, as they did with Jesus Himself, but this time it was of no avail. Since the Lord is the “King of kings,” He is the One who administered this whole affair. It was He who turned the king’s heart wherever he wanted (Prov 21:1).

The Earth Helping the Woman

Here is a classic example of the earth helping the people of God. In an apocalyptic gospel, John was given to see the devil’s assault upon the people of God. When a flood of delusion emitted from his mouth that was designed to carry away the saints, it is written, “And the earth helped the woman” (Rev 12:16). In that case, the flood fell upon others, while the saints were preserved. In our text, one of the “kings of the earth” helped the man of God, thereby ensuring the continuance of the Gospel.

Once again, it is important to see that the book of Acts chronicles the works of the Lord, not merely the works of men. What is declared in doctrine is lived out and perfected in the crucible of life. We must believe that it is no different in our time, which is also “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2). As men live by faith and walk in the Spirit, what is contained in the doctrine will be worked out in them. This is confirmation of the truth of the doctrine and the faithfulness of God.

According to appearance, it may seem as though happenstance is the mother of all events – but it is not. The Lord is at work, fulfilling His own counsel, and bringing His purpose to fruition. This is His world, and He is administering His will within it. Blessed are those who see it. One of the roles of godly men is to point out the working of the Lord.

SOSTHENES IS BEATEN

“ 17 Then all the Greeks took Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat. And Gallio cared for none of those things.”

ALL THE GREEKS

“Then all the Greeks . . . “ Other versions read, “and they all,” NASB “all of them,” NRSV “all the Grecians,” GENEVA “all the governor’s officers,” GWN “all the Gentiles,” MRD “the mob,” LIVING and “they [the Greeks].” AMPLIFIED

These were the Gentiles, and not Grecian Jews, as some allege. Gallio had already drove the Jews from the “judgment seat,” or chamber where trials were held. Therefore, this could not be the Jews who had leveled the charges against Paul, for they were no longer “before the judgment seat.”

There is something of significance to be seen in this text, and it confirms something affirmed by James. He wrote, “Even so the tongue is a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth !” And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell ” (James 3:6).

In this case, the Gentiles, who, so far as the record is concerned, had not been agitated about the Jews, are suddenly thrown into a rage. The fire of fleshly anger had been ignited by the bigotry of the Jews, and it spread throughout Gallio’s judgment seat.

In this case, the Gentiles, who, so far as the record is concerned, had not been agitated about the Jews, are suddenly thrown into a rage. The fire of fleshly anger had been ignited by the bigotry of the Jews, and it spread throughout Gallio's judgment seat.

THEY BEAT SOSTHENES

“ . . . took Sosthenes, the chief ruler of the synagogue, and beat him before the judgment seat . . . ”

Prior to this, Crispus was described as “the chief ruler of the synagogue” (18:8). It appears that after he had believed and been baptized, he was immediately replaced with Sosthenes. It is further assumed by notable Bible commentators that this is the Sosthenes that was with Paul when he wrote his first letter to the Corinthians: “Paul, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God, and Sosthenes our brother ” (1 Cor 1:1). If this is true, then he was the second synagogue ruler in Corinth that was converted through the ministry of Paul.

In a display of apparent anger over the disruption caused by the Jews, these Greeks hauled Sosthenes back before the judgment seat and had him beaten. It appears that these Greeks thought the disturbance caused by the Jews was far greater than the disruption they had falsely credited to Paul.

When those who claim identity with God cause social disruption, there is no way to estimate the spreading effect of their action. Throughout history, a goodly amount of social unrest has been traced to professing Christians. It may have been in the name of moral crusades, public demonstrations, or civil disobedience. All manner of explanation may be cited in justification of these disturbances – many of which may be in the name of the Lord. However, when social unrest is caused, the fruit of righteousness will not grow, for it is “sown in peace of them that make peace” (James 3:18). I understand that there are serious disagreements on this matter. Yet, care must be taken to not adopt a stance in which it is imagined that social unrest is a valid means of drawing attention to godly causes. All of this will require wisdom from above.

GALLIO CARED FOR NONE OF THOSE THINGS

“And Gallio cared for none of those things.” Other versions read, “Gallio took no notice of these things,” NKJV “was not concerned about,” NASB “showed now concern whatever,” NIV “paid no attention,” NRSV “Gallio troubled himself about none of these things.” DARBY and “refused to take any notice at all.” NJB

The idea is that none of this captured the interest of Gallio. He, like Pilate, knew that the Jews had acted out of envy (Matt 27:18). Their cause was not a noble one, and he knew it. I gather that he was not indifferent to the beating of Sosthenes, but rather did not choose to become involved in it, and was probably displeased that it took place in his court.

There are injustices that are so blatant that even worldly leaders recognize them to be out of order. On one occasion, when Paul's “sister's son” heard of the Jews lying in wait for Paul, he “went and entered into the castle and told Paul.” Upon hearing it, “Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him” (Acts 23:17). Paul knew the conduct of the Jews was thoroughly unreasonable – even to Roman militia, Later, when legal proceedings were being brought against him, he would say, “I appeal unto Caesar.” Even in our time, as during the occasion of our text, it is a sad day when those who claim identity with the God of heaven conduct themselves in a manner that is glaringly improper in the eyes of the world. This is another example of the saying of our blessed Lord, “For the sons of this world are more shrewd in their generation than the sons of light” NKJV (Luke 16:8). The idea is that worldly people are often more disciplined and painstaking in their approach to temporal things than the children of God are in their appointed quest for eternal things. This is certainly not a commendable circumstance, and we should do everything possible to avoid it.

PAUL TARRIES A GOOD WHILE, THEN LEAVES

“ 18a And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while, and then took his leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla and Aquila . . .”

On other occasions, he was forced to flee when opposition was raised against him. However, this time he had a word from the Lord concerning his safety, and a public demonstration of its truth. Therefore his faith was strong, holding to the word of the Lord.

This whole incident ends rather abruptly, and Paul continues in his labors for the Lord. God had intervened in the affairs of men, turning the heart of Gallio, and delivering Paul from danger. Just as Jesus had promised, no man put his hand on Paul to hurt him. The reason . . . He had “much people” in that city, and would not allow Paul to leave until they had been duly taught and cared for (18:10).

PAUL TARRIED A GOOD WHILE

“And Paul after this tarried there yet a good while . . .” Other versions read, “still remained a good while,” NKJV “having remained many days longer,” NASB “stayed on in Corinth for some time,” NIV and “staying there for a considerable time.” NRSV

Paul was apparently not frightened by the attempts of the Jews to stop his work. He had believed the word that Jesus delivered to him concerning not being harmed, and therefore continued for “many days” NASB in his Corinthian labors. A hireling would have been driven away by the circumstances Paul faced. On other occasions, he was forced to flee when opposition was raised against him. However, this time he had a word from the Lord concerning his safety, and a public demonstration of its truth. Therefore his faith was strong, holding to the word of the Lord.

It is in the crucible of conflict and opposition that the strength and commitment of Kingdom laborers is confirmed. Those who cannot bear the heat of trial will soon be eliminated from the service of the King – at least until such time as they recover themselves from the snare of the devil.

TOOK HIS LEAVE OF THE BRETHREN

“ . . . and then took his leave of the brethren . . .” Other versions read, “he left the brothers,” NIV “said farewell to the believers,” NRSV “went away from the brothers,” BBE and “told the brethren farewell.” AMPLIFIED

Paul spent his time primarily with the brethren – those were the people with whom he was constantly affiliated. Those who desired Paul’s company would find him among believers, just as those who sought Jesus would find Him with His disciples (Mk 3:7; 8:10,34; 10:16; John 6:3; 11:54). Paul had converted these Corinthian brethren, and remained with them until such time as they were established in the faith. The incident involving Gallio may very well have taken place during the initial time of his ministry in Corinth. If this is the case, the time he remained there rounded out the year and six months that he spent there (18:11).

Now that Paul prepares to leave that region, he does not bid farewell to those in the marketplace, or to the general populace of Corinth. He rather takes his leave from those among whom he has been ministering. He no doubt spent his last time with the believers as Jesus did with His disciples, as He prepared to die, and when He prepared to return to heaven. That is the manner of godly people.

PAUL SAILS FOR SYRIA

“ . . . and sailed thence into Syria . . .” Other versions read, “sailed for Syria,” NKJV and “set out to sea for Syria.” NASB

I am just speculating at this point, but I seriously wonder how much work for the Lord would be done in our time if it was as inconvenient as it was for Paul. Imagine traveling by boat from Corinth Greece to Syria, which was adjacent to Palestine. On the attending map, Corinth is in the upper left hand corner, and Caesarea, where Paul landed, is in the lower right section. That is well over a thousand miles by sea, in a boat driven by the wind, and subject to the perils of the sea. Yet, there is not the slightest hint of any inconvenience associated with this trip.

In my opinion, there is a certain spiritual liberty that is realized in digesting Scriptural accounts of travels associated with the work of the Lord. The manner in which they are reported provides a kind of snap-shot of the way in which the servants of God thought. It also accents the extent to which they were devoted to their calling. Those who ponder such texts will find they have a calming and sanctifying effect on both the heart and the mind.

One senses that the servant of God focuses on the objective established by the Head of the body, then takes whatever means are necessary to its fulfillment. All of this is done with a readiness of mind that allows the individual to adjust to any unforeseen circumstances related to that objective. I know that many professing believers have not yet arrived at a point where they can think in this manner. Yet, diligence must be given to such a pursuit.

HE TAKES AQUILA AND PRISCILLA

. . . “and with him Priscilla and Aquila . . .” Other versions read, “accompanied by Priscilla and Aquila.” NIV

This is the first time Priscilla is mentioned before Aquila. The same wording is also found in Romans 16:3. It is found again in Second Timothy, where the abbreviated form of her name is used: “Prisca and Aquila” (2 Tim 4:19). Among other things, this confirms that in Christ there “is neither male nor female” (Gal 3:28). In Christ the value and effectiveness of a person is neither determined nor impacted by their gender or social status. Individuals are neither included nor excluded upon that basis. That should be very apparent from the doctrine of Scripture, as well as the historical examples recorded there.

The subjection of the wife to the husband, or a woman to a man, is within the confines of marriage, not their relationship in Christ Jesus (Eph 5:23-33; 1 Pet 3:1-6). Those ordained and unique marriage associations are to be duly honored, for they have been given by God. The few texts that deal with women speaking and teaching (which are two: 1 Cor 14:34-35; 1 Tim 2:11-15), are both within the context of learning and their husbands. They have to do with the introduction of confusion in the assembly, and the usurpation of authority – not with edification or laboring together in the Gospel, as did several women of Scriptural note (Rom 16:1,2,6,7,12,15). It is not proper to attempt to shape the thrust of teaching with these texts.

PAUL HAD A VOW

“18b . . . having shorn his head in Cenchrea: for he had a vow.” Other versions read, “He had his hair cut off at Cenchrea, for he had taken a vow,” NKJV “In Cenchrea he had his hair cut, for he was keeping a vow,” NASB “Before he sailed, he had his hair cut off at Cenchrea because of a vow he had taken ,” NIV “At Cenchreae he had his hair cut, for he was under a vow,” NRSV “having shorn his head in Cenchreae; for he had a vow,” ASV “after having his hair cut short in Cenchrea, because he had taken a vow; with him were Priscilla and Aquila,” CJB “Aquila had his hair cut, since he had taken a vow,” GWN “There he shaved his head according to Jewish custom, marking the end of a vow ,” NLT “Paul had his head shaved according to Jewish custom, for he had taken a vow.” LIVING “As Paul was under a vow, he had his head shaved at Cenchrea,” MONTGOMERY and “At Cenchreae he [Paul] cut his hair, for he had made a vow.” AMPLIFIED

To anyone but a Jew, or someone familiar with God's tutelage of Israel, this text makes no sense. This is not a matter of doctrine, but one that deals with personal commitment and dedication.

At least one version, and several commentators, see this verse as saying Aquila had taken a vow. However, this is not the case, for the person under consideration is Paul, not Aquila. Priscilla and Aquila are incidental in the text, mentioned only because Paul took them with him. Another version represents Paul as leaving Aquila and Priscilla in Cenchrea, proceeding on without them (International English: "At Cenchrea, Paul cut off his hair. he had made a vow to God. Then he left Priscilla and Aquila"). Again, this is taking too much liberty with the text, which states later that Paul left them in Ephesus (v 19). All of this confirms that in the multiplicity of translations far too much liberty is assumed by those presuming to represent the Word of God. When a period of time is marked by men feeling at liberty to rework Scripture, it seems to me that it is evidence of the presence of our adversary the devil. He started his work among men with an attempt to twist God's word, and he is still working in that manner.

While the text itself may appear incidental and of relative unimportance, yet those who take such liberty are making known something about themselves that is not good. Such men are not trustworthy. As Jesus Himself affirmed, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much" (Luke 16:10). Those who cannot be trusted to properly represent incidental texts are certainly not to be relied upon in the handling of pivotal ones.

The Taking of a Vow

To anyone but a Jew, or someone familiar with God's tutelage of Israel, this text makes no sense. This is not a matter of doctrine, but one that deals with personal commitment and dedication. Later, Paul will do something similar at the suggestion of James (21:24-26). There were times when Paul described such actions in these words: "unto the Jews I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the Law, that I might gain them that are under the Law" (1 Cor 9:20). This was an area where certain liberty had been granted.

It appears that this was a Nazarite vow, and that it had been made at some prior time. The Nazarite vow could be made for a brief time, or specific number of days (Num 6:5,13). It could also be for a lifetime – as with Samson (Judges 13:5), Samuel (1 Sam 1:11), and John the Baptist (Lk 1:15).

The Nazarite Vow

Under the Law, a Nazarite vow had to do with separating oneself to the Lord – i.e. devoting himself wholly to the Lord for a specified period of time (Num 6:8). During the duration of that period, three things were required.

- He was to abstain from wine and strong drink, and anything coming from a vine, from the seed kernels to the husks (Num 6:3-4).
- He could not cut his hair (Num 6:5).
- He must avoid all contact with the dead, even if members of his own family were to die during the period of the vow (Num 6:6-7).

Procedures Related to the Vow

The vow procedure was as follows.

- When the vow was fulfilled, the person was brought to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation (Num 6:13).
- An offering was made to the Lord of one male lamb, for a burnt offering, one ewe lamb for a sin offering, and one ram for a peace offering (Num 6:14).

- A basket of unleavened bread, cakes of fine flour mingled with oil, and wafers of unleavened bread anointed with oil were also offered (Num 6:15).

- The sacrifices were offered by the priest (Num 6:16-17).

- The Nazarite shaved the hair of his separation at the door of the tabernacle, and “put it in the fire that was under the which is under the sacrifice of the peace offering” (Num 6:18).

- The priest took the boiled shoulder of the ram, one unleavened cake, and one unleavened wafer and put them upon the hands of the Nazarite after he had shaved his hair (Num 6:19).

- The priest would wave these offerings before the Lord. They then belonged to the priest, and the Nazarite could drink wine (Num 6:20).

- All of this was done in accordance with the vow the person had made to the Lord (Num 6:21).

Some Observations

Now, all of this accents the seriousness of determining to give oneself wholly to the Lord, refraining from enjoyable indulgences and contact with any form of death – even within the family of the one taking the vow. Under the Law, there were allowances for periods of special dedication, when the person was wholly absorbed with the Lord Himself. In the case of a lifetime vow, such as that of Samson, Samuel, and John the Baptist, the entirety of the person’s life was given to the Lord, with no provision for other pursuits.

First, within our modern church culture, there is little thought given to this kind of devotion – devotion that was found under an inferior covenant. Actually, this was a kind of mirror of “the newness of life” into which we are raised in baptism (Rom 6:3-4).

About This Text

Concerning this text, it does appear as though this was a Nazarite vow. The only omission would be the sacrifice of animals, which had been superceded by the perfect sacrifice of Christ. His was an offering for sin, and one that made peace as well. It was also a “burnt offering” because the wrath of God was upon Him as He was “made to be a curse for us” (Gal 3:13). Therefore, I cannot conceive of Paul offering the sacrifices stipulated under the law of the Nazarite. The remainder of the procedures, however, could be done with a good conscience, even though there was Divine compulsion to do so.

- It appears that this was the Nazarite vow.

- The vow was made prior to the cutting of the hair.

- In this text, the cutting of the hair probably signified the termination of the vow.

This being the case, it is assumed he would take that hair to Jerusalem, presenting it as the Law had prescribed.

- Perhaps the vow it had to do with his stay in Corinth, during which time he vowed to let nothing interfere with his stay. This would have followed Christ’s appearance to him, instructing him to remain in Corinth, not being afraid to speak (18:9).

In his letters to the Corinthians Paul did not mention Christ’s ascension, exaltation, intercession, or His mediation of the New Covenant. He only briefly alluded to His present reign .

It also had to do with confronting the Jews to whom he was going, to show them that he did not despise the Law, and that he had not embraced a religion that lacked commitment and devotion.

- The Law was, particularly in its ceremonial aspects “ready to vanish away” (Heb 8:13). and had not thoroughly been removed, God allowing time for a transition to the greater covenant. In view of this, and without reverting to the Law as a means to justification, Paul was at liberty to take a vow for noble purposes, including becoming a Jew to the Jews.

- We also ought to consider that Paul maintained a hard discipline over himself, BIBLE ILLUSTRATOR keeping under his body (1 Cor 9:27). “We can trust that man. We feel that a man so honest in a matter so comparatively trifling is likely to be severely true in matters of larger breadth. It is thus we must judge one another. Men cannot, perhaps, understand the articles of our theological belief, but they can understand our temper, our honesty over the counter. If they find us faithful in little things they must reason that we are faithful also in greater things.” J.D. STALKER, BIBLE ILLUSTRATOR

Of course, all of these are only rather crude thoughts, and are not intended to be an authoritative exegesis of the passage. I provide them to confirm that Paul maintained integrity in what he did, and is to be trusted to be faithful to the Lord who called Him. There are a number of thoughtless people who have stood in criticism of Paul for doing things like those mentioned in this text. In my judgment, they are wholly unwarranted and betray the absence of holy commitment as well as sound judgment.

A CONSIDERATION

It is also possible that this was related to his determination while among the Corinthians: “For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified” (1 Cor 2:2). This was a determination that he did not express to any other body of believers. In fact, among others He accented the resurrection, enthronement, intercession, and reign of the Lord Jesus Christ (Rom 4:24-25; 6:9; 7:4; 8:11,34; 9:5; 10:9-10; Gal 1:1; Eph 1:20-22; 4:8; Phil 2:9-11; Col 2:12,15; 3:1-2; 1 Thess 1:10).

In his letters to the Corinthians Paul did not mention Christ’s ascension, exaltation, intercession, or His mediation of the New Covenant. He only briefly alluded to His present reign (1 Cor 15:25-27). He suggested the mediation of Jesus when He wrote “ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus” (1 Cor 6:11). There are several words pertaining to Jesus that are not mentioned in either First or Second Corinthians. They include the following: “Savior,” “Mediator,” “Shepherd,” “King,” “Advocate,” “Head,” “High Priest,” and “Redeemer.”

One of the great penalties of carnality is the necessity of withholding of key and beneficial information. Thus Paul said to the Corinthians, “I . . . could not speak unto you as unto spiritual.” And again, “I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able.”

I do not wish to press these omissions too far. My point is that there were great stabilizing doctrines that were delivered to other churches, yet were apparently not common to the Corinthians. These would include the following.

- Justification by faith, together with its implications (Rom 3:21-5:21; Gal 2:16-17; 3:11,24; 5:4).
- The warfare between the flesh and the spirit (Rom 7:15-25; Gal 5:15-25).
- The new man and the old man (Rom 6:6; Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:9-10).
- The uniting of Jew and Gentile in Christ (Eph 2:15-16).
- The eternal purpose of God (Rom 8:28; Eph 1:11; 3:11).

- What was involved in the Word becoming flesh (Rom 8:3; Gal 4:4; Phil 2:5-8).
- The High Priesthood of Christ (Heb 2:7; 3:1; 4:14-15; 5:5-6,10; 6:20; 7:17-26; 8:1-4; 9:11; Heb 10:21-22).
- The plundering of Satan and his hosts (Col 2:15; 2 Tim 1:10; Heb 2:14). The only mentioning of the devil to the Corinthians dealt with the danger of being subverted, destroyed, or buffeted by him (1 Cor 5:5; 7:5; 1 Cor 2:11; 11:14; 12:7).

I understand this to be owing to the prevailing carnality for which they were noted (1 Cor 3:1-3). Among them, Paul had to speak carefully, lest they be drawn to what they conceived to be the wisdom of men (1 Cor 2:3-5). He would not take support from them, while he did from others (2 Cor 11:8-9).

Knowing the predilection Paul had for making known the profound things that had been made known to him (2 Cor 12:1; Eph 3:2-12; Col 2:1-3), it appears to me that an extraordinary amount of discipline was required to confine himself to “Christ and Him crucified.”

One of the great penalties of carnality is the necessity of withholding of key and beneficial information. Thus Paul said to the Corinthians, “I . . . could not speak unto you as unto spiritual” (1 Cor 3:1). And again, “I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able” (1 Cor 3:2). Similarly, to the Hebrews it was written, “Called of God an high priest after the order of Melchisedec. Of whom we have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing” (Heb 5:10-11).

I am saying that it makes perfect sense that Paul’s determination to not know anything among the Corinthians except “Christ and Him crucified” could very well have been attended by a godly vow. The Corinthians were people in whom the death of Christ was not at work, and Paul chided them for it. “Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus , that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh. So then death worketh in us , but life in you” (2 Cor 4:10-12). Their continued infantile state loudly testified to the lack of the dying of Jesus in them. That is why Paul had to major on the death of Christ. The death of Christ within us involves the subordination of the flesh – and that had not been taking place among the Corinthians.

Although this is only my own persuasion, I must also confess that this kind of commitment and dedication to the welfare of those being taught is virtually unknown in our time. The implications of Christ’s death are also generally little known today. That circumstance is why men appear to have such difficulty with this passage. It also accounts for the extraordinary level of sin in the church. However, let no an impugn Paul.

PAUL LEAVES AQUILA AND PRISCILLA, BUT HIMSELF ENTERS INTO THE SYNAGOGUE

“ 19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there: but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.”

En route to Syria, and ultimately Caesarea, the ship apparently docked in Ephesus, directly east of Cenchrea. Later, Paul will resume his journey from there. The trip between Corinth and Ephesus is estimated to take 12-15 days. WHEDON’S COMMENTARY

PAUL LEAVES AQUILA AND PRISCILLA

The meaning here is not that Paul did, in fact, ultimately leave Aquila and Priscilla in Ephesus. At this point, it may have been in a temporary location within the city. We know from verses that follow, however, that they did remain in Ephesus, where they were able to further instruct Apollos (18:24-26). At this point, however, Paul had Kingdom business that required his attention. It is also possible that Paul had more than one meeting in the Ephesian synagogue while he waited to resume his trip to Caesarea. In that case, Aquila and Priscilla no doubt joined him during his reasoning sessions.

Ephesus was one of the primary cities in Asia. Two years prior to this occasion, Paul and company were “forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia” (Acts 16:6). Now, however, the season was different, and the times and seasons are under the control of the Lord (Acts 1:7; 17:25; 1 Tim 6:15). The point is that Paul is able to recognize an open door, and therefore enters into it immediately. This suggests that Spirit formerly forbade them by simply closing all the doors of opportunity, so that they simply could not preach in Asia. There are many advantages to walking in the Spirit, and one of them is being able to sense appropriate times and seasons.

PAUL HIMSELF ENTERS INTO THE SYNAGOGUE

“ . . . but he himself entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews.” Other versions read, “and had a discussion with the Jews,” NRSV “argued with the Jews,” RSV “held dialogue with the Jews,” CJB “disputed with the Jews,” GENEVA “discoursed with the Jews,” MRD “held discussions with the Jews,” NAB “addressed the Jews,” NET “to debate with the Jews,” NJB and “discoursed and argued with the Jews.” AMPLIFIED

In the book of Acts, this is the tenth time those in Christ are said to have reasoned, taught, and preached in the synagogues.

- STEPHEN IN A JERUSALEM SYNAGOGUE (6:9-13).
- SAUL IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF DAMASCUS (9:20-23).
- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF SALAMIS (13:5).
- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF ANTIOCH OF PISCIDIA (13:14-41).
- PAUL AND BARNABAS IN A SYNAGOGUE IN ICONIUM (14:1-5).
- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER A SYNAGOGUE IN THESSALONICA (17:1-4).
- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER A SYNAGOGUE IN BEREIA (17:10).
- PAUL DISPUTES IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF ATHENS (17:17a).
- PAUL REASONS IN THE SYNAGOGUE OF CORINTH (18:5-6).
- PAUL ENTERS THE SYNAGOGUE IN EPHEBUS AND REASONS WITH THE JEWS (18:19-21).

Behold how the conduct of the men of God matched the doctrine. The doctrine is that the Gospel of Christ “is the power of God unto salvation to the Jew first , and also to the Greek” (Rom 1:16). It is true that Paul had “great heaviness and continual sorrow of heart” for the Jews – his kinsmen according to the flesh (Rom 9:2). He explains that this was not mere fleshly sentimentality, but was based upon their favored status before God. “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5),

Notwithstanding, over and above his personal feelings on the matter, the Gospel, by its very design, applied “first” to the Jew. They are the ones to whom the promises were made, and Paul’s fellowship with Christ compelled him to minister with that in mind. Peter, who was the apostle to the Jews, or “the circumcision” (Gal 2:9), once said to the Jews, “ Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities” (Acts 3:26). Once, when rejected by the Jews, Paul said to them, “It was necessary that the word of God should first have been spoken to you ” (Acts 13:46). Therefore, in strict comportment with the nature of the Gospel, as well as in harmony with his own purified heart, Paul continued to address the Jews first.

THE HOLY ART OF REASONING

It seems to me that there is not a contemporary emphasis on the reasonableness of the Gospel of Christ: that is, that the message itself is conducive to sound and extended reasoning. It promotes thought, and when received sanctifies the thinking process.

In a vain display of pseudo intellectualism, clerics often attempt to explain in simplistic terms what the Gospel declares. This kind of approach is also seen in many of the versions of Scripture that are flooding the religious market. The supposition is that clarity is obtained by means of intellectual simplicity. However, this is not so. It is rather through “reasoning” that clarity is promoted. Faith is the basis of understanding, for it is rooted in God Himself. Reasoning is the field in which faith plows.

The various components of reasoning are drawn from revelation – what God has said . These statements are encapsulated in Scripture. Sound reasoning perceives these statements in view of God’s eternal purpose, as made known in His eternal salvation, which is in Christ Jesus. For example, what God has said concerning the sinfulness of man, the reality of death, and the definition of right and wrong are considered. The Law of God, which defines sin and exposes men to aspects of the Divine nature, is also brought into consideration, together with His works and promises. When these things are seen properly, the salvation of God makes perfect sense, and a conviction of both its reality and accessibility is realized.

Since the Jews had been tutored in all of these things through the Scriptures, Paul could reason in the synagogues. We do have one extensive discourse in the record of his word in the synagogue of Antioch of Pisidia (13:16-47). That was an occasion that revealed who was ordained unto eternal life, and who judged themselves unworthy of that life (13:46-48).

Thus we see that sound reasoning uncovers flawed thinking and hard hearts, as well as hungry souls and tender hearts. These discoveries cannot be realized independently of preaching and teaching the Gospel

ANOTHER PRIORITY

Right here it might be well to mention another priority that has been revealed. Elsewhere Paul affirmed that he had been given to see things previously hidden from men. In summation, he referred to this as “the mystery of Christ” (Eph 3:4), “the unsearchable riches of Christ” and “the fellowship of the mystery” (Eph 3:8-9). This includes powerful insights into the following, all of which are expounded in Paul’s teaching. Here are a few of those marvelous insights.

- The imputation of righteousness (Rom 3:21; 4:8-24; 5:19; 2 Cor 5:21).
- Righteousness is realized through faith (Rom 3:22,25; 4:5-13; 10:6; Phil 3:9).
- The need for, and fact and nature of, Justification (Rom 3:24-5:9).
- What occurs in baptism (Rom 6).
- The purpose of the gifts given to the church (Eph 4:8-16).
- The delineation of “the old man” and “the new man” (Rom 6:6; 7:15-25; Eph 4:22-24; Col 3:8-9).

- The objective of salvation (Rom 8:28-30; 2 Cor 3:18; Eph 3:10,16-18; 4:12-16).
- The nature of the New Covenant (2 Cor 3:7-11; Gal 3:11-18; Heb 8:1-10:29).
- The High Priesthood of Jesus (Heb 2:17; 3:1-10:21).
- The nature and objective of spiritual gifts (Rom 12:1-6; 1 Cor 12:1-31; Eph 4:8-16).
- The role of hope (Rom 8:20-25).
- That the church is “the body of Christ,” into which He pours His “fulness” (1 Cor 12:27; Eph 1:23; 4:12-16; 5:30; Col 1:18; 2:19).

These things, Paul affirmed, are “for all saints” (Eph 3:18-20). The people are to know these things, their eyes being opened to them (Eph 1:18-20). This is because they are the means through which they will be conformed to the image of God’s Son, which is His revealed objective (Rom 8:29-30). The saints are to know the things that have been “freely given” to them by God (1 Cor 2:12), otherwise they are thrust into jeopardy and Satan is given the advantage.

It is a serious transgression when those in Christ continue in a state of ignorance concerning the things that have been provided for them in Christ Jesus. Not only did Paul bring the news of the promised Messiah to the Jews, he faithfully delivered what had been revealed for the saints. Just as surely as he faithfully went into the synagogues, he also was diligent in strengthening the disciples, comforting them, and ensuring that they obtained the understanding intended for them (Acts 14:22-23,28; 15:41 16:5,40; 18:23).

When the flock of God is not fed, and due care is not given to the church of God, those charged with such responsibilities have sinned against Christ. Jesus is the One who mandated that His lambs and sheep be fed (John 21:15-17). Apostolic doctrine insists, “Feed the flock of God!” (1 Pet 5:2). There is no need for convenient explanations to be given, for none of them are acceptable. It is required in stewards that a man be found faithful (1 Cor 4:2).

THEY WANTED HIM TO STAY, BUT HE DID NOT

“ 20 When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not.”

I never weary of noting the consistency and fervency of Paul regarding the things of God. Some men might have relaxed during a voyage stopover – but not Paul. Whether in Thessalonica, Athens, Corinth, or Ephesus, He goes about the work of the Lord, reasoning in the synagogue, as was his custom.

THEY DESIRED FOR HIM TO TARRY

“When they desired him to tarry longer time with them . . .” Other versions read, “asked him to stay a longer time,” NKJV “asked him to spend more time,” NIV “being requested by them,” BBE “asked him to stay a few days,” LIVING and “begged him to stay longer.” MONTGOMERY

Like the synagogue in Berea, among whom some noble souls were found (Acts 17:11), Paul was cordially received in Ephesus. The trouble that took place in Berea was stirred up by some Jews from Thessalonica. Fortunately, they did not follow Paul to Ephesus.

How refreshing it must have been to Paul to have those attending the Ephesus synagogue request him to “tarry longer time with them.” The hearts of these people had been kindled by reasoning: not by singing, but by reasoning; not by handouts or entertainment, but by reasoning! When was the last time you heard of a body of people, or a single individual, who fervently asked to hear more reasoning concerning the Scriptures? That is certainly something to ponder!

Once again we find those who received the word being desirous for extended exposure to the truth.

- CAESAREA. The household of Cornelius, in Caesarea (10:48).
- CYPRUS. Sergius Paulus from Cyprus, who desired to hear the word of God (13:7).
- ANTIOCH OF PISIDIA. The Gentiles in Antioch of Pisidia (13:42).
- PHILIPPI. Lydia, in Philippi (16:15).
- PHILIPPI. The jailer in Philippi (16:34).
- ATHENS. Certain men clave to Paul in Athens (17:34).
- EPHESUS. The Jews in Ephesus (18:20).

It is appropriate to once again call your attention to the places where Paul spent an extended period of time.

There are countless numbers of religious institutions that maintain large and costly campuses and staffs, yet concentrate minimal time on the saints of God. Some of these institutions spend more time in community service than in nurturing the people of God.

ANTIOCH. Early in his ministry he remained with Barnabas with the church in Antioch for “a whole year,” assembling with them and teaching “much people” (Acts 11:26).

- ICONIUM. After “a great multitude both of the Jews and Greeks believed,” Paul and Barnabas spent a “long time” in Iconium, speaking boldly in the name of the Lord (Acts 14:1,3).

- ANTIOCH. After fulfilling the mission to which the Spirit had called them, Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch, remaining there a “long time with the disciples” (Acts 14:28).

- ANTIOCH. After settling the issue of circumcision that had arisen (Acts 15:1), Paul and Barnabas spent an unspecified period of time in Antioch “teaching and preaching the word of God” (Acts 15:35).

- CORINTH. He remained in Corinth for one and a half years (Acts 18:11).

- EPHESUS. After spending three months disputing in the synagogue of Ephesus, Paul “separated the disciples” and disputed daily in the school of Tyrannus. This continued for two years (Acts 19:10).

- EPHESUS. Paul told the Ephesians elders that he had spent “three years” among them, “warning every man night and day with tears” (Acts 20:31). This was a summation of which two years and three months are explained above (Acts 19:10).

- CAESAREA. Coming into Caesarea “Paul’s company” spent “many days” at the house of “Philip the evangelist,” who had four daughters that prophesied (Acts 21:10).

- ROME. When in Rome, Paul was under house arrest. He was given leave to have his own hired house, where he remained for “two whole years.” He received all who came to him, “Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 28:31).

Why Mention These Things?

It is necessary to mention these things because of the religious climate of our times. There has been a concerted effort to accent brevity and infrequency. There are countless numbers of religious institutions that maintain large and costly campuses and staffs, yet concentrate minimal time on the saints of God. Some of these institutions spend more time in community service than in nurturing the people of God. Furthermore, there does not appear to be many requests for “more” – more of the Word; more time together reasoning on the truth; more time in the exposition of truth. Yet, few would be willing to affirm there is little hunger and thirst for righteousness, meager interest in truth, and little or no affection for the things “that are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1-2). Men insist on maintaining a form of godliness, with all of its institutional trappings, yet manifest no genuine interest in the truth of God. One can scarcely find a mega-church where everyone comes together into one place at one time more than one time a week to concentrate on the word of God. For years the American church has had the smallest audiences when the accent was on prayer and the Word. In fact, men have now learned to live with this circumstance – one that is foreign to the Scriptures..

The arresting thing about all of this is that such circumstances are not only absent in Scripture, they are antithetical to the thrust of Scripture, and are in sharp contrast with the recorded responses of those who actually did believe the Gospel.

In this text we have a group of Jews begging Paul to stay longer with them – not merely for that particular gathering, but for an extended period of time. Was their request driven by the fact that Paul was a Jew? Who would be so foolish as to affirm such nonsense? Because of interest in the truth, the Lord was drawing them to Himself. Like it or not, those who have no prevailing interest in the truth are not being drawn by the Lord. This is because such drawing is through the truth, and a corresponding love of it. That is the means through which people are drawn to Christ. Jesus referred to this means when He spoke of His death: “And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me” (John 12:32). The Jesus who was “lifted up from the earth” is the Lamb who was crucified by Divine intention, took away the sins of the world, and plundered the hosts of darkness. He is the One through whom salvation was wrought and is experienced. It is not possible to participate in that salvation without having a prevailing interest in it. That interest involves wanting to be around those who proclaim it with power and insight.

HE CONSENTED NOT

“ . . . he consented not.” Other versions read, “he declined,” NIV “he said, No,” BBE “he did not accede,” DARBY “he refused,” GWN “he could not be persuaded,” MRD “he felt that he had no time to lose,” LIVING and “he would not consent.” MONTGOMERY

As used here, the word “consent” means to assent to, or express approval. THAYER Paul, then, did not approve of the suggestion that he remain with those in Ephesus. It was not because he had no interest in them, as will be confirmed in what he will add. The text suggests that there were repeated efforts on the part of those Jews to get Paul to stay, but he could not be persuaded to do so. This was not his manner, so there had to be a prevailing reason that justified his refusal to remain there. After all, this is not the record of a weak and uncommitted man.

As I have already indicated, we know from the rest of the narrative that Aquila and Priscilla remained in Ephesus. Thus those interested souls will not be left alone. The presence of these two companions, allowed him to continue with his intentions to go to Caesarea.

PAUL HAD TO, BY ALL MEANS, KEEP THE FEAST

“ 21a But bade them farewell, saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem . . . ”

As is characteristic of true kingdom laborers, Paul does not leave the people to whom, he has been speaking in doubt concerning himself. He provides no opportunity for the adversary to tempt them with lying thoughts about Paul. He was, in fact, speaking in wisdom toward those who were, at the time, “without,” tempering his speech with grace (Col 4:5-6).

PAUL BIDS THEM FAREWELL

“But bade them farewell . . .” Other versions read, “took leave of them,” NKJV “he left,” NIV “went from them,” BBE and “said good-bye.” CSB

We know from the words that follow that his leaving was occasioned by the departure of the ship on which he was sailing. There is every reason to believe that they accompanied him to the ship, and that these words were spoken while he was boarding the ship.

I MUST KEEP THE FEAST

“ . . . saying, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem . . . ” Other versions read, “this coming feast,” NKJV “the approaching feast at Jerusalem,” MRD “this feast that cometh [to] be in Jerusalem,” PNT and “be at Jerusalem for the holiday.” LIVING

None of these scholastic considerations make the text any more sure than it already is. However, I have taken the time to briefly deal with this matter because of the doubt I have concerning the intellectually honesty of those who would place a question mark upon the English text of scripture.

This phrase is omitted in the following versions: ASV, NASB, NIV, RSV, NRSV, BBE, CJB, CSB, DOUAY, ERV, GWN, NAB, NAS, NAU, NET, NIB, NJB, IE, WEYMOUTH, ISV, WILLIAMS, MONTGOMERY, AMPLIFIED, and PHILLIPS. It is included in the following versions: NKJV, DARBY, GENEVA, MRD, PNT, RWB, TNT, WEB, YLT, WYCLIFFE, CLOVERDALE.

Although those who omit the text justify their action by saying it is not included in some of the manuscripts – yet no one is prepared to say it has no justification for being in the text. Adam Clarke says, “The whole of this clause, I must by all means keep this feast that cometh in Jerusalem, is wanting in ABE, six others; with the Coptic, Aethiopic, Armenian, and Vulgate.” Yet, he comments on its validity, as do other imminent commentators (John Calvin, Albert Barnes, Whedon, Matthew Henry, John Gill, Pulpit Commentary, John Wesley, J.W. McGarvey, and Jamieson, Fausset and Brown. Daniel Whedon says of the text, “This entire clause is found wanting in a number of the best manuscripts; but it is sufficiently sustained to be retained in the text.” COMMENTARY ON ACTS

None of these scholastic considerations make the text any more sure than it already is. However, I have taken the time to briefly deal with this matter because of the doubt I have concerning the intellectually honesty of those who would place a question mark upon the English text of scripture. They often speak as though they are representing the community of Christian scholars, which they are not. Further, in the absence of any genuinely original manuscript, I do not know what rule of logic would compel a person to arbitrarily select copied manuscripts and assign the words “best and more accurate” to them. Such men have really added nothing to the household of faith, but have only cast the poison of carnal thought into the pot of reasoning.

What We Do Know

We do know that Paul did, in fact, go to Jerusalem, landing in Caesarea, which was adjacent to Jerusalem, and then going “up,” and saluting “the church,” which doubtless refers to Jerusalem (18:22).

We are not told of which feast he was attending, although it is assumed to be the Passover. Later, he will attend the feast of Pentecost (20:16). We know from his writings that Paul did not keep the feasts as a matter of Law (Col 2:16). However, the apostles and other brethren would be there, and Paul could give account of his labors among the Gentiles. Because of false reports that had been circulating about him, it appears to me that he seized this opportunity to set the record straight. Later, Paul will express his strong desire to go to Jerusalem again even, knowing that opposition awaited him. “And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God” (Acts 20:22-24).

Paul was driven by high motivations that are only known to those who live by faith, walk in the Spirit, and are living wholly unto the Lord. Suffice it to say, there is no cause to imagine that Paul departed from the will of the Lord, or was not directed by Him, in determining to go to Jerusalem. The record of his faithfulness should lead us to assume he had noble motives.

PAUL SAYS HE WILL RETURN, IF THE LORD WILLS

“21b . . . but I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus..” Other versions read, “God willing,” NKJV “if it is God’s will,” NIV “if God lets me,” BBE “if God wants me to,” GWN and “if God permitted.” LIVING

This is the language of a man whose heart was devoted to doing the will of the Lord. He did not live by a system of Law, imposed upon those who had no desire for it. When he said “if God will,” he spoke as one who would be able to recognize such Divine willingness. The Spirit had directed Paul and Barnabas to enter into a special work, and it was immediately recognized (Acts 13:2-3). The Spirit forbade them to preach in Asia, and they perceived it (Acts 16:7). He did not allow them to go into Bithynia, and they comprehended it (Acts 16:7). By means of a vision, Paul was directed to go into Macedonia, and Paul and those with him immediately perceived it (Acts 16:9-12). When Paul was in Corinth, the Lord appeared to him saying that He had much people in that city, and that he should not leave, but continue to speak – and Paul immediately responded in faith (Acts 18:10-11).

It is one thing to teach the people that they “ought to say, If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this or that” (James 4:15). It is, however, possible to actually live in such a manner as does not require such exhortations. That is the kind of man Paul was.

It is not that Paul had access to some special kind of direction, even though his mission was a special mission. He was directed by a “like precious faith,” or “common faith” – for there really is only “one faith” (2 Pet 1:1; Tit 1:4; Eph 4:5). He had a special gift, but not a special Spirit, for there is only “one Spirit” (Eph 4:4). His “new man” was not unique to him, but bore the same characteristics as that which is given to everyone who is in Christ Jesus (Eph 4:24; Col 3:10).

Paul lived in the Spirit, and therefore walked in the Spirit – something that is common in all who are actually walking in the newness of life (Rom 6:4; Gal 5:25).

In keeping with the nature of the newness of life, which involves being “dead indeed unto sin, but alive to God through Christ Jesus” (Rom 6:11), Paul tells these inquiring Jews what he will surely do. He will come back to them, if the Lord wills. That presumes that he was also leaving them according to the Lord’s will. It was important that this be said, for in so doing the faithfulness of God, as well as the integrity and faithfulness of His people, would be duly demonstrated.

With these words ringing in their ears, the Ephesians Jews apparently saw Paul depart. From one point of view, it was no doubt disappointing. However, Paul left them thinking about the will of God, and the holy resolve of those who trust in Him. That is a wonderful impression to leave! It is God for the children of God to determine to have holy departures.

PAUL SALUTES THE CHURCH, THEN GOES DOWN TO ANTIOCH

“ 22 And when he had landed at Caesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, he went down to Antioch.”

HE LANDED AT CAESAREA

“And when he had landed at Caesarea . . .” Other versions read, “come to land at Caesarea,” BBE “arrived in the city of Caesarea,” GWN “proceeded by sea and came to Caesarea,” MRD and “The next stop was at the port of Caesarea.” NLT

The city of Caesarea was incidental, being a port city where Paul disembarked from the ship. There were actually two cities bearing this name. This city was in Judea, while Caesarea Philippi which was about 120 miles north of Jerusalem, where Peter made the confession that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God (Matt 16:13-16). The seaport city where Paul disembarked is mentioned frequently in Scripture (Acts 8:40; 9:30; 10:1, 24; 11:11; 12:19; 18:22; 21:8,16; 23:23, 33; 25:1,4,6,13). Philip preached in this area. It was also the place where Cornelius lived. Herod was smitten by an angel in that city. However, notwithstanding the relative prominence of Caesarea, Paul did not remain there.

HE SALUTED THE CHURCH

“ . . . and gone up, and saluted the church . . .” Other versions read, “gone up and greeted the church,” NKJV “went up to Jerusalem and greeted the church,” NRSV “he went to see the church,” BBE “went up to Jerusalem and saluted the church,” DOUAY “went to Jerusalem, greeted the church,” GWN “greeted the church at Jerusalem,” NET “visited the church at Jerusalem,” NLT “went up to Jerusalem and inquired after the welfare of the Church,” WEYMOUTH “he went up and saluted the church [at Jerusalem],” AMPLIFIED and “paying his respects to the Church in Jerusalem.” PHILLIPS

The church in Jerusalem was the hub of apostolic activity. The city of Jerusalem is mentioned sixty times in the book of Acts, confirming its centrality in the Kingdom of God (1:4,8,12,19; 2:5,14; 4:6,16; 5:16,28; 6:7; 8:1,14,25,26, 27; 9:2,13,21,26,28; 10:39; 11:2,22,27; 12:25; 13:13,27,31; 15:2,4; 16:4; 18:21; 19:21; 20:16,22; 21:4; ,11,12,13,15,17,31; 22:5,17,18; 23:11; 24:11; 25:1,3,7,9;15,20, 24; 26:4,10,20; 28:17).

The Gospel initially spread from Jerusalem when the believers were scattered by persecution, and went everywhere preaching the Word (8:1-4). When Samaria turned to the Lord, apostles went from Jerusalem to ensure they received the Holy Spirit (8:14). Peter reported to the brethren in Jerusalem the epoch of the conversion of the Gentiles at the house of Cornelius (11:2-18). Prophets came from Jerusalem to Antioch to establish them more fully in the faith, and to inform them of the future need of support in Jerusalem (11:27-30). When an issue arose about circumcision that could not be satisfactorily resolved in Antioch, brethren were sent to the apostles in Jerusalem to obtain an answer, which was gladly received (15:2-4).

All of this confirms that Jerusalem was a very real center of spiritual activity. When it comes to people and places in Christ Jesus, there is no significance where there is no legitimate and beneficial activity.

Although Luke does not provide the details of this visit, it is generally understood that Paul would have given an account of his most recent travels, confirming the acceptance of the Gentiles, and the mighty working of the Lord, as he did at other times.

HE WENT DOWN TO ANTIOCH

“ . . . he went down to Antioch.”

Even though Antioch was north of Jerusalem, travels are said to go “down from Jerusalem” because of its high elevation (Mk 3:22; Lk 10:30; Acts 8:26; 25:7). Those traveling to Jerusalem, regardless of their beginning point, are said to “go up to Jerusalem” (John 11:55; Acts 11:2; ; 21:4; 25:9; Gal 1:17).

This is now the fourth time Paul has gone to Antioch of Syria (Acts 11:26; 14:26; 15:22; 18:22). Each time he spend an extended period there.

- Acts 11:16: “A whole year.”
- Acts 14:26-28: “Abode long time.”
- Acts 15:22-35: “Continued in Antioch, teaching and preaching the word of the Lord.”
- Acts 18:22-23: “Spent some time there.”

It is very apparent that Paul’s heart was especially knit to these brethren. Here is where he first spent an entire year with Barnabas, during which time the church flourished, and “the disciples were first called Christians” (11:26). It was in Antioch that the Spirit called Barnabas and Saul to a special work that extended over some period of time. Following that mission they returned to Antioch again, remaining “a long time.” It was at Antioch that the issue of circumcision was resolved, following consultation with the apostles and elders in Jerusalem. And now, Paul returns again, no doubt reporting the things the Lord had done through him. This was a key congregation.

PAUL CONTINUES TO STRENGTHEN THE SAINTS

“ 23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the disciples. ”

AFTER HE HAD SPENT SOME TIME

“And after he had spent some time there, he departed . . .” Other versions read, “having stayed there some time,” DARBY “when he had tarried there a while,” GENEVA “having made some stay,” YLT “stayed in Antioch for a while.” IE

Those who are fond of telling us where Jesus and His disciples preferred to spend their time will surely take note of this occasion. Once again, Paul spends “some time” with the brethren in Antioch, who obviously ranked high in his preferences. This was a strong fellowship, with teachers and prophets among them (13:1). They were also noted for their involvement in the work of the Lord. In them the saying was surely fulfilled, “Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!” (Psa 133:1). There are countless congregations of Christians who know relatively little about working together for the glory of the Lord, or having several competent teachers among them. Antioch, however, is a notable example for us all.

HE STRENGTHENED THE DISCIPLES

“ . . . and went over all the country of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening all the disciples.”

During an earlier trip, Paul and Silas went “throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia,” preaching the Gospel (Acts 16:6). Now Paul returns to that region in a disciplined manner, going over the entire area “in order,” or “from place to place.” NIV These two trips must have yielded extensive results.

A number of Scriptural cities were in this region. “Thus at one time there is no doubt that this province contained Pisidia and Lycaonia, and therefore those towns of Antioch, Iconium, Lystra, and Derbe, which are conspicuous in the narrative of Paul’s travels.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S In his epistle to the Galatians, Paul speaks of “the churches in Galatia” (Gal 1:2). This is the only epistle that is addressed to a plurality of churches – others are addressed to “the church” (1 Cor 1:2; 2 Cor 1:1; 1 Thess 1:1; Phile 1:2). Some are addressed to “all that be in Rome, beloved of God” (Rom 1:7), and “the saints which are in . . .” (Eph 1:1; Phil 1:1; Col 1:2).

Phrygia

This was also a significant area, with a considerable Jewish population. Scriptural cities that were within the limits of Phrygia include Laodicea, Hieropolis, Colossae, Sardis, and Philadelphia., McCLINTOK & STRONG’S

Paul’s Activity

And what was the activity in which Paul was engaged as he traveled through this extensive region? What was his priority at this time? It was “strengthening ALL the disciples.” Other versions read, “establishing,” ASV “confirming,” DOUAY “bringing strength,” NAB “encouraging,” NJB “encouraging them and helping them grow in the Lord,” LIVING “made all of the followers stronger,” IE “imparting new strength to all the disciples,” WILLIAMS “establishing the disciples and imparting new strength to them.” AMPLIFIED “putting new heart into all the disciples as he went,” PHILLIPS and “helped the followers there to become stronger in their faith.” CEV

As used here, the meaning of the word “strengthening” is, “establish besides, strengthen more, to render more firm, confirm,” THAYER “to cause someone to become stronger in the sense of more firm and unchanging in attitude or belief,” UBS “to make to lean on.” LIDDELL-SCOTT This speaks of being established in the faith – to be made spiritually solid, so the individual is no longer a child, “tossed too and fro by every wind of doctrine” (Eph 4:14). This is being enabled to stand like Job in the test of trial – to “stand against the wiles of the devil” (Eph 6:11). This involves moral and spiritual strength.

There really is no purpose for a perpetually weak church in the world. Such a monstrosity contradicts the revealed purpose of God, and gives all kinds of advantage to the devil.

Therefore, Paul went throughout these two regions stabilizing the saints – rooting and grounding them in the faith. He clarified both the nature and intention of the Gospel, and made known the “unsearchable riches of Christ.” He made it more difficult for the devil to subvert the disciples, and ensured that they could overcome him, standing against his wiles. There really is no purpose for a perpetually weak church in the world. Such a monstrosity contradicts the revealed purpose of God, and gives all kinds of advantage to the devil. I do not deny that such a church can exist – but only for a relatively brief period of time. There does come a point at which such a congregation must be told, “For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat” (Heb 5:12). The doctrine affirms that people like this, unless they adjust their course, are headed toward a point from which they cannot be retrieved (Heb 6:1-8). The benefits of the truth will not continue with those who remain immature.

Spiritual strength is a key factor in newness of life. It is something that is to be increased, and is involved in growing up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15). This has to do with spiritual aptitude, and being equal to the challenges of living by faith. Strength is even required for Christ to dwell in our hearts. As it is written, “That He would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love” (Eph 3:16-17). The ability to do all things that the Lord requires of us requires this strength. Again it is written, “I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me” (Phil 4:13).

Strength is also associated with an increase “in the knowledge of God.” As it is written, “That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness” (Col 1:10-11). Solemnly we are admonished, “Be strong” (1 Cor 16:13; Eph 6:10; 2 Tim 2:1).

Our father Abraham is described as not being weak (Rom 4:19). A conscience that is “weak” is described as subject to defilement (1 Cor 8:7). Those who are “weak” require special patience, because they easily stumble (Rom 14:1; 15:1; 1 Cor 8:9-12; 1 Thess 5:14). No person who is spiritually weak is commended, and all believers are admonished to be strong. Although all believers generally begin newness of life with some element of weakness, they are not to remain in that condition. Salvation is not calculated to leave the saved ones in a weakened state, and woe to that person who imagines this is the case.

Thus, Paul sets out to make the disciples more stable, so they will not be easily deceived. He will strengthen them by expounding the glorious provisions of grace, and clarifying the nature of spiritual life. He will make the Person and work of Jesus more clear – just as he does in all of his letters. If any churches subjected to Paul were weak and uninformed, it was not owing to any deficiency in his preaching and teaching. He labored to ensure that the people of God were mature in both their understanding and their expressions.

Revealed Objectives

The Lord has stated what He intends for His children – those who are in Christ Jesus. This is included in apostolic doctrine, and is intended to clarify what life in Christ is designed to accomplish. As we ought to expect, these objectives do not center in earthly life and its associated responsibilities. Owing to the fact that faith constitutes us strangers and pilgrims in the world, this makes perfect sense. Some examples of these objectives follow. This is only a representative sampling, but it is sufficient to clarify what God is really doing in Christ Jesus.

- Be “conformed” to the image of God’s Son (Rom 8:29-30).
- Be “perfect and entire, wanting [lacking] nothing” (James 1:4).
- Be “rooted and grounded in love” (Eph 3:17).
- “May be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height” (Eph 3:18).
- That we might know the love of Christ and be “filled with all the fulness of God” (Eph 3:19).
- Come to “the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ” (Eph 4:13).
- “Be no more children” (Eph 4:14).
- Grow up into Christ “in all things” (Eph 4:15).
- Be “filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).
- Walk “worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing” (Col 1:10a).
- Be “fruitful in every good work” (Col 1:10b).
- Be “increasing in the knowledge of God” (Col 1:10c).

- Be “strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness” (Col 1:11).
- Stand “perfect and complete in all the will of God” (Col 4:12).

It appears to me that in the world at large, this kind of strength is sadly lacking among professing believers. Even in areas where disciples are standing against persecution, the great declarations of apostolic doctrine are generally, at the worst, unknown, and at the best, little known. The condition is much worse in America and Europe. Spiritual stability is glaringly absent. Both large and small congregations are often riddled with sin, and significant administrative staffs are maintained to deal with problems throughout the churches. The vast majority of a mega-church staff has little or nothing to do with strengthening the disciples. In fact, if there were not so many moral and spiritual problems in the churches, they would have little need for much of their staff.

If these assessments are true, the question must be asked why these conditions exist. If this is not the kind of church that Jesus purchased, then why does it continue to exist? Why is the kind of growth that is associated with Divine intent so lacking? The answer is straightforward: the disciples have not been “strengthened,” “confirmed,” or “established in the faith.” They have been subjected to teaching that leaves them in a weakened state, and makes no allowance for spiritual maturity. The churches are really the result of what they have been taught – whether good or evil.

Let’s look at it another way. Considering that those who remain in spiritual infancy have, in fact, been giving heed to what they are hearing, the condition is this: The Holy Spirit is not working through the words that are being spoken, and the Head, Jesus is not ministering nourishment to His body through the words that are being addressed to them . If this is not the case, then God, Christ, and the Holy Spirit are unfaithful, and such a circumstance is not even possible.

When corrupt fruit is found (and flawed spiritual lives are corrupt fruit), it is always because there is a corrupt tree (Matt 7:17-18; Mk 12:33; Lk 6:43). There is nothing about the Gospel, or the apostles doctrine, that produces inferior disciples. When “sound doctrine” (Tit 1:9; 2:1) is presented in “wholesome words” 1 Tim 6:3), those who give heed will grow in grace and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Pet 3:18). Where such things are not being consistently declared, an intruder is in the pulpit.

Let it be clear, there is absolutely nothing about God, Christ, the Holy Spirit, the salvation of God, the Gospel, or the apostles’ doctrine that allows for perpetual novicehood and a lack of spiritual maturity. Those who grow accustomed to such conditions have demonstrated alienation from the life of God (Eph 4:18). The Head of the church has made no provisions for such teachers and leaders in His body, and neither should we! It is better to judge ourselves in this matter (1 Cor 11:31).

CONCLUSION

Another thing that should be duly noted is the consistency and spiritual stamina found in those who labored in the vineyard of the Lord. They were not quitters, and were not easily discouraged, even though they faced some very difficult opposition.

It is profitable to note the total absence, in any form, of the wisdom of men in the effective spread of the Gospel of Christ, the consequent conversions, and the establishing of the saints. There is no way to read these marvelous accounts and come up a strategy for evangelization, church planting, or maturing believers. It is glaringly apparent that the accounts are not written with that kind of mindset. Believers were directed by the Lord through various communications, prophetic utterances, and open doors that appeared to be obvious to those walking in the Spirit.

The doctrine of Scripture alerts us to the unacceptability of the wisdom of men, or the wisdom of this world. “God hath made foolish the wisdom of this world . . . the world by wisdom knew not God . . . the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God . . . not with fleshly wisdom” (1 Cor 1:20-21; 2:5; 3:19; 2 Cor 1:12). Men may attempt to sanctify such wisdom by tacking on words like “Christian,” “church,” and the likes. However, those terms have no sanctifying quality – particularly regarding something that God has totally rejected.

It is of interest to note that the very first temptation was an attempt of Satan to promote inappropriate wisdom (Gen 3:6-7). Isaiah pronounced a “woe” upon those who were “wise in their own eyes” (Isa 5:21) – that is, their wisdom was self-induced, and did not come down from above. The fountain of nature has been polluted by sin, and cannot yield anything than can appropriate or promote the salvation of God. All of this is lived out in the book of Acts.

Another thing that should be duly noted is the consistency and spiritual stamina found in those who labored in the vineyard of the Lord. They were not quitters, and were not easily discouraged, even though they faced some very difficult opposition. We do read of John Mark, who left the work on one occasion, yet who ultimately recovered from that setback (Acts 15:38; 2 Tim 4:11). While conduct like that of young Mark is quite common in our time, it was the exception to the rule during those early days – days that were marked by a deep commitment that resulted from participation in the newness of life. That was before Satan began to make inroads into the church by means of false teaching.

The validity of spiritual life is confirmed in the lives of those who possess and walk in it.

Lesson #77

THE INTRODUCTION OF APOLLOS

“ 18:24 And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus. 25 This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit, he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John. 26 And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue: whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly. 27 And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia, the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him: who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace: 28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ. ” (Acts 18:24-28)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMATION

Even though Paul has left Ephesus, our attention is now drawn to certain events that took place there. We are being introduced to one of the individuals who excelled in the body of Christ – even though, for a season, his understanding was limited. Our introduction to this man will confirm the power of the truth, the alertness of those who are living by faith, and the willingness of those who have received the love of the truth. As with the previous accounts Luke provides, there is an absence of sectarianism, which would spring up later. Here, however, we are exposed to the purity that attends faith, together with the submissiveness of humble hearts, and the aggressiveness with which believers enter into the work of the Lord. This is nothing less than another exposure to “the newness of life.” It provides an excellent spiritual barometer by which contemporary works that claim to be from God can be effectively measured.

THE DIVINE NATURE REVEALED

It is important to see the truth in Scripture. It is possible to devote much attention to the Word of God, doing so for the wrong reasons, and therefore missing Divine intentions. Jesus spoke of this when He said to “the Jews” who were seeking “to kill Him,” “You search the Scriptures, because you think that in them you have eternal life; and it is these that bear witness of Me; and you are unwilling to come to Me, that you may have life” NASB (John 5:39-40). By this our Lord means that the Scriptures were not an end of themselves, but were an appointed means to a revealed objective.

First, they are set within the context of God’s “eternal salvation” (Heb 5:9), which is received “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:8). This is not a salvation to be achieved, but rather can only be received by means of the grace of God, and through one’s own faith, which itself is “obtained” (2 Pet 1:1). It is precisely for this reason, that the Scriptures testify of Christ, who is the means through which the basis for salvation was wrought, and is also the appointed means through which it is personally experienced.

The Knowledge of God

The knowledge of God is integral to salvation itself. In fact, there is no salvation apart from that marvelous knowledge. In its grand summation, salvation is the obtaining of eternal life. As it is written, “1 John 2:25) – and eternal life is to “know . . . the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom” He “hast sent” (John 17:3). To be lost, or condemned, is to be in a state where men “know not God” (1 Thess 4:5; 2 Thess 1:8).

The Creation

From the very beginning of creation, God Almighty has been about the business of making Himself known. The creation itself is an initial exposure to God, for in it His “eternal power and Godhead” are seen. Until this is made known to man, he is unable to see it. Notwithstanding, it appears that heavenly hosts have seen it, and glorify God for it (Rev 4:10-11; 10:5-6). “Eternal power” has to do with what God does, and “Godhead,” or Deity, has to do with who He is.

The Giving of the Law

The giving of the Law was a time when God exposed humanity to more of Himself. In the Law, we are told, there is a “form of knowledge and of the truth” (Rom 2:20). That is, by the means of the Law intelligent concepts of God, and the borders of revealed truth, were made known – particularly as they regard morality, or right and wrong. The Law further developed the rudimentary introduction of God found in nature, revealing some of its implications (i.g. Ex 20:10-11).

The Prophets, and God’s Dealings with Israel

Within the framework of the Law, which contained “the words of the covenant” God made with Israel (Ex 34:28), the understanding of God was developed even further. This was done through the Prophets, whose ministry was twofold. First, they revealed God’s response to the works of men, and to any legitimate effort to seek and please Him. Second, they foretold the time when God would reveal Himself more fully through the Messiah, who would induct “the day of salvation,” the time of man’s recovery from sin. They also declared the temporality of this present evil world, and the coming of an eternal order – a new heavens and a new earth (Isa 65:17).

God Revealed in Jesus Christ

God’s revelation of Himself reached its apex in the Lord Jesus Christ. In Him the “fulness of the Godhead” dwelt “bodily,” or corporately (Col 1:19; 2:9). That is, it was seen in Christ’s Person: His words and His works. God’s response to humble and contrite hearts was made known in Christ’s response to such souls. His reaction toward hypocrisy and lifeless religious form was seen in Jesus’ response to the scribes, Pharisees, Sadducees, and lawyers. During the Lord Jesus’ ministry He manifested the compassion and mercy of God, how He searches and tries the hearts, and how all things are possible with Him. The fact that God is the “God of truth,” and sanctifies the people with the truth, was seen in the ministry of Christ Jesus. The fact that He chooses and sustains was also made known through Jesus, and that He receives all who receive His Son.

The Church Is the Fulness of Christ

The church is referred to as “the body of Christ” because it is the appointed receptacle into which all of Christ’s fulness is poured (John 1:16; Eph 1:23). Just as Jesus is the fullest expression of God, so the church is the most thorough manifestation of Christ. That is where God works “both to do and to will of His own good pleasure” (Phil 2:13). The church is where the Holy Spirit is placed, being sent into the hearts of all of its members (Gal 4:6).

The History of Believers Is the Record of the Outworking of the Life of Christ

Newness of life is given to the church, and that life is nothing less than “the life of Jesus” (2 Cor 4:10-11). The kind of people through whom God works is made known in those who embrace the Gospel. The kind of works the Lord does in acceptable people is also revealed through them. These manifestations are in perfect accord with what God declares of Himself, and He is doing in salvation.

Also, the manner in which references are made to the saints reveals Divine assessments of them. When certain things are said about the people of God, as in this very text, they are not merely the private opinion of the writer. Although the writer no doubt saw the people as being precisely what he declares them to be, he has come to that conclusion through inspiration – having the mind of Christ (1 Cor 2:16) – not mere human reasoning. If it is proper to criticize such people, God will do so. If it is not proper, God will not do so. Men do well to duly note how God speaks about those who are in His favor. Even though it has become quite fashionable to do so, men are fools who choose to denigrate men whom God holds before us as examples. In so doing, they also violate the word of the Lord that says, “speak not evil one of another” (James 4:11).

Again, the inspired account of the lives of those who are in Christ Jesus is the record of the newness of life being lived out. It reveals how the Lord works in the hearts of men, and what happens when He does not work in them.

THE OBJECTIVE OF SALVATION

Because, as it is known today, Christianity has become a context for career development and the glory that attends human organizations, the purpose of salvation has been almost totally obscured. Because the proper knowledge of this matter assists in understanding the text before us, I thought it needful to say a few words about this matter.

First, the very fact that salvation “is of the Lord” is a primary consideration. That is, God out of His own Person conceived salvation as a means to the realization of an eternal purpose. The purpose was not merely to extricate men from sin and condemnation, for that is not far-reaching enough to bring proper glory to God. It is really what happens after salvation that gives it such great worth. That is, salvation is a means to an end, and not an end of itself.

First, from a human point of view, no one has ever entertained a precise and sound thought of God to whom God has not revealed Himself. Concerning the Person of God, the pronouncement is made over the entire human race, “There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God” (Rom 3:11). Sin impoverished mankind in its entirety. Because of that, the reality of God is so obscured that men did not engage in a fervent quest to know Him. From every point of human reasoning, this rendered the knowledge of God beyond reach, and man was declared to be in a state described as “having no hope” (Eph 2:2).

There was absolutely nothing that man could do about this situation. At least two thousand five hundred years were allotted to the race to come up with some cogent idea of God – an idea that would provoke a fervent quest for Him. That was the period from Adam to Moses. During that time, men did begin to call upon the name of the Lord in the days of Enosh, the son of Seth (Gen 4:26). Usher’s chronology reckons this to be about 245 years after the fall. The experience of Adam and Eve in the fall, together with the revelation given to them before they were expelled from the Garden was no doubt passed along to succeeding generations. However, sin had so dulled the capacities of men that it was over 200 years before they saw the need and advantage of calling upon the name of the Lord. Whether or not God revealed Himself to Enosh or others at that time is not known.

From Adam to the flood was as much as 1,655 years – 1,500 at the least – depending on which one of the various chronologies one chooses to accept. However, whatever the choice, we have a good idea of the general length of time involved. During that time there are two men mentioned who entertained some knowledge of God: Enoch and Noah. Both men “walked with God,” so their knowledge of Him was not theoretical (Gen 5:22-24; 6:9). Enoch walked with God for three hundred years (Gen 5:22), after which God “took him,” translating him to heaven without seeing death (Gen 5:22). His “walk” with God commenced over 670 years after the fall. We do not know the duration of Noah’s walk with God. He was six hundred years old when the flood waters assuaged (Gen 7:6). That would have made him about 480 years of age when he commenced building the ark. That was more than 500 years after Enoch was translated. Judging from the nature of Enoch’s prophecy (Jude 1:14-15), and the type of things revealed to Noah (Gen 6:13-21), the majority of what they both knew about God pertained to His intolerance of sin.

God first appeared to Abraham about 1860 years after Adam’s expulsion from the Garden, about 880 years after Enoch’s translation, and roughly 365 years after the flood. Until his time, there is no revelation of God speaking of a coming blessing or Savior for humanity. Even in the Garden, the revelation of the coming Seed was confined to Satan’s bruising of Him, and the promised Seed delivering a mortal bruise to Satan (Gen 3:15). During the time from Adam to Abraham – more than 1800 years – there is not a solitary record of any individual or group of individuals arriving at any accurate understanding of God independently of being exposed to God Himself, which postulates revelation. No person by reasoning or philosophy gained any understanding of God.

Intelligence Prior to the Flood

Prior to the flood, intelligence existed that is staggering. Here are a few of the social achievements that took place prior to the the flood, which is estimated to have taken place about 2518 B.C.

- 3500 B.C. Menes unites kingdoms of Egypt, introduces irrigation.
- 2780 B.C. Imhotep designs first step pyramid at Saqqara, Egypt. Recognized as the world's first architect, doctor, and scribe.
- 2700 B.C. Cheops builds Great Pyramid at Giza, an architectural marvel that was encased in marble.
- 2697 B.C. Huang-ti becomes legendary "Yellow Emperor" of China. Noted for the development of principles of medicine.
- 2640 B.C. – Si Ling-chi introduces silk production in China.
- 2340 B.C. – Sargon establishes Semitic and Sumerian civilizations, both of which were very advanced socially, mathematically, and technologically.

These civilizations were all destroyed in the flood. Archeological work has uncovered all manner of artifacts from those pre-flood periods. Yet, there is not a single piece of evidence that confirms any extensive and authentic knowledge of God.

Salvation Is About the Knowledge of God

I mention these things to accent the fact that salvation is really about the knowledge of God, or knowing God. It is not about social optimization or the improvement of life in this world. There is much evidence that suggests man's intellectual capacity, apart from Christ, has diminished, not increased. In our time, with few known exceptions, technological and scientific advance is built upon knowledge that was developed in primitive, but not inferior, times. These days, almost all academic knowledge is, in some sense, borrowed.

Because of the nature of salvation, it commences with a Divine initiative – revelation. With all of their intellectual aptitude, clearly demonstrated prior to to the flood, men could not come to an understanding of God, even though He was their Creator, and they were living in a domain that testified of His eternal power and Godhead (Rom 1:20).

God Most Fully Revealed in Christ

In summation, the fullest and most precise revelation of God is found in the Person of Jesus Christ, His Son. In Him dwells “the fulness the Godhead bodily” (Col 2:9). That is, there is no essential trait of Deity that cannot be found and perceived in Him. That is one of the primary reasons He was “made flesh” and dwelt among us (John 1:14), In Jesus Christ the knowledge of God was brought within range of human comprehension. That “fulness” is made known in the Gospel, which declares the work God, which is in perfect concert with His character.

When the Gospel, is believed, God Himself becomes more clear to the believer. In fact, eternal life, which is the consummate blessing, is knowing God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3). In all of this, God is being glorified, as principalities and powers in heavenly places behold His wisdom in the working out of the salvation of men (Eph 3:10). Further, as the newness of life is lived out in the believers, God is glorified. This is owing to the revelation of the Divine nature in them, of which nature they are “made partakers” (2 Pet 1:4; Heb 3:14).

The Ultimate Revelation

The revelation of Divine glory, which is what is driving the entirety of salvation, will reach is culmination at the end of time, when Jesus comes again. Nothing about Him will be hidden at that time (Matt 25:31; 2 Thess 1:7; 1 Tim 6:15). He will come “in His own glory,” accompanied by the glory of the Father and the glory of all the holy angels (Lk 9:26). This will have a transforming effect upon those in whom the Son of God has been dwelling and the Spirit working. They will be “changed” at that time, divested of any vestige of the curse, and clothed upon with immortality (1 Cor 15:52; Phil 3:20-21; 1 John 3:2). It is at that time that the purpose for salvation will be finalized, and all of the saints will be “conformed to image” of God’s Son, as He has predestinated (Rom 8:29-30). That will be the appointed glorification of believers in whom God Himself and Jesus will be glorified.

Whatever does not blend in with that glorification cannot possibly be associated with the salvation of God. Every valid message, exhortation, or work, must have something to do with that process. Whatever is tangential, leading in another direction and to another conclusion is not from God. The source of such things is the devil, who is “the god of this world” (2 Cor 4:4), and promotes its prominence. God is not the author of confusion (1 Cor 14:33), and thus does not obscure the truth to His people.

Why Say These Things

I am saying these things in order to maintain a proper perspective of this book. The historical records that are being reported reflect these priorities. They are why such remarkable success was realized in people. This is why they grew quickly in Christ Jesus, and labored with such unrelenting zeal. It is why the emphasis was placed upon the saints.

A JEW NAMED APOLLOS

“ 18:24 And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria, an eloquent man, and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.”

Scripture is unique, differing from all other writing. Unlike a biography, it is not devoted exclusively to one individual. Unlike history, it does not provide all chronological details. It differs from analytical writings, which are a kind of critique of a person or period of time. Neither is it a defense or apology for a particular person or way of thought. Scripture provides us with Divine priorities, purposes, and assessments. Its objective is to acquaint us with Divine manners and provisions, and the reason for them. Its aim is not to make us better people, or the world a better place to live. It is not a kind of success manual that provides men with the secrets to worldly achievements. Humanity is not the focus of Scripture, nor is the natural environment in which they live.

Take this very text as a case in point. We have just read of Paul going throughout the regions of Galatia and Phrygia, strengthening the saints. Yet, not a single detail of that extensive activity is provided. Instead, the Spirit moves our attention back to Ephesus, from which Paul had departed, and focuses on a man of which there had not been a single word previously provided. He is not a man from Ephesus, but comes from another area to visit the city. Yet, for those whose hearts are enraptured with the truth, the change of subject is not at all abrasive or disruptive of sound thought. Everything that is said will blend perfectly with what has already been reported. This is because the record is really of the works of the Lord, and of the life that is realized in Christ Jesus. When our focus is right, texts like this will give us no difficulty. However, when it is not correct, there will be all kinds of abrasive and difficult things to see.

A CERTAIN JEW

“And a certain Jew named Apollos, born at Alexandria . . .” Other versions read, “Meanwhile a Jew named Apollos,” NIV “an Alexandrian by birth,” NASB “a native of Alexandria,” NRSV “an Alexandrian by race,” DARBY and “An Alexandrian Jew named Apollos.” NJB

Apollos is a man of note in Scripture. Some in Corinth even named themselves after him, a practice that was unacceptable (1 Cor 1:12; 3:1). He is described as a “minister” through whom men believed (1 Cor 3:5). He is also depicted as a person who “watered” the kingdom-seed that Paul had planted (1 Cor 3:6). When speaking of certain spiritual realities, Paul joined himself with Apollos to make a particular point (1 Cor 4:6). Affectionately, Paul referred to him as “our brother Apollos,” whom he desired to come and assist the Corinthians (1 Cor 16:12). He also admonished Titus to assist Apollos on his journeys for the Lord (Tit 3:13).

Now we are introduced to this unique man for the first time, to whom Scripture refers no less than ten times. What gracious qualities he is described as possessing!

Here, a city is named, and a single individual from that city. Alexandria was “the chief maritime city and long the metropolis of lower Egypt.” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S It was so named after its founder, Alexander the Great. During the first century, Alexandria is reported to have had an adult population of 180,000. WIKIPEDIA The Britannica Encyclopedia says of it, “Once the greatest city of the ancient world and a centre of Hellenic scholarship and science, Alexandria was the capital of Egypt from its founding by Alexander the Great in 332 BC to AD 642, when it was subdued by the Arabs. It is now the second largest city, the centre of a major industrial region, and the chief seaport of Egypt. It lies on the Mediterranean Sea at the western edge of the Nile River delta, about 114 miles (183 km) northwest of Cairo.”

THE CITY OF ALEXANDRIA

It is situated on the Mediterranean, twelve miles west of the Canopic mouth of the Nile, in 31° 13' N. lat. and 25° 53' E. long. It owes its origin to the comprehensive policy of Alexander, who traced himself the ground-plan of the city (Plut. Alex. 26), perceiving that the usual channels of commerce might be advantageously altered; and that a city occupying this site could not fail to become the common emporium for the traffic of the Eastern and Western world, by means of the river Nile and the two adjacent seas, the Red Sea and the Mediterranean.

The city of Alexandria, although quite prominent in worldly history, is mentioned only three times in Scripture (Acts 18:24; 27:6; 28:11). The latter two references refer to “a ship of Alexandria” on which Paul sailed en route to Rome. Our text refers to a single man from Alexandria who, so far as the Word of God is concerned, was more prominent than the city itself. All of this confirms the relative unimportance of even the better things of this world.

In addition to being a cultural center of the world, Alexandria was noted for its library – “the most famous library of classical antiquity.” BRITANNICA Yet, when the city was written up by the Spirit, it was worthy of mention only because of a godly and gifted man that was born there. That is a sterling example of how heaven regards worldly fame and prominence. In Scripture, Apollos was not of note because he came from Alexandria, but Alexandria was mentioned because of Apollos’ association with it.

AN ELOQUENT MAN

“ . . . an eloquent man . . . ” Other versions read, “a learned man,” NIV “a man of learning,” BBE “an eloquent speaker,” CJB “who was trained to eloquence,” MRD “He was an educated man,” IE “a man of great learning,” WEYMOUTH “a cultured and eloquent man,” AMPLIFIED and “a gifted speaker.” PHILLIPS

As used in this text, the word “eloquent” has the following lexical meaning: “learned, a man of letters, skilled in literature and the arts; especially versed in history and antiquities . . . skilled in speech, eloquent,” THAYER “eloquent, skilled in speech . . . learned, educated, skilled in knowledge,” FRIBERG “pertaining to attractive and convincing speech - eloquent,” LOUW-NIDA

“skilled in words, eloquent.” LIDDELL-SCOTT The word speaks of a person with a significant scope of knowledge, who has the ability to effectively communicate that knowledge. Such people are exceedingly rare. As it is written, “For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called” (1 Cor 1:26). “Not many” of these people are “called” of God because they have more to overcome. However, the few who are called sanctify their aptitude by their faith, and manage it for the glory of God instead of the promotion of self.

Moses was a man of this caliber also. As it is written, “And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds” (Acts 7:22). Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah were also extraordinarily gifted people, to whom God gave “knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams” (Dan 1:17). When selecting certain young boys to be trained for Nebuchadnezzar’s court, they fell into the category of “Children in whom was no blemish, but well favored, and skillful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king’s palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans” (Dan 1:4).

These unusual souls are singled out in Scripture, NOT because of their aptitude alone, but because they glorified God with their abilities. In fact, their faithfulness was honored by God giving them more wisdom and intellectual expertise than can be drawn from the well of nature.

It has always been troubling to me how a person who was supposedly devoted to the service of God could choose a primary field of knowledge other than the Word of God . . . It seems to me that deferring to any other body of knowledge as being worthy of the greatest attention severely limits even natural acumen.

The people of God are not to despise skillful minds and the proper acquisition of knowledge. God is not glorified by intellectual simplicity and undisciplined minds. This is involved in Solomon’s words, “How long, ye simple ones, will ye love simplicity? and the scorners delight in their scorning, and fools hate knowledge?” (Prov 1:22).

However, as the next clause confirms, there is a higher body of knowledge to which the mind can be devoted. It is in this domain of thought that Apollos excelled, and for which he is duly noted in Scripture.

MIGHTY IN THE SCRIPTURES

“ . . . and mighty in the scriptures, came to Ephesus.” Other versions read, “with a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures,” NIV “well versed in Scripture,” RSV “had great knowledge of the holy Writings,” BBE “knew how to use the Scriptures in a powerful way,” GWN “an authority on the scriptures,” NAB “with a sound knowledge of the scriptures,” NJB “knew the Scriptures well,” NLT “a wonderful Bible teacher and preacher,” LIVING “His knowledge of the Scriptures was very powerful,” IE “skillful in the use of the Scriptures,” WILLIAMS and “well versed and mighty in the Scriptures.” AMPLIFIED

The word “mighty” comes from a word with the following lexical meaning: “able, powerful, mighty, strong . . . excelling in knowledge of the Scriptures.” THAYER The idea is that he had a grasp of both the text and meaning of Scripture. He could handle the Scriptures like a warrior could handle the sword, or carpenter the tools of his trade. The Scriptural way of referring to such a grasp is, “rightly dividing the word of truth,” KJV or handling accurately the word of truth,” NASB or “correctly handles the word of truth,” NIV or “correctly analyzing and accurately dividing [rightly handling and skillfully teaching] the Word of Truth.” AMPLIFIED

A person who is “mighty in the Scriptures” recognizes their focus. Such a person can see the integration of Scripture, and can bring it to bear upon matters of essential thought. It ought to be obvious that they have devoted themselves to the Word of God, meditate upon it, and, so far as they are able, bring all of their thinking into harmony with it. When they encounter a thought that is contrary to Scripture, they reject it because of that contradiction. They actually do “live by every word of God” (Luke 4:4), and delight to do so.

My Own Experience

Within the Christian community, there are proportionately very few people who fall into this category. When I was a young man, prior to being in my twenties, I noted the relatively few professing Christians who were even interested in being expert in the knowledge and handling of Scripture. A number of personal acquaintances of mine chose other fields of knowledge as their primary areas of intended expertise – even though they professed to be followers of Christ. While I do not sit in judgement of such choices, it has always been troubling to me how a person who was supposedly devoted to the service of God could choose a primary field of knowledge other than the Word of God. By way of contrast, and in my opinion, I do not believe it is possible to be “mighty in the Scriptures,” or possess a “thorough knowledge of the Scripture,” NIV if the Scriptures themselves are not held as the highest, and most to be desired, expression of thought. It seems to me that deferring to any other body of knowledge as being worthy of the greatest attention severely limits even natural acumen.

I also affirm that within the modern Christian environment a person can rise to religious prominence who is lacking in all of these qualities. Such a person does not represent Jesus, nor are they qualified to edify, instruct, or correct the people of God.

By way of contrast, I found the Word of God most satisfying to my spirit, and worthy of a dedicated quest. By God’s grace, I determined that I would seek to have a better grasp on the Word of God than upon any other body of knowledge. Further, it seems to me that the means to a proper understanding of Scripture cannot be a core of knowledge that is inferior to it : i.e. language, culture, history, etc.

I have heard some respected men say that an understanding of the Greek language was requisite to the proper understanding of Scripture. Others have affirmed that key requirement to be familiarity with the culture of times. I consider such views to be seriously deficient – and that is the most favorable way in which I can express this persuasion.

While it appeared to me that this was a required stance, I found that others did not share this view. In fact the circle of my close associates began to shrink, as others with whom I had been aligned chose other priorities. As for myself, I have chosen to culture the friendship of those who view the Word of God as the fundamental expression of thought, and therefore the most beneficial body of knowledge. One such soul is of more value than a hundred others who focus on inferior and worldly knowledge.

I say these things because I perceive Apollos, like Paul and the rest of the apostles, as having this kind of mindset. I do not see how it would be remotely possible to be described as being “mighty in the Scriptures” and have any other kind of perspective. I am aware that there is a way of thinking extant in the scholastic religious community that glories in having a well rounded knowledge that includes various worldly perspectives of life. However, I do not think it is possible to support this approach the word of God.

In my understanding there are several things requisite to the proper and growing understanding of Scripture.

- The experience of the new birth (John 3:3,5,7).
- The presence and dominance of faith (Heb 10:38; 11:6).

- Living by every word of God (Lk 4:4).
- A working knowledge of the text of Scripture (2 Tim 3:15-17).
- Being spiritually minded (Rom 8:6-7), with the word of Christ dwelling within richly (Col 3:16).
- A consistent and dominating quest to lay hold on eternal life (1 Tim 6:2; Phil 3:7-14).

I affirm that no person is capable of being “well versed in the Scriptures” in whom these traits are not found. I also affirm that within the modern Christian environment a person can rise to religious prominence who is lacking in all of these qualities. Such a person does not represent Jesus, nor are they qualified to edify, instruct, or correct the people of God.

THIS MAN . . .

“ 25a This man was instructed in the way of the Lord; and being fervent in the spirit . . . ”

The manner in which Apollos is described is of special significance. It reflects Divine priorities, and what causes a man to draw the attention of God. God has frequently spoken of individuals that stood out in certain regions. Job stood out “in the land of Uz” (Job 1:1). Simeon stood out in Jerusalem (Lk 2:26). Anna stood out in the Temple (Lk 2:36-37). Bethsaida was said to be “the city of Andrew and Peter” (John 1:44).

INSTRUCTED IN THE WAY OF THE LORD

“This man was instructed in the way of the Lord . . .” Other versions read, “trained in the way of the Lord,” BBE “informed about the way of the Lord,” CJB “taught the way of the Lord,” IE “instructed by word of mouth in the way of the Lord,” WEYMOUTH and “knew much about the Lord’s Way.” CEV

As a matter of interest, here is how The Living Bible represents this verse. “While he was in Egypt, someone had told him about John the Baptist and what John had said about Jesus, but that is all he knew. He had never heard the rest of the story!” LIVING That is a sterling example of an interpretation of Scripture being foisted upon the people as though it was God’s word. In this case, a theological template was placed over the text, making it read differently.

The Way of the Lord

Note: the text does not say Apollos was NOT instructed in the way of the Lord, but that he WAS instructed in that way. As it is used here, the word “way” means “a way (I. e. manner) of thinking, feeling, deciding . . . the purposes and ordinances of God, his ways of dealing with men . . . the course of thought, feeling, action, prescribed and approved by God,” THAYER

The “way of the Lord” has to do with His nature: i.e. the way He speaks, the way He works, the way He judges, etc. You may recall that God showed Moses His “ways,” while Israel only saw His works: “He made known His ways unto Moses, His acts unto the children of Israel” (Psa 103:7).

Apollos was acquainted with Divine manners. That was no doubt one of the primary reasons for him being able to handle the Word of God so well. In our time, this is an area of special ignorance within the Christian community. It is staggering to consider the number of things that are not comprehended simply because God is not known, and consequently the people are ignorant of His “ways.” Erroneous views of the love of God, the grace of God, and the church of God are directly traceable to an unfamiliarity with His ways. The failure of religious men to grasp the significance of justification by faith, the criticality of living the sanctified life, and the need for comprehending the scope of salvation is the evidence of an overwhelming lack of acquaintance with “the way of the Lord.”

When discerned, the truth of God has an impact upon the human spirit. It will hone natural abilities to their finest edge, augmenting them with holy aptitude that is not natural. Solemnly, all believers are admonished to be “fervent in spirit; serving the Lord” (Rom 12:11).

Even under the Law of Moses, when the brightness of Divine glory was not seen, men were admonished to “walk in all His ways” (Deut 8:6; 10:12; 11:22; 19:9; 26:17; 28:9; 30:16). That goes beyond rule-keeping. It speaks of living in a manner that does not contradict the nature of God, particularly as it was revealed in the Law. However, after leading Israel for forty years through the wilderness, the Lord said of them, “they have not known My ways” (Psa 95:10). Again, the apostolic representation of God’s assessment of ancient Israel was, “Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do always err in their heart; and they have not known my ways ” (Heb 3:10). If, within the dim light of the Law, God was grieved with a people who did not know His “ways,” what must be His attitude toward those who are now ignorant of His ways, while living in the blazing glory of the “Sun of righteousness” (Mal 4:2).

When an individual is “instructed in the way of the Lord,” difficult texts of Scripture are seen with greater clarity. We will also see that when such a person is exposed to aspects of truth not seen before, they are easily and immediately received.

BEING FERVENT IN SPIRIT

“ . . . and being fervent in the spirit . . . ” Other versions read, “great fervor,” NIV “burning enthusiasm,” NRSV “burning in spirit,” BBE “great spiritual fervor,” CJB “spoke enthusiastically,” GWN “ardent spirit,” NAB “boldly and enthusiastically,” LIVING “full of burning zeal,” WEYMOUTH “full of zeal,” MONTGOMERY and “burning with spiritual zeal.” AMPLIFIED

This is a description of the manner in which Apollos spoke. In his own measure, the zeal of the Lord had eaten him up, as it did our blessed Lord Himself (Psa 69:9; John 2:17).

When discerned, the truth of God has an impact upon the human spirit. It will hone natural abilities to their finest edge, augmenting them with holy aptitude that is not natural. Solemnly, all believers are admonished to be “fervent in spirit; serving the Lord” (Rom 12:11). Truth so affected David that he said, “My zeal hath consumed me” (Psa 119:139).

Thus we are introduced to Apollos. Here is what is said of him.

- He was a Jew.
- He was born in Alexandria, Egypt.
- He was a learned and eloquent man.
- He was mighty in the Scriptures.
- He was instructed in the way of the Lord.
- He was fervent in spirit.

This is the Spirit’s assessment of this man while his knowledge was deficient . In other words, he was faithful in what he had received, and articulated what he had clearly seen. This is how we are introduced to this unique individual – and it is heaven’s view of the man.

HE SPOKE DILIGENTLY, WITH LIMITED KNOWLEDGE

“ 25b . . . he spake and taught diligently the things of the Lord, knowing only the baptism of John.”

Apollos had come to Ephesus, north of his homeland, and in Asia. When he arrives, he commences speaking “the things of the Lord.”

HE SPAKE AND TAUGHT DILIGENTLY

“ . . . he spake and taught diligently . . .” Other versions read, “spoke and taught accurately ,” NKJV “speaking and teaching accurately,” NASB “spoke with great fervor and taught about . . . accurately,” NIV “spoke with burning enthusiasm and taught accurately,” NRSV “spake and taught accurately ,” ASV “he gave himself up to teaching,” BBE “spoke and taught exactly,” DARBY “spake and taught,” ERV “spoke enthusiastically. He accurately taught ,” DOUAY “discoursed and taught fully ,” MRD “spoke and taught accurately the facts,” NIB “preached with great spiritual fervor and was accurate in all the details ,” NJB “taught others about Jesus with an enthusiastic spirit and with accuracy,” NLT “was speaking and teaching exactly ” YLT “So he was preaching boldly and enthusiastically in the synagogue’ LIVING “Apollos was always very enthusiastic when he talked to people,” IE “he was speaking and was accurately teaching ,” WILLIAMS “he spoke and taught diligently and accurately,” AMPLIFIED and “teaching the facts .” PHILLIPS

The word “diligently” is translated from a word that means, “exactly, accurately, diligently,” THAYER “characterized by exactness and thoroughness; (1) in information accurately; (2) in effort thoroughly, diligently, (3) in ethical behavior carefully,” FRIBERG “accurately; with care,” UBS “pertaining to strict conformity to a norm or standard, involving both detail and completeness – accurate, accurately, strict, strictly.” LOUW-NIDA

The very thought of speaking consistently, thoroughly and with exacting precision is refreshing. If anything should be so spoken, it is the truth of God – particularly as it regards the Lord Himself. Sloppy speaking, inaccuracies, and vagueness have no place in the declaration of the truth. Holy men of God, whether Moses, the prophets, John the Baptist, the apostles, or the Lord Jesus Himself, always spoke in this manner. If it is true that men “live by every word of God” (Lk 4:4), how can anyone justify speaking in any other way?

THE THINGS OF THE LORD

“ . . . the things of the Lord . . .” Other versions read, “the facts about Jesus,” BBE the things concerning Jesus,” NASB “about Jesus,” NIV “spoke enthusiastically. He accurately taught about Jesus,” DOUAY “respecting Jesus,” MRD “the facts about Jesus,” NIB “the details he taught about Jesus,” NJB “about Jesus with accuracy,” NLT “The Messiah is coming! Get ready to receive him!” LIVING “The things he taught about Jesus,” IE “teaching some details about Jesus,” WILLIAMS and “teaching the facts about Jesus faithfully.” PHILLIPS

Several versions read “teaching accurately the things concerning Jesus ,” NASB and “taught about Jesus accurately.” NIV Judging from the words that follow, it is assumed that the words “the things of the Lord” had particular regard to the Lord Jesus, and specifically what John had said about Him. As the forerunner of Jesus, and the one who particularly identified the Messiah, John said the following about Jesus Christ.

WHAT JOHN THE BAPTIST SAID ABOUT JESUS

- HE WAS NOT APPARENT. Jesus was among the people, but they did not recognize Him (John 1:26). While He was the Savior of the world, He was not recognizable to the flesh.
- HE IS MIGHTIER. He was mightier than John (Matt 3:11a; Mk 1:7; Lk 3:16). In both nature and effect, He was above the greatest of men.
- HE IS TO BE PREFERRED. He was preferred before John (John 1:27,30).

Among men, He was of a higher rank, NASB having priority AMPLIFIED over them.

- HE IS THE LAMB OF GOD. He was the Lamb of God that takes away the sin of the world (John 1:29,36). He Himself would be an effective sacrifice for sin.

- HE WAS MADE KNOWN IN BAPTISM. John did not know Him, but He came baptizing because it was during His baptism that Jesus would be made known (John 1:31,33). Being made known in his baptism, His Saviorhood was associated with repentance (not His own, but that of men).

- HE WOULD BAPTIZE WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT. He would baptize with the Holy Spirit and fire (Matt 3:11b; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16). The agent with which He would baptize was the Holy Spirit.

- THE SPIRIT DESCENDED ON HIM AND REMAINED. John saw the Spirit descending on Jesus in the form of a dove, and remaining on Him (John 1:32-33). He was a Savior in whom the Holy Spirit found permanent residence.

- HE IS THE SON OF GOD. John identified Him as “the Son of God” (John 1:34). So far as men were concerned, this was His primary identity.

- HE IS THE APPOINTED THE JUDGE. The purging fan was in His hand (Matt 3:12; Lk 3:17a). His would be an effective judgment, being carried out to its full extent. It would not be philosophical.

- HE IS THE PURIFIER. He would thoroughly purge His threshing floor (Matt 3:12b; Lk 3:17b). His ministry targeted the ultimate removal of all the wicked.

- HE WILL GATHER HIS PEOPLE. He would gather His wheat into His barn (Matt 3:12c; Lk 3:17c). While throughout history, the people of God have been scattered, under this Savior they would be ultimately gathered together.

- HE WILL PUNISH THE WICKED. He would burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire (Matt 3:12d; Lk 3:7d). While throughout history, the wicked generally appear to have escaped their just due, Jesus would carry out the Divine pronouncements against them.

- HE WOULD INDUCT CORRECTION. Every valley would be filled, every mountain and hill brought low, the crooked made straight, and the rough ways made plain (Lk 1:5). His would be an economy of thorough moral and spiritual recovery. Men would not be left in a vacillating and inconsistent state.

- HE IS ASSOCIATED WITH PERCEPTION. All flesh would see the salvation of God (Lk 1:6). Through the Messiah, the salvation of God would be illuminated, and thereby men enabled to participate in it.

It was necessary for the people to ready themselves for the Savior by repenting – changing their way of thinking, and their conduct as well. A change of conduct is referred to as bringing forth fruits “meet, worthy,” NKJV or “in keeping with repentance”

HE WILL REMOVE FRUITLESS PEOPLE. The ax would be laid to the root of the trees, and every tree that does not bring forth good fruit will be hewn down and cast into the fire (Lk 1:9). The economy over which He presides does not have a place for fruitless members, even though human institutions welcome such.

- HE IS GOD-BLESSED. When asked about the success of Jesus, John said, “A man can receive nothing except it be given Him from heaven” (John 3:27). The essential resources Jesus delivers to men by word and deed came from heaven. They are not of an earthly nature.

- HE IS THE BRIDEGROOM. As the Bridegroom, Jesus is the One who has the bride (John 3:29). In the ultimate sense salvation involves the effectual joining of those who are saved with their Savior.

- HE MUST INCREASE. He must increase (John 3:30). Everything about Jesus Himself and what He ministers tends to increase to the glory of God.

- HE CAME FROM HEAVEN. He came from above (John 3:31). While He was “in the likeness of sinful flesh” (Rom 8:3), that was not His predominate trait. He bore more resemblance to, and compatibility with heaven.

- HE SAID WHAT HE KNEW. He spoke what He had seen and heard, yet no man received His testimony (John 3:32). Nothing that Jesus said was speculative or philosophical. Everything was absolute, and will never pass away.

- THE ONE WHO RECEIVES JESUS’ TESTIMONY WOULD RECEIVE CONFIRMATION THAT GOD IS TRUE. God is true (John 3:33). The knowledge of the truthfulness of God is confirmed in Jesus Christ.

- HE SPOKE THE WORDS OF GOD. Being sent by God, He spoke the words of God (John 3:34a). When Jesus spoke, it was no different in substance and significance than the voice that spoke from Sinai. His words cannot be rejected with impunity.

- HE HAD THE SPIRIT WITHOUT MEASURE. God gave the Spirit to Him without measure (John 3:34b). In Jesus, the Spirit has no limitations. There is no spiritual work He cannot do.

- THE FATHER LOVES HIM. The Father loves the Son (John 3:35a). When it comes to men, the greatest and most effectual love of God is toward His own Son.

- THE FATHER HAS GIVEN EVERYTHING TO HIM. The Father has given all things into His hands (John 3:35b). The government has been laid upon the shoulder of Christ, and He is the precise Point at which men will be measured.

- THOSE WHO BELIEVE ON HIM HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE. He who believes on the Son has everlasting life (John 3:36a). The basis of the experience of eternal life is dependent upon trust in the Person of Jesus, not a system.

- THOSE WHO DO NOT BELIEVE ON HIM WILL NOT SEE LIFE. He who believes not on the Son shall not see life but the wrath of God abides on him (John 3:36b). No one will escape the consequences of not relying upon and trusting in Jesus Christ.

I have taken the time to itemize the twenty-seven things that John said about Jesus. This is to confirm that those who received his words had, in fact, been tutored in Divine manners – “the way of the Lord.” That “way” included the necessity of taking away the sins of the world, bringing about a new birth, the correction of wayward lives, and the judgment of all men. It ought to be noted that the average long-time American Christian is probably less informed on these matters than was Apollos – which circumstance is inexcusable.

KNOWING ONLY THE BAPTISM OF JOHN

“ . . . knowing only the baptism of John.” Other versions read, “being acquainted only with the baptism of John,” NASB “had knowledge only of John’s baptism,” BBE “knew nothings except the baptism of John,” MRD “he had experienced only the baptism of John.” NJB

The baptism of John was unique. So far as the Scriptures are concerned, there was nothing like this baptism prior to John.

The phrase “baptism of John” occurs six times in Scripture (Matt 21:25; Mk 11:30; Lk 7:29; 20:4; Acts 1:22; 18:25). It is also referred to as “the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins” (Mk

1:4; Lk 3:3), and “the baptism of repentance” (Acts 13:24; 19:4). This was the means through which John prepared the way of the Lord. It was necessary for the people to ready themselves for the Savior by repenting – changing their way of thinking, and their conduct as well. The change of conduct is referred to as bringing forth fruits “meet, worthy,” NKJV or “in keeping with repentance” NASB (Matt 3:8; Lk 3:8).

This is a requirement that is often overlooked by the casual reader – and it is in sharp contrast with many modern statements regarding coming to the Lord. Peter referred to the same requirement when he told those in Solomon’s porch, “Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord” (Acts 3:19). The word “convert” is derived from the Greek word επιστρέφω, which has the following lexical meaning: “to turn to . . . to turn oneself . . . turn morally, to reform,” THAYER “change one’s ways,” FRIBERG “To turn from an error, to correct,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “definitely turn to God in conduct as well as in mind.” ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES

The Proper Approach

“The baptism of John” required an outward reform that confirmed the confession of sin that accompanied that baptism. As it is written, “Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judaea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins” (Matt 3:5-6). The word “confessing” refers to a statement concerning guilt that is supported by corresponding conduct. The word itself includes that idea: “to acknowledge . . . assent, agree fully . . . profess, promise.” STRONG’S

John’s baptism, which differed radically from empty ceremony, was not like the ineffectual “divers washings” that took place under the law (Heb 9:10). It also underscored the necessity of one’s outward conduct strictly comporting with their verbal acknowledgment of sin. This requirement was confirmed in John’s response to those inquiring concerning what they ought to do. “And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then? He answereth and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise. Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do? And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you. And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wage” (Luke 3:10-15).

Notice the emphasis on outward conduct strictly comporting with the claim of repentance. In coming to Christ, there must be a deliberate and resolute correction of deviate outward behavior. This must be matched by an inward resolve to please the Lord at all cost, else outward reform is of no value.

A word should be said here about the possibility of outward reform itself. Jesus, for example said the scribes and Pharisees made their outward lives clean, however were “full of extortion and excess” within (Matt 23:25-26). “Outwardly,” Jesus said, these men appeared “righteous,” even though within they were “full of hypocrisy and iniquity” (Matt 23:27-28). Those who affirm that outward change cannot precede coming to Christ must account for the ministry of John the Baptist, who was sent to prepare the way for the Messiah. Of course, they will not be able to account for his ministry. In fact, if what they say is true, his entire ministry was pointless.

On this matter, it is interesting to observe how differently Jesus reasoned than many of our contemporaries. It is not unusual for men to ask others to ignore their wayward conduct, saying that their hearts are right. However, if Jesus’ rebuke of the religious leaders was correct, it is not possible for one’s outward life to be in glaring contradiction of the truth, and their heart still be pure.

For some, the requirement to correct aberrant behavior prior to coming to Christ may appear impossible. However, this is not at all the case – for the scribes and Pharisees were impeccably righteous outwardly, as Jesus Himself affirmed. When Jesus declared, “except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven” (Matt 5:20), He was not referring to the appearance of righteousness. He rather was referring to their lack of inner purity. The point is that willing involvement in outward transgression must be abandoned before we can truthfully be ready to come to Jesus.

Depicted in Christ’s Miracles

The involvements of coming to Christ are seen in several of His miracles. In the healing of a man with a withered hand, Jesus first told the man, “Stretch forth thine hand.” It was when he stretched that withered hand forth that it was healed (Matt 2:13). To a man who had been impotent for thirty eight years, Jesus said, “Rise, take up thy bed and walk.” As the man extended himself to obey the word of the Lord, he was healed (John 5:5-9).

The point is that as individuals make a conscientious effort to rid themselves of sinful expressions, the Lord comes along side them, giving them grace to come to Him. Coming to Christ presumes the abandonment of something else – like Bartimaeus “casting away his garment as he rose to go to Jesus (Mk 10:50).

The ministry of John prepared men for a Messiah who is wholly intolerant of sin. His baptism made that plain. This is the sense in which John “made straight in the desert a highway for our God” (Isa 40:3; John 1:23).

“Unto Repentance”

John himself said his baptism was “unto repentance” (Matt 3:11). Other versions read, “for repentance,” NASB/NIV/NRSV “to those whose hearts are changed,” BBE “unto penance,” DOUAY “to amendment of life,” GENEVA “for those who turn from their sins and turn to God,” and NLT “to reformation.” YLT

The Greek word translated “unto” is εἰς . As used here, it has the following lexical meaning: “of a place entered, or of entrance into a place, into.” THAYER “motion toward a place,” FRIBERG “denotes purpose and sometimes result,” UBS and “extension toward a special goal - 'to, toward, in the direction of. .’ LOUW-NIDA

Repentance is not an end of itself, but is “to salvation” (2 Cor 7:10). It is not the means through which regeneration, or the new birth, is accomplished. There is no moral power in repentance itself. It is a change that involves the will and determination of men, yet is effectual owing to Divine power, for God gives repentance (Acts 5:31; 11:18; 2 Tim 2:25). Christ would not induct an economy of continual repentance. Repentance prepares people for Christ, working a certain sorrow for sin that causes it to become repugnant to the individual.

John’s baptism was more related to renunciation than appropriation – i.e. to put off surface sins, becoming more conscious of the defilement of sin in order to come to Christ. Although not limited to prohibitions, John responded to inquiries concerning conduct in this manner: “Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do? Exact no more than that which is appointed you. And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages” (Luke 3:13-14). This illustrates the significance of the phrase, “baptism unto repentance,” or “for repentance.” What it amounts to is this: those who were baptized by John had made a ongoing determination to correct their outward lives. This was confirmed by their outward manners. Their baptism also inducted them into a life in which they had pledged themselves to a continued life of moral purity.

The point is that there was quest for moral excellence, and a passion for the things of God that was previously unknown. This is how men were made ready for the coming of Christ.

Of itself, this was not sufficient to make them acceptable to God. However, it did prepare them to believe on the Christ whom John said would come after him (Acts 19:4).

The Time of John

The time in which John ministered was a kind of spiritual interim in which men were made ready for the Christ. That readiness consisted primarily of a hearty renunciation of sin. Jesus said of this interim, "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it" (Luke 16:16).

It appears to me that this time was accompanied by grace that allowed for a successful transition to the era of the New Covenant. Because of the thrust of the Old Covenant it majored on abstaining from sin, not obtaining the promises. In order to prepare for Christ however, a certain hatred for, and disdain of, sin must be acquired. It was the preaching of the Kingdom of God that proved to be the catalyst for meeting this requirement. It did this by opening the door of hope.

The System of Law

This approach was also articulated under the Law, which was primarily a way of restraining evil. As it is written, "Knowing this, that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, for whoremongers, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine" (1 Tim 1:9-10). These are all the expressions of aberrant desires.

Frequently the prophets admonished the people to abort the manifestation of sin . " . . . put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil" (Isa 1:16). "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts . . ." (Isa 55:7). ". . . Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin" (Ezek 18:30). ". . . Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings . . ." (Zech 1:4).

Under the powerful preaching of John, people began to meet this requirement, whereas prior to him, such a response was exceedingly rare. Speaking of this new kind of aggression Jesus said of the time of John, ". . . the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it" (Luke 16:16). And again, "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force" (Matt 11:12). The point is that there was quest for moral excellence, and a passion for the things of God that was previously unknown. This is how men were made ready for the coming of Christ.

The Revealed Comparison of John's Baptism

There has been considerable speculation about John's baptism, and much of it reflects sound thought. Often, however, the comparison is made between John's baptism and baptism into Christ. However, there is no such direct comparison in Scripture. There is a correlation of baptism into Christ with the receiving of the Holy Spirit. That reference is included in the listing below.

Since the Scriptures do directly address the subject of comparing John's baptism with something, we do well to consider what they declare.

• JOHN THE BAPTIST: compared his baptism with Jesus' person. "I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance : but He that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear . . . (Matt 3:11; Luke 3:16).

• JOHN THE BAPTIST: compared his baptism with the baptism Jesus himself would perform. “I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance : but He that cometh after me . . . shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire” (Matt 3:11). “I indeed have baptized you with water: but He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost” (Mark 1:8). “John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose: He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire” (Luke 3:16).

• JOHN THE BAPTIST: compared his baptism with the hidden nature of Jesus. “John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not . . . (John 1:26).

• JOHN THE BAPTIST: compared his baptism with the superiority of Jesus. “John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not; He it is, who coming after me is preferred before me , whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose” (John 1:26-27).

• JOHN THE BAPTIST: affirmed the ultimate reason for him being a baptizer. “And I knew Him not: but He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost ” (John 1:33).

• JESUS: compared who did the baptizing, and what they baptized with. “For John truly baptized with water ; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence” (Acts 1:5).

• JESUS: the baptism of John was from heaven. “ The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet. And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things” (Mat 21:25-27)

• PETER: compared who did the baptizing, and what they baptized with. “Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water ; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost ” (Acts 11:16).

• PAUL: emphasized repentance and the need to believe on Christ Jesus. “Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance , saying unto the people, that they should believe on Him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus ” (Acts 19:4).

Now, precisely which of those remarkable transactions were accomplished by men – either the person doing the baptizing, or the ones being baptized? Further, was it the required act of baptism that validated it, or was it what took place during that time – unseen by men? The answers to those questions ought to be obvious enough not to require extensive dialog.

As most of the above texts affirm, the matter that is distinguished between the two baptism's is twofold.

- The Person of Christ.
- The baptism that Jesus Himself performs.

This baptism does not refer to something men do – i.e. “Repent and be baptized” (Acts 2:38); “baptizing them” (Matt 28:19). This refers to what Jesus does. While it is intricately associated with what men do in being baptized, it is not synonymous with it. The effectiveness of being baptized is not owing to what men do. There is a mighty work that is accomplished behind the scenes, taking place when we are baptized with water (Acts 10:47-48).

Ponder some of the precise expressions related to baptism.

- Baptized “for the remission of sins” (Acts 2:38).
- When we are baptized , our sins are “washed away” (Acts 22:16).
- “ Baptized into Jesus Christ” (Rom 6:3; Gal 3:27).
- Baptized into Christ’s death” (Rom 6:3).
- “Buried with” Jesus “by baptism ” (Rom 6:4; Col 2:12).
- In baptism , we are not only “buried with” Christ, but are also “risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God” (Col 2:12).
- Baptized by one Spirit “into one body” (1 Cor 12:13).
- Being baptized into Christ, we “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27).
- Baptism saves us “by the resurrection of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 3:21).

Now, precisely which of those remarkable transactions were accomplished by men – either the person doing the baptizing, or the ones being baptized? Further, was it the required act of baptism that validated it, or was it what took place during that time – unseen by men? The answers to those questions ought to be obvious enough not to require extensive dialog.

The Baptism Done by Jesus

The baptism that Jesus Himself accomplished “with the Holy Spirit” is what relates the matter of baptism to the new birth (John 3:5) – regeneration (Tit 3:5), being identified with Christ Himself (Rom 6:3; Col 2:12; Gal 3:27),¹ the forgiveness of sins (Acts 2:36; 22:16), and the cleansing of the conscience (1 Pet 3:21). Some of the things that occur in baptism into Christ, whether known at the time or not, are as follows. There is some redundancy in this listing, but here I am addressing the doctrine of baptism rather than how the word is used.

- INTO CHRIST. Baptized into Jesus Christ (Rom 6:3a).
- INTO JESUS’ DEATH. Baptized into Jesus death (Rom 6:3b).
- WITH CHRIST. Buried with Christ by baptism into death (Rom 6:4a).
- NEWNESS OF LIFE. Commence a walk in newness of life (Rom 6:4a).
- PLANTED TOGETHER. Planted together in the likeness of Christ’s death, thus ensuring we would be raised up by God (Rom 6:4b).
- THE OLD MAN CRUCIFIED. Our “old man” was crucified with Christ (Rom 6:5a).
- CEASE SERVING SIN. The necessity of serving sin was terminated (6:5b).
- FREE FROM SIN. We were freed from the guilt and power of sin (Rom 6:6).
- DEAD TO SIN. We can now reckon, or reason upon the truth, that we are dead indeed unto sin (Rom 6:7a).
- ALIVE UNTO GOD. We can now reckon, or reason upon the truth, that we are alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord (Rom 6:7b).
- NO OBLIGATION TO SIN. We are under no moral or spiritual compulsion to sin, but can yield our capacities to God as those who are alive from the dead (Rom 6:12-13).
- SIN HAS NO DOMINION. Sin no longer has dominion over us, for we are now under grace, not law (Rom 6:14).

• SERVANTS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS. We were the servants of sin, but are now servants of righteousness (Rom 6:17-22).

• BY THE SPIRIT. We were baptized by the Spirit into the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:13).

• CIRCUMCISED. We were circumcised with the circumcision of Christ, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh (Col 2:11).

• RAISED THROUGH FAITH. We were raised from baptism through our faith in the operation of God (Col 2:12).

• REGENERATED. We were regenerated (Tit 3:5).

• SAVED. Saved by baptism, as confirmed in the purging of the conscience (1 Pet 3:21).

Doctrinally, the comparisons do not have to do with the baptism itself, but with THE ONE who performed it.

John the Baptist, Jesus, and Peter drew attention to the fact that John baptized with water, but Jesus would baptize “with the Holy Spirit.” NKJV (Matt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16; John 1:33; Acts 11:16). The truth of the matter is that water itself, though absolutely essential, cannot not accomplish the realities associated with baptism, any more than the water of Jordan could take away the leprosy of Naaman (2 Kgs 5:10-14). Carrying the parallel further, the blood of the Passover lamb contained no properties that would cause the angelic minister of death to pass over the houses of the Israelites in Egypt – yet, woe to that Israelite who neglected to meet that requirement (Ex 12:13-14).

If I read this text with a mind to justify the essentiality baptism for the appropriation of salvation, I will not see its meaning. That point is substantiated elsewhere, not in this particular text. Neither, indeed, will I accomplish anything by saying Jesus baptizing with the Holy Spirit applied only to the apostles. This was a message that John preached to the populace of the region, not to the twelve disciples alone.

Additionally, the apostles are actually a part of the church – members of the “one body” (1 Cor 12:18,28;. Eph 4:8-11). Their function is unique, but it is performed within the context of the church as a whole, When it comes to the matter of receiving the Holy Spirit, they differed only in regard to their function, and function is not determined by experience. It is rather a matter of Divine placement (1 Cor 12:18).

Even when it comes to the matter of faith, Peter, one of the premier apostles, described those constituted “strangers and pilgrims,” as “them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:1). Other versions read, “a faith of the same kind as ours,” NASB “a faith of equal standing with our,” RSV and “those who have received (obtained an equal privilege of) like precious faith with ourselves.” AMPLIFIED There are not multiple ways of being added to the body of Christ, or unique experiences among the various members through which we they become identified with Jesus Christ. Surely that is evident to all. If it is not, it certainly ought to be.

BELIEVERS ARE IN THE SPIRIT

The apostles’ doctrine, which is the inspired exposition of the Gospel, declares that those in Christ are “IN the Spirit.”

• POSSESSING THE SPIRIT. “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his” (Rom 8:9).

• RIGHTEOUSNESS, PEACE, AND JOY. “For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost ” (Rom 14:17).

• THE BEGINNING OF NEW LIFE. “Are ye so foolish? having begun in the Spirit , are ye now made perfect by the flesh?” (Gal 3:3).

• PROGRESSION. “This I say then, Walk in the Spirit , and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh” (Gal 5:16).

• SPIRITUAL LIFE. “If we live in the Spirit , let us also walk in the Spirit” (Gal 5:25).

• EFFECTIVE PRAYER. “Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit , and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints” (Eph 6:18).

• WORSHIP OF GOD. “For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the Spirit , and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3).

• BROTHERLY LOVE. “Who also declared unto us your love in the Spirit ” (Col 1:8).

• BUILDING OURSELVES UP. “But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost ” (Jude 1:20).

How Did We Get Into the Spirit?

How is it that we were put “in the Spirit,” so that we had access to the various strengths and ministries found in Him alone? When Jesus baptizes men “with the Holy Spirit,” He puts them into the Spirit like men put their bodies into the baptismal waters, A merging of the human spirit with the Holy Spirit takes place in Jesus’ baptism that is so precise it is written, “But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit” (1 Cor 6:17). Our bodies were removed from the water, being raised out of it. However, we were not removed from the Spirit with which Jesus baptized us. The Spirit is the author of the life into which we were raised to walk (Rom 6:4; 8:10). Men did not leave us in the water, for that baptism is the “ form of doctrine” (Rom 6:17), which includes being raised up with Christ. However, Jesus left us “in the Spirit,” because that is the solitary locale in which the newness of life can be lived, matured, and brought to its intended consummation.

WAS APOLLOS A FOLLOWER OF CHRIST?

I am aware that this is a controversial area. However, I am also aware that there is no need for it to be. I have already shown the extent of John’s affirmations concerning Jesus Christ. There is also the fact that there is no record of an extensive presentation of the person of Christ to Apollos as there was to the disciples in Ephesus, as recorded in the nineteenth chapter of Acts.

The fact that “he was speaking and teaching accurately the things concerning Jesus,” NASB strongly suggests that he was a follower of Jesus, as compared to being a disciple of John the Baptist at that time. However, he lacked an understanding concerning the baptism accomplished by Jesus “with the Holy Spirit.” There is no suggestion that he was ignorant of the Holy Spirit like the disciples Paul encountered in Ephesus (Acts 19:2).

“We cannot but think he had heard of Christ's death and resurrection, but he was not let into the mystery of them, had not had opportunity of conversing with any of the apostles since the pouring out of the Spirit; or he had himself been baptized only with the baptism of John, but was not baptized with the Holy Ghost, as the disciples were at the day of Pentecost.” MATTHEW HENRY

This should not be surprising to us. Many believers, including myself, were in Christ for some time before Christ’s role in putting us into the Holy Spirit obtained any clarity in our understanding. It is quite conceivable that a person could hear and believe the Gospel, correlating it with the Jesus John announced, yet remaining ignorant of such things as Jesus baptizing with the Holy Spirit, the nature and effectiveness of the New Covenant, the conflict that rages within the believer, and a host of other matters. This by no means casts doubt upon the legitimacy of their conversion. It does provide a sterling example of the impact of flawed or incomplete teaching. Who is able to estimate the number of believers that, when they were baptized, had no idea of what Jesus did at that time?

There is no record of Apollos being re-baptized as were the disciples in Ephesus (Acts 19:5). Many believers have actually had the same experience as Apollos appears to have had. They were not aware of the baptism that Jesus Himself performs, putting disciples into the Holy Spirit, like their bodies are placed into the baptismal waters. Many believers were in Christ for some time before they heard any substantive teaching concerning the Holy Spirit, and some, to this very day, have never heard what John said to the multitudes concerning the Lord Jesus Christ: “He will baptize you with the Holy Spirit and fire” (Matt 3:11; Lk 3:16), or “He shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit” (Mk 1:8). Further, our understanding of this affirmation is not to be formed by denominational dogma, and it must not be passed through such a filter. It is imperative that the Scriptures be seen as God’s word, not that of a religious sect.

I have spent some time on this text because of my own past experience of confusion on the matter, and realizing that experience was not unique to me.

HE BEGAN TO SPEAK BOLDLY IN THE SYNAGOGUE

“26a And he began to speak boldly in the synagogue . . .” Other versions read, “speak out boldly,” NASB “preaching in the synagogue without fear,” BBE “speak out fearlessly,” NET “teach fearlessly,” NJB “speak very boldly,” ISV “speaking courageously,” WILLIAMS and “speak freely (fearlessly and boldly).” AMPLIFIED

The words “speak boldly” are translated from a single Greek word (parrhsia,zesqai). The lexical meaning of this word is, “ to bear oneself boldly or confidently . . . to use freedom in speaking, be free-spoken; to speak freely . . . to grow confident, have boldness, show assurance, assume a bold bearing,” THAYER and “acting with an attitude of openness that comes from freedom and lack of fear.” FRIBERG

With a confidence that is birthed by spiritual understanding, Apollos began to speak out in the synagogue of Ephesus. The subject of his speaking was within the framework of his scope of knowledge. That is defined in our text.

- Being an “eloquent,” and learned man, he effectively presented something that was spiritually reasonable, strongly appealing to both heart and mind.
- Because he was “mighty in the Scriptures,” his words were founded on the written Word, reflecting both the thrust and application of Scripture.
- Because he was “instructed in the way of the Lord,” his presentation reflected Divine manners, and focused on the purpose of God, as well as His unchanging nature.
- Because “he was speaking and teaching accurately the things concerning Jesus,” NASB his focus was on the Lord Jesus Christ. This had particular regard to how He was presented by Moses and the Prophets, plus the additional expositions to which he may have been exposed.
- Knowing “only the baptism of John,” it appears that the thrust of his message must have dealt with repentance, and the necessity of coming to Jesus with conviction of heart and a determination to have done with the expression of sin.

There is no evidence that Apollos was unacquainted with the baptism first declared by Peter (Acts

2:38). Nor, indeed, is there any indication that he himself had not been baptized into Christ. As I have already pointed out, the baptism of John is nowhere compared with being baptized into Christ. It is rather compared with the baptism that Jesus Himself performs.

The baptism accomplished by Jesus is one that results in a change of character, as compared to a change of conduct alone. The doctrine of the change is expounded in the sixth chapter of Romans, with some additional perspectives being presented in Colossians 2:11-15. Baptism into Christ relates to becoming “dead indeed unto sin,” and “alive unto God” (Rom 6:11). It has to do with being put into the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:13), as well as into Christ Jesus Himself (Gal 3:27). It is at this point that the prophecy of Ezekiel is fulfilled concerning the people receiving a new heart and a new spirit (Ezek 36:26).

An understanding of the nature and effectiveness of the new birth transforms one’s concept of, what men call, reformation. When a person is born again, being baptized by Jesus with the Holy Spirit, they become “partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14). They become a “new creation” in Christ Jesus (Eph 2:10), and receive “the new man, which after God is created in all righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). Those who are born again have a new base of knowledge, for the new man is “renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10). It is then that through the promises, and in increasing measures, they are “made partakers of the Divine nature” (2 Pet 1:4).

All of this has to do with what Jesus does, not merely what we do. When a person is baptized into Christ considerable takes place that is actually unknown to the one being baptized. This is why all of the teaching concerning baptism is delivered to those who have already been baptized (Rom 6:1-22; 1 Cor 12:13; Gal 3:27-28; Col 3:11-12; 1 Pet 3:21). All of that teaching is an exposition of what Jesus has done in our conversion, not what we have done.

It is easy for me to understand Apollos’ deficiency in this matter, because I myself was abysmally ignorant of what took place in my baptism. This is because the thrust of the teaching to which I was exposed dealt with the necessity of being baptized, and the remission of sins that took place at that time. The role of Jesus was rarely, if ever, mentioned, even though baptism was into Him and into His death (Rom

From Holman's Bible Dictionary. How to Build a Synagogue Service:

Ten adult males are required to be present for a public service to proceed. The service consists of five parts:

1-Reading the Shema (Deut 6:4-9)

2-Synagogue Prayers

3-Reading from the Torah (The Law of Moses)

4-Reading from the Prophets

5-Benediction.

[“The five-part service included prayers, psalm-singing, blessings, readings from the Scriptures, and commentaries on the sacred passages, but there were no sacrifices and no standard liturgy.”] © 1995-1996 The Bible Knowledge Accelerator

No sacrifices were carried out here; rather, reading the Scriptures replaced this as the central event of Jewish Worship. There was, therefore, no praise service.

Sometimes during the period between the Old and New Testaments, formal Jewish schools for children were started in the synagogues. By the time of Jesus, all Jewish male children had to go to school. They learned how to read and write by studying the Bible. It is possible that Jesus Himself went to such a school, where he learned the Torah and grew in every way.

The great historian J. Robert Teringo wrote: "The fixed order of service began, after the customary greeting, with a prayer while the people remained standing facing the sacred Torah scroll. The reading of the law of Moses was next. The Torah scroll was taken from the chest and placed before a reader who read in the ancient Hebrew tongue and immediately translated it into Aramaic the language of those days. A commentary was always added to this reading. Next, a portion was read from the books of the prophets and, again, immediately translated verse by verse. After a closing prayer, the service was concluded..." Synagogue Worship - Alfred Edersheim

6:3-4, and I was raised with Him (Rom 6:4-5), and then seated together with Him in the heavenly places (Eph 2:6). The fact of the matter is that the teaching to which I was exposed was more closely associated with "the baptism of John" than with baptism into Christ. John's baptism was "for the remission of sins" (Mk 1:4). However, it was not accompanied with the precious "gift of the Holy Spirit," which is promised to those who repent and are baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38). As I have already said, the text strongly suggests that this was an area in which Apollos lacked understanding – but it will not be for long. This did not alter what Jesus accomplished in baptism, but only touches on the needed awareness of those realities by those being baptized.

In the Synagogue Again

This is the eleventh time the book of Acts has referred to preaching in the synagogues (6:9-13; 9:20-23; 13:5; 13:14-41; 14:1-5; 17:1-4,10,17; 18:5-6, 19-21,26). In addition to Apollos speaking in the synagogue, we will learn from this text that Aquila and Priscilla were meeting there as well. You may recall that when Saul of Tarsus launched a persecution against believers in Christ, he asked for letters to the "synagogues," where he would seek for such believers (Acts 9:2). Further, Paul regularly ministered in the synagogues, as he himself affirmed in Acts 24:12.

Without lingering for an inordinate amount of time on this matter, ponder how appropriate it would be viewed in the churches of our land to have a person speak who was eloquent, mighty in the Scriptures, instructed in the way of the Lord, and spoke accurately about the things concerning Jesus Christ.

An understanding of this custom of early believers gives us some idea of why they met together, and what they did. The synagogue gathering centered in Scripture and its exposition (Acts 15:21). It is important to keep in our minds that Jewish customs were developed within the context of an acute awareness of God. Even though the hearts of the people were often far from God (Matt 15:8), yet the form itself was anchored to revelation. These were people who had been cultured by Almighty God through the Law and the various ceremonies instituted under the Old Covenant. Within that context, the Scriptures themselves were given a prominent role in their gatherings. This is because the Scriptures are the appointed means through which the knowledge of God is honed to its finest edge.

In the early days of the church, the apostles and elders relied on the fact that the Scriptures were always read in the synagogues. When, for example, these men were considering the subject of circumcision, James said, “For Moses of old time hath in every city them that preach him, being read in the synagogues every sabbath day ” (Acts 15:21). Further, we are told that the reading in the synagogue included “the law and the prophets” (Acts 13:15). In Antioch, Paul reminded the people that the Jews had “the voices of the prophets . . . read [to them] every sabbath day” (Acts 13:27).

A Potentially Productive Environment

Such an environment was conducive to the insightful proclamation of Christ, and the salvation that is in Him “with eternal glory” (2 Tim 2:10). This is because the people were exposed to a panorama of revelation that included promises as well as moral obligations, and affirmations concerning the nature of God as well as the depravity of man. The basic word was God’s word, not the word or traditions of men. The subject of exposition and exhortation was Scripture, not mere moral duty or the vain enterprises of men. In that kind of environment, a man who is mighty in the Scriptures, knows the way of the Lord, and accurately teachings the things concerning Christ, can speak profitably.

The Modern Church Environment

I cannot help but note how strange such an environment is in our times. There are gatherings of professing Christians who are exposed to teaching designed to correct marriage, improve financial accountability, and recover from moral setbacks. Even at that, the teaching is brief and sparse. The basis of such teaching is not the mind of the Lord, but the perceived need of man. The glory of God is not the point, but the temporal needs and success of men. Oh, they do their best to tie their thoughts to Scripture, but it proves too challenging for them. As a result they do not handle the word of God correctly (2 Tim 2:15). It is difficult to emphasize things concerning which the Scriptures have proportionately little to say. But the religious merchants muster their resources and do so anyway, even if they have to force their subject into Scripture.

Without lingering for a inordinate amount of time on this matter, ponder how appropriate it would be viewed in the churches of our land to have a person speak who was eloquent, mighty in the Scriptures, instructed in the way of the Lord, and spoke accurately about the things concerning Jesus Christ. How would such a person fit into the average church-agenda of our day? How would the fabled pulpit committee go about determining whether or not a prospective preacher met these qualifications – or would they even consider them to be relevant to their agenda for the church?

The point I am making is this: within the confines of the organized church, these are not the qualities contemporaries expect to find in their leaders. Their adopted organizational structure gives no preeminence to such things. However, in Scripture, these ARE the traits found in Apollos, as well as other men who “helped” the people of God. It seems to me that they are requisite today also.

As you walk through this text, as well as the rest of the book of Acts, you will become aware of the total absence of institutionalized religion. There is not enough information to attempt to duplicate the reported accomplishments by means of a routine. No value is placed on human wisdom, and an obvious reliance upon Divine direction is seen on every page. This is because we are reading of real spiritual life, not simulated life, which is the bane of the modern church. Jesus is actually at work in the people of which we are reading.

THE WAY OF GOD EXPOUNDED TO HIM MORE PERFECTLY

“ 26b . . . whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard, they took him unto them, and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.”

The relevance of what follows is against the backdrop of Apollos knowing only about John’s baptism. Now, because of his heart and commitment to the truth, the Lord will direct him into a larger room, where more of the truth can be seen. In order to do this, and in keeping with the truth that the “steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord” (Psa 37:23), the Lord brought Apollos from Alexandria Egypt to Ephesus in order that his understanding might be matured. This would have required a trip of around five hundred miles by sea, and well over one thousand miles by land.

Once again, behold the total absence of concern about inconvenience, or an intrusion on the time of those involved. One senses that living unto the Lord was so much the emphasis that the highlights of life could be written in the manner set before us. Apollos is occupied with proclaiming the truth, and Aquila and Priscilla are concerned about assisting him to see the truth more clearly. Within a purely institutional setting, these things are exceedingly rare – if, indeed, they can be present at all.

AQUILA AND PRISCILLA HEARD

“ . . . whom when Aquila and Priscilla had heard . . .” Other versions read, “When Aquila and Priscilla heard him,” NKJV “hearing his words,” BBE “having heard him,” DARBY and “after hearing him.” WEYMOUTH

Here we are exposed to people who maintained a love for the truth – something that is essential to salvation. There are those who are described as people who “perish, because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved” (2 Thess 2:10). In this text:

- Apollos declares the truth that he has perceived,
- Aquila and Priscilla weigh what they have heard him say in view of their own love and knowledge of the truth.
- Aquila and Priscilla do not allow Apollos to remain deficient in his understanding.

Of course, all of this presumes a prevailing love for, and interest in, the truth of God. Where these are not found, it really makes no experiential difference what a person says or what he hears. These realities are behind every historical record in the book of Acts.

THEY TOOK HIM UNTO THEM

“ . . . they took him unto them. . .” Other versions read, “they took him aside,” NKJV “they invited him to their home,” NIV “took him in,” BBE “took him home,” CSB and “took him to them.” DARBY

The words “took . . . unto them” are translated from a single Greek word: proselambonto. The lexical meaning of the word is, “to take to oneself . . . receive into one's home, with the collateral idea of kindness,” THAYER “take aside, take hold of and lead aside, take along with oneself receive hospitably, accept, welcome,” FRIBERG “receive or accept in one's society, home, or circle of acquaintances.” GINGRICH

While, technically, the word can mean to simply take aside in the immediate area, this incident does not appear to fit that meaning well. Given the nature of this occasion, coupled with the extensive tutelage of the Jews in the matter of hospitality, it seems better to consider the text to mean that Aquila and Priscilla took Apollos to their home. However, this is not something that justifies any further word.

THEY EXPOUNDED TO HIM THE WAY OF GOD MORE PERFECTLY

“ . . . and expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly.” Other versions read, “ explained to him the way of God more accurately ,” NKJV “gave him fuller teaching about the way of God,” BBE “explained to him the Way of God in fuller detail ,” CSB “expounded to him the way of the Lord more diligently ,” DOUAY “expounded unto him the way of God more carefully ,” ERV “ fully showed him the way of the Lord,” MRD “gave him more detailed instruction about the Way,” NJB “did more exactly expound to him the way of God,” YLT “ helped him understand the way of God better,” LIVING “explained God's way to him more accurately,” IE and “expounded to him the way of God more definitely and accurately .” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “way” is used twenty times in the book of Acts. When it is not referring to a geographical path being traveled (1:12; 8:26,36.39; 9:17,27; 25:3; 26:13), the following expressions are found. Note the matters with which they are associated.

- “The ways of life” (2:28).
- “Any of this way ” (9:2).
- “The right ways of the Lord” (13:10).
- God “suffered all nations to walk in their own ways ” (14:16).
- “The way of salvation” (16:17).
- “The way of the Lord” (18:25).
- “The way of God” (18:26).
- They “spake evil of the way ” (19:9).
- “There arose no small stir about that way ” (19:23).
- “I persecuted this way ” (22:4).
- “After the way which they call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers” (24:14).
- Felix, “having more perfect knowledge of that way ” (24:22).

As used here, the word “way” means “a way (I. e. manner) of thinking, feeling, deciding,” THAYER and “way of life or acting, conduct.” GINGRICH

Here, we are introduced to “the way of God” – not the way man is to take, but the way, or manner, of God Himself. To be sure, there is a way that man is to take, and it is a “narrow” way that “leads to life” (Matt 7:14). It is a “way” that God has given to men, but our text speaks of the way of God Himself – how He conducts Himself.

Having been with Paul, Aquila and Priscilla might well have delineated the nature of baptism into Christ, and the critical role of the Holy Spirit in the whole matter (Rom 6 & 8). As I have already pointed out, in Scripture, the baptism of John is never compared with baptism into Christ. It is rather compared with the ones doing the baptism: one with water, and the other with the Spirit. However extensive the instruction given to Apollos, it must have related primarily to the administration of the Holy Spirit, into whom Jesus places us. It is true that this occurs when we are baptized for the remission of sins. However, it is not necessarily known at that time.

In my judgment, Apollos was more acquainted with reform than regeneration, of which I do not consider him to have been ignorant. To suggest that he was “mighty in the Scriptures,” “instructed in the way of the Lord,” and “taught diligently and accurately things concerning Jesus Christ,” yet was not in Christ, or was ignorant of regeneration, seems to me to be a stretch of the imagination. The fact that he was taught “more perfectly” the way of God suggests that he was not untaught in the rudiments, and was in Christ.

HE WAS DISPOSED TO PASS INTO ACHAIA

“ 27a And when he was disposed to pass into Achaia . . . ” Other versions read, “desired to cross to,” NKJV “wanted to go across,” NASB “wanted to go to,” NIV “wished to cross over to,” NRSV “was minded to pass over into,” ASV “made plans to cross over to,” BBE “purposed to go into,” DARBY “wanted to travel to Greece,” GWN “thought of crossing over to,” NJB “had been thinking about going to,” NLT “had made up his mind to cross over into,” WEYMOUTH and “wished to cross to Achaia (most of Greece).” AMPLIFIED

As used here, the word “disposed” means, “to will deliberately, have a purpose, be minded,” THAYER “of a person deliberating and deciding something will, determine, intend,” FRIBERG “to desire to have or experience something, with the implication of some reasoned planning or will to accomplish the goal - 'to desire, to want, to will” LOUW-NIDA

Here, we are given a kind of snap-shot of the thoughts of Apollos – what he wanted to do, his purposes, and his objectives. When a person is living by faith, such thoughts can reflect Divine direction, for a mind that is centered on things above is one in which the Lord will work.

It is apparent that the more perfect instruction given to Apollos concerning “the way of God” was received without any complication. Here is a man whose total life was given over to the Lord. He comes from Alexandria to Ephesus, and immediately begins speaking with boldness in the synagogue. As soon as the scope of his knowledge is broadened through the ministry of Aquila and Priscilla, he considers further labors for the Lord. We know this is the case because of the text that follows. He is not disposed to go across the Sea from Asia to Greece to see the sights. He is not embarking on a business trip. He is not driven by mere curiosity. His life has been joined to the Lord, and he knows it!

We are being exposed to people of whom it can be said, “For me to live is Christ” (Phil 1:21), and “the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me” (Gal 2:20). Actually, this is the only type of life that is acceptable to God, for Jesus “died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). God has not, and will not, set aside that purpose.

We have been exposed to the itinerary of Paul, whose sole purpose was to serve the Lord. Aquila and Priscilla are also in that category, accompanying Paul to Ephesus, then remaining there to stabilize the work that had been started. They are so absorbed in the good and acceptable and perfect will of God, that they immediately see the deficiency of Apollos’ knowledge, and set out to expand his comprehension of “the way of God.” Now, we are introduced to Apollos who lives his life in the same manner.

The Record Before Us

This is not the record of an organization or institution. It is not the report of a humanly developed missionary strategy. This is rather the record of Christ, the Head of the body, working His will in the earth, and doing so through those who have been effectually united with Him. This is the account of individuals who are, in fact, living by faith. These are people through whom the Lord will work because they are in fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9), enjoy the communion of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 13:14), and are walking in the truth (2 John 1:3). Their fellowship with one another is strictly owing to their fellowship with the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit (1 John 1:3; Phil 2:1).

Corinth was situated in Achaia. While in Corinth, when Paul was brought before Gallio, it is said that Gallio was “the deputy of Achaia.” That was the region in which the city of Corinth was found. Stephanus, who was in the church of Corinth, is said to have been “the first fruits of Achaia” (1 Cor 16:15). In his second letter to the Corinthians Paul referred to “the church of God which is at Corinth, with all the saints which are in all Achaia” (2 Cor 1:1). There were, then, a number of believers in the larger province of Achaia. This circumstance will bring some lucidity to the text that follows.

Achaia was a region in Greece. Under the Romans, Greece was divided into two provinces, Macedonia and Achaia, which was the southern region of that territory. The references to Achaia in the Scriptures speak of this southern region, reflecting the division made by Rome, who was in power at that time. The land mass was approximately 200 miles from north to south, and 150-175 miles from east to west. Like many of the regions and cities mentioned in the book of Acts, the area was a crossroads for the world, containing significant cities and sea ports.

Judging from the report that follows, Apollos was aware of the many believers in the region of Achaia, where Paul had spent more than a year and a half, preaching and teaching among the people (Acts 18:11). Furthermore, the Lord had revealed to Paul that He had “much people” in the city of Corinth (Act 18:10). Now, He sends another laborer there to establish the saints.

The Centrality of the Work of the Lord

Once again, I want to draw attention to the obvious centrality of the work of the Lord. Paul once alluded to the fact that other apostles, and Peter himself, took their wives with them in their travels (1 Cor 9:5). However we have no details whatsoever on their general family lives, their children, or other things that were of a domestic nature. This by no means suggests that their family life was unimportant. However, the work of the Lord was fundamental, as it ought to be. Our present religious environment makes it difficult for many to think in such a manner. This is owing to the skewing of theology toward the world instead of heaven – which is the ultimate in contradictory thinking. That directional error is what makes accounts like this appear unusual to the modern Christian. It is not possible for an approach to spiritual life to be right, yet become a source of confusion when the mind is exposed to the pure Word of God. When accounts like this sound strange, it is because the mind has been subjected to erroneous influences that did not come from the Lord.

THE BRETHREN WROTE

“27b . . . the brethren wrote, exhorting the disciples to receive him . . .” Other versions read, “the brethren encouraged him and wrote to the disciples to welcome him,” NKJV/NIV “the brethren encouraged him, and wrote to the disciples to receive him,” ASV “the brothers gave him help, and sent letters to the disciples requesting them to take him in among them,” BBE “the brothers wrote to the disciples urging them to welcome him,” CSB “the brethren exhorting, wrote to the disciples to receive him,” DOUAY “the brethren exhorting him, wrote to the disciples to receive him,” GENEVA “the believers in Ephesus encouraged him. They wrote to the disciples in Greece to tell them to welcome him,” GWN “the brothers and sisters in Ephesus encouraged him to go. They wrote to the believers in Achaia, asking them to welcome him,” NLT “So, the brothers helped pay his expenses. They wrote a letter to the followers . In the letter, they asked them to accept Apollos,” IE “the brethren wrote to the disciples in Corinth begging them to give him a kindly welcome,” WEYMOUTH “the brethren wrote to the disciples there, urging and encouraging them to accept and welcome him heartily,” AMPLIFIED and “the brothers gave him every encouragement and wrote a letter to the disciples there, asking them to make him welcome.” PHILLIPS

Note that several versions represent the exhorting, or encouragement, as being addressed to Apollos, while others relate it to the letters written to the brethren in Achaia. The text strongly suggests that the brethren did, in fact, encourage Apollos, and this was confirmed in the writing of letters to the brethren in Achaia.

THE BRETHREN

“The brethren” in Ephesus could not have been in the Lord very long – probably in the vicinity of a year at the most. Note their zeal for the Lord and interest in His work. Perceive how they were aware of kindred spirits who were across the sea

Behold the closeness of the brethren, even though separated by miles, and a sea between them. Consider again that the brethren in Ephesus were probably relatively new believers – at least this would be the case if they had been converted when Paul first testified there. There is no evidence that there were disciples of Christ in Ephesus prior to Paul arriving there earlier. The first mentioning of Ephesus in the Bible is Acts 18:19, and there is no indication that a body of believers existed there at that time. It is possible that some Jews who were present on the memorable day of Pentecost brought back the news of the Gospel, for some were present from Asia (Acts 2:9). However, there is no record of anyone finding believers in Ephesus prior to the arrival of Paul, Aquila and Priscilla.

Yet, even though these were apparently young believers, they were conversant with kingdom manners, ready to communicate with believers from another area, and knowledge of brethren in those areas. Since the scattering of the church due to the rise of denominationalism, this kind of awareness is virtually unknown. I suppose that were it not for electronic media, many professing Christians would have no sentience, or cognizance, of any believers outside the circumference of their own religious setting. The fact that this condition exists is confirmation that we are living in perilous times, indeed.

A NEW THING

An approach to Christianity has been birthed in our day that does not yield the kind of results that are recorded in the inspired record. Let it be clear that we are under no obligation to recognize as legitimate any representation of believers that is at variance with the Divine description of such. We certainly are not to be suspicious of every Christian, seeking to disqualify as many as we can from the ranks of believers. But neither are we to be naive and gullible as though in our time Jesus was producing a new kind of believer. Maintaining the posture of charitableness and wisdom, every person in Christ is to expect the manners and lives of professing believers to support their claim to identity with Him.

A Response of Paul

It was for this very reason that Paul, so noted for his outstanding love, said to the Galatians, “I stand in doubt of you” (Gal 4:20). Other versions read, “I have doubts about you,” NKJV “I am perplexed about you,” NASB “I am completely baffled by you,” ISV and “I am fearful and perplexed about you!” AMPLIFIED Their conduct did not match their profession! The same was true of the church in Corinth (1 Cor 3:1-3).

And what was it that caused Paul to have this reaction? In particular, it was that the Galatians were not bearing the fruit that is produced by faith. Their manners were in sharp conflict with the nature of spiritual life. Candidly, they were closer to the world than they were to Christ, and, from the view of godly men, this put their status into question. Paul did not condemn them, for that is a role that has not been given to men. However, without confirming evidence, their status was thrown into doubt. He told them that if they were, in fact, reverting to a system of law, they were “fallen from grace” (Gal 5:4). If immorality surfaces, the people of God are to refresh their minds with this certain reality: “For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience” (Eph 5:5-6).

There are numerous evidences of the presence of genuine spiritual life. Included are a “love of the truth” (2 Thess 2:10), the “love of the brethren” (1 John 3:14), and a fervent quest to obtain the prize of our high calling (Phil 3:7-14). All of these are revealed in what we know about the brethren in Ephesus.

- They had believed and obeyed the Gospel.
- They had maintained a love for the truth.

- They received Apollos, who was from another region.
- They were aware of brethren in other areas.
- They encouraged Apollos.
- They sent letters of recommendation to the brethren in Achaia, exhorting them to receive Apollos.

Keeping in mind the apparent length of time they had been in Christ, that is a most remarkable record. It teaches us that spiritual maturity does not necessarily require a lengthy period of time. This is owing to the presence of the Holy Spirit and the versatility and strength of newness of life. When spiritual growth is slow, there is always some modifying factor that is competing against spiritual influences. Tares have been sown among the wheat, and the net has caught some bad fish.

The objective of this mighty man of God was not to bring the saints an understanding of men, women, finances, the human psyche, or some other nuance of earthly life. Rather, he strengthened the things that had to do with getting ready to leave this world, as well as living by faith while here.

LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Behold the mindfulness of the brethren in Ephesus for their brethren. They did not want Apollos to undergo a time of unnecessary examination, and they desired the brethren in Achaia to obtain an accurate appraisal of him. This is an evidence of their love for the people of God, as well as their discernment.

It is possible that Paul referred to this very letter in his second epistle to the Corinthians. In that epistle, he chided the Corinthians for testing him to see if he was really an apostle or not. The folly of their efforts is seen in the fact that they themselves were the proof of the legitimacy of Paul's apostleship (2 Cor 3:2-3). In that section of his letter he said, ". . . need we, as some others, epistles of commendation to you, or letters of commendation from you?" (2 Cor 3:1).

Where the evidence was clear, no letters of approval were required. However, in the case of Apollos, he was not known in Achaia. Therefore, those who did know him bore witness to him – even though they were only briefly acquainted with him.

HE HELPED THEM MUCH WHO HAD BELIEVED THROUGH GRACE

“ 27c . . . who, when he was come, helped them much which had believed through grace.”

When Apollos arrived in Achaia he was immediately involved in the work of the Lord. He probably came first to Corinth, which was on the eastern edge of Achaia, where Apollos would have disembarked. It is important to notice how his labors are declared.

HE HELPED THEM MUCH

“. . . who, when he was come, helped them much . . .” Other versions read, “greatly helped,” NKJV “was a great help,” NIV “he gave much help,” BBE “contributed much,” DARBY “greatly assisted,” MRD “gave great assistance,” NAB “help . . . considerably,” NJB “proved to be a great benefit,” NLT “strengthen,” LIVING “rendered valuable help,” WEYMOUTH “rendered great service,” WILLIAMS “mightily helped,” MONTGOMERY and “proved a source of great strength.” PHILLIPS

The immediate target of Apollos' labors were the brethren – no doubt those to whom the letters of recommendation were addressed. Thus, the “who” of this text are the “the disciples” to whom the brethren in Ephesus wrote. The expression “when he was come” signifies that he gathered himself together with them, coming along side of them. That means these brethren met together, as all believers in the book of Acts were wont to do. That is the manner of “newness of life,” which moved those possessing it to come together.

He is said to have “helped them much.” The help, or assistance, that Apollos gave the brethren had to do with their understanding – with putting things together in their minds. The word used here (suneba,leto) means “to bring together in one's mind, confer with oneself, to consider, ponder, to revolve in the mind,” THAYER “give assistance to, contribute to,” FRIBERG “to give careful consideration to various implications of an issue - 'to reflect on, to think about seriously, to think deeply about,” LOUW-NIDA “to put together,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “Consider, ponder, draw conclusions about.” GINGRICH

In other words, Apollos brought a greater understanding to them concerning the Person of Christ and His great salvation. They were enabled to “comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height” (Eph 3:18). Not only were they able to see the reality of salvation, but the great pillars of Divine reasoning that supported it as well. The objective of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus was seen more clearly. God Himself was known more thoroughly. The ministry of the Lord Jesus became more clear to them, and living for and unto Him made more sense to them. The objective of this mighty man of God was not to bring the saints an understanding of men, women, finances, the human psyche, or some other nuance of earthly life. Rather, he strengthened the things that had to do with getting ready to leave this world, as well as living by faith while here.

In doing this Apollos was watering what Paul had planted. Paul refers to the activity in his letter to the Corinthians: “I have planted, Apollos watered ; but God gave the increase” (1 Cor 3:6). In other words God was able to work with the words that Paul and Apollos delivered. The thought has frequently occurred to me that much of the spiritual impotence of our time is owing to the fact that what is being taught in Christian circles cannot be used or blessed by God.

This kind of help – the kind Apollos ministered – is becoming exceedingly rare in our time. There is too much time being given to understanding men and circumstance, and too little to the knowledge of God and Christ. The greater light illumines the lesser things (Psa 36:9). However, the imagined understanding of men will never clarify God, Christ, or the salvation that has been provided for men. Actually, the more attention that men give to what is seen, the less able they become to discern things that are not seen. If our affection is to be placed on things above, which things we are to seek (Col 3:1-2), and if the essential quest is to “know” Christ and participate in His life (Phil 3:7-14), just how serious is it to focus our attention on other things? Although such efforts are being billed as helping people, nothing could be further from the truth. True “help” comes from opening up the things of God, not shining the light of attention on men and their circumstances.

I cannot overstate the seriousness of the distorted emphases of our time. It may appear wise to treat such things as innocent efforts to help people – but that is not at all what they are. They are the direct result of teachers not plowing in the truth. They have not occupied themselves with the truth as it “is in Christ Jesus” (Eph 4:21). The circumference of their thought is too small, being confined to this present evil world. If, in fact, there were no domestic, social, or political problems, they would have little to say. Their’s is a ministry of distraction, which is the exact opposite of that of mighty Apollos.

Once these things are comprehended the religious messages and trends of our day will become abrasive to the soul. They are like troublesome gnats that aggravate the human spirit and make it more difficult to ponder the things of the Lord.

THEY BELIEVED THROUGH GRACE

Now we are exposed to yet another perspective: those who “believed through grace.” This is not a description confined to the believers in Achaia, nor is it applicable to a segment of the body of Christ. This is a proper way of referring to anyone who is in Christ Jesus. Their faith is the evidence of God’s grace, which enabled them to believe.

“ . . .which had believed through grace.” Other versions read, “by grace had believed,” NIV “through grace had become believers,” NRSV “had faith through grace,” BBE “through grace had come to trust,” CJB “come to believe through grace,” NAB “By God’s grace had believed,” NLT “through God’s favor had believed,” WILLIAMS and “who through grace (God’s unmerited favor and mercy) had believed (adhered to, trusted in, and relied on Christ as Lord and Savior). ”
AMPLIFIED

The people of God are referred to in a number of ways in the book of Acts. Some of them include the following.

- Those who “gladly received the word” and were baptized (2:40).
- Those who were “added” to the number of disciples (2:41).
- Those who were “added to the church” (2:47).
- Those who were “added to the Lord” (5:14; 11:24).
- Those who were “believers” (5:14).
- Those who “believed” (4:4).
- Those who “believed in the Lord” (9:42).
- Those who were “disciples” (1:15; 6:1,2,7,9; 9:1,19,25, 26,38; 11:26,29; 13:52; 14:20,22,28; 15:10; 18:23,27; 19:9,30; 20:1,7; 21:4,16).
- Those who were “obedient to the faith” (6:7).
- Those who “turned to the Lord” (9:35).
- Those who “believed and turned to the Lord” (11:21).
- Those who “turned to God” (15:19).
- Those who were called “Christians” (11:26).
- Those who “believed on the Lord” (11:17; 18:8).
- Those who “believed and were baptized” (18:8).

Now we are exposed to yet another perspective: those who “believed through grace.” This is not a description confined to the believers in Achaia, nor is it applicable to a segment of the body of Christ. This is a proper way of referring to anyone who is in Christ Jesus. Their faith is the evidence of God’s grace, which enabled them to believe. Emphasizing the gift aspect of grace, Paul referred to this fact when he wrote to the Philippians, “For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ , not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake” (Phil 1:29). Note: it was “given” to the Philippians to believe – but it was “in the behalf of Christ,” or “for Christ’s sake.” NASB In other words, since Jesus has been exalted, the grace of God is only realized through Him. The closer one is to Jesus, the closer he is to grace. If one chooses to live at a distance from Jesus, there is a corresponding distance between that person and the grace of God, which is the consummate enablement.

Considering this subject from the standpoint of the Dispenser of the grace, Peter wrote, “Who BY HIM [Jesus Christ] do believe in God” (1 Pet 1:19-21). That is another way of saying “believed through grace.” Peter also reminded us that we have “obtained like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1). From yet another view the ability to believe is described as God opening “the door of faith” (Acts 14:27). All of that is the result of God’s grace.

HE MIGHTILY CONVINCED THE JEWS

“ 28 For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ. ”

Here was a body of people who had the utmost regard for the Scriptures. They did not doubt their authenticity, or question if it is possible they had come down to them without error. This is the very reason they can be convinced with arguments that are based solely upon Scripture. Keep in mind that there had been numerous copies of handwritten manuscripts, and a primary translation of the Scriptures, to which our text refers, into the Greek language – the Septuagint Version (250-200 B.C.). The original Septuagint version was also updated. Add to this that, like the New Covenant Scriptures, there was no copy of the original Septuagint translation, nor is there today. COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA

While there were a number of critics of the Greek version of Scripture, none of them are given so much as a sentence in apostolic writings. My point here is not to launch an argument in favor of, or against, the Septuagint. Rather, it is to draw attention to the absence – total and complete absence – of any questioning of Scripture in Matthew through Revelation – or, for that matter, anywhere in Moses or the Prophets. This is particularly significant because the Septuagint version was used by many Jews. Yet, in our text, there was such a high regard for the sacred writings that an insightful speaker could base his presentation solely on Scripture, and convince those of honest and good hearts of the truth of what he said. This kind of environment is rapidly disappearing from the modern church. The pretentious experts of our day have cast the shadow of doubt upon Scripture, and the multiplicity of modern translations have further complicated the situation. Add to that the decided reduction of the public reading and exposition of Scripture, and you have a frightening circumstance. This has opened the door to all manner of worldly wisdom, and those who specialize in such wisdom have taken full advantage of the opportunity. I confidently affirm that it is highly unlikely the Apollos would realize the success he had among the Jews of Achaia were he to preach in the average American church.

The expression “Jesus was Christ” is synonymous with “Jesus was the Christ.” This is proper, because there really is only one Christ, and the Jews knew it. They did not, however know that Jesus was that Christ, but like many Jews of our day, were waiting for Him to appear

Apollos does not appeal to philosophical considerations, or to some imagined rule of logic or hermeneutical principle. There is no record of him appealing to the Hebrew language as compared to the Greek Septuagint Scriptures. Those are all issues and approaches that have been developed by more modern men. Whatever may be said in the defense of such issues is nothing more than hot air. It certainly has not yielded much good fruit, if, indeed, any can be found at all.

HE MIGHTILY CONVINCED THE JEWS

“For he mightily convinced the Jews . . .” Other versions read, “vigorously refuted,” NKJV “powerfully refuted,” NASB “Powerfully confuted,” ASV “overcame the Jews,” BBE “with great force convinced,” DARBY “with much vigor convinced,” DOUAY “clearly showing,” GWN “reasoned powerfully against,” MRD “argued very convincingly,” IE “successfully refuted,” ISV and “with great power he refuted.” AMPLIFIED

It is important to note that when Apollos mightily convinced the Jews, his subject was not marriage, raising children, financial accountability, or some other aspect of life in this world. He did not address some contemporary domestic or political issue. In fact, so far as Scripture is concerned we have no idea whatsoever about the social conscience on such matters where Apollos was preaching.

Contemporary religious merchants are fond of addressing such issues, but there is no example of such emphases in Scripture. I will confidently affirm that the individual who has a grasp of Scripture, and is in quest of heaven, cannot be drawn aside to such things. This is because the closer one is to the Lord, the more foolish and vain the world and everything it has to offer appears. However, when there is an experiential distance between God and man, the world appears very desirable, and value is seen in its wisdom. However, that appearance is nothing more than a delusion.

SHOWING BY THE SCRIPTURES

“ . . . and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ. ” Other versions read, “showing from,” NKJV “demonstrating by,” NASB “proving from,” NIV “making clear from,” BBE “establishing from,” NAB “using the,” NLT “he used the,” IE “showing and proving by,” AMPLIFIED and “quoting from.” PHILLIPS

The expression “Jesus was Christ” is synonymous with “Jesus was the Christ.” This is proper, because there really is only one Christ, and the Jews knew it. They did not, however know that Jesus was that Christ, but like many Jews of our day, were waiting for Him to appear. Devout Jews, because of true belief of the Scriptures, knew that “Christ” – God’s anointed One – would come, and they were waiting for that appearance (Matt 2:4; 26:63; Mk 12:35; Lk 2:26; 3:15; John 1:25,41; 4:29,42; 6:69; 7:26-27,31,41-42; 9:22; 10:24; 11:27; 12:34).

A Question

Would you say there is a prevailing expectation of the second coming of Christ within the professed church, as there was one of the initial appearing of Christ during the time of our text? It seems to me that this is not at all the case. In my own understanding, this is largely owing to the failure of modern teachers and preachers to declare what the Scriptures have said on that matter. The Jews during the time of our text heard frequently of the coming Messiah, and those who were of tender heart looked for him. The matter was so much a part of their thinking, that many thought John the Baptist was the Christ. But, alas, such an environment is exceedingly rare in these times of pseudo-Christianity.

Apollos Convinced the Jews

Apollos convinced the Jews that “Jesus was Christ” – that is, He is the One that God had promised through Moses and the Prophets. He persuaded them that Jesus of Nazareth was more than what He appeared to be – just as Peter did in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost (2:4-37). Apollos was able to correlate what God has said about the birth, life, ministry, and death of the coming Messiah, with what the Scriptures had foretold about Him. The finest details concerning the Christ were fulfilled in Jesus, and Apollos proved it with the Scriptures. This also says a lot about the Jews who were persuaded. They had a profound respect for the Scriptures, and yielded to what they were enabled to see in them.

If this was done in Corinth, as many suppose, these probably included some of the Jews who had previously opposed and blasphemed Paul, moving him to turn from them (18:6). It was at that time that Jesus appeared to Paul, telling him that He had “much people” in that city (18:10). By the time of Apollos, this had been abundantly confirmed.

A Current Need

While everyone cannot be an Apollos, there is a current need for insightful men who can, by the use of Scripture, publically overcome flawed arguments and approaches to Scripture. This was part of the ministry of Jeremiah the prophet. The Lord said to him, “See, I have this day set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms, to root out, and to pull down, and to destroy , and to throw down, to build, and to plant” (Jer 1:10). Paul referred to such activity, affirming that the spiritual weaponry given to the saints. “For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds; casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ” (2 Cor 10:4-5).

Believers are to “put to silence the ignorance of foolish men” with their well doing (1 Pet 2:15). That activity is to be coupled with the labors of insightful preachers and teachers who can stop the mouths of those who are subverting “whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake” (Titus 1:11).

THE DANGER OF THE WISDOM OF THIS WORLD

When religious men make an alliance with the wisdom of the world, consenting to dip into its wells for assistance in understanding Scripture, they at once put themselves at a decided disadvantage. If it is true that the carnal

Yet, in our text, there was such a high regard for the sacred writings that an insightful speaker could base his presentation solely on Scripture, and convince those of honest and good hearts of the truth of what he said. This kind of environment is rapidly disappearing from the modern church.

mind is “enmity against God,” and that it “is not subject to the Law of God, neither indeed can be” (Rom 8:7), what possible spiritual advantage can be gained from it?

I say these things because I do not believe what is chronicled in this text could possibly take place in the average church of our day. There is such an abysmal ignorance of the Scriptures themselves that any argument founded solely upon them would be summarily ignored. When the people are fundamentally ignorant of Scripture they will be tempted to not regard highly arguments founded upon them. They will also be prone to put their confidence in the purported wisdom, of the speaker. Of course, a person who possesses such an ignorance is without excuse – particularly in our country. The Scriptures are readily available to anyone having a desire for them. However, when you add to this the miserable lack of pivotal preaching and teaching solidly founded upon the scriptures, you have a situation that cannot be fully described. Under such circumstances, there is a resistance to the truth that is staggering in strength.

But none of these conditions existed in the synagogues of Achaia. The people did lack an understanding of Christ, but it was only because they had not perceived Him in the Scriptures, which testified of Him (John 5:39), and with which they were familiar.

Now Apollos, not only being an expert in the Scriptures, but also instructed in the way of the Lord, teaching accurately the things of the Lord Jesus, and having been instructed more perfectly in the way of God, speaks publically among them. He is not only able to throw down their arguments against the Christ, but to handle the Scriptures accurately, even as a workman who has no need to be ashamed before God (2 Tim 2:15).

There is no indication in Scripture that the body of Christ was ever intended to be without such insightful individuals. God put them in the body (1 Cor 12:28). Clearly, everyone does not fall into this category. However, as the flock of God is fed, and they respond to such feeding, such teachers will surface. It is right and God-glorifying to expect this to take place. That is simply the nature of spiritual life. It is the fulfillment of Ephesians 4:11-16, the revealed objective of the Lord.

CONCLUSION

This is another text that will not fit handily into preconceived theological thoughts. One of the marks of doctrinal errors is that they eventually conflict with the text of Scripture, causing understanding to be abandoned in favor of the maintenance of a view of the truth rather than truth itself. This the very thing that moved the Jewish leaders to press for Jesus' death, oppose the preaching of the apostles, and stone Stephen. Erroneous views of God and His truth may go undetected for a long period of time. This is because of the neglect of leaders to expound the Word of God to the people, for it is the Word that is "living and powerful" – the appointed means to discerning the thoughts and intentions of the people (Heb 4:12).

When men busy themselves with correcting the ills of the people instead of ensuring their growth up into Christ, they have not really helped them. That is why such an emphasis is not found in Scripture. When specific sins were addressed, it was always within the context of the body of Christ and the damaging effects they had on that body, as confirmed in the epistles. To my knowledge, no corrective epistle is revealed to have been written to an individual. Personal letters were always of an instructive, encouraging, and edifying nature, not one of rebuke and correction. Recall the tone and content of these letters. Luke (to Theophilus); Acts (to Theophilus); First and Second Timothy (to Timothy); Titus (to Titus), Philemon (to Philemon); Second John (the elect lady); and Third John (to Gaius). This appears to be a consistent pattern.

If the people and work of the Lord are to flourish, men of faith and insight must surface who have a prevailing interest in the church, which is Christ's "body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all" (Eph 1:23). It is within the context of that body that the individual obtains significance (Rom 12:5; 1 Cor 10:17; 12:12,20,27; Eph 4:25; 5:30; Col 2:19). Apostolic labors focused on, but were not limited to, the church (Acts 11:26; 14:22,28; 15:22-31,36,41; 16:5; 16:40; 18:22-23,27; 20:7,17,28). This agrees with the doctrine of Scripture that states the intention of the gifts the exalted Christ has given to men. "Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men . . . And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ : till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love " (Eph 4:8-16).

It seems to me that this is most clearly stated, so that no room is allowed for dissent or argumentation. The gifts themselves are delineated with clarity: apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers. Four gifts are revealed, with the latter one set forth in a twofold sense – "pastors and teachers." Grammatically and doctrinally two sides of the same function are stated. From the standpoint of their heart for the church, they are "pastors" – shepherds, or caretakers of the flock of God. From the view of their actual activity, they are "teachers." That is how they care for the flock – by teaching them, or feeding them (1 Pet 5:2).

The intention of these gifts is stated in a progressive manner, concluding with a concise statement of their objective. The first statement is an overview, with the outcome of perfection expounded. "For the perfecting of the saints" is the overview. For all of the gifts, including "evangelists," the focus is "the saints" and their "perfection." Other versions read, "equipping," NKJV "prepare God's people," NIV "equip the saints," NRSV and "perfecting and the full equipping of the saints." AMPLIFIED The picture is of a body, with each individual member of that body being enabled to perform its intended function. The aim of this equipping is then spelled out. All teachers and preachers are to make it their aim to enable the people to fulfill these objectives.

- The work of the ministry.
- In order to the edifying of the body.
- The accomplishment of the unity of the faith.
- The achievement of the unity of the knowledge of the Son of God.
- That each member might function in their role according to their measure of the fulness of Christ.
- That the entire body of believers might live out the life of Christ Himself.
- That the people no longer be children in their understanding where they are subject to delusion.
- That each member may be able to speak the truth in love.
- That every member, and the body as a whole, may grow up into Christ in every aspect of life, thus living out of an awareness of fellowship with the Head.
- That the whole body may be fitted and held together by the contribution, or ministry, of each and every part.
- That the whole body may increase in its growth.
- That the increase will result in the body edifying itself in love.

Now, what can be said for a congregation in which these objectives are not being fulfilled? If this is what Christ Jesus intends, precisely what will be His response when these results are not realized? What of a congregation in which the majority of the members make no edifying contribution whatsoever in the assembly? What kind of a “body” is that? And, if the body consists of many members that are joined together, precisely how can they benefit each other consistently if they are not actually together. Scripture affirms that the benefits of one member pass to the others when they are in proximity of one another. How marvelously this is stated in Ephesians and Colossians. “But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love” (Eph 4:16). “And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God” (Col 2:19).

THE “SOLVE- YOUR-PROBLEMS” MENTALITY

Some people have likened the church to a hospital. This is a very foolish statement. The church is a Temple (1 Cor 3:16-17), a body (1 Cor 12:27), a pillar and ground (1 Tim 3:15), a household (1 Tim 3:15), the city of the living God (Heb 12:22), and a habitation for God (Eph 2:22). But a hospital? – who is the author of that thought? Is not salvation designed to cure the human condition? And if it does not do so, precisely in what sense is it the salvation of God?

When Jesus is presented as the means of resolving human difficulties, men have stepped outside the perimeter of eternal purpose. In their emphasis they have chosen to confine themselves to the realm from which Jesus has delivered those who believe (Gal 1:4). That is the ultimate oxymoron! The church is not in the world to resolve its problems, and is nowhere so declared. As a result of being united with Christ and growing up into Him, there are various works performed that relieve the afflicted, and assist the needy in various ways. But that is not why Christ is perfecting us. The saved are primarily a people for God, not for humanity. This is not conjecture, but has been revealed from heaven. “God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself . . . Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works . . . I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ . . . Come hither, I will show you the bride, the Lamb's wife " (2 Cor 5:21; Tit 2:14; 2 Cor 11:2; Rev 21:9). Rather than being a "hospital," this is the working branch of heaven upon earth. The church is "the fulness of Him that filleth all in all" (Eph 1:23). The church , His body, is where He deposits His nature and carries on His work. The members are the vessels through whom He works (Phil 2:13; Heb 13:21). The very notion of the church being a hospital contradicts these revealed intentions and purposes.

These are matters that call for sober thought and action.

Lesson #78

DISCIPLES OF JOHN IN EPHESUS

“ 19:1 And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples, 2 He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. 3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. 4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. 5 When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. 6 And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied. 7 And all the men were about twelve. ”
(Acts 19:1-7)

INTRODUCTION

A SUMMARY OF THE TEXT

While Apollos was at Corinth, Paul took a road through the upper interior of the country, and came back to Ephesus. Upon arriving in the region, Paul finds “certain disciples” in Ephesus. Having discerned a level of faith and commitment in them, he asked them a most arresting question: “Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed?” Upon hearing that they were not even aware there was a Holy Spirit, Paul inquired about their baptism. Having learned they were baptized with John’s baptism, he told them the purpose of that baptism. They were then baptized in the name of Jesus, Paul laid his hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit. As at the house of Cornelius, they spoke in other languages, prophesying. This marked the final Scriptural account of someone being baptized with John’s baptism – approximately 25 years after the day of Pentecost. This is the Scriptural record of a group of “about twelve” disciples, marking a spiritual epoch. As is apparent, numbers are not what is given attention in the Scriptures. Rather, it is nature of what took place.

THE WORKS ARE THOSE OF GOD

The works that are written up by the Spirit always have to do with what the Lord is doing. The record of the beginning of the heavens and the earth are a record of what the Lord did (Gen 1).

Judgment

The works can be judgment, as in the cases of Adam and Eve being driven from the Garden (Gen 4:22-24), the flood (Gen 6:12-13,17; 7:21-22), Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19:24-25), Egypt (Ex 9:14-16; 12:12), Nebuchadnezzar (Dan 4:22-33), Belshazzar (Dan 5:5-30), or Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 1-11). In each of these cases, the point was not simply that something happened. God was working!

Blessing

The work may also be one of great blessing, as in the calling of Abraham (Gen 12:1-3), the deliverance of Israel from Egyptian bondage (Ex 12), the setting of God’s love upon Israel (Deut 7:7), the exaltation of Joseph (Gen 41:37-46), the preservation of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego (Dan 3:20-30), the deliverance of Daniel (Dan 6:16-27), and, ultimately, the sending of Jesus to bless the people (Acts 3:26). All of the details associated with these, and other, accounts were a report of how the Lord worked among men.

THE PROPER WAY TO THINK

When men behold and consider what is taking place in the world, they must not divorce God from their thinking. The highest form of consideration involves seeing and pondering the work of the Lord. If men fail to do this, they will be dominated by carnal curiosity, and led into erroneous conclusions and patterns of thought.

Throughout Scripture there are expressions of this kind of thinking – even from ancient times.

- “Hearken unto this, O Job: stand still, and consider the wondrous WORKS OF GOD” (Job 37:14).
- “Come and see THE WORKS OF GOD: he is terrible in his doing toward the children of men” (Psa 66:5).
- “That they might set their hope in God, and not forget THE WORKS OF GOD, but keep his commandments” (Psa 78:7).

The works of the Lord have moral power – power that enables men to think and assess things properly. Thus it is written, “He hath showed His people the power of His works, that He may give them the heritage of the heathen” (Psa 111:6). For those who correctly assess His works, giving due heed to them, this word will be fulfilled: “The LORD is good to all: and His tender mercies are over all His works”

“Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents: but that THE WORKS OF GOD should be made manifest in him” (John 9:3).

- “Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia, and in Judaea, and Cappadocia, in Pontus, and Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia, in Egypt, and in the parts of Libya about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, Jews and proselytes, Cretes and Arabians, we do hear them speak in our tongues THE WONDERFUL WORKS OF GOD” (Acts 2:11).

All of God’s works “are done in truth” (Psa 33:4). None of them violate either sound reasoning or righteous law. Further, God is “holy in all His works” (Psa 145:17), which are an expression of His righteous character, for He is “righteous in all His works” (Dan 9:14). . This is why it is sinful to question God, dispute with Him, or consider what He has done to be unfair. Further, when once the works of God are perceived, it is sinful to forget them (Psa 78:11). The Lord rejoices “in His works,” and men ought to do the same (Psa 104:31). Whatever form they may take, discerning men can report the works of the Lord “with rejoicing” (Psa 107:22). It is in the consideration of His works that men will receive “counsel” from the Lord (Psa 106:13). God’s foreknowledge is said to be in regard to His own works (Acts 15:18). How can it possibly be right for men to men to ignore the fact of His working?

The works of the Lord have moral power – power that enables men to think and assess things properly. Thus it is written, “He hath showed His people the power of His works, that He may give them the heritage of the heathen ” (Psa 111:6). For those who correctly assess His works, giving due heed to them, this word will be fulfilled : “The LORD is good to all: and His tender mercies are over all His works” (Psa 145:9).

From the highest vantage point, “the whole earth is full of His glory” (Isa 6:3). From the most precise viewpoint God is “working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12).

Truly insightful souls have recognized the works of God and given Him due honor. When young Samuel divulged to Eli the message that had been given to him – one of judgment and sorrow – Eli responded, “It is the LORD: let Him do what seemeth him good” (1 Sam 3:18). When Samuel considered Moses and Aaron and the deliverance of Israel, he told the people, “It is the LORD that advanced Moses and Aaron, and that brought your fathers up out of the land of Egypt” (1 Sam 12:6). Early one morning following Christ raising from dead, He appeared to His disciples at the sea of Tiberias. After causing them to garner a great catch of fish, John recognized the work and cried out, “It is the Lord” (John 21:7).

A new kind of Christianity is being perpetrated that majors on men, not God. What men are to do is presented as the fundamental thing, not what the Lord has done. Although there is a kind of stereotyped presentation of the things God has done, it is not with much clarity.

During the early days of the Judges, “an angel of the LORD came up from Gilgal to Bochum,” and delivered a message to the people. Speaking for Jehovah he said, “I made you to go up out of Egypt, and have brought you unto the land which I swore unto your fathers.” Following his words, this notation is made concerning the people who were not allowed to enter the promised land: “and there arose another generation after them, which knew not the LORD, nor yet the works which he had done for Israel” (Judg 2:1-10). That is the generation that “ forsook the Lord God . . . followed other gods . . . and provoked the Lord to anger” (Judges 2:11). And why did this happen? It was because they did not know the works of the Lord. They failed to see His hand in their own remarkable history.

IT HAS HAPPENED AGAIN!

A similar thing has happened in our day – “the day of salvation” and “the accepted time” (2 Cor 6:2). A new kind of Christianity is being perpetrated that majors on men, not God. What men are to do is presented as the fundamental thing, not what the Lord has done. Although there is a kind of stereotyped presentation of the things God has done, it is not with much clarity. Things are said accommodatingly, and include the creation of the world by God, the death of Christ, and the interest God has in the welfare of mankind. However, the burden of emphasis is not placed on these matters, and there is very little exposition of them – i.e. an opening of the Divine rationality behind them.

The exaltation of human reasoning, and the proneness to carnal analyzation are employed in a professed interest in helping the people – i.e. helping them with their problems, not assisting them to glory. As you peruse the Word of God, you will find a total absence of such an approach to life in Christ Jesus. When dealing with natural interpersonal relationships, there is an obvious generalization. Here are some statements that confirm this.

- “As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10).
- “See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil” (Eph 5:15-16).
- “Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. Let your speech be alway with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man” (Col 4:5-6).
- “See that none render evil for evil unto any man; but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves, and to all men” (1 Thess 5:15).
- “Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate” (1 Tim 6:17-18).
- “This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men” (Titus 3:8).
- “But to do good and to communicate forget not: for with such sacrifices God is well pleased” (Heb 13:16).

The details of people with sordid backgrounds are not provided. Rather only general comments are made concerning what they were, or the circumstances under which they were living. In none of the cases was a plan or regimen presented to remedy a troubling situation. Those who are fond of presenting resolutions are forced to assemble texts of Scripture for such a purpose, piecing them together like a theological puzzle. This is because there is no extended teaching in Scripture on the correction of specific flaws in human behavior. No book or letter was written to outline a process by which earthly problems could be resolved.

The overriding emphasis of apostolic teaching relates to the comprehension of what the Lord has done in our salvation. Every issue relating to human conduct, whether that of morality, domestic responsibility, or proper deportment of life, is addressed in view of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. Consider these examples and behold their manner of reasoning. The matter of the salvation of God is always brought into the scenario,

- Moral promiscuity (1 Cor 6:18-20).
- Marital relationships (Eph 5:21-33).
- Children and parents (Eph 6:1-3).
- Parents and children (Eph 6:4).
- Servile relationships (Eph 6:5-8; Col 3:22; 1 Tim 6:1-2; Tit 2:9-10; 1 Pet 2:18-21).
- Social leadership (Eph 6:9-10; Col 4:1).

The point to be seen is that the primary sphere of knowledge pertains to the Person and works of God.

- This includes the purposes of God, together with their objectives.
- The Person and accomplishments of the Lord Jesus Christ, who is in charge of bringing that purpose to fruition.
- The work of the Holy Spirit, who is the appointed Interface with the redeemed, bringing the work of God to fruition within the individual.

To my knowledge there is no apostolic proclamation, instruction, correction, or rebuke that does not directly interface with these matters. In other words, neither the Lord Jesus Himself, nor any person empowered by Him, addressed life in any of its complexities independently of the salvation of God. Life in this world was never viewed as fundamental. It was not the pivot on which instruction or decision turned.

Among a plethora of other reasons, this is why it is imperative that the saints of God be regularly exposed to the Scriptures.

PAUL FINDS CERTAIN DISCIPLES

“ 19:1 And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus: and finding certain disciples . . . ”

Again, I want to call to your attention the nature of the inspired narrative. This not a chronological report of the varied earthly activities of men and women of God. What men refer to as “real life” and “where the rubber meets the road,” are not what is being communicated. From a very limited perspective, the “what are you doing now” scenario may be very interesting, but the Spirit does not take up our time with such considerations. From the perspective of this world, we know very little about Paul, the apostles, or anyone else of Scriptural record. In other words, we are never led to know such people “after the flesh.” Of course this is in strict keeping with the nature and intent of spiritual life. As it is written, “For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead: And that He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto Him which died for them, and rose again. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more” (2 Cor 5:16). That is, what is accomplished by

Life in this world is never seen as the primary environment, nor is the accent placed on matters that have uniquely to do with living in the flesh.

Divine affiliation dwarfs all other perspectives. I am careful to say that such views are not altogether unlawful. However, they are vastly inferior, and therefore can no longer be the foundational or primary view of those who live by faith and walk in the spirit. Associations and activities that belong to this world alone tend to be distracting – and blessed is the person who knows it.

It will be clear from the narrative that follows that things pertaining to life and godliness held the unquestioned priority in the life of Paul – even down to the kind of people with whom he chose to interface. Additionally, the preferred activities of Apollos will be identified with the work of the Lord.

WHILE APOLLOS WAS AT CORINTH

“And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth . . .” The original reference to Apollos’ travels did not say he was going to Corinth, simply that he was “disposed to pass into Achaia” (18:27). Now it becomes apparent that this disposition was toward the saints in Corinth, where Paul had spent at least one-and-a-half years. In his letter to Corinth, Paul states that Apollos “watered” what he had “planted.” Furthermore, spiritual “increase,” or “fruit,” came from the labors of Apollos (1 Cor 3:6).

I do not wish to make more of this than is proper, but the accounts of Scripture are set within the context of God and His work – within either a favorable or unfavorable identity. Life in this world is never seen as the primary environment, nor is the accent placed on matters that have uniquely to do with living in the flesh. Jesus highlighted this circumstance when He said, “Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof” (Matt 6:31-34). Admittedly, you will, not be able to build a kind of Christian business or career on these words. Perhaps that is why they are not taken seriously by many who profess to be Christians. However, notwithstanding a lack of popularity, these are words that will either snare or rescue all who hear them. Either they will disregard them and fall, or they will embrace them by faith and stand.

The relevancy of this is confirmed by the nature of the narrative we are now considering. Clearly, it is within the framework of the work of the Lord, and of those who were personally, willingly, and aggressively engaged in it.

The ministries of both Paul and Apollos involved the communication of words through which the Lord could work. While it is not true in all cases, many times words that are said to be in the name of the Lord are actually impotent because the Lord cannot use them. There is too much of the world’s wisdom in them, which wisdom shuts off the power of God. This is because such wisdom is “foolishness” with God. For this cause He has assigned it to the scrap heap of human thoughts, making ut impotent and vain (1 Cor 1:20; 3:19). The more men attempt to mingle such wisdom with their proclamations, the more senseless and useless they become.

PAUL CAME TO EPHESUS

“Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus . . .”

The “upper coasts” probably included “the inland districts of Galatia and Phrygia,” PULPIT COMMENTARY where Paul labored extensively (Acts 16:6; 18:23). Paul had labored plentifully among the churches there (1 Cor 16:1). Now, however, he works his way back to Ephesus, having completed his work in “the upper coasts” for the time. He had already told the brethren in Ephesus he would return to them “if God will” (18:21). Living in the lively awareness of the good and acceptable and perfect will of God (Rom 12:2), it is apparent to Paul that the Lord indeed was willing, and therefore he returned. However, we must not ignore the involvement of Paul’s discretionary powers in all of this. There is a manner in which the believer can walk that makes God’s will both knowable and preferred. That is from the perspective of the believer himself. From the higher perspective, this is the Lord guiding His children with His eye (Psa 32:8). That is, there does not have to be a violent disruption of the believer in order to get his attention. When the peace of God is keeping the heart and the mind (Phil 4:7), guidance becomes the conscious norm, not the exception. There is no way to codify or systematize this kind of Divine direction. However, those who do, in fact, live by faith, will come to the point where they will recognize this reality, and joyfully acquiesce to it.

FINDING CERTAIN DISCIPLES

“ . . . and finding certain disciples . . . ” Other versions read, “There he found some disciples,” NIV “where he found some disciples,” NRSV he found several believers,” NLT “some followers,” IE and “a few disciples.” WILLIAMS

The word “finding” is translated from an interesting Greek word (eu`rei/n). The lexical meaning of this word is, “to come upon, hit upon, to meet with . . . to see, learn, discover, understand . . . to find for oneself, to acquire, get, obtain, procure,” THAYER and “to find after searching discover, come on .” FRIBERG

There are a number of opinions that have been written concerning the identity of these “disciples.” Some say they possibly were “companions of Apollos, and had come with him from Alexandria.” PULPIT COMMENTARY It is also assumed they had not only been baptized with John’s baptism, but had “embraced John’s doctrine that the Messiah was soon to appear.” ALBERT BARNES Another view is that they were “Asiatic Jews.” ADAM CLARKE Yet another view is that they “professed faith in Christ as the true Messiah, but were as yet in the first and lowest form in the school of Christ.” MATTHEW HENRY Still another view is that they were “in the same stage of Christian knowledge as Apollos at the first.” JAMIESON, FAUSETT, BROWN One view states that they did “profess the name of Christ,” yet “were ignorant of the principle glory of the Gospel.” JOHN CALVIN Another view is: “They had evidently been baptized by some of John's disciples, possibly in Asia, after the Great Commission was given, and were no doubt Jews.” B.W. JOHNSON A view that I was taught is well articulated in the following statement. “ They were disciples, not of John, but of Jesus; for the uniform currency of the term disciple , throughout Acts, requires us to so understand it. This is further evident from Paul's question, “Have you received the Holy Spirit since you believed?” The term believed evidently refers to Jesus as its object. They were known, then, as disciples of Jesus, and were so recognized by Paul.

Up to the moment of his conversation with them, Paul knew nothing of any irregularity in their obedience; for this was made known, to his surprise, during the conversation. When, therefore, he asked the question, “Have you received the Holy Spirit since you believed?” he could not have referred to that gift of the Spirit which all disciples receive; for he would take this for granted, from the fact that they were disciples. He must, then, have had reference to the miraculous gift, which some disciples did not receive. J. W. McGARVEY

Most of those commenting on this text affirm that it is a difficult one. The difficulty they have, however, is not with the text itself, but with its obvious clash with their understanding. What is being attempted is to fit the text into the theological view they have embraced. That is what makes the text so difficult for them.

However, what if the text is not intended to fit into a preconceived notion, or some theological template. What if it is, as the text clearly says, truly a unique situation?

First, let us see if there are any genuine similarities between these “disciples” and Apollos.

As is apparent, there is little revealed similarity between these disciples and Apollos.

The Word “Disciple”

It is true that throughout the book of Acts, the words “disciple” and “disciples” refer to those in Christ Jesus. However, in the Gospels, there are at least “four references” to “the disciples of John” (Matt 9:14; Mk 2:18; 5:33; Lk 7:18). There is also a reference in Acts to “disciples” who were followers of false teachers (Acts 20:30). The word translated “disciple” (maqhta.j) means “one who follows one’s teaching.” THAYER A disciple of Jesus, therefore, is one who follows the teaching of Jesus, and there is not so much as a word in this text that suggests the possibility that these men were following the teaching of Jesus. Although not specifically stated, their discipleship was devoted to John, and it was very limited at that, for Paul had to tell them about Jesus.

I conclude, therefore, that these men were a kind of second-hand disciples of John the Baptist. That is, someone who had been taught by John, or about John, had taught them. That teaching was not to be compared with that to which Apollos was subjected. He had been taught in the way of the Lord, and taught accurately the way of Christ.

There is also no suggestion that these men were Jews, or that they had been to Jerusalem, or had in any way been subjected to the message declared about Christ Jesus – a message in which he clearly identified that the Christ had come, for he pointed him out within six months of his initial ministry, affirming that He was “the Son of God” (John 1:34), and “the lamb of God that taken away the sin of the world” (John 1:29,36).

These, then, were elementary disciples who had shifted the focus of their lives, and had adopted a spiritual stance that differed from the world, and even from Judaism, yet was severely limited. They were learners, for that is what a disciple is. That is precisely why they will be able to be taught. They had a learner’s heart, even though their understanding was not mature. This should not be too difficult for us to receive, for disciples of this caliber are abundant in number – having a learning heart, but having been taught little.

HAVE YOU RECEIVED THE HOLY SPIRIT?

“2a He said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?” Other versions read, “Did you receive the Holy Spirit when you believed,” NKJV “when you became believers,” NRSV “when you had faith,” BBE “when you came to trust,” CJB “when you believed [on Jesus as the Christ]?” AMPLIFIED and “when you first believed.” MONTGOMERY Neither the Greek nor the English text include the words “Jesus” of “Christ,” as the Amplified Bible suggests.

The question is asked in such a manner as to draw out the understanding of these “disciples.” If they are truly disciples of Jesus, they will make it known, for those who believed John’s words concerning the Christ left him, and became followers of Jesus (John 1:36-37), for John had made clear that the Messiah was greater than himself, and to be preferred over him (Mk 1:7; John 1:15,27,30).

From the experiential viewpoint, these disciples had apparently “believed” John’s message as it pertained to repentance. This is the stance that was rejected by certain religious leaders. Concerning that rejection, Jesus said to them, “Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you. For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not : but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe Him ” (Matt 21:32). It is apparent to me the men in our text had evidenced a clear abandonment of worldly manners, for that is what John required. Paul now asks them a question that will uncover the extent of their belief, and whether or not they are on a track that involves more than outward reform.

HAVE YOU RECEIVED THE HOLY SPIRIT?

Oh, this is a difficult question for one who has embraced a merely traditional religion. Paul does not ask these men if they had received miraculous spiritual gifts – a position taught by John Gill, Albert Barnes, John Calvin, J. W. McGarvey, and others. Why would such a question be asked in the first place, seeing that such a conferment is wholly in the hands of the Lord? Paul’s question pertains to Divine acceptance, not being endued with special power.

The doctrine of Scripture is that all who are in Christ, or are the sons of God, have been given the Holy Spirit.

- “And we are His witnesses of these things; and so is also the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to them that obey him ” (Acts 5:32).

I have often pondered why this question is rarely heard in our time – a time when John’s disciples in all of their novicehood would appear advanced when compared to the average modern day Christian. Let it be clear that this is a relevant question in our time as well as that of our text.

“And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us ” (Rom 5:5).

- “Now we have received , not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God ; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God” (1 Cor 2:12).

- “Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts ” (2 Cor 1:22).

- “Now He that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit ” (2 Cor 5:5),

- “And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of His Son into your hearts , crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

- “He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us His holy Spirit ” (1 Thess 4:8).

- “And he that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in Him, and He in him. And hereby we know that He abideth in us, by the Spirit which He hath given us ” (1 John 3:24).

These things being true, a serious issue is raised when any one is asked if they have received the Holy Spirit. Paul asks the question in such a way as to determine the true condition of these disciples. We are not told what provoked the question, but it appears obvious to me that the words and manners of these disciples required more clarification concerning their state. This could not have been immoral conduct, for that issue was settled by any serious followers of John the Baptist.

I have often pondered why this question is rarely heard in our time – a time when John’s disciples in all of their novicehood would appear advanced when compared to the average modern day Christian . Let it be clear that this is a relevant question in our time as well as that of our text. Some approach the subject with a sectarian view of being baptized with the Holy Spirit in mind. Their aim is to confirm that people possess the evidence they perceive to confirm the presence of the Spirit. However, their approach has only muddied the waters, and contributed to more division and confusion.

Apostolic reasoning confirms the importance of knowing the answer to this question. “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His . . . But IF the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you . . . ” (Rom 8:9,11).

This question is to be understood within the context of that teaching. It further assumes an intelligent view of the Spirit, and the awareness of some evidence of His presence. This is not an inquiry concerning the doctrine of the Spirit. I will address the teaching concerning the Spirit later in this lesson.

THEY HAD NOT HEARD THERE WAS A HOLY SPIRIT

“ 2b And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost.” Other versions read, “and he said to them, “No, we have not even heard whether there is a Holy Spirit,” NASB “No, we have not even heard that there is a Holy Spirit,” NIV “No, we have never even heard that there is a Holy Spirit,” RSV “No, we have had no knowledge of the Holy Spirit,” BBE “We did not even hear if the Holy Spirit was come,” DARBY “Nay, we did not so much as hear whether the Holy Ghost was given,” ERV “No, we've never even heard of the Holy Spirit,” GWN “No, we were never even told there was such a thing as a Holy Spirit,” NJB “we don't know what you mean. What is the Holy Spirit?" LIVING and "No, we have not even heard that there is a Holy Spirit." AMPLIFIED

WHAT SOME COMMENTATORS HAVE SAID OF THIS RESPONSE

As I have already pointed out, there are diverse views on what this response really meant.

- One commentary says that the response really means, "Not only have we not received the Holy Spirit, but we had not even heard that the dispensation of the Spirit was Come." PULPIT COMMENTARY

These views, together with others like them, assume several things that are not stated in the text.

Another commentator says, "they could not mean the person of the Holy Ghost: for they must have known that there was such a divine person as the Holy Ghost, from the writings of the Old Testament, with which they were conversant: and from the ministry of John, into whose baptism they were baptized; who saw the Spirit of God descend on Jesus, and bore witness of it; and declared, that Christ who was to come after him, would baptize with the Holy Ghost: nor could they mean the special grace of the Spirit, which they themselves had received; but the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God, which they at present knew nothing of, and which were afterwards bestowed upon them: they knew that there were prophecies in the Old Testament, concerning the effusion of the Spirit in the last days, in the days of the Messiah; but they had not heard that these had had their accomplishment; they had heard nothing of the day of Pentecost, and of the pouring out of the Spirit upon the apostles then, nor of any instance of this kind since; they did not know that the Holy Ghost was yet, they knew he was promised, but not that he was given; the Ethiopia version, to avoid the difficulty of the text, renders it, "we have only heard that there was an Holy Ghost." JOHN GILL

- Another commentator says, "That is, they had not heard that there were particular gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit to be received. They could not mean that they had not heard of the Holy Spirit; for John, in his baptism, announced Christ as about to baptize with the Holy Ghost, but they simply meant that they had not heard that this Spirit, in his gifts, had been given to or received by any one." ADAM CLARKE

- Another says, "They knew (as Dr. Lightfoot observes) that, according to the tradition of their nation, after the death of Ezra, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, the Holy Ghost departed from Israel, and went up; and they professed that they had never heard of his return. They spoke as if they expected it, and wondered they did not hear of it, and were ready to welcome the notice of it." MATTHEW HENRY

- Yet another says, "This cannot be the meaning, since the personality and office of the Holy Ghost, in connection with Christ, formed an especial subject of the Baptist's teaching. Literally, the words are, "We did not even hear whether the Holy Ghost was (given)"; meaning, at the time of their baptism. That the word "given" is the right supplement, as in John 7:39, seems plain from the nature of the case." JAMIESON, FAUSSET, BROWN

- Another says, "How could it be, that men being Jews heard nothing of the Spirit, concerning which the prophets speak everywhere, and whose commendations and titles are extant in the whole Scripture? Surely we gather by this that Paul did neither speak generally of the Spirit; and that these men, as they were asked, did deny that they knew those visible graces wherewith God had beautified the kingdom of his Son. Therefore, they confess that they know not whether God give such gifts." JOHN CALVIN

These views, together with others like them, assume several things that are not stated in the text.

- That the men were Jews. This is not stated in the text, nor is there a sound basis for assuming this was the case.

- That the men had personally heard John the Baptist, and knew of all that he said. This is neither stated nor insinuated by the text.

- That they were disciples of John the Baptist, and therefore ardent followers of his teaching. This is also assumed. The text does not say they were disciples of John, but that they were disciples. It is doubtless true that they were subjected to some of his teaching, but certainly not to the whole of it.

- That the men were knowledgeable of the writings of the Prophets. This is not stated in the text, nor can it be assumed.

- That the men knew the Holy Spirit had left, but did not know that He had returned.

- That the men knew the Holy Spirit was given, but did not know that He also conferred gifts.

Let me be clear in what I am saying. There is no firm basis for these persuasions, however reasonable they may appear to those who embrace them.

To this day, among the people with whom I have been affiliated, there is a group who maintains that the Holy Spirit is the Bible. While there are varying shades of this meaning adopted, there is one that unwaveringly affirms that the Holy Spirit is the Bible, and that it is all anyone can have of the Holy Spirit.

Further, it is the height of absurdity to adopt a view of Scripture that is founded upon a humanly perceived inference, lacking any clear declaration by the Scriptures themselves. Notwithstanding this circumstance, a sectarian spirit compels a person to perceive Scripture in a way that justifies the position that is held – whether it can be proved or not.

WHAT, THEN, DOES THE TEXT MEAN?

I will take the text to mean precisely what it says. These were not seasoned disciples. They knew some things – namely that sin was to be abandoned and an upright life lived before the Lord. However, they did not have a clear thought of a Spirit that was “holy,” much less One that could be received. One must remember that even among the Jews, there was a sect – the Sadducees – who did not believe there was such a thing as a spirit – to say nothing of the “Holy Spirit” (Acts 23:8). Among other things, this confirms the existence of this idea in the world – namely, that there was no such thing as a spirit. While the text does not specifically state these men embraced that view, the very existence of a spiritless doctrine confirms that we should not consider it strange that such an ignorance could exist among a body of sincere religious men.

To this day, among the people with whom I have been affiliated, there is a group who maintains that the Holy Spirit is the Bible. While there are varying shades of this meaning adopted, there is one that unwaveringly affirms that the Holy Spirit is the Bible, and that it is all anyone can have of the Holy Spirit.

Notwithstanding these view, within the framework of the textual considerations, there is no logical or doctrinal need to justify not taking the text simply as it reads. This will also free is from any seeming necessity to adopt a purely traditional view of the text.

THE ASSUMPTION OF BAPTISM

“ 3 And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism.”

One can only imagine how a modern day preacher would have responded to the answer of these “disciples.” Here a response is given that is untainted with religious tradition. It is not given to promote the advancement of a sect, nor is the aim to justify a private opinion. This is a man of God, with spiritual understanding, responding to honest and good hearts, who are not as informed as they can be. This will not be the occasion for debate or disputation – even though that is how many have chosen to respond to the subject under consideration. In our text the environment and the motives are pure, and the love of the truth is undeniably present. Those who cannot approach this subject in the manner revealed in this passage should back away from it. Such people should not take it upon themselves to speak on matters that are only seen through a sectarian template. Should they choose to speak on such matters, we should not listen to them.

UNTO WHAT THEN WERE YE BAPTIZED?

“And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized?” Other versions read, “Into what were ye baptized?” NKJV “what baptism did you receive?” NIV “What sort of baptism did you receive?” BBE “into what were ye immersed?” CJB “With what baptism were you baptized?” CSB “What kind of baptism did you have?” GWN “How were you baptized?” NAB “what baptism did you experience?” NLT “where with were ye baptized?” TNT “In what thing be ye baptized?” WYCLIFFE “Into what [baptism] then were you baptized?” AMPLIFIED and “Well then, how were you baptized?” PHILLIPS

There are Christian circles in which this question would never be asked – and they are infinitely more in number than anyone would dare to imagine. Some people would be satisfied to hear that a person was baptized regardless of the effects that followed it, or the understanding that attended it. Some perceive baptism as completely unrelated to salvation or the receiving of the Holy Spirit. Some see it as only related to the remission of sins, while others confine it to the matter of being identified with a local congregation of believers. There is by no means unanimity in the Christian community on the matter of baptism, even though there is only “one baptism” (Eph 4:5).

In this particular text, the subject is not the remission of sins – even though that is unqualifiedly associated with baptism (Acts 2:38; 22:16). The matter is not the formula that was uttered when the person was baptized, although that is a critical matter to some. Here the subject is receiving the Holy Spirit, and it is directly related the baptism of the people.

Notice also that baptism is assumed. Scripture contains no direct statement of, or any kind of allusion to, an unbaptized person in Christ. Baptism into Christ is consistently assumed for all that are in the Son. Apostolic doctrine makes clear that those who are in Christ were, in fact, baptized. The sixth chapter of Romans contains extensive reasoning on the subject. The epistle to the Colossians declares critical matters that attend baptism, including “the circumcision of Christ” and “the operation of God” (Col 3:11-12). The epistle to the Galatians affirms that we are baptized into Christ, and therein have “put on Christ” (Gal 3:27). Peter affirms that baptism with water “saves us,” being tied to the procurement of a “good conscience” (1 Pet 3:21).

Men may reason about the pious unimmersed, but no such reasoning is found in Scripture. Others may speculate about a person being saved, yet not being baptized, owing to an ignorance of the truth. However, such reasoning is not reflected in the Word of God. There, if people were not baptized, yet gave evidence of being accepted by God, they were “commanded . . . to be baptized” (Acts 10:48) .

Men may reason about the pious unimmersed , but no such reasoning is found in Scripture. Others may speculate about a person being saved, yet not being baptized, owing to an ignorance of the truth. However, such reasoning is not reflected in the Word of God. There, if people were not baptized, yet gave evidence of being accepted by God, they were “commanded . . . to be baptized” (Acts 10:48). The very first people who inquired what they ought to do in response to the Gospel were told to repent “and be baptized” (Acts 2:38). We have the record of a man who heard Christ preached and concluded that he ought to be baptized (Acts 8:36). There is simply too much said in Scripture about baptism to justify any continued ignorance on the subject. Its necessity is always affirmed and never debated.

The word “baptized” is mentioned twenty-one times in the book of Acts (1:5; 2:38,41; 8:12,13,16,36,38; 9:18; 10:47,48; 11:16; 16:15,33; 18:8; 19:3,4,5; 22:16). Even though Jesus is declared to baptize with the Holy Spirit, not a single one of those references refers to that baptism. That baptism is not a response of men, but is a Sovereign act of the Lord Jesus. The above texts all refer to human response, or to John baptizing people (1:5; 11:16; 19:4). The word “baptized” is never used when referring to the receiving of the Holy Spirit – even though, technically, that would be a correct statement. However, it is not a sound doctrinal statement. No person of Scriptures ever said they were “baptized with the Holy Spirit” – even though, speaking loosely, that might be viewed as an accurate statement. However, this is not the manner of the Holy Spirit. It is not how He has cultured our minds to employ the word “baptized.” When referring to the unseen and spiritual baptism, the emphasis is always on the one who did the baptizing, or the Spirit Himself (Matt 3:11; Mk 1:8; Lk 3:16; Acts 11:16; 1 Cor 12:13). Baptism into Christ always accentuates the ones being baptized, and what was accomplished by the Lord at that time.

The text further suggests that someone baptized into Christ is not totally ignorant concerning the Holy Spirit. The same doctrine that provoked them to be baptized would have included some teaching concerning the Spirit. Therefore, Paul, assuming they had been baptized, asked concerning the kind of baptism they experienced. He is not inquiring about an inner experience, but an outward one.

The fact that Paul accented baptism suggests that the ordinary means through which the Spirit was given was not the laying on of hands – else he would have asked if anyone laid hands upon them.

Our Times

The peril of our times is confirmed by the confusion that exists within the professed church concerning the subject of baptism. This is an elemental point of the doctrine of Christ (Heb 6:2), and those who have no understanding of it are, at the very best, infants.

UNTO JOHN'S BAPTISM

“And they said, Unto John's baptism.” Other versions read, “Into John's baptism,” NKJV “John's baptism,” NIV “The baptism of John,” BBE and “the immersion of John.” CJB

This event occurred roughly 25-27 after the day of Pentecost. At that time, when the New Covenant was formally inaugurated, the baptism of John was obviated, together with the Old Covenant and its ceremonies. Yet, although this was the case, there was a period of time during which the former things were allowed to fade away. This display of Divine patience is confirmed by the following statement from Hebrews: “In that He saith, A new covenant, He hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away” (Heb 8:13). Other versions read, “what is obsolete and aging will soon disappear,” NIV and “And what is obsolete (out of use and annulled because of age) is ripe for disappearance and to be dispensed with altogether.” AMPLIFIED

Admittedly, there is an element of mystery to all of this that makes it difficult to codify or systematize. Notwithstanding, spiritual growth presumes the gradual fading, and consequent abandonment, of old things, as well as the appropriation of new things. Old views, even when they were formerly valid, are rendered obsolete by new light. A kind of spiritual disintegration commences when the light of newness shines into the soul. That is one reason why continuance in sin always confirms there has been a failure to embrace the truth.

In our day, this fading period has long since passed. In fact, it had passed during the time of our text. The fact that these disciples had only been baptized with the baptism of John will not be allowed to pass as though it was inconsequential. Keep in mind, that John's baptism meant those who were so baptized had, in fact, repented. Their lives had been altered by a determination to live acceptably before the Lord, and to refuse to allow sin to erupt in all manner of immoral conduct.

The baptism of repentance was "unto" such a life – to abstinence from sin. However, according to Divine intent, that kind of life was not an end of itself. Rather, it was the appointed way to prepare for Christ. That was the primary objective of both John's ministry and his baptism. Now that Jesus has come, and has been enthroned in heaven, John's baptism will no longer be honored.

THE OBJECTIVE OF JOHN'S BAPTISM DECLARED

“ 4 Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on Him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.”

The manner of Paul's response suggests that these men had not been exposed to the fulness of John's teaching. At the very least, they certainly had not grasped what he taught. However, being the kind of teacher that he was, it is highly unlikely that they could have been exposed to his teaching directly or indirectly, yet missed the central point that Paul is making.

PAUL'S KNOWLEDGE OF JOHN

Paul knew the purpose fulfilled by John – what he did, and what he said – even though he was never actually a disciple of John. There is no record that affirms he was directly exposed to John, although that is theoretically possible, judging from his age at the time of Stephen's stoning. However, John did not preach in Jerusalem. His preaching was in the wilderness of Judaea, where he also baptized (Matt 3:1; Mk 1:4). It is not likely that Saul of Tarsus ventured out to see and hear John. This is because John fulfilled a Scriptural prophesy, providing the means through which men were prepared for Christ. I gather that Paul received some revelation on this. That, coupled with his understanding of the prophecies of John (Isa 40:3-5; Mal 3:1), account for his understanding of John's role in the preparation of the way of the Lord.

THE BAPTISM OF REPENTANCE

“John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance . . .” Other versions read, “baptism which goes with a change of heart,” BBE “an immersion in connection with turning from sin to God,” CJB and “John's baptism called for repentance from sin.” NLT

The idea here is that John's baptism accompanied a turning from sinful expression, and the resolution to abstain from iniquity. Men were not created anew through John's baptism, but were rather made ready for the new creation that occurs in Christ alone. They were not given a new heart during his baptism, but were rather being prepared to receive one. Because Christ was the sin-bearer (Heb 9:28), and came into the world “to save sinners” (1 Tim 1:15), men were required to become sensitive of sin, and learn to hate it, resolving to abstain from it. There was no other way to be effectively prepared for the Christ.

A Tragedy of Our Time

One of the great tragedies of our time is the near-total lack of this kind of mindset among the people. Christ is being presented as facilitator of human objectives, and the resolver of their unwanted experiences. In such a state, men are not made ready for Christ. This is a total misrepresentation of Christ. He came to do the Father's will, placing it above even His own desires. As He Himself said, “For I came down from heaven, not to do Mine own will, but the will of Him that sent Me” (John 6:38). Therefore He said, “I seek not Mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent Me”

(John 5:30).

It must be remembered that the will of man is what led him into an eternal dilemma – one that could only be resolved at great cost to both God and Christ. It is therefore the height of absurdity to imagine that God is preoccupied with what men desire – unless their desire is a precise reflection of His own.

THEY SHOULD BELIEVE ON HIM

“ . . . saying unto the people, that they should believe on Him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus.” Other versions read, “believe in Him,” NASB “have faith in,” BBE and “put their trust in.” CJB

Repentance, therefore, necessarily precedes believing on Christ Jesus. Even John the Baptist preached, “repent ye, and believe the Gospel” (Mk 1:15). Jesus said of those who did not respond to John’s introductory message, “For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not : but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him ” (Matt 21:32). The person who has not repented, insisting on continuing to sin is thrust into the position where believing is not even possible.

However, these “disciples” from Ephesus had repented, and now they will be told the objective of repentance. They are not among those who “could not believe” (John 12:39).

If conformity to, and friendship with, the world is the kiss of death, then a very real hatred of sin, and the honest determination to wage war against it is the kiss of life – the commencement of living toward God.

The Involvements of Of Believing On Christ Jesus

What does it mean to “believe on” Christ? The Greek word translated “on” is εἰς. As a preposition (as it is used here), it means “entrance into, or direction and limit: into, to, toward.” THAYER

Repentance is the beginning of an orientation toward fellowship with Christ. Believing on Jesus is the beginning of fellowship with Christ – a fellowship into which we are called by the living God (1 Cor 1:9). Several things are implied in the expression “believe on Him . . . on Jesus Christ”

- A discontent with sin and its guilt, and a determination to be freed from its dominion.
- Some knowledge of Christ – knowledge that is revealed in and through the Gospel.
- A preoccupation with, and focus upon, Christ.
- A solid persuasion that Christ is everything He is declared to be.
- A firm and unwavering reliance upon Christ to do what has been promised.
- Being convinced that Christ has accomplished what God required as a basis for the salvation of men.

Promises to Those who Believe On Christ

There are certain promises given to those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and they are most remarkable.

- They are given power to become the sons of God (John 1:12).
- They not condemned (John 3:18).

- They have everlasting life (John 3:36; 6:47).
- They will not come into condemnation, and are passed from death to life (John 5:24).
- This is the work of God (John 6:29).
- They will never thirst (John 6:35).
- Rivers of living water shall flow out of their bellies (John 7:38).
- They will receive the Holy Spirit (John 7:39).
- They have believed on the God who sent Christ (John 12:44).

Anything of this magnitude must not be viewed simplistically, or treated as though it was one of a series of steps that have equal value. Furthermore, the objective of the commandments, whether it is repentance, or others that are delivered to men, is said to be “love out of a pure heart,” “a good conscience,” and “faith unfeigned,” or unpretentious

They should not abide in darkness (John 12:46).

- They will do greater works (John 14:12).
- They shall be saved (Acts 16:31).
- Their faith is counted for righteousness (Rom 4:5).
- Righteousness is imputed to them (Rom 4:24).
- They will not be ashamed (Rom 9:33; 10:11).
- They will not be confounded (1 Pet 2:6).
- They have the witness in themselves (1 John 5:10).

Anything of this magnitude must not be viewed simplistically, or treated as though it was one of a series of steps that have equal value. Furthermore, the objective of the commandments, whether it is repentance, or others that are delivered to men, is said to be “love out of a pure heart,” “a good conscience,” and “faith unfeigned,” or unpretentious (1 Tim 1:5).

Faith is not a mere creedal or intellectual persuasion. As it is written that men believe “with the heart” (Rom 10:10). Faith is associated with the following, none of which are unnecessary.

- Understanding (Heb 11:3).
- Obedience (Rom 1:5; 16:26).
- Righteousness (Rom 10:6).
- The Word (Rom 10:8).
- Spiritual aptitude (Rom 12:3).
- Prophesying (Rom 12:6).
- Speaking the truth (2 Cor 4:13).
- Hearing (Rom 10:17; Gal 3:2,5).
- Blessing (Gal 3:9).
- The household of God (Gal 6:10).
- A shield of protection (Eph 6:16).
- Joy (Phil 1:25).
- Work (1 Thess 1:3).

- Spiritual battle (1 Tim 6:12).
- Assurance (Heb 10:22).
- Prayer (James 5:15).

Faith is depicted as a “door” through which one enters into the plentitude of God – a door that is opened by the Lord. As it is written, “And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how He had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles” (Acts 14:27). In fact, there is nothing within the remarkable scope of salvation that is not made available to the person who believes on the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE NECESSITY FOR PREACHING CHRIST

While the text does not mention Paul preaching Christ to these men, it seems to me that this is a foregone conclusion. It is inconceivable that these men had heard Christ preached, yet had only been baptized with the baptism of John. Further, in order to believe on Christ, the truth concerning Him must be declared, for “How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher?” (Rom 10:14).

The baptism of the Ethiopian eunuch was preceded by Philip preaching Jesus unto him (Acts 8:35-38). The baptism of the Philippian jailer and his household was preceded by an admonition to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and the declaration of the word of the Lord (Acts 16:31-33). When Lydia was baptized, it was because the Lord “opened” her heart in order that she might attend “unto the things which were spoken of Paul” (Acts 16:14-15). Thus believing and obeying the Gospel is always preceded by a declaration of the same – and there is no evidence that this was done prior them encountering Paul. When they believed, Paul was the preacher.

THEY WERE BAPTIZED IN THE NAME OF THE LORD JESUS

“ 5 When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.” Other versions read, “baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus,” ASV/NIV “they were immersed by the authority of the Lord Jesus,” IE “they were baptized [again, this time] in the name of the Lord Jesus,” AMPLIFIED

The same Greek word translated “on,” in the expression “believe on the name” (ειν) is translated “in” in this verse. Some perceive this as meaning “by the authority of Christ” IE/Robertson However, I do not see how such a meaning can be applied to the Greek word ειν , which has to do with entrance into something.

Others feel as though this refers to a formula that is said when the person is baptized. Those who teach this will not accept a baptism that is done “in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost” (Matt 28:19). However, there is no record in Scripture of the person doing the baptizing stating a fixed expression when doing so.

Concerning the Lord’s words in Matthew 28:19, the Greek word ειν is also used in that text, and it is prepositional use as well. Jesus was affirming that the person being baptized is brought into the Father, into the Son, and into the Holy Spirit. This is in strict accord with His prayer on the eve of His betrayal, which focused on believers being joined to the Lord. “Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their word; That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art IN ME, and I IN THEE, that they also may be one IN US : that the world may believe that Thou hast sent Me. And the glory which thou gavest Me I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one: I IN THEM, and THOU IN ME, that they may be made perfect in one; and that the world may know that Thou hast sent Me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me.” (John 17:20-23).

In Scripture, the word “name” is used to denote the person. When God revealed Himself to Moses He said He was declaring His name – WHO He was by nature (Ex 34:5-7). When the Lord changed the name of a man, it was because the nature of the person had been changed in some way (Gen 17:5,15; 32:28; John 1:42; Acts 13:9).

Apostolic doctrine also affirms that this is precisely the status of those who are correctly called “the children of God.” They are “in the Father” (1 John 2:24; 4:15-16), “in the Son” (Rom 8:1; 1 Cor 1:30; 2 Cor 5:17; 1 John 2:24), and “in the Spirit” (Rom 8:9; Gal 3:3; 5:16,25). This is encompassed in marvelous expression, “But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit” (1 Cor 6:17). Thus we are made “partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14), and of the “Divine nature” as well (2 Pet 1:4). There is a very real entrance into Christ that is both initiated at our baptism, and maintained by faith.

PAUL LAID HIS HANDS ON THEM

“ 6a And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them . . . ” Other versions read, “the Holy Spirit came on them,” NASB and “the Holy Spirit came down on them.” NJB

The initial receiving of the Holy Spirit by a group of people, as well as individuals, is described in differing, yet similar, ways.

- THE DISCIPLES ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST. “And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance” (Acts 2:4). UNIQUENESS: The inauguration of the New Covenant.

REFERRED TO AS being filled with the Spirit (Acts 2:4), receiving the promise (Acts 2:39), receiving the Spirit (Acts 10:47; 15:9), and the Spirit being “poured out” (Acts 2:17-18). Not ATTENDED with the laying on of hands.

- THE SAMARITANS. “Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost” (Acts 8:17). UNIQUENESS: A people who were kind of half-breeds believing in the coming of the Messiah, yet having flawed views of worship. REFERRED TO AS the falling of the Spirit (Acts 8:16), and the giving of the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:18). ATTENDED with the laying on of apostolic hands (Acts 8:16-17).

- SAUL OF TARSUS. “And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost” (Acts 9:17). UNIQUENESS: The call of the apostle to the Gentiles.

REFERRED TO AS Saul being “filled with the Holy Spirit” (Acts 9:17). ATTENDED by the laying on of non-apostolic hands (Acts (9:17)).

However, I am going to affirm that it is not the Divine manner to confer the Holy Spirit in a unique and limited manner that He did not promise. Amos boldly announced, “Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto His servants the prophets” (Amos 3:7). For Him to contradict this revealed principle would also impact upon His own glory, for God has declared that His glory is found in the fact that He does what He says.

GENTILES AT THE HOUSE OF CORNELIUS. “While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word” (Acts 10:44). UNIQUENESS: The participation of the Gentiles in the salvation of God. REFERRED TO AS the Holy Spirit falling on them (Acts 10:44), the Spirit being “poured out” (Acts 10:45). receiving the Spirit (Acts 10:47), and the Holy Spirit being “given” to them (Acts 15:9). Not ATTENDED with the laying on of hands.

- THE EPHESIANS DISCIPLES. “And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied” (Acts 19:6). UNIQUENESS: The formal termination of the baptism of John. ATTENDED with the laying on of an apostles hands (Acts 19:6).

THE PROPHETS PROMISED THE SPIRIT WOULD BE GIVEN

Much is made of this in Scripture – the giving of the Holy Spirit in the time of the new and better covenant.

- “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3).

- “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out My spirit” (Joel 2:28-29).

- “And I will put My spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:27).

- “Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out My spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD” (Ezek 39:29).

It is in view of these prophecies that the Holy Spirit is referred to as “the Spirit of promise” (Eph 1:13). Believers are said to “receive the Spirit of promise” (Gal 3:14). Peter referred to the gift of the Spirit as “the promise” (Acts 2:39). To my knowledge the Prophets never distinguished between a miraculous gift of the Holy Spirit and an ordinary one. This is, however, how several notable commentators and religious bodies view the matter. There is an attending logic that appears to these people to fully justify their view. However, I am going to affirm that it is not the Divine manner to confer the Holy Spirit in a unique and limited manner that He did not promise. Amos boldly announced, “Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto His servants the prophets” (Amos 3:7). For Him to contradict this revealed principle would also impact upon His own glory, for God has declared that His glory is found in the fact that He does what He says. “Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure: Calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it” (Isa 46:9-11).

Although the things that were manifested at these times were unique, care was taken in the reporting of the events to associate them with the common salvation. The fact that the Holy Spirit was given without any human interposition, whether in word or deed, did not make it a special gift.

This applies to blessings as well as judgments. In fact, Paul is careful to say that He did not preach or teach anything that was not previously promised by Moses and the Prophets. “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come” (Acts 26:22). The same may be said of the Lord Jesus Himself, His twelve apostles, and other inspired men.

THE UNIQUENESS WAS IN THE MANIFESTATION, NOT THE REALITY

When reporting the reality of receiving the Holy Spirit, it was not declared as a unique thing, even though it may have been attended by unique circumstances.

- THE EVENTS OF PENTECOST. No laying on of hands. The recipients received the Spirit when they were sitting in one place and in one accord. They spoke with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance, speaking of “the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:4,11).

- They were “filled with the Spirit” (Acts 2:4).
- The promise of the Holy Spirit was given (Acts 2:33).
- The Spirit was “poured forth” (Acts 2:16-17).
- The Spirit “shed forth” by Jesus (Acts 2:33).
- The same thing occurred that later took place at the house of Cornelius (Acts 10:47; 11:15).
- The fulfillment of Joel’s prophecy (Acts 2:16-17).
- The “promise” was applicable to the hearers and their children (Acts 2:39).
- THE SAMARITANS. Peter and John laid their hands upon them, and they “received the Holy Spirit.” There is no record of them speaking with other languages or prophesying.
 - They “received the Holy Spirit ” (Acts 8:17).
 - The Holy Spirit was “given” (Acts 8:18).
- CONVERSION OF THE GENTILES. No hands were laid on the recipients, but the Spirit fell on them while Peter was preaching. They did speak with other languages and prophesied.
 - The Spirit fell on them (Acts 10:44).
 - The gift of the Holy Spirit was “poured out” (Acts 10:45).
 - They “received the Holy Spirit,” just as Peter and those with him (Acts 10:47).
 - Peter remembered the words of the Lord concerning being baptized with the Holy Spirit (Acts 11:16).
 - God gave them then “like gift,” who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ (Acts 11:17).
 - God granted the Gentiles “repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18).
 - God gave them the Holy Spirit (Acts 15:8).
 - God purified their hearts by faith (Acts 15:9).
 - They were saved through the grace of God (Acts 15:11).
 - God visited the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name (Acts 15:14).
 - What took place agreed with the words of the prophets (Acts 15:15).
 - The Gentiles were “turned to God” (Acts 15:19).
 - THE EPHESIANS DISCIPLES. Paul laid his hands on the disciples following their baptism, and the Spirit came on them. They spoke with other languages and prophesied.
 - They “received the Holy Spirit ” (Acts 8:17).
 - The Holy Spirit was “given” (Acts 8:18).

Although the things that were manifested at these times were unique, care was taken in the reporting of the events to associate them with the common salvation. The fact that the Holy Spirit was given without any human interposition, whether in word or deed, did not make it a special gift. The conferment of the gift through the laying on of hands did not make it a special gift. The giving of the Spirit while Peter was speaking, and without any other human involvement did not make it a special outpouring.

When, for example, Peter delivered the report of the events taking place at the house of Cornelius, he did not report that they spoke in tongues and prophesied – even though that did take place (Acts 11:15-17; 15:8-11). In fact, that marvelous working was categorically associated with being “saved” by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ (15:11), believing (Acts 11:7,17), being granted repentance (Acts 11:18), hearts being purified by faith (Acts 15:9), God taking a people for Himself (Acts 15:14), and turning to the Lord (Acts 15:19).

What could possibly warrant the development of a doctrine that views these events as unique experience that were not directed related to the salvation of God. What would constrain men to think of them in association with special empowerment and special gifts? The Scriptures never review these historical matters in such a way, and neither should we!

THE LAYING ON OF HANDS

The Apostles are not the only people who conferred the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands – although that work is most generally assigned to them. Ananias, however, was the means through which Saul of Tarsus was not only healed of his blindness, but also received the Holy Spirit (Acts 9:17-18).

All the Sons Receive the Spirit

The Holy Spirit is given to those who believe (John 7:39), and also to those who obey (Acts 5:32). The Spirit is sent into their hearts because they are sons (Gal 4:6). All who are in Christ are apprised of the fact that the Holy Spirit has been given to them (John 7:39; 1 Cor 2:12; 2 Cor 1:22; 2 Cor 5:5; 1 Thess 4:8; 1 John 3:24; 4:13). In fact, it is strongly affirmed, “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His” (Rom 8:9).

Spiritual Epochs

In the dispensing of the Holy Spirit, the laying on of hands has been employed by God – but not always. In fact, this was not the norm. In the instances where this did occur, or where there was a manifestation of speaking in other languages and prophesying, or declaring the wonderful works of God, a spiritual epoch was taking place.

It should not surprise us that extraordinary phenomena accompanies great beginnings. When Israel came out of Egypt, great signs and wonders took place. The same was true when the Law was given at Sinai, and when Jesus commenced His ministry among men. But these signs were not intended to have a permanent presence. That would have diminished their effectiveness.

PENTECOST. The first time the exalted Christ shed forth the Spirit. This was the time the New Covenant was inaugurated, and the Gospel was preached with power and insight. Such an occasion required confirmation. There could be no doubt concerning what was taking place.

- SAMARIA. This was a body of people that had not been granted the privilege of hearing the Gospel of the Kingdom as those in Galilee and Judaea. Jesus had forbade His disciples to go among them (Matt 10:5). Jesus had spent two days there during His ministry (John 4:40). However, with the belief of the Gospel as preached by Philip, a new era started for them. During this beginning, confirmation was given because of the newness that was taking place, and to establish the apostles as the foundation-layers of the church (Eph 2:20). It was through their word, or doctrine, that men would believe (John 17:20).

- THE HOUSE OF CORNELIUS. This marked the acceptance of the Gentiles, something that had been prophesied, yet remained unclear. This required confirmation, in order that the scope of salvation might be seen. Special confirmations were given to both Cornelius and Peter at that time (Acts 10).

• THE DISCIPLES AT EPHESUS. This marked a formal end to John's baptism. John had said he had to decrease, and yet that had not yet taken place among these disciples. Therefore things accompanied the receiving of the Spirit that were by no means ordinary.

Beginnings Differ In Appearance, But Not in Substance

It should not surprise us that extraordinary phenomena accompanies great beginnings. When Israel came out of Egypt, great signs and wonders took place. The same was true when the Law was given at Sinai, and when Jesus commenced His ministry among men. But these signs were not intended to have a permanent presence. That would have diminished their effectiveness.

In addition to these things, the government of the kingdom is upon the shoulder of Christ Himself. He is the One who determines both the extent and nature of any manifestation. Because epochal beginnings are by their very nature within an environment of relative ignorance, extraordinary things accompany them. In a way of speaking, it is like kick-starting faith, so that the beginning itself is effective. Signs and wonders are not intended to awaken an appetite for them.

However, as faith matures, the confirmation of Divine working takes a form that must be discerned independently of physical, or outward, phenomenon. This matter is develop-ed in apostolic doctrine, which defines the role of the Holy Spirit in the perfecting of salvation, or sanctification. I will address this more fully after commenting on verses six and seven.

THEY SPOKE WITH TONGUES AND PROPHESED

“6b . . . and they spake with tongues, and prophesied.” Other versions read, “they had the power of talking in tongues, and acting like prophets,” BBE “they began to talk in other languages and to speak what God had revealed,” GWN “they spoke in languages, and prophesied,” WEBSTER “They began speaking different languages and prophesying,” IE “they began to speak in foreign tongues and to prophesy,” WILLIAMS “they spoke in [foreign, unknown] tongues (languages) and prophesied,” AMPLIFIED “they began to speak with tongues and the inspiration of prophets.” PHILLIPS and “they spoke in strange tongues and also proclaimed God's message” GNB

This is one of three new covenant accounts of men speaking in tongues. Men first did this on the day of Pentecost, when the disciples of Jesus were filled with the Spirit and so spoke. Their subject was “the wonderful works of God,” but we do not know a single syllable that they said (Acts 2:4,11). The second was at the house of

I do not know how it is possible to develop a syllabus on speaking in tongues with that kind of data, but some have managed to do it – at least, that is what they think they have achieved.

Cornelius where Peter and those with him heard the Gentiles “speak with tongues and magnify God” (Acts 10:46). We are not apprised of a single specific word that they spoke – although the nature was that of drawing attention to the God of heaven. The third is our text, where, following their baptism and the imposition of Paul's hands, men spoke with tongues and prophesied. Again, we have absolutely no idea concerning the message they gave. Three unique occasions, and three ways of stating the subject on which they spoke. (1) The wonderful works of God. (2) Magnifying God. (3) Prophesying. I do not know how it is possible to develop a syllabus on speaking in tongues with that kind of data – but vain men have managed to do so. All of this is compounded by the fact that no eye-witness reporting such an event ever drew attention to the fact that the recipients of the Spirit spoke in tongues (Acts 11:15; 15:8-9).

That is true of Pentecost, the house of Cornelius, and the disciples from Ephesus. No one ever interpreted what they said for those hearing the report – even though they doubtless did understand what was spoken in another language – else they could not have identified it as relating to the wonderful works of God, magnifying God, or prophesying. In other words, when speaking of a message from God, the Holy Spirit never dignified mystery, drew undue attention to it, or provoked people to desire to speak in such a manner – never!

Additionally, Paul taught that speaking in a language that is not understood by the hearers is forbidden in the assembly of the saints (1 Cor 14:11-20). He also affirmed that an insistence upon maintaining such a practice was the evidence of the curse of God, not his blessing (1 Cor 14:21-25). Actually, the first example of men speaking in other languages was a judgment from God to abort the vain work they had undertaken (Gen 11:7-9).

ALL THE MEN WERE ABOUT TWELVE

“ 7 And all the men were about twelve.” Twelve men, all disciples, all hearers, all learners, all obedient, and all blessed. Among them there were no dissenters, no disobedient, and none who did not receive the love of the truth. That is a most extraordinary circumstance!

God does not always provide the count of those who turn to Him. Sometimes He simply says that “multitudes both of men and women” were added (Acts 5:14). Another time it is said that “the number of disciples multiplied” (Acts 6:1,7). Other times He says that “much people was added to the Lord” (Acts 11:24), and once speaks of an entire city that gave heed to the Gospel (Acts 8:6-8). Another time it is written that “a great number believed and turned to the Lord” (Acts 11:21). Other times He simply refers to a household, and omits all counts (Acts 10:33; 16:14,34; 18:8). There was also a period of time when the churches “increased in number daily” (Acts 16:5). In the cases of the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:38) and Saul of Tarsus, we have one person. There were also counts cited: 3,000 (Acts 2:41), and 5,000 (Acts 4:4).

Here we read of twelve men. It is obvious that the number of people, while sometimes impressive, is not the real point. Where the hearts of men are tuned to the Lord, a great work of God has been accomplished, for any conversion, whether of a single man or a multitude, is “impossible” with men (Matt 19:25-26).

WHETHER OR NOT MEN HAVE THE HOLY SPIRIT IS STILL AN ISSUE

No person can claim identity with Christ who does not have the Spirit, for “if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His” (Rom 8:9). How, then, can it be known that a person has the Holy Spirit? It is true that God gave immediate evidence of that affiliation with the disciples on Pentecost, those at the house of Cornelius, and the Ephesians disciples. However, this kind of evidence was required by the times, and the freshness of the work that was being done. The standard means of making this determination is to look for what the Spirit does in the people of God. That evidence cannot be limited to speaking in tongues and prophesying, for it is written that all who have the Spirit do not do such things (1 Cor 12:30).

We are not left to conjecture on this, for considerable has been revealed concerning the ministry of the Holy Spirit, which is the evidence of His presence.

We are not left to conjecture on this, for considerable has been revealed concerning the ministry of the Holy Spirit, which is the evidence of His presence. While the following is by no means a complete list, it provides enough information to enable the nature of the Spirit’s work to be detected.

- The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts: “And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us” (Rom 5:5). It is because of this work of the Spirit that we love God, because He first loved us (1 John 4:19),

- Mortifying the deeds of the body: “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (Rom 8:13). Those who have the Spirit suppress the expression of sin .

- Confidence that we are the children of God: “The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God” (Rom 8:16). Those who have the Spirit of God possess assurance of their sonship.

- The favorable testimony of our conscience: “I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost” (Rom 9:1). The indwelling Spirit removes a condemning conscience.

- The possession of joy: “For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost” (Rom 14:17; 1 Thess 1:6). The Holy Spirit broadens the scope of perception and participation.

- Abounding in hope: “Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost” (Rom 15:13). The Holy Spirit brings one to the point where life is lived in prospect of the coming of the Lord and glory.

- Keeping what God has given to us: “That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us” (2 Tim 1:14). Spirit enables us to maintain what we have been given.

- The continual renewing of spiritual life and strength: “Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost” (Titus 3:5). In a world that is constantly diminishing, the Spirit causes the believer to continually increase in strength.

- Patiently waiting for the hope of righteousness: “For we through the Spirit wait for the hope of righteousness by faith” (Gal 5:5). Through the Spirit, the believer can patiently wait for the experience of thorough righteousness.

- Obedying the truth: “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22). The consistent obedience of the truth is a fruit of the Spirit.

- Saying from the heart that Jesus is the Lord: “Wherefore I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed: and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost” (1 Cor 12:3). The Spirit moves one to personally confess, and acquiesce, to the fact of Jesus being Lord.

- An increasing moral and spiritual change into the likeness of Christ : “But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18; Rom 8:29). Where the Spirit dwells, there is consistent growth and conformity to Christ.

- Being free from the dominion of the law of sin and death: “For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death” (Rom 8:2). There is a liberty from the dominion of sin whoever the Spirit is.

- Obtaining things that help our weakened condition – even though we do not know what we should pray for: “Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God.” (Rom 8:26-27). No person who possesses the Spirit will ultimately lack what is required to live in a manner that pleases God.

• Groaning under the weight of mortality, and living in expectation of occupying our new bodies: “For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened: not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit” (2 Cor 5:4-5). The presence of the Spirit produces a certain discontent with the world, our present bodies, and temporality.

• Unity with the children of God: “Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (Eph 4:3). The Spirit draws the person possessing Him to the other members of the family of God.

• A life that is lived “in goodness and in truth”: “For the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth ” (Eph 5:9). Goodness and truth characterize the life of a person who has the Holy Spirit.

• Accord, or a fellowship of agreement with the Spirit: “If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies” (Phil 2:1). Those who possess the Spirit and do not quench Him, will find themselves in agreement with Him.

When these evidences are absent in professed believers, the presence of the Holy Spirit cannot be confirmed. Further the Holy Spirit is a “seal” that marks the individual as a child of God, and is the earnest of our inheritance

Keeping the commandments of God: “And he that keepeth his commandments dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us” (1 John 3:24). The Spirit of God brings a preference for, and obedience to, God’s commandments.

• Not fulfilling the lust of the flesh: “This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh” (Gal 5:16). The Spirit enables the one in whom, He resides to resist the devil, reject his encroachments. And refuse to obey the sinful impulses of the flesh.

• The unique and effective fruit of the Spirit: “But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law” (Gal 5:22-23).

• Love: Giving of self, bringing advantage, not causing abuse, loving the saints as Christ’s brethren, being considerate.

• Joy: Joying in God, rejoicing in hope, joy that comes from faith.

• Peace: Peace that rules, keeping the heart and mind, peace with God, causing one to be a peacemaker, at peace with the brethren.

• Longsuffering: Able to endure long, not easily provoked or discouraged, and consistent.

• Gentleness: Not carnally abrasive, intention to bless, not offending or offensive.

• Goodness: Bringing good, causing spiritual profit, and doing good works.

• Faith: Faithful, trustworthy dependable, and reliable.

• Meekness: Humble, not self-seeking, strength is harnessed for good.

• Temperance: Self control, not excessive, moderation, not allowing the flesh to dominate.

When these evidences are absent in professed believers, the presence of the Holy Spirit cannot be confirmed. Further the Holy Spirit is a “seal” that marks the individual as a child of God, and is the earnest of our inheritance (2 Cor 1:22; Eph 1:13; 4:30).

Our view of the Holy Spirit must be associated with His role in the Kingdom of God – what He DOES within the one who is “accepted in the Beloved” (Eph 1:6). Our text has to do with the entrance of people into the Kingdom, not with their ultimate conformity to the image of Christ. It is not necessary for us to decide whether this experience was intended to be a permanent one, or was confined to the first century. If we were able to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion on such a matter, what difference would it make?

Apostolic doctrine does not associate the experience of the Ephesians disciples with the standard entrance into the Kingdom of God, anymore than it does the thief on the cross, the Samaritans, or Saul of Tarsus,

The doctrine, or teaching, concerning the work of the Holy Spirit, has to do with the fruit that He bears in the believer, and the ministry He fulfills in the behalf of those who are in Christ Jesus. His ministry to the brethren consists of directing them in the subduing of the desires of the flesh. This assistance is seen from two perspectives. First, from the subjective viewpoint, the “deeds of the body,” or “the evil deeds prompted by the body” are subdued. AMPLIFIED (Rom 8:13). Second, behind the scenes, and apart from our consciousness of His activity, He makes intercession for us when we do not know what we should pray for as we ought (Rom 8:26-27). This doubtless relates to the fruit of the Spirit, even though that is not the immediate emphasis of the text just cited.

It seems to me that these are the matters with which men of godly thought ought to be occupied. The attempt to convert inspired examples into doctrine is quite common in Christian circles, but it is not right. Examples may have some association with doctrine, but only to the extent they are handled in that manner by the inspired writers of Scripture.

Our text is a case in point. The doctrinal emphasis is whether or not the disciples of reference had received the Spirit, not how He was received, or the immediate impact that reception had on the disciples. Also, the point was not whether they had worked miracles.

Subjectively, the common thing in accounts of the Spirit being given is that He was “received” by the people (Acts 8:17; 10:47). This is in perfect accord with the doctrine, which pertains to all who are in the Son (Rom 8:15; 1 Cor 2:12; 2 Cor 11:4; Gal 3:2). The attending circumstances, however, were not identical.

Objectively, the point was that the Spirit had been “given,” or “shed forth” (Acts 2:38; 5:32; 8:18,20; 10:45; 11:17). This also precisely accords with apostolic doctrine (Rom 5:5; 1 Cor 6:19; 2 Cor 1:22; 5:5; 1 Thess 4:8; 1 John 3:24; 4:13). Again, the attending circumstances were not identical.

The doctrine also states that the Spirit dwells in the saints (Rom 8:9,11; 1 Cor 6:19; James 4:5). At no point does the experience contradict the doctrine – yet the experience itself is not the doctrine. It is the doctrine that is to be taught.

CONCLUSION

By their very nature, texts like the one with which we have just dealt draw the attention of men. This is because it departs from the norm – a prerogative that is open to God, but not to men. Theoretically, things like this are associated with the transition to the New Covenant, and not to the covenant itself. They were probably evidence of the acceptance or lack of acceptance of the people to the ones who were preaching to them. However, the text does not say this, but simply gives the report of what the Lord did, and how He did it.

When it comes to what men teach, or the doctrine they affirm, they must affirm what is consistent, not what is inconsistent. They are not pass over unique texts, such as events concerning the disciples from Ephesus. However, they are not to be declared as though they were a pattern for future generations. It is quite possible for them to occur again, because they are things that are strictly governed by the Lord Himself. These are some of those paths that are “in the sea,” and His footsteps “that are not known” (Psa 77:19). They are not intended to be things that formulate a doctrine, or experiences that are to be eagerly sought. These are not matters over which saints are to divide.

Lesson #79

PAUL SPENDS TWO YEARS IN EPHEBUS

“ 19:8 And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. 9 But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus. 10 And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks. 11 And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul: 12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them. ”
(Acts 19:8-12)

INTRODUCTION

A SUMMATION OF THE TEXT

Once again, the preference of Paul to be with the followers of Christ is confirmed. It was these people – those who are in Christ Jesus – to whom, Paul made known “the unsearchable riches of Christ” (Eph 3:8), “the riches of the glory of this mystery” (Col 1:27), and “the revelation of the mystery which was kept secret from the foundation of the world” (Rom 16:25). These are matters that are to be made known to saints (Eph 3:18). In this text, Paul, as his custom was, began in the synagogue. However, when some were hardened, and maligned “the Way” publically, Paul withdrew the disciples, and went to a neutral place where such opposition would not be encountered. The Word quickly spread throughout the region, and God wrought special miracles by the hand of Paul. All of this confirmed that the fruit of righteousness is, indeed, “sown in peace of them that make peace” (James 3:18). Those who raise carnal contention, by that very work, forfeit the fruit. Wherever such people are found, an environment is produced is not only not conducive to spiritual fruit bearing, it actually militates against it, making it virtually impossible for the intentions of God's great salvation to be realized.

FOCUS

It is good that we frequently remind ourselves of the necessity and profitability of spiritual focus. In Christ, and within the framework of the New Covenant, looking is especially critical. To be more specific, what has captured our attention is all important. The salvation of God is of such a nature as not to allow pluralism – i.e., maintaining two or more matters considered to be central.

Defining "Focus"

As I am using the word, "focus" is what central or the key matter – it is the object or fact upon which we gaze; i.e. what has captured our attention. This is reflected in a number of salient texts.

• "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord" (2 Cor 3:18)

• "While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal" (2 Cor 4:18).

• "For he saith, I have heard thee in a time accepted, and in the day of salvation have I succored thee: behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor 6:2).

• "For our conversation is in heaven; from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ" (Phil 3:20).

• "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ" (Titus 2:13).

• "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many; and unto them that look for him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb 9:28).

• "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God" (Heb 12:2).

• "Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?" (2 Pet 3:12).

- “Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness. Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless” (2 Pet 3:13-14).

- “Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord : for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ . . . That I may know Him , and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death” (Phil 3:8-10).

“Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do , forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before” (Phil 3:13).

Focus has to do with being in alignment with the revealed purpose of God. This has to do with pressing past the various distractions of this world – not allowing them to turn our attention from the Captain of our salvation, the salvation itself, and its revealed objective, or purpose. Synonyms for “focus” include emphasis, accent, stress, fundamental thing, main thing , and basic thing. The focus is what supports and justified all other involvements. It is what causes the salvation of God to make sense, and the requirement for holiness rational. It does not exclude other things, but causes them to be approached properly, so the individual is not turned away from the fundamental thing. That purpose, although multifaceted, is essentially single in nature, and is stated in a number of ways.

- Conforming the justified ones to the image of Christ (Rom 8:29-30).
- Present a bride to Christ that is without spot or wrinkle (Eph 5:27).
- Displaying His manifold wisdom to heavenly hosts through the church (Eph 3:10).
- Give the kingdom to the saints, when they will reign with Christ (Lk 12:32; Dan 7:18,22,27; 2 Tim 2:12).

THE RELIGION OF OUR TIME

The relevance of these observations is seen in the comparison of the church in the book of Acts with the church of our day. Any similarities at all are extremely difficult to identify. I am affirming that this is because a different message is being preached in our time .

Much, if not the preponderance, of the religion of our time is nothing more than a novel distraction. There is too much of man in it, and it makes too much allowance for life in this world. It is not aggressive against sin – which is the very thing salvation addresses. There is too much casualness, indifference, and outright disinterest. The distinction between the novice and the mature believer has disappeared amidst the facade of religious pretension. Religious institutions have been raised to more conscious prominence than the kingdom of God. The absolute necessity of preparing for coming of the Lord, death, and standing before the throne of judgment is virtually unknown. The fundamental ignorance of the Word of God is staggering in measure – even among those who are professed leaders of the church. Both the Person and the way of the Lord are virtually unknown. Bantering about religious views has taken the place of holy proclamation. Confidence and assurance are not found among professing believers – at least not to any measurable degree. Immorality has raised its ugly head within the professed church, and that very church is trying counsel it out. Although the Gospel, has brought “life and immortality to light” (2 Tim 1:10), there is a prevailing disinterest in eternal life, heaven, dwelling forever with the Lord, and being freed from the encumbrances of the body.

No person with even a modicum of understanding is ignorant of these heart-rending realities. They are the result of an erroneous emphasis. We know this is the case, because the Word of God, which perfectly reflects the Divine emphasis or focus, cannot produce such things. The Word of God “effectually worketh also in you that believe” (1 Thess 2:13). It makes men “wise unto salvation” (2 Tim 3:15), promoting and sustaining life toward God (Lk 4:4).

THE RELEVANCE OF THESE OBSERVATIONS

The relevance of these observations is seen in the comparison of the church in the book of Acts with the church of our day. Any similarities at all are extremely difficult to identify. I am affirming that this is because a different message is being preached in our time – one that is a contrived, but ineffective, mixture of the Word of God with the wisdom of men. I, Scripture, it is what was declared that became the means through which certain responses were wrought. These include bold proclamations, aggressive opposition from the enemies of the Gospel, instant obedience in those who heard and believed, unity among the believers, sacrificial living for Christ, the abandonment of sinful manners, effective correction in those whose understanding was deficient – and a host of other things.

Where the Gospel of Christ is not consistently and aggressively preached, there is no possible means of producing or sustaining spiritual life. In such a case, all professed Christianity is at once spurious, for spiritual life cannot be sustained with independently of spiritual means. Any contrary claim is simply from the father of lies, who himself did not abide in the truth, and endeavors to pull men into the same quagmire of falsehood (John 8:44).

The book of Acts is not intended to be a record of the glory-days – when the church used to be triumphant, and spiritual power was a kind of beginning grace. This is not the presentation of an ideal church, or a model church, but the real church. Now, to the contemporary church, it is what a museum and historical documents are to the historian. In reality, however, this is rather like a spiritual plumb-line in which the powerful effects of the Gospel and faith in Christ are made known. The change of character that takes place in salvation is chronicled in this book.

HE SPOKE BOLDLY, IN THE SYNAGOGUE THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD

“And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God.”

DISPUTING AND PERSUADING

“Disputing and persuading.” Other versions read, “reasoning and persuading,” NKJV “arguing persuasively,” NIV “arguing and pleading,” RSV “reasoning and teaching,” BBE “disputing and exhorting,” DOUAY “persuading,” MRD “debated boldly with persuasive arguments,” NAB “talked bravely,” CEV “spoke boldly with the people, holding discussions with them and trying to convince them,” GNB and “having reasoned with them, and persuading.” LITV

The word “disputing” is translated from the Greek word dialego,menoj (dis-leg-omen-os). As used here, the word means “to converse, discourse with one, argue, discuss . . . drawing arguments from the Scriptures,” THAYER “(1) of a reasoned discussion discuss, discourse with, conduct a discussion; (2) of disputations contend, argue, dispute; (3) of speaking to someone in order to convince address, speak, reason with,” FRIBERG “to argue about differences of opinion - 'to argue, to dispute, argument.” LOUW-NIDA

The word “persuading” is translated from the Greek word pei,qwn (pei-thown). As used here, the word means “to persuade, I. e. to induce one by words to believe,” THAYER “convince, persuade,” FRIBERG and “to convince someone to believe something and to act on the basis of what is recommended - to persuade, to convince.” LOUW-NIDA

As noted in previous verses, the synagogue environment was conducive to the exposition of the prophets, the proclamation of the Gospel, and Scripturally-based reasoning and discussion. This is because the entire synagogue service centered in the Word of God – particularly Moses and the Prophets (Lk 4:16-17; Acts 13:15,27; 15:21). We are living in a time when the center of the gathering is a time of simulated praise. In fact, there are many gatherings where proclamation and reasoning are considered second to a carefully choreographed and orchestrated praise service. This whole approach has yielded a body of people who are Scripturally illiterate. It is not possible to reason upon the Scriptures with a people who are fundamentally ignorant of them. This is one reason why the people of God Himself were cultured through the reading of Scripture (2 Kgs 22:8-16; 23:2; Neh 8:3-18; 9:3; 13:1; Isa 34:16; Jer 36:6-15; Lk 4:16; Acts 13:27; 15:21,31; 2 Tim 3:15). It is this culture that birthed the productive environment of textual literacy found in the synagogue.

Modern Religious Culture

In our day, there is also an environment that has been cultured by the religious leaders – but it is not one of familiarity with the text of Scripture. There is rather an astounding lack of acquaintance with the Bible itself, to say nothing of the concepts developed therein. Let it be clear that just as an environment of Scriptural literacy is produced by teachers and leaders, so one of Scriptural illiteracy is also produced by what is now being taught. The truth of the matter is that we now have a church culture on our hands that does not require any semblance of Scriptural understanding. If the Scriptures are able to make one “wise unto salvation” (2 Tim 2:15), then an ignorance of them brings a corresponding ignorance of the salvation of God – what it is, its intent, and its determined destination. I do not know any way that such an ignorance can be avoided where a working knowledge of the Word of God is lacking.

For example, today nominal Christendom has made room for psychiatry, statistical surveys, motivational experts, financial wizards, health gurus, and the likes. With the entry of such bodies of knowledge, truth is neutralized – and when truth is neutralized it becomes impotent and falls in the street

This kind of ignorance is the breeding ground for “divers and strange doctrines” (Heb 13:9). Fundamental to strange doctrines is an erroneous emphasis. That is, the core, or foundational, message is flawed – skewed in the wrong direction. If, for example, one begins with the basic postulate that God wants men to lead a happy and prosperous life in this world, or that He desires that our dreams are all fulfilled, the necessity of Christ is seriously diminished, for neither His earthly ministry nor His exaltation is affirmed to be for that purpose. The same is true of the supposition that the home is the pillar of real life, or that recruiting new disciples is the fundamental activity. Neither of these is affirmed in Scripture, and neither was the subject of proclamation or extensive exposition.

Also, the more an emphasis relies on the wisdom of men, the more erroneous it becomes. For example, today nominal Christendom has made room for psychiatry, statistical surveys, motivational experts, financial wizards, health gurus, and the likes. With the entry of such bodies of knowledge, truth is neutralized – and when truth is neutralized it becomes impotent and falls in the street (Isa 59:14). This is because the truth of God and the world are an admixture. They cannot be homogenized, and when the attempt is made to do so, the whole conglomeration becomes putrid, and truth is voided. Thus, Jesus said to the religious traditionalists, “ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition ” (Mat 15:6). And again, “For laying aside the commandment of God , ye hold the tradition of men” (Mark 7:8).

A principle revealed under the Laws affirms that something unclean can contaminate what is clean, while something clean cannot purify what is unclean. The text of reference is Haggai 2:11-14: “Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying, If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No. Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. Then answered Haggai, and said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean” (Hag 2:11-14). What is unclean defiles whatever it touches. This is the reason for the admonition, “Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted” (Gal 6:1). Solemnly the saints are warned, “Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners” (1 Cor 15:33). And again, “Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you” (2 Cor 6:17).

This puts the lie to the notion that to bring a person to Christ, one must first become their friend. No such procedure is ever reflected in Scripture. Pentecost, Philip and the city of Samaria, the conversion of the Ethiopian eunuch, the household of Cornelius, the house of Cripus, Lydia’s household, the Philippian jailer, etc. – how do they in any way reflect this methodology?

THINGS CONCERNING THE KINGDOM OF GOD

“ . . . the things concerning the kingdom of God.” Other versions read, “about the kingdom of God,” NASB “the things that appertain to the kingdom of God,” GENEVA “in regard to,” MRD and “concerning the reign of God.” YLT

The word “kingdom” comes from the Greek word basilei,aj (bas-il-ei-as). As used here, the lexical meaning is “a kingdom, dominion,” THAYER “(1) abstractly, the power exercised by a king, kingship, royal rule, reign (Acts 1.6); (2) concretely, the territory ruled by a king, kingdom, realm,” FRIBERG “reign, rule; kingdom, domain,” UBS “to rule as a king, with the implication of complete authority . . . It is generally a serious mistake to translate the phrase h` basilei,a tou/ qeou/ 'the kingdom of God' as referring to a particular area in which God rules. The meaning of this phrase in the NT involves not a particular place or special period of time but the fact of ruling.” LOUW-NIDA

Jesus introduced men to the nature of this kingdom, choosing to do so through parables. In this manner, as He intended, He hid the truth from the disinterested. On the other hand, He provided an incentive for earnest inquirers who had been given eyes to see, ears to hear, and hearts to understand.

The expression “kingdom of God” is found in Matthew through Revelation – 69 times.

- It is used 54 times in the Gospels (Matt 6:33; 12:28; 19:24; 21:31,43; Mk 1:14,15; 4:11; 26,30; 9:1,47; 10:14,15,23,24,25; 12:34; 14:25; 15:43; Lk 4:43; 6:20; 7:28; 8:1,10; 9:2,11,27,60,62; 10:9,11; 21:20; 12:31; 13:18,20,28,29; 14:15; 16:16; 17:20,21; 18:16,17,24,25; 19:11; 21:31; 22:16,18; 23:15; John 3:3,5).
- 7 times in Acts (1:3; 8:12; 14:22; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23,31).
- 8 times in the epistles (Rom 14:17; 1 Cor 4:20; 6:9,10; 15:50; Gal 5:21; Col 4:11; 2 Thess 1:5).
- Matthew frequently uses the term “kingdom of heaven,” which is found 32 times in his gospel (3:2; 4:17; 5:3,10,19,20; 7:21; 8:11; 10:17; 11:11,12; 13:11,24,31,33,44, 45,47,52; 16:19; 18:1,3,4,23; 19:14, 23; 20:1; 22:2; 23:13; 25:1,14).
- The phrase “His kingdom” is found 11 times in Scripture (Psa 145:12; Isa 9:7; Dan 4:3,34; 6:26; 7:14,27; Matt 13:41; 16:28; Lk 1:33; 2 Tim 4:1).
- The phrase “the kingdom” is used 12 times from Matthew through Revelation (Matt 4:23; 6:13; 8:12; 13:19,38,43; 19:12; 24:14; 25:34; 12:32; Acts 1:6; Rev 1:9).
- “Heavenly kingdom” is used once (2 Tim 4:18).
- “The kingdom of His dear Son” is mentioned once (Col 1:13).

- “The kingdom of Christ and of God” is mentioned once (Eph 5:5).

There you have 127 direct references to the “kingdom” – associated with God, Christ, and heaven. By way of comparison, the word “church” occurs 77 times, “baptize” in all of its varied forms is found 75 times. “Repent,” in all of its forms, occurs 105 times, “husband” 120 times, “marriage” 19 times, and “free will” 17 times (never in respect to a natural human trait, and never in any standard version of Matthew through Revelation).

Also, the following expressions are never found in any standard version of Scripture (KJV, NKJV, ASV, NASV, NIV, NRSV, RSV): “evangelize,” “evangelistic,” “evangelism,” “great commission,” “unconditional,” “unconditional love,” “free moral agency,” “sinner’s prayer,” “plan of salvation,” “law of love,” “church planting,” and “missionary” – to name a few.

I say these things to accent that there is an enormous amount of preaching, teaching, and professed Christian activity that is built around concepts and terms that are not even mentioned in the Scriptures. Yet, in contemporary preaching, “the kingdom of God” is rarely the focus of either speaking or thought. In the Word of God, not only is this kingdom mentioned frequently, but it is never brought up in a casual manner, is never incidental, and is always tied to pivotal matters. It was the subject of prophecy (Isa 9:7; Dan 2:44; 7:22,27; Lk 1:33). John the Baptist preached of this kingdom (Matt 3:2; Mk 1:14,15). Jesus Himself preached extensively concerning both its reality and nature (Matt 4:17,23; 5:3,10,19,20; 6:10,13,33 . . . John 3:3,5; 18:36). Philip preached the kingdom (Acts 8:12). Paul and Barnabas spoke of entering into it (Acts 14:22). Our text affirms that Paul focused on “things concerning the kingdom of God” (Acts 19:8). Over a period of three years he preached among the Ephesians the kingdom of God (Acts 20:21,25). The last segment of his ministry was spent expounding the kingdom of God (Acts 28:23,31).

Parables of the Kingdom

Jesus introduced men to the nature of this kingdom, choosing to do so through parables. In this manner, as He intended, He hid the truth from the disinterested (Matt 13:10-15; Isa 29:10-12). On the other hand, He provided an incentive for earnest inquirers who had been given eyes to see, ears to hear, and hearts to understand (Matt 13:16-17).

- Growth and maturity take place in the realm of competition. Matthew 13:24-30,38-43 – Wheat and the tares.
- It has a small beginning, but a large ending. Matthew 13:31-32; Mk 4:30-32; Luke 13:18 – A mustard seed sown into the ground.
- Powerful and effectual working within. Matthew 13:33; Luke 13:20-21 – Leaven hid in a measure of meal.
- Divine riches are hidden, yet can be found. Matthew 13:44 – Treasure hid in a field.
- Those who seek will find. Matthew 13:45 – A merchant seeking goodly pearls.
- Divine purposes involve the use of ungodly people, who will finally be discarded. Matthew 13:47-49 – A net cast into the sea.
- Men are required to act in harmony with the grace they have received. Matthew 18:23-35 – A king taking account of his servants.
- There is a sense in which the gift of God is common to all who receive it – without respect of persons. Matthew 20:1-16 – A householder who went to hire laborers for his vineyard.
- Those who are invited to be joined to the Lord are expected to respond favorably, and to be prepared to stand in His presence. Matthew 22:2-14 – A king who made a marriage for his son.

- Those who are betrothed to Christ must stand the test of time, and be prepared when Jesus comes. Matthew 25:1-13 – Ten virgins who went to meet the bridegroom.

- The Divine manner is to distribute appropriate responsibilities, and hold men responsible for handling them appropriately. Matthew 25:14-30 – A man traveling into a far country, who called his servants and delivered unto them his goods: the talents.

- Spiritual growth cannot be facilitated or explained by earthly means. Mark 4:26-29 – A man who cast his seed into the ground, and it grew, he knew not how.

The Doctrine of the Kingdom

When we consider what is said about this kingdom, its centrality and significance become obvious.

- Men are to see and enter this kingdom while in this world (John 3:3,5; Acts 14:22).

- The conclusion of the life of faith involves an entrance into this everlasting kingdom (2 Pet 1:11).

As is apparent, “the things concerning the kingdom of God” pertain to what the Lord has purposed, has done, and is doing. These are not man-centered, but God-centered. They do not concentrate on the kingdom of men, but on the kingdom of God.

- This kingdom is related to righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit (Rom 14:17).

- It is associated with power, and not with word alone (1 Cor 4:20).

- The kingdom is what the saved inherit (1 Cor 6:9-10; 1 Cor 15:50; Gal 5:21; Eph 5:5; James 2:5).

- When we are delivered from the power of darkness, we are translated, or transferred into this kingdom (Col 1:13).

- The work of the Lord is associated with this kingdom (Col 4:11).

- We have been called into this kingdom (1 Thess 2:12).

- God works in our lives in order that we might be counted worthy of this kingdom (2 Thess 1:4-5).

- This kingdom is governed by Christ, and will become obvious when He appears (2 Tim 4:1).

- The Lord preserves His people to bring them safely to this kingdom (2 Tim 4:18).

- Righteousness is the scepter of this kingdom (Heb 1:8).

- In Christ, we have come to this kingdom, which coming is detailed as follows: “ye are come unto mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel” (Heb 12:24,28).

- We are companions with other saints in this kingdom (Rev 1:9).

- This kingdom is related to Divine strength and salvation (Rev 12:10).

As is apparent, “the things concerning the kingdom of God” pertain to what the Lord has purposed, has done, and is doing. These are not man-centered, but God-centered. They do not concentrate on the kingdom of men, but on the kingdom of God. While they do touch on what men should do, that is NOT their focus. This world is not their fundamental objective, nor the things that are in the world.

The kingdom of God is theo-centric, or God centered – not man centered. The works of God are primary (Acts 2:11; John 9:3; Psa 78:7). Eternal life itself is knowing God, and Jesus Christ whom He has sent. As it is written, “And this is life eternal, that they might know Thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou hast sent” (John 17:3). And again, “And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life” (1 John 5:20).

Preaching and teaching is powerful in direct proportion to the place of God Himself and the Lord Jesus Christ in what is said. That is something to think about!

DIVERS WERE HARDENED, AND SPOKE EVIL OF THE WAY

“ . . . But when divers were hardened, and believed not . . . ”

The proclamation of the truth and spiritual reasoning is like bright light that exposes “the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12). This is one reason why the Gospel is to be preached “to every creature,” or “all creation”

The proclamation of the truth and spiritual reasoning is like bright light that exposes “the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12). This is one reason why the Gospel is to be preached “to every creature,” or “all creation” NIV (Mk 16:16). This is also referring to preaching the Word, being instant – preached, “in season and out of season” (2 Tim 4:2).

The Parable of the Sower

Matthew, Mark, and Luke record our Lord’s parable of the sower. Mark states this parable was included “in His doctrine” (Mk 4:2-3). In this parable the Word of God is identified as what was being sown (Lk 8:11). The seed was sown in good soil – but not only in good soil. It was also sown on a pathway, trodden down by travelers. It was also sown in soil that had impenetrable rock just beneath the surface. The sower also sowed seed on ground that had thorn seeds that had not yet sprouted. Only the “good ground” yielded a crop. The seed that fell on the stony ground had no depth of earth, and hence its roots were shallow. When the sun rose, the plant withered and died because of a deficiency in its root system. When the seed sown on the thorny soil broke through the ground, the thorns grew up with it, and choked the life from it, so that it yielded no fruit.

The criticality of fruit is seen in the fact that this is why we have been joined to Christ – to bear fruit . As it is written, “Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God ” (Rom 7:4). This is not an option, but is rather a necessity. Further, the fruit is not for the individual who is in Christ – it is for God. It is not fruit for the institution, it is for God. Additionally, it is fruit that is intended to “remain” (John 15:16). While some teach that the intended “fruit” is other souls that are won to Christ, this is emphatically not a revealed definition of “fruit.” Paul sought to have some “fruit” among the Roman believers (Rom 1:13). That certainly was not new converts. Romans 6:22 suggests that the fruit is found in personal holiness: i.e. “ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life” (Rom 6:22). Romans 16:25-27 identifies an offering taken for the poor saints in Jerusalem as “fruit.” Galatians 5:22-23 defines the fruit as the work of the Spirit within the believer – “But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law” (Gal 5:22-23). When the Thessalonians supported Paul in his time of need, he referred to it as “fruit” (Phil 4:17). The epistle to the Hebrews refers to the “peaceable fruit of righteousness” (Heb 12:11). James also refers to “the fruit of righteousness” (James 3:18). Praise is referred to as “the fruit of our lips” (Heb 13:15). Where these qualities are not found, fruit is lacking, and the Seed of the Word has not been productive, as interpreted by this parable, for fruit bearing is the objective of planting the seed. Further, the preliminary growth of the seed is not called fruit.

The surface thinker might imagine that the seed should only be sown on the “good soil.” After all, flesh reasons, “What purpose is served by sowing seed where it cannot grow and bring forth fruit.” However, there is a purpose that is served when the word, particularly the Gospel, is preached to “every creature.” Hearts are made known that would not otherwise be apparent. One of the functions of the Word is to “discern the thoughts and intents of the heart” (Heb 4:12). The uncovering of these hearts does not always yield submissiveness and obedience. Sometimes it causes animosity and hostility to erupt – conditions that would never have been manifested if it were not for the powerful effects of the word. One purpose for the preaching of the Word is the uncovering of the hearts of men. Our text deals with this kind of revelation.

This exposes certain teachings and suggestions as nothing more than lies. Those who teach people to first make friends with potential converts, have only betrayed their ignorance. They imagine that fleshly friendship will decrease the possibility of being hardened to the Word of God. However, this is not at all the case, for the Word is the means of discovering a condition that cannot be changed by men. Others compromise the Word, withholding Divine requirements that they perceive as inhibitive to believing. Therefore, they emphasize the practical aspects of life in this world, and how the Lord can help the people in these areas: i.e. family life, finances, personal enslavements to sin, etc. But they do not tell the people what Jesus said about becoming His disciple, or being enrolled as one of His students, which equates to salvation (Matt 11:28-29). He affirmed that a person who does not forsake everything, including his own life, cannot be His disciple (Lk 14:33). He also said that anyone who does not take up their cross everyday and follow Him, cannot not be His disciple (Lk 9:28; 14:27). There was also the qualification of not allowing any earthly relationships to override one’s primary allegiance to Christ (Lk 14:26). These are among the appointed means through which the sincerity of human hearts is tested. If they are withheld from the people, a sincere response can really not be confirmed.

DIVERSE WERE HARDENED

“But when divers were hardened . . .” Other versions read, “were becoming hardened,” NASB “became obstinate,” NIV “stubbornly refused,” NRSV “were stubborn,” RSV “were hard-hearted,” BBE “became stubborn,” ESV “in their obstinacy,” NAB and “waxed hard.” PNT

The word “divers” refers to a certain class of people within a larger group of people. Here, the number of the people is not the point, but the trait that distinguishes them from the Others. The use of the word here is similar to the use of “some” in Romans 3:3: “What is SOME did not believe?” Coming from the same Greek work as our text (tinej), this word applied to the vast majority of the Jews who did not believe Jesus was the Christ. Even though they were in the majority, as appears to be the case in our text, they were actually the spiritual exception. In other words, in both Acts and Romans, the ones who did not believe were the ones who were “out of the way” (Rom 3:12). They are the ones who were wrong, even though they treated the believers as though they were the ones who had departed. From one perspective, it is true that believers in Christ are pilgrims and strangers in the world. However, from the standpoint of eternal destiny and the ultimate custodianship of the earth, they are the fundamental people, and all others are intruders – like “tares.” Those in Christ are the people God prefers, and for whom Jesus has prepared a place, that they may be with Him.

From one perspective, it is true that believers in Christ are pilgrims and strangers in the world. However, from the standpoint of eternal destiny and the ultimate custodianship of the earth, they are the fundamental people, and all others are intruders – like “tares.”

The word hardened is translated from a word meaning , “to make hard, to harden . . . to render obstinate, stubborn . . . to be hardened, I. e. become obstinate or stubborn,” THAYER and “literally cause one's heart to be hard, i.e. act stubbornly, refuse to change one's attitude (Heb 3.8); of God's judicial action, cause someone to be stubborn, make someone refuse to listen.” FRIBERG

This is a hardness that is a judgment – a judgment because of the condition of the heart, and the refusal to hear the word of the Lord – something initially known only to the Lord. It is written of this judgment, “Therefore hath He mercy on whom He will have mercy, and whom He will He hardeneth” (Rom 9:18). This kind of judgment is mentioned several times in Scripture.

- God hardened Pharaoh’s heart. “And the LORD said unto Moses, When thou goest to return into Egypt, see that thou do all those wonders before Pharaoh, which I have put in thine hand: but I will harden his heart, that he shall not let the people go . . . And He hardened Pharaoh's heart, that he hearkened not unto them; as the LORD had said . . . “ the Lord hardened Pharaoh’s heart . . . the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh. . . ” (Ex 4:21; 7:13; 9:12; 10:20,27; 11:10; 14:8).

- God hardened the heart of king Sihon. “But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the LORD thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day” (Deut 2:30).

- The Lord hardened the nations in the promised land, so Israel could destroy them. “There was not a city that made peace with the children of Israel, save the Hivites the inhabitants of Gibeon: all other they took in battle. For it was of the LORD to harden their hearts, that they should come against Israel in battle, that he might destroy them utterly, and that they might have no favor, but that he might destroy them, as the LORD commanded Moses” (Josh 11:19-20).

- When Israel wandered, the Lord hardened their hearts. “O LORD, why hast Thou made us to err from thy ways, and hardened our heart from thy fear? Return for Thy servants' sake, the tribes of Thine inheritance . . . For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered” (Isa 29:10; Isa 63:17).

A hard heart is obstinate, stubborn, perverse, and impenitent. It is disobedient, incorrigible, and rebellious. There is a sense in which its existence defiles sound reasoning. Those who are hard of heart cannot see that everything is against them, and there is no hope of ultimately overcoming what they are resisting. Those whose hearts are hardened are militant against the Lord and His people. However, opposition to God is totally futile, even though those who oppose Him cannot possibly concur with that judgment. It is the reality of God that they have questioned, not what He does.

Hardening is a condition imposed upon men who resist the truth. When individuals are hardened, they resist the truth, which is the appointed agent used to produced the hardening. Rather than being drawn by the truth, they are repelled by it.

The same truth that softens the heart of the elect hardens the heart of the reprobate – just as the same sun that melts ice hardens clay.

AND BELIEVED NOT

“ . . . and believed not . . . ” Other versions read, “did not believe,” NKJV “disobedient,” NASB

“refused to believe,” NIV “disbelieved,” RSV “would not give hearing,” BBE “continued in unbelief,” ESV “disobeyed,” GENEVA “disputatious,” MRD “into unbelief,” NJB “would not believe,” GNB and “did not obey.” LITV

The words “believed not” are translated from a single Greek word, hypei,qoun . The lexical meaning of this word is, “not to allow oneself to be persuaded; not to comply with; a. to refuse or withhold belief . . .to refuse belief and obedience,” THAYER “(1) disobey, be disobedient (Rom 11.30); (2) of the most severe form of disobedience, in relation to the gospel message disbelieve, refuse to believe, be an unbeliever,” FRIBERG “disobey; be an unbeliever,” USB “unwillingness or refusal to comply with the demands of some authority - 'to disobey, disobedience.” LOUW-NIDA

This word is different than the expression in Mark 16:16 – “he that believeth not shall be damned.” There the Greek word is avpisth,saj . The lexical meaning of the word is “to disbelieve, distrust, mistrust, ” THAYER “not believe, refuse to believe, be distrustful,” FRIBERG “fail or refuse to believe; prove or be unfaithful,” UBS and “to believe that something is not true - 'to not believe, to disbelieve, to not think to be true.” LOUW-NIDA

The two words just described are actually two individual actions. In this case, unbelieving, or not believing is more than the absence of faith. It is an independent act in which there is a refusal to believe. Not believing, as used in Mark 16:16 has a character of its own. It involves a judgment, an analysis, and a conclusion. It is something that Satan puts into the heart, and is the result of distorted reasoning.

The Greek word in our text [hypei,qoun] is used in varied forms sixteen times in Scripture, and is translated in a variety of ways, all carrying the same idea. The emphasis is placed on the process that leads to unbelief, and the rejection and disobedience that results from it.

The largeness of this word is confirmed by the scope of the words used to translate it into English.

- Believing not. Does not rely upon, trust in, or count to be credible.
- Continued in unbelief. Choose to remain in the same state occupied before they heard the Word.
- Did not put themselves under God’s rule. Did not associate the Word of God, or God Himself, with necessity or any sense of obligation.
- Disbelieved. Weighed what was said, found it contradicted their way of thinking, and therefore rejected it, assigning no value to it.
- Disputatious. Argued against the truth, and contended with it, seeking to justify their own way of thinking.
- Does not believe. Does not make the transition from unbelief to belief.
- Does not obey. Does not yield to the truth, do what it demands, or shape one’s life around it.
- Does not have faith. Faith never “comes” to the individual, is never “obtained,” and it is never “given” to them to believe.
- Give no attention to the word. The Word of God never got their attention. They were not intrigued or drawn by it, seeing nothing of critical value in it.
- Go against it. Not content to themselves reject the Word, they openly oppose it, and fight against it.
- Gone against God’s orders. Refused to be directed by the God of heaven.
- Hardened into unbelief. As the heart grew harder and more obstinate, it moved the individual into a state where they were dominated by unbelief.

- Hearts turned away. They thrust the Word from themselves as something putrid, offense, and obnoxious.

- Incredulous. Treats the message as something obscured, unbelievable, incredible, and beyond the limits of reason.

Even though strong arguments and proofs were declared, the heart was so hard it could not be persuaded to accept it or act upon it.

- Is not subject to. Does not consider himself to be subject to, or in need of, the Word delivered.

- Never believed. The person does not vacillate between belief and unbelief, but immediately determines to reject the Word he heard.

- Not under the rule of God. Sees self as thoroughly sufficient, and therefore cannot think of himself as being subject to the God who has spoken.

- Not hearken to His word. Does not take the word seriously, so as to respond correctly to it.

- Refused to obey. Will not yield to the demands of the word.

- Refused to accept. Will make no place in the mind or heart for the Word to remain.

- Refuses to believe. Will not trust in or rely upon.

- Reject. Thrusts the word from himself as something that is unfitting and obnoxious.

- Spurned God's message. Disdains the Word, holding it in contempt and disrespect.

- Went against His order. Did not think as the Word said, did not do what the Lord commanded, but rather walked in rebellion.

- Were not persuaded. Even though strong arguments and proofs were declared, the heart was so hard it could not be persuaded to accept it or act upon it.

- Were rebels. When the Word was heard they resisted, defied, withstood, renounced any allegiance to it.

- Without faith. Destitute of faith, without it, and dominated by unbelief.

- Would not believe. The will is involved in not believing. The preference is not for the Word of God, and there is no delight in it. It is rejected with determination.

- Would not be persuaded. Even though an extensive and holy effort was involved in the preaching and teaching of the Word, a carnal shield was raised up to deliberately hinder the entrance of the Word.

All of these things are involved in not believing. This is what makes it so serious. It involves a consideration of what is said, a judgment that it is not true, a rejection of it as valid, and a refusal to obey its demands. Therefore, the absence of faith among those who have been subjected to the good word of God is not an innocent thing. It is deliberate, sinful, and reprehensible to God Himself. Unbelief will exclude one from the salvation of God, and from dwelling forever with Him. It always leads to disobedience and rebellion.

'Belief and Obedience Are Expected

From one point of view God expects those who hear His word to believe it and obey Him. That is, Divine affirmations and exhortations are accompanied with enabling power. Let me emphasize that this is enabling power, so that the hearer can, from the normal point of view, do what is required by God. This kind of power might be called moral power, or power that renders the hearer capable of discerning good and evil, and acting accordingly. However, this power is not intended to force the hearer into obedience. The Psalmist prophesied of this kind of power in the 100 th Psalm: “Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power” (Psa 110:3).

However, as indicated earlier, that same word also discovers the thoughts and intents of the heart (Heb 4:12). Because this is “the day of salvation” (2 Cor 6:2), this powerful word can be resisted, and men can choose not to hear it or submit to it. Eventually, unless they repent of that rejection, as those hearers on the day of Pentecost, the judgment of God will eventually be focused on these people.

Men may grow accustomed to people not believing, or thrusting the Word from them (Acts 13:46), but God does not. I have noted, especially in recent years that preachers speak to professing Christians as though they really did not agree with God, and always resist the truth. Such represent this backward stance as the nature of the Christian – a normal condition. They affirm that “this is the way we are,” often even ascribing the trait to themselves. When referring to the examples of faith that are sited in Scripture, they say things like, “I certainly would not have responded in that way.” Other statements are, “We are just like the Israelites of old,” and “We find ourselves continually resisting the Word of God.” To offset this imagined condition, they speak of forming new habits, so we can live without thinking, something that is antithetical to the very nature of spiritual life. The notion of these false teachers is that we are trained to live godly like a dog is trained to do tricks. But this is an unethical way of behavior, for God is to be loved and served “with all the mind” (Matt 22:37), with a “willing mind” (1 Chron 28:9; 2 Cor 8:12), and with a renewed mind (Rom 12:2). Where the mind is not involved, the love of God and faith are not present, for both require reasoning, deliberation, and a willing response. The notion that living for God is something habitual is nothing more than ignorance veiled with ostentatious conjecture. God cannot be truly honored or served habitually. This is because salvation makes men free.

The Jews mentioned in our text had been blinded to the truth, so what they heard made no sense to them. They thought through what they had heard and concluded that it was not true. Hence they not only rejected it, refusing to obey the Lord, but also openly opposed what was said. That is still the trait of those with hardened hearts. It is essential for believers to recognize this and see it for what it really is.

THEY SPOKE EVIL OF THE WAY BEFORE THE MULTITUDE

“ . . . but spake evil of that way before the multitude . . . ” Other versions read, “publicly maligned the Way,” NIV “saying evil words about the way,” BBE “speaking evil of the way of God,” GENEVA “disparaged the way,” NAB “began attacking the way,” NJB “said terrible things about God’s way,” CEV and “said evil things about the way of the Lord.” GNB

It is interesting to note how the opposition of these Jews is stated. During Jesus’ ministry, the Jewish leaders took counsel “against Him ” (Matt 12:14; Mk 6:19; 14:56-57). The scribes and Pharisees sought to “find an accusation against Him ” (Lk 6:7). During His mock trial before Caiaphas, “ many other things blasphemously spake against Him ” (Lk 22:65).

However, in this text they “spake evil of that way before the multitude.” That is, there was a direction to Paul’s doctrine as well as specific and detailed content. The direction was heavenward. Mind you, what Paul preached was precisely what Moses and the Prophets said concerning the coming Christ. He continued this manner throughout his ministry. As the time drew near for his departure, he testified, “Having therefore obtained help of God, I continue unto this day, witnessing both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come” (Acts 26:22). There was nothing novel about Paul’s preaching. It did not reflect the values of contemporary society. It did not constitute a rebuttal to the social trends of the day. The foundation for his teaching was what God had foretold by His own prophets. Yet, even though these Jews had an intellectual acquaintance with the Scriptures, they were unable to correlate the doctrine of Paul with what their own Scriptures declared. Thus, they spoke “evil of the way” that was glaringly opposed to the way they thought.

Some Considerations

There are several considerations involved in the “way.” First, salvation constitutes one believers strangers and pilgrims in the world (1 Pet 2:11). Their primary citizenship is in heaven (Phil 3:21 NKJV). Redemption causes them to groan in their present bodies, longing for their new bodies, described as “a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens” (2 Cor 5:1). According to the word of their King, they are laying up for themselves “treasures¹ in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and thieves do not break through and steal” (Matt 6:20). They have a “hope which is laid up for” them “in heaven” (Col 1:5). They also have a “better and enduring substance in heaven” (Heb 10:34), and “an inheritance incorruptible and undefiled” is “reserved” in heaven for them (1 Pet 1:4).

Take heaven out of the scenario, and there is really no point to being a Christian. However, one would never suspect this is the case from the tone of today’s preaching and the life of the nominal Christian. A religion that is earth-centered now dominates Christendom. Experts in religion are generally billed as experts in life in this world. This is the result of a contemporary malignment of “the way.” In a way, we have experienced this in our fellowship here in Joplin. By subtle innuendo, the manner of our teaching has been generally rejected, and a more practical form of religion preferred. We have been depicted as a cult, and strange in our approach, even though we emphasize nothing that is not emphasized in Scripture, and has not been held consistently in historical and conservative Christianity.

Some Contemporary Sayings that Reflect This Mentality

“We need to take our religion outside of the four walls” [of the building where believers meet]. This assumes that true spirituality can be concealed, or hidden within institutional walls. It does not take into account the compelling nature of the newness of life.

We should expect our adversary the devil to be crafty in his opposition of “the way.” He will speak in such a manner as to cause intellectual confusion concerning the truth. His malignment of the way is often by innuendo and subtle suggestion, rather than outright opposition. Here are a few of the sayings that reflect opposition to “the way.” All of them confirm that the nature of the kingdom of God has not been discerned. It makes no difference what men say.

- “Don’t be so heavenly minded you are no earthly good.” This assumes that heavenly mindedness causes a person to be impractical, and oblivious to the necessities of life in this world. It does not take spiritual understanding into account.
- “We need to take our religion outside of the four walls” [of the building where believers meet]. This assumes that true spirituality can be concealed, or hidden within institutional walls. It does not take into account the compelling nature of the newness of life.
- “We need to make more friendships with those who are lost, so we can win them.” In this case, the statement assumes the lost are won by friendship, rather than beholding the light of spiritual life emanating from those who possess it. It is the unique lives of the saints that attracts humble and contrite hearts, not their camaraderie.
- “God wants you to be happy in the world, and have the best things possible.” There is absolutely no evidence in Scripture that any true perspective exists in this statement. We are candidly told that life beyond this world is the objective, and that, so far as this world is concerned, it involves a strait and narrow way. The value is to be set upon the kingdom of God and His righteousness – both of which are other-worldly (Matt 6:33).

Let it be clear, that these misconceptions are far beneath those of the Jews of our text. They did take the time to isolate themselves from society when they came into the synagogue. They did traffic in the Scriptures, faithfully reading them. Their lives did, so far as they were concerned, revolve around their religion. However, they had not viewed the Scriptures correctly, and became riveted to their religious tradition. That is what moved them to speak evil of “the way.”

As if that situation was not bad enough, an even more serious condition has arisen in our time. It is one that is not driven by a misapprehension of Scripture – or even religious tradition,

Now the church is faced with, what I would call, raw carnality – a form of religion that allows for, and attempts to explain, the outward expression of iniquity. Those who reflect the mind of the Lord on such outbreaks are viewed as intolerant and insensitive to the needs of people.

for, in the religious masses, there is not a high level of intelligence in either of those areas. Now the church is faced with, what I would call, raw carnality – a form of religion that allows for, and attempts to explain, the outward expression of iniquity. Those who reflect the mind of the Lord on such outbreaks are viewed as intolerant and insensitive to the needs of people. However, and make no mistake about it, such expressions are actually speaking evil of “the way.” They evidence the certain intolerance of the religious masses with the ways and purpose of God Almighty. This is precisely the reference of James when he said to professing believers, “Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God” (James 4:4). That saying is still true!

HE DEPARTED FROM THEM

“ . . . he departed from them . . . ” Other versions read, “withdrew from them,” NASB “left them,” NRSV “went away from them,” BBE “withdrew himself,” MRD “broke with them,” NJB “left the synagogue,” NLT and “separated himself from them.” AMPLIFIED

To the student of Scripture, this is not strange language – departing from a certain environment or region. It denotes the detection either of a lack of spiritual profitability, or a call to some other work. For example, when Jesus heard that John the Baptist was cast into prison in Judaea, “He departed into Galilee” (Matt 4:12). Another time, when the Lord knew the Pharisees were taking counsel against Him, “He withdrew Himself from thence” (Matt 12:15). When John the Baptist was slain and buried by his disciples, Jesus “departed thence by ship into a desert place apart” (Matt 14:13). Again, when a wicked and adulterous generation sought a sign from Him, “He left them and departed” (Matt 16:4). After being rejected by the Jewish leaders, and pronouncing judgment against Jerusalem, Jesus “departed from the Temple” (Matt 24:1). Yet another time, when being pressed by the multitudes. The Lord “departed into a solitary place” (Mk 1:35). After the feeding of the five thousand, Jesus “sent them away” and “departed into a mountain to pray” (Mk 6:46). After healing the vexed son of a certain father, the Lord “departed thence, and passed through Galilee, and He would not that any man knew it” (Mk 9:30). Again, when Jesus perceived that the people “would come and take Him by force, to make Him king, He departed again into a mountain himself alone” (John 6:15).

In Antioch, when the Jews raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas, they “shook off the dust of their feet against them, and came to Iconium” (Acts 13:51). In Athens, when the philosophers “mocked” him, “Paul departed from among them” (Acts 17:33).

The point is that there are people and environments who, because of their spiritual obtuseness, are no longer worthy of hearing the Word of God. In the words of Paul to such a group, “but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles” (Acts 13:46). Paul said of those who insisted on maintaining a form of godliness while rejecting its power, “from such turn away” (2 Tim 3:5). In my judgment this word is nearly altogether ignored.

At the precise point that hostility and friction cannot be subdued, leaving is the only alternative. It is to be understood that in such a case, the believers have not compromised their faith or refused to speak the truth of God. The departure is necessitated because of the fruitless environment, for “the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace” (James 3:18). Once again, the existence of hostility, or a lack of peace, can only be discovered against the background of the powerful and uncompromising declaration of truth.

HE SEPARATED THE DISCIPLES

“ 9b . . . and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.”

When Paul separated himself from the contentious environment of the synagogue, he did not leave alone. An environment that was unproductive for him, also lacked productivity for other believers. This is because all disciples draw their nourishment from the same supply. There are not contradicting statements or principles in the warehouse of truth. As it is written, in Christ “are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Col 2:3). None of those treasures are contradictory. None of them compete with one another. All of them are spiritually profitable, and cohere together with perfect consistency. No level of truth, if I may speak in such a manner, competes with another level. What is calculated for babes still has nourishment for the mature, and what is addressed to the mature has spiritual nutrients that can feed the young as well. Therefore the advanced Paul takes some spiritually young disciples with him, refusing to leave them in that stultifying environment.

HE SEPARATED THE DISCIPLES

“ . . . and separated the disciples . . . ” Other versions read, “withdrew the disciples,” NKJV “took away the disciples,” NASB “took the disciples with him,” NIV “taking the disciples with him,” NRSV “kept the disciples separate,” BBE “met separately with the disciples,” CSB “took his disciples,” GWN “took away the disciples,” NAU and “took his disciples apart.” NJB

Briefly consider the revealed objective for all apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastors and teachers. “And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, 1 for the work of the ministry, 2 for the edifying of the body of Christ: 3 till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, 4 unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: 5 that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; 6 but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: 7 from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, 8 maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love” (Eph 4:11-16).

• For the perfecting of the saints. This has to do with spiritual maturity. The target is for the child of God to grow up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15). There is no provision – absolutely none – in Christ Jesus for remaining juvenile and immature. Salvation does not sustain such a state. The grace of God is not calculated to leave one in that state. Faith has no quality that encourages immaturity or a lack of growth. Hope makes no contribution to such a condition. If the aim is to conform the sons to the image of Christ, this ought to be abundantly apparent. However, judging from the condition of the modern church, one would never suspect that this was the case. The church of our time, with exceedingly few exceptions, is a gigantic contradiction to this Ephesians text – all talk notwithstanding.

While every believer is at some point a novice, they are not to remain in that state. They are to be conversant with the things of God – able to perceive them, take them up, and handle them. Every member of Christ’s body who remains deficient in faith and the knowledge of the Son of God must grow out of that state.

For the work of the ministry. Other versions read, “equipping of the saints for the work of service,” NASB and “prepare God’s people for works of service.” NIV This is not a reference to community service or common philanthropic work. This has to do with ministries within the body of Christ, as the text will confirm in verses 15-16. Each member of Christ’s body is strategically, placed within the body by God Himself. As it is written, “But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18). It is their relationship to the other members of the body that is the point. They have been baptized by one Spirit into one body in order to be a means through which Christ ministers to His people (1 Cor 12:13). There is no such thing as a non-functioning member of Christ’s body. The point of the gifts given to the church (Eph 4:11) is to get them working productively and effectively.

- For the edifying of the body of Christ. Other versions read, “for the building up of the body of Christ,” NASB and “so that the body of Christ may be built up.” NIV This is not talking about numerical growth – although that may very well happen. This is addressing the matter of spiritual maturity – a state in which one can discern good and evil (Heb 5:14), and effectively minister to the children of God. Edification occurs when faith, hope, and love, are made stronger, and the individual members are able to stand against the wiles of the devil.

- Till we all come to the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God. Every person who does not grow up into Christ is a liability to the church. They are a portal through which Satan can work, for, by remaining in a state of childishness, they are a living contradiction of the Kingdom of God, which is as a mustard seed that begins small, yet grows into a large tree (Matt 13:31-32). The body of Christ is to be brought to a point where everyone can comprehend the things of God. An intelligent grasp of both the nature and direction of the Kingdom of God is to be possessed. There is only “one faith” (Eph 4:5), and while it may vary in degrees, it does not vary in nature. The “knowledge of the Son of God” is acquaintance with Him, so that His voice is known, and His ways discerned to some measurable degree. While every believer is at some point a novice, they are not to remain in that state. They are to be conversant with the things of God – able to perceive them, take them up, and handle them. Every member of Christ’s body who remains deficient in faith and the knowledge of the Son of God must grow out of that state. The gifts given to the church are designed to make that happen. Where it is not happening, either no true minister is present, or the minister has been recalcitrant to his revealed duty.

- Unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of Christ. The “perfect man” is the church aggregate: “till we all come . . . unto a perfect man.” Although comprised of individuals, the “church,” which is “the body” (Col 1:18), a single entity – “one body” (Eph 4:4). It is not that it ought to be “one body,” that is what it is . Its oneness is directly traced to the likeness of its members to the Head, which is Jesus Christ. Since no single member possesses all of the traits of Jesus, the aim is for each member to mature in that Divine quality that is most prominent in them. In other words, in their Divinely assigned capacity within the body of Christ, they are to conduct themselves as Jesus. That is the aim. In so doing, they will reflect their “measure of the stature of Christ.”

Each member is like a spiritual conduit through which spiritual nourishment is ministered to the brethren. Any kind of spiritual life that is unrelated to this objective is spurious and worthless.

That we be no more children. In Christ, simplicity and naivete are not friends. Because eternal life is knowing God and Christ (John 17:3), ignorance is a liability. The barrage of false teaching that originates with Satan and his hosts is especially hurled at those who are babes in Christ – those who are not grown up. In the initial phase of spiritual life, the Lord protects His children, making them stand (Rom 14:4), and gently leading and caring for them (Isa 40:11). However, there does come the time when they themselves must “stand against the wiles of the devil” (Eph 6:11). They must see through the errors to which they are subjected, and learn to “fight the good fight of faith,” laying “hold on eternal life” (1 Tim 6:12).

• Speaking the truth in love may grow up into Him. Other versions read, “holding the truth in love,” DARBY “doing the truth in charity,” DOUAY “follow the truth in love,” GENEVA “living the truth in love,” NAB “practicing the truth in love,” NET “live by the truth and in love,” NJB “being true in love,” YLT and “let our lives lovingly express truth [in all things, speaking truly, dealing truly, living truly].” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “speaking” has no true parallel in the English language. It does include the idea of speaking, but is not limited to that. The idea is that “truth is the element in which we are to live, move, and have our being.” PULPIT COMMENTARY Speaking the truth in love has nothing whatsoever to do with tone. Those who reject the truth because they do not like the way it has been said have revealed their own hearts, not the hearts of those who testified to them. In my judgment, the word “speaking” is used to accentuate the gifts the text states have been given to the church. They are all “speaking” gifts: “apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastors and teachers” (Eph 4:11). It is understood that those ministries can only be effective within the context of truth – truth that is lived out as well as spoken.

• Through Christ, the whole body is compacted together by the working of every part. As the “Good Shepherd,” Christ ministers to His people, feeding them and leading them (John 10:11-14; Heb 13:20). However, He does this through means. So far as His body is concerned, it is apparently most frequently, though not exclusively, through its various members. Each member is like a spiritual conduit through which spiritual nourishment is ministered to the brethren. Any kind of spiritual life that is unrelated to this objective is spurious and worthless.

• That an increase may be realized, which is defined as the body edifying itself in love. The “increase” of reference is not numerical growth. It is true numerical growth can take place in varied ways. This can take place exponentially – multiplication (Acts 6:1,7; 9:31 12:24), It can also range from “a great multitude” and “many” (Acts 17:4,12), to a household (Acts 16:15,34; 18:8), and even to a single individual (Acts 8:38-39). However, the “increase” mentioned in this text refers to spiritual maturity, or growing up into Christ “in all things.” It is increasing in faith, spiritual aptitude, and godly expression. This is the point at which the individual members [and, consequently] the whole body begins bringing forth “fruit unto God” – the revealed intention of it all (Rom 7:4).

Given these revealed objectives, precisely what kind of justification can be presented for remaining in a gathering where such things are not at all apt to happen? If there is only a “form of godliness that denies the power thereof,” are not God’s people told to “turn away” from such (2 Tim 3:5). Jesus did not remain where truth was not received (Matt 16:4; 21:15-17; Mk 12:13-14), nor did Paul and those with him (Acts 13:46,51; 18:6). In fact, since Jesus has been exalted into heaven, we have no example of any lengthy period during which any man of God sought to teach or direct those lacking a love for the truth. When stubborn unbelief rears its head and refuses to leave, the time has come for the man of God to move on! I understand that patience is required, as well as discernment of the true situation. Also, judgments cannot be made upon the basis of human opinion or conjecture. But eventually, unbelief will have the truth withdrawn from it, and woe to the person who insists on remaining united with those who refuse to be united to Christ through their rejection of the truth!

Thus, it makes perfect sense that Paul took the disciples and left the synagogue. Had there been a compelling interest in the truth of the Gospel, he would have rejoiced to stay. But such an environment was not present. In the interest of the disciples – who are the premier people before God – he moved to a place that was more conducive to collective teaching.

DAILY IN THE SCHOOL OF TYRANNUS

“ . . . disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.” Other versions read, “reasoning daily,” NKJV “had discussions daily in the lecture hall of Tyrannus,” NIV “argued daily,” NRSV “argued daily in the hall of Tyrannus,” RSV “holding daily dialogues in Tyrannus's yeshivah,” CJB “conducting discussions every day,” CSB “discoursed with them daily in the school of a man named Tyrannus,” MRD “addressing them every day,” NET “held daily discussions,” NLT and “he spoke there everyday.” CEV

The Greek word translated “school” is scolh/ / (schol-aa). It is another word that is a transliteration, where the letters are converted to English letters, rather than using a fixed English word. The lexical meaning of the word is, “freedom from labor, leisure” – in this case, a place for learning, as compared with working, THAYER “strictly freedom from occupation; hence, a place where there is leisure for learning, school, lecture hall,” FRIBERG “lecture hall,” UBS “strictly freedom from occupation; hence, a place where there is leisure for learning school, lecture hall,” LOUW-NIDA and “that in which leisure is employed, esp. a learned discussion, lecture . . . a place for lectures, a school,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

The Jewish Bible (CJB) refers to “ Tyrannus's yeshivah .” By modern definition, a “yeshivah” is: “1 – A school for talmudic study. 2 – An Orthodox Jewish rabbinical seminary. 3 – A Jewish day school providing secular and religious education.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

There has been a lot of speculation concerning Tyrannus and the school, or lecture hall, associated with his name. However, the bottom line is that we do not know anything certain about him, either from an historical point of view or that of the Scriptures – which here is our fundamental interest.

By way of comparison, we have in this text a sterling example of how the Gospel was spread. First, the disciples were removed from a contentious environment. Second, they were moved to a place in which discussion, debating, declaration, and reasoning could take place. Paul did not bring the disciples to a theater. He did not convene their gatherings in the marketplace, or a political arena. He gathered them in a place that was noted for learning and the weighing of ideas – in this case, inspired thoughts were revealed from heaven.

The point to be seen is that the preaching and teaching of Paul was set within a rational environment. It included thought, intelligent expression, discussion, and exposition. He did not operate in a atmosphere of entertainment or raw emotion. Chants, endless repetition, hype and other modes of mindless expression were foreign to everything we know of him. However, in our time, this is now a primary way of religious expression, and the more hype and emotion there is, the more people think the Lord is present. Ignorantly and without any Scriptural precedent or example, people speak of feeling the Lord's presence. A kind of group hypnosis is taking place that is being credited to God and the moving of the Spirit.

By way of comparison, we have in this text a sterling example of how the Gospel was spread. First, the disciples were removed from a contentious environment. Second, they were moved to a place in which discussion, debating, declaration, and reasoning could take place. Paul did not bring the disciples to a theater. He did not convene their gatherings in the marketplace, or a political arena. He gathered them in a place that was noted for learning and the weighing of ideas – in this case, inspired thoughts were revealed from heaven.

This kind of environment, particular in matters pertaining to life and godliness, is exceedingly strange in our time. In our text, the subject matter was “things concerning the kingdom of God” (19:8). When was the last time any nominal Christian even heard of such a thing? What professed ministry for the youth, or anyone else, has ever come to town with such an agenda? Something has happened in our time that is not only unlike the record of Divine workings recorded in the book of Acts, it bears not even the slightest resemblance to it!

The Example of Jesus and His Disciples

The manner of the kingdom is reflected in the ministry of Jesus to His disciples – particularly the twelve, whom He ordained to be “with Him” (Mk 3:14).

- Nine times it is written that Jesus “taught them” (Matt 5:2; 7:29; 13:54; Mk 1:22; 2:13; 4:2; 10:1; Lk 4:31; John 8:2). There are twelve direct references to Him “teaching” (Matt 4:23; 9:35; 21:23; 26:55; Mk 6:6; 11:49; Lk 5:17; 13:40,22; 21:37; 23:5).

- In addition to the above references, sixteen times it is written that Jesus “taught” (Mk 1:21,22; 9:31; 11:17; 12:35; Lk 4:15,31; 5:3; 6:6; 19:17; 20:1; John 6:59; 7:14; 8:2,20; 18:20).

- Twenty-three times it is written that Jesus “answered” someone while in dialog with them (Matt 12:39,48; 13:11,37; 15:3,13,24,26; 16:2; 19:4; 26:23; Mk 3:33; 6:37; 7:6; 9:12; 10:3; 14:20; Lk 8:21,50; 17:20; 19:40; 20:3; 23:3).

- Thirty-one times it is written that someone asked Jesus something (Matt 12:10; 17:10; 22:23,35; 27:11; Mk 4:10; 7:5,17; 9:11,28; 10:2,10,17; 12:18,28; 13:3; 14:61; 15:2,4; 7:36; 8:9,37; 11:37; 18:18; 20:21,27; 21:7; 22:64; 23:3; John 4:10; 9:2).

- The words, “Jesus said,” are recorded 129 times in the Gospels. “Jesus spoke” are recorded nine times. In the Gospels there are 318 references to “sayings.”

- The Gospels also contain thirty-seven references to preaching (“preach,” “preached,” and “preaching”).

In view of these rather cursory observations, it certainly should not surprise us that one of the three major gifts in the church is that of “teacher,” described as “third,” and only preceded by two other teaching ministries, “apostles and prophets” (1 Cor 12:28).

Paul Followed the Kingdom Manner

In separating the disciples to a place conducive to reasoning and learning, Paul followed the Kingdom manner. If eternal life is knowing God, and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3), and if Jesus has come and given us an understanding that we might know Him (1 John 5:20), then what can really be said about an approach to religion that leaves the people in a perpetual state of ignorance? If the gatherings of professed Christians, together with the literature they read, and the songs they sing, do not increasingly clarify the truth to their hearts, how can it be possible that Jesus is among them? With very few exceptions, did Jesus ever come to a city, town, or village, and never teach? He taught in the synagogues (Lk 4:15), in the Temple (Mk 12:35), in the wilderness (Mk 8:4-5), by the sea side (Mk 13:2), in the desert (Mk 6:31-34), and even while sitting on a well in Samaria (John 4:6-26). Why would anyone associate Jesus with activities that excluded teaching? What is there about Scripture or the revealed intent behind salvation that would lead a person to such an erroneous conclusion? It seems apparent to me that such notions have been birthed in Satan’s domain!

FOR TWO YEARS THEY HEARD THE WORD OF THE LORD JESUS

“ 10 And this continued by the space of two years; so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.”

This being the case, we have daily sessions, each one lasting around five hours, for at least seven-hundred and twenty-eight days (5 hrs X 7 X 104)! That would be a total of three thousand, six hundred, and forty hours!

Here is a text that cannot be comprehended by those attracted to brevity, and who are accustomed to brief periods of professed spiritual concentration. Over the years I have observed countless numbers of professed Christian works that were not sustained. Keep in mind that our text is speaking of something that took place every day: “reasoning daily in the school of Tyrannus.” NKJV Based on some Jewish tradition, the Amplified Bible reads, “holding daily discussions in the lecture room of Tyrannus reasoning from about ten o’clock until three.” One would be hard pressed to find professed Christians subjected to five hours of teaching and spiritual reasoning in an entire week. Even the Lord’s day, the accumulative time Christians spend together does not approximate five hours, and even then, their gatherings do not major on teaching. Well, in this text, we are being exposed to real spiritual life, the kind of appetite that it promotes, and the caliber of true spiritual leaders and learners.

THIS CONTINUED BY THE SPACE OF TWO YEARS

“And this continued by the space of two years . . .” Other versions read, “this continued for two years,” NKJV “this took place for two years,” NASB “this went on for two years,” NIV “this was done by the space of two years,” GENEVA and “this happened for two years.” YLT

The activity termed “this” refers to the daily reasoning in the school of Tyrannus. I can only conceive of the Sabbath day being the exception to the “daily” activity – and even then, that was what took place in the synagogues. This being the case, we have daily sessions, each one lasting around five hours, for at least seven-hundred and twenty-eight days (5 hrs X 7 X 104)! That would be a total of three thousand, six hundred, and forty hours!

Let’s put this matter in the context of our times. It is commonly said that the average sermon is 20-25 minutes long. Let us be charitable, and say thirty minutes, although there are not many popular sermons that are that long. The nominal Christian hears one of these a week. Using that average, the time Paul continued this daily activity would amount to 7,280 sermons. For those exposed to a single sermon a week, that would account for one hundred and forty years . For those bold souls who hear one thirty minute sermon, and attend one 45 minute class a week, it would translate into 2,912 Sundays, or fifty-six years.

Of course, the gatherings no doubt grew, as will be evident by the remainder of this text, so that everyone was not there all of the time. But many from Ephesus were probably there daily. At any rate, we are being exposed to what really does happen when people receive the love of the truth and desire “the sincere milk of the Word” (1 Pet 2:2). Where there is little or no spiritual appetite, how can the presence of life from God be confirmed – either on an individual or group level. Mind you, I am not saying this to judge people – only to say that a lack of spiritual appetite throws one’s profession into the arena of question. God is the One who will ultimately pronounce the verdict. However, when He does, it will not be in accordance with one’s profession, but with the reality of the case.

Our own assembly has frequently been charged with being too lengthy. What would such poor souls say of daily gathering that were held for five consecutive hours, involving extensive in-depth teaching, discussion, and meaningful dialog?

As if this were not enough, is there anyone who imagines that Paul delivered the same discourse every day, or led a discussion of the same subject. Can any person of sound mind read the Gospel’s and conceive of a Jesus that repeatedly taught the same thing? Is there any Epistle that contains intellectual repetition? Where have the notions arisen that suppose the things of God can be discerned by a momentary and unsustained exposure to them? I think I know their source, and it is not from heaven!

ALL THEY THAT DWELT IN ASIA

“ . . . so that all they which dwelt in Asia heard. . . both Jews and Greeks.” Other versions read, “all who lived in Asia . . . both Jews and Greeks,” NASB “all the Jews and the Greeks who lived in the province of Asia . . . both Jews and Greeks,” NIV “all the residents of Asia, both Jews and Greeks,” NRSV “all who were living in Asia . . . Greeks as well as Jews,” BBE “who resided in [Proconsular] Asia, both Jews and Gentiles,” MRD “all the inhabitants of the province of Asia heard the word of the Lord, Jews and Greeks alike,” NAB and “people throughout the province of Asia-- both Jews and Greeks.” NLT

What is called “Asia” in Scripture came to be known as Asia Minor. The land mass covered was over 1,800 miles from east to west, and about 700 miles from north to south. That is approximately two-and-one half times the width of the State of Texas. The Asia of the New Testament Scriptures was about 1,260,000 square miles. Texas has 266,853 square miles.

The Britannica Encyclopedia says of the region, “Asia was a peaceful province and was under senatorial jurisdiction, governed from Ephesus by a proconsul of consular rank (under the republic the governor had usually been a former praetor). The provincial assembly, called the koinon of Asia, to which the cities sent representatives, met annually in different cities, chose the officials known as Asiarchs, passed resolutions, made appeals, and sent deputations on provincial matters.

The great cities of Asia were leading educational and cultural centres in the Eastern Roman Empire. Important Christian communities and bishoprics grew up within the province, as did important heresies, such as Montanism. BRITANNICA 2008, ANCIENT ROMAN PROVINCE OF ASIA

Now, our text says that “all they which dwelt in Asia heard . . . both Jews and Greeks.” This took place while Paul was reasoning and teaching every day in Ephesus. This rapid and thorough spread of the word was not due to the evangelistic travels of Paul! In the most favorable stance, representatives from Asia had to make a trip to the capital city of Ephesus and be exposed to what he was saying. They had to come to him. He did not go to them. Further, it could not be that in his previous trips people from Asia had been exposed to his preaching, for he had been “forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia” (Acts 16:6). Some kind of Asian migration took place during those two years that was of an epochal nature.

This should not surprise us, for the Queen of Sheba came from afar to hear the wisdom of Solomon (1 Kgs 10:1-13; Matt 12:42). When John the Baptist came preaching, the people came to him (Matt 3:5). When Jesus preached in Galilee multitudes came from Decapolis, and beyond Jordan, the border of the promised land (Matt 4:25). His fame spread to Syria, and they brought the sick to Him (Matt 4:24). There are also other occasions when someone was “brought” to Jesus, the people bringing the needy where Jesus was ministering (Matt 9:2,32). In fact, as with John the Baptist, the people who wanted to hear Jesus had to go where He was. There were times when Jesus went out of His way to minister to a single individual (Lk 7:7-17; Matt 15:21-29; Mk 5:1-21). However, this was not His normal manner. With these exceptions, people generally had to go to Him to obtain the blessing. In fact He urged the multitudes to do precisely that: “Come unto Me” (Matt 11:29).

Following the martyrdom of Stephen, when the believers were scattered in persecution the believers in Jerusalem were dispersed, except for the apostles (Acts 8:1). They remained in Jerusalem to establish the disciples, and as a point of contact for questions that arose (Acts 8:14,25; 15:2). As the Gospel began to spread throughout the world, the synagogues became primary places that were visited – places where even Gentiles who were seeking the Lord gravitated (Acts 6:9; 9:20; 13:5,14-15,42; 14:1; 15:21; 17:1,10,17; 18:4,19,26; 19:8).

In his letter to the Corinthians, Paul postulated someone unlearned or an unbeliever – we presume an inquiring one – who came in among believers when they were gathered together in one place (1 Cor 14:23-25).

Now, in our text, Paul moves to a specific location that became a sort of base for his daily reasoning and teaching. In this case, there was no need to launch a missionary effort to penetrate other regions, even though, under the administration of the Holy Spirit, special initiatives were directed (Acts 13:2). This holy methodology was successful because something of substance was being taught. A vast region was finally permeated with the Gospel because representatives from that region, like the Queen of Sheba either went to inquire of Paul, or were providentially directed to him during some trip to Ephesus – like the Jew from around the world were directed to Peter and the apostles on the day of Pentecost.

Among other things, this indicates that Paul was not delivering a provincial message, or one tailored only for the community in which he was located. What do you suppose inquiring brethren from some foreign country would hear were they to enter the average Christian assembly in our own town –or any city in our country.

What This Means

Among other things, this indicates that Paul was not delivering a provincial message, or one tailored only for the community in which he was located. What do you suppose inquiring brethren from some foreign country would hear were they to enter the average Christian assembly in our own town –or any city in our country. On any given Lord’s day they might hear anything from a political speech to teaching on the family, or how to be successful, or how to think positively. At any rate, it would not be a message that could easily transport to any region of the world – which would mean it was not Gospel, which is intended for all the world. However, should a person come from any section of Asia to the school of Tyrannus and hear the reasoning of Paul, it would be eternally profitable. That also means God would bless what was said, and it would work mightily through those who took it back to their homeland.

Seeking After the Truth

As is confirmed in this text, one of the first proofs of sincerity and a spiritually inquiring mind is taking advantage of the opportunity to hear truth. If Jesus was in the city, it was on the part of wisdom to see to it that you heard Him. If it was known that Paul and Barnabas were going to be in the synagogue of Antioch on the next Sabbath, truly seeking people would be there (Acts 13:42). Throughout my life I have made it practice to take every possible advantage of hearing a man of God who was noted for declaring spiritually insightful and pertinent things. The tragedy of the whole circumstance is that such men are exceedingly rare. Mediocrity presently reigns in the professing church. In my judgment, this is why Christianity is not spreading in the nations formerly known for being Christian. When the message is, at the very best, weak, the blessing of God will not be upon it.

THE WORD OF THE LORD JESUS

“ . . . the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks.” Other versions read, “the word of the Lord,” NASB “the message about the Lord,” CJB and “the Word of the Lord [concerning the attainment through Christ of eternal salvation in the kingdom of God].” AMPLIFIED

The term “word” is translated from the Greek word lo,gon , which has the following lexical meaning: “things which are put together in thought, as of those which, having been thought I. e. gathered together in the mind, are expressed in words . . . a word which, uttered by the living voice, embodies a conception or idea,” THAYER In the Greek language, and as used here, synonyms are prophecy, command, report, message, teaching, declaration, statement, and discourse. Synonyms of the English term are announcement, declaration, and pronouncement.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

In our time there are vast bodies of Christendom that do not have a valid message, announcement, or declaration . A valid message is not one that centers in humanity, or the circumstances of men. It is not the announcement of what men could be, or even what they ought to be. Such words are often necessary, but they are never the core of what is to be made known. From the true perspective, a “word” that states you can live a happy life, or can have a successful marriage, or can have all of your troubles removed, is really no word at all. It is true there is a place for directing people into more proper and beneficial ways of living – but that is only after the real message has been declared AND received.

Our text specifies the kind of word that was made known throughout all Asia: “the word of the Lord Jesus.” Modern translations leave out the word “Jesus,” but they have certainly not done the readers a favor by doing so. Jesus IS the subject of the word delivered, for God has no word to speak to men today that does not relate directly to, and is spoken by, the Lord Jesus Christ. As it is written, “God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also He made the worlds” (Heb 1:1-2).

“The word of the Lord Jesus” is a message that centers in Jesus Christ. It declares who He is, why He came, what He did, and what He is doing. It affirms His reign or Sovereignty, and declares His objectives. It announces His victories, accomplishments, present activities, and what He will do. It affirms what He did among men, what He did to Satan, and what He is doing for men. It announces His relationship to God the Father, why that relationship exists, and what is being accomplished by it.

My Own Experience

Beginning with my personal commitment to Christ and spiritual consistency, I spent a significant time among Christian preachers and teachers. From sixteen years old until this day (58 years) this has been my preferred environment. I made it a point to hear what I considered to be insightful preachers and teachers. I subjected myself to the literature recommended by these men. I spent my quality time with the people of God and in activities I felt would advance my faith and knowledge of God. Of course, I was acquainted with many aspects of the truth, and experienced some measure of spiritual growth, for which I am thankful. No one who knew me thought I was not serious about the Lord or was not wholly devoted to what I conceived to be His will.

My point is that the environment in which I had chosen to dwell was actually a spiritual inhibition. I had to leave it before I could advance further in the faith. This did not involve the condemnation of anyone, for that is not my prerogative. However, it did involve the assessment and discernment of faith, and the resolve to continue to pursue the Lord at any cost.

Yet, it was not until I was in my mid-twenties that it began to register upon my spirit that I was really not focused upon the Lord Himself. As I approached the later twenties, I sensed that I had really not been preaching or teaching about God Himself – His purpose, objectives, His character, and His will. I was convinced that after all of my study, and all of the things I had heard, that I actually knew very little about the Lord Jesus Christ, what He had accomplished, and what He was doing now. At this point, I turned to my father, whom I had discerned while yet young was quite different from the supposedly religious elite among whom I had walked, and by whom I had been taught. He always emphasized faith, the knowledge of God, and the purpose of God. For the next forty years we labored together. At the first, there was a sense in which we could only fellowship extensively with each other, with a few scattered souls to which we had rare access. However, slowly but surely, we were part of a growing nucleus of kindred spirits. Within that context, spiritual understanding increased on a daily basis, and I began to see that like David, my feet had been set in a “large room” (Psa 31:8). To this very day, this glorious expansion in perception has not ceased. Rarely do I have a day when some new vista of truth is not uncovered to me – something that was under my nose all the time.

My point is that the environment in which I had chosen to dwell was actually a spiritual inhibition. I had to leave it before I could advance further in the faith. This did not involve the condemnation of anyone, for that is not my prerogative. However, it did involve the assessment and discernment of faith, and the resolve to continue to pursue the Lord at any cost. The church is intended to provide an environment in which the saints may grow up into Christ in all things. It makes no difference if they are meeting in the school of Tyrannus (Acts 19:9), the apparently larger surrounding of the Corinthian assembly (1 Cor 11:20; 14:23), or the home of Aquila and Priscilla (Rom 16:3-5). When environs of this sort are found, God will see to it that increase takes place. The report of faith and love will go out, and inquiring souls will in some way gravitate to those surroundings.

Our text is a sterling example of the effectiveness of spiritual insight and focus coupled with godly wisdom. One environment had to be forsaken in favor of another. When this took place, something happened that could not possibly have been realized in a purely institutionalized setting. Within two years, without any revealed outreach-plan, all of Asia heard the proclamation or message of Jesus!

GOD WROUGHT SPECIAL MIRACLES BY THE HANDS OF PAUL

“ 11 And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul.”

Once again, the environment was everything! For example, it is said of Jesus’ ministry in “His own country . . . “And He could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them” (Mark 6:5). Matthew says of the occasion, “And He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief” (Matt 13:58). This was not the case in our text. Rather, extraordinary things took place.

SPECIAL MIRACLES

“And God wrought special miracles . . . ” Other versions read, “unusual miracles,” NKJV “extraordinary miracles,” NASB “no ordinary miracles,” DARBY “no small miracles,” GENEVA “very great miracles,” MRD “remarkable . . . miracles,” NJB “mighty works also – not common,” YLT “very unusual miracles,” IE “most unusual demonstrations of power,” PHILLIPS and “unusual and extraordinary miracles.” AMPLIFIED

Rendered literally, the phrase “special miracles” is “not the casual or ordinary kind.” INTERLINEAR Robertson provides the following explanation: “Powers not the ones that happen by chance, not the ordinary ones.” ROBERTSON’S WORD PICTURES Vine’s Greek Dictionary says of this word, “not common or ordinary.”

This is not a comparison of the works of God with the works of men. From that vantage point, all of God’s works are extraordinary, for none of them can be done by men. Here the idea is that these were miracles that God did not ordinarily do through anyone. They were not the way that He commonly worked through His people.

The Context of the Events

The context of this phenomenal outbreak of miracles was not a special healing service! Rather, it was daily sessions in which reasoning and teaching took place. A certain spiritual environment existed in the school of Tyrannus that solicited, as it were, the attention of heaven. Things that did not ordinarily occur began to take place – “special miracles.”

The Attempt to Make the Extraordinary Ordinary

There appears to be a tendency in religious flesh to make the extraordinary ordinary. It has become common in some circles to talk about “your miracle,” and to speak as though the environment of faith is always bathed in the miraculous. But this is not at all the case, and it is wrong to lead people to believe that it is.

The very man of whom we are reading wrote of times when he did not experience extraordinary Divine intervention: “Are they ministers of Christ? (I speak as a fool) I am more; in labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness” (2 Cor 11:23-27). Again he wrote, “For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant of our trouble which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life” (2 Cor 1:8). All of this occurred WHILE he was doing the will of the Lord. They also took place while his word was not as successful as it was in Ephesus.

This Divine arrangement eliminates casual and disinterested disciples from involvement in the work of the Lord. There are holy activities in which those who are not wholly devoted to the Lord cannot participate.

In the above trials the point was getting through them, not avoiding them. It was living by faith in the trial instead of being delivered from the trial. In their own measure, every believer experiences such things, when it appears as though the extraordinary is not happening at all. Yet, behind the scenes, the Lord is sustaining the soul, nourishing the believer, managing their temptations, and refusing to allow Satan to test them beyond their capacity.

There are times, however, like our text, when the arm of the Lord moves in an extraordinary manner. In my judgment, these are occasioned by the insightful, and corresponding extraordinary, exposition of the truth of God. This is also accompanied by a unusual and favorable response to that truth. Jesus indicated that a “wicked and adulterous generation” was wasting their time seeking any sign, to say nothing of a special one (Matt 12:39). The only sign He gave such a generation was His resurrection from the dead, which no mortal being saw. It was an unseen sign, with only the evidence of a living Jesus being proof that He was risen – and even that was seen only by witnesses chosen by God, and there was not a person among them who was not already a disciple of Jesus (Acts 10:40-41; 1 Cor 15:4-8).

THE HANDS OF PAUL

“ . . . by the hands of Paul.” Other versions read, “through Paul.” NIV “By Paul’s hands,” CSB “gave Paul the power,” NLT “using Paul to perform,” IE “through Paul’s instrumentality.” WEYMOUTH

The phrase “by the hands of” equates to through the instrumentality of. It is not the same as the laying on of hands, for these miracles were not wrought by a direct confrontation of Paul. When it comes to the work of God, the Head of the body works through the body – through those members who have a secure and stable connection with Him. Colossians refers to this as the members who are “holding the Head,” (Col 2:19), from which nourishment is “ministered.” This Divine arrangement eliminates casual and disinterested disciples from involvement in the work of the Lord. There are holy activities in which those who are not wholly devoted to the Lord cannot participate. Thus, Paul is affirmed to be the appointed instrument through whom the Lord wrought “special miracles.”

Even with these considerations, there is no guarantee that faithful disciples will be able to work miracles. John the Baptist, for example, who towered above all other men prior to Christ (Matt 11:11), “did no miracle” (John 10:41). As already pointed out, there are also cities and regions in which “special miracles” cannot be done because of the environment (Mk 13:58). The word “special” means precisely that – “special.” This is something strictly controlled by the Lord Jesus. The government or will of men cannot bring such things into the world. We are to be occupied with other things: like seeking “first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness” (Matt 6:33). That focus will shape how we think, how we speak, how we work, and how we function within the body of Christ.

FROM HIS BODY WERE BROUGHT HANDKERCHIEFS OR APRONS

“ 12 So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them.”

This is something men cannot make happen, although there are some who make a valiant attempt to do so.

What we are reading is a report of what the God did: “And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul.” It involves His ways which are “past finding out” (Job 9:10; Rom 11:33). This is part of His way that is “in the sea,” and His path that is in “great waters” (Psa 77:19). This is something men cannot make happen, although there are some who make a valiant attempt to do so. They anoint cloths, pray over them, and send them hundreds of thousands of people. But the testimonies of anything actually being accomplished are extremely rare, and some of them are even questionable. This is not the kind of thing we are reading about. Paul is not said to have prayed over these articles, or anointed them with oil, or laid them before the Lord for special power. The report is strait forward, and is to be received precisely as it is written. Remember, this was something “special.”

HANKERCHIEFSAND APRONS

“So that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons . . .” Other versions read, “handkerchiefs and aprons that had touched him,” NIV “that had touched his skin,” NRSV “were carried away from his body,” RSV “bits of linen and clothing from his body,” BBE “napkins and aprons were brought from his body,” DARBY “face cloths or work aprons,” CSB “the clothes on his body, napkins and rags,” MRD “handkerchiefs or parts of his clothing,” LIVING “towels or aprons . . . which Paul had handled,” WEYMOUTH and “handkerchiefs or small-clothes which had been in contact with his body.” AMPLIFIED

The lexical meaning of “handkerchief” is “a cloth for wiping perspiration from the face and for cleaning the nose,” THAYER “face cloth,” FRIBERG and “small piece of cloth used as a towel, napkin, or face cloth - 'towel, napkin, handkerchief, face cloth.” LOUW-NIDA These were not tiny sanitized cloths cut from a large bolt of material. They were pieces of material that Paul had used – probably to cleanse and dry his face. They were apparently not sent out to individuals, but were taken from Paul, perhaps involving several different people.

The meaning of “aprons” is “a narrow apron, or linen covering, which workman and servants were accustomed to wear,” THAYER and “a linen covering used by workers and servants to cover the front of the body to protect clothing.” FRIBERG Again, these were not made especially to be a media through which miracles were wrought. There is no indication that they were put into a big pile and prayed over, or anointed with oil. These were everyday articles that were used in the workshop – perhaps on occasions when Paul made tents. They were things that had touched Paul’s body in the daily course of his life.

You can judge for yourself whether it is intelligent to suppose that there were hundreds of these handkerchiefs and aprons. The wording of the text (“from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs and aprons”) it appears that certain people had charge of these articles, and that they were relatively few in number. The text does not say they laid the cloths on the sick people, although I suppose that is possible.

Let it be clear that this is not a statement of apostolic doctrine, although certain within the Christian community have done their best to make it so. This is a report of something “special” – something that God “wrought,” or caused to happen. Those who insist on standardizing reports, making binding precedents of them, have seriously erred – and that is the most gentle way to say it.

These unusual works are similar to the report of Peter. It is recorded that the people brought sick people into the streets of Jerusalem, laying them on beds and couches, “that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them” (Acts 5:15). I have never yet heard of those who make a practice of sending out prayer miracle-working prayer cloths capitalizing on their shadow. The occasion reported in the fifth chapter of Acts also took place during a remarkable outbreak of preaching and believing. The believers were “all together with one accord,” no one who lacked faith dared to join themselves to them, “multitudes both of men and women” were being “added to the Lord” (Acts 5:13-14). That is precisely the context of our text!

DISEASES DEPARTED

“ . . . and the diseases departed from them . . .” Other versions read, “diseases left them,” NKJV “their illnesses were cured,” NIV “their diseases went away from them,” BBE “they would recover from their ailments,” CJB “their sicknesses would be cured,” GWN “they were healed of their diseases,” NLT and “they were healed.” LIVING

I continue to be chagrined by the liberty that some feigned translators take with the text of scripture. I cannot conceive of the Holy Spirit of God inspiring loose language lacking the precision that characterizes the Godhead. The text states that the diseases “departed.” This word is translated from the Greek word avpalla,ssesqai . The meaning of this word is “to remove . . . to be removed, to depart,” THAYER “set free, release . . . go away.” FRIBERG The thing to which this word is applied is not the diseased people, but the “diseases” themselves. This is why “healed” or “freed” is not proper. Those words apply to the people, not the disease. The text means precisely what it says. The diseases left the people, doing so because of the handkerchiefs and aprons that were “brought” to the sick.

The text suggests those with disease did not merely have an infection, or some fleshly debility. They were under the control of something – in this case, “diseases.” I am not prepared to say that all sickness of this order. Timothy, for example, had some reoccurring infirmities or illnesses that Paul said could be addressed by using a “little wine” (1 Tim 5:23). Paul had “infirmities” – also translated sickness and weakness – with which he was willing to live. They became the portal through which Divine power was given to him – and he know it (2 Cor 12:5-10). The person who can distinguish such things is blessed indeed.

This record is similar to the report of Jesus healing Peter’s mother-in-law. She was sick with a severe fever when Jesus confronted her. Jesus came and “took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her , and she ministered unto them” (Mark 1:31).

EVIL SPIRITS WENT OUT

“ . . . and the evil spirits went out of them.” Other versions read “came out of them,” CSB “wicked spirits went out of them,” DARBY “wicked spirits,” DOUAY “demons also went out,” MRD “evil spirits left them,” NIB “evil spirits were expelled,” NLT “went forth from them,” YLT and “demons within them came out.” LIVING

Scripture often equates demons with “evil spirits.”

Women with a vexed daughter

Matt 15:22 –a devil (demon)

Mark 7:25 – unclean spirit

Gadarene Demoniac

Matt 8:28 – devils (demons)

Mark 5:2 – unclean spirit

Father’s son, vexed with

Lk 9:42 – devil (demon), and unclean spirit

Mark 9:20 – spirit

Mark 9:25 – dumb and deaf spirit

Evil spirits, or demons, have power to bind people with certain infirmities. Some of them that are specified include the following.

In the matter demons or evil spirits, men, of themselves, are impotent. However, in the Kingdom of God, such power and spiritual aptitude can be given to men that a cloth with which they wiped their sweated brow can cause an evil spirit to loose his hold oppressed souls.

Caused a man to be out of his mind, cut himself, and be strong enough to break chains. A legion of demons possessed this man, which were at least 2,000 in number, and possibly more. Matthew says there were two men, while Mark focuses on only one of them (Mk 5:2-20; Matt 8:28-34).

- Caused a man to be dumb, unable to speak (Matt 9:32-33).
- Caused a man to be blind and dumb (Matt 12:22).
- Caused a young girl to be “vexed,” also causing her to be “unclean” in some unspecified way (Matt 15:22-29).
- Caused a young boy to be lunatic, throwing him into seizures in which he foamed at the mouth and wallowed on the ground. Also compelled the boy to jump into fire and water, though unable to take his young life. Even when his father was bringing him to Jesus, this spirit threw the boy on the ground, throwing him into a convulsion (Matt 17:14-18; Mk 9:17-27; Lk 9:37-42).
- Caused a man in a synagogue to be unclean in an unspecified way. Before coming out, the spirit shrieked out and threw the man to the man down in the presence of the people (Mk 1:23-26; Lk 4:33-35).
- Jesus cast seven demons out of Mary Magdalene. The effect they had upon her is not made known (Mk 16:9; Lk 8:2-3).
- A “spirit of infirmity” caused a woman to be bowed over, unable to straighten herself, for a period of eighteen years (Lk 13:11-13).

In the matter demons or evil spirits, men, of themselves, are impotent. However, in the Kingdom of God, such power and spiritual aptitude can be given to men that a cloth with which they wiped their sweated brow can cause an evil spirit to loose his hold oppressed souls. In such a case the powers of darkness are not only held at bay, they are forced to let go of those whom they possessed.

Keep in mind that this power was given to a single man. He did not have to go to the oppressed. Someone else could take cloth that had touched his body, and invade the citadels of dark power, so that a vast region – Asia Minor – could be blessed.

Who is able to estimate what a single person can experience from God when wholly given to Him? And what is the potential of a vast number of disciples who could everything but loss for Christ Jesus? Let every soul declare war on mediocrity and distraction, giving themselves wholly to the Lord. Pondering on these arresting thoughts will bless your soul, challenging your mind, warming your heart, and opening new vistas of possibility.

CONCLUSION

Once again, I want to emphasize that we are not reading the record of an institution. This is not about institutional growth, the mere amassing of numbers, or the living out of a human methodology. This is the inspired record of Jesus building His church. It is the account of the advancement and maturity of spiritual life, pressing toward the mark, and fighting the good fight of faith. It testifies of obstacles being overcome, counting everything loss for Christ, and increasing in the knowledge of God. Blessed is the person who sees these things and determines to participate in them. Such souls will realize unparalleled joy and satisfaction.

Lesson #80

THE RESPONSE OF THE EPHESIANS

“ 19:13 Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth. 14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so. 15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye? 16 And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded. 17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified. 18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds. 19 Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. 20 So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed. ” (Acts 19:13-20)

INTRODUCTION

This text reports a rare occasion when some wandering Jewish exorcists took it upon themselves to expel a demon in the name the Jesus whom Paul preached. Here we have a remarkable parallel to many contemporary practices that bring to men a religion contained in empty and powerless words. Although religious tradition allows for such lifeless expressions, even the hierarchy of Satan himself does not honor such efforts. Only men, easily swayed because of their unbelief, are moved by such theatrics. Heaven is certainly not deceived by such religious antics, and, as this text makes abundantly evident the powers of darkness mock them in derision.

In Ephesus pretension was exposed in a most unique way, revealing the impotence of religious flesh. It is incumbent upon us to take due note of the reported event, and make a correlation with the blatant simulation of religious authority that is found in our time. This is a day of “strong delusion,” sent as a judgment from God upon an ostentatious and false church. In this lesson, I will do my best to expose the sinfulness of adopting a powerless religion, and clinging to lifeless creeds and false assumptions. Such things are a form of unbelief, dishonor the Lord Jesus, and quench the Spirit of God.

As a result of the incident reported in this passage, a great awakening took place in Ephesus. Fear fell on the citizenry, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified. Many who believed came publically confessing their sins and disclosing some of their secret deeds. The renunciation of their former manners was revealed in an unusual way, yet one that perfectly comported with the nature of spiritual life.

While contemporary evangelistic success is too frequently measured by numbers and some form of verbal confession alone, this renewal was marked by a stark change in conduct, and a public and effective renunciation of unacceptable practices. This, of course, revealed the reality and effectiveness of genuine conversion.

THE NECESSITY OF AUTHENTICITY

The very notion of the “God of truth” (Deut 32:4; Psa 31:5; Isa 65:16) being associated with something that is not true or real, is reprehensible beyond measure. To represent a work that is not effective as being associated with, or even instigated by, a God from whom only truth proceeds is of such a serious nature that it cannot be adequately described. For the God of heaven, whose works are all “done in truth” (Psa 33:4; 111:7-8), to be concomitant with an unholy church is such a significant misrepresentation that only the day of judgment will successfully clear the moral air of the blasphemous claim. For the Almighty God to be connected with conversions that do not result in a genuine and lasting change, is an irreverent reproach to Him. For people to wear the name “Christian,” yet whose manner of life stands in stark contrast with “the Righteous One” NIV (1 John 2:1), demeans the Lord Christ, and belies any claim of being associated with Him.

The prophets prophesied of the day of salvation, affirming certain traits would be found in those who participated in it. I do not tire of mentioning them, and of drawing attention to their absence in the modern church. They are like a warning trumpet blast from heaven that identifies the spurious nature of much, if not the majority, of the professing church.

The prophets prophesied of the day of salvation, affirming certain traits would be found in those who participated in it. I do not tire of mentioning them, and of drawing attention to their absence in the modern church. They are like a warning trumpet blast from heaven that identifies the spurious nature of much, if not the majority, of the professing church.

THE CIRCUMCISION OF THE HEART. “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deu 30:6).

• THOROUGH SATISFACTION. “They shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house; and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures” (Psa 36:8).

• JOYOUS ACCESS. “Therefore with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation” (Isa 12:3).

• INSIGHTFUL REJOICING. “And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the LORD, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel” (Isa 29:18-19).

• HOLINESS COUPLED WITH GLADNESS. “And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the LORD shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away” (Isa 35:8-10).

• PRODUCTIVE ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD. “They shall all know Me” (Jer 31:31).

• AN ESSENTIAL CHANGE IN CHARACTER. “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:26-27).

I do not know how it can be established that those who lack these things have, in fact, been reconciled to God, and are enrolled in heaven. One might as well attempt to establish that a person was “the Christ” who did not fulfill what the prophets said of Him. If what God affirms He will do in a people is not done, how can those in whom His promised work is not apparently accomplished be established as His people? And, if His work is not really apparent in the individual, how can anyone be sure that He has really worked in such a one?

I do not know how it can be established that those who lack these things have, in fact, been reconciled to God, and are enrolled in heaven. One might as well attempt to establish that a person was “the Christ” who did not fulfill what the prophets said of Him.

When the appropriate indications of salvation were not found in a people professing to possess it, certain warnings were issued by the apostles. The absence of the things that “accompany salvation” (Heb 6:9) was not glossed – and it is wrong for them to be treated so casually today. Religious institutions – all of them – be hanged! If what God affirms to take place in salvation is not found, woe to that bigot who dares to say they are saved! Let men heed what is declared to those whose lives contradict the truth!

• THE FORFEITURE OF LIFE. “For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die : but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live” (Rom 8:13).

• EMBRACING ANOTHER GOSPEL. “I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel ” (Gal 1:6).

• BEWITCHED INTO NOT OBEYING THE TRUTH. “O foolish Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth, crucified among you?” (Gal 3:1).

• CHRIST IS OF NO EFFECT. “Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are justified by the law; ye are fallen from grace” (Gal 5:4).

• DO NOT LET IT HAPPEN – EVEN ONCE. “But fornication, and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints; neither filthiness, nor foolish talking, nor jesting, which are not convenient: but rather giving of thanks. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience” (Eph 5:4-6).

• SPIRITUAL SPOILATION. “Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ” (Col 2:8).

• BECOMING GOD’S ENEMY. “Ye adulterers and adulteresses, know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? whosoever therefore will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God” (James 4:4).

• THE DOMAIN OF IMPOSSIBILITY. “For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame” (Heb 6:6).

• SPIRITUAL BLINDNESS. “But he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins” (2 Pet 1:9).

• A STATE THAT IS WORSE. “For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them” (2 Pet 2:20-21).

• NO LOVE FOR OR KNOWLEDGE OF GOD. “Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him” (1 John 2:15).

• NO ACQUAINTANCE WITH GOD. “Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen Him, neither known Him” (1 John 3:6),

These texts are not to be explained, but they are to be believed! Men are to make no attempt to blend them with their stilted theology. They are to be believed! If they are difficult to believe, they are to be believed anyway! These are Divine assessments, and to ignore them is to ignore God Himself. Their power is found in their affirmation and the embrace of faith. Further, they are to be declared to the church, for they are affirmations, and they are addressed to the church. They are Divine statements of the reality of the case. There is not the slightest possibility that they are inaccurate. It is not possible that they do not reflect the character and will of God.

The lack of these qualities among a people professing to be of Christ is, at the very best, a sign of drawing back and unbelief. Further, God has spoken to the matter of drawing back, or recoiling at His word. Additionally, drawing back is to perdition, or destruction, not to a blessing! As it is written, “Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:38-39). The fact is that some do NOT draw back, and some do. Which category best describes you?

The presence of sin in the church must not be glossed or treated as though it was normal. A holy mandate has been issued from the Throne: “Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us” (1 Cor 5:7). Again, “Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God” (2 Cor 7:1). And again, “But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy” (1 Pet 1:15-16).

The glorification of Christ Jesus has certainly not amended His essential character. The objectives for the church have not been reissued. All of the changes – every single one of them – are on the part of men.

It is time for the professed church to dismiss from their presence any and all men who attempt to explain sin and pacify sinners. It is time to expel those who build careers on the moral failures of people, and supply worldly-wise solutions to the dilemma of sin. They have no place among the redeemed of the Lord, and woe to that man or group that presumes to make a place for them!

THE RELEVANCE OF THESE WORDS

The relevance of this apparent diversion is seen in the nature of our text. There is a response to the presentation and discussion of “things concerning the kingdom of God” that stands in stark contrast to the preponderance of reported Christian results today. That contrast is certainly not owing to any change in the nature of God, or any lack of true effectiveness in the powerful Gospel of Christ (Rom 1:16). The general environment and nature of humanity has not changed. A different Gospel has not been given from heaven. The Holy Spirit has not altered His indispensable ministry. The glorification of Christ Jesus has certainly not amended His essential character. The objectives for the church have not been reissued. All of the changes – every single one of them – are on the part of men.

Further, all valid moral and character change is associated directly with man’s relationship to God, whether it is for weal or woe, good or evil, blessing or cursing. It seems to me that this is beyond all controversy. – even though it is difficult for some to receive.

VAGABOND JEWS ENCOUNTER A REAL DEMON

“ 19:13a Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus . . . ”

In his record of the activities of early believers, Luke is careful to write in such a manner as to expose the absolute distinction between religious pretension and error, and the truth of God and its impact upon the human spirit. Error is never tolerated or never viewed as inconsequential. Behavior that is out of harmony with the nature of salvation is also duly noted and rebuked. There is a remarkable consistency in all of this so that the issues of life are made quite clear.

- On the day of Pentecost, Peter quickly pointed out the erroneous judgment of the Jews who demanded the death of Jesus (Acts 2:22-23).
- When those who witnessed the healing of the lame man at the gate Beautiful beheld Peter and John as though they had done this under their own power, they were quickly and thoroughly corrected (Acts 3:11-26).
- When Ananias and Sapphira lied to the Holy Spirit, and misrepresented their commitment to the Lord and His work, they were promptly rebuked and judged (Acts 5:1-10).

- When the Jewish council balked at the preaching of Stephen, he exposed their hearts, doing so publically (Acts 7:51).

- When Simon sought to buy the ability to confer the Holy Spirit by the laying on of his hands, Peter soundly rebuked him, saying he had no part in the matter (Acts 8:19-24).

- When an Ethiopian eunuch was confused about the meaning of Scripture, one was sent to declare the truth of that text to him (Acts 8:26-39).

- When Cornelius sought to pay undue homage to Peter, the apostle refused to allow him to do it (Acts 10:22-23).

- When Elymas opposed the truth and attempted to interfere with its proclamation, Paul soundly rebuked him, pronounced him an enemy, and struck him blind for a season (Acts 13:8-11).

- When the Jews in Antioch contradicted and blasphemed what Paul was preaching, he said they had judged themselves unworthy of eternal life, and promptly left with Barnabas (Acts 13:45-46).

- When idolatrous men in Lystra sought to honor Paul and Barnabas as though they were gods, the men of God tore their clothes and ran among them, restraining what they sought to do (Acts 14:8-18).

- When certain Jews taught that it was necessary to be circumcised after the manner of Moses, the leaders promptly addressed the matter, sent to the apostles, and delivered corrective teaching to all of the churches (Acts 15:1-31).

- When the philosophers in Athens mocked Paul's preaching of the resurrection, he left the area (Acts 17:32-33).

- When certain in Corinth blasphemed, Paul shook his garment and said their blood was on their own heads (Acts 18:4-5).

- When Aquila and Priscilla saw that Apollos was deficient in his understanding, they taught him more perfectly in the way of the Lord (Acts 18:25-26).

- When Paul confronted some disciples in Ephesus who were unaware of the need for believing on Christ, he promptly informed them of the deficiency of their baptism and the need for believing on Christ (Acts 19:1-5).

In our day, a certain tolerance of both error and ignorance pervades the professing church. Such an attitude is antithetical to everything we know about the Lord. In fact, we are told that God Himself is no longer tolerant of ignorance. Now, since Jesus has been exalted to His right hand, the command is sent forth to humanity to "repent." Their ignorance of God is no longer overlooked – and that is the way it really is! "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent" (Acts 17:30). Men are not excused from this responsibility under any circumstance.

In this economy of revealed truth, pretension, hypocrisy, and misrepresentation are wholly out of order. Our text confirms this to be true. The people of God must learn to maintain a posture that is firmly against all forms of the lie – especially those which seek to distort Christ and His great salvation.

VAGABOND JEWS

"Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists . . ." Other versions read, "itinerate Jewish exorcists," NKJV "Jewish exorcists, who went from place to place," NASB "Jews who went around driving out evil spirits,” NIV “strolling Jews, exorcists,” ASV “Jews used to travel from place to place and force evil spirits out of people,” GWN “excising demons,” MRD “traveling from town to town casting out evil spirits,” NLT “wandering Jews were also trying to make evil spirits go out of people,” LIVING “Jews who went around trying to drive out demons,” ISV “wandering Jews who claimed to be driving out the evil spirits,” WILLIAMS and “traveling Jewish exorcists (men who adjure evil spirits).” AMPLIFIED

According to some linguists, the literal rendering of this intriguing expression is “strolling Jewish exorcists.” PULPIT COMMENTARY The men so described were something like aimless peddlers, roaming from place to place, apparently without having a settled purpose. Although there is not a lot said about such people, Jesus did refer to them when He said, “And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges” (Mat 12:27). That this did, in fact, take place is confirmed by a certain incident that is recorded by Luke. “And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbad him, because he followeth not with us. And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not: for he that is not against us is for us” (Luke 9:49-50).

This incident bears some similarity to a statement made by Paul concerning some who were preaching the Gospel of Christ. “Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will: The one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds: But the other of love, knowing that I am set for the defense of the gospel. What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretense, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice” (Phil 1:16-18). Among of other things, this confirms the exalted nature of the name of Christ. Even when some preached the Gospel thinking to add more affliction to Paul, yet the truth was being made known, and for this Paul gave thanks. So in our text, something is reported that is certainly not an ideal circumstance. Yet, there is no reason to suspect they were nothing more than charlatans exploiting the people.

FROM JOSEPHUS, Jewish Historian

“We learn also from Josephus, ‘Ant. Jud.,’ 8:2, 5, that forms of exorcism, said to have been invented by King Solomon, so efficacious that the devils cast out by them could never come back, were used with great effect in his days. He adds that he himself knew of an instance in which one of his own countrymen, Eleazar by name, had cast out devils in the presence of Vespasian and his sons and officers and a number of his soldiers. The method used was this: The exorcist applied to the nose of the possessed the bezil of a ring, under which was a certain root prescribed by Solomon, and so drew out the evil spirit through the man’s nostrils. The possessed then fell to the ground, and the exorcist commanded the evil spirit in the name of Solomon never to return, and then recited one of Solomon’s incantations. To give full assurance to the bystanders that the evil spirit had really left the man, the exorcist placed a vessel full of water at some distance off, and then commanded the ejected spirit to overturn it, which he did. Thus far Josephus.” PULPIT COMMENTARY

Whether or not these men actually cast out demons is not the point here. Historians and commentators are divided over this matter. Should a person explore what actually took place in the exorcisms of the nomadic Jews, several theories could be set forth.

The point of this text is the presumption involved in attempting an experiment, as it were, with the name of Jesus. It also is a sterling testimony to the impact of Jesus and those He has sent and empowered in the regions of darkness.

- That their works were purely pretentious, and nothing more than a delusion. The manner in which the text is reported does not lend itself to this view.
- That they employed magical powers that were actually under the administration of the devil himself – like the magicians of Egypt in their encounter with Moses and Aaron. The text itself gives no hint that this is the case.

- That Satan used the occasion to feign exorcisms, engaging in a kind of taunting of the people. This being the case, it is difficult to understand why the Spirit referred them as exorcists instead of Satan’s workers.

- That Jesus had so thoroughly decimated the kingdom of darkness that they had to yield to certain devout Jews. This is a theoretic possibility, but is accompanied with certain unanswered questions.

However, since the Holy Spirit did not see fit to elaborate on the subject from that viewpoint, it seems to me that men are out of order in speculating on it. The point of this text is the presumption involved in attempting an experiment, as it were, with the name of Jesus. It also is a sterling testimony to the impact of Jesus and those He has sent and empowered in the regions of darkness.

TOOK UPON THEM

“ . . . took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “attempted to name over those,” NASB “tried to invoke,” NIV “tried to use,” NRSV “undertook to pronounce the name,” RSV “took upon themselves to make use of,” BBE “tried to make use of,” CJB “attempted to pronounce,” CSB “took in hand to name,” GENEVA “were disposed to exorcize,” MRD “tried to use,” NLT “planned to experiment,” LIVING and “undertook to call.” AMPLIFIED

The phrase “took upon them” is translated from a single Greek word (evpecei,rhsan). The lexical meaning of this word is, “to take in hand, undertake, attempt (anything to be done),” THAYER “try,” FRIBERG “to make attempt on,” and LIDDELL-SCOTT “to endeavor.” LEH

The point here is that this was not an effort of faith. It was an attempt to do something they had never done before, and to achieve success by some form of emulation. In other words, it was an attempt of “the flesh” – something undertaken in the wisdom of men, and without regard to identity with God. It was apparently not accompanied by any prayer, or the confidence that is inherent in the faith that comes from God. The fact that they undertook this work suggests that they had not been as successful in their endeavors as they desired. If this was not the case, it makes no sense that they would experiment with another means of expelling demons. They seemed to sense the superiority of the name of Jesus, yet did not believe on Him.

THE DANGER OF EXPERIMENTATION

In a day when the Christian world leans heavily upon worldly wisdom, it is important to stress the danger of spiritual experimentation. It is still true that “whatsoever is not of faith is sin” (Rom 14:23). That is, whatever is done, regardless of its nature or extent, that is not undergirded by the assurance and confidence of faith, is wrong. That is precisely the point of the text in the fourteenth chapter of Romans. Faith is the spiritual canopy over the entirety of life. Thus it is written, “And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him” (Col 3:17). And again, “Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God” (1 Cor 10:31). And yet again, “And that He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). If we are to offer our bodies unto God, “a living sacrifice,” it is imperative that nothing be done that cannot be supported by our faith. No facet of life, regardless of its seeming insignificance, can be lived with a sole regard for self, just as though there was no God.

The sacrifice of our lives to God is like a thank offering for His great salvation. Admittedly, it requires considerable effort – particularly when we are in the midst of a society that emphasizes self and the realization of a more agreeable life in this present evil world. Notwithstanding, that kind of sacrifice is precisely what God demands in return for pulling us out of the moral and spiritual quagmires of sin, and setting us on a solid rock. A proper response is demanded of those so delivered.

A CLASSIC CASE OF RELIGIOUS PRETENSION

“ 13b . . . saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth. 14 And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.”

It appears to me that this incident is written as a brief commentary on the nature of powerless religion, and how it is regarded among Satan’s hosts. Solemnly believers are warned concerning a “form of godliness that denies the power thereof” (2 Tim 3:5). This is a “form” that maintains the trappings of external religion, while allowing its constituents to live in the flesh. Crucifixion is not required as it is in “true religion and undefiled” (Gal 5:24; James 1:27). Western Christianity is, for the most part, without the cross. Self and flesh are not debased, but are freely permitted to move about without restraint. Like those who worship images, men bring their fleshly preferences into the church, imposing a worldly flavor on everything that is done in the name of the Lord. Preachers hawk their wares like worldly merchants. Singers and instrumentalists throw the mantel of the world upon their music, so that it jars against spiritually sensitive souls. The result is that there is no power present in the church. Sin breaks forth with little effort. Lukewarmness thrives, and the people are content to remain ignorant – even though eternal life is knowing God and Jesus Christ whom He has sent (John 17:3). Psychiatrists are brought in to deal with what is called the human psyche, and financial counselors are summoned to assist with monetary problems. All of this is confirmation that such people lack the power required to live acceptable before God. Mind you, they use the name of Jesus, and readily claim identity with Him. Yet, they lack both moral and spiritual power. Paul teaches that this condition is not owing to their humanness. Rather, they have “denied,” or rejected the power that always is granted with salvation. Where that power is actually lacking, the possession of salvation is, at the very best, questionable.

While the parallel with our text is not exact, the kind of people that are chronicled in it are a sterling example of those who lack power with God and man. These are Jews who are experimenting with religion – trying out what they perceive to be the latest religious technique. They themselves are not followers of Jesus, and are fundamentally unfamiliar with Him. Yet, they have heard and seen some things that have peaked their fleshly interest. With great confidence in their own ability, they take it upon themselves to use the name of Jesus.

JESUS WHOM PAUL PREACHETH

“ . . . saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth. . . .” Other versions read, “We exorcize you,” NKJV “I command you,” NRSV “I give you orders,” BBE “I conjure you,” DOUAY “I order you,” GWN “I sternly warn you,” NET and “I solemnly implore and command you.” AMPLIFIED

The word “adjure” means “to solemnly implore,” THAYER “put someone under oath, adjure ; the sense is not to be weakened to begging or imploring,” FRIBERG “command someone,” UBS and “to demand that a person take an oath as to the truth of what is said or as to the certainty that one will carry out the request or command.” LOUW-NIDA

However, let us project this circumstance into our own situation. If belonging to the “one true church,” or going through the proper outward ordinances is all that is required, then surely God will work in the behalf of such people because of their seeming qualification.

To “adjure” is to issue a supposedly authoritative command. In this case, these men were commanding the demon in the name of Jesus to come out of the man. If the sound of the name “Jesus” is all that is required, the powers of darkness will instantly yield to it.

I cannot begin to tell you how many times I have heard Satan and his hosts commanded to do this or that in the name of Jesus. I have heard people refuse to accept what Satan is perceived to have cast upon them, whether a disease or some other thing. Some pseudo preachers tell people to command Satan to take his hands off of God's property, or give them back their children. Such souls do well to give heed to this text, for there is much in it they ought to learn.

When what is supposedly done in Jesus' name is powerless and ineffective, we cannot at all be sure Jesus is actually in the matter.

SONS OF THE CHIEF OF PRIESTS

“ . . . And there were seven sons of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the priests, which did so.”

Here were some men who were not only from among the chosen people, they were the sons of the highest of the priests – an ordained office under the Law. If fleshly rank has anything to do with the dispatch of Divine power, it will surely be made known through these men.

Lest we be presumptuous in our conclusions, it is good to remember that Nadab and Abihu were genuine priests, and the sons of Aaron. Yet, when they attempted to offer incense to God with fire that was not lawful, He slew them, and was glorified in the process (Lev 10:1-3). Hophni and Phinehas were also very real priests – sons of “Eli the priest.” Yet, even though they were involved in official service to God, they were really “sons of Belial.” In their priestly activities, they insisted on taking portions for themselves in an unlawful manner (1 Sam 2:12-17). They even “lay with the women that assembled at the door of the tabernacle” (2 Sam 2:22), therefore exploiting their office. Not only did they have no right to do this, the Lord slew them for their deeds (2 Sam 2:25,34). They were not allowed to use a holy office for unholy activities. Their lineage and position did not remove that fact.

However, let us project this circumstance into our own situation. If belonging to the “one true church,” or going through the proper outward ordinances is all that is required, then surely God will work in the behalf of such people because of their seeming qualification. Ponder Ananias and Sapphira who exercised covetousness under the cloak of religion (Acts 5:1-11).

This demon knew about the distinctiveness of the Jesus Paul preached. Yes, even more than that, they knew the Jesus he preached was the real Jesus, and not “another” one.

It should not surprise us that some men imagine they can speak for God because they have an ordination certificate, or a degree from some theological school. This practice is so prevalent in contemporary Christendom that it is considered heretical to question it. However, it is still wrong, and the ineffectiveness of such men to actually impact the lives of the people for righteousness is proof of it.

The Jesus Preached by Paul

This demon knew about the distinctiveness of the Jesus Paul preached. Yes, even more than that, they knew the Jesus he preached was the real Jesus, and not “another” one (2 Cor 11:4). And, who was the Jesus Paul preached?

- The One God anointed above everyone else (Heb 1:9).
- The One God raised from the dead and showed to chosen witnesses (1 Cor 15:4-8).
- The One who was made to be sin for us (2 Cor 5:21).
- The One who was “made a curse” for us (Gal 3:13).
- The One who was rich, yet became poor, that we through His poverty might be made rich (2 Cor 8:9).

- The One declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead (Rom 1:4).
- The One who sends grace and peace (Rom 1:7).
- The One through whom God will judge the secrets of men (Rom 2:16).
- The One through whom righteous is granted by faith (Rom 3:22).
- The One who saves those who are coming to God through His faithful intercession (Heb 7:25).
- The One who takes up residence in those who love Him and keep His word (John 14:21,23).
- The One through whom “we have now received the atonement” (Rom 5:11).
- The One through whom we are “made righteous” (Rom 5:17-19).
- The One through whom the saved “reign in life” (Rom 5:17).
- The One through whom we are “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God” (Rom 6:11).
- The One in whom we are established (2 Cor 1:21).
- The One through whom the sweet fragrance of Christ emits through those belonging to Him (2 Cor 15-16).
- The One through whom we are changed by the Holy Spirit while we gaze upon His glory (2 Cor 3:18).
- The One whose love compels us to live to God’s glory (2 Cor 5:14-15).
- The One who has delivered us from “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4).
- The One who is “formed” within us (Gal 4:19).
- The One who, when in us, causes the body to “be dead” (Rom 8:10).
- The One in whom are “hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” Col 2:3).
- The One through whom “all things” can be done (Phil 4:13).
- The One before whom every knee will eventually bow (Phil 2:10).

This is a very small sampling of statements Paul made concerning the real Jesus. You should recognize that many of these realities are rarely mentioned in today’s church culture. There is another Jesus being preached that is more accommodating to the human condition.

Such is a spurious Jesus to whom the powers of darkness will not yield. Crafty men choose to sidestep this circumstance by speaking of addictions, family curses, generational curses, genetic makeup, and physiological circumstances. Such things, they affirm, can be corrected by special procedures they have concocted. That is why they have developed their procedures. However, the truth of the matter is that Satan and his hosts will not yield to their word.

Let us now behold how the powers of darkness react when men who really have no power order them, barking commands at them like a dog. How will they respond to the command?

THE INTELLIGENCE OF THE WORLD OF DARKNESS

“ 15 And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?” Other versions read, “wicked spirit,” DARBY/DOUAY and “the demon.” LIVING

This text will give us some sound ideas about the nature of that battalion of wicked spirits against whom we wrestle (Eph 6:12). They are intelligent, for the issuance of lies, delusions, craftiness, snares, and the likes, are evidence of intelligence. From one perspective Satan's empire is well informed, although they are not omniscient or all knowing. In view of this, unwarranted theological simplicity is welcomed by the wicked one as an opportunity for him to dominate through delusion. Those who promote simplistic views, and dumb-down the Gospel, have unwittingly played into the hand of our "adversary the devil" (1 Pet 5:8-9). A condition that is to be eagerly sought by all believers is one in which "we are not ignorant of his devices."

JESUS I KNOW

"And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know . . ." Other versions read, "I recognize Jesus," NASB "said to them in reply," NAB "answering said unto them, I have knowledge of Jesus," BBE "answered, and said, Jesus I acknowledge," GENEVA "said to them, Jesus I well know," MRD "Jesus I recognize," NAB and "replied to them, I know about Jesus." NET "I have heard about Jesus," IE "[one] evil spirit retorted, Jesus I know." AMPLIFIED

As used here, the meaning of the word "know", is "to learn to know, come to know, get a knowledge of," THAYER "of intelligent comprehension know, come to understand, ascertain . . . as learning something through sense perception learn of, become aware of, find out, perceive," FRIBERG "to have knowledge; acknowledge, recognize . . . be very certain, remember," UBS "to know about," LOUW-NIDA and "acknowledge, recognize." GINGRICH

This is not the knowledge or understanding that comes through faith (Heb 11:3). Evil spirits do not know Jesus through the familiarity of fellowship (1 Cor 1:9; Phil 3:7-14). They do not know Jesus because He has made Himself known to them (John 14:21,23).

These wicked spirits know Jesus because of at least three distinct experiences.

- First, Jesus invaded their kingdom during His earthly ministry, when He "went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil" (Acts 10:39). During That There is a level of knowledge and communication in the spiritual underworld that is staggering to consider. Contrary to much thinking, Satan's empire is not time, they actually knew who Jesus was. One of their number once cried out in a synagogue, "Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God" (Mark 1:24). The men from Gadara, possessed of a legion of demons, cried out, "What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?" (Mat 8:29). When "unclean spirits" saw Jesus, they "fell down before Him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God. And He straightly charged them that they should not make Him known" (Mark 3:11-12). No demon ever argued with Jesus. None ever attacked Him, or failed to obey Him. Evil spirits did, indeed know Jesus by adversarial experience.

- Satan's kingdom knows Jesus because at His cross He spoiled and plundered them, wresting their captives from their hands, and decimating their empire. Thus it is written, "And having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them in it" Col 2:15).

- The hosts of darkness know Jesus because in His ascension He "led captivity captive," or "led a train of vanquished foes" AMPLIFIED (Eph 4:8). From the time of His resurrection, these wicked hosts have been absolutely and fully under the control of Jesus. As it is written of Jesus, "Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God; angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto him" (1 Pet 3:22).

- Because they have personally confronted the Lord Jesus, been conquered by Him, and made subject to Him, they are convinced of His nature, and tremble before Him (James

2:19). Their's is not the trembling of faith, but of conscious proximity.

Thus, evil spirits yield to Jesus without any kind of resistance. They do not engage in warfare against Him, nor does Satan their leader.

PAUL I KNOW

“ . . . and Paul I know . . .” Other versions read, “I know about Paul,” NASB “Paul I recognize,” CSB “Paul I am acquainted with,” DARBY and “Paul I have heard of.” WEYMOUTH

There is a level of knowledge and communication in the spiritual underworld that is staggering to consider. Contrary to much thinking, Satan's empire is not characterized by chaos and confusion, for then it could not stand. Jesus once said of our adversary, “And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?” (Matt 12:26). Heaven is not divided either. It is only upon earth that personalities are divided.

Apparently news traveled among the hosts of hell as Paul went here and there, assaulting the kingdom of darkness. This particular evil spirit was well aware of Paul. No doubt others who were laboring together with Christ in such a manner were also known among the hosts of darkness. Some of their number had been subject to Paul, who had been empowered by the One who had thoroughly defeated them as they gathered together against Him.

WHO ARE YOU?

“ . . . but who are ye?” Other versions read, “who are you” (plural), NASB/NIV and “who on earth are you?” PHILLIPS

This demon refused to yield to the words of these men because they had not been sent by Jesus, and were not His followers. They did not have power in the world of dark spirits, and were nothing more than deceivers – and this demon knew it.

This demon refused to yield to the words of these men because they had not been sent by Jesus, and were not His followers. They did not have power in the world of dark spirits, and were nothing more than deceivers – and this demon knew it.

What We Learn from This

Those who have not received power to work miracles and cast out demons ought not to conduct themselves as though they had. If they have no such power, let them not pretend as though they did, calling out, shouting, and going through rituals they think will work.

There is such a thing as failure that is traced back to presumption. This is a serious sin that leads to the “great transgression” – or one from which recovery is not possible. Thus the man after God's own heart prayed, “Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression” (Psa 19:13).

Also, consider that it is quite possible that the failure of human programs is also owing to the refusal of the powers of darkness to yield to such attempts to improve human behavior.

Education cannot produce spiritual empowerment. Neither can the official sanction of a religious institution confer power in spiritual domains. At no point is the work of God accomplished or assisted by the wisdom and approval of men. It is imperative that believers learn this truth and operate within its confines. Today, there is an enormous amount of activity within the professing church that is more related to the work of the sons of Sceva than they are to the work of the Lord.

It should surprise no informed soul:

- It should not surprise that Satan’s hosts do not react in the identical manner reported in our text us.
- That they do refuse to yield to institutional authority is confirmed by the presence and growth of sin within the professing church.

The bane of the modern church is its abysmal level of spiritual understanding, and its glaring impotence in the arena of conflict. These are not indicators of good things!

THE IMPOTENCE OF FLESH AGAINST SPIRITUAL DARKNESS

“ 16a And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them . . .” Other versions read, “leaped on them and overpowered them,” NKJV “leaped on them and subdued them,” NASB “jumped on them and overpowered them all,” NIV “leaped on them, mastered them all, and so overpowered them,” NRSV “prevailed against them,” BBE “fell upon them, overpowered them and gave them such a beating,” CJB “attacked them. He beat them up so badly,” GWN “sprang at them and subdued them all,” NAB “jumped on them and beat them all into submission,” NET “hurled himself at them and overpowered first one and then another, and handled them so violently,” NJB “ran on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them,” PNT and “jumped on these Jews. He was much stronger than they were. He beat them up.” IE

Several versions read that the man leaped on “two” men (Darby, ERV, Living, Weymouth, Montgomery, and Amplified). This is based on some variant manuscripts, and a flawed interpretation of what they actually say. Technically, even those manuscripts can mean “more than two” – a phrase that does not give a specific number, only that it is more than two. However, there is no need for these linguistic gyrations, since the text has already identified the number of men involved: “seven sons of one Sceva,” declaring that they were all involved in this account (verse 14). Those professed language experts that toy with the text of Scripture bring no true benefit to the children of God. Rather, through their sloppy manners, they inject the virus of doubt into the minds of men. That doubt, like leaven, spreads throughout the entirety of thought, finally yielding the fruit of unbelief, which will damn the soul. Such men should not be allowed to tamper with the Word of God, for when they “wrest” it, they do so to their own destruction (2 Pet 3:16). I understand that such comments are irritating to those who overstate the value of the human analysis of language. However, their liberty with the text is equally irritating to those who treasure the Word of God. Besides this, God has not conferred upon men the liberty to manipulate what He has revealed. If we “live by every word of God” (Lk 4:4), we will not condone men handling it like they do the writings of mere men.

THE MAN LEAPED ON THEM

Here was a man controlled by an “evil spirit,” and it made him stronger and more agile than seven grown men. Something similar occurred in the demoniac from Gadara, who, under the influence of a legion of demons, was able to break the “fetters and chains” with which men bound him (Mk 5:3). It is written that “the chains had been pulled apart by him, and the shackles broken in pieces” NKJV by him (Mk 5:4).

When it comes to the matter of sin, no person in Christ Jesus is helpless. Their lives are not out of control unless they are neglecting God’s great salvation.

In this, the relative frailty of the human constitution is accented. Men are, in every way, inferior to God, Christ Jesus, and the Holy Spirit. If any or all of these are against us, no one can effectively be for us. In matters of strength and wisdom, men are inferior to the holy angels – all of them. Were we to contend with a holy angel, there would be no way we could prevail. In strength and aptitude, they are also inferior to Satan and all of his hosts. Were it not for the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, and the faith that appropriates it, these forces would be our thorough undoing.

FOR THOSE WHO ARE ACCUSTOMED TO MORAL FAILURE

Since the capture of the professed church by the psychoanalysts and professionals, moral failures have increased exponentially. This has proved to be an opportunity for religious charlatans to develop new and lucrative careers that depend on the ongoing nature of moral failure. However, there is something to be learned from this text that is germane to this circumstance. If an “evil spirit” can cause an individual to do things outside of the scope of ordinary human ability, what can the indwelling Holy Spirit do? What holy aptitudes can be found in those in whom the Spirit dwells, and is not grieved or quenched? Ponder “the fruit of the Spirit” that is produced in the believer (Gal 5:22-23). Think of the dominating hope that comes, together with the ability to purify oneself (Rom 15:13; 1 John 3:1). Consider the obedience that is wrought “through the Spirit” (1 Pet 1:22), and putting “to death the deeds of the body” (Rom 8:13). God’s people must never permit a compromise with the flesh – not in view of the distinct and effective advantages that are given to them in the salvation of God! Ponder some of those advantages, and then you will see how absurd it is to make any attempt to explain or justify sin in a professed Christian. Believers have been:

- Begotten of God (1 John 5:18).
- Born again (1 Pet 1:23).
- Are a new creation (Eph 2:10).
- Are reconciled unto God (Col 1:20).
- Have peace with God (Rom 5:1).
- Have access to God (Eph 3:12).
- Can obtain mercy and find grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16).
- Have been given the Holy Spirit (Gal 4:6; 1 Thess 4:8).
- Have been given the whole armor of God (Eph 6:10-18).
- Have been given spiritual weapons that are mighty through God (2 Cor 10:3-5).
- He that is in them is greater than he that is in the world (1 John 4:4).
- If they resist the devil, he will flee from them (James 4:7).
- The Holy Spirit makes intercession for them (Rom 8:26-27).
- Jesus ever lives to intercede for them (Heb 7:25).
- Their temptations are managed from heaven (1 Cor 10:13).
- They can do all things they are required to do through Christ (Phil 4:13).
- They are not debtors to the flesh, or forced to obey its lusts (Rom 8:13).
- The same grace of God that brings salvation to them also effectively teaches them to reject worldly lusts and live godly (Tit 2:11-12).
- The Holy Spirit is present in them to lead in the mortification of the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13).

When it comes to the matter of sin, no person in Christ Jesus is helpless. Their lives are not out of control unless they are neglecting God’s great salvation. Candidly, I do not believe this is being declared among believers. If this assessment is correct, it profoundly accounts for the miserable state in which Christendom finds itself. The whole condition is inexcusable.

THE EPITAPH OF SPIRITUAL FAILURE

“ . 16b . . . so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.” Other versions read, “naked and bleeding,” NIV “wounded and without their clothing,” BBE “denuded and bruised,” MRD “stripped of their clothing and badly mauled,” NJB “naked and battered,” NLT “naked and badly injured,” LIVING “stripped naked and wounded,” AMPLIFIED and “wounded, with their clothes torn off their back,” PHILLIPS

What a pathetic sight it must have been! Seven roaming Jewish exorcists running naked and bleeding from a house in which they had attempted an exorcism in Jesus’ name – the Jesus that Paul preached. It seems to me that this is the ultimate humiliation – not only to fail in what you do, but to be severely wounded in the process. Instead of driving out a single demon, that demon so strengthened the man in whom he was dwelling, that the man pummeled the would-be exorcists into submission, tore the clothes off of them, and sent them out of the house badly mauled.

Among other things, this confirms that Divine power, whether it is sought for blessing or for cursing, is not implemented by means of a mere formula. There is no set of words that have been given to the sons of men that, of themselves, are capable of bring the power of God to bear upon a situation. The mere sound of a human voice does not of itself draw the power of God into the situation.

Exorcists being mauled by a demon-possessed man is similar to certain situations that are taking place in the Christian community. Often we hear of marriage counselors whose own marriages are in shambles. There have been national evangelists who have chided people for immorality, yet have themselves been caught in the trap of moral wickedness. All of this accents that true life and kingdom authority cannot be emulated. They cannot be arrogated to oneself by an act of the will or the adoption of a sectarian creed. If there is no vital connection with the Lord of glory, His name cannot be effectively employed. Neither heaven nor hell will respond favorably to such efforts.

Let it be clear, there is no such thing as effective religion that is by proxy, or in the name of a Christ who is not personally known and embraced. Second hand religion is a bane to any society. Yet, it is all about us, and in increasing measures. Sectarianism, religious tradition, and denominationalism, are founded in the second hand concept. A system is embraced that is impersonal. Things are taught that have not been perceived or experienced, and the fear of God is taught by the precept of men (Isa 29:13). These are deplorable practices, and their failure will be the epitaph over their institutional grave.

THE IMPACT OF THE REPORT OF THE WORKING OF THE LORD

“ 17 And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.”

It is a principle of God’s kingdom that His works are known where they are wrought. The report of the working of the Lord gets out. In this manner the whole earth continues to be full of His glory.

It is a principle of God’s kingdom that His works are known where they are wrought. The report of the working of the Lord gets out. In this manner the whole earth continues to be full of His glory (Isa 6:3). The following are examples of this kind of working, which is consistent in Scripture.

• ISRAEL’S DELIVERANCE. When Israel was delivered from Egypt, crossed the Red Sea, and overcome heathen kings, it was known throughout that region. “For we have heard how the LORD dried up the water of the Red sea for you, when ye came out of Egypt; and what ye did unto the two kings of the Amorites, that were on the other side Jordan, Sihon and Og, whom ye utterly destroyed” (Josh 2:10). “For the LORD your God dried up the waters of Jordan from before you, until ye were passed over, as the LORD your God did to the Red sea, which he dried up from before us, until we were gone over: That all the people of the earth might know the hand of the LORD, that it is mighty: that ye might fear the LORD your God for ever” (Josh 4:23-24),

- THE KINGS OF ISRAEL. Heathen nations heard about the comparative distinction of “the kings of the house of Israel.” “And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel: peradventure he will save thy life” (1 Kgs 20:31).

- THE FAME OF SOLOMON. The queen of Sheba heard of the wisdom and wealth of king Solomon. “And when the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the name of the LORD, she came to prove him with hard questions . . . And she said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in mine own land of thy acts and of thy wisdom . . . Howbeit I believed not the words, until I came, and mine eyes had seen it: and, behold, the half was not told me: thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard” (1 Kgs 10:1-10).

- AT THE BEGINNING OF JESUS’ MINISTRY When Jesus returned from His wilderness temptation, He came in the power of the Spirit, and “there went out a fame of Him through all the region round about” (Lk 4:14).

- WHEN JESUS EXPELLED DEMONS. When He expelled demons from many, “the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about” (Luke 4:37).

- WHEN JESUS HEALED TEN LEPERS. When He healed ten lepers, “so much the more went there a fame abroad of Him” (Lk 5:15).

- THROUGHOUT JESUS MINISTRY. During Jesus’ prodigious ministry “His fame went throughout all Syria” (Matt 4:24).

- HEROD HEARD OF JESUS. Herod “heard of the fame of Jesus” (Matt 14:1).

- THE WOMAN WITH THE ISSUE OF BLOOD. The woman with the issue of blood “heard of Jesus” (Mk 5:27).

- WHEN JESUS RAISED JAIRUS’ DAUGHTER. When Jesus raised the daughter of Jairus from the dead, “the fame hereof went abroad into all that land” (Matt 9:26).

- WHEN JESUS HEALED TWO BLIND MEN. After Jesus had healed two blind men, they departed and “spread abroad His fame in all that country” (Matt 9:31).

- A CERTAIN CENTURION HEARD OF JESUS. A certain centurion who sought healing for one of his servants “heard of Jesus” (Lk 7:3).

- THE FATE OF JUDAS. When the treacherous of Judas resulted him hanging himself, “it was known unto all the dwellers at Jerusalem” (Acts 1:19).

- THE EVENTS OF THE DAY OF PENTECOST. When the Spirit was given on the day of Pentecost, “this was noised abroad” (Acts 2:6).

- THE JUDGMENT AGAINST ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA. When Ananias and Sapphira were struck dead for their transgression “great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things” (Acts 5:11).

- THE CONVERSION OF SAMARIA . When the city of Samaria received the word of God delivered by Philip, “the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard” it (Acts 8:14).

- WHEN PETER RAISED DORCAS. When Peter raised Dorcas from the dead, “it was known throughout all Joppa” (Acts 9:42).

- THE FAITH OF THOSE IN ROME. All of this was more than mere coincidence. The faith of the brethren in Rome was “spoken of throughout the whole world” (Rom 1:8).

Men must learn this fact in order to avoid the promotion of self. If God is really working among the people, He will see to it that the word gets out. Men may not receive the report. They may even fight against it. But God's glory will be found where He is working, acknowledged or not!

THE FAITH AND LOVE OF THE EPHESIANS. From afar, Paul heard of the faith and love of the Ephesian brethren. "Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints" (Eph 1:15).

• THE FAITH AND LOVE OF THE COLOSSIANS. Before he went to Colossae, Paul heard of their "faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love" they had "to all the saints" (Col 1:4).

• THE FAITH OF THE THESSALONIANS. In the case of the Thessalonian believers, Paul declared their "faith to God-ward is spread abroad" (1 Thess 1:8).

None of these reports involved a marketing plan. None of them were designed to promote the individuals or the congregations involved. This is simply the manner of the Kingdom. It is the way God works. This is what Jesus meant when He said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid" (Mat 5:14). The works of God cannot be hidden or concealed. If men do not see them, it is because they are blind, and do not have eyes to see.

Our Own Experience

Although The Word of Truth Fellowship is small and insignificant by institutional standards, it is widely known throughout the United States, and in foreign countries as well. These include Burkina Faso, Pakistan, India, Myanmar, the Philippines, and others. None of this knowledge was promoted by the fellowship here. All of it is the result of hearing of our faith in Christ and the love possessed for the people of God. It is "the fruit of their doings" (Isa 3:10).

Men Must Learn

Men must learn this fact in order to avoid the promotion of self. If God is really working among the people, He will see to it that the word gets out. Men may not receive the report. They may even fight against it. But God's glory will be found where He is working, acknowledged or not!

There are a staggering number of churches that would remain hidden in the dregs of society if they were not promoting themselves. They are not noted for their faith in Christ, or for their love for all saints. They may be noted for their numbers, or for their involvement in the social affairs of the community. However, the kind of reports that are recorded in Scripture are not be given about them.

When the focus of the people of God is upon the Lord Himself, and they are growing up into Christ in all things, a work will be done among them that will be reported. That is how the Lord works.

THE NEWS SPREAD RAPIDLY

"And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus ..."

What a report this was! There is no record that the man with the demon was healed. The report is that a demon possessed man severely wounded some religious pretenders. That man, however, did not attack Paul!

Therefore, the Jewish exorcists were exposed as false, while Paul and his preaching were honored. Even the evil spirit acknowledged that he knew Paul, yet did not recognize the others.

The real contrast here is found in comparing the works of Paul versus the feigned attempts of these Jewish exorcists. On the one hand, handkerchiefs which touched the body of Paul were brought, and “evil spirits went out” of those who were oppressed by them (19:12). Now, rather than the evil spirit coming out of a man, that spirit moved the one controlled by it to violently and effectively overcome seven men. Thus the validity of Paul’s message was confirmed – for the pretentious exorcism was said to be in the name of Jesus “whom Paul preacheth.” Therefore, the Jewish exorcists were exposed as false, while Paul and his preaching were honored. Even the evil spirit acknowledged that he knew Paul, yet did not recognize the others.

This news traveled like a raging fire throughout Ephesus, so that the contrast between Paul and the Jewish exorcists was known to both Jews and Greeks. Paul was vindicated and the exorcists were exposed.

Let me again affirm that ineffective religion is undergirded by a false view of both God and Christ. Further, effective religion is manifested by the exposure of falsehood as well as the confirmation of the truth in those who believe.

FEAR FELL ON THEM

“ . . . and fear fell on them all . . .” Other versions read, “they were seized with fear,” NIV “everyone was awestruck,” NRSV “fear came on them all,” BBE “filled with awe,” NJB “a solemn fear descended upon the city,” NLT “alarm and terror fell upon them all,” AMPLIFIED and “a great sense of awe came over them all.” PHILLIPS

This kind of thing has taken place several times among those witnessing the work of the Lord.

- Once, when king Saul issued a solemn warning to anyone who refused to come after him and Samuel, “the fear of the Lord fell on the people” (1 Sam 11:7).
- Another time when the Levites went throughout the land teaching in Judah from the book of the Law, “the fear of the Lord fell upon the kingdoms of the lands that were round about Judah” (2 Chron 17:10).
- When Israel was delivered from Egypt, “Egypt was glad . . . for the fear of them fell upon them” (Psa 105:38).
- After the day of Pentecost, as the disciples “continued steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine and fellowship, and in the breaking of bread and in prayers . . . fear came upon every soul” (Acts 2:43).
- When Ananias and Sapphira were judged, “great fear came on all them that heard these things” (Acts 5:5), and “great fear came upon all the church” (Acts 5:11).
- When the early churches experienced a season of rest, they walked “in the fear of the Lord” (Acts 9:31).

In this text an acute awareness of the presence of the Lord registered upon the people. This was accented by the impotence of the pretenders as well as the effectiveness of the real message of the Lord and the one who delivered it.

In saying the fear “fell on them,” or that they were “seized” by fear, the point is that this was produced by the very real presence of the Lord. The people were able to associate what was taking place in the remarkable healings, as well as the overthrow of Satan’s workers, with the Lord and His Christ. It was as though the people were afraid to oppose what was being said and done in the name of the Lord.

What Is Happening in Our Time

Under the teaching of the day, a sense of the fear of God has nearly disappeared from the professing church, and thus from society as well. People are unable to associate what is taking place with the hand of the Lord. This is wholly owing to the teaching they have willingly accepted. A God and Christ are being presented that do not induce fear in those who accept it. As both the Psalmist and Paul wrote, "There is no fear of God before their eyes" (Psa 36:1; Rom 3:15).

Just as surely as the fear mentioned in our text was the result of a comprehension of the work of God, so the lack of fear is the result of a lack of that comprehension. This condition is the direct result of a false message being delivered. The true God and Jesus Christ His Son are not being proclaimed to the people. It is for this reason that there can be no power in the message, for the Lord will not undergird a word that is not from Him. He will not bless what has misrepresented Him.

The "falling away" of which Paul spoke is the direct result of delusion (2 Thess 2:3-12). That delusion, according to the Second Thessalonian text, has been mandated by the Lord because men have not received "the love of the truth, that they might be saved" (2:10). From the standpoint of the hearers themselves, they have fulfilled this word: "they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears" (2 Tim 4:3). False teachers have gladly acquiesced to their preferences, delivering a sinner-friendly and worldly-centered message that pacifies the people. All of this also makes for a lucrative career and an impressive organization. But their approach cannot stem the tide of iniquity. It cannot keep sin out of the church. Neither does it produce mature followers who grow up into Christ in all things.

THE NAME OF THE LORD JESUS WAS MAGNIFIED

"... and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified." Other versions read, "was held in high honor," NIV was praised," NRSV was extolled," RSV "was made great," BBE "began to speak very highly about it," GWN "held in great esteem," NAB "were giving more and more honor," IE "extolled and magnified," AMPLIFIED and "became highly respected." PHILLIPS

The magnification of the name of Jesus is not only appropriate, it is essential. It is written, "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name" (Phil 2:9). This being true, it is a great sin for men NOT to exalt and magnify the name of Jesus. By failing to do so, they have set themselves against God, and have thus become His enemy. For men to live for themselves instead of Christ is wrong in the fullest sense of the word. For them, to ignore the word and work of Jesus in preference for other things is iniquity. When men compare themselves with themselves instead of with Christ, they transgress. When they seek to please men rather than the Lord Jesus who has bought them, they are in the bond of iniquity, and the truth is not in them.

The more men speak insightfully about Jesus, the more it confirms they have really seen something. The more they speak about human organizations and mundane life, the more it confirms they have seen very little of the truth, and perhaps none at all. If it is true that, as Jesus Himself said, we are sanctified by the truth (John 17:17,19), then the less the truth is known, the least apt a person is to be sanctified, or set apart unto God. No person can belong to the Lord and gain the advantage from His presence, while living in disassociation from the truth.

The measure of a person or group of persons is largely determined by their knowledge of, and commitment to, the truth as it is in Christ Jesus.

The measure of a person or group of persons is largely determined by their knowledge of, and commitment to, the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. If Jesus is, in fact "THE TRUTH," how can it be any other way (John 14:6)? Ponder what is said of the truth.

- Knowing the truth makes us free, and is equated with Jesus Himself making us free (John 8:32,35).
- If Jesus says the truth, He asks why men do not believe Him (John 8:46).

- We are sanctified, or set apart to God and made holy, by the truth (John 17:19).
- Everyone who is of the truth hears Christ's voice (John 18:37).
- Indignation and wrath awaits those who do "not obey the truth" (Rom 2:8).
- True love rejoices in the truth (1 Cor 13:6).
- Not obeying the truth is a sign of being bewitched and hindered by other influences (Gal 3:1; 5:7).
- Growing up into Christ is contingent upon speaking the truth in love (Eph 4:15).
- Jesus teaches men "as the truth is in Jesus" (Eph 4:21).
- The knowledge of the hope that is laid up for us is discovered within the context of "the word of the truth of the Gospel" (Col 1:5).
- Men are saved by means of receiving "the love of the truth" (2 Thess 2:10).
- Those who do not receive the love of the truth will be sent delusion, and finally be damned (2 Thess 2:12).
- God wills that men be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth (1 Tim 2:4).
- The church is "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim 3:15).
- Recovery from the snare of the devil is contingent upon acknowledging the truth (2 Tim 2:25).
- Not being able to endure sound doctrine is caused by turning away the ears from the truth (2 Tim 4:3-4; Tit 1:14).
- The soul is purified by obeying the truth (1 Pet 1:22).

When the name of Jesus is magnified, all of the above things take place in exponential measure. God glorifies Himself and magnifies His Word in this manner. Where Jesus is not magnified, it is not possible for these benefits to be found. That distinction is very real, manifesting who believes the truth and who does not. When God is not glorified, it is only because He has not been believed.

WHEN SINNERS SHOWED THEIR DEEDS

" 18 And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds."

When the truth is received, things begin to happen that could not otherwise take place. Further, the reception of truth, particularly initially, is always associated with some proclaimer – someone who has been sent to "preach." Paul expressed it this way: "How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!" (Rom 10:14-15). Further confirming this to be the mode of the Kingdom Paul wrote, "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man?" (1 Cor 3:5).

This particular text reports a most extraordinary phenomenon. Many who believed were on the initiative to do something. There is no indication that they had to be exhorted or admonished to do this. They were rather driven from within, being made willing in the day of God's power.

In the text before us, the proclaimer was Paul, and the place in which he was declaring and expounding "the things concerning the kingdom of God," was Ephesus – in particular, the school of Tyrannus (Acts 19:8-10). People apparently came from various regions in Asia to hear him, and carried the word back to their homeland. Additionally, some had also brought handkerchiefs and aprons that had touched the body of Paul, and wrought many miracles. Those miracles are said to have been wrought “by the hands of Paul.” The text suggests that these took place throughout Asia, as well as in the city of Ephesus itself.

Now, our attention is turned specifically to the city of Ephesus. As I have said, the text suggests that the “special miracles” were also occurring in Ephesus, as Paul continued there for the space of two years in his powerful daily ministry.

MANY THAT BELIEVED

“ . . . And many that believed came . . .” Other versions read, “who had believed,” NKJV “who became believers,” NRSV “who were now believers,” RSV “who had faith,” BBE “earlier made professions of faith,” CJB “were now believers,” AMPLIFIED “had professed their faith,” PHILLIPS and “who were followers.” CEV

The term “believers,” and the expression “believed,” are often used to describe those who receive Christ as the Gospel declares Him (Acts 2:44; 4:4,32; 5:14; 8:12,13; 9:42; 10:46; 11:17,21; 13:12, 8; 14:1,23; 15:5; 16:1; 17:4,12,34; 18:8,27; 19:18; 22:19; 28:24; Rom 4:3,17,18; 13:11; 1 Cor 3:5; 15:2,11; Gal 2:16; 3:6; Eph 1:13; 2 Thess 1:10; 1 Tim 3:16; 2 Tim 1:12; Tit 3:8; Heb 4:3; James 2:23; 1 John 4:16).

The Gentile church has greatly minimized believing, both by neglecting a proper emphasis of it, and by distorting what it really means to believe. This departure from the truth has been so pronounced that religious men rarely speak about faith, and when they do, they do not give to it the value assigned by the Spirit of God. Whether wittingly or unwittingly men are exalting above faith such things as, fasting, obedience, various outward disciplines, and supposed success in this present evil world.

There is a pronounced absence of such accents in the Scriptures. Here, in the book of Acts, a report is given of the impact of the truth upon the hearts of men. Some became more hostile than they ever were before. Others yielded to the Lord, withholding nothing from Him. This particular text reports a most extraordinary phenomenon. Many who believed were on the initiative to do something. There is no indication that they had to be exhorted or admonished to do this. They were rather driven from within, being made willing in the day of God’s power (Psa 110:3). This is something that was done publically.

CONFESSED AND SHOWED THEIR DEEDS

“ . . . and confessed, and showed their deeds.” Other versions read, “came confessing and telling their deeds,” NKJV “kept coming, confessing and disclosing their practices,” NASB “came and openly confessed their evil deeds,” NIV “confessing and divulging their practices,” RSV “made a public statement of their sins and all their acts,” BBE “came and admitted publicly their evil deeds,” CJB “openly admitted their involvement with magical spells and told all the details,” GWN “came and narrated their faults, and confessed what they had done,” MRD “began to admit all of the evil things they had done,” IE “came confessing without reserve what their conduct had been,” MONTGOMERY “kept coming and confessing and uncovering their former practices,” WILLIAMS and “came making full confession and thoroughly exposing their [former deceptive and evil] practices,” AMPLIFIED

The actions here described were prompted by the fear of God. Such a response shows the powerful effects of witnessing the works of God, beholding with insight the overthrow of the devil, and believing the Gospel. At the threshold of human history, when sin first entered into the world, a confrontation by God Himself did not produce such marvelous results. When God asked Adam, “Hast thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat? (Gen 3:11), Adam replied, “The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat” (Gen

3:12). When God asked Eve, “What is this that thou hast done?” the woman replied, “The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat” (Gen 3:13). Both Adam and confessed “I did eat,” but they also offered an excuse for their action. That was proof that in the very day that ate of the forbidden tree they did, in fact, “die,” just as the Lord said they would (Gen 2:17).

Now, however, a greater light had come into the world – greater than the light of a prohibition. People from Ephesus stepped forward, confessed their sin, and “disclosed their practices.” NASB They offered no excuse for what they had been doing.

The ministry of John the Baptist produced similar results among the Jews. It is said of those who responded favorably to his word, “And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins ” (Matt 3:6). Here, however, it appears as though the people went even further. They not only “confessed” to their wrongdoing, but “showed their deeds,” bringing forth some evidence of what they were renouncing.

I have observed a marked decline in this kind of practice over the past few decades. Sin is not generally treated with the kind of seriousness reported in this text. In fact, it is often glossed as though it did not even occur. In my judgment, this trend is the direct result of flawed preaching and teaching. What is currently in vogue in the Christian community is much the same as took place in the Corinthian defection. There is the presentation of “another Jesus,” “another spirit,” and “another gospel” (2 Cor 11:4). I am persuaded this is the case because the kind of results that are staring us in the face are not what is produced by the real Jesus, the real Spirit, and the real Gospel. What is taking place in our day needs to be compared with the inspired report of the impact of “sound doctrine” – the preaching of Christ, and expounding things concerning the kingdom of God. That comparison will produce a certain sobriety in the people.

NOTHING REALLY IS LOST WHEN SIN IS ABANDONED

“ 19 Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver.”

Some details are now provided concerning what was publically confessed, and the deeds that were openly shown. As we will see, they were directly related to the demonic world, and the spiritual darkness with which the people had been confronted when the demon possessed man attacked and overcame the pretending Jewish exorcists. The public nature of what was done is worthy of note. It confirms the nature of genuine conversion, and the forwardness of real repentance. In such responses glory is brought to God, and He is justified in what He has said concerning the change He works within those who believe.

MANY OF THEM ALSO

“Many of them also . . .” Other versions read, “a number,” NIV “not a few of them,” ASV “a great number,” BBE “a considerable number,” CJB “a large number,” NAB and “large numbers.” NET

There are two ways to take this text.

- That a significant number of those who confessed their sins and showed their deeds were in the category now mentioned. Versions that represent this view are The Living Bible (“Many of the believers who had been practicing”); International English (“Many of the believers”); Weymouth (“many of those also who believed”); Williams (“Many who became believers”); Montgomery (“Many also of those who became believers”); The Amplified Bible (“Many of those also who were now believers”); and Phillips (“ Many of those who had professed their faith”).

- A considerable number of those who had been practicing the particular transgression mentioned came, confessed, and showed their deeds. All of the Standard versions give this view, and most of the other versions as well: i.e. "Many of those who had practiced . . ."

The meaning of the text is that of those who were practicing the particular sin that is mentioned, a large number renounced that practice. In other words, considerable inroads were made in that spiritually aberrant section of society. Where Satan was apparently maintaining a stronghold a devastating and crippling blow was struck. The means through which this was accomplished was the daily reasoning and persuading of Paul "concerning the kingdom of God" (19:9). In other words, the light of spiritual knowledge, or illumination, was dissipating the power of darkness.

CURIOUS ARTS

" . . . which used curious arts . . ." Other versions read, "practiced magic," NKJV "practiced sorcery," NIV "practiced magical arts," ASV "experts in strange arts," BBE "engaged in occult practices," CJB "involved in the occult," GWN "used curious arts," TNT "had been practicing black magic," LIVING and "practicing witchcrafts." CEV

As used here, the words "curious arts" are translated from a single Greek word (peri,erga) meaning, "impertinent and superfluous, of magic (A. V., curious) arts," THAYER "of things intriguing, curious; neuter plural ta. peri,erga as a substantive magic arts, sorcery, witchcraft," FRIBERG "witchcraft," LOUW-NIDA and "magic." GINGRICH

The expression "curious arts" carries the meaning of "busy with trifles and neglectful of important matters." THAYER From an

CONCERNING CURIOUS ARTS

"Arts or practices requiring skill, address, cunning. The word used here perierga denotes properly "those things that require care or skill," and was thus applied to the arts of "magic, jugglery, and sleight of hand" that were practiced so extensively in Eastern countries. That such arts were practiced at Ephesus is well known. The Ephesian letters, by which incantations and charms were supposed to be produced, were much celebrated. They seem to have consisted of certain combinations of letters or words, which, by being pronounced with certain intonations of voice, were believed to be effectual in expelling diseases, or evil spirits; or which, by being written on parchment and worn, were supposed to operate as amulets, or charms, to guard from evil spirits or from danger." JOHN CALVIN illuminated point of view, this means that such activities are bringing no genuine advantage, but can, at the very best, deal with secondary and inconsequential matters. While such activeness is often nothing more than a delusion, that is not necessarily the case all of the time. There is a dark world that deals in matters that transcend natural human aptitude. The activities of demons confirm this to be the case. Some representatives of that number caused a man to become like a wild beast, running and shrieking through the country, and cutting himself. He also became extraordinarily strong, breaking both chains and shackles (Mk 5:4). Demons have also imposed upon men deafness and dumbness (Mk 9:25), blindness and dumbness (Matt 12:22), violent seizures (Matt 17:14-18; Mk 9:17-27; Lk 9:37-42), and a condition in which a woman was bowed together for eighteen years (Lk 13:11).

Under the Law, consultation with evil spirits and the practice of sorcery and witchcraft were strictly forbidden. This included "familiar spirits" and "wizards that peep and that mutter" (Isa 8:19). Other versions refer to consulting with "mediums and the spiritists who whisper and mutter." NASB The point of condemnation was that the people did not seek to acquire knowledge from their God. Rather, they chose to consult with members of Satan's empire. Thus God reasons, "And when they say to you, "should not a people consult their God? Should they consult the dead on behalf of the living?" (Isa 8:19).

Of those who engaged in such activity the Lord said, “And the soul that turneth after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards, to go a whoring after them, I will even set My face against that soul, and will cut him off from among his people” (Lev 20:6). And again, “There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his son or his daughter to pass through the fire, or that useth divination, or an observer of times, or an enchanter, or a witch, or a charmer, or a consulter with familiar spirits, or a wizard, or a necromancer” (Deu 18:10-11). The Lord also referred to one who had a familiar spirit, who spoke out of the ground (Isa 29:4).

Men may banter about whether or not supernatural things really were wrought by these spirits. However, if this was not the case, I cannot conceive of why God would speak as He did about them. The point is that consultation with such alien spirits is an unlawful means of appropriating knowledge. Whatever is made known by them will not bring eternal advantage to the soul, but will cause God to be against the person who sought such knowledge. Various modern day forms of this kind of knowledge include horoscopes, palm-readers, psychics, astrology, psychiatry, phrenology (study of the skull as a means of determining human behavior), acupuncture, hypnosis, necromancy (conjuring up the souls of the dead), witchcraft, etc.

At any rate, the teaching of Paul, together with the exposure of the powerlessness of spurious religion, convicted these people of their sin, and they came forward confessing they had been wrong, and unveiling their works.

THEY BURNED THEIR BOOKS

“...brought their books together, and burned them before all men . . .” Other versions read, “and began burning them in the sight of all,” NASB “burned them publicly,” NIV “put them on the fire in front of everyone,” BBE and “collected their books and [throwing them, book after book, on the pile] burned them in the sight of everybody.” AMPLIFIED

This was bringing forth fruits “meet for repentance” (Matt 3:8). The conversion of these people was genuine, and therefore there was a change in their conduct. This is what happens under the convicting ministry of the Holy Spirit (John 16:8-11). Here was a total renunciation of a former manner of life in which an unlawful body of knowledge had been sought. Gathering together the books having to do with this realm of knowledge, the people put them in a heap and burned them publicly.

This would be something like a group of people converted from the rock-and-roll generation burning all of their recorded media. Or, a group of psychics burning the literature pertaining to that field. I can even conceive of a body of men converted from the field of psychiatry burning all of their literature, or some turning to Christ from the embrace of evolution gathering their books together and burning them. Of course, such actions would be viewed as extremely radical in this day of loose theology. However, in the book of Acts we are reading of real conversions.

My Own Experience

Back in the early seventies, we experienced an incident in the congregation in Indiana – then known as “The Church at 78 th and Independence.” One of our sons (not by flesh and blood), whom we had raised from a young age, converted a young lady who had been raised by a family devoted to occultism. She had absolutely no exposure to the teaching of Christ prior to that time, and was now a fervent disciple of the Lord. She gathered all of her occultic books and brought them to a week-night gathering of the saints, determined to burn them all. We had an area outside the building where this could be done, and soon the burning commenced. There were a considerable number of books on the heap. Having started the fire, we observed that it swirled around the books, yet was not actually burning any of them. Angered by the whole circumstance, our daughter in-law took hold of a rake, and began to open the books one by one, causing a page at a time to burn. As she continued in this activity, the books finally caught on fire, and the whole of them was burned into a heap of ashes. Afterward she said she was determined not to allow Satan to have his way in the matter. She had been consumed with the zeal of the Lord, and was resolute in her renunciation of what she then saw as a false and damning body of knowledge. I shall never forget that blessed occasion, which brought great rejoicing to all who were present.

Our Time

Considering the days in which we are living, and the false and corrupt literature that is pervading society, one might expect there would be a lot of book burning like that which took place in Ephesus. However, this is not at all the case – as least we are not hearing any reports of such activity. It seems to me that a kind of gospel is being preached that causes such accounts to appear strange. If a time should come when genuine conversions take place on any scale of largeness, events like that described in our text will take place.

As you can see, there is by no means unanimity on the amount of money intended by the expression – but the books were of considerable value. The represented least value, as of 2009, would be $52,800, and the most $9,900,000. If Judas objected to pouring out ointment on Jesus that was valued at a year's wages NIV (for comparison purposes, $30,000), what would he have said about the burning of these books? A modern Christian might say the books could have been sold and the funds procured given to missions.

Yet, in the view of these people, the burning of their books was a gain, not a loss. It constituted the removal of temptation, deliverance from the unlawful and inferior, and a sacrifice that was willingly offered in thanksgiving to God. Whatever is put away in deference to the obtaining of salvation is not a painful loss. What is obtained in redemption constitutes a far greater gain than what must be abandoned to appropriate it. It is never wrong to leave the inferior in preference for the superior; to abandon what is defiled to appropriate what is pure; and to give up what is passing away for what is eternal.

Those who accent life in this world are not to be allowed places of leadership in the body of Christ – all of their imagined credentials notwithstanding. It is time for the professed church to exclude all priorities that do not have to do with fighting the good fight of faith and laying hold on eternal life. If that requires a massive burning of some sort, then let it be so!

WHEN THE WORD OF GOD GREW AND PREVAILED

“ 20 So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.”

SO

“So . . .” Other versions read, “in this way,” NIV “Thus,” CJB “In this powerful way,” GWN “This indicates,” LIVING ,” “This is how,” IE and “In a way of just such power.” WILLIAMS

What has just been reported is a sampling of what took place during the two years Paul taught in the school of Tyrannus. I gather that the exposition of the kingdom of God, together with the hearty acceptance of the message provided an environment in which the Lord was pleased to work in an unusual way. If Jesus “could do no mighty work” where unbelief was prevalent (Mk 6:5), what can be said of an environment in which faith is prominent?

MIGHTILY GREW THE WORD

“ . . . mightily grew the word of God . . .” Other versions read, “growing mightily,” NASB “spread widely,” NIV “increased very greatly,” BBE “continued in a powerful way,” CJB “flourished,” CSB “,” GWN “spread more and more widely,” NJB “spread widely ,” NLT “This indicates how deeply the whole area was stirred by God's message,” LIVING “was influencing more and more people,” IE “mightily did the Lord's Message spread,” WEYMOUTH “grew and spread and intensified,” AMPLIFIED and “continued to grow.” PHILLIPS

The same kind of expression is found in Acts 12:24. Herod had just been smitten by an angel, and died when “he was eaten of worms.” Immediately following that occasion it is written, “But the word of God grew and multiplied” (Acts 12:24).

The Word of God grew in this manner. It was powerfully preached and heartily received. People turned from their wicked ways, openly confessed their deeds, and separated themselves from defiling influences. They willingly gave up their former evil occupations, and discarded everything associated with their former previous manner of life. The attention of the people was turned to the Word of God, and it was given prominence in their lives. Men began to live “by every word of God” (Lk 4:4), which was working “effectually” in them (1 Thess 2:13).

The Stark Contrast of Our Time

Even though, by reason of both time and the nature of Kingdom life, the Word of God should be pervasive throughout our nation, as well as the rest of the world, that is not at all the case. God revealed to Nebuchadnezzar the nature of the Kingdom He would set up on the earth. It would begin small, but eventually fill the whole earth, prevailing over all other kingdoms (Dan 2:35-45).

Unless you go back to the Dark Ages, it will be difficult to identify a time when the ignorance of the Word of God was ever as prevalent as it is today. It is steadily decreasing, and the attention of professing Christians is being turned to other things. Whatever is being preached, it has not induced a hearty appetite for the Word of God. Job, who lived in spiritually primitive times once said, “I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food” (Job 23:12). David, who lived over 3,000 years ago said, “How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!” (Psa 119:103). And again, “Therefore I love thy commandments above gold; yea, above fine gold” (Psa 119:127). Jeremiah, who lived around 2,500 years ago said, “Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart: for I am called by thy name, O LORD God of hosts” (Jer 15:16). Such men are described by the Holy Spirit as dying in the faith, NOT receiving the promises, yet seeing them afar off, being persuaded of them, and embracing them (Heb 11:13). It is written that they were not made perfect without us, for whom God provided “some better thing” (Heb 11:39-40). Yet, in both their understanding and commitment they were light years ahead of the average American Christian. What further compounds the problem is that these second-rate and uninformed Christians are evangelizing the world, spreading their mediocrity to other continents.

Is it all something innocent? Indeed, it is not! God has divulged more of Himself, His mind, and His purpose in Christ Jesus. He has poured forth His Spirit in an abundant measure on those who believe the Gospel (Tit 3:5-6), which is His power unto salvation (Rom 1:16). He has given believers His grace to effectively teach them to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, and to look for the return of Jesus – the “blessed hope” of the church (Tit 2:11-13). The “whole armor of God” has been provided that enables the believer to stand against the wiles of the devil (Eph 6:10-18), and a spiritual arsenal has been supplied that is “mighty through God” (2 Cor 10:3-5).

What reason can be adduced for a weak and uninformed church? How can men explain why sin is so pervasive in the church? Why isn't the Word of God prevailing instead of psychiatry, humanly developed plans, and religious tradition? Why?

If my assessment is correct, I fear the modern church is under

Whatever the word of God confronted, whether Jewish tradition, or members of the occult in Ephesus, it overcame and prevailed. That is, people were more apt to believe the Word of God than the opposing views to which they were subjected.

the judgment of God, just as Israel was when they embraced tradition and lifeless religion. It is said of them, “For the LORD hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes: the prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I cannot; for it is sealed: And the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I am not learned” (Isa 29:12). God has so impacted the understanding of the religious leaders that they cannot comprehend what He has said in His Word. Their professed field of expertise is not the Word, because they have been blinded to it. We are living in the midst of the fulfillment of the prophesy of Amos. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD: And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it. In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst" (Amos 8:11-13).

It may sound radical and depressing to say such things. But if this is not the truth, then the nature of the Kingdom of God has changed, and the power of the Word is no longer present. If what I have said is not true, then the Word has ceased to work effectually in those who believe. In such a case, the grace of God has ceased to teach men (Tit 2:11-12), and the Holy Spirit no longer is leading men to mortify the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13). The Spirit has, then, ceased to change men from glory to glory, conforming them to the image of Jesus (Rom 8:29; 2 Cor 3:18; 4:6). Who would dare to postulate such absurdities?

PHILLIPS

Whatever the word of God confronted, whether Jewish tradition, or members of the occult in Ephesus, it overcame and prevailed. That is, people were more apt to believe the Word of God than the opposing views to which they were subjected. That is a circumstance much to be coveted in our time.

Albert Barnes suggests this verse implies the following. They are good practical observations.

- (1) That religion has power to break the hold of sinners on unjust and dishonest means of living.
- (2) That those who have been engaged in an unchristian and dishonorable practice will abandon it when they become Christians.
- (3) That their abhorrence of their former course will be, and ought to be, expressed as publicly as was the offence.
- (4) That the evil practice will be abandoned at any sacrifice, however great. The question will be, what is right; not what will it cost. Property, in the view of a converted man, is nothing when compared with a good conscience.
- (5) This conduct of those who had used curious arts shows us what ought to be done by those who have been engaged in any evil course of life and who are then converted. ALBERT BARNES, COMMENTARY ON ACTS

It is true that a tree is known by its fruit, and that even men are known by their fruits, or the results of what they preach and teach. Thus Jesus said, "Beware of false prophets, who come to you dressed as sheep, but inside they are devouring wolves. [Ezek. 22:27.] You will fully recognize them by their fruits. Do people pick grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles Even so, every healthy (sound) tree bears good fruit [worthy of admiration], but the sickly (decaying, worthless) tree bears bad (worthless) fruit. A good (healthy) tree cannot bear bad (worthless) fruit, nor can a bad (diseased) tree bear excellent fruit [worthy of admiration]. Every tree that does not bear good fruit is cut down and cast into the fire. Therefore, you will fully know them by their fruits" AMPLIFIED (Matt 7:15-20).

This being true, it seems to me that we must insist on examining what is produced by the doctrines to which we are exposed. If this is not the case, then what can be the meaning of Christ's words?

It is to be understood that when the Gospel is believed, and the obedience of faith follows, the individuals will make voluntary adjustments in their lives. A salvation that does not effect a change of life is no salvation at all. That would be like Israel being delivered from Egypt yet remaining in it. When Saul of Tarsus was converted, he ceased persecuting the church. It is true that some must be exhorted to make the changes – like the admonition to certain in Ephesus: “Let him that stole, steal no more” (Eph 4:28). All believers are exhorted, “Mortify therefore your members that are upon the earth” (Col 3:5), and “let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God” (2 Cor 7:1).

And why is this the case? Because the wine of the newness of life cannot be poured into the old life. It cannot be contained in a manner of living that is in synch with the world, from which Jesus has delivered us. All religion that allows for, or excuses, deviate conduct, is to be forthrightly abandoned.

CONCLUSION

Our text has exposed us to certain things about Satan's kingdom. First, it does not yield to powerless religion or religious pretension. The devil and his hosts are actually invincible when confronted with a religion that is not rooted in a very real identity with the Lord Jesus Christ. Men may develop systems to alter human behavior, but when that behavior is governed by the powers of darkness, human procedures are impotent.

Second, when anyone hears and believes the Gospel of Christ, yielding the obedience of faith, they can make a clean exit from the worst of intellectual and emotional falsehood. When the Ephesians who were devoted to “curious arts” gathered their books together, all the powers of darkness could not hinder them. Further, the Word of God grew in its influence, and prevailed over all competing powers. Satan and his hosts could not stop the preaching or the spread of the Word of God. A territory over which he had apparently exercised dominion for some time was invaded, and he was powerless to stop that invasion.

Can such things happen in our day and time? There is no need to spend time speculating and philosophizing about it. The truth of the Gospel is confirmed in the crucible of conflict among those who believe it and respond to it accordingly.

DEMTRIUS CAUSES TROUBLE

“ 19:21-29 After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome. 22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season. 23 And the same time there arose no small stir about that way. 24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen; 25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth. 26 Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands: 27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth. 28 And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians. 29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theater. ” (Acts 19:21-29)

INTRODUCTION

A SUMMATION OF THE TEXT

With the growth of the Word of God, and it prevailing over all competing influences, a devastating blow was struck to the idol-worshipping community. Not only were “curious arts” abandoned by a significant number of people, but idol-centered religion was being forsaken as well. This impacted the business community in Ephesus, causing no small stir among those who crafted images. Demetrius, a local silversmith who made images, called for a special meeting, determined to launch a campaign against Paul. His reasoning unveils the manner in which spiritually uncultured minds think. It also reveals how hard hearts can be that are devoted to false religion. Another thing to see is the confusion that is wrought by a commitment to idols, as compared to the peaceful fruits of righteousness that are produced by the Gospel in those who receive it. This kind of contrast exists today as well, and is to be duly noted.

THE GROWING AND PREVAILING WORD

there a great number of people turning to the Lord, there were even a significant number of people who had been devoted to the occult who abandoned their way of life, confessed their deeds, and even burned the books that taught the ins and outs of “curious arts.” However, that is not all that took place. The whole fabric of the system of idol-worshiping began to unravel, and this caused no small stir among the merchants who earned their living by making idols. The people who were embracing what Paul preached simply could not continue in their old ways. They could not put the wine of newness of life into the old wineskins of the flesh.

THE ILLOGICAL NATURE OF CONTINUANCE IN SIN

For those who are in Christ Jesus, continuance in sin, however minuscule men may imagine it to be, is contrary to sound thought. In fact, it is a form of insanity – the worst form of it. As it is written, “What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid. How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein?” (Rom 6:1-2). If it is true that those who are baptized into Christ’s death, having obeyed from the heart the form of the doctrine delivered to them, are “dead indeed unto, but alive unto God,” then precisely how is a continuation in sin to be explained (Rom 6:3,11,17)? If the purpose for Jesus Christ dying for all was that from now on those in Him are to live no longer for themselves, but unto the One who died and rose again (2 Cor 5:15), what is really the cause that moves people to fail to do exactly that?

And, why aren’t these questions being addressed by the educational branch of the professed church? Why are the supposed leaders of the Christian community consulting with the psychologists and motivational gurus? Whatever the answers that are put forward, they will not be supported by the book of Acts! In this record there is a genuineness of both doctrine and life that stands in stark contrast to what is called the church of our day.

READING THE BOOK OF ACTS THROUGH SECTARIAN GLASSES

Most honest people know that the modern church is riddled with sin – sin of the worst order. Such lives are, in a sense, the fruit of the teaching that has been accepted. Unlike Paul’s teaching, much of the preaching and teaching of our time has little or nothing to do with the kingdom of God.

It is possible to read the book of Acts through sectarian glasses – in fact, once a people have devoted themselves to a Christian sect or denomination, it is virtually impossible to avoid perusing this volume in such a manner. Subconsciously, the person begins to think that in writing the book of Acts, Luke is actually presenting a defense for their emphasis.

However, Luke is not trying to justify the stance of the early church. He is rather reporting it. He is not establishing HOW people became Christians, but the fact that they did believe on the Lord Jesus, obey Him, and conduct their lives in harmony with what He is doing. His aim was not to show how churches were organized, or where they met, but that those in Jesus do, in fact, gravitate to one another, and delight in one another's company.

Through the Spirit, Luke reports the effects of genuine and God-sanctioned preaching and teaching. From the standpoint of WHO was preached, it was Jesus Christ (8:5,35; 9:20; 17:18). From the perspective of Divine purpose, the Kingdom of God was preached (8:12; 19:8; 28:23,31). If we view it from it from the position of text, it was the Word of God or the Scriptures (8:35; 13:5; 14:25; 15:36; 17:13). The marvelous results recorded in this volume mark the beginning of Christ dwelling within men. The results that are chronicled by Luke are because of the message that was preached and believed. It impacted the earth, the domain of darkness, and heaven as well. While these outcomes were wrought by the hand of the Lord, they did not differ in order from the manner in which God works in this present day.

BAD FRUIT INDICATES A BAD TREE

Most honest people know that the modern church is riddled with sin – sin of the worst order. Such lives are, in a sense, the fruit of the teaching that has been accepted. Unlike Paul's teaching, much of the preaching and teaching of our time has little or nothing to do with the kingdom of God. A man-centered message is being presented. Rather than delivering a word from God, feeble attempts are being made to give an answer for the pain and complexity of life that is caused by spiritual stupidity and a love for sin. Whatever is intended by such miserable dissertations, the fruits they are producing confirm God is not in them.

Like it or not, our day is marked by false teachers who are presenting a God, a Christ, and a gospel, that does not produce the kind of disciples prophesied by the prophets, recorded in the book of Acts, and described in the Epistles.

At some point men must begin to question the validity of preaching and teaching that, when accepted, does not produce growing and maturing disciples. Jesus does not produce faltering and halting disciples. The Holy Spirit does not lend His indispensable influence to making such followers. The Gospel itself, which is God's "power unto salvation" does not produce such fruit. Heaven neither makes nor condones lives that are not advancing toward the prize of a high calling. A good tree not only DOES not produce evil fruit, it CANNOT do so. Further, an evil tree CANNOT produce good fruit (Matt 7:15-20).

All religion that allows for, or excuses, deviate conduct, is to be forthrightly abandoned. The teaching that has produced a flawed life is like a corrupt tree that must be cut down. That is precisely why John the Baptist, who prepared the way for Jesus, said, "And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matt 3:10).

Like it or not, our day is marked by false teachers who are presenting a God, a Christ, and a gospel, that does not produce the kind of disciples prophesied by the prophets, recorded in the book of Acts, and described in the Epistles. There are 2.5 billion professing Christians in the world today – nearly twice as many as the total number of Muslims (1.5 billion). They are all the products of what they have been taught. Oh, there is a remnant among them, for God has always reserved a remnant for Himself.

If the Kingdom of God is an ever-increasing kingdom, as declared in Scripture (Isa 9:7; 11:9; Dan 2:35,44-45; Hab 2:14; Matt 13:31-32), exactly how does one explain spiritual deterioration? What is the source of such phenomenon? If what the prophets and Jesus said about the nature of the Kingdom and spiritual life is true, what does cause spiritual decline? Is it the nature of newness of life to wane? Is growing up into Christ a kind of abnormality, or is it really the nature of spiritual life? Does Jesus promote mediocrity? If not, who does? Does the Holy Spirit have anything to do with disinterest, a preference for the world, and self-centeredness? If not, what spirit does promote, or advances such things? These are certainly things to think about.

A GODLY MAN PURPOSES IN THE SPIRIT

“ 19:21 After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.”

As is characteristic of Scriptural history, the next recorded event is one of significance in which a very brief literary transition is made. This is true notwithstanding the remarkable report that has just been given. The nature of the incident involving the burning of books, could have been drawn out, with a strong appeal to the curiosity of men. That is what men in the flesh would do, specifying some of the books, and commenting specifically on the way the lives of those who burned them were changed. However, that is not the manner of the Spirit, or of those who are being directed by Him. Instead, the effect of the action upon the surrounding people is reported. First, the word of God “grew mightily and prevailed,” while the recorded words pertaining to “curious arts” waned and dissipated. Now, we will find that there was also an impact upon the society that had capitalized on the requirements of idolatry. This will be revealed in the midst of a holy resolution made by Paul.

AFTER THESE THINGS WERE ENDED

“After these things were ended . . .” Other versions read, “were accomplished,” NKJV “were finished,” NASB “had happened,” NIV “after these events,” RSV “were over,” CSB “were fulfilled,” DARBY “was concluded,” NAB “had taken place,” NET “When matters had reached this point,” WEYMOUTH and “had been brought to a close.” WILLIAMS

Do not forget what has just been reported. They were of an epochal nature.

- Paul had been teaching daily in the school of Tyrannus for two years (19:9-10a).
- All that dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks (19:10b).
- Special miracles were wrought by the hands of Paul (19:11).
- Handkerchiefs and aprons were brought from Paul’s body, diseases departed, and evil spirits went out of those possessed by them (19:12).
- Certain vagabond Jewish exorcists had been exposed when they attempted an exorcism by using the name of “Jesus whom Paul preached.” The possessed man leaped on the seven men making the attempt, forcing them to leave the house naked and bleeding (19:13-16).
- This was known to all the Jews and Greeks in Ephesus, fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified (19:17).
- Many that believed came and confessed and showed their deeds (19:18).
- Many also who had used “curious arts” brought their books together and burned them publicly (19:19).

- Thus, the Word of God grew mightily and prevailed” (19:20).

Concerning this series of events, the Spirit moves Luke to refer to them as “these things.” Most men would not have referred to them in such a manner, but would have accented how unusual and remarkable they were. However, this is not how a spiritual man assesses such things. Even when referring to the most unusual phenomenon of handkerchiefs and aprons being brought from Paul’s body, which were apparently significant in the working of several miracles, care was taken to state it in a God-glorifying way: “And God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul” (Acts 19:11). “Special” and startling and not the same thing. “Special” is something God does, while startling or arresting is the impact it has upon men. In other words, the unusualness of the miracles was not from a human point of view, for any miracle would fall into that category. This report, however, accents that God worked in a manner that was not common for Him to work. This does not accent the miracles, but the One who did them, working without any kind of restraint or inability. These were not works that were difficult for God, but were rather not ordinary among men.

This may appear to be an insignificant distinction, but that is not at all the case. The extraordinary nature of miracles is not the thing that is to capture our attention, but the One who works them. To approach the event of reference in any other way would have drawn undue attention to Paul, and caused men to marvel without fearing God. This is a trap into which miracle-mongers fall – those who have an inordinate appetite for miracles. Such people are not noted for their fear of God, for they assess miracles from a human point of view, not making an association with the God of heaven, whose will and purpose are absolutely superior. The thought that God Almighty can work in such a way confirms that His wrath is to be feared, and His will obeyed without delay. Blessed is the society who perceives these things to be so.

Therefore, the expression “these things” highlights a God that works without restraint, even in a realm that has been dominated by the wicked one. It also accents the necessity of being joined to Christ Himself, for God will not honor the words of those who simulate identity with Christ, as confirmed in the seven sons of Sceva.

PAUL PURPOSED IN THE SPIRIT

“Paul purposed in the spirit . . .” Other versions read, “decided,” NIV “resolved in the Spirit,” NRSV “came to a decision,” BBE “decided by the Spirit,” CJB “purposed in his spirit,” DARBY “purposed in his mind,” MRD “made up his mind,” NJB “felt compelled by the Spirit,” NLT “made plans,” IE “decided in his own mind,” WEYMOUTH “under the guidance of the Spirit,” WILLIAMS “determined in the [Holy] Spirit, AMPLIFIED and “set his heart.” PHILLIPS

The various translations present two distinct views of this text – and they are contrary to each other.

- That the “spirit” of reference is Paul’s own spirit, accenting that this was a decision he made on his own. (New International Version, Basic Bible English, Darby, God’s Word, James Murdock Translation, New American Bible, New Jerusalem Bible, International English, Weymouth, Montgomery, Phillips).

- That this decision was made through the influence of the Holy Spirit, to which Paul submitted Himself. (KJV, New King James, New American Standard, Revised Standard, New Revised Standard, American Standard, Complete Jewish Bible, Christian Standard Bible, Douay, English Revised, Geneva, NET Bible, New Living Translation Webster, Revised Webster, Bishop’s New Testament, Tyndale, Young’s Literal Translation, Living Bible, Williams, Amplified).

The precise Greek phrase used in this text is evn tw/l pneu,mati. This is consistent in the Greek texts, and is properly translated “in” (evn) “the” (tw) “spirit” (pneu,mati). If it is true, as Paul himself confessed, that Christ was living in Paul, and that the life he lived was not his own (Gal 2:20), then it is inconceivable that he was directed by his own independent thinking. Consider also that Jesus considered Paul “faithful,” putting him into the ministry (1 Tim 1:12). Paul was a man who was easily directed by Jesus, as various reports confirm (Acts 9:6; 16:9-10; 18:10; 23:11; 26:16; 27:22-25).

The priority of the sons of God has been largely hidden from the consideration of believers by the current emphasis on evangelism.

Therefore, I see no reason to conclude anything other than this: that the Holy Spirit was directing Paul in this decision, just as He did on other occasions.

JERUSALEM, THEN ROME

“ . . . when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying, After I have been there, I must also see Rome.” Other versions read, “I must visit Rome also,” NIV “I have a desire to see Rome,” BBE “I must see Rome as well,” CSB “I must go on to see Rome as well,” NJB and “it behoveth me to also to see Rome.” YLT

The aim of passing through Macedonia and Achaia was to visit the brethren, confirming them in the faith and strengthening their hands in the Lord. The immediate purpose for going to Jerusalem, was to deliver the collection that was being gathered for the poor saints there – their poverty being the result of a great dearth that had been prophesied earlier (Acts 11:28-29).

It has been revealed that this is a Kingdom priority – the establishment and care of the saints (Eph 4:11-16; Col 1:9-17; 4:12; Heb 6:1-8; 1 Pet 5:10). Jesus taught this as well (John 21:15-17; Matt 25:32-46). The Lord taught that the distinguishing trait of the saints was their love for one another (John 13:35). John taught the same (1 John 5:10; 3:10-14; 4:20-21). Yet, with alarming consistency, this has been glossed by the modern church, which has emphasized a love for those who are of the world.

The priority of the sons of God has been largely hidden from the consideration of believers by the current emphasis on evangelism. It is thought that, what is referred to as “the winning of souls,” is the primary function of the church. This emphasis has been adopted, even though there is not a single word addressed to the churches that suggests this is their primary work. The Scriptures contain letters to seven specific churches: Rome, Corinth, Galatia, Philippi, Ephesus, Colossae, and Thessalonica. There are letters written to collective groups of brethren: Hebrews, James, First and Second Peter, First John, and Jude. The book of the Revelation was written to a collection of churches: Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea. There are letters of instruction to individual believers who were generally leaders: Timothy, Titus, Philemon, Gaius, and the elect lady. Yet, none of these inspired words mention the priority of winning souls. All of them emphasize the necessity of being established in the faith – i.e. that this is what salvation is calculated to do. On a practical level, this is what guarantees the insightful and productive spread of the Word of God.

My point is that Paul ministered with the saints and their preparation for glory as his primary motivation. This is why he made a practice of revisiting believers to see how they were doing, and then establish them in the faith.

In this text we see the resoluteness of Paul to visit and strengthen the churches. This was his constant manner (Acts 14:21; 15:36; 16:6; 1Thessalonians 3:1-5). The church at Philippi was in Macedonia, and Corinth was in Achaia. Rather than seeking his own interests, he deferred to give himself for the strengthening of the churches, that he might present them to Christ as chaste and mature (2 Cor 11:2; Col 1:28). There is a vast difference between that noble motive and giving oneself to the resolution of earthly difficulties and challenges. Those who make their primary aim the easing of the saints lives in this world, are coming short of the revealed purpose of God. To begin with, God has nowhere promised that life in this world will be easy. In fact, in this very book believers were told “that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22).

The whole of redemption, every whit of it, is to ready people for passing from this world to stand before the Judge of all the earth. If that objective is not met, it really makes no difference what else may appear to have been accomplished. If, in the end, the individual is not suited to joyfully dwell forever with the Lord, whatever he has done in this world has been meaningless. It is my persuasion that it will not go well on the day of judgment for those pretentious church leaders who have conducted their ministry in stark contradiction of this revealed preference. Perpetual spiritual immaturity is evidence of wrong teaching.

HE SENT THOSE WHO MINISTERED TOO HIM

“ 22 So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus; but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.”

We are being exposed to the manner of a person who lives by faith. The absence of ungodly haste is very apparent. As it is written, “he that believeth shall not make haste” (Isa 28:16) – making haste denotes an impulsiveness that is produced by a lack of confidence and assurance. In other words, getting the work done is not the compelling nature of spiritual life. It is rather doing the will of the Lord, which will include the completion of the work. There is a fellowship with the Lord that is involved in His work that produces a godly deliberation and alertness. It is apparent to me that the details of serving God are not always apparent. Rather, in the process of working out one’s own salvation, and pursuing his calling Divine direction is realized. This has already been made clear in the calling and direction of Paul and Barnabas (Acts 13:2-14:28), as well as Paul and Silas (Acts 15:40-18:5).

+ Those who are not living by faith have no idea of how to proceed in such a manner. Among those who lack assurance, the very idea of Divine direction is associated exclusively with commandments and, what is conceived to be, complete step-by-step plans. But this is not the manner of the Kingdom, nor has it ever been. Those who walk with God and labor together with Him will be required to employ their perception and wisdom as they proceed along the path of service. This is the kind of thing to which we are now being exposed.

TWO OF THEM THAT MINISTERED UNTO HIM

“So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timotheus and Erastus . . .”

Now Paul sends two brethren into Macedonia. That is the region to which Paul had been called earlier, when the Spirit had forbidden them to preach in Asia (Acts 16:9-10). That was 3-5 years earlier, prior to the three years he had spent in Ephesus (Acts 20:31). At that time, Timothy had already joined his party (Acts 16:1-3). Some time during the intervening period, Erastus had also joined him, and, together with Timothy were among those who ministered to Paul. If this is the same Erastus mentioned in Romans 16:23, he was the chamberlain of the city of Corinth, from which the Roman letter was written. In the place of “chamberlain,” other versions read “treasurer,” NKJV and “director of public works.” NIV This being the case, he and Timothy had possibly accompanied Paul to Galatia, Phrygia, Macedonia, Corinth, and Ephesus (16:6-12; 18:1; 19:1). This was sufficient time to confirm his character and faithfulness in matters pertaining to the Kingdom.

We know that Paul was intolerant of vacillating disciples who abandoned the work, as confirmed in his reluctance to take John Mark, who had departed from the work in Pamphylia, when Paul had determined to visit the churches (Acts 15:36-38). Although some have taken it upon themselves to criticize Paul for this action, it proved to be a wise move, as confirmed by the ministry of himself and Silas, joined by the likes of Timothy.

It ought to be noted that those who serve the Lord must “first be proved” or “tested” NKJV (1 Tim 3:10). Spiritual responsibilities are not to be assigned to people who have not demonstrated unquestionable faithfulness in their commitment to the Lord. That, of course, is the express requirement of the Lord, and no person should balk at it. If a person has a desire to serve the Lord in some responsible capacity, they must take seriously the matter of faithfulness and dependability.

It is generally understood that these two brethren were dispatched to assist in gathering the offerings for poor saints in Jerusalem, confirm the state of the churches, and to report Paul’s activities for the Lord (Phil 2:19; 1 Cor 4:17; 16:10). Once again, the priority of Paul’s concern for the churches is clear. Of course, this reflects the concern of the Good Shepherd Himself who cares for His flock, cherishing and nourishing them.

HE HIMSELF STAYED IN ASIA FOR A SEASON

“ . . . but he himself stayed in Asia for a season.” Other versions read, “for a time,” NKJV “for a while,” NASB “a little longer,” NIV and “went on living in Asia for a time.” BBE

We do not know how long Paul remained in Asia, no doubt in Ephesus, as the text that follows substantiates. Once again, this confirms the nature of laboring together with the Lord. Matters are not always spelled out in detail. Sometimes, perhaps even the majority of the time, the laborer must be sensitive to the Lord, remaining faithful and focused in his labors, and alert to opportunities and needs that require attention.

Insensitive and fluctuating souls cannot operate in such a manner, and therefore will not be directed into profitable labors for the Lord . It has been my observation over the years that those who choose to labor in an institutionalized environment are rarely qualified to be called to specific duties, as were Timothy and Erastus. Such a surrounding has a dulling effect upon the soul, destroying spiritual sensitivity. That is because Christ is never the heart of a human institution or organization. When it comes to a body of people, the Lord Jesus confines the distribution of His glory, and the allocation of meaningful work, to the church, “Which is His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all” (Eph 1:23). This is mode of the Kingdom, and the Lord never departs from it. Only honorable vessels are used for honorable purposes.

THE WAY THAT TROUBLED THE UNGODLY

“ 23 And the same time there arose no small stir about that way.”

Meanwhile, while Paul remained in Ephesus, some trouble broke out. It did not occur, however, until after the Word of God had grown mightily and prevailed, with all of Asia hearing the Gospel. The powers of darkness were held at bay until a decisive blow was dealt to the occultist community. With all of his power and host of workers, the devil was unable to stop the invasion of that dark community. Now that those accomplishments have taken place, it is as though a small window of opportunity is afforded the enemy, and the wicked one at once goes to work.

NO SMALL STIR

“And the same time there arose no small stir . . .” Other versions read, “a great commotion,” NKJV “no small disturbance,” NASB “A great disturbance,” NIV “no little disturbance broke out,” NRSV “no little stir,” RSV “a great outcry,” BBE “a major furor,” CJB “no small trouble,” GENEVA “a serious disturbance,” GWN “no little ado,” TNT “a big blowup developed,” LIVING and “some bad trouble.” IE

There is not only a difference between the kingdom of light and that of darkness, there is a certain hostility that exists between them. There is a mutual hatred they have toward each other, and a discontent in one, at the presence of the other. Where there is moral and spiritual disparity, there is absolutely no neutrality or tolerance. Neither side allows for the presence of the other, just as surely as there is no accord between Christ and Belial (2 Cor 6:14-16). Wherever there are professing Christians who are indifferent to the encroachments of evil, false claims are being made about being identified with Christ Jesus.

Now, in the midst of a rapidly spreading spiritual awakening, the definitive line between good and evil is suddenly made very apparent. This is because the spread of light penetrates and neutralizes darkness. There is a resistance of the truth in moral “miry places” where individuals refuse to come to the light, lest their deeds be even further exposed (Ezek 47:11; John 3:19-20).

Now tumult arises, which is the work of the wicked one, “For where envying and strife is, there is confusion and every evil work” (James 3:16). The renewal that is taking place has introduced certain restrictions among the wicked, and they will oppose what is taking place.

ABOUT THAT WAY

“ . . . about that way.” Other versions read, “the Way,” NKJV “the way of the Lord,” DOUAY “the way of Christ,” GWN “the way of God,” MRD “concerning the Christians,” LIVING “the new faith,” WEYMOUTH and “the way [of the Lord].” AMPLIFIED

This is “the way of salvation,” of which the powers of darkness are keenly aware (Acts 16:17). It is also referred to as “the way of the Lord” (Acts 18:25), and “the way of God” (Acts 18:26). Earlier, in the synagogue of Ephesus, there were those who “spake evil of that way ” (Acts 19:9). The unbelieving Jews referred to it as “heresy” (Acts 24:14). The Psalmist referred to “the way of the righteous” (Psa 1:6). David said that God was good, and “therefore He will teach sinners in the way ” (Psa 25:8). Isaiah prophesied of “The way of holiness” that would be raised up for “wayfaring men” who were traveling through this world (Isa 35:8). New Covenant language refers to “the new and living way ” that has been “consecrated for us” by the Lord Jesus Christ (Heb 10:20).

This is not a “way of life” in which living is addressed by a set of rules or procedures. It is more related to a highway, or road, on which men travel to glory, as indicated by Isaiah. In fact, Jesus referred to Himself as “the Way ” (John 14:6). This all assumes that men are journeying to a certain destination that is external to this world. It also assumes that it is not only distinct, but is at variance with the way, or manner, in which those who are not in Jesus live. Such benighted men live for this world, just as though they would never leave it. On the other hand, those pilgrims who are walking on the highway of holiness are en route to another world, and are readying themselves to occupy a better city, and inhabit a better country (Heb 11:10,16).

Now a commotion is raised “about that way” – a manner and direction of life that significantly impacts upon the way men live. In this case, the lives of the people were so altered that it impinged upon the business community. Men stopped buying certain articles, and certain retail merchants were no longer able to make an adequate living.

There are conscientious Christians who long for such an impact in our time – when certain goods can no longer be sold, and wickedness cannot be marketed with any measure of success. Historically, wherever real spiritual renewal takes place, this kind of effect has been wrought. Liquor stores, night clubs, and other businesses that are uncomely have been closed. Some places had no further need for jails, and the need for law enforcement was greatly reduced.

Today religious sophists refer to the church as a hospital for the morally sick. I suppose they speak in such a foolish manner because there are so many people among them that fall into this category. However, neither the prophets nor Jesus said that redemption would provide a place for the morally and spiritually infirm. The Prophets affirmed that in redemption “the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert. And the parched ground shall become a pool, and the thirsty land springs of water: in the habitation of dragons, where each lay, shall be grass with reeds and rushes” (Isa 35:5-7). Jesus boldly announced that He had been sent to “heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised” (Luke 4:18).

The church is not a place like the pool of Bethesda, where “a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water” (John 5:3). Rather it is the residence of those who have been healed by the great Physician, and are no longer in the category of sick and infirm – what they once “were” (Rom 6:17,20; 1 Cor 6:9-10; 12:2; Eph 2:12; 5:8' 1 Pet 2:25). When people are “added” to the body of Christ, they are removed from the unacceptable category in which they were once confined.

There is no such thing as a salvation in which there is no fundamental moral and spiritual change. In conversion the individual passes from death unto life, from not being a people to being the people of God, and from being an enemy to being reconciled. There is a very real transition from being without hope to having a living hope, from having no mercy to obtaining mercy, and from being alienated to being called into the fellowship of Christ. One cannot enter the kingdom of God without being delivered from the world. It is not possible to be in Christ and still be dominated by sin and ruled by the devil. You cannot be added to the church without being subtracted from the roster of the condemned of this world.

To postulate that all of this could take place without any firm evidence borders on blasphemy, and is a sure sign of unbelief. Such a condition would presume a Savior who really did not save, and a new creation that was not different from what men are in Adam. Men are not free to philosophize about salvation, or speculate about what it means to be born again.

The fact of the matter is that “the unclean” are not allowed on the “way” that leads to glory. That is precisely what Isaiah said: “And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it ; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein” (Isa 35:8). Should there be among believers those whose lives are characterized by moral or spiritual sickness, they are admonished, “Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless ” (2 Pet 3:14).

THE POINT OF THIS

The point of this is that those who turned to the Lord in Ephesus ceased their identification with their former lives. That is what it means to be “dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God” (Rom 6:11). It even affected what they purchased in the marketplace, and the buildings they once frequented. They were different – “created in Christ Jesus unto good works” (Eph 2:10).

When it comes to moral blemishes like fornication, uncleanness, and covetousness, we are told, “let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints” (Eph 5:3). The church is not a place where such people are housed, but where they lose that kind of identity! I do not how that truth can be contravened.

In this text, the change wrought in those who believed was so marked that it impacted on the business affairs of the city of Ephesus. The salvation of God is still marked by that kind of effect. This is because it ushers men into a spiritual realm called “the heavenly places” (Eph 2:6). This new domain is at variance with the world, being of a higher and superior order. It is not possible to avoid the resultant conflict. In order to occupy that heavenly realm, you must refuse to be of the world, and travel through it as a pilgrim and a stranger. Even during the times prior of the New Covenant, this was the posture of those who believed in the Lord. It is said of them, they “confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country” (Heb 11:13-14). It is this circumstance that created the conflict that is now reported to have taken place in Ephesus.

THE CONCERNS OF THE IDOL WORSHIPERS

“ 24 For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen; 25 Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.”

The wicked are forward to register their objection to “the way” that leads to glory, and to the teaching that attends it. This is because the variance of that “way” to the world is revealed in very practical ways. Christian influence is not theoretical, even though, judging from the manners of the modern church, one would think that is the case. An astounding percentage of professed Christian teaching and living is on a theoretical or philosophical basis, having no genuine impact on society. For example, it has become very fashionable to say, “God has called us to be salt and light,” or “We are to be salt and light in the world.” It all sounds very Scriptural, and all of the church members acquiesce with a nod of agreement, admitting that is certainly the way it ought to be. However, that is not what the Savior said. He said, “Ye ARE the salt of the earth,” and “Ye ARE the light of the world” (Matt 5:13-14). That is not theoretical, but factual!

Our text certainly reveals that Christian influence was not theoretical or philosophical in the city of Ephesus. There, the real power of God was being made known through the teaching of Paul and those who received his word.

A CERTAIN MAN NAMED DEMETRIUS

“For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver shrines for Diana . . .” Other versions read, “made silver shrines of Artimas,” NASB “silver boxes for the images of Diana,” BBE “objects connected with the worship of the goddess Artemis,” CJB “making silver temples of Artemis,” DARBY “silver temples of Diana,” GENEVA “silver models of the temple of Artemis,” GWN “silver shrines for Artemis,” NAB “making silver sanctuaries of Artemis.” YLT “little silver models which looked like the temple of the goddess Artemis,” IE “miniature silver sanctuaries of Diana,” WEYMOUTH and “silver shrines of [the goddess] Artemis [Diana].” AMPLIFIED

The Artemis of the Greeks (Artemis Acts 19:24), and Diana of the Romans, is a goddess known under various modifications and with almost incompatible attributes. According to the Homeric accounts and Hesiod, she was the daughter of Jupiter and Latona, born at the same time with Apollo at Delos. As the tutelary divinity of Ephesus, in which character alone she concerns us here, she was undoubtedly a representative of the same power presiding over conception and birth which was adored in Palestine under the name of A SHTORETH . – MCCLINTOK & STRONG’S

Several of the later versions read “Artemis” instead of Diana. This is

The Temple of Artemis (Greek: ἄρτεμιον Artemision), also known less precisely as Temple of Diana, was a Greek temple dedicated to Artemis completed— in its most famous phase— around 550 BC at Ephesus (in present-day Turkey). Though the monument was one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, only foundations and sculptural fragments of the temple remain. There were previous temples on its site, where evidence of a sanctuary dates as early as the Bronze Age.

The new temple antedated the Ionic immigration by many years. Callimachus, in his Hymn to Artemis, attributed the origin of the temenos at Ephesus to the Amazons, whose worship he imagines already centered upon an image (bretas). In the seventh century the old temple was destroyed by a flood. The construction of the "new" temple, which was to become known as one of the wonders of the ancient world, began around 550 BC. It was a 120-year project, initially designed and built by the Cretan architect Chersiphron and his son Metagenes, at the expense of Croesus of Lydia.

It was described by Antipater of Sidon, who compiled the list of the Seven Wonders: "I have set eyes on the wall of lofty Babylon on which is a road for chariots, and the statue of Zeus by the Alpheus, and the hanging gardens, and the colossus of the Sun, and the huge labour of the high pyramids, and the vast tomb of Mausolus; but when I saw the house of Artemis that mounted to the clouds, those other marvels lost their brilliancy, and I said, "Lo, apart from Olympus, the Sun never looked on aught so grand." – WIKIPEDIA, Encyclopedia transliteration of the Greek word used here. This goddess "was worshiped as the goddess of fertility." ROBERTSON'S WORD PICTURES

The "shrines" of reference were miniature temples, made of silver, in which an image of Diana was placed. These were often kept in the homes of the worshipers, and even worn by them.

The temple of Diana, or Artemis, which was modeled in these small "shrines," was one of the seven wonders of the world, impressive in appearance. Parts of this temple remain to this very day.

The point of mentioning all of this is to emphasize the commitment of these people to the false goddess Diana. There was no tolerance for those who chose to ignore this god, or who said or insinuated in any way that she was not a god. Further, the lives of these idol-worshippers depended upon prevalence of the god they worshiped. Their's was not a casual religion, to say the least.

BROUGHT GAIN TO THE CRAFTSMEN

". . . brought no small gain unto the craftsmen . . ." Other versions read, "no small profit," NKJV "no little business," NASB "no small amount of work," CJB "a great deal of business," CSB "brought great gains," GENEVA "afforded great profits," MRD "provided work for a large number of craftsmen," NJB "kept many craftsmen busy," NLT "not a little beneficial," TNT "the men who did the work made lots of money from it," IE "brought rich profit to his workmen," MONTGOMERY and "brought no small income to his craftsmen." AMPLIFIED

Here, then, was a lucrative business built upon the religion of the people. Their work consisted of making small silver replicas of the Temple of Diana. Several depictions of this temple are provided on this page, one of which is a replica of an ancient artist. It is apparent that much detailed work went into the making of these "shrines," and thus much profit was realized. Further, the city was largely devoted to the worship of this false god.

Now, after at least two years of Paul's teaching concerning the kingdom of God, this lucrative business had been seriously disrupted. The truth of God had an impact on the business world, particular the part of it that depended upon the worship of a false god.

Since the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil (1 Tim 6:10), anything that impacts on the amount of money that people have is subject to their condemnation – whether the matter is true or not. The true perspective of worldly wealth is clearly stated by the Lord Jesus Himself. "Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15).

The action that is now described really had nothing to do with right and wrong, or truth and error. It was rather driven by a covetous spirit, and assumed that life did consist of how much of this world's goods a person possessed.

HE CALLED THEM TOGETHER

“ . . . Whom he called together with the workmen of like occupation, and said . . .” Other versions read, “similar occupation,” NKJV “similar trades,” NASB “related trades,” NIV “same trade,” NRSV “engaged in this kind of business,” CSB “who wrought in such things,” DARBY and “all the artisans of his trade, and those who labored with them.” MRD

The idea here is that Demetrius called together all those who worked for himself, together with those engaged in businesses related to the making of shrines for the goddess Diana. This could include quite a panorama of business men. Here are some examples.

- Those who purchased large quantities of silver for retailing.
- Those who smelted silver, rendering it more pure.
- Those developed equipment for the smelting of silver.
- Those who sold smelting equipment.
- Those who developed tools for working with silver.
- Those who manufactured the tools.
- Those who sold the tools.
- Specialists who used the tools.
- Those who made the forms into which the silver was poured.
- Those who sold the forms.
- Those who used the forms.
- Retailers who sold the forms.
- Those who made small images to be placed in the miniature shrines.
- Those who sold the small idols.

That will suffice to show something of the involvements of making and selling shrines for the goddess Diana. It does not take into consideration the possible assembling of the shrines and images for sale. Now, Demetrius calls them all together, for what is taking place in their city has a direct bearing upon all of them.

BY THIS CRAFT WE HAVE OUR WEALTH

“ . . . Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth.” Other versions read, “our prosperity by this trade,” NKJV “our prosperity depends upon this business,” NASB “we receive good income from this business,” NIV “this line of business provides us our living,” CJB “our well-living arises from this work,” DARBY “Our gain is by this trade,” DOUAY “by this craft we have our goods,” GENEVA “we’re earning a good income from this business,” GWN “our gains are all from this manufacture,” MRD “by this craft we have advantage,” PNT “this business is our income,” LIVING and “we make a lot of money from our business.” IE

Here is a significant part of the citizenry of Ephesus that has been impacted by what Paul has preached and taught over a period of two years. Wherever his message was embraced, it directly effected these business men, significantly reducing the amount of their income. This is confirmation of the power of the Gospel, as well as the change that takes place in the nature of those who believe and obey it.

Here was a system of false religion – specifically the worship of Diana – that had nurtured covetousness in the hearts of marketeers. It had promoted wealth in this world – something that certain professing Christians are advocating this very day. How deluded a people must be to think that Deity – particularly the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ – would actually make it His aim to establish His subjects in this present evil world, which He has cursed. Yet, this is the postulate of nearly all religion that is not solidly based upon Jesus Christ.

THE SITUATION IN OUR DAY

This is the same spirit that was animating the silversmiths in Ephesus – a spirit of covetousness. Now, Satan has permeated professing Christendom with the same delusion, which is much worse.

Today we are faced with a type of Christianity that is actually impotent. Not only does it fail to change the lives of those who embrace it, it has no illuminating influence in the cities that have an abundance of what they call “churches.” It certainly has not impacted the income of uncomely businesses. There has not been a massive closing down of liquor stores, or pornography marketers, and stores that are purveyors in uncomely literature and entertainment media. The palm-readers and fortune-tellers of these cities have realized no significant reduction in marketing their works.

I am not naive. I do realize that God has not promised such effects will always take place. However, throughout history, there have been consistent results like this wherever the Gospel had been received.

Satan’s False Church

In the Revelation, John was shown the false church – a fabrication of the devil designed to be his repository for religious delusion. This church is referred to as a “harlot,” or “the great whore” (Rev 17:1,15,16; 19:2). She is noted for her fornication (Rev 14:8; 17:2,4; 18:3,9; 19:2). That is, she is unfaithful to God, having played the harlot with the world.

She is also depicted as having a significant impact upon the commercial world. That is why, when she falls, the world will lament. This aspect of her being is encapsulated in the following description. “And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her; for no man buyeth their merchandise any more: the merchandise of gold, and silver, and precious stones, and of pearls, and fine linen, and purple, and silk, and scarlet, and all thyine [fragrant] wood, and all manner vessels of ivory, and all manner vessels of most precious wood, and of brass, and iron, and marble, and cinnamon, and odors [incense], and ointments, and frankincense, and wine, and oil [fragrant oil] , and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls [bodies and souls] of men” (Rev 18:13). This is the same spirit that was animating the silversmiths in Ephesus – a spirit of covetousness. Now, Satan has permeated professing Christendom with the same delusion, which is much worse.

If you can bear to do so, contemplate the vast number of religious businesses that would become defunct were a spirit of revival and spiritual renewal to sweep across our nation. It is staggering to consider! Religious images, clothing manufacturers and retailers, the music industry, financial consultants, domestic consultants, building contractors, the educational world, religious jewelry, youth and other specialized ministries, popular religious books, professed Christian vacation resorts and theme parks, mass communication media, and scores of other financial empires. Many ministers would have to retire, for the near-totality of their ministry depends upon the existence of a weak and deficient church. Only the devil capitalizes on a substandard church!

IDENTIFYING THE EFFECTS OF PAUL’S PREACHING

“ 26 Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands . . .”

The objection that is raised concerns what Paul was preaching and teaching. It was the same with the Prophets, and the Lord Jesus Himself. It is passingly strange that there are significant numbers of preachers and teachers these days that are not known for what they say. In fact, I have often lamented that I do not have the faintest idea what many of these men teach the people. Unless one attends their gatherings, there is not much said about what they actually preach. However, this was not the case with the objectors in our text. I seriously doubt that they made a practice of going into the school of Tyrannus to hear Paul. However, word of his message had been carried throughout all of Asia. People knew what he was declaring.

Solomon referred to the kind of wisdom that is required to convince people in this manner: “he that winneth souls is wise” (Prov 11:30). The meaning is that true wisdom appeals to the disciplined mind and tender heart, so that reason triumphs over delusion.

THIS PAUL HAS PERSUADED

“Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people . . .” Other versions read, “has convinced and led astray,” NIV “persuaded and drawn away,” NRSV “teaching numbers of people and turning them away,” BBE “persuaded and misled,” CSB “by persuasion has drawn away,” DOUAY “has won over,” GWN “persuaded and enticed,” MRD “persuaded and converted,” NJB “has influenced many people,” IE “has led away a vast number of people by inducing them,” WEYMOUTH and “has succeeded in changing the minds of a great number of people.” PHILLIPS

Nearly every version employs the word “persuaded.” This word is translated from the Greek word pei,saj, which is a form of the word pei,qw. Here it is used in the aorist active tense, which means Paul was not trying to persuade the people, but was actually doing it. He was not merely using persuasive speech, but was effective in changing the minds of the people.

Observe that this places Paul’s preaching and teaching in the category of productive Kingdom thought. While I do not doubt that his presentations were emotional, they transcended mere emotion. These were presentations that were related to understanding, comprehension, discernment, perception, and discretion. They summoned judgment and decision to the environment, analysis and cogitation. The hearers were moved to make a comparison with what they had formerly embraced, and to make a deliberate choice concerning what they would follow.

Jesus spoke of this kind of presentation in his parable about the great supper. When those who were previously invited to the feast refused to come, the master of the feast was angered and told his servants, “Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled” (Luke 14:23). Other versions read, “make them come in,” NIV “constrain them,” ASV “insistently persuade,” CJB “urge,” GWN “press people,” NLT and “urge and constrain [them] to yield and come in.” AMPLIFIED

This is not the same as forceful coercion in which the will of the people is overridden and they are moved by fear. The compelling of reference was an appeal to reason. In the case of the Lord’s parable, as well as in our text, the glory and truth of what was being told drew upon the hearts of the people. Their minds were captured, so to speak, with the marvelous nature of what was declared. They became aware of the sense of it, and their hearts yearned to possess what was affirmed.

Of course, all of this is owing to the power of the word of the Kingdom itself. The Holy Spirit is working through it, so that the person is impacted by what he hears. In the case of the Ephesians, it shed light on the depraved nature of idol-worship, confirming it to be folly. It no longer made sense to purchase shrines for the Diana, goddess of the Ephesians. The books they once valued were seen as nothing more than something to be burned,

In one of his salient statements, Solomon referred to the kind of wisdom that is required to convince people in this manner: “he that winneth souls is wise” (Prov 11:30). The meaning is that true wisdom appeals to the disciplined mind and tender heart, so that reason triumphs over delusion. Winning souls, in this case, is not increasing the tally of devotees. Rather, it involves people being convinced or persuaded. Our day could certainly use an increase of this kind of godly influence.

NO GODS WHICH ARE MADE WITH HANDS

“ . . . saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands . . . ” Other versions read, “gods made with hands are no gods at all,” NASB “man-made gods are no gods at all,” NIV “gods made by humans are not gods,” GWN “handmade gods are really not gods at all.” NLT

This, they said, was not only taught in Ephesus, but “almost throughout all Asia.” This certainly is not all that Paul taught, but he did proclaim this. In Lystra, Paul admonished the people to “turn from these vanities unto the living God” (Acts 14:15). In Athens he proclaimed, “we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device” (Acts 17:29). The Psalmist accented the lifelessness and lack of productivity in all gods made with human hands (Psa 115:4-8; 135:15-18). Isaiah said such images are “profitable for nothing” (Isa 44:10-11). Jeremiah said of them, “for they cannot do evil, neither also is it in them to do good” (Jer 10:5). Paul affirmed to the Corinthians that “an idol is nothing in the world” (1 Cor 8:4).

The phrase “made with hands” refers to something man made. It is not limited to man’s hands. Prior to this occasion it is said that God wrought “special miracles by the hands of Paul” (19:11). Yet, some of those miracles were accomplished by means of handkerchiefs and aprons that were taken from the body of Paul. The expression means that God wrought unusual miracles through Paul.

So it is that god’s “which are made with hands” are gods of man’s own creation. That certainly includes idols – even small boxes made for idols. But it is not limited to tangible gods that can be touched or seen with the human eye. It also includes god’s created by the human imagination as it is influenced by the god of this world. John alluded to this when proclaiming the real Christ. He affirmed that the “Son of God” is one who “is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God , and eternal life” (1 John 5:20). A God with whom a professed Christ does not acquaint us is not god at all, and the Christ who introduces such a god is a false Christ as well. There is such a thing as “ another Jesus” who declares a fictitious god (2 Cor 11:4)! Therefore, John concluded his remarks by saying, “Little children, keep yourselves from idols . Amen” (1 John 5:21).

When anyone dares to insinuate that these imaginary gods and Jesus’ are not real, the indignation of the institutional slaves is aroused – just as surely as Demetrius excited the Ephesian merchants with his nonsense.

Today there is a false god resident in professed Christendom. It is a god who has been declared by “another Jesus,” and promoted by false prophets. There is a false Jesus who does not give the people an understanding – even though they may profess to have been in Him for decades. The god this false Jesus promotes is not the true God, and knowing him can by no means be described as “eternal life.”

There are intellectual “shrines” that serve in the same capacity as the shrines the Ephesus silversmiths made. They are institutional shrines to house their false god. Some of them are even bold enough to say they are members of the only church in which God dwells. What they really mean, it is the only place the god they have created dwells. But God does not well “in temples made with hands” – even those institutions that men imagine hold the God of heaven.

When anyone dares to insinuate that these imaginary gods and Jesus' are not real, the indignation of the institutional slaves is aroused – just as surely as Demetrius excited the Ephesian merchants with his nonsense. If all of this appears a bit strong, one must remember that the Head of the church told us that we know the validity of teachers and their adherents by their fruit (Matt 7:15-20). If the consistent fruit is deficient, then it is only because the tree is deficient. To put it another way, it is because God is not working there, both to will and to do of His own good pleasure (Phil 2:12-13). And, if God is not working there, it is only because He is not dwelling there. I realize the implications of this are rather strong, but they are true.

THE IMPACT OF THE GOSPEL ON FALSE RELIGION

“ 27 So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.”

Demetrius sees the message of Paul, together with him persuading the people of its truth, as having a threefold effect upon their society – a society in which they were thriving financially. All of this sounds strange in our society, where Christianity is noted for its sterility, and many of its leaders for their lack of understanding and even immorality. However, as I have repeatedly stated, in the book of Acts, we are being exposed to a real message, godly messengers, and the effect faith has on those who possess it.

No one is under any obligation to receive as true something that does not produce what is true. If a representation of Christianity produces effects that are at variance with the what God has said about faith, then the claims of identity with Him are questionable, to say the least. Let the people examine themselves to determine whether they are in the faith (2 Cor 13:5). If that examination uncovers falsity, then let them repent of their sin, and turn to God with their whole heart. If they are unwilling to do this, then let the church reject them, and let them cease to wear the name “Christian.” Be sure of this, whatever excludes a person from heaven on the day of judgment (Matt 7:22-23), excludes them from identity with the church while they are in this world.

The three conclusions Demetrius gives are as follows.

- Our means of making a living is in danger of being eliminated.
- The temple of Diana will be despised.
- The magnificence of Diana will be destroyed.

OUR CRAFT IS IN DANGER

“ So that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought . . .” Other versions read, “this trade of ours in danger of falling into disrepute,” NKJV “our trade will lose its good name,” NIV “Our trade may be damaged in the opinion of men,” BBE “the reputation of our trade will suffer,” CJB “our business may be discredited,” CSB “that this our portion may be reproved,” GENEVA “this occupation slandered and impeded,” MRD “Our trade will lose its good name,” NIB “the loss of public respect for our business,” NLT “this our craft cometh into peril to be set at nought,” PNT “in danger for us coming into disregard,” YLT “our loss of income,” LIVING and “turn people against our work.” IE

Precisely what was it that caused this dread of losing the means of gaining wealth – of their occupation suddenly becoming obsolete? At the foundational level, it was Paul teaching things concerning the kingdom of God. The detailed level of that teaching was the singularity of God: “God is One”– and it was not Diana of the Ephesians!

Precisely what was it that caused this dread of losing the means of gaining wealth – of their occupation suddenly becoming obsolete? At the foundational level, it was Paul teaching things concerning the kingdom of God (19:8). The detailed level of that teaching was the singularity of God: “God is One” (Deut 6:4; Gal 3:20) – and it was not Diana of the Ephesians! At the evidential level, it was that people were believing what he taught, and thus their lives were so restructured that they would no longer purchase what these men were making. No person of sound mind will continue giving devotion to something he is convinced is false.

There you have firm evidence that true conversion changes what people think and do. It is more than a trite saying that God works in those who are reconciled to Him “both to will and to do” (Phil 2:12). The only people in whom God is not working are those in whom He is not dwelling, for the Lord never stays where He is not wanted. This was actually lived out during Christ’s ministry. He did not stay where He was not wanted. If people did not receive what He said, He removed Himself from them. This fact is stated in apostolic doctrine. “He that saith, I know Him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him” (1 John 2:4). “Whosoever abideth in Him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen Him, neither known Him” (1 John 3:6). And again, “We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error” (1 John 4:6). Even the heathen of our text knew that if people embraced what Paul was saying – and that is what was happening – they would be put out of business.

Speaking of our own generation, there are occupations that depend upon an unformed, weak, and faithless church. Demons have developed doctrines that are tailored for such people (1 Tim 4:1), and Satan’s children perpetrate them. The current floodtide of religious fiction that contains false doctrinal innuendos is a case in point. These include the “Left Behind” series, all of the “How To” books, and a host of seminars and workshops that are of a problem-solving nature. Much, if not all, of the Christian counseling business would become obsolete if professing Christians actually lived by faith. The Christian music empire has flooded society with concepts that, at the least are unbecomingly juvenile, and at the worst, are totally devoid of the truth. All manner of teachings are resident in the professing church that leave people thinking sin is really not that bad. Iniquity is conveniently traced back to things that have nothing at all to do with the human will and preference: family genealogy, genetic make-up, psychological defects, the development of bad habits, and the likes. Solutions are provided in book form and the development of thoughtless routine. However, what would happen if people actually believed what is declared in apostolic doctrine? What if they availed themselves of the intercessory ministry of Jesus, and the powerful effects of the knowledge of God. How would these businesses fare if people lived by faith (Heb 10:38-39) , and were dominated by hope (1 John 3:3)? What if professing Christians were busy working out their salvation with fear and trembling (Phil 2:12), and cleansing themselves of all filthiness of flesh and spirit (2 Cor 7:1). I will tell you what would happen. It would put all such businesses and occupations in jeopardy, for they all depend upon a weak and unformed church!

There are those who will reply that this is a heartless view, and does not allow for godly concern. However, it is these, and similar, occupations that are guilty of heartlessness. Those occupied in them wear the pious-looking robes of concern, and present themselves as possessing a deep and unconditional love for people. But the way they are leaving the people belies all of their false claims. Like the Ephesian silversmiths, they want to maintain their trade, even if it conflicts with the kingdom of God.

THE TEMPLE OF THE GODDESS DIANA DESPISED

“ . . . but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised . . .” Other versions read, “regarded as worthless,” NASB “be discredited,” NIV “scorned,” “count for nothing,” RSV “made of no account,” ASV “no longer honored,” BBE “come to be taken lightly,” DARBY “begin to be destroyed,” DOUAY “be nothing esteemed,” GENEVA “regarded as worthless,” NAU “reduce the sanctuary of the great goddess Diana to unimportance,” NJB “will lose its influence,” NLT “be despised,” PNT “reckoned for nothing,” YLT and “brought into contempt.” WILLIAMS

Demetrius knew that if the Goddess Diana was not respected, there would be no need for the temple erected to maintain her honor. If men were not devoted to this idol, they would give no honor to anything associated with it. Even though this temple was one of the seven wonders of the world, it would become worthless if the idol for whom it was built ceased to be viewed as a god.

There is a principle to be seen here that must be embraced. If a person does not place value on something or someone, they will not have a high regard for things associated with that person or thing. Bringing this down to its necessary implications, if an individual or group of individuals do not have a high regard for the Living God, they will not honor His commandments, His will, or His promises. It is their attitude toward God Himself that is reflected in their view of what He has said and done. If a person does not honor the Son, they certainly will not abandon all competing interests to follow Him. If they do not place a high value upon the Word of God, they will not expose themselves to it, or give themselves to shaping their lives by it. Where disinterest and lukewarmness exist, the love of God is not found, and the heart is not pure. There really is no such thing as a person who loves God, yet disdains His Word. It is not possible to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and yet refuse to follow Him. One cannot have faith, and yet disregard what brings and sustains faith.

Even the heathen know this principle. It is uncomely beyond description for the professing church to be riddled with the problems that proceed from unbelief.

HER MAGNIFICENCE SHOULD BE DESTROYED

“ . . . and her magnificence should be destroyed . . .” Other versions read, “be dethroned from her magnificence,” NASB “be robbed of her divine majesty,” NIV “will be deprived of her majesty,” NRSV “put down from her high position,” BBE “being ignominiously brought down from her divine majesty,” CJB “her magnificence come to the verge of ruin,” CSB “her greatness should be destroyed,” DARBY “robbed of her glory,” GWN “the goddess herself . . . is condemned,” MRD “will be robbed of her great prestige,” NLT and “her glorious magnificence may be degraded and fall into contempt.” AMPLIFIED

There is a logical progression in the effects of Paul’s teaching – and Demetrius saw it. If the goddess Diana was no longer honored, a temple erected for that honor would also be despised. If the temple was seen as worthless, then shrines that duplicated it would at once be rendered obsolete. It seems to be that this represents an inviolable principle. When what is false is seen for what is really is, and is held in disdain, nothing will be honored that is associated with that falsity.

This is the means through which false religion is overthrown. It is how the kingdom of God, which started like a small stone, grows and rolls over all competing kingdoms (Dan 2:35-44). Through the knowledge of God, and by faith, the delusions of the devil are exposed. Once seen, allegiance is withdrawn from them and given to God. When this actually takes place, activities required by and related to that false idea are abandoned. When this happens, the businesses and occupations that were sustained by that false notion are at once rendered obsolete, for they are no longer seen as important.

The Kingdom of God is an economy of understanding. It is an environment in which discernment and comprehension thrive, and things are seen as they really are. Where that understanding is deficient, devotion to what is false will remain, and necessarily so, for no rational person will abandon something to which they have attached value. Jesus referred to this principle when He said, “For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also” (Mat 6:21).

Now, permit me to think in a backward mode. When God is ignored by the professing church, it is because the true message of God has not been believed, for it is the belief of the truth that sets all valid change in motion. The failure to believe that can be owing to the fact that the message has actually not been heard. However, when we consider that God positioned all men in both time and location in order that they might seek the Lord, this is not an adequate excuse (Acts 17:26-27). Too, the Gospel has been preached throughout the world – from the first century (Col 1:23). Even now, enough is being said to induce earnest inquiry into the things concerning the Kingdom of God. A remnant of believers is also present from whom truth can be made known. Under these circumstances, to be faced with an uninformed and worldly church cannot be justified under any circumstances. Further, the fact that false religion is thriving is itself evidence that the truth is not prominent. The same condition exists in our day that was found during the time of Isaiah the prophet. “And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth ; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey : and the LORD saw it, and it displeased Him that there was no judgment” (Isa 59:14-15). The lack of judgment, the presence of injustice, and the disdain of men and women of faith are evidences that truth has fallen. Further, the whole circumstance is seen by God, and He is displeased with it.

Even Demetrius the idolater and opportunist knew that when the things concerning the Kingdom of God are actually believed, competing interests are disdained. What can really be said of professed believers who do not see this?

ALL ASIA AND THE WORLD WORSHIPS

“ . . .whom all Asia and the world worshippingeth.”

Diana was a popular goddess – not only in Asia, but in all the world. She had a good reputation, and was held in high regard. However, if the preaching of Paul was believed – and that is what was happening – all of that worship would be brought to a grinding halt. There would not have to be a deprogramming technique to uproot the people from the worship of Diana. A battery of psychiatrists would not have to be hired to deal with the trauma of sudden change. This would not require the development of a new profession that would ease the transition from idolatry to the worship of the true God. That erroneous approach reflects the kind of thinking that is extant in our time, and it is false to the core. It is even beneath the thinking of Demetrius. He had seen enough of the effects of Paul’s preaching to know that unless something was done to stop it, it would eventually spoil the kingdom of Diana. I must admit that it would be most refreshing to hear of such conclusions concerning the preaching of the truth in our time.

Daniel said of Kingdom of God, “it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever” (Dan 2:44). Even the heathen have a sense of this. That is why they oppose the preaching of the Gospel. Further, this kind of spread of the truth of the Gospel, and the consequent decimation of competing kingdoms, was the subject of several of Christ’s parables. This is what truth does when it is proclaimed and received.

The ongoing existence of this area is a kind of testimony to the sterility of modern Christianity. It is a living contradiction of the doctrine of Scripture, as well as the inspired history of the early church.

“Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof” (Mat 13:31-32).

- “Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened” (Mat 13:33).

Once this is perceived, it will bring to an end the vain imagined evangelistic strategies of men. For example, I have been hearing about the “10-40 window” of evangelistic opportunity for at least twenty years. The term “10-40 window” was coined by Christian Missionary strategist Luis Bush in 1990. It describes a geographical area 10-40 degrees north of the equator, and has become a standard phrase in the Christian missionary community. This “window” is described in this manner: “Of the 55 least evangelized countries, 97% of their population lives within the Ten Forty Window . . . Two-thirds of the world's population -- more than 3.2 billion people -- live in the 10/40 Window.” Impressive statistics are as follows.

- 865 million unreached Muslims or Islamic followers in 3330 cultural sub-groupings
- 550 million unreached Hindus in 1660 cultural sub-groups
- 150 million unreached Chinese in 830 groups
- 275 million unreached Buddhists in 900 groups
- 2550 unreached tribal groups (which are mainly animistic) with a total population of 140 million
- Forming a smaller -- though important -- unreached group are the 17 million Jews scattered across 134 countries

The ongoing existence of this area is a kind of testimony to the sterility of modern Christianity. It is a living contradiction of the doctrine of Scripture, as well as the inspired history of the early church. Truth will ultimately triumph when it is faithfully proclaimed. This is because Divine power is in it. There is also the determined purpose of God: “for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (Isa 11:9). And again, “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea” (Hab 2:14). When it is believed and embraced, the power of God, coupled with the revealed purpose of God, settles the matter of the superiority of truth.

THE VALUES OF IDOLATERS EXPRESSED

“ 28 And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.”

Sin always introduces a lack of true rationality. It takes from those who commit it the ability to think correctly. This is because Satan never works within in context of truth. The sphere of his influence is wrought within the perimeter of the lie, and the means through which he perpetrates his ways is delusion. In this text we have a sterling example of people who are deluded, and thus cannot reason upon the truth.

WHEN THEY HEARD THESE THINGS

“And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath . . .” Other versions read, “filled with rage,” NASB “were furious,” NIV “were enraged,” NRSV “were very angry,” BBE “filled with fury,” NAB “aroused them to fury,” NJB “their anger boiled,” LIVING and “became furiously angry.” WEYMOUTH

They are thinking of themselves being made to feel better if they can allow their hostilities to erupt through their mouths. Being themselves deceived, they are unaware that their words have kindled a spiritual bonfire that will wreak havoc among the hearers, bringing destruction in its wake.

The term “wrath” is translated from a word that means, “passion, angry heat . . . indignation which has arisen gradually and become more settled,” THAYER and “swelling up of anger, hot temper, angry outburst.” FRIBERG The idea is that as Demetrius continued speaking, the anger and hostility of those in the audience began to heat up and boil, filling all of their persons. Finally it boiled over, or erupted, in the expression that follows. James referred to this process as “the superfluity [overflow NKJV] of naughtiness” (James 1:21) – a process in which anger begins to heat up, being brought to a boil, then boiling over into sinful expression.

Here is an example of what James said in the third chapter of his epistle. “And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity: so is the tongue among our members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth on fire the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell ” (James 3:6). Other versions read, “sets on fire the course of our life, and is set on fire by hell, “ NASB “setting on fire the wheel of birth (the cycle of man’s nature), being itself ignited by hell (Gehenna),” AMPLIFIED “inflameth the wheel of our nativity, being set on fire by hell,” DOUAY and “is set on fire by hell itself, and can turn our whole lives into a blazing flame of destruction and disaster.” LIVING The idea is that when men speak inappropriately, it awakens the whole of the fallen nature, and the individual begins to be consumed, with everything good being removed. This kind of speaking is kindled by hell, being one of the means the devil uses to disseminate his damning venom.

Thus, the words of Demetrius have awakened every evil manner in the people, robbing them of the ability to think properly, and inciting them against Paul, who had spoken the truth of God. Those who feel it is best to vent their corrupt feelings are not thinking correctly., They are thinking of themselves being made to feel better if they can allow their hostilities to erupt through their mouths. Being themselves deceived, they are unaware that their words have kindled a spiritual bonfire that will wreak havoc among the hearers, bringing destruction in its wake.

Another thing that is seen here is that those who think alike are, by virtue of their kindred thought, brought together, and united. The rationality, or lack thereof, of their thinking has no bearing on their unity. Neither is correctness the issue. That is something that is assumed. It is taken for granted that they are right because they all think the same. While imagining they are thinking accurately, they have actually been thrown into a form of insanity. They are completely oblivious to the fact that they have set themselves against the ultimate Person, with the ultimate mind, and the most precise and true purpose.

THEY CRIED OUT

“ . . . and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.” All versions read essentially the same, with the only difference being the use of the transliteration, “Artemis” for “Diana.”

The people began shouting “Great is Diana of the Ephesians” as though that expression would make it true – or at least more firm. However, the repetition of a lie does not make it more sure, nor is it stabilized by the fact that many people have embraced it. This is why polls and pollsters have no bearing whatsoever on reality.

One of the principles of false religion is that when a significant number of people prefer a certain thing, that makes it right. Thus Paul, when warning Timothy of a falling away, said, “For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears” (2 Tim 4:3). Other versions read, “wanting to have their ears tickled, they will accumulate for themselves teachers in accordance to their own desires,” NASB “they will gather around them a great number of teachers to say what their itching ears want to hear,” NIV and “they will gather to themselves one teacher after another to a considerable number, chosen to satisfy their own liking and to foster the errors they hold.” AMPLIFIED

There are Christian sects that boast of their numbers as though that was proof they were being blessed by God. Others pursue numbers as though this was really so. However, this view of numbers is not an expression of the mind of the Lord. During Jesus’ ministry vast multitudes followed Him, seeking Him out and apparently listening to Him intently (Matt 4:25; 8:1,18; 9:8,33,36; 11:7; 12:15; 13:2, 34,36; 14:14,19,22,23; 15:10,30,31. 32.33, 39; 17:14; 19:2; 20:29; 21:8; 22:33; 23:1). Yet, He frequently actually sent the multitudes away (Matt 13:36; 14:22-23; 15:39).

Other times Jesus upbraided the multitudes (John 6:26,64). Some multitudes were offended by Christ's teaching, and finally left Him altogether (John 6:66). Further, Jesus never delivered any substantive teaching to the masses. This was so pronounced that His disciples said to Him, "Why speakest Thou unto them in parables?" Jesus answered them candidly, confirming that He did not speak in this manner to clarify the truth. "He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given . For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath. Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive: For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them " (Matt13:11-15).

Finally, many of these very people were carried away by their leaders, and thus called for the crucifixion of Jesus (Mk 16:11-13). Vast numbers, then, are not an end of themselves. Of themselves, they are not a worthy goal, but fall short of nobility. If the Gospel produces a great influx of believers, we will rejoice. But we will not tailor our labors to manufacture such things after the flesh. Such labors are poison to the soul. They provide an environment in which the flesh is dominate, and the Holy Spirit retires, at the best, into the background.

THE PROMOTION OF CONFUSION

“ 29 And the whole city was filled with confusion: and having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theater. ”

One of the evidences of the nature of incorrect thinking is the effect it has upon those subjected to it. This falls into the category of knowing a tree by its fruit. The impact of Demetrius' speech upon the Ephesian society confirms its source.

THE WHOLE CITY WAS FILLED WITH CONFUSION

“And the whole city was filled with confusion . . .” Other versions read, “was in an uproar,” NIV “full of noise and trouble,” BBE “was in commotion,” MRD “was in a roar,” PNT “became very upset,” IE and “riot and uproar.” WEYMOUTH

The word “confusion” is the translation of the Greek word sugcu,sewj , which has the following lexical meaning: “confusion, disturbance: of riotous persons,” THAYER “disorderly mob revolt, with special implications of uproar and disturbance - uproar, revolt,” LOUW-NIDA and “tumult.” GINGRICH In English the word means, “state of being confused mentally: lack of certainty, orderly thought, or power to distinguish, choose, or act decisively.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

As used here, confusion is the opposite of a “sound mind” (2 Tim 1:7), and the peace of God ruling in the heart (Col 3:15). The preaching and teaching of Paul had brought clarity of thought to the city. People were able to believe the Gospel, see their sins, confess them, and abandon them (19:18). Those who had been given to curious arts were enabled to think soundly about them, which moved them to bring their books and burn them publically (19:19). This is the kind of orderliness that was produced by the belief of things concerning the Kingdom of God.

Viewing this as the work of the rulers of the darkness of the world, this was the devil confusing and disorienting the people. From the Divine point of view, the people were “turned back and brought to confusion.” This is the kind of environment in which Divine benefits are not realized.

Now, a foe enters the stage on which the drama of redemption is being worked out. He does not agitate the believers, but those who are unbelievers. As is characteristic of the devil’s wisdom, confusion and discord is produced in “the whole city.” Confusion involves being confounded, bewildered, befuddled, and puzzled. It includes being nonplused, dumbfounded, and illogical. Those who did not receive the message being delivered by Paul were thrown into a state of discombobulation – a condition in which they were confused, and unable to form a rational thought.

Viewing this as the work of the rulers of the darkness of the world, this was the devil confusing and disorienting the people. From the Divine point of view, the people were “turned back and brought to confusion” (Psa 35:4; 70:2). This is the kind of environment in which Divine benefits are not realized. It is also the domain in which the devil can work more freely. The more confused and lacking of spiritual understanding men are, the more freely the devil can work. This is the intellectual field where his seed grows.

PAUL’S COMPANIONS IN TRAVEL

“ . . . and having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel . . .” Other versions read, “seized . . . Paul’s travel companions,” NKJV “dragging along,” NASB “having taken by force . . . who were journeying in company with Paul,” BBE “seized and carried off . . . DARBY and “ . . . men from Macedonia. (These men always traveled with Paul).” IE

Paul was apparently not accessible at the time, so the mob seized the men who had been traveling with him – Gaius and Aristarchus. We are told in Acts 20:4 that Aristarchus was “of the Thessalonians.” Acts 27:2 adds that this man was “a Macedonian of Thessalonica.” He left Ephesus with Paul (Acts 20:4), was later imprisoned (Philem 1:24), and is referred to as a “fellowlaborer” with Paul (Col 4:10).

In this text, Gaius is said to be a man “from Macedonia.” Acts 20:4 mentions a Gaius who was from Derbe – a place in which Paul and Barnabas had preached the Gospel some time earlier (Acts 14:6-7,20-21). There was also a brother named Gaius who was from Corinth (1 Cor 1:14), and yet another Gaius to whom John the apostle wrote (3 John 1:1). I take the Gaius of this text to be distinct from the ones from Derbe, Corinth, and the one to whom John addressed his third epistle. Some are of the opinion that they all were the same man. However, I do not see how that conclusion can be substantiated.

It is apparent that throughout his labors there were converts that joined Paul, so that a company of men generally traveled with him. When Paul disembarked from Ephesus he was accompanied by Sopater of Berea, Aristarchus and Secundus from Thessalonica, Gaius and Timotheus of Derbe, and Tychicus and Trophimus of Asia (Acts 20:4). Earlier, Aquila and Priscilla journeyed with him (Acts 18:18).

In this brief consideration we see something of the manner of early labors with Christ. Laborers were not especially trained and sent out, but were reaped from the labors of Paul. He gathered about him people who were noted for believing and fearlessly embracing the cause for which he labored. These were not religious professionals, but men whose hearts had been touched by the truth of Christ. In our day, this is not a common practice. In my judgment, this is owing to a falling away that has resulted in the exaltation of an institution over the truth, and the admiration of a position, as compared with the truth of God. The result of this falling away has been a division among the people that will not allow for the kind of unity evident in this text.

Also, it is of interest to note that the alliance between Paul and these men was so evident that the howling mob recognized it. A unity of both mind and work existed between these men and Paul that could not be hidden. That kind of thing can only be apparent where there is deep devotion and consistency of life.

RUSHED TO THE THEATER

“ . . . they rushed with one accord into the theater. ” Other versions read, “rushed as one man into the theater,” NIV “they all came running into the theater,” BBE “rushed all together into the amphitheater,” CSB “rushed into the common place with one assent,” GENEVA “rushed into the common hall with one assent,” PNT and “ran together to the stadium with a single purpose.” IE

The following is a general description of a “theater,” which was a structure in which spectacles and presentations took place. “Theater, among the ancients, is a public edifice for the exhibiting of scenic spectacles, or shows to the people — under the word theater was comprehended not only the eminence, whereon the actors appeared, and the action passed, but also the whole area, or extent of the place common to the actors and spectators: in this sense the theater was a building encompassed with porticos, and furnished with seats of stone, disposed in semicircles, and ascending gradually over one another, which encompassed a space called the “orchestra”; in the front whereof was the “proscenium” or “pulpitum”, whereon the actors performed the “scena”, a large front adorned with orders of architecture; behind which was “postscenium”, or the place where the actors made themselves ready, retired, etc. so that the “scena”, in its full extent, comprehended all the part belonging to the actors. In the Greek theatres, the “orchestra” made a part of the “scena”; but in the Roman theatres, none of the actors ever descended into the “orchestra”, which was taken up by the seats of the senators.”

Some have though the intent of the mob was to throw these two men to the beasts, as the people watched them devoured. It might very well have been similar to – perhaps even identical with – the occasion to which Paul alluded in First Corinthians: “If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus , what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink; for to morrow we die” (1 Cor 15:32).

Albert Barnes says of this occasion, “The theaters of the Greeks were not only places for public exhibitions, but also for holding assemblies, and often for courts, elections, etc. The people, therefore, naturally rushed there, as being a suitable place to decide this matter.”

Adam Clarke notes, “The theatres, being very spacious and convenient places, were often used for popular assemblies and public deliberation, especially in matters which regarded the safety of the state. There are several proofs of this in ancient authors. So Tacitus, Hist. ii. 80, speaking concerning Vespasian, says: ‘Having entered into the theater of the Antiochians, where it was the custom to hold consultations, the people running together, and being profuse in flattery, he addressed them.’ Frontinus, in Stratagem lib. iii. cap. 2, speaking of a public meeting at the theater at Agrigentum, observes, ubi ex more Graecorum locus consultationi praebebatur; which, according to the custom of the Greeks, is the place for public deliberation.”

Although this was a howling mob, driven by corrupt passions and delusion, they thought they were coming together to reason. In their minds, they were seeking the interest of the Ephesians, particularly the craftsmen and merchants whose living had been jeopardized by the conversion of multitudes. They did not perceive Paul to be a harmless religious fanatic, but someone who threatened the social fabric of their community.

WHY DID THIS OCCUR?

What could drive this mob to act in such an irrational and inconsiderate manner. What could move them to drag men into an area whose only crime was traveling and laboring with Paul. They were not guilty of civil disobedience, or speaking against the government, or inciting a rebellion against the authorities. This is not what those who labor together with Christ are noted for! Yet, judging from the action of these people, an onlooker would judge that some great injustice had been done.

This is how people who are under the control of the devil conduct themselves. They are taken captive by him at his will (2 Tim 2:26), and always align themselves against the Lord, His purpose, and His people. Their's is a mentality dictated by the evil one, and there is nothing truly rational about it, even though they think what they are doing is perfectly reasonable. Satan can fill a person's heart (Acts 5:3), put into the heart of a person thoughts and intentions (John 13:2), and enter into them to dominate and control them (John 13:27).

When people are deceived, they see it as true understanding, being convinced that what they do is right, and the ones they oppose are wrong. It is not that they simply do not want to see or understand, they cannot do so. Deluded people are captivated people, not simply individuals who have a differing opinion.

There is a mitigating factor to all of this. Satan cannot simply carry out his will. He functions under the authority of the King of kings, to whom he and all of his cohorts are subject. If he desires to sift a believer, he must be granted the right to do so.

THE MITIGATING FACTOR

There is a mitigating factor to all of this. Satan cannot simply carry out his will. He functions under the authority of the King of kings, to whom he and all of his cohorts are subject. If he desires to sift a believer, he must be granted the right to do so (Lk 22:31). Even if he is given the right to carry out such sifting, the Intercessor's petition that the faith of the one being sifted will not fail is honored above Satan's his own (Lk 22:32). The Kingdom of God is the superior kingdom, and will totally and violently destroy all competing kingdoms (Dan 2:44).

Any success realized by Satan is only temporary, and his work will finally be totally and apparently overthrown. Even in the midst of what appears to be success, God's will is being brought to its intended culmination. Once that completion is reached, Satan's work will be terminated,

CONCLUSION

The passage we have just reviewed confirms that laboring for the Lord is not a simplistic thing. Neither, indeed, are Kingdom labors to be approached as though there is constant and unwavering triumph in every circumstance. Paul recounts to the Corinthians the phenomenal opposition that he faced nearly everywhere he went (2 Cor 11:23-33). He received at least eight severe beatings, experienced three shipwrecks prior to writing the Second letter to the Corinthians. At least one more is recorded in the twenty-seventh chapter of Acts. He spent a day and a night in the "open sea." NIV In his travels he encountered "perils," or dangers at sea, on rivers, at the hands of robbers, among his own brethren the Jews,, as well as among the heathen. He faced dangers in the city, in the wilderness, on the sea, and among false brethren. As he went about doing the work of the Lord he experienced weariness, painfulness, often going without sleep and without food.

In Christ, triumph does not always mean the immediate overthrow of the enemy. Sometimes it means outlasting the enemy, or even delivering a message that hounds the enemy as Stephen's defense must have lingered in the mind of Saul of Tarsus. People of God should expect opposition and trouble, not marvel when it comes to pass. When professing Christians go out of their way to avoid trouble, even to the compromising of the truth, or even a refusal to declare it, a sin of unspeakable enormity has been committed. Ponder what has been revealed on this subject.

• THE WORLD HATES BELIEVERS. "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you" (John 15:19).

• YOU WILL HAVE TRIBULATION. “These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation: but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world” (John 16:33).

• WE MUST ENTER THE KINGDOM THROUGH MUCH TRIBULATION. “Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22).

• THOSE WHO ARE BORN AFTER THE FLESH PERSECUTE THOSE BORN AFTER THE SPIRIT. “But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now” (Gal 4:29).

• WE ARE APPOINTED TO AFFLICTIONS. “That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto” (1 Thess 3:3).

• WE SHOULD SUFFER TRIBULATION. “For verily, when we were with you, we told you before that we should suffer tribulation; even as it came to pass, and ye know” (1 Thess 3:4).

• THE GODLY WILL SUFFER PERSECUTION. “Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution” (2 Tim 3:12).;

• DO NOT MARVEL WHEN THE WORLD HATES YOU. “Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you” (1 John 3:13).

What can really be said in favor of those who modify their behavior and tone down their words in order not to offend the ungodly? Jesus Himself, together with His disciples, were persecuted because of what they said. This was also true of the Prophets that were before them (Matt 5:12; Acts 7:52). That confirms the fundamental enmity that exists between the regenerate and the unregenerate, the spiritual and the carnal, and those born of the Spirit and those born of the flesh. Ponder the record of opposition found in this book up to the text just reviewed.

• The apostles were arrested and confined following the healing of the impotent man (Acts 4:3-7).

• Upon finding the apostles preaching in the Temple, after they were commanded not to do so, the religious leaders laid hold of them and put them in the common prison (Acts 5:18).

• The apostles were beaten following their defense of preaching in the Temple (Acts 5:40).

• Stephen is hailed before the Jewish council after the leaders were unable to resist the wisdom with which he spoke (Acts 6:10-15).

• Stephen is stoned to death after exposing the falsity of the Jewish council (Acts 7:51-60).

• A great persecution is unleashed against the church in Jerusalem (Acts 8:1-4; 11:19).

• Saul of Tarsus initiates a fierce persecution against the church (Acts 9:1-2).

• The Jews seek to kill Paul (Acts 9:23-24).

• Herod kills James the apostle, and incarcerates Peter, thinking to have him killed also (Acts 12:1-5).

• Paul and Barnabas are persecuted in Antioch (Acts 13:50-51).

• Paul is stoned at Lystra (Acts 14:19).

• Paul and Silas are beaten and imprisoned in Philippi (Acts 16:19-34).

- Paul is threatened at Thessalonica, and forced to leave (Acts 17:10-12).
- The Jews from Thessalonica come to Berea and stir up trouble against Paul (Acts 17:13-15).
- Paul is persecuted at Corinth (Acts 18:12-18).
- Paul is jeopardized in Ephesus, and his companions in travel are hauled into the local amphitheater (Acts 19:23-30).

What kind of spirit would seek to assuage the world by neglecting to declare the whole counsel of God? What would lead any person of sound mind to seek to avoid the indignation of the world by seeking to win them by friendship, instead of through the preaching of the Gospel? The examples of Moses and the Prophets, the teaching of John the Baptist, the entire ministry of Jesus, and the record of the spread of the Gospel under the leadership of the apostles confirm that such an approach is nothing more than the imagination of men – and they are not godly men!

It is time for the church to rid itself of charlatans who seek their own interests rather than those of the Lord. Such men are not to be afforded a place of prominence within the body of Christ – none at all. God has made no place for them, and neither should we. They are an affront to Christ Jesus the Lord, and have borrowed their wisdom from the world. The teachers to whom they have subjected themselves are not the ones the Lord has placed within the church.

Lesson #82

19:30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not. 31 And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre. 32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together. 33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people. 34 But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians. 35 And when the townclerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter? 36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly. 37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess. 38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another. 39 But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful assembly. 40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse. 41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.” (Acts 19:30-41)

A TUMULTUOUS ASSEMBLY

INTRODUCTION

Convinced they have a legitimate legal case against Paul and his co-laborers, the craftsmen of Ephesus have entered the theater to present their case. When Paul knew of this, he sought to enter the theater to present his own defense. However, there was such tumult that the brethren did not allow him to enter. Some friends from Asia also advised him not to enter into the fray. Through this means, Paul was spared unnecessary hardship. God Himself resolved the whole matter, turning the heart of the civil authority, and enabling him to see the unreasonableness of the whole assembly. The mob itself was guilty of breaking the law, and therefore he would not allow the proceedings to continue. He simply dismissed the assembly. Thus, we have a classic example of the protection of the servant of God through the means of government, which was ordained by God for the punishment of evil doers. Such intervention is always done according to Divine discretion. Those who live by faith will see this and give thanks.

THE NATURE OF THE WORK OF THE LORD

It is essential that men consider the nature of the work of the Lord, lest they be discouraged by the circumstances they face while engaged in it. There is a form of spiritual naivete that will cause the person who seeks to serve God to become faint, being unduly weakened by oppression. This comes because of a misapprehension of some of the terms ascribed to those who are aligned with Christ. These include the following:

- “Conquerors” (Rom 8:37).
- “Triumph” (2 Cor 2:14).
- “Victory” (1 Cor 15:57; 1 John 5:4).

This juvenile attitude is also related to a lack of understanding concerning certain key and comforting expressions.

- “A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee” (Psa 91:7).
- “No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD” (Isa 54:17).
- “Resist the devil, and he will flee from you” (James 4:7).

Paul expressed the nature of spiritual warfare from the experiential point of view. In this reflection the necessity of faith and the spiritual stamina that is brings is emphasized.

Such texts involve human effort, yet are not limited to that effort. There is such a thing as God CAUSING us to triumph (2 Cor 2:14), MAKING us stand (Rom 14:4), and GIVING us the victory (1 Cor 15:57). It is not proper to think of such texts as guaranteeing the absence of opposition, or suggesting that foes will never be faced.

There are Scriptural words that encapsulate the idea of extensive warfare, battle, an extensive skirmish, far reaching militant involvement. Believers have certainly not been called to a tea party.

- “Overcoming” (1 John 5:4).
- “Resist” (James 4:7; 1 Pet 5:9).
- “Stand” (Eph 6:11,13,14).
- “Stand fast” (1 Cor 16:13; Gal 5:1; Phil 1:27; 4:1; 1 Thess 3:8; 2 Thess. 2:15).
- “Fight” (1 Tim 6:12).
- “Wrestle” (Eph 6:12).

All of these postulate a warfare in which the battle sometimes see-saws back and forth, as when Israel fought Amalek (Ex 17:11-13). Such battles have a way of eliminating the timid and the weak – especially those who never thought such battles were possible.

Paul expressed the nature of spiritual warfare from the experiential point of view. In this reflection the necessity of faith and the spiritual stamina that it brings is emphasized. “For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. But we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us. We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; Persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed” (2 Cor 4:6-9). Several key considerations are found in this insightful testimony.

- THE NATURE OF THE TREASURE. That the treasure to be protected and maintained is the “light of the knowledge of the glory of God.” That refers to the insight and understanding of God Himself that is part and parcel of His great salvation. Satan seeks to take this from us, for our salvation depends upon it.

- CONSTANT DEPENDENCE. That God has so structured salvation as to make us continually dependent upon Himself. At no point does salvation proceed in its development independent of the personal knowledge of God.

- WORKED OUT IN EXPERIENCE. That salvation is worked out in the crucible of human experience and participation in the good will of the Lord. The believer faces opposition that is superior to his own strength. This sets up a scenario that absolutely requires faith – conscious and deliberate reliance upon the Lord.

- THE APPOINTED MEANS. That the skirmishes that are regularly faced by the believer are the means God uses to advance them in the faith, thereby bringing glory to Himself.

- SOMETIMES IT APPEARS AS THOUGH WE ARE LOSING. That, by Divine design, there are times that suggest the child of God is actually losing the battle – times in which he is troubled on every side, persecuted, and thrown down to the ground.

When these realities are not expounded to the saints, they are at once at a decided disadvantage in the good fight of faith. If they do battle imagining there will never be setbacks, or times when they appear helpless, Satan will gain the advantage against them.

When these realities are not expounded to the saints, they are at once at a decided disadvantage in the good fight of faith. If they do battle imagining there will never be setbacks, or times when they appear helpless, Satan will gain the advantage against them. This is precisely why many professed believers come short of finishing the race, falling away in the time of temptation, or trial.

Think of what Paul had faced in Ephesus to this point. It was sufficient to thrust a novice from the work.

- The people at Ephesus first asked him to stay with them, but he was unable to do so because the Lord was leading him elsewhere (18:19).
- When returning to Ephesus, he confronted certain disciples who had not even heard if there was a Holy Spirit (19:1-5).
- When he spoke in the synagogue, certain were hardened, believed not, and spoke evil of the way. This forced Paul to remove the disciples, and continue teaching daily in the school of Tyrannus. This was followed by a two year period during which all Asia heard the word of the Lord (19:9).
- Certain vagabond Jews came, experimenting with the name of Jesus, whom Paul preached. Paul's continued preaching shook the powers of darkness to their very foundation (19:13-20).
- Now the entire city is set ablaze with confusion, and an initiative is launched against Paul and those who were laboring with him (19:23-29).

All of those potentially disconcerting events contained doors through which the timorous could exit, leaving the work of God like John Mark did in Pamphylia (Acts 15:38). Apparent success can be a cause for failing owing to pride, as well as opposition can cause failure because of fear or discouragement. But Paul did not abandon the work. This is because he had a spiritual understanding of the nature of the work, and was not deceived by appearance.

It is good to discern such things, and to walk in a keen awareness of them, lest we be discouraged by the way. Like the whorish woman of proverbs, the devil works among "the simple ones," who are "void of understanding" (Prov 7:7-21), to turn them from the way.

THE IMPACT OF A WEAK CHURCH

There are few disadvantages that are greater than the ignorance that is imposed upon the people by failing to preach the whole counsel of God (Acts 20:27). Who is able to calculate the number of falls that are directly traceable to flawed and incomplete preaching? When the truth, of which the church is the custodian (1 Tim 3:15), is compromised, diluted, or no longer proclaimed, iniquity even pours into the world like a flood. This is why Babylon the Great, the false and fornicating church, is referred to as "the mother of harlots AND ABOMINATIONS OF THE EARTH" (Rev 17:5). Not only is this spiritual monstrosity guilty of birthing erroneous and unfaithful churches, the decay of society in general is traced to her doorstep. When the church becomes weak, it directly impacts upon the fabric of society. In reality, society reflects the status of the church. This is because the body of Christ is, by Divine design, influential among men – either for good or evil. If the church loses its moral and spiritual compass, the means of maintaining social civility and rectitude is removed, thereby mandating moral decline. This is involved in being the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

THE DISCIPLES DO NOT PERMIT PAUL TO ENTER

"19:30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not." Other versions read, "would not allow him," NKJV "would not let him," NASB "restrained him," MRD "refused to let him," NJB "permitted him not," RWB and "were not suffering him." YLT

"The disciples" were the ones who had embraced the Gospel Paul preached, and were following him, taking advantage of his faithful and insightful teaching. Disciples are learners, students, and those who have willingly subjected themselves to the one who is teaching. When it comes to the New Covenant, valid “disciples” are those who are following Jesus, and being taught by Him (Eph 4:20-21). They are the ones who have taken up their cross daily, and are following the Lamb wherever He goes (Lk9:23; Rev 14:4). Where such people cannot be found, real disciples are not found. There is no such thing as a Christian who does not follow Jesus and learn from Him. Although non-followers of Jesus often wear His name, insisting on being called “Christian,” they are really imposters – tares planted by the devil among the wheat, or genuine followers of Jesus. Such are fruitless, and God has made no provision for fruitless members of the body of Christ. He personally removes those who do not bear fruit (John 15:1-2).

HERE WE LEARN SOMETHING ABOUT PAUL

Paul was a “chosen vessel,” handpicked by Jesus for a special work (Acts 9:15; Gal 1:15). He was a Kingdom leader by virtue of the extraordinary revelations that had been given to him (2 Cor 12:1; Eph 3:3-7; Col 1:25-27). Yet, he did not lord it over the flock of God, choosing rather to feed and nourish it as a “wise master builder,” “expert builder,” NIV or “skilled master builder” NRSV (1 Cor 3:10).

Paul did not think of himself as separate from the rest of the members of the body. As an apostle, he was placed in the body of Christ, not over it (1 Cor 12:18,28). He could be comforted by the mutual faith of the brethren (Rom 1:12). He viewed fellow laborers as helpers, not vassals (Rom 16:9). There were times when the Lord used the other members of the body to rescue and protect Paul (Acts 9:25,30; 17:10,14; 2 Cor 11:33). Other times, they were used to encourage him (Acts 28:15). Still other times, he was sustained by them (Rom 16:2; Phil 2:25; 4:16). There were even brethren who regularly “ministered unto him” – which was infinitely more than a relationship like a slave to a master (Acts 19:22).

In this text Paul submitted to the counsel of other members of the body. It is not that he was ignorant in this area, and needed to be directed more wisely. Rather, this is the manner in which the body of Christ functions. There is a holy interdependence among those who are in Christ Jesus, and it is by Divine design. No member of the body of Christ is advantaged by distancing himself from the other members of the body. By its very nature, spiritual life is designed to be nurtured and sustained from outside itself, in addition to the well that springs up within (John 4:14). Our completeness in Christ postulates the contributions of His body, through whom He works.

WE ALSO LEARN SOMETHING ABOUT DISCIPLES

Notice the concern the disciples had for Paul – one of the premier laborers in the Kingdom of God. He was a “wise master builder” (1 Cor 3:10), and these disciples knew it. They did not stop the Ephesian mob from dragging Paul’s companions into the theater, but they kept them from apprehending Paul. This does not suggest they had no concern for their other brethren. They doubtless knew that the mob was actually more interested in taking hold of Paul. As for the disciples themselves, and those who were laboring with Paul, they had the same trait as Aquila and Priscilla, who, for Paul’s own life, “laid down their own necks” (Rom 16:3-4). This is in perfect keeping with the teaching of John the beloved who wrote, “Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren” (1 John 3:16).

Therefore, in the interest of the work of the Lord, and nature of Paul’s ministry, together with their consistent love and respect for Paul himself, they would not permit him to enter the arena. Reason was not on the throne in that Ephesian theater, but tumult was reigning supreme. They knew no good could come from Paul’s presence there. Therefore, they stepped into the room of decision, and protected Paul, even as did others before them. What a marvelous picture of the body of Christ being “fitly framed together” (Eph 2:21).

HIS FRIENDS DESIRE THAT HE NOT ENTER THE THEATER

“ 31 And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends, sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.”

CERTAIN OF THE CHIEF OF ASIA

“And certain of the chief of Asia, which were his friends . . .” Other versions read, “officials of Asia,” NKJV “some of the Asiarchs,” NASB “officials of the province,” NIV “officials of the province of Asia,” NRSV “rulers of Asia,” DOUAY “provincial authorities,” NET “the Asiarchs (political or religious officials in Asia),” AMPLIFIED “Roman officers of the province,” LIVING “leaders of the country,” IE and “public officials.” WEYMOUTH

COMMENTS BY ROBERTSON

Act 19:31 - Certain also of the chief officers of Asia (tines de kai tôn Asiarchôn). These "Asiarchs" were ten officers elected by cities in the province who celebrated at their own cost public games and festivals (Page). Each province had such a group of men chosen, as we now know from inscriptions, to supervise the funds connected with the worship of the emperor, to preside at games and festivals even when the temple services were to gods like Artemis. Only rich men could act, but the position was eagerly sought. ROBERTSON'S WORD PICTURES

These men, referred to as being “of the chief of Asia,” were political people. They were operating under the authority of Rome, which then ruled the world. It was the last of the four great world empires that were the subject of a dream God gave Nebuchadnezzar. These empires were Babylon (Dan 2:38), the Medio-Persians (Dan 5:28), Greece (Dan 8:21; 10:20; 11:2), and Rome (which overthrew Greece (Dan 2:40; 7:7,19,23). It was during the days of these kingdoms that God would set up His own kingdom upon the earth – that time being during the reign of Rome (Dan 2:44). Jesus was the Administrator of that Kingdom (John 18:36), which was of another order, and would eventually throw down all other kingdoms (Dan 2:44–45; Rev 11:15). This is another perspective of Jesus bruising the head of the serpent, destroying him, together with all of his works (Gen 3:15; Heb 2:14; 1 John 3:8; Rev 20:10).

Even during the time when these kingdoms were dominant, and prior to them as well, God raised up global leaders that were sympathetic toward the people of God.

- Pharaoh, head of Egypt, who ruled the world, was inclined toward Joseph (Gen 41:41-44).
- During the time Israel was in Egypt, Moses was targeted for the riches of Egypt, being called the son of Pharaoh's daughter (Heb 11:24-28).
- Nebuchadnezzar made Daniel the ruler over all the province of Babylon (Dan 2:48).
- Belshazzar made Daniel the “ third [highest] ruler of the kingdom” of Babylon (Dan 5:29).
- Daniel “prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian” (Dan 6:28).
- Cyrus was commissioned by God to assist the Jews in the rebuilding of the Temple (Ezra 1:1-8; 6:14; 7:11-28).
- Artaxerxes assisted Nehemiah by giving him what was required to go to Jerusalem and rebuild the walls (Neh 2:1-8; 5:14; 13:6).
- Gallio, Roman deputy of Achaia, refused to allow charges to be brought against Paul by the Jews (Acts 18:14-16).

- The townclerk of Ephesus dismissed an assembly aligned against Paul and his co-laborers, declaring the assembly to be unlawful (Acts 19:35-41).

- Paul once appealed to Caesar, convinced there would be more justice in the civil court than among the hard-hearted Jews (Acts 25:11; 28:19).

Now, we find that some of the political officials were personal friends to Paul. Like a true friend, he had showed himself friendly among them (Prov 18:24). His life was doubtless an excellent testimony of the peace that characterizes one who lives unto the Lord, as compared to living with a focused interest on self.

Throughout history, God has used governments and their rulers in the execution of His purposes. Although, from one view, these governments were competing powers, from yet another more complete view, they were pawns in the hands of the Lord. When He desired, He turned their hearts like the rivers of water (Prov 21:1). As the King of kings (1 Tim 6:15) and Lord of lords (Rev 19:16), he raised up kings, took them down, and put others in their place (1 Sam 2:8; Psa 75:6-7; Dan 2:21; 4:17).

Therefore, it should not surprise us when civil authorities sometimes rose in defense of the servants of the Lord, sometimes even promoting the knowledge of God among the empires over which they presided, and often assisting the children of Israel in what they had been commissioned to do (Dan 4:1-3; 34-37; 6:26-27; Ezra 1:1-8; 6:14; 7:11-28; Neh 2:1-8; 5:14; 13:6).

Believers Were Not Reactionaries

This also confirms that early believers were not rabble-rousers, inciting civil disobedience or a lack of respect for political rulers of the people. While they by no means condoned everything done by government officials, as confirmed in John the Baptist rebuking Herod (Matt 14:4), yet they knew that they had been placed in their position by God Himself, who said, “You shall not revile God, nor curse a ruler of your people” NKJV (Ex 22:28).

When it comes to societal influence, the “works” of believers are the appointed means of testimony (Matt 5:16). They are not to launch crusades against the civil authorities, like Barabbas did (Mk 15:7).

On one occasion, when the Jews had hauled Paul into court to raise charges against him, he pointed out to the governor that he had not been found stirring up trouble. “And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city” (Acts 24:12).

CHRONOLOGY OF WORLD EMPIRES

1st world power = EGYPT (in power to 1491 BC) – Joseph and Moses prominent.

2nd world power = ASSYRIA (1491 - 606 BC) – Israel enters/conquers Canaan, Judges, David, Solomon, Prophets

3rd world power = BABYLON (606 - 538 BC) – Daniel prominent

4th world power = MEDO-PERSIA (538 - 333 BC) – Daniel prominent

5th world power = GREECE (333 - 44 BC) – Inter-testamental Period

6th world power = ROME (44 BC - 476 AD) – John the Baptist, Jesus, Apostles

In our day, it has become fashionable for professing believers to speak openly against civil rulers. Such activities need to be addressed with great sobriety and a keen understanding of what God has said on the matter, as well as the examples set by the Lord Jesus and the apostles.

DESIRING HIM NOT TO ENTER THE ARENA

“ . . . sent unto him, desiring him that he would not adventure himself into the theatre.” Other versions read, “sent to him pleading that he would not venture into the theater,” NKJV “repeatedly urged him not to,” NASB “sent him a message begging him not to,” NIV “ requesting him seriously not to put himself in danger,” BBE “and urged him not to throw himself into the theatre,” DARBY and “warned him not to risk venturing into the theater.” AMPLIFIED

This is a remarkable example of God working all things together for the good of His people (Rom 8:28). A God like this is to be trusted. On other occasions, Paul was able to present a defense (Acts 21:37-30; 23:1-10; 24:24-26; 26:1-32). In this case, however, the circumstances were apparently more hostile, and it was not wise for Paul to give a defense of himself.

Being alert to Divine direction, God could order his path through the disciples, and through friendly civil authorities as well. Paul was able to be directed in this manner, a trait that does not characterize all who profess to be followers of Christ.

A CONFUSED ASSEMBLY

“ 32 Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.”

Demetrius had presented what appeared to be a very logical case. Calling the craftsmen related to the making of artifacts honoring the goddess Diana, he had laid before the people the following argument.

- The craftsmen made their living making shrines for the goddess Diana.
- Paul had successfully convinced people that a god made by men was really no god at all.
- This would lead to the despising of the goddess Diana.
- This would lead to the obsolescence of the temple erected in her honor.

theater is what David asked to take place among his enemies. “Let them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt.”

This would render their trade outdated and no longer needed.

Yet, although the argument seemed logical enough, the cause was not valid , and therefore it did not yield the desired results.

SOME CRIED ONE THINGS, AND SOME ANOTHER

“Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused . . .” Other versions read, “the assembly was in confusion,” NASB “there was no order in the meeting,” BBE “the assembly was in complete confusion,” CJB “the assembly was tumultuous,” DARBY “the assembly was out of order,” GENEVA “the assembly was in chaos,” NAB “the assembly itself had no idea what was going on,” NJB “the assembly was all out of quiet,” PNT “the assembly was all uproar and confusion,” WEYMOUTH “was in an uproar,” MONTGOMERY and “the gathering was in a tumult.” AMPLIFIED

What we have here is the fulfillment of the saying, “Thus saith the LORD, thy redeemer, and he that formed thee from the womb, I am the LORD that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth by myself; That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish ” (Isa 44:25). And again the Psalmist affirmed, “The LORD bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought: He maketh the devices of the people of none effect” (Psa 33:10).

What took place in that Ephesian theater is what David asked to take place among his enemies. “Let them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought to confusion that devise my hurt” (Psa 35:4). Again he wrote, “Let them be ashamed and brought to confusion together that rejoice at mine hurt: let them be clothed with shame and dishonor that magnify themselves against me” (Psa 35:26). Isaiah the prophet wrote, “They shall be ashamed, and also confounded, all of them: they shall go to confusion together that are makers of idols” (Isa 45:16).

It seems to me that it is in order to ask the Lord to impose confusion and shame upon those who set themselves against the Lord and His Christ. If someone is going to be confused, let it be the ungodly.

THE MORE PART KNEW NOT WHY THEY WERE COME TOGETHER

“ . . . and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.”

Here is a classic example of confusion – when the people do not know why they have come together, and all reason is abandoned. In Christ, crowds can be orderly, with everyone attentive to what is being said. This is what occurred on the day of Pentecost. Although there was a diversity of people present who spoke differing mother tongues, yet there was a certain order in that gathering that cannot be explained apart from the working of the Lord (Acts 2:8-12). The gathering of which we are reading was the antithesis of that gathering in Jerusalem, when focus and order were present.

ALEXANDER IS PUT FORWARD

“ 33 And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward. And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defence unto the people.”

Now, an attempt will be made to have some order among the people, and the intelligent presentation of a cause. However, God had imposed confusion upon them, and the effort will be in vain. Ultimately, the unity of the wicked is futile. As it is written, “Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered” (Prov 11:21).

THEY DREW ALEXANDER OUT OF THE MULTITUDE

“And they drew Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward.” Other versions read, “And some of the crowd concluded it was Alexander, since the Jews had put him forward,” NASB “The Jews pushed Alexander to the front, and some of the crowd shouted instructions to him,” NIV “Some of the crowd gave instructions to Alexander, whom the Jews had pushed forward,” NRSV “And they brought Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews putting him forward,” ASV “Some of the crowd explained the situation to Alexander, whom the Jews had pushed to the front,” CJB “Some of the crowd prompted Alexander, whom the Jews had put forward,” ESV “some people concluded that Alexander was the cause, so the Jews pushed him to the front,” GWN “And the Jewish people who were there, brought forward one of their men, a Jew, named Alexander,” MRD and “Some of the crowd called upon Alexander [to speak], since the Jews had pushed and urged him forward.”
AMPLIFIED

The multiplicity of Bible versions once again present a confusing picture.

- That the Ephesian craftsmen thought Alexander was the cause of the uproar, and so brought him forward. NASB/GWN
- The Jews explained the situation to Alexander, who was apparently an able spokesman, then put him forward. NIV/NRSV/CJB
- Some of the craftsmen explained the situation to Alexander, whom the Jews had put forward. ESV/AMPLIFIED

The defense was certainly not in the behalf of Paul, for the Jews would never have put Alexander forward for that purpose. The Jews in Ephesus had been guilty of speaking “evil of the way” which Paul was declaring, doing so “before the multitude”

The Jews put forward Alexander to explain the whole situation. MRD

We do not know the identity of this man. Some have supposed this was “Alexander the coppersmith,” to whom Paul alluded in his second letter to Timothy (2 Tim 4:14). That is a matter, the resolution of which, is not worthy of any extensive pursuit. I do not know how a person could fully support a conclusion on the matter.

Judging from the verse that follows, it seems to me that the Jews put him forward to clarify that the Jews were not involved in this whole matter, and that they did not stand in support of Paul. If this is true, then the effort was strictly a selfish one, with no interest in the execution of justice.

HE TRIED TO MAKE A DEFENSE TO THE PEOPLE

“And Alexander beckoned with the hand, and would have made his defense unto the people.” Other versions read, “wanted to make his defense,” NKJV “Alexander was intending to make a defense,” NASB “make a statement to the people in answer,” BBE “would have given the people satisfaction,” DOUAY “would have excused the matter to the people,” GENEVA “wished to explain something to the gathering,” NAB “with the intention of explaining things to the people,” NJB and “wishing to make a defense and [planning] to apologize to the people,” AMPLIFIED

The defense was certainly not in the behalf of Paul, for the Jews would never have put Alexander forward for that purpose. The Jews in Ephesus had been guilty of speaking “evil of the way” which Paul was declaring, doing so “before the multitude” (19:9).

However, the Jews did not condone the worship of Diana of the Ephesians, and her worshippers were certainly aware of that. Nevertheless, the Jews in Ephesus, like those in Athens (Acts 17:16-17) had not made a stand against idolatry. They were apparently quite willing to live amidst the exaltation of false gods without being contentious about it. Paul, on the other hand, was not willing to do so, either in Athens or in Ephesus. He insisted on publicly proclaiming that idols were not gods, and that it was wholly improper to worship them, or to in any way suggest they were deities. Thus, the Jews put forward Alexander, who was apparently a good speaker like Tertullus, who could present a false way in a good and convincing manner (Acts 24:1-8). The aim here was no doubt to take the pressure off of the Jews, and confirm they had nothing whatsoever to do with Paul.

THE SPIRIT OF COMPROMISE

The spirit of compromise maintains a dreadful presence in the current Christian community. Under the shroud of a feigned peace, the modern church has moved into the moral background. Even though it is the appointed and ordained “pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15), it has chosen to be muffled by an institutional emphasis, and thus has lost its saltiness.

Compromise is nothing less than a fleshly attempt to make the truth more palatable. This assumes that, as stated in Scripture, it has been overstated, or put too strongly, in the raw form of Divine utterance or inspiration. It is simply seen as not palatable to men – and, indeed, this is true of those who are “carnally minded” (Rom 8:6). Of course, truth, by Divine design, is never tailored for such people, for they have no natural capacity to receive the truth in any form. It is beyond the scope of their understanding. The only hope for such people is for the truth to be presented in its purest form, for the Holy Spirit then uses it for the purposes God has ordained. To mitigate the truth, therefore, is to put it beyond the reach men, all the while imagining that, by reducing its potency, it is being put within their reach. It is the betrayal of a most pitiful state when supposedly Christian men attempt to make the truth acceptable to worldly-minded people. By diluting the truth itself, or failing to proclaim it in its fulness, men imagine that they are either giving a greater advantage for truth to work, or are creating a peaceable environment in which living will be more tolerable for themselves and their hearers.

However, when compromise is initiated, or tolerance allowed, those who do such things are losing their saltiness, or “savor.” They are made less effective in their attempt to blur the line between truth and the lie. By attempting to make the truth less abrasive, they have robbed it of its power, for it is its abrasiveness that serves to draw out the real nature of the people exposed to it.

Jesus said, there was no way to regain saltiness once it had been lost. “You are the salt of the earth, but if salt has lost its taste (its strength, its quality), how can its saltiness be restored? It is not good for anything any longer but to be thrown out and trodden underfoot by men” AMPLIFIED (Matt 5:13). That is a most arresting statement, and worthy of extended consideration. Among other things, it accentuates the seriousness of being silent in a declining generation. The prophets were noted for their denunciation of false ideas (Isa 3:11; 5:11; 10:1; 29:15; Ezek 13:3; Zeph 2:5). Jesus was the premier spokesman against religious falsity (Matt 11:21; 18:7; 23:13; Lk 6:24; 11:46). The apostles, under the direction of Jesus and the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, did not allow religious corruption to go unrebuked (Acts 19:26; Phil 3:2; Col 2:8; 2 Tim 3:1-5; 4:3-4; 2 Pet 2:12-19; 3:17; Jude 1:11-13).

Compromise can take many forms. It is found in not carrying a Bible, lest it offend someone. Perhaps it is not using the vernacular of Scripture, or adjusting one’s outward appearance so as to remove any suspicion that one is a Christian. It may take the form of silence, being tolerant of crude speech and immoral manners. Some even stoop to adopting outward manners that cause the sinner to be at ease – like holding a can of strong drink, or consenting to accompany a carnal friend to a worldly affair. However, whatever form compromise takes is dishonoring to the truth itself. It reveals ignoble motives and spiritual ignorance.

God’s people must not ignore the presence of corruption around them, or attempt to live as though it did not exist. The Divine mandate is to separate from competing interests, making no effort to blend with or tolerate them (2 Cor 6:15-7:1). It seems to me that this is a requisite for maintaining moral and spiritual purity.

A PEOPLE WHO WERE NOT RESPECTED

“ 34 But when they knew that he was a Jew, all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.”

Here is an effort at compromise that came crashing down to the ground. It did so because the Jews themselves were not respected. Or, more precisely, their religion was held in disdain, and thus their persons were despised. This is a factor that compromisers never take into consideration.

WHEN THEY KNEW HE WAS A JEW

“But when they knew that he was a Jew . . .” Other versions read, “found out that he was a Jew,”

NKJV “recognized that he was a Jew,” NASB “realized that he was a Jew,” NIV “perceived that he was a Jew,” ASV “knowing him to be a Jew,” MRD “having known that he was a Jew,” YLT and “as soon as they saw that he was a Jew.” WILLIAMS

There was, then, a distinctiveness in the Jews. Some of it may have been owing to their appearance. However, it seems that the greater distinction was the knowledge of their religion. Even though many of them had not embraced it with zeal, their exposure to, and acquaintance with, God had produced some effects in the other nations. This distinctiveness could not be destroyed – even by their failure to adhere to the Lord and believe on His Son. They had been Divinely cultured, and that was the cause of much of the prejudice against them. It is true that the Egyptians held the offspring of Jacob in contempt because they were shepherds. As it is written, “for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians” (Gen 46:34). However, that was not the point here, for the outcry of the crowd was not one promoting silversmiths, but one that elevated their god above the One of the Hebrews.

Although there was mass confusion at this time, it did not jar the Ephesian craftsmen out of their prejudice toward the Jews. Suddenly, when recognizing that Alexander was a Jew, they had a moment of lucidity – enough to choose who they would despise, and who they would exalt. Both of those are exercises of human intelligence, and both are deliberate.

I have observed over the years that people who appear to be nearly out of their mind, losing all sense of reason, can suddenly marshal all of their rational powers against those whom they perceive to be a threat. Of course, this kind of rationality is not from above, but is a form of wisdom that is appropriately termed “earthly, sensual, devilish” (James 3:15).

WITH ONE VOICE THEY CRIED OUT

“ . . . all with one voice about the space of two hours cried out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.” Other versions read, “a single outcry,” NASB “shouted in unison,” NIV “began bellowing in unison,” CJB “a united cry went up from all of them,” CSB “everyone started to shout in unison,” GWN “there arose from them all one roar of shouting,” WEYMOUTH

The original intent was no doubt to make it impossible to hear the defense that Alexander attempted to make. Their contempt for the Jews, together with the perceived association of the Christians with the Jews, compelled them to take the ears of the people away from this Jew. As they continued shouting, the fervor for Diana apparently increased more and more. That is the effect that shouting can have upon people.

THE RELEVANCY OF THE SHOUT

In nearly every aspect of social life, whether athletic, political, entertainment, or general camaraderie, the excitement of a shout is common. Yet, in the field of religion, men often lisp as though they had no power to project their voice.

Of old time, there was such a thing as a “shout for mastery” (Ex 32:18). When the walls of Jericho fell down, the people were instructed, “all the people shall shout with a great shout: and the wall of the city shall fall down flat” (Josh 6:5). That is precisely what happened (John 6:20). Once, during the days of David, when he went to his brothers when Goliath was taunting the army, it is written that he came as “the host was going forth to the fight, and shouted for the battle” (1 Sam 17:20). After David had slain Goliath, “the men of Judah arose, and shouted, and pursued the Philistines” (2 Sam 17:52). Another time, “as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass that God” Himself entered into the battle (2 Chron 13:15). During the days of Ezra, when a spiritual renewal was taking place, “All the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the Lord” (Ezra 3:11).

The saints of God are admonished, “Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, ye righteous: and shout for joy , all ye that are upright in heart” (Psa 32:11; 35:11). Again they are exhorted, “ shout unto God with the voice of triumph” (Psa 47:1). And again, “let thy saints shout for joy ” (Psa 132:9). The Psalmist proclaimed that when the Lord clothed men with salvation, the “saints shall shout aloud for joy” (Psa 132:16). The inhabitants of Zion are told, “Cry out and shout ” (Isa 12:6). At the report of the working of the Lord the people of God are commanded , “ shout , ye lower parts of the earth” (Isa 44:23). Through Jeremiah the Lord said, “ shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye” (Jer 31:7). At the prospect of blessing Israel was told, “Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout , O Israel” (Zeph 3:14). Zechariah admonished the people, “ shout , O daughter of Jerusalem” (Zech 9:9). When the Lord descends from heaven, He shall do so “with a shout ” (1 Thess 4:16). Those who bring good tidings are commanded, “ lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up , be not afraid!” (Isa 40:9). In prophecies concerning the day of salvation, Isaiah said, “Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice ” (Isa 40:9). When Peter preached on the day of Pentecost, it is written that he “ lifted up his voice ” (Acts 2:14).

In nearly every aspect of social life, whether athletic, political, entertainment, or general camaraderie, the excitement of a shout is common. Yet, in the field of religion, men often lisp as though they had no power to project their voice. Why should gatherings shout at an athletic event, but whisper in the congregation of the saints? What logic can be adduced for verbal articulation that cannot be easily heard and distinguished – particularly when the truth of God is spoken? Does not God admonish His people time and time again to speak with fervor. And why is this so? Because there is something about the elevated voice that impacts upon human emotion. Even when God spoke from heaven, it was associated with thunder, not a gentle and silent flowing stream (Ex 20:18; Psa 18:13; John 12:29; Rev 4:5; 8:5; 11:19; 19:6). It seems to be that it is a comely trait to speak up in matters pertaining to life and godliness. The microphone-generation should not have an undue effect upon those who speak for Jesus. The voice, like the rest of our “members,” is to be sanctified, given to God, and used for His glory. This seems apparent enough to say no more about it.

THE TOWN CLERK SPEAKS

“ 35 And when the townclerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?”

On the surface, it appears as though a local political official brings some semblance of order in a shouting mob. Behind the scenes, however, it is the living God who is at work, working things together for the good of those who love Him.

THE TOWNCLERK

“And when the townclerk had appeased the people . . .” Other versions read, “city clerk had quieted,” NKJV “chief secretary had got the people quiet,” BBE “city clerk had calmed the crowd down,” CSB “chief of the city had tranquilized them,” MRD “town clerk restrained the crowd,” NAB city secretary quieted the crowd,” NET “the mayor was able to quiet them,” NLT “town clerk had pacified the people,” PNT “the main city official made the crowd be quiet,” IE “city recorder quieted the mob,” WILLIAMS and “at length the recorder got them quiet.” MONTGOMERY

As the above coin indicates, this was an important office in the Roman government. This person was responsible for recording and reading the laws of the state. It is also suggested in this text that this person probably recorded the proceedings that took place during official meetings held in the amphitheater. It is to be admitted that on paper, this meeting would not be impressive, and would probably cause indignation among the rulers, for the peace of the city had been disrupted. By way of comparison, when those who were given to “curious arts” brought their books together and burned them publically, there was not a tumultuous environment. No disruption was brought to the city by those who had believed on the name of Jesus Christ.

I wonder how many church meetings would continue if someone of authority insisted on maintaining order, and was recording everything that was being said. Of course, those of tender heart know that there is a record written in heaven of what men are saying, and that the record will be brought up on the day of judgment (Matt 12:36).

Even the devil's crowd knows that confusion and pandemonium is an uncomely environment in which nothing of worth can be accomplished.

It is unfortunate that a sizeable segment of the Christian community has made an effort to dignify confusion by saying it is a special outpouring from God. Thus people falling down under the purported influence of the Spirit, and speaking in an unknown tongue, mingled with varied unintelligible utterances, is viewed as a blessing from God. How likely is it that the God who demands that He be loved with all of the mind would send an extraordinary blessing on His people that excluded the mind? To dignify such action, we need something more than the biased opinion of men, or those who wrest the Scriptures to suit their preconceived notions.

WHAT MAN IS THERE WHO DOES NOT KNOW

“ . . . he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana . . .”

First, the city official points out that there is no need to extol Diana in this public and tumultuous gathering – particularly by irrational shouts and tumult. There was no person in those parts that did not know the city of Ephesus worshiped “the great goddess Diana.” This was general knowledge, and there was no need to affirm it as though it was not known by everyone.

THE IMAGE WHICH FELL DOWN FROM JUPITER

“ . . . and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?” Other versions read, “and of the image which fell down from Zeus,” NKJV “the image which fell down from heaven,” NASB “the statue that fell from heaven,” NRSV “the sacred stone that fell from the sky,” RSV “Diana, which was sent down from Jupiter,” BBE “Jupiter's offspring,” DOUAY “her image which descended from heaven,” MRD “her image that fell from the sky,” NAB “her statue that fell from heaven,” NJB “whose image fell down to us from heaven,” NLT “the image which came down from Jupiter,” PNT “her holy rock,” IE “the sacred stone [image of her] that fell from the sky.” AMPLIFIED “the image which fell down from Jupiter himself,” PHILLIPS “Who doesn't know that her image which fell from heaven is right here,” CEV and “her sacred stone image that fell straight out of heaven.” MESSAGE

The differing versions present several possibilities.

- That an image fell down from Jupiter, or Zeus.
- That the image fell down from heaven.
- That the very statue in the temple fell from heaven.
- That a rock, or stone of some sort fell down from heaven.
- That Diana was sent down from Jupiter.
- That Jupiter's offspring fell down from heaven.
- That Diana's image descended from heaven.
- That a holy rock belonging to Diana fell down from heaven.
- That the sacred stone that fell from heaven was an image of Diana.

- That Jupiter himself personally sent the stone from heaven.

I gather that the image that is said to have fallen down from heaven is the image of Diana, the idol that resided in the temple dedicated to her, and of which small replicas were made by the silversmiths. This fits perfectly with the text which does not have to do with religious artifacts, but with gods that have been made with hands.

This fits perfectly with the text which does not have to do with religious artifacts, but with gods that have been made with hands.

According to the flesh, this was an ingenious and calculating statement. Demetrius had affirmed that Paul taught that gods made with hands were no gods at all. Now the town clerk affirms that this is not the kind of God that the Ephesians worshiped (even though, in fact, the idol was made by men). By referring to “the image” as falling down from Jupiter, he will be able to say that Demetrius had not leveled a legitimate charge at Paul. This the whole meeting, he concluded, was out of order.

THE ASSUMPTION OF HEAVENLY ACTIVITY

The assumption of heavenly activity remains common among religious men. This is even true of the Christian community. All sectarianism, or denominationalism, assumes that their interpretations have been given by God, or are in precise accord with what is written. From the Roman church to the Mormons and the Jehovah’s Witness, with everything in between, men are of the opinion that their religion was given by God. However, since God is “not the author of confusion” (1 Cor 14:33), this cannot be true.

I personally come from a background where claims were made of being the “true New Testament church.” Many of the congregations within this movement even put this representation on the cornerstone of their buildings: “Founded in 30 A.D.” Although the exclusivity of that particular institution was not taught with equal vigor by all of its teachers, the clear implication of their teaching led to this conclusion. Some branches of the movement, which is significantly fractured, even ruled out other segments of it upon the basis of human interpretation. Their view of this interpretation was much like that of the Roman church, which assigns infallibility to its head – a head who is chosen by the election of key men within its organization.

This whole circumstance does not differ substantially from that of our text. It unveils a human tendency that has been prominent following the expulsion of our parents from the Garden. Men have this inveterate tendency of assigning inordinate worth to their own opinions, as well as a marked proclivity to be doubtful of the affirmations that have been made by God Himself in the Holy Scriptures .

All of this is highlighted in our text. However, men of wisdom must be able to make the transition to our present time, confirming that this is a sterling example of the reasoning of fallen men. Even if this manner of thinking is done in the name of “Jesus whom Paul preacheth” (Acts 19:13), it is still foolish, and ought not to be found among those who claim identity with God through Jesus Christ the Lord.

Weak thinking cannot support critical postulates, or be the basis for religious conclusions. It must be excluded from anything associated with Christ.

A LEGITIMATE CHARGE CANNOT BE RAISED

“ 36 Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly. 37 For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.”

THE SUPREMACY OF THE LORD

Keep in mind that we are being exposed to the working of the Lord Himself. Although it may appear as though He is working behind the scenes, His hand is actually eminent in the scene. If men cannot see it, it is only because they have not been given eyes to see. It is said of ancient Israel, who was also obtuse concerning the working of the Lord, “Yet the LORD hath not given you an heart to perceive, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, unto this day” (Deut 29:4). When speaking with the prophet Ezekiel, God spoke of a condition where the people had eyes, yet could not see. “Son of man, thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house, which have eyes to see, and see not; they have ears to hear, and hear not: for they are a rebellious house” (Ezek 12:2). In such a case, even though the Lord was at work at a remarkably detailed level, yet it was not apparent to those whose hearts were hardened. Their condition was imposed upon them because of their refusal to give heed to what was given to them. Therefore Isaiah said, “ He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them” (John 12:40; Isa 29:10).

Men may banter about the free will of man, human volition, and the likes. But after they have expended all of their intellectual energy, they must contend with the fact that they have been created by the God whose purpose drives the events and destiny of this “present evil world.” The prophets teach us that when calamity breaks out, there is a sense in which it can be traced back to God Himself: “shall there be evil in a city, and the LORD hath not done it?” (Amos 3:6). If there are deceivers afoot among men, we are taught, “the deceived and the deceiver are His” (Job 12:16). If there are heresies, or divisions, among those professing identity with God, we are taught that this is a necessity. “For there must be also heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you” (1 Cor 11:19).

Professed Christians who argue about the Sovereignty of God are brothers to the Ephesian craftsmen. They speculate about things that have been revealed, thereby exposing the hardness of their own hearts. They are like those to whom Paul had to say, “Thou wilt say then unto me, Why doth he yet find fault? For who hath resisted his will? Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus? Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honor, and another unto dishonor?” (Rom 9:19-21).

As Paul indicates in the above text, all people have not been made for the singular purpose of being honorable. Some, like Pharaoh, are intended to be used for dishonorable purposes (Rom 9:17). They are like the “bad” fish who were caught in the kingdom net, only to be at last cast away (Matt 13:47-49).

Such lofty considerations are not attended with lengthy explanations concerning their cause. Rather, they are set before us that we might know that, ultimately, everything is really traced back to God. As it is written, “For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (Rom 11:36). Men may not understand it. They may even object to such things being said. However, they have been said, and men are to believe them, whether they can understand them or not.

THE NECESSITY OF THIS DISCUSSION

This kind of discussion is necessary in order to the maintenance of both a sound mind and sound doctrine. If the matter of salvation is set within the context of the human will, men will never be able to have the confidence that is required to run the race that has been set before them (Heb 12:1-2).

There are several revealed pillars of thought that support sound and beneficial reasoning concerning the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. They begin with the basic postulate that God is “above all.” There is no one, nor is there any circumstance, to which God Himself is subject. That includes the Lord Jesus Himself, who has been exalted “above all.” It is said of that marvelous exaltation, “For He [God the Father] hath put all things under His [Jesus the Son] feet. But when He [God the Father] saith all things are put under Him [Jesus the Son] , it is manifest that He [God the Father] is excepted, which did put all things under Him [Jesus the Son] . And when all things shall be subdued unto Him [Jesus the Son] , then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him [God the Father] that put all things under Him [Jesus the Son] , that God may be all in all” (1 Cor 15:27-28).

If God is not subject to the One who has been exalted above all else, including every name that has been named, you may be sure He is not subject to anyone or anything else.

The absolute and

What appears to be nothing more than opposition is actually a patch of desert through which the sons are passing en route to glory. Viewed in any other way, the text will become confusing, for it appears as though there is a window in the lives of Paul and his co-laborers when the enemy has the upper hand.

unquestionable supremacy of God is affirmed in Scripture. “And He blessed him, and said, Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth ” (Gen 14:19). Again, “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (Rom 11:36). “One God and Father of all, who is above all , and through all, and in you all” (Eph 4:6). Sound reasoning is based upon the cognizance of Divine domination. If this fact is denied, there is nothing of eternal value that can be apprehended.

- GOD’S ETERNAL PURPOSE. The fact of God’s “eternal purpose” is stated in Ephesians 3:11. “According to the eternal purpose which He purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord.” This is a purpose that determines what God does, for He works everything “according to the purpose” (Eph 1:11). Although this purpose includes the consideration of men, there is a sense in which it stands separate and apart from them. This is seen in the fact that it is purpose “in Christ Jesus.” Even when men are “called” by God, it is not according to their need, but “according to His purpose” (Rom 8:28).

- DETERMINED IN CHRIST. So far as the execution of this purpose is concerned, it is “in Christ Jesus our Lord” (Eph 3:11). The Son of God forms the perimeter of this purpose, so that no benefit can be realized from it, apart from fellowship with Christ, into which men are called (1 Cor 1:9). So far as beneficial involvement by God Himself, it all hinges on one’s productive and fruitful participation with Christ (Heb 3:14).

- CHRIST EXALTED ABOVE ALL. Following His vicarious death (Isa 53:5), the removal of sin (John 1:29; Heb 1:3), and destruction of the devil (Heb 2:14) and his works (1 John 3:8), Jesus was exalted. There is no name, no power, and no domain over which Jesus does not presently preside. The solitary exception is God Himself, who alone is not subject to Christ (1 Cor 15:27).

- GOD CHOOSES A PEOPLE. There is a people in the earth who have been chosen by God. This is not a human speculation, but a Divine affirmation. These people are referred to as a “chosen generation” (1 Pet 2:9). They are said to have been “chosen in Him (Christ) before the foundation of the world” (Eph 1:4). Further, they were chosen “to salvation” by the means of “sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth” (2 Thess 2:13).

- THE PEOPLE ARE GIVEN TO CHRIST. Those whom God has chosen belong to Him. Not only has He created them, He has made full provision for the liquidation of the debt created by their sin. He has also regenerated, or re-created them, so that they are his “sons and daughters” (2 Cor 6:18). In strict keeping with His purpose, God has given these chosen ones to Christ Jesus, to shepherd and care for them. Ultimately, He is bringing them to glory (Heb 2:10). Jesus confessed that God had given them to Him (John 6:39; John 17:7,9,11,21).

These realities are all fully operative in our text. In spite of the apparent circumstances, the God of heaven is working according to His purpose, and the Lord Jesus is bringing the children who have been given to Him to glory. What appears to be nothing more than opposition is actually a patch of desert through which the sons are passing en route to glory. Viewed in any other way, the text will become confusing, for it appears as though there is a window in the lives of Paul and his co-laborers when the enemy has the upper hand. However, this is emphatically not the case. This is all being done under the general canopy of Divine working. As it is written, “For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12). He is bringing the sons to glory, perfecting them, and working all things together for their ultimate good.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF OUR TEXT

In our text, God has brought confusion among the people just as surely as He did at Babel (Gen 11:7). He has also turned the heart of the leader of the people like a river of water, thereby changing the whole direction of this assembly (Prov 21:1). Suddenly, things have turned for the benefit of the ones targeted for persecution. In the words of Scripture, “This is the LORD'S doing; it is marvelous in our eyes” (Psa 118:23).

There is a very definite sense in which the will of the Lord is being worked out among men – even among those who are not consciously subject to Him. While this reality is disputed among religious men, those who are of faith can sense not only the reality of this, but its necessity as well. God will use a speech made by an unregenerate government official to diffuse a determined persecution.

THESE THINGS CANNOT BE SPOKEN AGAINST

“Seeing then that these things cannot be spoken against . . .” From the perspective of the town clerk, the commitment of the Ephesian citizenry to Diana was so settled that it could not be unseated by the words or works of Paul. Of course, there had been sufficient inroads made in the idolatrous community, so that even the living of the silversmiths was now jeopardized. However, this man dismisses that, together with the fact of the massive book-burning that had taken place in the city. He apparently feels that things will eventually revert to the Ephesus-norm.

YE OUGHT TO BE QUIET

“ . . . ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly.” Other versions read, “keep calm and do nothing rash,” NASB “it would be better for you to be quiet, and do nothing unwise,” BBE “and not do anything foolish,” GWN “ought to be tranquil, and to do nothing with precipitancy,” MRD “and not do anything reckless,” NET “You must stop and think before you do anything wrong.” IE and “(keep yourselves in check) and do nothing rashly.” AMPLIFIED

The word “rashly” is translated from a word meaning, “falling forward, headlong. . . precipitate, rash, reckless,” THAYER “thoughtless,” FRIBERG “pertaining to impetuous and reckless behavior - 'reckless, impetuous,” LOUW-NIDA and “hastily.” LIDDELL-SCOTT In the English language the word “rash” means “proceeding from lack of deliberation or caution : acting, done, or expressed with undue haste or disregard for consequences : imprudently involving or incurring risk.” In other words, it is conduct that is more characteristic of the brute creation than of man, who is made in the image of God.

From the Scriptural perspective this kind of compulsive behavior is referred as being hasty, or making haste. When prophesying of the era of the Christ, Isaiah said, “he that believeth shall not make haste” (Isa 28:16). In other words, believing stops a person from acting compulsively, rashly, or without due thought. The tendency to react impulsively, erupting in thoughtless words and deeds and in a state of hotheadedness, is an area in which Satan is especially active. There have been persecutions launched against the saints of God that were driven by this kind of reaction. In fact, that was the intent of the gathering described in our text. Were it not for the government of God, His children would not be able to survive such behavior. However, the Lord is at the helm of ship-humanity, and He is governing the world with His people in mind.

Therefore it is written, “Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain ” (Psa 76:10). It is written that God “stilleth . . . the tumult of the people” (Psa 65:7). Just as God has established borders for the massive seas of the earth, beyond which they cannot pass (Job 26:10; 38:11; Psa 104:9; Jer 5:22), so God has set the bounds for human wrath and opposition, and He will not allow the impulsiveness of man to go beyond those borders. An example of the wrath of man praising God is the death of Christ. Men gathered together against Christ, thinking to rid themselves of His restraining influence. But God took their action and used it for His own purpose, making an end of sin (Heb 9:26), destroying the devil (Col 2:15; Heb 2:14), and opening a living way to heaven (Heb 10:20).

Our text is an example of the Divine restraint of human wrath. It depicts the hand of God reaching into earth and putting shackles on human intentions.

The idea here is that neither Paul nor those aligned with him, had pilfered things from the temple dedicated to Diana. Paul had soundly denounced idolatry, but he had not entered into the Ephesian temple and removed some temple artifact to destroy it.

From the perspective of the town clerk, it was important that order be maintained and the civil authorities not be called into the matter. Even the heathen know that civility and order are proper. However, there is more to this matter than that. God has come to the aid of His servants Gaius and Aristarchus. He does not make them physically superior to their enemies like Samson. He does not move the brethren to secretly escort them out of the city, like the Thessalonian brethren. Here the Lord whistles, as it were, for the town clerk to step into the situation and deliver Paul’s companions from danger. The words of the official were spoken to calm the situation so as not to require further intervention. However, this occasion, as all others, is being driven by the Divine agenda, “For the kingdom is the LORD’S: and He is the Governor among the nations” (Psa 22:28).

THESE MEN ARE NOT ROBBERS OR BLASPHEMERS

“For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches, nor yet blasphemers of your goddess.”

Now the official chides Demetrius and his cohorts for acting compulsively and without due regard for civil authority. As I have already said, there was a Divine intention being fulfilled here, even though the official was completely unaware of it.

They Are Not Robbers of Churches

Other versions read, “robbers of temples,” NKJV “temple robbers,” NRSV “sacrilegious,” RSV “doing damage to the holy place,” BBE “temple-plunderers,” DARBY neither committed sacrilege,” GENEVA “have stolen nothing from the temple,” NLT and “plunderers of the temple.” PHILLIPS

Here, the word “churches” is not translated from the Greek word evkkllhsi,ai (ek-klay-see-ai) as in Acts 9:31; 15:41; and 16:5. In those texts, the reference was clusters of believers who gathered together. Here, however, the reference is to a structure. The Greek word used is ἱεροσυλοῦν (hee-er-os'-oo-los), a compounded word that puts "robbers" and "temple" together. The expression "robbers of churches," or "robbers of temples," is the translation of the single Greek word of reference. This is the only place it is used in the entirety of Scripture. The verb form of the Greek word (it is in the noun form here) is found in Romans 2:22, where it is translated "commit sacrilege," KJV/NKJV/NASB,NIV,NRSV "rob temples," NKJV and "robbing the sanctuary and doing sacrilege." The idea here is that neither Paul nor those aligned with him, had pilfered things from the temple dedicated to Diana. Paul had soundly denounced idolatry, but he had not entered into the Ephesian temple and removed some temple artifact to destroy it. This kind of action was taken by several Old Testament saints who were noted for destroying physical things associated with idolatry (2 Chron14:3; 23:17; 31:1; 32:12). The distinction is that such action took place because idolatry had arisen among the Israelites themselves.

Here, however, the believers did not enter into the temple of Diana to rob or destroy anything there. That was not the manner of those who believed in Christ. They overthrew idolatry by teaching, not by overt activity.

They Are Not Blasphemers

Other versions read, "blasphemers of our goddess," NASB "talking against our goddess," BBE "speak injuriously of your goddess," DARBY "insult our goddess," GWN "reviled our goddess," MRD "spoken against our goddess," NLT "despisers of your goddess," PNT "speaking evil of your goddess," YLT "defamed her," LIVING "said anything bad about her," IE "abusive speech against our goddess," WILLIAMS and "blasphemous speech about our goddess." If the assessment of the town clerk is true, and there is no reason to suspect that it is not, we have a confirmation of the nature of Paul's preaching. He did not launch into a diatribe against the idols, but simply classed put them all together as being "no gods." Rather than his message being an expose of particular false god's, it was a proclamation of the true God and His Christ.

If the assessment of the town clerk is true, and there is no reason to suspect that it is not, we have a confirmation of the nature of Paul's preaching. He did not launch into a diatribe against the idols, but simply classed put them all together as being "no gods" (19:26). Rather than his message being an expose of particular false god's, it was a proclamation of the true God and His Christ. This is underscored repeatedly in the book of Acts, which speaks of the focus of good preaching.

FOCUSED PREACHING

- Jesus Christ is said to have been "preached" (3:20).
- They "preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead" (4:2).
- The disciples "ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ" (5:42).
- They "preached Christ" (8:5; 9:20).
- It is written that "preached the word of the Lord" (15:36), and "preached the Gospel" (8:25; 16:10).
- Jesus was "preached" (8:35). Preaching was done "in the name of Jesus" (9:27).
- They "preached the word of God" (13:5; 14:25).
- Through Jesus they "preached . . . the forgiveness of sins" (13:38).
- It is written that they "preached the gospel" (14:7,21).

- They preached Jesus, that He “is Christ” (17:3).
- They preached “Jesus and the resurrection” (17:18).

Paul did teach that men “ought to turn from these vanities unto the living God” (14:15). That, of course, was stated when the people of Lystra sought to offer sacrifices to Paul and Barnabas. In Athens Paul also affirmed, “we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone, graven by art and man's device” (Acts 17:29). However, he did not engage in inflammatory speech about the false gods themselves.

True preaching is to thinking people. It is by means of holding forth the superior that the inferior is made known. The heart of the preaching of Paul and the other apostles was the Person of Christ and His indispensable ministry. They did not hold classes in the weakness of false religion, but taught of the superiority of Divine wisdom as it is revealed in Christ Jesus.

When detailed instruction was given concerning corruption, it was generally to the church, and that because it had either crept into the church, or was about to do so.

The Danger of A Distorted Emphasis

There is a subtle danger in maintaining a distorted emphasis. I speak particularly of those who speak in the name of Jesus Christ. One of the indications of a falling away is when the accent of preaching is changed. There are those, for example, whose preaching centers in the developing of good marriages. Others accent the home, or family itself, majoring in nearly every message on that facet of life. Still, others choose to emphasize personal success, particularly in the form of health and wealth. Still others are on a crusade restore the nation to a state of godliness. Some choose to continually speak of abortion and the right to life. Others insist on underscoring political freedom and the right to pursue personal interests.

There are other seemingly good emphases, such as apologetics – seeking to prove there is a God and that the Bible is true. Others speak and write extensively about the flaws in heathen religion. Some are specialists in historic Christianity, and are zealous to restore the ancient example of the church of the living God. Some make it their aim to unite all professing believers.

It is not that any of these things are wrong of themselves. Yet, all of them are wrong as an emphasis. There is not a solitary example of such a focus in the Word of God. This is because such things are more man-centered than God-centered. They also depend on human analysis rather than Divine revelation and proclamation.

In my judgment, and I am dogmatic on this, it is never right to upstage the Lord Jesus by assuming another emphasis. The nobility of the cause has nothing whatsoever to do with sound thinking. If any other emphasis is valid, then men are not made complete in Christ. If the only way to correct waywardness is to continually hammer upon it, then faith really does not alter the perspectives and persuasions of men.

I realize that the above position evinces a certain contempt for religious careers, and the building of specialized ministries. However, if the thrust of preaching is not Christ, I do not know how it is possible to say God will undergird the cause – regardless of its seeming nobility. If God has hinged everything to Christ, and given Him to be the “Head over everything for the church” (Eph 1:22), what valid reason can be adduced for adopting any other emphasis. May God hasten the day when those who wear the name of Jesus are noted for their proclamation and exposition of Him, His accomplishments, and His ministry. When this happens, erroneous emphases will be apparent.

IT SHALL BE DETERMINED IN A LAWFUL ASSEMBLY

“ 38 Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man, the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another. 39 But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful assembly. 40 For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.”

The town clerk does not rely upon mere political authority, but appeals to the reasoning of the Ephesian mob. His purpose is to avoid being called into question about the inciting of the riot. However, God Himself is in this whole matter, moving upon the people to act in favor of His own people.

THE NEED TO UNDERSTAND

In order to truly benefit from this record, the godly must be able to make the transition to their own lives, beholding and acknowledging the truth of Hebrews 13:5-6; “Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me.” As confirmed in this text, God being with us and not forsaking us does not mean we will not pass through troublous times. When Gaius and Aristarchus were caught and dragged into the arena, it was probably not with gentleness and kindness. The insensitive soul might have reasoned, “Why is all of this happening? Where is the Lord?” Such thinking is too foolish to be found in the minds of those who live by faith. The godly will be saved IN trouble, like Noah was saved DURING a flood, Daniel IN the lion’s den, and Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego IN the furnace of fire.

Even the law recognized the necessity of legitimacy in registering a complaint against someone – that is, a case in which one person had truly disadvantaged or harmed another. Among civilized people, and even among some barbarians, it is recognized that one person ought not to render disadvantages to another.

In our time, there appears to be a great weakness among professing Christians concerning this type of thinking. There is also a reason for this serious deficiency. Much of the preaching of our time centers in the well being and success of the believer. The gospel that is being preached is man-centered rather than Christ-centered. It is a kind of dumbed-down self-help system designed to make people think they can do better, be better, and have more things – and that God will help them in these matters. This frothy nonsense is presented as though it represented the Divine focus, the reason for Christ’s reign, and the intention behind salvation. Having added the pseudo-science of psychology to its feeble arsenal, the nominal church has now become the purveyor of self-help methodologies that require the assistance of men more than the help of God Himself. All of this has created a religious environment that generates naive and uninformed disciples. What has always been common to believers now appears strange and unreasonable. When trouble arises, it raises questions instead of faith, and murmuring instead of prayers.

By way of contrast, our text does not speak of the impact of this trouble upon Gaius and Aristarchus. Instead, it focuses on how heaven reacted to their circumstance, moving upon men to act in the interest of God’s children, even though they did not know that was the circumstance.

IF THEY HAVE A MATTER AGAINST ANY MAN

Wherefore if Demetrius, and the craftsmen which are with him, have a matter against any man . . .” Other versions read, “have a case against anyone,” NKJV “have a complaint against any man,” NASB “have a grievance against anybody,” NIV and “have a protest to make against any man.” BBE

Even the law recognized the necessity of legitimacy in registering a complaint against someone – that is, a case in which one person had truly disadvantaged or harmed another. Among civilized people, and even among some barbarians, it is recognized that one person ought not to render disadvantages to another.

They felt the genuineness of a charge had to be substantiated. Whatever the motive may have been, this was sound thinking and reflected the intention for civil government – to encourage those who do good, and avenge those who do wrong (Rom 13:3-4). Those who imagine the God-ordained purpose of government is to meet the needs of humanity are not correct. That may be appropriate in encouraging those who do good, but it is not the primary purpose for civil authority. The difficulties our present government is having is largely traceable to the insufficient manner in which it carries out the revealed intention for its existence: to encourage those who do good, and to punish those who do evil. It is interesting to note that the heathen government of Rome, in spite of its moral deficiencies and idolatry, was more in harmony with this purpose than our own government. Our text is a case in point, as well as Paul's later appeal to Caesar as a means of experiencing some justice in the case that had been leveled against him by the Jews (Acts 25:11; 28:19).

THE LAW IS OPEN

“ . . . the law is open, and there are deputies: let them implead one another” Other versions read, “the courts are open and there are proconsuls. Let them bring charges against one another,” NKJV “the courts are in session and proconsuls are available; let them bring charges against one another,” NASB “the courts are open and proconsuls are [available]; let them bring charges against one another [legally].” AMPLIFIED

In the legal system of Rome, arrangements were made for registering legitimate complaints immediately: “the courts are in session, and the proconsuls are available.” NASB This approach reduced the possibility of anarchy or insurrection. Means were made available to the people to settle grievances before they infected the fabric of society, or resulted in some form of violence.

Over these senatorial provinces the senate appointed by lot yearly an officer who was called “proconsul,” who exercised purely civil functions, had no power over life and death, and was attended by one or more legates. He was neither girt with the sword nor wore the military dress. He was chosen out of the body of the senate; and it was customary, when any one's consulate expired, to send him as a proconsul into some province . . . The proconsuls decided cases of equity and justice, either privately in their palaces, where they received petitions, heard complaints, and granted writs under their seals; or publicly in the common hall, with the formalities generally observed in the courts at Rome. McCLINTOK & STRONGS'S

Other deputies, or proconsuls, that are mentioned in the book of Acts include Sergius Paulus on the Island of Crete (Acts 13:7-12), and Gallio, who was the deputy or proconsul of Achaia (Acts 18:12). It is interesting that in these two cases, as well as the one before us, the officials were in favor of the people of God. These are most excellent examples of the meaning of Romans 14:18: “For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men ” (Rom 14:18). Again the saints are admonished concerning, “Providing for honest things, not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men ” (2 Cor 8:21). It is also said of Jesus during His youth, “And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man ” (Luke 2:52). It is to be noted that these texts refer to men of integrity who have some aptitude in discerning good and evil. I say this because believers are, under no circumstances, to conduct their lives in an effort to please men. Should they do this, they abruptly cease to be the servants of God. “For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ” (Gal 1:10). However, we are to live in such a manner as to pass the approval of discerning men, who can decipher between right and wrong and just and unjust. This would have particular reference to civil authorities, not to the fickle men of the street.

In the Roman form of government, provisions were made in the legal system for both parties to present their cases to the proconsuls

This kind of arrangement antedated the Roman government, being put in place by the God of Israel. Early in their history, judges were established among the people for the purpose of resolving differences in a timely and just manner (Ex 21:22,28; 22:9; Deut 1:16; 16:19). Jesus also spoke of this arrangement, admonishing His disciples to avoid the necessity of a judge entering into their disputes (Matt 5:25; Luke 12:58).

In our day, it almost sounds strange to hear of a procedure that allows for the timely and just resolution of a legal dispute. This is certainly not the way that our legal system works. This is largely owing to the practical abandonment of God's law, and the institutions He has put in place for the purpose of maintaining social order. This entire circumstance has arisen because of the recalcitrance of the professed church. She is "the pillar and ground of the truth" (1 Tim 3:15), but has been obstreperous to her duty. As of this time (2009), we are in the third generation of those who have not been exposed to the truth of God – at least not to any measurable degree. Thus the demand for justice has given way to the interests of those with money and influence.

Justice is not guaranteed by government, but by the conscience of the people – a conscience that has been formed by the truth of God. Of old time, God required that His people, Israel, "do justice" (Isa 56:1). When that justice was not present, the people were soundly rebuked by the prophets: "None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity" (Isa 59:4). How poignantly this is stated by Isaiah: "And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off : for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter" (Isa 59:14). Notice that the absence of justice was preceded by truth falling in the street because men did not take hold of it.

Solemnly Jeremiah told the people, "did not thy father eat and drink, and do judgment and justice , and then it was well with him?" (Jer 22:15). Ezekiel cried out, " Thus saith the Lord GOD; Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice , take away your exactions from my people, saith the Lord GOD" (Ezek 45:9). At one point the prophet Micah summarized God's requirement for Israel: "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly , and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" (Micah 6:8).

The point here is that the civil government had appointed a convenient and thorough manner for addressing social difficulties. The people were not permitted to take matters into their own hands, for that would lead to anarchy and social rebellion.

I believe you will find a certain consistency in human history on this matter. When the truth of God was not upheld by His people, there was a marked tendency to injustice. In fact, much of the injustice takes place within the professed church itself, just as it did in Israel when they persecuted, and even killed, their own prophets. This is not to mention their opposition to Jesus Christ, the stoning of Stephen, the hounding of Paul, and the sanction of Herod arresting Peter. I myself have been the recipient of injustice by organized religion. I could easily recite the names of a staggering number of believers who have suffered under the bludgeon of injustice from the professed church. Were you able to summon to the witness stand those who have been treated unjustly by their religious peers, your mind would not be able to process what you saw.

I know of no available resource that is noted for resolving religious conflicts, doing so in as timely and just manner. By Divine appointment, the Jews had such resources. The early church could take serious issues to the apostles for resolution, as demonstrated in the congregation in Antioch of Syria (Acts 15:1-2). The church at Corinth, particularly those of the house of Chloe, made inquiry of Paul concerning certain uncomely manners that existed in Corinth – and received a prompt answer (1 Cor 1:11).

Why is this present disinterest in godly justice present in the church? It is for the same reason that is was found in Israel: “truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey : and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment” (Isa 59:14-15). This circumstance still displeases the Lord – especially now that Jesus has been exalted to His right hand, and adequate resources have been made available to men. The thing that makes the whole situation disgraceful is that a town-clerk of Ephesus, himself validating the worship of Diana, had a greater sense of justice than many Christian leaders of our day. He was able to discern wrong motives more quickly, and stood against a mob in the interest of justice.

OTHER MATTERS REQUIRE A LAWFUL ASSEMBLY

“But if ye inquire any thing concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful assembly.” Other versions read, “legal assembly,” NIV “regular assembly,” NRSV “in the place assigned by law for an assembly,” MRD “regular City Council meetings,” LIVING and “regular town meeting of the people.” IE

The point here is that the civil government had appointed a convenient and thorough manner for addressing social difficulties. The people were not permitted to take matters into their own hands, for that would lead to anarchy and social rebellion. Even the Roman government knew that a house divided against itself will fall (Matt 12:28). Further, especially in a social setting, division is the ultimate child of controversy.

Also observe that the civil system made provision for the protection of the society – it held town meetings, and the leader was the town clerk. Even the heathen knew that the undue exaltation of personal interests was not proper. The whole of society must be the preeminent concern, not the rights of the individual. This, of course, can only be done within the broader perimeter of justice, which seeks the encouragement of good and the punishment of evil.

A Principle for Believers

The same principle holds true in the body of Christ. That is because God Himself is the Author of both. Of course, within the church, the principle is carried out more fully, as well as more precisely. Solemnly believers are told, “Let no man seek his own, but every man another's wealth” (1 Cor 10:24). Again, speaking for himself Paul said, “Even as I please all men in all things, not seeking mine own profit, but the profit of many , that they may be saved” (1 Cor 10:33).

How is it possible to fit that into a health and wealth gospel – which is really no gospel at all? Again, when dispensing spiritual gifts to the church, the Divine objective was not to make the individual satisfied and successful, but to bring profit to the whole body. Thus it is written, “But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal ” (1 Cor 12:7). Other versions read, “the profit of all,” NKJV “the common good,” NASB “the common good of everyone,” GWN “the general good,” NJB “profit the congregation,” TNT and “helping the entire church.” LIVING Again believers are admonished, “Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others ” (Phil 2:4).

Once again, the approval of men, or their acceptance, postulates men of integrity who are not personally hostile to believers. There is no possible way that any other kind of people could approve of those who live unto the Lord, not for themselves, and in the interest of others. This is why Paul committed himself to the consciences of his readers: “But have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God ” (2 Cor 4:2).

THE DANGER OF HAVING NO CAUSE

“For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse.” Other versions read, “give an account for this disorderly gathering,” NKJV “account for this commotion,” NIV “justify this commotion,” NRSV “because we have assembled needlessly, and been tumultuous without a cause,” MRD “if Rome demands an explanation, we won't know what to say,” NLT and “called to render an account and of being accused of rioting because of [this commotion].” AMPLIFIED

The town clerk was thinking of giving an account to the authorities, and he knew that it would not be possible to give an adequate one. Of course, Demetrius and those who had been stirred by his emotional speech had conveniently forgotten that they might have to defend their action before the legal authorities to which they were subject. Like all who are dominated by self-justification, seeking their own interests, they gave no thought to the future, or how this would appear to those who had a larger interest than that of the rioting mob.

That is what sin does to those it rules. It blots from the mind all thoughts of accountability, and facing one greater than themselves, to whom they will have to give an explanation. However, they will have to do so anyway. In this text, it was possible that the crowd would have to face the Roman authorities and explain what was worthy of stirring up the whole city. The town clerk knew they would not be able to give a satisfactory answer to the officials – even though, at the time, their gathering seemed perfectly reasonable to them. However, that was only because they were blinded by rage, and dulled by their self-centeredness.

By failing to teach extensively on this subject, the preachers and teachers have put the people in a very precarious situation. A due consideration of the day of judgment will put up a roadblock to the expression of sin. It will lessen the possibility of acting in an ungodly manner.

THE DAY OF JUDGMENT

I cannot leave this section without commenting on the great day of accountability that is on the appointed horizon – the day of judgment. Unlike the time the town clerk feared, the day of judgment is inevitable. It is, after all, “appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment” (Heb 9:27). Solemnly men are reminded that God “commandeth all men every where to repent: Because He hath appointed a day, in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead” (Acts 17:31). Even those in Christ are warned, “So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God” (Rom 14:12). Again we are told, “For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10).

I know that it is not fashionable these days to speak with certainty about the day of judgment. There are multitudes of professing Christians who have never heard a sound exegesis of the day of judgment. They live their lives day in and day out without a solitary thought of standing before God in that day. There are eight Scriptural texts that use the expression “the day of judgment” (Matt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; Mk 6:11; 2 Pet 2:9; 3:7; 1 John 4:17). There are one hundred and ninety two Scriptural references to that day (Twenty-eight from Genesis through Malachi, and one hundred and sixty-four from Matthew through Revelation). Jesus Himself spoke of that time one hundred and nine times. The book of Acts refers to it six times. The epistles teach of it thirty-eight times, and the Revelation contains eleven such references. What possible reason can be adduced for the remarkable silence on this subject in the pulpits of the land?

By failing to teach extensively on this subject, the preachers and teachers have put the people in a very precarious situation. A due consideration of the day of judgment will put up a roadblock to the expression of sin. It will lessen the possibility of acting in an ungodly manner. What person has ever asked himself the question, “How will I explain this action to God on the day of judgment?” without feeling a compulsion to draw back from sinful expressions. Even when people have been taught concerning this appointed day, they must ponder it for it to have a proper effect upon them. But what of those who do not hear about it – those whose minds are never brought to process the thought of standing before the Judge of all the earth and giving an account of what they have done, whether it is good or bad? What are the practical possibilities of such people consistently resisting the devil or living by faith?

The churches of our day should not allow themselves to be exposed to preaching and teaching that excludes timely and insightful references to the day of judgment. If the town clerk of Ephesus, with not so much as a solitary thought about the God of heaven and the day of judgment, thought it necessary to bring a halt to a hostile gathering, what ought to be said of some of the gatherings of our time? Verily, here is an example of one of the sayings of our blessed Lord, “the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light” (Luke 16:8). Salvation makes no allowance for such a condition. True wisdom is to reside with believers, and all the provisions have been given for this.

HE DISMISSED THE ASSEMBLY

“ 41 And when he had thus spoken, he dismissed the assembly.” Other versions read, “he sent the meeting away,” BBE “Then he dismissed them, and they dispersed,” NLT “he let the congregation depart,” TNT “they dispersed,” LIVING “Then all of the people left,” IE and “he sent them home.” MESSAGE

Religious men would do well to follow the line of reasoning presented in this text. If the gathering cannot be explained in a rational manner, and if it will put them at a disadvantage on the day of judgment, the meeting ought to be dismissed.

There was no further need for the assembly, seeing that it was dangerous and unwise. Therefore, after presenting his case, the town clerk sent the people away. Apparently the mob saw the sense of what he said. Not wanting to put themselves at an unnecessary disadvantage, they consented to bring the meeting to a halt. This confirmed their primary interest in themselves, for they had thought nothing of dragging Gaius and Aristarchus into the amphitheater, and mounting a formal attack on Paul. However, when it came to their own experience, they did everything possible to take the political pressure off of themselves.

Religious men would do well to follow the line of reasoning presented in this text. If the gathering cannot be explained in a rational manner, and if it will put them at a disadvantage on the day of judgment, the meeting ought to be dismissed.

MY OWN EXPERIENCE

Sometime during 1993-1994, one of the local congregations experienced a serious upheaval. The minister had been so aggressive in turning people from darkness to light, that they were outgrowing their present facility. The leaders of the congregation, together with those who held them in high regard, opposed the influx of the new people, because they had come from a crude manner of life. Although genuinely converted, they were not schooled in the traditions of the leaders, and could not consent to the brevity and practical restraints that the leaders were imposing upon the people. After a lengthy period of friction, a general meeting was called to resolve the differences – at least that is what the leaders said. I was personally asked to moderate this meeting, and consented to do so.

When I arrived at the meeting, the building was filled, and an unparalleled spirit of hostility was present. I had stepped into a war zone. The new and zealous converts sat on one side of the auditorium, together with a few of the members who agreed with them. The opposing members sat on the other side. Angry stares were all about, and several of the people were ready to erupt in lengthy speeches, the presentation of complaints, and the iteration of the official traditions of the church.

I called the meeting to order and informed them we would begin with a time of prayer. I suggested the prayer be one of intercession, in which reasons for the church remaining be presented to God. I called for everyone to kneel before the Lord, assuming the posture of contrition and submission. Most of the people consented to this. After informing them that I would close the prayer session, the time of prayer began. After at least five rather lengthy minutes there had not been a single syllable uttered from the audience. I waited for another few minutes that confirmed no one in the audience was going to prayer. I then offered a petition to the Lord, after which I stood up, with the others assuming a seated position.

Instantly, hands shot up all through the audience, as people were anxious to present their cause. I refused to allow any of them to speak, saying that if they could not speak to God about this unfortunate situation, they had no right to speak to anyone else about it. I asked them to rise, pronounced the benediction, and sent them home. The people did leave courteously. I suppose that is the same way the people disbanded in the Ephesian amphitheater. Even so, I felt the name of the Lord was reproached, and His great salvation demeaned by such crude and uncivilized behavior. I was further called into account, and criticized, by local religious authorities for having anything to do with the gathering. I dismissed their objections as idle chatter driven by a sectarian spirit.

My point is that there are still volatile situations among professing believers that require the presence a “town clerk” type of individual – one who can assess the situation. However, there has been such a remarkable degeneracy in church life that people recoil from the correction of trouble, thereby allowing spiritual wounds to fester.

CONCLUSION

This text has confirmed the necessity of godly wisdom and of properly assessing a situation. Concerning the involvement of Paul in this event, the brethren, together with several sympathetic rulers saw that it was not wise to attend such a gathering. This was not simply something they saw, they acted upon their perception, thereby relieving Paul of a fruitless endeavor.

One might ask why Paul needed to be restrained in the first place. Should he not have known the proper response without being so directed by his brethren? We know that he saw the wisdom of their counsel, because he submitted to it. Here, it is necessary to see the nature of the body of Christ. The members, even when they are apostles, are in various ways dependent upon the rest of the body. This is because the Head of the body ministers through its various members, not restricting His direction to the apostles. For example, there were times when Paul had necessities that had to be met by other people (Phil 4:16; 2 Cor 12:10). There were times when he was succored, or helped, by other saints (Rom 16:2). Some brethren “ministered unto him” (Acts 19:22). On another occasion Julius, a centurion that was guarding him en route to Rome as a prisoner, “courteously entreated Paul, and gave him liberty to go unto his friends to refresh himself” (Acts 27:3). By the hands of Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus Paul was “refreshed” (1 Cor 16:17-18). When he was in Thessalonica the Philippian brethren sent “once and again” unto his “necessity” (Phil 4:16). Although he was an apostle who “labored more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10), yet he could be “comforted together” with the brethren in Rome by their “mutual faith” (Rom 1:12). That is simply how the body of Christ works.

Add to this the assistance that was rendered by the town clerk of Ephesus, thereby giving an advantage to Paul. Julius the centurion “courteously entreated Paul,” allowing him to go to his friends for refreshment (Acts 27:3). Later, when the ship on which Paul was sailing was breaking up during a fierce storm, a centurion was moved to not allow the killing of the prisoners, for he “was willing to save Paul” (Acts 27:43). Publius, a “chief man of the island” of Melita, lodged Paul and Silas for three days, and came to be healed of a “bloody flux” (Acts 28:7). The barbarians that occupied that island, where Paul and two hundred and seventy-five others were stranded due to a shipwreck, showed them “no little kindness,” even kindling a fire for them to dry out and warm themselves (Acts 28:2). When many of the island were healed, they honored them with many honors, and gave them all of the supplies they needed when the time came for them to depart (Acts 28:9-10).

The point is that the Lord cares for His own, often using influential people of the world, as well as the members of His own body – the church.

It is good to remember these things when you face difficulties in this life. When the saints are put to a disadvantage by illness, financial straits, or the hardships created by natural disasters, God can marshal a troop to sustain them. He may draw a doctor like Luke into the situation, or a political official, or an employee of the government. He may incline a saint you have never before met, and some with whom you are familiar. People may see your situation and be inclined to render assistance to you, even though they do not know why they are acting in such a gracious manner. “The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein” (Psa 24:1). He can bring it all together to sustain you – and He is forward to do so for those who live by faith. Take heart, child of God, and never yield to despair. These things have been written for our admonition (Rom 15:4; 1 Cor 10:11).

Lesson #83

PAUL PREACHES AT TROAS

20:1 “And after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. 2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece, 3 And there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia. 4 And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus. 5 These going before tarried for us at Troas. 6 And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days. 7 And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight. 8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together. 9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutyclus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead. 10 And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him. 11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed. 12 And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.” (Acts 20:1-12)

INTRODUCTION

A BRIEF SUMMATION OF THE TEXT

To this point, a marked emphasis has been placed upon ministering to the saints, as well as to the Jews, to whom Jesus was specifically sent first (John 1:11; Acts 3:26; 13:20,33), as well as the rest of the world, or all sinners (John 3:16; 4:42; Acts 26:23; 1 Tim 1:15). Paul ministered to the saints as he traveled, finally arriving at Troas, where he spent seven days. He met with them on the Lord's Day, as they came together to "break bread." This is the occasion when a young man named Eutychus fell from a third story window, and "was taken up dead." Paul raised him from the dead, and even though he had already been preaching for a long time, continued to talk "till break of day." The brethren profited much from his presence, "and were not a little comforted." Something of the mind-set and manners of genuine disciples is made known in this familiar text. It is essential that we glean from it as much as possible, and not be hindered by cherished and empty traditions.

THE MARVEL OF A DISTORTED EMPHASIS

The activities recorded in the book of Acts reflect Divine priorities. There is an undeniable accent in the actions as well as in the message that was preached. It is this emphasis that has been greatly distorted and misrepresented. This distortion is wholly owing to an institutional emphasis that is not at all in harmony with the revealed objective of God Himself. This target is stated with great pungency in Scripture, and, like a diamond, is viewed from several different objectives.

- CONCERNING PEOPLE. If we view this from the perspective of the people involved, it is to conform them to the image of Christ (Rom 8:29-30). This is in order that the bride might be presented to Christ "not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such things" (Eph 5:27). The process in which these appointments are accomplished is spiritual growth (Eph 4:14; 1 Pet 2:2; 2 Pet 3:18).

- CONCERNING THE FOE. Seen from the standpoint of the adversary it is to "destroy the works of the devil" (1 John 3: 8).

- CHRIST'S PRESENT ACTIVITY. Considered from the viewpoint of Christ's current activity, it is to bring "many sons to glory" (Heb 2:10), and ever live to make intercession for them (Heb 7:25). It can also be summarized as Jesus nourishing and cherishing the church (Eph 5:29).

- DELIVERED FROM THE WORLD. From a broad perspective, the Divine purpose is to deliver us "from this present evil world" (Gal 1:4). That means removing men from the worldly order like Israel was delivered from Egypt. Absolutely no provision is made in Christ for maintaining closeness with the world. This too is a process that spans the entire lifetime of those who are in Christ Jesus They are continually cleansing themselves of all filthiness of flesh and spirit (2 Cor 7:1). The reason for the continuation of this work is that there are ongoing discoveries of spiritual contaminants as the people grow up into Christ in all things.

The priority of the saints ought to be obvious. Doctrinally, this is the reason for Christ's intercession, the Holy Spirit's intercession, and the ministry of the holy angels. All of the spiritual gifts are given to the church and for the church

All of this has a point at which the various processes begin – an initiation point. That beginning point is the commencement of the salvation of sinners, for which cause Christ came into the world (1 Tim 1:15). This beginning occurs when one is baptized into Christ (Gal 3:27), placed in the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:18), or born again (1 Pet 1:23).

However, the saving of sinners is a process, not a single point in time. Beginning is not the ultimate point or objective. Even as in a race, finishing is the point, for if that is not done, there really has been no point to, or value in, a beginning. Neither, indeed, is there any point to a plant that, after its duration, has yielded no fruit. Salvation must be brought to completion, or finished, to be effective (Phil 1:6; 1 Thess 5:23). The status of “sons” and “daughters” can only be finalized in those who come out from among the defiled, and “touch not the unclean thing” (2 Cor 6:17-18). This is required because only one master can be served (Matt 6:24), and a person can be no more like Christ than he is unlike the world.

IN THE BOOK OF ACTS

In the book of Acts, there is a marked emphasis on the perfecting of the saints. What is taught doctrinally in the epistles is lived out experientially in the chronicles of the early activities of the body of Christ.

The priority of the saints ought to be obvious. Doctrinally, this is the reason for Christ's intercession (Heb 7:25), the Holy Spirit's intercession (Rom 8:26,27), and the ministry of the holy angels (Heb 1:13-14). All of the spiritual gifts are given to the church and for the church (Eph 4:8-16; 1 Cor 12:7). These people are the focus of heaven.

This priority is reflected in the chronicles of the ministry of Paul. With Barnabas, he spent a whole year with the church in Antioch (Acts 11:26). He again spent a “long time” with the disciples in Antioch (14:28). He spent a year and six months in Corinth (Acts 18:11). He spent three years in Ephesus, speaking with great soberness to the brethren (Acts 20:31). Paul and those traveling with him spent “many days” with Philip the evangelist (Acts 21:8-10). Additional reports include the following.

- PAUL DETERMINES TO VISIT THE BRETHREN IN EVERY CITY WHERE THEY HAVE PREACHED (15:36,41).
- JUDAS AND SILAS EXHORT AND CONFIRM THE BRETHREN (15:32).
- PAUL AND BARNABAS REMAIN IN ANTIOCH WITH THE CHURCH (15:35).
- PAUL AND SILAS GO THROUGHOUT SYRIA AND CILICIA CONFIRMING THE CHURCHES (15:41).
- PAUL AND SILAS ESTABLISH THE CHURCHES IN LYSTRA AND DERBE (16:4-5).
- PAUL AND SILAS ENTER THE HOUSE OF LYDIA AND COMFORT THE BRETHREN (16:40).
- PAUL LANDS IN CAESAREA AND SALUTES THE CHURCH (18:22)
- PAUL GOES TO ANTIOCH AND SPENDS SOME TIME THERE WITH THE CHURCH (18:22A-23a).

- PAUL DOES OVER THE COUNTRY OF GALATIA AND PHRYGIA STRENGTHENING THE DISCIPLES (18:23).

- APOLLOS. SPEAKS IN ACHAIA, HELPING THEM MUCH WHO HAD BELIEVED THROUGH GRACE (18:27).

- TAKING THE DISCIPLES WITH HIM, PAUL TEACHES DAILY IN THE SCHOOL OF TYRANNUS FOR TWO FULL YEARS (19:9-12).

- PAUL GOES THROUGHOUT MACEDONIA EXHORTING THE DISCIPLES (20:1).

- PAUL REMAINS WITH THE BRETHREN IN TROAS FOR SEVEN DAYS (20:6-12).

In this respect, Paul followed the steps of the Savior, who consistently spent His choice and preferred time with His disciples.

Anyone who imagines that the thrust of apostolic doctrine, or the record God has given of His Son, is upon recruiting disciples is not familiar with the Word of God. To be sure, such efforts were found, and are not to be despised. However, when that becomes the thrust of religious activity, those so engaging their efforts are at variance with both the doctrine and example of holy men of old.

The more extended stays of Paul were spent with those who believed. They are the ones to whom he expounded “the riches of His grace,” “the unsearchable riches of Christ,” “the riches of the glory of this mystery,” and “the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the foundation of the world” (Eph 1:7; 3:8; Rom 16:25).

Although I have drawn attention to this previously, I do want to mention it again. The priority of those to whom Paul preached is consistent throughout the book of Acts. It is in a particular order. I have already shown the priority of those in Christy Jesus – a priority that is also revealed in all of Paul’s writings. In addition to this,, The following may be noted.

- The Jews. This was generally in the synagogues, or some place where they met to pray (9:20,22; 13:5,14; 14:1; 7:1,10,17; 18:4,5,7,8,19; 19:8, 10).

- Gentile proselytes. These were generally found in the synagogues, although there are also examples of teaching them in their homes (13:43; 14:1; 17:4,12; 18:4; 19:10). Peter was used to preach the Gospel to those who gathered at the home of Cornelius to hear words whereby they could be saved (10:1-47; 11:14).

- Devout people. These were devoted to either the Lord, or to some form of religion that was not correct. Yet, they had regard for the concept of Deity, and were more open to the Gospel than many (17:10,17).

- Untaught Gentiles. These were Gentiles that gave no particular evidence of interest (14:15; 17:22-32; 4:25).

When Paul referred to his apostleship to the Gentiles, the statement was always made to those who were in Christ Jesus (Rom 1:13; 11:12-13; 15:16,18; Eph 3:1,8; Col 1:27; 1 Tim 2:7). In fact, when Paul taught believers who had come from the Gentile quadrant of humanity, he said he was fulfilling his apostleship.

- “For I speak to you Gentiles , inasmuch as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I magnify mine office ” (Rom 11:13).

- “Nevertheless, brethren, I have written the more boldly unto you in some sort, as putting you in mind, because of the grace that is given to me of God, that I should be the minister of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles , ministering the gospel of God, that the offering up of the Gentiles might be acceptable, being sanctified by the Holy Ghost” (Rom 15:15-16).

- “For this cause I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentiles ” (Eph 3:1).

- “Whereof I am made a minister , according to the dispensation of God which is given to me for you , to fulfil the word of God; Even the mystery which hath been hid from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to His saints : To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you , the hope of glory” (Col 1:27).

- “Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, (I speak the truth in Christ, and lie not;) a teacher of the Gentiles in faith and verity” (1 Tim 2:7).

Paul’s primary ministry was to the church – particularly “all the churches of the Gentiles” (Rom 16:4). These are the ones to whom Paul made known the mystery that had been revealed to him – the “unsearchable riches of Christ.” This is not what he preached to the philosophers of Athens, or to Felix, or Agrippa. Paul’s work was related to that of Jesus: nourishing and cherishing the church (Eph 5:26), shepherding the flock (Heb 13:20), and bringing the sons of God to glory (Heb 2:10).

There is too much malnourishment in Christendom for this to be effectively denied. It is a very serious condition, for it contradicts the nature of salvation, as well as its intent.

Although this ministry of Jesus, and consequently of Paul as well, is not directly denied by the contemporary church, it is denied in the activities of the professed church leaders. There is too much malnourishment in Christendom for this to be effectively denied. It is a very serious condition, for it contradicts the nature of salvation, as well as its intent. It simply is not possible for anything to be right that contrasts with God’s great salvation.

One of the reasons for the remarkable success of the early church was the accuracy of its message. For the most part, the true Gospel was preached. When distortions were presented, immediate steps were taken to correct the condition (15:1-29).

Jesus had instructed the chief of the twelve apostles, “Feed My lambs . . . Feed My sheep . . . Feed My sheep” (John 21:15-17). That is what is being done in the book of Acts. The doctrine is being effectively lived out by those who represented Jesus Christ. This is because they had been reconciled to God, and taught by Him as well.

Now, let us see if we can behold the truth of this in our text.

AFTER THE UPROAR CEASED

“ 20:1 And after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia.”

For the average American Christian, a focus upon the work of the Lord is the exception. Once a modicum of time has been given to some shallow form of religious activity, life is resumed in, what is conceived to be, its normal mode – taken up with the cares of this world. This is the fruit of unbelief, which is necessarily fostered by brief and shallow exposures to the things of God. However, this was not the mode of life for the apostle Paul. For him, interruptions constituted a distraction from the work to which the Lord had called him. These included such things as those just experienced in Ephesus. There were also things like imprisonment, beatings, shipwrecks, and the likes. However, as confirmed in this text, as soon as they were over, Paul resumed the activities he preferred, which were wholly centered in the Lord. Even when he was disadvantaged, like being in prison, he devoted himself to the work of the Lord to the fullest extent possible, writing epistles and teaching those with whom he came in contact.

Lest we miss the significance of this, let me remind you that this is what Paul meant when he wrote, “For me to live is Christ” (Phil 1:21). And again, “I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me” (Gal 2:20). This is living “unto Him which died for them and rose again” { (2 Cor 5:15). This is what is involved in pressing “toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus” (Phil 3:14), while “forgetting the things that are behind” (Phil 3:13). This is the kind of life that is described as living “by faith” (Heb 10:38), and walking “in the Spirit” (Gal 5:16,25).

I say these things because our day is marked by an enormous amount of ambiguity concerning what is called “the Christian life.” We now live in an era where not fulfilling baser lusts, or managing to refrain from sinful indulgences with the aid of counseling, and special programs, is considered growing in the Lord and doing His will. However, while it is essential to “sin not” (1 Cor 15:34; Eph 4:26; 1 John 2:1), this is not the epitome of spiritual life. You can be a Pharisee and live in such a manner, with the outside clean, yet the inside filled with dead men’s bones (Matt 23:27). True spiritual life is made known when the individual is engaged in the “good and acceptable and perfect will of God” (Rom 12:11-2). God has created men “unto good works” (Eph 2:10), not merely abstinence from bad ones. Such works are the focus of the expressions of spiritual life. It is that focus that enables the individual to refrain from unlawful involvements.

In Scripture, the lives of believers are not described as merely refraining from sin – although they most certainly did that. For example, Paul’s life in Christ is not described as no longer persecuting the church – or being able to live another day without opposing the saints. What we know about Mary Magdalene is not merely that she was no longer dominated by seven demons. Matthew is not described as being able to consistently refrain from collecting taxes. It is what they did toward God that is reported, for that is a proper representation of the manner in which they lived.

AFTER THE UPROAR CEASED

“And after the uproar was ceased . . .” Other versions read, “had ended,” NIV “come to an end,” BBE “died down,” CJB “was over,” CSB “was appeased,” GENEVA “had subsided,” MRD and “stopped.” IE

The event that had just passed was described as an assembly that “was confused,” 19:32 “the uproar,” “the noise,” BBE “the tumult,” DARBY “the disturbance,” NAB “the rage,” TNT and “the trouble.” IE This is the kind of circumstance that is almost, if not altogether, uncontrollable. Many times, force must be used to subdue raging crowds. Recent riots in Iran confirm this to be the case. Mass destruction often attends such protests, with whole sections of towns being burned down and looted. Modern control methodologies include subduing people with tear gas and fire hoses, clubs, and even gunfire.

Yet, in this text, there was a certain orderliness to the cessation of the tumult. Reason prevailed, which is nearly impossible under such conditions. This, however, was not owing to human ingenuity, but to the working of the Lord, who does have control over the hearts of men. He can “put” things into the heart of man, including the following.

- Wisdom (Ex 35:34; 36:2; 1 Kgs 10:24).
- To beautify the house of the Lord (Ezra 7:27).
- To rebuild the walls of Jerusalem (Neh 2:12).
- To reckon a genealogy (Neh 7:5).

- Gladness (Psa 4:7).
- Earnest care for the church (2 Cor 8:16).
- His laws (Heb 10:16).
- To fulfill His will by giving their kingdom unto the beast (Rev 17:17).

Some may be concerned about this impinging upon the mythical free will of man. However, no such concerns are ever evinced in Scripture. God does not govern the nations by the will of man, but by His own will. His power is not theoretic, but is very real and active. What do you suppose God has to do to deliver His people from the snare of the fowler, the evil intents of men, and the hostility of the powers of darkness. In such deliverances, is He hampered by the will of the enemies? Indeed, He is not. He can work overtly, or put it into the hearts of men, to fulfill His will. Who does not know this is the case?

In this text, the subduing of the wrath of man was the work of the Lord. As it is written, “Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee: the remainder of wrath shalt thou restrain” (Psa 76:10). Whether you take this verse to mean that the wrath of man is restrained, KJV or that the Lord restrains His own wrath, NRSV the meaning is substantially the same. Were God not to stop the expression of human indignation against His people, He would destroy its perpetrators. In either case, the tumult was stopped – which is the whole point of the text. Further, the tumult ceased because He caused it to cease, doing so through means, but nevertheless, doing it. This is one of the means employed to work all things together for the good of those who love Him, and are the called according to His purpose.

Paul did not leave the disciples in Ephesus until this uproar had ceased. He doubtless remained to ensure that they were not diverted from the way, and to provide the necessary comfort and edification required to enable them to stand against the wiles of the devil.

PAUL CALLED HIS DISCIPLES

“ . . . Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them . . .” Other versions read, “called the disciples to himself . . . embraced them,” NKJV/DARBY/GENEVA/YLT “sent for the disciples . . . exhorted them,” NASB “sent for the disciples . . . encouraging them,” NIV “sent for the disciples . . . and given them comfort,” BBE “sent for the disciples . . . speaking words of encouragement to them,” NJB “invited the followers to come visit him. He wanted to encourage them,” LIVING and “sent for the disciples and warned and consoled and urged and encouraged them; then he embraced them.” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “embraced” is a rather comprehensive one. The lexical meaning of the Greek word is, “of departing take leave of, say good-bye to.” FRIBERG This does not denote a wordless parting, with a mere physical embrace – although that was involved. It was not the manner of Jesus or the apostles to part without words. Before Jesus left His disciples to lay down His life, He spent an evening delivering words to them (John 13-16). After He rose from the dead, and before He ascended into heaven, He again delivered words to them (Matt 28:16-20; Lk 24:17-46; Acts 1:1-9).

It was also Paul’s manner to precede his farewells with meaningful words (Acts 18:21; 20:17-37; 1 Cor 13:11-14). This is the nature of parting among those who are in Christ Jesus. They speak comfortably to one another. The Amplified Bible gives the sense of the text: Paul “sent for the disciples and warned and consoled and urged and encouraged them; then he embraced them.”

HE DEPARTED FOR MACEDONIA

“ . . . and departed for to go into Macedonia.” Other versions read, “Set out for Macedonia,” NIV “left for Macedonia,” NRSV “went away from them to Macedonia,” BBE “set forward to Macedonia,” DOUAY “set out on his journey to Macedonia,” NAB and “went to the country of Macedonia.” IE

Earlier, Paul had “purposed in the Spirit” to go to Macedonia (19:21). He had even sent Timotheus and Erastus into Macedonia before him, doubtless to prepare for his coming (19:22). Having written the book of Corinthians while in Ephesus, he had told them he would pass through Macedonia en route to them (1 Cor 16:5).

ERRONEOUS VIEWS OF PAUL’S MINISTRY

Here, then, we have the work of the apostle of the Gentiles clearly including a determined return to the churches. This was done in order to establish them in the faith – a ministry to which he consistently devoted himself (Acts 14:22; 15:36,41; 16:5; 18:23).

In my religious academic training, I have never heard a teacher make a point of this, develop it, and draw a conclusion on the matter. Although I exposed my mind to, what I conceived to be, the most accurate teaching, I came away thinking that Paul preferred to labor only where no previous labor had been expended. This was based upon a statement of Paul, made in Romans 15:20: “Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation.”

Paul did NOT say “I have ONLY strived to . . .” as though he determined to limit himself to this ambition.

To the Corinthians

It is time for the church to declare war on shallow thought and empty human traditions. They are the foundation upon which sectarianism rests, and, if for no other reason, should be discarded in the scrap-heap of worthless imaginations.

When writing to the Corinthians, Paul said he would not go to other regions in which others had not labored until the church in Corinth had been more firmly established in the faith. “ We, on the other hand, will not boast beyond our legitimate province and proper limit, but will keep within the limits [of our commission which] God has allotted us as our measuring line and which reaches and includes even you. For we are not overstepping the limits of our province and stretching beyond our ability to reach, as though we reached not (had no legitimate mission) to you, for we were [the very first] to come even as far as to you with the good news (the Gospel) of Christ. We do not boast therefore, beyond our proper limit, over other men’s labors, but we have the hope and confident expectation that as your faith continues to grow, our field among you may be greatly enlarged, still within the limits of our commission, So that [we may even] preach the Gospel in lands [lying] beyond you, without making a boast of work already done in another [man’s] sphere of activity [before we came on the scene]” AMPLIFIED (2 Cor 10:14-16). Where, then, was his priority? Is it not abundantly obvious – and yet there is more.

To the Romans

Further substantiating that Paul did not restrict his ministry to preaching where Christ had not been named, he made known that he was determined to preach the Gospel to those in Rome, where he had never been, yet where a strong church was already established (Rom 1:15-16). In that city, not only would he preach the Gospel, of which he was not ashamed (Rom 1:16), but he would also be comforted by the mutual faith of the believers there (Rom 1:12).

To the Colossians

In addition, he also sought to go to Colossae in order to minister to believers whom he had never seen – to a church that was not established by himself . He wrote to the Colossians that in so doing, he would be fulfilling his ministry (Col 1:25).

It is time for the church to declare war on shallow thought and empty human traditions. They are the foundation upon which sectarianism rests, and, if for no other reason, should be discarded in the scrap-heap of worthless imaginations. The consequences that are found in the wake of this blight are staggering. Those who are swept away by this contaminating wave are lacking in faith, hope, and love. They are deficient in spiritual understanding and insight, and lack stability. They cannot see well, cannot ear with discernment, or speak with eternal benefit.

Maintaining Doctrinal Integrity

In our day a view has arisen that places minimal value upon doctrine, or what is being taught. Some sophists, like the ostrich from whom wisdom has been withheld (Job 39:13-17), say they are not about doctrine, but only about Jesus. Others even decry “doctrine,” equating it with the “the doctrines of men” (Col 2:22). However, God Himself has a “doctrine,” and it is intended to be embraced and declared by men (Deut 32:2). Jesus also spoke of His doctrine (John 7:16), and Paul of his (2 Tim 3:10). Jesus proclaimed the doctrine belonging to God, and Paul declared the doctrine belonging to Christ.

It is no wonder that insightful men have maintained a keen interest in the church, rising up to oppose flawed doctrines, and waging relentless war against the encroachment of charlatans and worldly wisdom. All of those who have been productive in unstopping the wells of truth have had to deal with major misconceptions of God and His great salvation that were resident in the church itself. In fact, false teaching always precedes an unfavorable change in theological emphasis and behavioral degeneration.

An ignorant church cannot possibly walk in Divine favor. A deteriorating church is a disgrace to Christ and a liability to men. A professed church that is the haven for false teaching is a testimony to the presence of the devil himself, not the Lord’s Christ.

THE PRIORITY OF KINGDOM WORK

I do not consider “Kingdom work” and professed work in the Kingdom to be synonymous. There are some who may imagine their work is in the interest of truth and of the will of the Lord, who are completely wrong in their assumption – like those who taught men had to be “circumcised after the manner of Moses” to be saved (Acts 15:1). Or, those who taught there was “no resurrection” (1 Cor 15:12). Others forbade men to marry, and to abstain from meats (1 Tim 4:3). Still others taught “another Jesus,” “another Spirit,” and “another gospel” (2 Cor 11:4).

None of this was glossed by holy men. This is because “faith comes by hearing” (Rom 10:17), and when what is willingly heard is corrupt, it has a direct bearing upon faith. Faith cannot rest on error, and error tends to erode faith. Faith must grow in the soil of the Word of God – particularly the Gospel. It cannot come or be caused to grow through the diagnosis and opinions of men. It cannot thrive on procedure, or be enhanced by some secret routine. Hence, correction was a constant activity of inspired writers. That correction was accomplished by comparing what was erroneously taught to the Gospel of Christ. It is found in Romans (chapters two through four, thirteen and fourteen); First Corinthians (chapters three through fifteen); Second Corinthians (chapters three, eight, and nine), Galatians (chapters three through six), Ephesians (chapters two and four), Colossians (chapter two), First Thessalonians (chapter four), Second Thessalonians (chapters one and two), Hebrews (chapters one through ten), James (chapters two and four), First Peter (chapter two), Second Peter (chapter three), and Jude (chapter one).

A preacher or teacher who leaves error unchallenged is recreant to his duty. Such a posture simply cannot be excused, for men are to “take heed” how they build upon the proper foundation (1 Cor 3:10). Those who, through their teaching, allow for the placement of improper people within the church, which is the temple of God, will be destroyed by God. Thus it is written, “If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are” (1 Cor 3:17). This is why Paul revisited the churches, keeping track of their progress, and correcting any misconceptions that may have crept in unawares.

By its very nature, Kingdom work is not attended by random activity and a lack of proper and GHod-centered planning. As set forth in this text, the planning is done through the direction of the Spirit, but it is done.

HE GAVE THEM MUCH EXHORTATION

“ 2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece, 3a And there abode three months.”

WHEN HE HAD GONE OVER THOSE PARTS

“And when he had gone over those parts . . .” Other versions read, “gone over that region,” NKJV “gone through those districts,” NASB “traveled through that area,” NIV “all the towns,” NLT and “from place to place.” CEV

We know from the text that the purpose for going through this area was to strengthen the churches. Churches in this area included Philippi (16:12-15,30-33,40) Thessalonica (17:1-4,10), and Berea (17:10-13).

Without being redundant, I will once again point out the priority Paul gave to the churches. In a very real sense, the work of the Lord depends upon the body of Christ, for that is the exclusive means through which the Lord works in the accomplishment of God’s “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11). The church is “His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all” (Eph 1:23). What form of reasoning could justify the neglect or continued deficiency of this body of people? If the eyes of the Lord are upon them, and open to their cries (), and if Jesus is teaching (1 John 5:20), them and interceding for them (Heb 7:25), if the Holy Spirit is leading them (Rom 8:13-14) and making intercession for them (Rom 8:26-27), and if the holy angels are ministering to them (Heb 1:13-14), what possible reason can be adduced for men – particular preachers and teachers – neglecting them? How is it that the modern church is so unformed, and so spiritually ignorant? Why can they not handle the Word of God in a becoming manner, or live above this present evil world? It is because they are not established in the faith. They are the victims of flawed, and sometimes completely erroneous, teaching. Even though they will surely give an account for the flock of God, their leaders have not been mindful of them in the manner exhibited in this text. Some people would have us overlook this uncomely situation, but we cannot do so.

GIVEN THEM MUCH EXHORTATION

“ . . . and had given them much exhortation. . .” Other versions read, “encouraged them with many words,” NKJV “given them much teaching,” BBE “Had comforted them with many discourses,” MRD “a long exhortation,” PNT “preaching to the believers,” LIVING “encouraged the disciples in many addresses,” MONTGOMERY “warned and consoled and urged and encouraged the brethren with much discourse,” AMPLIFIED “encouraged the followers with many messages,” CEV “gave constant encouragement, lifting their spirits and charging them with fresh hope,” MESSAGE and “spoke many heartening words to the people.” PHILLIPS

The word “exhortation” is translated from the Greek word parakale,saj , which, as used here, has the following lexical meaning: “to address, speak to (call to, call on), which may be done in the way of exhortation, entreaty, comfort, instruction,” THAYER “as speaking authoritatively exhort, urge, encourage,” FRIBERG and “encourage, speak words of encouragement; request, ask, appeal to; console, comfort, cheer up.” UBS The word combines gentility and moral force.

The nature of spiritual life, as well as its maintenance, depends on the strength of one’s faith. Faith commences with hearing, and is stirred up and strengthened by the same means. This is because rationality and reasoning are associated with faith, for one cannot believe without reasoning. Believing God involves thinking upon what He has said. It requires coming to a conclusion that God is to be trusted, then exerting the will to do so. Because faith is maintained in a hostile world, and amidst a staggering amount of opposing ideas, believers must be regularly admonished, exhorted, and comforted. That is simply the manner of the kingdom.

This is the kind of activity in which Paul was involved – building up the saints of God. This is to the soul what strengthening the grip is to the hand. It enables the child of God to “hold fast” (1 Thess 5:21; Heb 3:6; 4:14; 10:23; Rev 2:25; 3:3). When Christians do not “hold fast,” cleaving to the Lord with purpose of heart (Acts 11:23), it is because they are not strong. The lack of such strength is owing to one of two things: either they have not been properly instructed, exhorted, and admonished, or they have been, and paid no heed to it. Either circumstance is unacceptable.

Notice that Paul did this with “much exhortation,” or “many words,” NKJV or “saying much,” CJB or “many discourses,” MRD or “long exhortation,” PNT or “frequent addresses,” WEYMOUTH or “many addresses.” MONTGOMERY Whatever may be said to justify brevity and infrequency, there certainly is none of it in this text. How is it that Paul conducted his ministry in a way that so sharply contradicts the ministerial procedures of our time? It is because he saw things as they really are, and those who fail to pay due heed to the saints do not. It was because he was working “together with God” (1 Cor 3:9), and they are not. It was because he was a messenger sent by God (Rom 10:14), and they are not. If this seems too harsh, the other theoretic possibility is that the heavenly agenda has been changed – and that simply is not possible.

HE ABODE IN GREECE FOR THREE MONTHS

“... he came into Greece, and there abode three months.” Other versions read, “arrived in Greece, where he stayed three months,” NIV and “he went to Greece.” GWN

It is assumed that Paul landed at the port city of Athens after leaving Berea. From there it appears that he journeyed northward, after a stay of three months heading due North. It was some time during this period that Paul wrote his second letter to the Corinthians. It was at this time that Titus brought word to him concerning the church at Corinth. That church had been in a sad state, and Paul had a deep concern for their stabilization in the faith. According to his second letter, Titus delivered a good report, confirming that some progress had been made in response to his first letter (2 Cor 7:6-13). He later sent Titus back to Corinth with the second letter, and also to gather the offering for the poor saints in Jerusalem that they had pledged (2 Cor 8:6-9:15).

One of the weaknesses of so-called evangelistic, or recruitment methodologies of our day, is the glaring absence of what is required to be a disciple of Jesus, and what necessarily follows being baptized into Christ.

PAUL’S PREOCCUPATION

It is refreshing to consider the manner in which Paul lived. It was wholly to fulfill the commission Jesus delivered to him on the road to Damascus. That solemn word is worthy of repetition. “But rise, and stand upon thy feet: for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen, and of those things in the which I will appear unto thee; Delivering thee from the people, and from the Gentiles, unto whom now I send thee, To open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and inheritance among them which are sanctified by faith that is in Me ” (Acts 26:16-18).

There was a remarkable consistency in Paul’s life – even though his mission took him through some of the most harrowing experiences suffered by any man – the only exception being our blessed Lord. It is interesting to note that Jesus revealed Paul’s mission at the very threshold of his calling, as the above text confirms. Paul was even told that he would suffer “great things” (Acts 9:16).

One of the weaknesses of so-called evangelistic, or recruitment methodologies of our day, is the glaring absence of what is required to be a disciple of Jesus, and what necessarily follows being baptized into Christ. Consider the following.

- THE WORLD WILL HATE YOU. “If the world hate you, ye know that it hated Me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you ” (John 15:18-19).

- SELF DENIAL AND CROSS-BEARING. “And he said to them all, If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily , and follow Me” (Luke 9:23).

- JESUS SEEN AS ABOVE EVERYONE ELSE. “If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:26).

- BEARING UP UNDER THE CROSS. “And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after Me , cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:27).

- FORSAKING ALL THAT YOU HAVE. “So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath , he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:33).

- APPOINTED TO AFFLICTION. “That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto ” (1 Thess 3:3).

- SUFFERING WITH CHRIST. “ If we suffer , we shall also reign with him: if we deny him, he also will deny us” (2 Tim 2:12).

- YOU WILL SUFFER PERSECUTION. “Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution ” (2 Tim 3:12).

- DO NOT MARVEL WHEN YOU ARE HATED. “Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you ” (1 John 3:13).

It is the rich compensation of faith that offsets these otherwise grievous experiences. There are certain benefits realized by those who forsake all to follow Jesus. The realization of them neutralizes the effects of opposition, persecution, and other forms of enmity from the world. Here are a few of them.

- THE NATURE OF GOD’S KINGDOM. “For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost” (Rom 14:17).

- CALLED INTO FELLOWSHIP WITH JESUS. “God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord” (1 Cor 1:9).

- NO TRIAL GREATER THAN OUR ABILITY TO BEAR IT. “There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it” (1 Cor 10:13).

- GOD CAUSES US TO TRIUMPH. “Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place” (2 Cor 2:14).

• THE REALIZATION OF GRACE, LOVE, AND COMMUNION. “The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen” (2 Cor 13:14).

• THE LORD IS OUR HELPER. “So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man There is a Divine fellowship and ministration that is shall do unto me” (Heb 13:6).

• THE POSSESSION OF JOY UNSPEAKABLE. “Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory” (1 Pet 1:8).

There is a Divine fellowship and ministration that is experienced in the midst of suffering, and it cannot be realized in any other context. It was the awareness of this that moved Paul to forsake all competing interests in order to participate in Christ’s sufferings – i.e. “the fellowship of His sufferings” (Phil 3:10).

The understanding of this circumstance is what compelled Paul to “labor more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10). Fulfilling his calling was not viewed as a chore, or something that inconvenienced him. He did not see it as unfair, or a requirement to do things that were not expected from other people. While he did live obediently, the commandment of the Lord Jesus was not grievous to him (1 John 5:3). That is why he never complained about his extensive travels, the opposition that he endured from men, and the staggering inconveniences and dangers to which he was exposed. He saw spiritual life correctly, and responded accordingly.

THE JEWS LAID WAIT FOR HIM

“3b And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia.”

After being in Greece, Paul prepared to go to Syria, where the church in Antioch was located. He had spent considerable time there, and that was the place from which he and Barnabas had departed for the work to which the Spirit had called them (Acts 13:1-3). Now, however, an obstacle is set before him. It will be interesting to learn how he dealt with the uncomely circumstance.

THE JEWS LAID WAIT FOR HIM

“And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria . . .” Other versions read, “the Jews plotted against him,,” NKJV “a plot was formed against him by the Jews,,” NASB “the Jews made a plot against him as he was about to sail for Syria,,” NIV “the Jews had made a secret design against him,,” BBE “As he was preparing to set sail for Syria, he discovered a plot against him by the unbelieving Jews,,” CJB “treacherous plot against him having been set on foot by the Jews,,” DARBY “When Paul was going to board a ship for Syria, he found out that the Jews were plotting to kill him,,” GWN and “The Jews having planned to waylay him whenever he might be on the point of taking ship for Syria.” WEYMOUTH

Elsewhere Paul referred to the consistent manner in which the Jews opposed him. Five times they had him beaten with thirty-nine stripes (2 Cor 11:24). To the Thessalonians, Paul wrote the Jews “have persecuted us” (1 Thess 2:14). The book of Acts makes particular mention of some of these occasions.

- Shortly after Paul's conversion, the Jews had plotted against him. That time, "the disciples took him by night, and let him down by the wall in a basket" (Acts 9:24,25).

- When Paul and Barnabas were in Antioch of Pisidia, "the Jews" were angered because of the multitude that gave heed to them, "were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming" (Acts 13:45). They even "stirred up the devout and honorable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts" (Acts 13:50).

- In Iconium, the Jews joined with others and conspired to stone Paul and Barnabas (Acts 14:5).

- At Lystra, "there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, who persuaded the people, and, having stoned Paul, drew him out of the city, supposing he had been dead" (Acts 14:19).

- In Thessalonica the Jews set the whole city on an uproar in open opposition to Paul (Acts 17:5).

- When he was in Berea, "the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people" (Acts 17:13).

- In Corinth "the Jews made insurrection with one accord against Paul, and brought him to the judgment seat" of Gallio (Acts 18:12).

- Later "more than forty" Jews "bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul" (Acts 23:12).

- Again, when Paul was to appear before Festus, "the high priest and the chief of the Jews informed him [Festus] against Paul, and besought him, and desired favour against him, that he would send for him to Jerusalem, laying wait in the way to kill him" (Acts 25:2-3).

Yet, with all of their plotting and conniving, they were never able to fulfill their ambitions against Paul. He was on a mission from the Lord, and the Lord protected him.

Yet, with all of their plotting and conniving, they were never able to fulfill their ambitions against Paul. He was on a mission from the Lord, and the Lord protected him.

In this case, the Jews had secretly plotted against Paul, yet he was made aware of it. There were times when Paul knew of certain threats against him, yet the Lord revealed to him "in the night by a vision, Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace: for I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee : for I have much people in this city" (Acts 18:9-10). In that case, in the interest of a significant number of people the Lord had in that area (they were yet unconverted), the circumstance was governed from heaven to allow Paul to remain. Another time, when he was in Jerusalem, the Lord appeared to him and said, "Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem: for they will not receive thy testimony concerning Me" (Acts 22:18). Apparently his work for that time had been concluded, and thus Paul was relocated, so to speak, to another appointed area.

Oh, the marvelous versatility of faith! It is something that those who live by mere habit never know. This is the weakness of thoughtless living – or living by habits, like a trained animal. Without due regard for what they are doing, such people lose the spiritual sense of seeing and hearing. I do not know how the Lord would direct a people who have been taught to live by the law of redundancy, going through life as though they were on automatic pilot. Such a person cannot possibly love the Lord with all of their heart, soul, mind, and strength, because they have been taught to love by heartless routine. However, when a person lives by faith, they are more involved in what they do. The eyes of their understanding are opened wide, and things sink down into their ears.

The Scripture does not reveal how Paul knew about this secret plot. Perhaps the Lord revealed it to him, as He did the plot that was made against him in Jerusalem (Acts 22:18). It could be that someone overheard the plot, and informed Paul of it – as his nephew would do at a later time (Acts 23:16). However it was made known to him, it was evidence of the direction of the Lord. Solomon knew this Divine manner and wrote, “Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter” (Eccl 10:20).

When the Scriptures say, “In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths” (Prov 3:6), this kind of direction is involved. The direction of our steps (Prov 16:9) includes needed warnings as well as the opening of doors of opportunity. Through David the Lord promised, “I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with Mine eye” (Psa 32:8). Through Isaiah He said, “And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left” (Isa 30:21). Again He promised, “I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go” (Isa 48:17).

Child of God, faith can take hold of these words, relieving the trusting one of the tendency to fret about the future. Like David, our “times” are in the hands of the Lord (Psa 31:15). See, there are good reasons to trust the Lord, as well as pleasant experiences and benefits.

Behold the alertness of Paul – how that he was able to respond to this danger immediately. That is something that lethargic souls cannot do. Many people go from one trouble to another because they are not alert. Their senses have been dull so that they cannot see beyond their present circumstances.

Take due note of the fearlessness of Paul – he was not crippled with fear, but maintained a sound mind, and was able to respond in an appropriate manner. Timorous souls are not able to react to the report of danger in such a way – quickly and effectively. More and more I can see the genius of living by faith. It brings all of one’s powers to their peak capacity, and enables the believer to maintain a sound mind and a straight course.

Also see how Paul thought of the work of the Lord – not being dominated by merely making provision for personal protection. He did not run to a place of temporary safety, but sought another way to do the work to which Jesus had called him. The work would go on. Such a frame of mind honors the Lord.

HE PURPOSED TO RETURN THROUGH MACEDONIA

“ . . . he purposed to return through Macedonia.” Other versions read, “he decided to return through Macedonia,” NKJV “he determined to return through Macedonia,” NASB “he decided to go back through Macedonia,” NIV and “he resolved to go back through Macedonia.” AMPLIFIED

Actually, this was the long way around. He would backtrack through Macedonia, where he had spent time earlier. However, there were other advantages to going this way. He could visit the brethren again, gaining comfort from them. He would also be able to exhort and admonish the brethren, giving them further advantages.

Thou Shalt Not Tempt the Lord

Although God is the Helper of those who believe, and is their Shield, that does not relieve them of having a due regard for their own lives. There is such a thing as tempting God by thrusting ourselves into uncomely circumstances, expecting the Lord to bring us out even though we have acted foolishly. This is how Satan tempted Jesus. Having taken the Lord and set Him on the pinnacle of the Temple, he said, “If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone” (Matt 4:6). Jesus responded, “It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God” (Matt 4:7). This particular word was given by Moses in Deuteronomy 6:16. Men are not to presume upon the grace of God by getting themselves into difficult circumstances that could easily have been avoided.

I do not doubt that some people have experienced unnecessary trouble because they have not gived due heed to this word. Our text provides an excellent example of not tempting the Lord.

I do not doubt that some people have experienced unnecessary trouble because they have not given due heed to this word. Our text provides an excellent example of not tempting the Lord.

ACCOMPANIED INTO ASIA

“ 4 And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus. 5 These going before tarried for us at Troas.”

Couched within the chronicles of the early church we find the nature of “the body, the church” of the Lord Jesus Christ. The church is comprised of an interdependent network of believers. By “interdependent,” I mean they are complementary of one another, enhancing the ministries and utility of one another. The body of Christ is, in other words, designed to work together in a common objective. The isolation of the members from one another is not the normal mode. Even when John was isolated in exile on Patmos, he had communication with the churches. When Paul was in prison, he still communicated with the churches, and received brethren who sought him out. In Christ, the focus is not on the individual members, but on the whole of the body. There are times when the group ministers to the individual. However, that is not the normal mode of operation. The “one another” mode is the standard (Rom 12:5,10; 12:16; 13:8; 14:19; 15:5,7,14; 16:16; 1 Cor 11:33; 12:25; Gal 5:13; ; Eph 4:2,25,32; 5:21; Col 3:13,16; 1 Thess 4:9,18; 5:11; 1 Tim 5:21).

This kind of relationship is found in the text before us. As the work of the Lord was being fulfilled, kindred spirits joined themselves to the work. In this the singularity of their hearts and minds is confirmed.

THOSE WHO ACCOMPANIED PAUL

“And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea; and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus and Secundus; and Gaius of Derbe, and Timotheus; and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus.”

The thought of accompanying Paul is an intriguing one. The benefits of such an experience can scarcely be imagined. His manners and speech had been cultured by faith, and his involvement in the will of God was consistent and productive.

In this verse we get the picture of brethren joining him along the way – brethren who had been subjected to his teaching, and had developed an appetite for both his word and work.

Sopater of Berea. This is the only place in Scripture where this man is mentioned. Berea is the place where the Jews received what Paul said with “all readiness of mind,” searching the Scriptures daily to see “whether these things were so” (Acts 17:11). Sopater was probably among the many souls who believed, which included Greeks (Acts 17:12). Paul did not stay there, for he was forced to leave by certain Jews who came from Thessalonica and stirred up the people (Acts 17:13-14).

Aristarchus and Secundus of the Thessalonians. Aristarchus is mentioned several times in Scripture, including two of Paul's epistles. He went with Paul to Italy, was a fellow prisoner with Paul, and was called a "fellowlaborer" (Acts 19:29; 20:4; 27:2; Col 4:10; Phile 1:24).

Secundus is mentioned only here.

Gaius and Timotheus of Derbe. This is the only place Gaius of Derbe is mentioned. Timotheus is mentioned frequently in Scripture, remaining identified with Paul from the time he joined him (16:1; 17:14,15; 18:5; 19:22; 20:4; Rom 16:21; 1 Cor 4:17; 16:10; 2 Cor 1:1,19; Phil 1:1; 2:19; Col 1:1; 1 Thess 1:1; 3:2,6; 2 Thess 1:1; 1 Tim 1:2,18; 6:20; 2 Tim 1:2; Phile 1:1; Heb 13:23).

Tychicus and Trophimus of Asia. Tychicus is mentioned several times. Being sent by Paul, he carried the letter of the Ephesians to that church, and made known Paul's affairs to them, doing the same at Colossae. Paul also may have sent him to assist Titus (Acts 20:4; Eph 6:21; Col 4:7; 2 Tim 4:12; Tit 3:12).

Trophimus is also mentioned two other times. He was from Ephesus, and traveled with Paul. Once, unable to continue traveling with Paul, he was left "sick at Miletum." (Acts 20:4; 21:29; 2 Tim 4:20).

The point here is that none of these men would have been known to us if it were not for the labors of Paul. This is also characteristic of the Kingdom of God. There are certain key individuals, chosen by God, around whom others are gathered. Of old time, this included men like Moses, David, Ezra, Nehemiah, and the Prophets. Prior to Christ, there was John the Baptist, who had disciples. Following Jesus there were Peter, Paul, and other key individuals.

This accents that the work of the Lord is not driven by democratic principles, even though there are times when all agree to do certain things.

THEY WENT BEFORE AND WAITED

"These going before tarried for us at Troas." Other versions read, "waited for us," NKJV "were waiting for," NASB "stayed for us," DOUAY "did remain for us," YLT and "were waiting for us [including Luke]." AMPLIFIED

Troas is the place where a vision was given to Paul concerning going over to Macedonia (Acts 16:8-11). There must have been some fond recollections of that occasion. This time, however, Paul was headed for Syria, and would come through Macedonia, from which he planned to disembark for Troas, and then on to Syria.

Notice the submissiveness of this cluster of brethren. None of them left the work as John Mark had done earlier (Acts 13:19), or forsook Paul as Demas did on another occasion (2 Tim 4:10). Here is a sterling example of the submissiveness that is required of believers. As it is written, "submitting yourselves to one another in the fear of God" (Eph 5:21). And again, "be subject one to another" (1 Pet 5:5). Of course, this postulates that the one to whom the brethren subject themselves is being directed by the Lord, and not following his own whims.

The language of the text reveals that Luke is now traveling with Paul – "tarried for us." Luke first mentions himself as being with Paul in the sixteenth chapter of Acts, when Paul was called into Macedonia. In using the words "we" and "us," Luke refers to himself as being with Paul during the events he records— (16:10,11,12,13,14, 15,16,17; 20:5,6,13,14,15; 21:1,2,3,4,5,6,7, 8,10, 11, 12,14,15,16,17, 18; 27:1,2,3, 4,5, 6,7,15,16, 18,19,20,26,27, 29,37; 28:2,7,10, 11,12,13, 14,15,16). He was a faithful companion to Paul, who once acknowledged, "Only Luke is with me" (2 Tim 4:11). His "perfect understanding" (Lk 1:3) must have brought much consolation to Paul. Luke probably ministered to Paul in the capacity of a physician as well, for Paul referred to him as "the beloved physician" (Col 4:14).

AFTER THE DAYS OF UNLEAVENED BREAD

“ 6a And we sailed away from Philippi after the days of unleavened bread . . . ”

Here it is confirmed that the trip into Macedonia was to visit the brethren, for, so far as the record is concerned, there was no other reason to be in Philippi. It must have been a blessed occasion to visit Lydia and those with her, perhaps even including the Philippian jailer. As many as three years had passed since Paul was last there. The Philippian believers, however, had established themselves as faithful brethren from the very first (Phil 1:5).

We are not told how long they spent in Philippi, although it must have been a week or more, judging from the reference to “the days of unleavened bread,” which feast was seven days in length (Ex 12:18-20; 13:6-7). The Feast of Unleavened Bread followed the Passover Feast, which took place on the fourteenth day of the first month (Lev 23:5). It was followed by the Feast of Unleavened Bread, which was seven days in length (Lev 23:6).

WHY MENTION THIS FEAST?

Why did Luke mention this period –“the days of unleavened bread” ? Is it because Paul and company were keeping the Passover Feasts, and the Feast of Unleavened Bread as well? I do not believe this is the case. In instructing the Corinthians, Paul referred to the Lord’s Table as a Feast, and told the people to keep it “with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth” (1 Cor 5:8). The preceding verse makes clear that he was speaking with the redemption of Christ in mind, not Israel’s deliverance from Egypt: “Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us” (1 Cor 5:7).

Earlier, when Paul is recorded as saying he had to “keep the feast that cometh in Jerusalem” (Acts 18:21), it is assumed that the Passover was meant. However, it is doubtful that he was speaking of participating in that feast as a Jew. It is rather more likely that he sought to use the occasion to preach Christ, who is “our Passover.”

This seems to be the most reasonable way of considering the matter, for Paul never promoted the Passover Feast itself, or the Feast of Unleavened Bread. He never instructed the disciples of Christ to keep those feasts – which he surely would have done if that was proper.

THE JEWISH MANNER

The Jews were a people cultured by God Almighty. Their entire lives revolved around their identity with God. They marked time by the feasts God had ordained – and all of those feasts involved a consideration of the Lord and what He had done for them. They did not mark time by the birthdays of people, or some aspect of history that was unrelated to the Lord. Further, the feasts ordained by God for them, were spaced throughout the year so the people could be kept in constant remembrance of His goodness toward them.

I take it, therefore, that the reference to the Feast of Unleavened Bread was a way of marking, or identifying, time, and did not have any reference to the practice or promotion of that day among believers.

HE CAME TO THEM AT TROAS

“ 6b . . . and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days. 7 And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow; and continued his speech until midnight. 8 And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.”

Once again, notice that the accent is placed upon the work of the Lord. Here five days are covered without so much as a syllable about what took place during that time. A generation that has been cultured by novelty and constant distractions finds it difficult to think in such a manner. Notwithstanding, it is good for the people of God to learn to think, reason, and talk, with main things in mind. Admittedly, there are relatively few people who even know what is involved in a godly focus. Much of the Christianity of our day deals with fads, novelties, current crises, and the likes. There is not an overriding accent on what is being said. Sadly, it leaves the people in confusion, so that they rarely have any idea concerning the fundamental objective of life. While there are some people who refer to seeking first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness (Matt 6:33), you will be hard pressed to find an individual who has a cogent thought about what that actually means. You rarely hear anyone quote the words of Jesus: “One thing is needful” (Lk 10:42); or the words of David: “one thing have I desired” (Psa 27:4); or the words of Paul: “this one thing I do” (Phil 3:13). That is simply not the fashionable way for today’s Christian to talk. However, this IS the way to live, and it is reflected throughout Scripture – even in the recounting of historical events.

It is also quite possible that behind the scenes, the wicked one was doing his best to thwart this trip. He was aligned against Paul, and thus fought vigorously against him. However, the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, not the devil.

A lot of loose talk and writing is owing to a lack of proper perspective. That is what makes much of it so boring to the one who is absorbed with the Lord. You do not find any writing of Scripture that reflects this kind of mind-set. That is one of the proofs that it is inspired. Holy men of God wrote with focus, and a due regard for the living God. They never became absorbed with social, political, or domestic concerns. When such things were mentioned, it was always in association with something that God was doing.

THEY CAME TO TROAS IN FIVE DAYS

“ . . . and came unto them to Troas in five days; where we abode seven days.”

Earlier, when sailing from Troas to Philippi, the trip took only two days (Acts 16:11-12). They came in a “straight course to Samothracia, in a single day, arriving in the port city of Neapolis the next day. This trip, the winds were apparently not so favorable, making the trip more than twice as long. Yet, Luke says no more about the matter, for the point was to get to the brethren who were waiting at Troas. That being accomplished, the trip was a resounding success, regardless of how long it took.

It is also quite possible that behind the scenes, the wicked one was doing his best to thwart this trip. He was aligned against Paul, and thus fought vigorously against him. However, the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, not the devil (Psa 37:23). It is true that many of the complexities of life are resolved by a godly focus, and by involvement in the good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God (Rom 12:2).

UPON THE FIRST DAY OF THE WEEK

“And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread . . .” Other versions read, “gathered together to break bread,” NASB “we met to break bread,” NRSV “come together for the holy meal,” BBE “we assembled to break bread,” CSB “we assembled to break the eucharist,” MRD “we met for the breaking of bread,” NJB “we gathered with the local believers to share in the Lord's Supper,” NLT “we gathered for a communion service,” LIVING “we all met together to eat the supper of the Lord,” IE “we gathered together for the fellowship meal,” GNB “We met on Sunday to worship and celebrate the Master's Supper,” MESSAGE and “when we were assembled together to break bread [the Lord's Supper]." AMPLIFIED

Once again, our attention is turned to a gathering that was centered, or focused, involving all of the disciples in Troas.

The First Day of the Week

This can be literally rendered, "the first day after the Sabbath," which was "the first day of the week." Without a known commandment from the Lord, yet in deference to the Person of Christ and His resurrection, disciples met on the first day of the week. This can doubtless be traced to the time following Christ's resurrection when He appeared to the disciples at least two times on the first day of the week.

- Jesus rose from the dead on the first day of the week (Mk 16:9).
- He appeared to Mary Magdalene on the first day of the week (Mk 16:9).
- He appeared to the women who came to anoint His body on that day (Matt 28:1,9).
- He appeared to the two on the road to Emmaus on that day (Lk 24:13-31).
- He appeared to the disciples when they were gathered together on the first day of the week (Lk 24:33-49; John 20:19-25).
- He appeared again to the disciples on the first day of the week – "eight days" following the first appearance (John 20:26-29).
- The day of Pentecost (which means "fiftieth") took place on the first day of the week, fifty days after the Sabbath of the Passover week (Lev 23:16; Acts 2:1).
- The brethren in Corinth are said to have gathered on "the first day of the week" (1 Cor 16:1).
- It is generally acknowledged that this was "the Lord's day" to which John referred, when he received the Revelation (Rev 1:10).

It seems to me that a spiritual mind would gravitate to the first day of the week as a time to honor the Lord. He rose from the dead on that day, and appeared at least two times to His disciples on that day. It is most difficult for me to accept that this would not have shaped their view of gathering together.

A STATEMENT MADE LESS THAN 100 YEARS AFTER THE EVENT OF OUR TEXT

"On the day which is called Sunday, all (Christians) who dwell either in town or country come together to one place. The memoirs of the apostles and the writings of the prophets are read for a certain time, and then the president of the meeting, when the reader has stopped, makes a discourse, in which he instructs and exhorts the people to the imitation of the good deeds of which they have just heard. We then all rise up together, and address prayers (to God); and, when our prayers are ended, bread and wine and water are brought, and the president, to the best of his ability, offers up both prayers and thanksgivings, and the people assent, saying 'Amen.' And then the distribution of the bread and wine, over which the thanksgivings have been offered, is made to all present, and all partake of it." He adds that the elements are carried to the absent by the deacons, and that collections are made for poor widows, and orphans, and sick, and prisoners."

JUSTIN MARTYR, 100-165

Apology given before Marcus Aurelius

They Came Together to Break Bread

It is said of the early believers, “And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers” (Acts 2:42). This cannot have been merely meeting together for a common meal, for that is not harmonious with “the apostles' doctrine, and fellowship . . . and prayers.” How is it possible that early disciples merely made a practice of eating a meal together? Was this not the very thing that was happening at Corinth, for which cause Paul severely upbraided them? “When ye come together therefore into one place, this is not to eat the Lord's supper. For in eating every one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry, and another is drunken. What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not” (1 Cor 11:20-22). Further, in delineating the table of the Lord, Paul made a point of saying Jesus “took bread, and when He had given thanks, He brake it” (1 Cor 11:24).

At the point Jesus instituted the Table of the Lord, it was a higher occasion than the Passover. He did not tell the disciples to remember the deliverance of Israel from Egypt – which remembrance occasioned the Passover Feast itself (Ex 13:3; Deut 16:3). That entire evening is covered in detail by John (John chapters 13-17 – 24% of John's Gospel), The other Gospels focus on the institution of the Supper itself (Matt 26:17-30; Mk 14:22-23; Lk 22:19-20). Paul also provides some of the details (1 Cor 11:23-34). Further, that this was not intended to be an occasion for a mere meal is clarified when Paul wrote to the Corinthians, “If any man hunger, let him eat at home” (1 Cor 11:34). That is, eating a common meal together was not to be the primary reason for coming together. In all of those accounts, there is not a single reference to the remembrance of Israel's deliverance from Egypt. Even if the Jews broke bread together, it was not to remember that deliverance.

Jesus was very pointed in what was to be recalled: “this do in remembrance of Me” (Lk 22:19). Paul clarifies that in the eating of the bread and drinking the cup, the remembrance of Jesus was the point. “And when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat: this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of Me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me” (1 Cor 11:25).

Some say that at this table we remember the body of Christ – i.e. the church: that the members of the body are the ones who are discerned. Thus they explain Paul's words, “For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body” (1 Cor 11:29). However, Jesus did not say to remember His disciples, but to remember Him! If people do not have regard for believers, it is because they do not have due regard for their Lord.

The Reason for Gathering

Our text makes clear that the reason the disciples came together was to “break bread.” They did not do this because there were commanded to do so, for there is no such commandment. The commandment related to remembering Christ, and it was the Table that provided the occasion for that focused remembrance.

The Rationale of the Lord's Table

There is a certain rationale associated with the table of the Lord. The focused remembrance of Christ sheds light upon the whole of life, and brings Divine resources within our grasp. This is because, although there are tangible items associated with the table, faith and hope are the chief matters. This does not dispense with the form, for the form precisely comports with the reality. The bread is made from grain that has been pulverized, even as our Savior's flesh was bruised. The cup contains the fruit of the vine, which was pressed out of the grape, like the Lord's blood was forced from His veins – particularly by the spear that pierced His side. Like two great hands, faith and hope combine to strengthen the believer. Faith reaches into the past and takes hold of the death of Christ. Hope reaches into the future, and expectantly looks for His return. Thus Paul wrote, “For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor 11:26).

While we remain in that posture, we are made more aware of the provisions of redemption as well as the Redeemer Himself. It is not possible to have a more precise view of God Himself than when we remember Christ, for the fulness of the Godhead dwells in Him (Colo 1:19; 2:9). All of the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hidden in Him (Col 2:3). It is the Lord Jesus Christ who is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption (1 Cor 1:30). It is He who is "our hope" (1 Tim 1:1). Salvation in its totality is "in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim 2:10). The love of God that is toward us is in Him (Rom 8:39). Salvation is realized "through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (1 Tim 3:15). The lives of those whom God has accepted are "hid with Christ in God" (Col 3:3).

As we remember Him, all of these realities glow with celestial glory, and the world is thrust into the background. Who better to remember than the Lord Jesus Christ. How is it possible to be any more pleasing to God than when we are focused upon Jesus and attentive to His Word?

Also, we eat at this table every first day of the week. Unlike the Sabbath day, the Lord's day begins the week, thereby distinguishing the New Covenant. Under the First Covenant rest came after work – at the end of the week, the seventh day. In the New Covenant we are made adequate for the works unto which God has ordained us by the due recollection of Jesus on the first day of the week.

There is a participation at this table that is not realized at any other place. Here is how Paul put it: "I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say. The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" (1 Cor 10:15-16). Other versions read, "sharing in the body. . . sharing in the blood," NASB "participation in the body . . . participation in the blood," NIV Who is to measure the depth of such statements? Do they not accept the importance of this table? This is something that transcends mere appearance. To commune, or have fellowship with, the body and blood of the Lord is to realize the benefits that have been made available through them.

During our time at this table, the illogicality of being worldly minded becomes apparent. Thus Paul wrote, "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord, and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils" (1 Cor 10:21). This is such an important matter that the church of Corinth was admonished to expel a fornicator from their gathering in order that they might observe the Lord's Supper properly. The words of Paul are quite poignant. Following his instructions concerning the handling of the transgressor in question, he gave the following exhortation. "To deliver such an one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. Your glorying is not good. Know ye not that a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump? Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our passover is sacrificed for us. Therefore let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (1 Cor 5:5-8) Such language as this could not be received by the average American church. However, it serves to accent the nature of this table, and the necessity of approaching it in a proper frame of mind.

It is most unfortunate that the Christian community is not at all united on the matter of the Lord's Table. In many places, it is not the reason for gathering – even as the Corinthians who did not gather to eat the Lord's Supper. For some people, praising is now the reason for gathering. For others mere human camaraderie is the reason for coming together. For others who actually to partake of the Lord's Supper little is actually said about the Lord, and a focused remembrance is difficult because of shoddy presentations at the Table.

The truth of the matter is that the messages that are being heralded from the pulpits of the land do not awaken a desire for the Word.

It has now become fashionable in some places to move the table to the back of the meeting place, where it is no longer prominent. There is also an accent on privacy, with each person going to the table alone and without due regard for the fact that this is a public ordinance.

Some partake of the table once a month, once a quarter, or even once a year. In that way, they reason, the tale will not become common. Their reasoning betrays their carnality. If there is any soul who imagines that Christ's words can be interpreted to mean such a thing, an alarming level of ignorance at once becomes apparent. Paul upbraided the Corinthians for not coming together to eat the Supper (1 Cor 11:20). What do you suppose he would say to those who partake of this table on a quarterly or annual basis? Precisely why are they meeting together on the first day of the week? However, after all of the arguments have been presented for eating at this table infrequently, the disciples at Troas still gathered together on the first day of the week to break bread – and the Holy Spirit saw to it that it was recorded in the Scriptures.

PAUL PREACHED UNTO THEM

“Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow . . .” Other versions read, “spoke to them,” NKJV “began talking to them,” NASB “spoke to the people,” NIV “was holding a discussion with them,” NRSV “discoursed with them,” ASV “gave them a talk,” BBE “Was discussing Scripture with the people,” GWN “preached a sermon,” NJB “reasoned with them,” PNT “was discoursing,” YLT and “addressed them,” WILLIAMS

The word translated “preached” is a different Greek word than is normal – dielegeto . The lexical meaning of this word is quite diverse: “to converse, discourse with one, argue, discuss absolutely,” THAYER “of a reasoned discussion discuss, discourse with, conduct a discussion,” FRIBERG “address, speak,” UBS “of a reasoned discussion discuss, discourse with, conduct a discussion,” LOUW-NIDA “to converse with; to discourse, to ; to discuss,” LEH and “discuss, conduct a discussion; speak, preach.” GINGRICH

What did Paul do? Hold a discussion, dispute with the brethren, or deliver a discourse? According to the phrase that follows, it was fundamentally a discourse, which no doubt allowed for discussion, as this was often Paul's manner.

That the observance of the Lord's Table was harmonious with preaching and holy discussion is quite apparent. It is also clear that Paul was noted for his insight, and therefore was welcomed by those who hungered and thirsted for righteousness. The propriety of such gatherings is rapidly diminishing in our society. There are some few spiritual gatherings who manifest a hearty appetite for the things of God, but they are not easy to find. What was normal in the first century has now become abnormal. That is owing to the nature of what is being preached. The truth of the matter is that the messages that are being heralded from the pulpits of the land do not awaken a desire for the Word . Paul would probably not be welcomed in many churches of our land – particularly if he preached as long as he did in Troas.

One begins to sense the vast chasm that is between those early believers and those who profess faith in our time. I find this very disconcerting, for the Lord Himself has not changed, the Gospel message has not changed, and the need of the saints has not changed.

HE CONTINUED HIS SPEECH UNTIL MIDNIGHT

“ . . . and continued his speech until midnight.” Other versions read, “his message,” NKJV “kept on talking,” NIV “prolonged the discourse,” DARBY “continued the preaching,” TNT and “prolonged his address.” PHILLIPS

The word “speech” is translated from the Greek word logos (from logos). The emphasis of this word is a message, or the declaration of a particular word or teaching. I do not doubt that Paul preached concerning the Table and its implications, as He did in his letter to the Corinthians. In that letter he made known the remarkable number of involvements associated with the table of the Lord.

Although these brethren were meeting for the right reason, and were obviously devoted to the Lord, I do not doubt that there was an abundance of relatively new things that Paul knew they needed to hear.

+This is a feast that is to be characterized by the purging of unacceptable manners, and the presence of sincerity and truth.

- Here, we participate in the body and blood of Christ (1 Cor 10:16).
- Believers are one bread, and partake of one bread (1 Cor 10:17).
- We cannot partake of the table of demons and the table of the Lord at the same time (1 Cor 10:21).
- At this table, we can provoke the Lord to jealousy by commitment to the devil's table (1 Cor 10:22).
- When we do not come together on the first day of the week to break bread, we have gathered for the wrong reason (1 Cor 11:20).
- We are to partake of this table in remembrance of Christ (1 Cor 11:24-25).
- In eating the bread and drinking the cup, we are declaring the Lord's death until He come (1 Cor 11:26).
- Those who eat and drink at this table in an unworthy manner will be charged with the guilt of the body and blood of the Lord (1 Cor 11:27).
- No believer is free to ignore this table. Each one must examine himself, then eat of the bread and drink of the cup (1 Cor 11:28).
- The person who fails to do this, eats and drinks damnation, or judgment, upon himself, because he did not discern the Lord's body (1 Cor 11:29).
- Many people have become weak and sickly, and some have even died, because they conducted themselves improperly at this table (1 Cor 11:30).
- If we judge ourselves at this table, examining our own selves, such judgment will not come upon us (1 Cor 11:31).
- When the Lord chastens us, it is in order that we be not condemned with the world (1 Cor 11:32).
- At this table, we are to be considerate of one another (1 Cor 11:33-34).

I have briefly listed these considerations, taken only from First Corinthians, to illustrate how much could be said concerning the Table alone. Although these brethren were meeting for the right reason, and were obviously devoted to the Lord, I do not doubt that there was an abundance of relatively new things that Paul knew they needed to hear. Recall the manner in which he wrote his letters to the churches. That will give you a good idea how he spoke when he gathered with the disciples.

I cannot help but observe that very few Christians have had the privilege of being present where extended preaching took place. I remember a New Year's Eve celebration held in 1954 in Olney, Illinois. Several notable speakers were part of that gathering, including Leroy Garrett and Carl Ketcherside. There were twelve consecutive speakers, and I was the twelfth, though by far the youngest speaker present. Several hundred people were in attendance for this lengthy session. I cannot conceive of such a thing taking place in our time.

MANY LIGHTS

“And there were many lights in the upper chamber, where they were gathered together.” Other versions read, “many lamps,” NKJV “a number of lights,” BBE and “numerous lights.” AMPLIFIED

The meaning of the word “many” includes the idea of sufficient, or adequate. STRONG’S The Greek word used here (ἰκαναί .) is elsewhere translated “ large money” (Matt 28:12), “ great number” (Mk 10:46), “many” (Lk 7:11), “ much people,” Lk 7:12), “many swine” (Lk 8:32), and “many days” (Acts 9:23). This indicates there were a great number of lights, which implies a room of considerable size, and a significant number of people. It also suggests that provision was made for everyone to see.

The words “upper chamber” do not refer to a mere room, but to a story – in this case, the third story. Lexically it is defined as follows: “a room in the upper part of a house, sometimes built upon the flat roof of the house.”

Considering how oriental people still seat themselves, the number of people assembled in this upper chamber could easily have exceeded a hundred. Yet, there was an apparent accord as they gathered together and listened to the apostle Paul. It had apparently been some time since he had been there – possibly as long as three years, when he first went to Philippi (Acts 16:11).

I cannot help but note the indications of the level of interest these brethren had in the truth. They came and continued together when it was dark. They ascended to the third story to attend to things pertaining to the remembrance of the Lord. They made provision for Paul to speak to them. They made sure the lighting was appropriate. They also had an obvious appetite for the Word of the Lord, as well as for those who brought it. There are many professed believers who have never attended such an assembly. The gatherings they attend are generally brief –some as little as a single hour. It ought to be clear that something was present in these brethren that distinguished them from those smitten with the blight of mediocrity. It seems that I cannot get away from observing the corrupted form of Christianity that is prevalent today. That is because it so sharply contrasts Scripture accounts like this one.

A POTENTIAL DISTRACTION

“ 9 And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus, being fallen into a deep sleep: and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead. 10 And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.”

It should not surprise us to read of some kind of interruption taking place on this occasion – some intrusion that could break up the assembly and thereby rob the people of the true benefit of their visitor. Like young Elihu during the time of Job, Paul had come “full of matter” (Job 32:18), and he could not keep silence. He was among kindred spirits, the occasion was a sacred one, and the people were lovers of the truth. This was an ideal situation in which enlightenment and edification could take place. There were no rebellious Jews present to argue with Paul. There were certainly no Ephesian silversmiths in the audience to cause a tumult. However, alas, a test will be experienced, and it will be a hard one. It will not be in the moral arena, but will have to do with life in the body. It will not seem to be appropriate, yet it will not interfere with the proceedings of the evening.

A CERTAIN YOUNG MAN NAMED EUTYCHUS

“And there sat in a window a certain young man named Eutychus . . .”

Other versions read, “a certain youth,” DARBY/YLT/WEYMOUTH

The words “young man” are translated from a single Greek word (νεανία) that has a rather broad meaning. Here is understood to mean “a young man beyond the age of puberty, but normally before marriage,” LOUW-NIDA “youth,” LIDDELL-SCOTT or “children, youth,” LEH Eutychus was not a mature man, nor was he a fledgling youth, or adolescent. He was probably somewhere in his teens. The emphasis of the expression is on “young,” not “man.”

First, observe the interest of this young man. Although young in years he did have an interest in assembling with the saints, eating at the Lord’s Table, and hearing the preaching of Paul. Also, there was obviously no special interest group for the youth, but they remained identified with the more mature people.

Apparently the room was rather crowded, so young Eutychus had assumed a position in the window. This also suggests he was rather young.

FALLEN INTO A DEEP SLEEP

“ . . . being fallen into a deep sleep . . . ” Remember, Paul had been preaching for a long time – continuing his “speech until midnight.” If they met about the sixth hour, as some suppose, the apostle to the Gentiles had been speaking for six hours. However you may choose to judge the circumstance, it appears as though several hours had passed.

Owing to the weakness of the youthful constitution, Eutychus fell into a deep sleep. Gradually his awareness of the surroundings were less and less obvious, as all of his cognitive powers began to diminish, and a state of unconsciousness began to dominate him. I assume that this took a while to take place. It is certain he did not purposefully assume a position in which he could fall asleep, for it was in an open window three stories above the ground.

HE FELL DOWN FROM THE THIRD LOFT. AND WAS TAKEN UP FOR DEAD

“ . . . and as Paul was long preaching, he sunk down with sleep, and fell down from the third loft, and was taken up dead.”

Paul continued preaching, unhindered by the passing of time or the sleeping of Eutychus. The rest of the people apparently were alert and profiting from what they were hearing, else they would have dismissed the assembly.

At any rate, Eutychus fell into a deep sleep, and fell from the third story window to the ground. A violent and grievous interruption indeed! The fall must have been at least 20-25 feet [depending on the height of each story], in a limp state, for he was sound asleep.

The composure with which this whole incident was handled is most edifying. The text does not depict any state of crisis, unless it be the sorrow that attended the lad being “taken up for dead.” Other versions read, “taken up dead,” NKJV “picked up dead,” NASB “When they picked him up, he was dead,” CJB “was dead when they picked him up,” GWN “dropped three stories to his death,” NLT “was lifted up dead,” YLT and “When they got to him, he was dead.” IE The words “taken up for dead” do not mean they thought he may have been dead. Rather, they mean they picked him up as a dead person would be picked up – as opposed to examining the boy to see whether or not he was dead.

It must have taken a few minutes to get to the body, for the people had to descend three stories to get to the ground. Also, it is worthy of note that even though it was midnight, the people were alert enough to know the boy had fallen out of the window. Of course, the absorption of the mind with the things of God does not make a person insensitive of their surroundings, or rob the soul of alertness. How reasonable is it to imagine that hearing and discussing the things of God would take from a person the natural senses placed in him by God? The occupation of the mind with things pertaining to life and godliness will elevate the capacities related to the image of God to the optimum level.

Now that the boy has been taken up dead, what will the people do? How will Paul address the situation? Will this conclude the gathering, with the people returning to their homes in a state of sadness, as the brethren did when Stephen was stoned to death by the Sanhedrin (Acts 8:2)? Indeed not! The exposition of Christ and His salvation is conducive to peace and composure in those who embrace it. They are made able to better handle earthly crisis, and will perceive more readily the proper thing to do. That is one of the great benefits of salvation, which is by grace through faith.

PAUL WENT DOWN

“ . . . And Paul went down, and fell on him, and embracing him said, Trouble not yourselves; for his life is in him.”

Immediately Paul “went down” the three stories. Other versions read “descending,” DARBY and “had gone down.”

DOUAY Whether the people called for him, or he also perceived the event and responded to it is not revealed. I suspect that both are true. He probably saw the lad fall, and then was also apprised that he was dead, killed by the fall. With news like that, some people would not have come down at all. Others would have rushed to the relative of the boy, if they were there, to console them. But this is not how Paul reacted.

Paul went directly to the boy and “fell on him.” Other versions read, “threw himself on the young man,” NIV “bending over him, took him in his arms,” NRSV “bent over him and embraced him,” RSV “falling on him took him in his arms,” BBE “fell upon him, and enfolding him in his arms,” DARBY “laid himself upon him, and embracing him,” DOUAY and “threw himself on the young man, and put his arms around him.” NET

What a tender scene is this! It is a most vivid depiction of apostolic composure, faith, and confidence. It is reminiscent of the time when Elijah raised the widow’s son. When confronting the dead boy the prophet “stretched himself upon the child three times, and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child’s soul come into him again. And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him, and he revived” (1 Kgs 17:21-22). Something similar happened when the prophet Elisha raised the son of the Shunammite woman, who was not a widow. When coming in the body of the boy, Elisha “lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child; and the flesh of the child waxed warm. Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes” (2 Kgs 4:34-35).

Something like that took place at midnight in Troas, when the saints were gathered together, and Paul was discoursing to them. It was a marvelous display of Divine power, wrought through a man who had counted all but loss to know Christ, the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings (Phil 3:7-14).

The individual who does not forsake all to follow Jesus, or who attempts to follow Him at a distance, or perhaps not at all, will never know in this world what he has willingly forfeited – but you may be sure, it will be much. The half-hearted church member, the frivolous youth, and the person enslaved to religious tradition have robbed themselves, shutting off Divine input to a degree they are not, in their present state, capable of comprehending. Unless they repent of their ways, there is really not much hope for them, for their condition is such as grows worse and worse, leading to the blackness of spiritual night. Oh, that God would give such people repentance!

A religion that actually fosters aloofness from God by catering to the flesh, reducing the amount of time the people are exposed to the truth, and allowing for erratic living, is of the worst possible rank. It shuts the door to Divine supply, and opens the door to the god of this world. Purported movements and ministries that make people more conscious of this present evil world are to be abandoned with haste. They are lethal.

HE TALKED A LONG WHILE

“ 11 When he therefore was come up again, and had broken bread, and eaten, and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.”

What will this band of disciples do, now that the crisis has passed? Will the interruption be the occasion for concluding the meeting. After all, it is difficult to think of a more tragic circumstance taking place. Beside this, it was then after midnight, and people need their sleep – at least that is the ordinary rule. But this is no ordinary occasion. The apostle Paul is present, and he possessed insights into the things of God that no other person apparently had.

I cannot conceive of this whole thing happening among within Christendom. To begin with, the people would not have stayed until midnight, listening to the apostle Paul, or anyone else. Secondly, the fall and death of Eutychus would have disbanded the meeting, with people saying the boy would never have died if Paul had not preached so long. Thirdly, after he was raised from the dead, the people would surely have confessed that was enough excitement for the day, and would have called for the cessation of the meeting. However, all praise to God, the people at Troas bore no resemblance to the average professing Christian of our time. These were real disciples, with new hearts and spirits, a love for the truth, and commitment to the Savior. All of the things that are declared to take place in those who are baptized into Christ had actually taken place in them. The things disciples are admonished to do, they were doing. No person should expect they would respond to either blessing or crisis in the manner to which this generation is accustomed.

HE CAME UP AGAIN

“When he therefore was come up again . . .” Other versions read, “when he had gone back up,” NASB “he went upstairs again,” NIV “Then Eutychus went upstairs again,” GWN “he returned upstairs,” NAB “they all went back upstairs,” NLT and “They brought the young man inside . . . Paul went upstairs again.” LIVING

It seems appropriate to me that the disciples, with Paul, would once again break bread – particularly since the Lord had worked so mightily among them. Then, because of the lateness of the hour, they would have eaten for bodily nourishment. Notwithstanding, this is not a matter worthy of disputation.

So who went upstairs again? Paul? Eutychus? Or everyone? There is no doubt but that all of them returned to the third floor to resume their meeting. Eutychus had good reason to return and give thanks. Paul would continue teaching, and the people would continue listening. During the entirety the whole episode Satan was soundly defeated, God was glorified, and the people edified.

The hour was late, to be sure, but Paul was going to be leaving the next day (20:7). The people, having an appetite for the truth, and living by every word of God, desired to obtain as much as possible from this apostle, who “labored more abundantly than they all” (1 Cor 15:10).

THEY BROKE BREAD AND ATE

“ . . . and had broken bread, and eaten . . .” Other versions read, “had taken the broken bread,” BBE “breaking bread and tasting,” DOUAY “shared in the Lord's Supper, and ate together,” NLT

“broke bread and took some food,” WEYMOUTH and “had broken bread and eaten [with them].” AMPLIFIED

There are at least three views taken of this passage. Although I do have a view of it myself, it may be of value to mention them.

- That breaking bread and eating refers to two different activities: the first to partaking of the Lord’s Table, and the second to an ordinary meal.
- That both expressions refer to a common meal.
- That the disciples had not yet broken bread because of Paul’s long discourse. When they returned, they did eat at the Lord’s Table, then had a common meal together for refreshment of the body.

It seems appropriate to me that the disciples, with Paul, would once again break bread – particularly since the Lord had worked so mightily among them. Then, because of the lateness of the hour, they would have eaten for bodily nourishment. Notwithstanding, this is not a matter worthy of disputation.

I do not doubt that Eutychus was also there. When he ate, it was much like Jairus’ daughter. After Jesus raised her from the dead, He commanded that they give her something to eat (Mk 5:43).

HE CONTINUED TALKING UNTIL THE BREAK OF DAY

“ . . . and talked a long while, even till break of day, so he departed.” Other versions read, “continued to converse with them,” NRSV “he conversed with them,” RSV “went on talking to them,” BBE “having long spoken,” DARBY “talked with the people,” GWN “discoursed,” MRD “a long conversation,” NAB “talked a long while,” RWB “commented a long while,” TNT “Paul preached another long sermon,” LIVING “Paul spoke to them a long time,” IE “continued a long earnest talk with them,” PHILLIPS and “talked confidentially and communed with them for a considerable time.” AMPLIFIED

The word translated “talked” can be used to describe talking to or talking with. While there may very well have been some input from the brethren in Troas, it seems to me that the burden of the conversation was carried by Paul. The length of his talk may have been occasioned by questions or comments from the people. However, considering the caliber and role of the apostle Paul, I can hardly believe that discerning people would fill up the time with their own words. He was the one with the most to say. Notwithstanding, this is one of those texts that appears to allow some latitude for thought, without compromising the significance of the text itself. Let every person be fully persuaded in their own mind.

THEY WERE NOT A LITTLE COMFORTED

“ 12 And they brought the young man alive, and were not a little comforted.” Other versions read, “greatly comforted,” NASB “greatly relieved,” CJB “rejoiced over him greatly,” MRD “immeasurably comforted,” NAB “greatly encouraged,” NJB “comforted in no ordinary measure,” YLT “were not a little comforted and cheered and refreshed and encouraged,” AMPLIFIED and “feeling immeasurable relieved.” PHILLIPS

A worldly reporter would not have written the record in this manner. First, the fall of Eutychus from the third story window would have been the featured article.

A worldly reporter would not have written the record in this manner. First, the fall of Eutychus from the third story window would have been the featured article. Then, after he had been raised from the dead, the attention would have shifted to the comfort that was ministered during the occasion. If there was time and space sufficient, some mentioning might have been made of the guest, and of the lengthy discourses he delivered that day, but it would probably not have been complimentary.

However, Luke writes up the events in another manner.

- Luke places the stress on the gathering itself, and why it convened.
- The length of Paul's first discourse.
- The events related to Eutychus.
- The return to the meeting.
- The length of Paul's second discourse.
- The presentation of Eutychus alive and well.
- The extraordinary comfort that was ministered to the brethren.

I gather this is not reported in strict chronological order, but rather in a manner that reflected the priority of the events. The fact that the brethren received no small amount of comfort from the presentation of Eutychus confirmed they were in no way indifferent to him. However, for them, everything that took place was within the context of the remembrance of the Lord and the preaching of Paul. That is also the context in which the raising of Eutychus took place.

Concerning the extraordinary comfort the brethren experienced, Young's Literal Translation seems to capture the meaning of the text: "and they brought up the lad alive, and were comforted in no ordinary measure." The idea is that just as the work performed was extraordinary, so the comfort derived through it was far beyond ordinary limits.

It does not appear right to me to respond in ordinary ways to extraordinary works and benefits. Giving thanks for all things does not imply the same measure of thanks for everything. True comfort, as well as praise and joy, are governed by discernment, and there is more to be seen in works that are more obviously beyond the boundaries of nature. Those who are given to behold the marvelous works of God are obliged to react accordingly – in a way that is consonant with their nature. Praise and insight are to be wed.

CONCLUSION

From one point of view, the book of Acts contains the records of extraordinary people and unusual works. From another, and more discerning viewpoint, it is the record men and women living by faith – which is the norm of the Kingdom of God. If the reports that are given in this volume are of a differing order than those professing believers experience today, it is only because there is a difference in the caliber of people. God has pledged Himself to support and direct those who live by faith (Psa 25:9; 32:8; 37:23; 85:13; 121:3,8; 1 Sam 2:3; Prov 3:5-6; 16:9; Isa 30:21; 48:17; 49:10; Rom 8:14; ; Gal 5:18). What we have in this record are examples of people being led by the Lord. This is because they were on the highway that is characterized by such leading (Isa 35:8). It is because they were relying on Divine direction, having assumed the posture of strangers in this world and citizens of the world to come.

To put it another way, salvation in all of its aspects, and throughout the entire of its scope, is ever "by grace through faith" (Eph 2:8). When men live by faith, they are in the position where they can be led and directed by the Spirit. This is because faith sensitizes the soul, opens the eyes, and unstops the ears. Ponder how marvelously this is confirmed in the book of Acts.

- As the brethren were together with one accord and waiting expectantly for what the Lord had promised, they were filled and led by the Spirit to say what was appropriate for the occasion (Acts 2:1-41).

- As they were engaged in the work of the Lord, yet imprisoned, the angel of the Lord opened the prison doors and brought the apostles out, directing them what to do (Acts 5:19-20).

- While Philip was involved in the will of the Lord, the angel of the Lord directed him to go toward the south, where he would confront the Ethiopian eunuch. As he went, the Holy Spirit directed him what to do (Acts 8:26-29).

- While Cornelius, an earnest seeker, was praying, an angel of the Lord directed him what to do in order that he and his house could be saved (Acts 10:3-6).

- While Peter was praying, the Lord directed him concerning his response to the men sent to him from Cornelius (Acts 10:9-19).

- When Peter was imprisoned by Herod, the angel of the Lord delivered him, telling him what to do (Acts 12:7-8).

- While the brethren in Antioch were ministering to the Lord, the Holy Spirit directed them concerning the separation of Barnabas and Saul for a special work (Acts 13:2).

- While serving the Lord in Asia, Paul and company were directed by the Lord to go to Macedonia, calling them to preach the Gospel there (Acts 16:9-10).

- When in Corinth, serving the Lord, yet facing opposition, the Lord directed Paul, telling him He had much people in that city, and that no one would seek to hurt him (Acts 18:10).

- While a prisoner on a boat that was in a fierce storm, the Lord directed Paul, informing him that he was in charge of everyone on the ship, and would appear before Caesar (Acts 27:23-24).

It is the manner of the Lord to direct people as they are engaged in believing and obeying. Thus Abraham was shown where to go after he commenced his journey to an unknown land, as God had commanded him (Gen 12:1). After he set out to offer Isaac as a burnt offering to God, as the Lord commanded, he was directed where to go (Gen 22:2). After Israel had left Egypt and crossed the Red Sea, they were directed to the promised land (Ex 12:25). After Saul of Tarsus had gone to a certain place, as the Lord commanded him, he was told what to do (Acts 9:6).

Divine direction is accomplished “in the way” – on the proper path. Thus the servant of Abraham, when on an appointed mission to obtain a wife for Isaac, confessed he had been directed by the Lord. “Blessed be the LORD God of my master Abraham, who hath not left destitute my master of his mercy and his truth: I being in the way, the LORD led me to the house of my master's brethren” (Gen 24:27). Jacob also acknowledged he had been directed when he was “in the way” (Gen 35:3). An angel was sent to direct Israel when they were “in the way” (Ex 23:20).

This is the kind of guidance we are witnessing in the book of Acts. As the people walked in the newness of life, they were directed. When they were engaged in the will of the Lord, their steps were ordered by the Lord. Many a poor soul has never, or perhaps rarely, experienced Divine guidance because they are not on the proper path. They are walking on the wrong road – a road in which such marvelous guidance cannot be realized. Blessed is the person who can see this.

MEETING WITH THE ELDERS OF EPHEBUS, #1

“ 20:13 And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot. 14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene. 15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus. 16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost. 17 And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church. 18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, 19 Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews: 20 And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house, 21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. 22 And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: 23 Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. 24 But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God. 25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. 26 Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. 27 For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.” (Acts 20:13-27)

Luke and others set out to go to Assos by ship, while Paul goes there on foot. After he joined them, they sail to Miletus, from which he called for the elders of Ephesus – the place where he had spent three years. He delivers to them a stirring and insightful word that encapsulates his time with them, and provides a warning for the future. Once again, the priority of equipping the saints is made clear in both word and action. There is also an obvious unity of the Spirit confirmed in the willingness of those traveling with Paul, and the elders who came to him at his bidding. All of this demonstrates the effect of faith upon the hearts of those who possess it. Here, there is no evidence of the friction and competition that have stamped their mark upon Babylon the Great –that great spiritual whore that now fills the earth. The presence of such things is proof of the absence of faith. The fellowship among the brethren that is seen in this text is not a miracle, but is rather the evidence of genuine spiritual life.

INDEX TO THE LORD’S WORK

As Paul goes about fulfilling his commission, he provides a kind of index to the Lord’s working. There is an evident priority reflected in what he does, and it is worthy of note. That priority radiates with the nature of what Jesus Himself is doing, now that He is enthroned in glory at the right hand of God. I do not know how it is possible to justify any priority in which Jesus Himself is not engaged. It is not possible that He has changed His precedency, revealing some new thrust to non-apostolic individuals. Ponder some of the emphases that men claim reflect the will of the Lord.

- Monitoring and stabilizing political agendas.
- Ministering to the poor of the world.
- Reaching the youth, and preparing them to be the church of tomorrow.
- Solidifying marriages.
- Leading people out of, according to human definition, addictions to this or that.

It is not that these things are inherently wrong, but that they are not a proper emphasis.

THE ROLE OF THE APOSTLES

It is critical that the saints see the ordained role of the apostles of Jesus Christ. I speak “ THE twelve apostles” Matt 10:2; Lk 22:14; Rev 21:14), and of Paul, “ THE apostle of the Gentiles” (Rom 11:13). By rank, these are the “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). Apart from himself, Paul referred to “the twelve” as “all the apostles” (1 Cor 15:5,7).

We have in the book of Acts the carrying out of a Divine agenda. The actions that are recorded are said to have been initiated by heaven.

The “foundation” upon which the church is built is referred to as “the foundation of the apostles and prophets” (Eph 2:20). That is, they are the ones who put the foundation in place, God laying it through them (1 Cor 3:10-11). There is no valid thought of Jesus Christ that was not originally foretold by the prophets, then set forth and expounded by the apostles of Christ. None-apostolic writers like Luke, James, and Jude, did not present some new and hitherto undeclared aspect or ministry of Christ Jesus. Peter refers to this Divine arrangement in his second epistle: “That ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandment of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior” (2 Pet 3:2). Jude hearkens his readers to recall the words of the apostles (Jude 1:17). The early church continued steadfastly in “the apostles doctrine” (Acts 2:42). There is no record of any non-apostolic prophet after Jesus making known some totally new perspective of Jesus Christ or of the salvation of God. There simply is no foundational teaching that was not transmitted to the sons of men that did not come through the apostle’s mouth.

We conclude, therefore, that there is no proper emphasis that was not foretold by the prophets, and declared and expounded by the apostles – and that includes Solomon, who, although he wrote Scripture, was distinguished from the prophets (1 Kgs 1:34,38; 2 Chron 9:29). His character and spiritual retardation was not characteristic of the prophets of God (1 Kgs 11:4,9). This does not obviate the writings of Solomon. However, they must not be considered as foundational in the salvation of God. When compared with the words spoken by the prophets, the Lord Jesus, and the apostles, they are rudimentary. They are not the appointed commentary on life in Christ Jesus.

DIVINE DIRECTION IN ACTS

We have in the book of Acts the carrying out of a Divine agenda. The actions that are recorded are said to have been initiated by heaven.

- ANGELS. The interposition of angels (Acts 5:19; 8:26; 10:3,22; 11:13; 12:7; 27:23).
- PROPHECIES. The utterance of prophecies (Acts 21:10).
- VISIONS. Divine direction through visions (Acts 9:10,12; 10:3,17,19; 11:5; 16:9,10; 18:9; 26:19).
- THE LORD. The Lord speaking (Acts 9:5,10,15; 18:9; 22:10; 23:11).
- SCRIPTURE. A correlation of with the Word of God (Acts 2:16; 15:15; 17:2,11).
- HOLY SPIRIT. The direction of the Holy Spirit (Acts 8:29; 10:19; 13:2).
- HOLY REASONING. Holy men pondered what was said or revealed to them (Acts 16:10).

Yet, in all of these influences and direction, there is not a syllable that parallels much of the contemporary claims of being directed by God. Keep in mind, we are speaking of priorities or emphases. And, how are we to consider such claims? Are we to imagine that some kind of new stress has been established by heaven? Like the infamous chameleon, has the church adapted to its environment? Who would care to take it upon themselves to prove such a postulate? How is it possible to establish a primary thrust that is never mentioned in Scripture? If such cannot be done, there is no basis for requiring that the family of God support it. Yet, in all of the religious fervor of our time, there is precious few public intentions of establishing and edifying “the church of God, which He has purchased with His own blood” (Acts 20:28). In order to justify such an omission, it must be established that:

- The Divine emphasis has been changed from the church to the world.

- The church no longer stands in need of such attention, being fully established.
- The heart of God is more fully set upon enlarging the church rather than establishing it.
- The book of Acts does not reflect the mind of the Lord.

Of course, it appears absurd to even suggest such things. However, the emphatic thrust of the modern church and its ancillary activities require that someone step forward and justify the departure from the obvious thrust that is chronicled in the book of Acts. There really needs to be an explanation!

PAUL’S THIRD MISSIONARY JOURNEY

We are in the midst of what is commonly called the third missionary trip of Paul. It covered approximately 2,700 miles, and lasted for a period out five years (54-58 A.D.). Paul disembarked from Antioch (Acts 18:23), visiting Galatia and Phrygia (18:23), Ephesus (19:1-7), Macedonia and Greece (20:1-5), Troas (20:5-10), Assos, Mitylene, Kios, Samos (20:13-15), Miletus (20:17), Cos, Patara (21:1-3), Tyre (21:3), Ptolemais and Caesarea (21:7-8), and Jerusalem (21:17). More than half of that time was spent in Ephesus (three years (Acts 20:31).

The establishment of the believers was the objective of most of Paul’s journey’s. All of his epistles were written to them. It is unconscionable that such priorities have been almost universally ignored during the last hundred years of church activity. Even the great reformation movements of history have been for the establishment of the church – for freeing it from the encumbrances of religious tradition, and anchoring it once again in the truth of Christ. We are living in a day that is crying out for another major refocusing of the church. For the most part, its current preachers, teachers, and educational leaders are not properly focused, but like entertaining minstrels are playing the tunes loved by those who are living in practical alienation from God. It is not an ideal situation, to say the least.

SOME GO BY SHIP, WHILE PAUL GOES BY FOOT

“20:13 And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul: for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.”

Having avoided the Jewish plot to apprehend Paul, the holy company resumes the pursuit of Paul’s objectives.

WE WENT AND SAILED TO ASSOS

“And we went before to ship, and sailed unto Assos, there intending to take in Paul . . .” Other versions read, “we went ahead to the ship and sailed to Assos,” NKJV “We went on ahead 49 to the ship and put out to sea for Assos,” NET and “going on ahead to the ship, the rest of us set sail for Assos.” AMPLIFIED

By sea, Assos was about forty miles from Troas. At this point, as indicated by the text, Luke was traveling with “the rest.” The group included Luke, Sopater, Aristarchus, Secundus, Gaius, Timotheus, Tychicus, and Trophimus. They were from different areas: Berea, Thessalonica, Derbe, and Asia. Yet, they were in the “unity of the Spirit” (Eph 4:3), and “the unity of the faith” (Eph 4:13). The work of the Lord cannot be conducted in any other way.

At this point, Paul is not with the group. According to their plans, they intended for Paul to join them in Assos.

PAUL MINDED TO GO AFOOT

“ . . . for so had he appointed, minding himself to go afoot.” Other versions read, “so he had given orders, intending himself to go by foot,” NKJV “thus he had arranged it, intending himself to go by land,” NASB and “he had made this arrangement because he was going there on foot.” NIV

These plans were made by Paul himself, who apparently wanted to be alone during this time. The trip by foot was approximately half the distance by ship, being twenty miles in length.

We are not told why Paul preferred to go by foot. Some suggest that he may have lingered a little while with the brethren at Troas, GILL and others that he may have intended to visit some friends along the way. BARNES I doubt that such intentions are covered under the heading “minding himself to go afoot.”

It appears more likely to me that he sought the solitude for meditation, prayer, and Divine fellowship. This is the kind of life Jesus Himself led, often preferring to be alone (Matt 12:15; 14:23; Mk 3:7; 6:47; Lk 5:16; John 6:15). There is something about constant contact with people that erodes the soul, as though requiring an extraordinary measure of grace. Few people appear aware of this, but Jesus was keenly aware of it. I do not doubt that the closeness of Paul to Christ brought the same experience to him. This by no means points to an inferiority of fellowship with brethren. It does accent the necessity of immediate fellowship with Christ Himself. While this does involve His body, the church, there is also an intensely personal aspect to it. Spiritual life cannot be maintained independently of Christ Himself.

Over the years I have observed that walking and talking with the Lord is a most excellent means of obtaining spiritual satisfaction. Articulation is like a refreshing stream that flows out, making room for Divine input.

PAUL JOINS THEM IN SAILING TO MILETUS

“ 14 And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene. 15 And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.”

The trip by sea to Miletus took nine days: five days from Philippi to Troas (20:6a), plus one day from Troas to Mitylene (20:14), plus one day to Chios (20:15), plus one day to Samos, plus one day to Miletus. Translated into hours, that was one hundred and twenty hours to Troas, plus ninety-six hours from Troas to Miletus – a total of two hundred and sixteen hours. This does not include the seven days spent with the brethren in Troas. Add to that the twenty-mile walk of Paul from Troas to Assos. This is what was involved in serving the Lord during the first century. I find it exceedingly difficult to conceive of that kind of personal investment taking place in our day – a time when convenience and ease have assumed the place of a gods.

WE TOOK HIM IN

“And when he met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene . . .”

With no recorded difficulty, Paul met them in Assos, and boarded the ship for the remainder of the trip. I say “no recorded difficulty” – but that does not imply there was none. Paul mentioned elsewhere that had encountered “perils of robbers . . . perils by the heathen . . . perils in the wilderness” (2 Cor 11:26). Perhaps some of these perils were encountered during his walk to Assos. Whatever the circumstances that may have taken place during that time, a commitment to the Lord and a love for His work is abundantly evident – and it is refreshing to read such a report.

There is a consistency in Luke’s reporting that is worthy of notice. He never views the life of the saints from the mundane point of view. What men may consider ordinary or casual living is not reported by holy men of God. Life is not recorded from the incidental point of view. We do not have a solitary example of the daily activities of men and women of God from a purely earthly point of view. Whether it is Adam and Eve, Enoch, Noah Abraham, Isaac, or Jacob, we do not have the slightest idea of the manner of their domestic life. How they conducted themselves with the wives, their children, or their neighbors is simply not reported. The same is true of Moses, Aaron, David, the prophets, and John the Baptist. We have a single excerpt of the first twelve years of Jesus' life – and it has to do with the observance of an ordained feast, and his activity in the holy city.

There is an underlying postulate that living by faith, walking in the Spirit, and fellowship with Christ will provide a framework in which the details of life can be worked out for the glory of God and the satisfaction of the individual. However, this circumstance is not acceptable to those who walk in the flesh.

Even though those in Christ are admonished concerning domestic and social behavior, yet the instruction is not on a detailed level, and there are not sufficient examples to formulate a step-by-step system concerning mundane life. There is an underlying postulate that living by faith, walking in the Spirit, and fellowship with Christ will provide a framework in which the details of life can be worked out for the glory of God and the satisfaction of the individual. However, this circumstance is not acceptable to those who walk in the flesh. Therefore, they develop plans, procedures, and routines according to their own pleasure that are designed to address life in this world. However, in so doing they have only confirmed their practical alienation from the living God. To them, whether they confess it or not, men are not made complete in Christ (Col 2:10).

If all of this seems irrelevant to the text, one must consider how the activities of Paul and those with him are written up. If what I have said of life is not true, then one can only perceive these accounts as incidental, with no practical relevancy to life. Such a view is altogether unacceptable. It is not possible that inspired history is unrelated to Divine purpose.

WE FINALLY ARRIVED IN MILETUS

“And we sailed thence, and came the next day over against Chios; and the next day we arrived at Samos, and tarried at Trogyllium; and the next day we came to Miletus.”

Luke often gives some details of Paul's travels, revealing their extensive nature. In my understanding, there is a purpose to this approach. It confirms that Divine direction does not always come in the form of visions, dreams, and prophecies. Often, if not the majority of the time, it is accomplished within the context of Divine fellowship – when the individual is simply living for the Lord. That is what is involved in walking and pleasing God (1 Thess 4:1), and living unto Him who died for us (2 Cor 5:15). Such living is the required context for Divine direction, as is confirmed in the faithful. This, I say, ought to be abundantly apparent.

PAUL DETERMINES A PARTICULAR COURSE

“ 16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia: for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost.”

GODLY PLANNING

Paul planned his life around Divine direction and holy remembrances. It is very difficult for the person dominated by the mind of the flesh to see the value of such manners. Both of them yield to the Lord, and do not give the central position to self. This differs significantly from the manners that were cultured under the Old Covenant. While there were souls who pressed to know the Lord during that time, they were few and far between: i.e. David (Psa 27:4), Isaiah (Isa 26:9), Jeremiah (Jer 15:16), etc. The rank and file of the people “forgot” the Lord (1 Sam 12:9; Psa 106:21), and did not submit to God (Psa 81:11). The summation of their response to the Lord is stated by Himself; “My covenant they brake” (Jer 31:32). His appeals to them were stated like this: “But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people” (Rom 10:21). The Lord had to send them the prophets, over and over again, to jar them out of their complacency – yet they did not hearken to them. Thus it is written, “Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early and sending them: Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck: they did worse than their fathers” (Jer 7:26; 25:4; 26:5; 29:19; 35:15; 44:4).

Yet, you will not find this kind of response in the book of Acts. It is true that there were wayward people like Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5:1-10), and John Mark who abandoned the work of God at one time (Acts 13:13; 15:38). But these were by no means representative of the mass of believers. Those in Christ were part of a covenant in which the laws of God were written upon the heart and put upon the mind (Heb 8:10). They had new hearts, and a new spirit (Ezek 36:26), and were prone to walk in the ways of the Lord (Ezek 36:27). According to the promise of God, all those in Christ “know” the Lord (Jer 31:34; Heb 8:12; 10:17-18).

All of this translates into lives that were lived out unto the Lord. The early saints did not think in terms of fleshly convenience, worldly preferences, and the likes. They thought in terms of doing the work of the Lord – like Paul; and of following holy men, like those who joined Paul.

All of this translates into lives that were lived out unto the Lord. The early saints did not think in terms of fleshly convenience, worldly preferences, and the likes. They thought in terms of doing the work of the Lord – like Paul; and of following holy men, like those who joined Paul. That is the Kingdom norm, and yet if we were to confine our attention to the church of our day, I do not believe it would be possible to come to that conclusion. It is the failure to see this that has given birth to such sayings as, “Christians are sinners like everyone else, with the only difference being that they are forgiven.” Or, “God loves everyone the same.” Or, “You know how we are, always wanting to do the wrong thing.” Observations of this sort are developed when people, at the very best, are dwelling at an unacceptable distance from the Lord.

How could a person possibly attribute such feeble-minded sayings to men like Paul, Sopater, Gaius, Aristarchus, Secundus, Timothy, Tychicus, Trophimus, and Luke? We are reading of men who not only knew the Lord, but were living in the focused awareness of that knowledge.

PAUL DETERMINED TO SAIL BY EPHEBUS

“For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia . . .”

Paul had spent the three previous years in Ephesus, and was not inclined to return there at this time. His heart told him that this was not the time to be in Asia. I personally consider this to have been Divine direction – particularly when you consider the outcome of the choice. Jesus had considered Paul “faithful, putting” him into “the ministry” (1 Tim 1:12). That is, Paul could be trusted to fulfill the task given to him, just as God knew Abraham would do what was right concerning the promises (Gen 18:19). This involved HOW the trusted ones went about fulfilling what was required of them. That is involved in counting a person “faithful.” This would involve being directed by the Lord’s eye, as compared to having to be pulled this way and that by a bit and bridle (Psa 32:9).

Some people have remarkable capacities, but must be directed in their use by more forceful means. This is because their strength and sensitivity are not equal. When strength or aptitude is strong, but sensitivity is weak, it is time for the bit and bridle. When one’s sensitivity is strong, but their strength is weak, God turns their weakness into strength (2 Cor 12:10).

HE WANTED TO BE IN JERUSALEM ON THE DAY OF PENTECOST

“ . . . for he hasted, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost.” Other versions read, “he was hurrying,” NKJV “he was eager,” NRSV “he was going quickly,” BBE “he was anxious,” NJB and “very desirous.” WEYMOUTH

Paul’s motives have been mis-assessed by many self-assigned teachers of our time. Some contemporaries, among whom I have traveled, felt that Paul was keeping the day of Pentecost as a Jew would keep it. Perhaps he did not do so out of a sense of obligation, but, they surmise, it was a Jewish manner that clung to him. However, this is not sound reasoning, for Paul never gave indication that he remained devoted to shadows once the substance had come.

The Feast of Pentecost

This was the second feast that was to be attended by all males of Israel; the first being the Feast of the Passover (Lev 23:15-22), and the last being The Feast of Tabernacles (Lev 23:34). The feast of Pentecost, like the Passover, lasted only one day – the fiftieth day after the Passover, or the day after seven sabbaths (7 X 7 =49) had passed. The was also called “the feast of harvest,” and was the time which was “the firstfruits of thy labors, which thou has sown in the field” (Ex 23:16). It was also referred to as “the day of the firstfruits” (Num 28:26). At this time special loaves of bread were made from the first-ripened grain, and waved before the Lord, being presented to Him (Lev 23:15-17). The offering of bread was to be accompanied by the sacrifice of seven lambs without blemish, that were in their first year; one young bullock, and two rams as burnt offerings (Lev 23:18). This was to be followed by the sacrifice of one “kid of the goats for a sin offering, and two lambs of the first year for a peace offering” (Lev 23:19).

It should not require extensive thought to confirm that Paul was not going to keep the day of Pentecost as it was instituted under the Law. Such an observance would have been a repudiation of the sacrifice of Christ.

The Reason for Paul’s Attendance

The reason Paul sought to be in Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost was doubtless to testify to the Jews concerning Christ Jesus. This was the time when the spiritual firstfruits were reaped from the field of the Jews – three thousand of them (Acts 2:41). Paul doubtless saw this as the early harvest, and longed to see the full harvest come it.

We know how this beloved apostle thought about the Jews. He acknowledged to a Gentile church, “That I have great heaviness and continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh” (Rom 9:3). This was not mere fleshly sentimentality, but was based upon God’s dealings with them. “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5).

The three feasts, of which Pentecost was the second, were observed in Jerusalem, and therefore there would be devout men there out of every nation, just as there was on the first Pentecost after Christ’s enthronement (Acts 2:5).

This was also the day on which the New Covenant was officially inaugurated, and three thousand first-ripe spiritual fruits were presented to the Lord. Such holy recollections, together with a fervent desire that the Jews might be saved was driving Paul at this time.

Jerusalem

However, it seems to me that each person has a kind of spiritual obligation to recognize times when Christ can be more profitably presented.

As a point of interest “Jerusalem” is mentioned sixty times in the book of Acts (1:4,8,12,19; 2:5,14; 4:6,16; 5:16,28; 6:7; 8:1,14,25,26,27; 9:2, 13, 21,26,28; 10:39; 22:2,22,27; 12:25; 13:13,27, 31; 15:2,4; 16:4; 18:21; 19:21; 20:16,22; 21:4,11,12,13, 15,17,31; 22:5,17,18; 23:11; 24:11; 25:1,3,7,9, 15,20,24; 26:4,10,20; 28:17).

The city of Jerusalem was declared to be related to the working of salvation in the midst of the earth. In this sense, this city was referred to as “the throne of the Lord” (Jer 3:17). God said it would continue (Joel 3:20). Zechariah said that God would dwell in Jerusalem, and it would be called “the city of truth” (Zech 8:3). It was also prophesied, “many people and strong nations shall come and seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem” (Zech 8:22). Isaiah foretold that the word of the Lord would go out from Jerusalem (Isa 2:3). All of these things began to be fulfilled on the day of Pentecost.

There Are Special Seasons

In Christ there are special seasons when productivity is elevated. This is owing to holy associations being made at such times, unusual tenderness of heart, and the gathering of many people for a God-centered cause. Scripture would call such times “in season” (2 Tim 4:2). During such occasions, for those of tender heart, the Lord’s Christ Himself becomes the dominate consideration, even though many people may have gathered for lesser religious reasons. I have observed over the years that such gatherings, whether in celebration of the resurrection of Christ, His birth, or some other holy remembrance, are often viewed as times for family gatherings, or the assembly of those who are nothing more than fleshly acquaintances. Men are not at liberty to create laws for such occasions, or to sit in judgment of the plans of others. However, it seems to me that each person has a kind of spiritual obligation to recognize times when Christ can be more profitably presented.

Perhaps it would be better said that there are, indeed, such times, and that it is honoring to the Lord to use them to reach people who are otherwise rather insensitive. This is an area where wisdom is required.

PAUL CALLS FOR THE ELDERS FROM EPHEBUS

“ 17 And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church.” Other versions read, “called to him the elders,” NIV “asking the elders of the church to meet him,” NRSV “sent to Ephesus for the rulers of the church,” BBE “called the spiritual leaders 1 of the church,” GWN “had the presbyters of the church at Ephesus summoned,” NAB “telling the elders of the church to come to him,” NET “the elders of the congregation,” TNT and “elders of the assembly.” YLT

There are three particular churches that are specifically said to have elders.

- Jerusalem (Acts 11:30; 15:2,4,6,22, 23; 16:4; 21:18).
- Ephesus (Acts 20:17).
- Philippi, referred to as “bishops” (Phil 1:1).
- After visiting the churches established by themselves, and “confirming the souls of the disciples,” Paul and Barnabas “ordained elders in every church” (Acts 14:23).
- Paul told Titus to ordain elders in every city (Tit 1:5), IF they met the standards set forth (Tit 1:6-9).
- The type of men intended to fill this office were specified by Paul to both Timothy and Titus (1 Tim 3:1-7; 5:17; Tit 1:6-9).
- James wrote of those who were sick calling for the elders, who were to “pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord” (James 5:14).

- Peter admonished the elders to “feed the flock of God, taking the oversight thereof” (1 Pet 5:2-4).

- The epistle to the Hebrews speaks of those who “have the rule over you,” who have “spoken the word of God” to them, and whose faith they were “to follow,” admonishing the saints to “remember them” (Heb 13:7,24). It is also said that such men were watching for their souls, as those who “must give account” of the flock to God (Heb 13:17).

I say these things because the church of our day has very little understanding of this office. It is largely viewed as a role that must be filled, and that those filling it are something like bosses who manage the church like an executive manages a business concern.

It is understood that this is the office to which Paul referred in his letter to the Ephesians, listing it as one of the gifts Jesus gave to the church: “pastors and teachers” – a single office with two sides. Being “pastors” has to do with caring for and protecting the flock. Being teachers accents the feeding of the flock, acquainting them with the ways of the Lord and the manner of the kingdom.

The purpose for all of the teaching gifts given to the church is spelled out in the fourth chapter of Ephesians.

- The perfecting, or equipping, of the saints for the work the ministry – or the various means of building up and edifying the body of Christ (4:12).

- This edification is to eventuate in the body being united in faith and in their knowledge of the Son of God (4:13a).

- The objective is for the individual members to mature in their role in the body, so that the whole church may properly reflect Christ. Each part is to function in their capacity as Jesus Himself (4:13).

- The aim is to bring the whole body to a point where the individual members are no more children, easily deceived and carried about by every wind of doctrine (4:14).

- Each member of the body is to be brought to a point where they can “speak the truth in love,” thereby contributing to the whole body growing up into Christ in “all things” (4:15).

- As each member grows up into Christ in every aspect of life, Christ ministers through them as the Head does through the various members of the physical body. In so doing, the members are firmly joined and compacted together by means of the various contributions of the individual members (4:16).

Apart from these objectives, there really is no purpose elders. God has made no provision for a nucleus of men to run the business affairs of the church, or be the official monitors and resolvers of personal difficulties and conflicts.

When we consider what Paul says to these elders, viewing it from the perspective of the role and ministry of such leaders, what we is said above will become very clear.

The difficulty with our time is that these things have been conveniently placed to the side in favor of formal leading that is more related to a business corporation than it is to the church. For example, some view the elders as monitors over what is being taught, while the Scriptures depict them as the ones who are doing the teaching. Further, there is not an insistence upon them being the kind of men, and exercising the type of leadership that is held forth in Scripture. For example, they are to be able to stop the mouths of gainsayers who seek to subvert the church, doing so “by sound doctrine,” both exhorting and convincing the offender (Tit 1:9-11).

The elders at Jerusalem were of such a caliber that they could join with the apostles in making major judgments (Acts 15:2,4,6,22,23; 16:4). This is an office that is to be taken seriously. It is also one that is established by God, who is the One who places the members in the body as it has pleased Him (1 Cor 12:18) – and that included the office of elder, or bishop. This is not a function assigned by men, or agreed on by mere human consensus. Perhaps it would be well to consider briefly the traits of a man who is an elder. I will tell you beforehand, there will be little similarity in these descriptions with the body of elders that are found in the average congregation. These descriptions confirm the seriousness of this office.

- The office is to be desired by those who occupy it (1 Tim 3:1).
- The man must be “blameless,” or beyond rebuke (1 Tim 3:2a; Tit 1:7a).
- The “husband of one wife” (1 Tim 3:2b). That is, he cannot be a bigamist.
- He must be “vigilant,” or temperate and in control of his life (1 Tim 3:2c; Tit 1:8d).
- He must be “sober,” prudent and discreet in both his perspectives and judgments (1 Tim 3:2d; Tit 1:8c).
- He must be of “good behavior,” respectable and spiritually dignified (1 Tim 3:2e).
- He must be inclined to be “hospitable,” and not hesitate to entertain strangers and brethren in his home (1 Tim 3:2f; Tit 1:8a).
- He must be “apt to teach,” or able to teach, or an apt teacher (1 Tim 3:2g).
- He must not be “given to wine,” or addicted to strong drink (1 Tim 3:3a; Tit 1:7e).
- He cannot be a “striker,” or violent in his demeanor or emotion – not pugnacious (1 Tim 3:3b).
- He cannot be “greedy of filthy lucre,” being free from the love of money (1 Tim 3:3c; Tit 1:7f).
- He must be “patient,” gentle and noted for moderation (1 Tim 3:3d).
- He cannot be a “brawler,” but be of a peaceful disposition (1 Tim 3:3e).
- He cannot be “covetous,” having a grasping spirit, and wanting more than he requires (1 Tim 3:3f).
- He must be a man that rules his own house well, “having his children in subjection with all gravity” (1 Tim 3:4-5). This is understood to refer to the children that remain under his control.
- He cannot be a “novice,” lacking a thorough understanding of the Lord and His purpose (1 Tim 3:8a).
- He must have a “good report of them that are without,” not being a man with of bad reputation (1 Tim 3:7b).

The nature of Paul’s testimony to these men, together with his instructions, will confirm the necessity and ministry of these spiritual qualities and characteristics. Unfortunately, the church has had its share of men who were called elders, who were sorely lacking in these areas.

He cannot be “self-willed,” arrogant, haughty, and having a high estimation of himself (Tit 1:7c).

- He cannot be “soon angry,” flying off the handle at the slightest provocation (Tit 1:7d).
- He must be a “lover of good men” (Tit 1:8b).

- He must be “just,” or holy and righteous (Tit 1:8c).
- He must be grounded in the faith, holding “fast the faithful Word,” that he may be able, with sound doctrine, to both exhort and convince the gainsayer (Tit 1:9a).
- They are to feed the flock of God (Acts 20:28; 1 Pet 5:2a).
- They are to “take the oversight,” or care, of the flock, doing so willingly, and not by constraint, or because they have to (1 Pet 5:2b).
- They are not to “lord it over” the flock of God, but to be an example to it (1 Pet 5:3).

The nature of Paul’s testimony to these men, together with his instructions, will confirm the necessity and ministry of these spiritual qualities and characteristics. Unfortunately, the church has had its share of men who were called elders, who were sorely lacking in these areas. As James would say, “My brethren, these things ought not so to be” (James 3:10). My personal experience with elders, with very few exceptions, has been very disconcerting and disappointing. How thankful I am for the exceptions.

THE MANNER OF PAUL’S MINISTRY

“18 And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, 19 Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews. . .”

THEY WERE COME TO HIM

“And when they were come to him . . .” Other versions read, “when they had come to him,” NASB “when they arrived,” NIV “when they were with him,” GWN and “upon their arrival.” WEYMOUTH

Notice the dispatch with which the elders came to Paul from Ephesus. The trip was 50-60 miles, probably on foot. This confirms several things concerning these men.

- Their love for Christ, who is the Head of the church.
- Their respect and love for Paul, who was the one who had taught them the things pertaining to the Person of Christ and the purpose of God.
- Their love for the church itself, and of their concern for its purity and stability.
- Their willingness to allow their lives to be molded around the work of the Lord.
- The immediate nature of their obedience.

Now, all of these, together with things related to them, reflect the nature of those upon whose hearts the law of God has been written. This is how men who have a new heart react to men sent from God. This is the kind of reaction that mature members of the body of Christ display.

Now, all of these, together with things related to them, reflect the nature of those upon whose hearts the law of God has been written. This is how men who have a new heart react to men sent from God.

In our time, such responses are not common. That is why there are all kinds of workshops and courses that attempt to teach people to be spiritual. However, spirituality is the result of spiritual understanding. Commitment to God comes from a heart that has been circumcised. When men do not have spiritual responses, it is because they are not spiritual. If they do not conduct their loves in a holy manner, it is because they are not holy. If they do not keep Christ’s commandments, it is because they do not love him. When men consistently act in a carnal manner, it is because they are carnal.

By the same token, as John has said it, “If ye know that He is righteous, ye know that every one that doeth righteousness is born of Him ” (1 John 2:29). And again John says with great poignancy, “Little children, let no man deceive you: he that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous . He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil” (1 John 3:7-8).

If these men had not been godly, Paul would not have called them to Miletus. In such a case, he would probably have remained in Ephesus until such time as they could be trusted to care for the flock.

A MANNER FOR ALL SEASONS

“ . . . he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons . . . ”

There was a consistency in Paul’s ministry that reflected His closeness to the Lord, as well as his grasp of the nature and purpose of the church. One of the great blights of the modern church is the inconsistency of its ministers. They are too shallow, too sporadic, and willing to adapt to people whose commitment to the Lord is questionable. It is a most uncomely situation.

We will find that Paul’s activities did not include becoming involved in the daily intricacies of the lives of the people. Today’s “minister” is something like a cheap psychiatrist that offers counseling and resolution for domestic and interpersonal conflicts. That is more closely related to the function of leaders under the Law than those under Christ Jesus. The need for “judges” was not so much owing to the complexities of life as it was to the hardness of the hearts of the people. Procedures for issuance of a bill of divorcement, for example, were given “because of the hardness” of the hearts of the people – and that is a word that was delivered by the King Himself (Matt 19:8; Mk 10:4-5).

In Christ there is a resolution for hardness of heart. It is the conferment of a “new heart” upon which is written the very laws of God (Ezek 36:26; Heb 8:10). The need for endless counseling and moral direction indicates that God’s “great salvation” has been neglected (Heb 2:3). A salvation that does not successfully address the attitudes and demeanor of men is no salvation at all.

Now, let us behold precisely how Paul ministered among the redeemed.

SERVING THE LORD WITH HUMILITY OF MIND

“ . . . Serving the Lord with all humility of mind, . . . ”

Serving the Lord

Other versions read, “I served the Lord,” NIV Doing the Lord’s work,” BBE “laboring for God,” MRD and “have done the Lord’s work.” NLT

The word “served” is translated from the Greek word douleu,wn which has the following lexical meaning: “to be a slave, serve, do service absolutely . . . to obey, submit to . . . absolutely to yield obedience . . . to obey one’s commands and render to him the service due,” THAYER “spiritual service to God serve, obey.” FRIBERG Serving the Lord involves doing His will as one who is indebted to Him and owned by Him. There is no question about this. The individual who serves the Lord is doing His will, serving His interests, and fulfilling the mandate that has been delivered to him.

Jesus left no doubt when He called Paul to be an apostle. He spelled out the work that he was to do. Although I have mentioned this commission frequently in these lessons, I am compelled to do so once again. The word of Jesus to Paul, then Saul, is recorded in Acts 26:16-18.

- To be a witness of the things Jesus had revealed to him.
- Open their eyes.
- Turn them from darkness to light.
- Turn them from the power of Satan unto God.
- Work to the end that the people may receive the forgiveness of sins.
- Labor in order that they might receive an inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith in Jesus.

Paul was NOT called to help people with problems in their personal, domestic, and social lives. Any involvement he had in those areas were directly related to illuminating the people, turning them to God, and preparing them to receive an “eternal inheritance” (Heb 9:15). Jesus did not call Paul to relieve the poor of the world, correct the political views of the people, or enable them to be successful in the world. In fact, there is no record of God calling anyone into such works. That is, these are not the main purpose of anyone of Scriptural record. This does not mean that such things are wrong of themselves, but they are never right as a focus or emphasis. When eternity is taken out of the picture, the service, strictly speaking, is not toward God.

During the last few decades, there has been a significant shift of emphasis within the nominal church. It has tuned its harp to psychological music, and is now playing the songs the public demands. People want help with their problems, their marriages, their children, their finances, and other personal, domestic, and social issues. Little if any of their interests merge with eternity. Little thought is given to death, the day of the coming of the Lord, and the day of judgment. These days, as soon as someone begins talking about eternal things, or things pertaining to “life and godliness” as defined by God, questioning looks come over the people. These are not the areas being explored and expounded by the clerics – at least, not by the popular ones. It is now quite possible to graduate from a Bible College and even Seminary with very little understanding of the Scriptures. True religious utility is not equated with serving the temporal interests of people. In fact, a significant percentage of missionary work is now devoted to relief work.

All of this may appear quite innocent, but it is not. The truth of the matter is that relatively few people have a single cogent idea about what it means to serve the Lord. These days, that is just not the way people think and talk.

Humility of Mind

Other versions read, “all humility,” NKJV “great humility,” NIV “all lowliness of mind,” ASV “without pride,” BBE “much humility,” CJB “all lowliness,” DARBY “all modesty,” GENEVA “humbly served,” GWN “humbleness of mind,” TNT and “I never thought about myself first.” LIVING

A professed minister of Christ who, through his ministry, seeks his own welfare and interests is a living contradiction to the will of God. In that respect he is unlike the Christ he professes to serve. Such men will not fare well on the day of judgment.

The words “humility of mind” are translated from a single Greek word: tapeinofrosu,nhj . The word means, “having a humble opinion of one’s self; a deep sense of one’s littleness, modesty, humility, lowliness of mind,” THAYER “a quality of voluntary submission and unselfishness, humility, self effacement,” FRIBERG and “without arrogance.” LOUW-NIDA

While the above is the lexical meaning of the word, the concept itself was lived out by Jesus, and is spiritually defined in His Person. This it is written of Him, “Who, although being essentially one with God and in the form of God [possessing the fullness of the attributes which make God], did not think this equality with God was a thing to be eagerly grasped or retained, But stripped Himself [of all privileges and rightful dignity], so as to assume the guise of a servant (slave), in that He became like men and was born a human being. And after He had appeared in human form, He abased and humbled Himself [still further] and carried His obedience to the extreme of death, even the death of the cross!” AMPLIFIED (Phil 2:6-8).

To confirm that Jesus lived out the standard of the Kingdom, the above words are preceded by this expression: “Let this same attitude and purpose and [humble] mind be in you which was in Christ Jesus: [Let Him be your example in humility]” AMPLIFIED (Phil 2:5).

This is the manner in which Paul conducted his ministry among the Ephesians. He was not among them to gain personal advantage, or to seek his own selfish interests. He was not there to become rich through them, or to come into the possession of many worldly things as a result of being there. He did not come to make a name for himself, or to garner followers for his personal cause.

Humility involves taking the lower seat, and allowing the interests of another, even Jesus Christ, to dominate you. This is the frame of spirit that Paul described in these words: “I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me” (Gal 2:20).

A professed minister of Christ who, through his ministry, seeks his own welfare and interests is a living contradiction to the will of God. In that respect he is unlike the Christ he professes to serve. Such men will not fare well on the day of judgment.

Likewise, those professed ministers who make it their aim to please the people have been recalcitrant to their trust. They are the servants of the Lord, and it is their business to know the will of their Master, and then to do it.

SERVING THE LORD WITH MANY TEARS

“Serving the Lord . . . with many tears . . .” Other versions read, “with tears,” NASB “through all the sorrows,” BBE “with tears in my eyes,” GWN “sometimes I even cried,” LIVING “in tears,” WILLIAMS and “tears I have shed over the trials.” PHILLIPS

As used in this text, “tears” are spiritual tenderness expressed. They are a wounded heart spilling out through the eyes, and are associated with sorrow and inward pain.

Paul was a man of tender heart, another aspect in which he was like His Lord. For example, when having to deal with the carnality of the Corinthians he wrote, “For out of much affliction and anguish of heart I wrote unto you with many tears ; not that ye should be grieved, but that ye might know the love which I have more abundantly unto you” (2 Cor 2:4). When writing to the Philippians about religious charlatans who were making pride with religion he wrote, “For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping , that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ: Whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things” (Phil 3:18).

As used in this text, “tears” are spiritual tenderness expressed. They are a wounded heart spilling out through the eyes, and are associated with sorrow and inward pain. The next clause associates those tears with the trials caused by hostile Jews who hounded Paul continually.

TEMPTATIONS WHICH BEFELL ME

“ . . . and temptations, which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews. . . .” Other versions read, “trials which happened to my by the plotting of the Jews,” NKJV “I was severely tested by the plots of the Jews,” NIV “enduring the trials that came to me through the plots of the Jews,” NRSV “trials which befell me through the plots of the Jews,” RSV and “ in the midst of adversity (affliction and trials) which befell me, due to the plots of the Jews [against me].” AMPLIFIED

When writing to the Corinthians, Paul mentioned some of the trials he endured, stating that God had set forth the apostles “last,” insofar as popularity was concerned. “For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak , but ye are strong; ye are honorable, but we are despised . Even unto this present hour we both hunger , and thirst , and are naked , and are buffeted , and have no certain dwellingplace ; And labor, working with our own hands : being reviled , we bless; being persecuted , we suffer it: Being defamed, we entreat: we are made as the filth of the world , and are the offscouring of all things unto this day” (1 Cor 4:9-13). Again, he wrote of being “troubled on every side,” perplexed,” “persecuted,” and “cast down” (2 Cor 4:9). He also mentioned being beaten by the Jews “five times,” and being “in perils by mine own countrymen” (2 Cor 11:24,26). First and Second Corinthians were written (57 A.D.) during this third missionary tour of Paul (54-58 A.D.). Therefore, the hostility of the Jews that he mentions in those letters were related to the general time of this report.

While we are not to view persecution as the ultimate tragedy, neither are we to imagine that it does not have an effect upon those of tender heart. David mentioned his own experience of being a stranger and sojourner, referring to the “tears” associated with that circumstances (Psa 39:12). Some of his tears were associated with “wanderings,” a term that denotes being viewed as a pilgrim and a stranger (Psa 56:8). He also wrote of tears that were related to the hardships of sowing (Psa 126:5).

Those who take the work of the Lord seriously are not impervious to the effects of rejection, hostility, and misrepresentation. Also, to behold the truth being corrupted impacts upon their spirit, and is capable of causing considerable sorrow. In this regard, Paul spoke of “the care of all the churches” that came upon him every day, or “daily” (2 Cor 11:28). As used here, the word “care” means anxiety, concern, disquietude, and uneasiness. WEBSTER The Greek word from which the word is translated means “care, anxiety,” THAYER “concern,” FRIBERG “worry,” UBS and “a feeling of apprehension or distress in view of possible danger or misfortune -anxiety, worry, anxious concern.” LOUW-NIDA Paul doubtless shed many tears over the conditions of the certain churches, the errors to which they were subjected, and some who sought to exploit them.

It is doubtful, to say the least, that an insensitive person can be effectively used by God in the work of the Kingdom. A circumcised heart cannot be insensitive.

THE THOROUGHNESS OF PAUL’S MINISTRY

“ 20 And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have showed you, and have taught you publicly, and from house to house”

A proper ministry is related to thoroughness. Main things cannot be excluded, nor can a ministry be conducted as though subsidiary matters were primary. The objective of salvation must permeate every aspect of a valid work. For example, no work for God can be carried out as though this world was the primary world, and existence in the body was the fundamental existence. As simplistic as that may appear, much professed Christian activity projects this misperception. Consequently, spiritual advancement is often related to the mere cessation of unacceptable manners of conduct. To many, “victory” means no longer committing a certain transgression. However, this is not a proper concept at all. While sin must have a termination point, victory and triumph are related to making progress in the faith – and progress has to do with attainment, not mere cessation.

I KEPT BACK NOTHING THAT WAS PROFITABLE

“And how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you . . .” Other versions read, “I did not shrink from declaring to you anything that was profitable,” NASB “have not hesitated to preach anything that was helpful,” NIV “held back nothing that could be helpful to you,” CJB “I shunned not that which was advantageous to your souls,” MRD “I did not at all shrink from telling you what was for your benefit,” NAB “I always did what was best for you,” IE and “I never shrank from telling you anything that was for your good,” WILLIAMS

The word “profitable” means “to bring together,” THAYER “to confer a benefit, be useful or profitable,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “help, confer a benefit, be advantageous or profitable or useful,” GINGRICH

In this case, help, or advantage, does not have to do with giving the people their own personal desires – unless those desires are in synch with the purpose of God. Neither, indeed, does it have to do with earthly advantage, whether personal, domestic, or social. Strictly speaking, it is not related to answering the questions of the people, or assisting them in the resolution of their dilemmas. Such things may be appropriate under certain circumstances, but they are not to be the driving force of the work of God. Technically speaking, the resolution of personal difficulties are to be addressed within the context of Divine fellowship (1 Cor 1:9), the leading of the Spirit (Rom 8:13; Eph 4:18; 1 Thess 5:19), and working out one’s own salvation “with fear and trembling” (Phil 2:12).

In this case, profitability is to be seen within the context of the purpose of God as He has revealed it. This has been stated in a number of ways, but they are all pointed in the same direction. Being truly profitable has to do with things that will occur AFTER life on earth is completed. More precisely, it is related to what will take place when Jesus returns, and the day of judgment is completed.

The ultimate objective of salvation is stated in a number of ways. These ways are not at variance with one another, and are all facets of a single purpose. Here are some ways the Divine intentions for salvation is stated.

- CONFORMITY TO CHRIST. To conform those who were foreknown and predestinated by God to the image of His Son. “For whom He did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren” (Rom 8:29).

- GROWTH INTO CHRIST. For those in Christ to “grow up into Him in all things, which is the Head, even Christ” (Eph 4:15).

- TO BE FOUND IN A PROPER STATE WHEN JESUS COMES. Paul states this objective in a very personal way – as one who has embraced it. “And be found in Him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death; If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead” (Phil 3:9-11).

- STATE OF CHANGE BY INCREASING STAGES OF GLORY. That a change may take place within believers by the Holy Spirit, that is from one increasing change to another. This is accomplished while we are focused upon “the glory of the Lord,” as seen in the Person of Christ. “But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord” (2 Cor 3:18).

- EXPERIENCING KINGDOM LIFE. That the life and glory of the Lord may be expressed in the lives of those in the Son. “For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; Strengthened with all might, according to his glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness” (Col 1:9-11).

As a man would lift up an article for the people to behold, so the man declaring, or showing, the Word of the Lord raises it up, so that it is prominent, and the people will become familiar with the facts of the case.

THAT THE SONS OF GOD MAY BE BROUGHT TO GLORY AND AN ETERNAL INHERITANCE. That all of the sons might be brought to glory, obtaining an “eternal inheritance.” “For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings . . . And for this cause he is the mediator of the new testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressions that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance” (Heb 2:10; 9:15).

This brief listing is by no means complete. However, it does reflect the direction and ultimate intent of God’s great salvation. Something that is “profitable” directly relates to such matters. From this perspective, something temporary cannot be truly profitable, and must never be permitted to occupy the place of preeminence. I have found that a proportionately small number of people appear to have grasped this fact. If this assessment is true, it confirms that there are a host of ministries that are skewed in the wrong direction, for both the perspective and the lives of the people are but commentaries on what they have embraced.

I HAVE SHOWED YOU

“ . . . but have showed you . . .” Other versions read, “proclaimed it to you,” NKJV “declaring to you,” NASB “to preach,” NIV “proclaiming the message,” NRSV “announce it to you,” DARBY and “telling you.” NAB

The word “showed” is translated from the Greek word avnaggei/lai , which means “to announce, make known . . . to report, bring back tidings, rehearse,” THAYER “announce, proclaim, openly declare,” FRIBERG “report,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “to recount,” LEH In his Greek Dictionary, Vine says of this word, “signifies . . . to lift up and show, show forth, declare.”

As a man would lift up an article for the people to behold, so the man declaring, or showing, the Word of the Lord raises it up, so that it is prominent, and the people will become familiar with the facts of the case. This does not differ from the exposition of the truth, which is covered in the next term. Both what the Lord has done, and what the Lord has said are to be set before the people – not as a kind of novelty, but as something that is fundamental, primary, and foundational. This would not be quoting a few excerpts from the Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. Even though they are inspired by God, they are not the highest revelation of God, and are limited to life in this world. The only way such sayings are really profitable is when they are within the context of a greater and more fundamental message. Even then, the measure of their profit is not very large.

There are people who have been present in a religious assembly for decades, giving their full attention to what is being said. Yet, they have very little understanding of the purpose of God, main things, or the body of knowledge that is made known exclusively by Christ. Whatever may be said about those who have preached to such people, they have not been faithful servants of the Lord. If men do not apprise those to whom they regularly speak of what the Lord has emphasized, they have done little more than usurped the office of a preacher. I hardly see how it is possible to come to any other conclusion.

I HAVE TAUGHT YOU

“ . . . and have taught you . . .” Other versions read, “teaching you,” NASB and “instructed.” NJB

As used here, the word “taught” means, “to hold discourse with others in order to instruct them, deliver didactic discourses . . . to impart instruction, instill doctrine into one . . . to explain, expound, a thing,” THAYER “to cause to learn or to cause to know.” LOUW-NIDA

The person who teaches causes the hearers to become familiar with what is taught, bringing them to a point where they can handle the truth, use it, and comprehend something of its meaning and scope. Keep in mind, that the things that were being taught were “profitable,” integrating with the purpose of God, and the objective that drives salvation. This is not a mere academic understanding, but eventuates in “spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).

PUBLICLY AND FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE

“ . . . publicly, and from house to house . . .” Other versions read “publicly and privately,” BBE “publicly and in every house,” DARBY “openly and throughout every house,” GENEVA “openly and in your houses,” TNT and “in public meetings and from house to house.” AMPLIFIED

The preaching and teaching to which Paul refers was both in public gatherings, and in houses where believers met. I gather that this refers to times when the believers were “come together into one place” (1 Cor 11:20), or “the whole church be come together into one place” (1 Cor 14:23). Initially, it must have also referred to the daily meetings held in the school of Tyrannus (19:9). The situation was much like that of the early believers, immediately following the day of Pentecost: “And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart” (Acts 2:46). This does not describe the formal setting of the gatherings, but is rather the overflow of hungering and thirsting souls who were not satisfied to meet once in a while, and in a larger and more public gathering.

Notice the nature of the public and private meetings: it was for showing and teaching, or preaching and expounding. That was a primary activity among the early believers.

THE SUMMATION OF PAUL’S MINISTRY

“ 21 Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.”

Sayings like the one before us are important – important because they set forth the emphasis of apostolic preaching. They provide a kind of summation under which all valid preaching and teaching is classified.

INITIALLY TESTIFYING TO BOTH JEWS AND GREEKS

“Testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks . . .” Other versions read, “solemnly testifying,” NASB “declared,” NIV “declaring with utmost seriousness,” CJB “earnestly bore witness,” NAB “I have had one message,,” NLT “urging upon,” WEYMOUTH and “constantly and urgently I bore testimony.” AMPLIFIED

Translated from the Greek word diamarturo,menoj, the word “testifying” means “to testify, I. e. earnestly, religiously to charge: followed by an imperative,” THAYER “strongly urge, insist,” FRIBERG “to make a serious declaration,” LOUW-NIDA “to affirm solemnly,” LEH and “charge, warn, adjure . . . bear witness to solemnly,” GINGRICH

At the core of salvation are matters relating to both God and Christ. These represent the heart of the issue, for if they are not addressed satisfactorily, nothing else matters. This was a universal message – to both Jews (a covenanted people) and Greeks (a people without a covenant with God). Greeks distinguish the people from the Jews upon the basis of language, which at that time, and owing to the influence of Alexander the Great, was the universal language. The Jews had their own language, which was basically a theological language (2 Kgs 18:26,28; Neh 13:24; Esth 8:9; Isa 36:11,13).

REPENTANCE TOWARD GOD

“ . . . repentance toward God . . . ” Other versions read, “must turn to God,” NIV “repentance to God,” RSV “turning of the heart to God,” BBE “turn from sin to God,” CJB “change the way they think and act,” GWN “turn to God in repentance,” NIB “turn to God,” NJB “repenting from sin and turning to God,” NLT “toward God reformation,” YLT “change their hearts to God,” IE and “turn in repentance [that is due] to God.” AMPLIFIED

The need for repentance to God postulates alienation from God. It addresses a situation where the individual is not living within the framework of God-consciousness. Whether we are speaking of initial salvation, or of a recovery from going backward, the issue is turning to God. Paul preached that men “should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance,” or “prove their repentance by their deeds” NIV (Acts 26:20). Paul’s commission included turning men “from the power of Satan unto God” (Acts 26:18).

This is a perspective that is sorely needed in our time. First, sin is not being addressed as “sin,” nor is it associated with alienation or a departure from God. Consequently, little is being heard these days about repentance.

Repentance is large in scope, including both the heart and the body, thoughts and deeds, intentions and the carrying out of them. No person has repented in the sense of this text whose thinking and conduct has not changed. Those who take the requirement of “repentance toward God” seriously, will be aided in that work by the One who demands it. Sinners , whether in that state by nature, or because they have fallen into it following believing on the Son, must possess a keen awareness of what sin has done – cut them off from God. That situation must be resolved. There must be “repentance toward God.”

Properly viewed, repentance is not toward man, but toward God. While those who sin against men must repent toward those against whom they have sinned (Lk 17:3), it must be preceded by repentance toward God – else it has no value.

FAITH TOWARD OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST

“ . . . and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ.” Other versions read, “faith in,” NASB “put your trust in,” CJB “believe in,” GWN “the faith which is towards,” PNT “through faith in,” LIVING and “trust in.” IE

This presumes the all-sufficiency of Christ (Col 2:10), as well as His indispensability. Dependence must not be upon self, but upon Christ. Trust cannot be in a system, or a routine, but in Jesus Christ. Faith is not a confession, but prompts a confession. The person who says “I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God” (Acts 8:37), has not believed because he said those words, but has said them because he has believed. Furthermore, just as repentance was confirmed by appropriate works, so faith is initially validated by doing what Jesus requires. That is seen in the responses the Jews at Pentecost (Acts 2:41), the believers at Samaria (Acts 8:12), the Ethiopian eunuch (Acts 8:36-38), Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:18), Cornelius and his household (Acts 10:47-48), Lydia and her household (Acts 16:15), the Philippian jailer and his household (Acts 16:33), and Crispus and his household (Acts 18:8).

Faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ thoroughly addresses the matter of obedience and the appropriation of the salvation of God. It always inquires what is to be done, then sets out to do it.

BOUND IN THE SPIRIT AND ARMED WITH KNOWLEDGE

“ 22 And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there: 23 Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me.”

Here Paul accounts for his determination to go to Jerusalem, not knowing what he will face once he is there. His motive superceded any fear or uncertainty concerning the trip. This is the posture of faith, and is consistent in all who possess it.

BOUND IN THE SPIRIT

“And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem . . .” Other versions read, “bound in spirit,” NASB “compelled by the Spirit,” NIV “as a captive to the Spirit,” NRSV “bound in the Spirit,” RSV/GENEVA “a prisoner in spirit,” BBE “bound in my spirit,” CSB “constrained by the Spirit,” ESV “in captivity to the Spirit,” NJB “bound by the Spirit,” NLT “bound by the [Holy] Spirit and obligated and compelled by the [convictions of my own] spirit,” AMPLIFIED “I must obey God’s Spirit,” CEV “in obedience to the Holy Spirit,” GNB “I feel compelled to go,” MESSAGE “Drawn there irresistibly by the Holy Spirit,” LIVING “I must obey the Holy Spirit,” IE “impelled by a sense of duty,” WEYMOUTH and “I am impelled by the Spirit.” WILLIAMS

The word “bound” is the translation of a word meaning, “put under obligation . . . compelled by my convictions.” THAYER

Does this mean Paul was being compelled by the Holy Spirit, as represented by a significant number of versions? (NIV/NRSV,GENEVA/ESV/NJB/NLT/AMPLIFIED/CEV/GNB/LIVING/WILLIAMS) Or does it mean he was driven by his own spirit, as other versions suggest? (NASB/BBE/CSB/MESSAGE/ WEYMOUTH) I am not sure it is proper to separate these two concepts. Both are no doubt involved. The Holy Spirit was directing the activity, and the human spirit was responding to it. That is something of what is involved in walking “in the Spirit” (Gal 5:16,25), not quenching the Spirit (1 Thess 5:19), not grieving the Spirit (Eph 4:30), and being “led by the Spirit” (Rom 8:14).

Valid kingdom labors cannot be accomplished through the human spirit alone. Nor indeed, is personal motivation the appropriate basis for such work. The doctrine of the Lord informs us that we are not our own, that we have been bought with a price. The conclusion of that fact is that we are to glorify God in both our spirit and body (1 Cor 6:19-20). I doubt seriously that this can be accomplished through an inward compulsion that is not under the direction of the Holy Spirit.

Couple this with the fact that “it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps,” (Jer 10:23), and that “the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord” (Psa 37:23), and it becomes clear that any inner compulsions within the saint is under the direction of the Holy Spirit. If, as Jesus taught His disciples, the Spirit would teach them what to say (Lk 12:12), it seems perfectly reasonable that He would also lead them where to go.

All of this postulates a spiritual depth that is quite uncommon in our day. No person can live on the surface of life, so to speak, and experience the direction of the Holy Spirit. Whether it is attesting our sonship, or directing our steps, the Spirit bears witness with our spirit , not our mind or our emotion (Rom 8:16). That is, He communes (2 Cor 13:14) with the part of us that has been born again, renewed, or regenerated. It is the “new man” that is directed, for “the old man “is corrupt according to deceitful lusts,” and is therefore insensitive to the Spirit (Eph 4:22). Paul, then, was compelled from within his own person by means of the Holy Spirit of God, which he neither quenched nor grieved.

NOT KNOWING

“ . . . not knowing the things that shall befall me there . . .” Other versions read, “not knowing what will happen to me there,” NASB “having no knowledge of what will come to me there,” BBE “not knowing what I will encounter there,” CSB “What will happen to me there I do not know,” NAB “I don't know what awaits me,” NLT and “I am not aware what will befall me there.” WILLIAMS

God does not always provides all of the details pertaining to the future. Abraham, for example was called to leave his own country and journey to a land, the identity of which was unknown to him (Heb 11:8). When God commanded him to offer his only son, Isaac, as a burnt offering, the Lord sent him to a mountain that was unknown to him at the time of his departure (Gen 22:2). It was along the way that the details were made known. This is the manner of walking by faith.

Notice the absence of debilitating fear and the presence of stabilizing peace. This too is a result of living by faith and walking in the Spirit. It also reveals the high value that Paul placed on the will of the Lord and working in His vineyard.

INSPIRED WITNESSING

“ , , , Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me.” Other versions read, “chains and tribulations await me,” NKJV “prison and hardship are facing me,” NIV “imprisonment and persecutions are waiting for me,” NRSV and “jail and suffering lie ahead.” NLT

When Paul was called to the apostleship, the glorified Christ told Ananias, “For I will show him how great things he must suffer for My name's sake” (Acts 9:16). When Paul and Barnabas preached in Derbe, they themselves told the people, “we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God” (Acts 14:22). Later, certain disciples in Tyre said to Paul through the Spirit, “that he should not go to Jerusalem” (Acts 21:3-4). A prophet from Judaea named Agabus “ took Paul's girdle, and bound his own hands and feet, and said, Thus saith the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles” (Acts 21:11).

Care must be taken not to think of Divine direction and the work of the Lord as being in isolation from uncomfortable circumstances, opposition, and sore trials. When Paul spoke of the many things he endured, he was referring to what happened to him while he was doing the work of the Lord.

We have no further records of the witnessing to which Paul alludes. Some sophists conclude that the intent behind the prophecies was to keep Paul from going to Jerusalem. Here, however, the text suggests the Spirit employed these prophecies to direct Paul to go to Jerusalem, knowing that adversity awaited him there. He did not know the exact nature of the opposition, but it would not inhibit the completion of the work he had been assigned to do.

When I consider this text, I am reminded that Jesus Himself was “led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil” (Matt 4:1). For the Lord Jesus this was a time of preparation for His ministry – a time of testing that would better equip Him for His assigned work. I cannot but conclude that this was the kind of experience that awaited Paul – a preparatory experience that would better fit him for the completion of his work. The fact that he was admonished not to go to Jerusalem was much like a test to bring out the determination that is required to labor in the vineyard of the Lord.

Care must be taken not to think of Divine direction and the work of the Lord as being in isolation from uncomfortable circumstances, opposition, and sore trials. When Paul spoke of the many things he endured, he was referring to what happened to him while he was doing the work of the Lord . He did not run from, his work like Jonah, who endured three days and nights in a whale’s belly (Jonah 1:17). Instead, he ran to the work, forfeiting self interests and advantages in order to take a more firm hold on the work Jesus gave him to do. In his activity he spoke of “labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep; In journeyings often, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches” (2 Cor 11:28).

These things were experienced WHILE Paul was in the center of God’s will, doing that will from the heart. The good and acceptable and perfect will of God is wrought in the midst of a world that is alienated from God, and a people that are characterized by hostility against Him. Only the naive soul is taken unaware by the presence of trouble and opposition. As the servant of God matures in his faith in and acquaintance with the Lord, he finds there is a very real fellowship in the “sufferings” of Christ (Phil 3:10). It is this participation that moved Paul to respond as he did to the prophecies of chains and imprisonment that were spoken concerning him going to Jerusalem. Also, keep in mind that this was the “holy city” (Matt 4:5) where the Lord Jesus Himself was tempted by the devil and endured the oppositions of ungodly religious men.

It is no wonder that Jesus told His disciples, “In the world ye shall have tribulation : but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world” (John 16:33). And again, “If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you ” (John 15:19). Such experiences cannot possibly, of themselves, separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus (Rom 8:38-39). However, the way that truth is confirmed to the heart is by having the experiences of reference. The potency and ability of the grace of God is substantiated in the crucible of trial and suffering . That, of course, is precisely why Paul was so effective in his teaching concerning the grace of God – a ministry that uniquely belonged to him.

PAUL IS UNMOVEABLE

“ 24 But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God .”

NONE OF THESE THINGS MOVE ME

“But none of these things move me . . .”

The person who places the higher value on living in this world has, by that very deed, not only forfeited the good things of God, but has guaranteed he will lose what he has valued.

We are being exposed to the reasoning of a man whom Jesus “counted faithful, putting Him into the ministry” (1 Tim 1:12). This is one who was “a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the Gospel of God” (Rom 1:1). Being among “the apostles and prophets,” who were “the foundation” upon which the church is built (Eph 2:20), there was an unwavering consistency in his commitment to the Gospel. We have no example, other than Judas Iscariot, of an apostle or prophet who failed to carry out their mission – and even Judas carried out what was said of Him, betraying the Son of God (Psa 41:9; Psa 109:8; Matt 26:21; Acts 1:16,20). With the single exception of Judas, no apostle or prophet fell “by transgression” (Acts 1:25). None of them failed to deliver the message with which they were charged. There may be apostasy, defection, and anarchy among some of the disciples, but it was not so among the apostles and prophets.

NEITHER COUNT I MY LIFE TO BE DEAR

“ . . . neither count I my life dear unto myself . . .” Other versions read, “I do not consider my life of any account as dear to myself,” NASB “I consider my life worth nothing to me,” NIV “I do not count my life of any value to myself,” NRSV “I do not account my life of any value nor as precious to myself,” RSV “I put no value on my life,” BBE “I consider my own life of no importance to me whatsoever,” CJB and “neither do I esteem my life dear to myself.” AMPLIFIED

To “count” is to consider or reckon. It is a foundational way of thinking – viewing things as a principle. Paul reasoned in this manner because he had been “crucified to the world,” and the world “crucified” to him (Gal 6:14).

Shortly before retiring with His disciples for His last evening with them prior to His death, Jesus said to the multitudes, “He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal” (John 12:25). Again Jesus said, “For whosoever will save his life shall lose it : and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it” (Matt 16:25; Mk 8:35; Lk 9:24; 17:22). Neither of these sayings is ambiguous. The person who places the higher value on living in this world has, by that very deed, not only forfeited the good things of God, but has guaranteed he will lose what he has valued.

As might be expected, this is not a highly-treasured saying in these days. Much of the religion that is being declared and embraced by the people is nothing more than a practical denial of what Jesus has plainly declared. The love of ones life in this world is actually being promoted by those professing to have embraced Christ. How ironical! The very thing Jesus has forbidden is now being embraced in His name, with purely self interests being promoted in the Christian community! In this kind of environment, Paul’s response has a different sound than it did to the Ephesian elders.

It is one thing to state this as a requirement, and quite another to testify that is actually the experience of the individual believer. A complicating factor is that we are living in the midst of a religious culture that stresses what “we ought to be,” yet bears little witness to the realization of those “ought to’s.” We do not often hear testimonies of those in whom the words of Jesus are actually being fulfilled. Also, a higher worth is placed on stating what ought to be done than on the testimony that it is being done in the individual. At this time, it is actually considered virtuous and common for a professed believer to say they are struggling with the very things Jesus forbids. In other words, we are living in a kind of plastic society where what is perceived as necessary is repeated, but is not incorporated in the fabric of life itself. The imagined virtues of repeating what is required, then saying that is accepted as truth, is presented as though it justifies living in contradiction of the Word of God. It is never right to be textually correct but morally wrong.

By not counting his life dear unto himself, Paul is placing the priority upon doing the will of God – no matter what it costs, or regardless of the course that is set before him. It is this factor – that “no-matter-what-it-costs” factor – that separates real disciples from mere pretenders.

THAT I MIGHT FINISH MY COURSE

“ . . . so that I might finish my course with joy . . .” Other versions read, “finish my race with joy,” NKJV “complete the task,” NIV “accomplish my course,” RSV “see the work complete,” BBE “consummate my course,” DOUAY “fulfill my course,” GENEVA “finish the race I am running,” GWN “complete the mission,” NJB “finishing the work,” NLT “Doing the work assigned me,” LIVING and “run my race.” MONTGOMERY

The word “course” refers to “the course of life or of office,” THAYER “Racecourse, or place of running . . . of ones purpose in life and obligations in relation to a task,” FRIBERG “the course one follows in a race,” LOUW-NIDA and “career.” GINGRICH “Course” and “task” are not synonymous terms. Technically, the “course” is the place where the task is completed. In this case, it is a way of holiness (Isa 35:8), of self sacrifice and denial (Matt 16:24), and of humility (Col 3:12). The course is more related to the office or function than what is done within the function. In Paul’s case, the office was an apostle, and the work was opening men’s eyes, turning them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. It involved making known the mystery that had been revealed to him, all the while maintaining a strong faith, godliness, and an unfading hope. God had assigned him a lot in life that involved a certain course – just as a runner is assigned a certain course or lane to which he is confined. Even a long race, like a marathon, must be run within certain parameters, else it is not valid.

Every believer is given a course to run, which involves a work to be accomplished. Thus those in Christ Jesus are admonished, “Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God” (Heb 12:1-2).

This “course” reflects a Divine purpose or agenda that is to be embraced by the runner. Neither the course nor the objective was developed by the one who is on the course and doing the work. It was initiated by the Lord Himself, who assigned it to the individual. The aim is to finish the course, not to start it. It is to complete the race, not run a portion of it. It is to finish it in a timely manner, not wandering from the course, and spending time in matters unrelated to the course.

Paul affirms he wants to finish his course “with joy” – with a rejoicing that comes from triumph, accomplishing the work that was given to him, and being ready to give a good account of himself to the Lord.

We are living in a time when an inordinate amount of emphasis has been placed on beginning the race. Some emphasize the experiences of life along the race. Others spend the better part of their life trying to figure out where the course is, and thus do very little actual running. However, the point is to finish the race, and do it in such a manner as will bring glory to God and joy to the runner. This is precisely why the emphasis of Scripture is placed on those who are actually running the course. The primary objective is not to recruit others to run in the race, but to finish the race, accomplishing the assignment given to you. Jesus summed it up in these words: “For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work , and commanded the porter to watch” (Mark 13:34).

When Paul said he did not count his own life dear in order that he might finish his course with joy, he meant that if the course led through dangerous terrain, that is where he would go.

AND THE MINISTRY

“ . . . and the ministry, which I have received of the Lord Jesus . . .” Other versions read, “complete the task,” NIV “the work,” BBE “the task,” CJB “and the ministration,” GENEVA “the mission,” GWN “the duty,” WEYMOUTH and “service entrusted.” WILLIAMS

While on the course, there was an assignment to be completed. Unlike an ordinary race, there was an activity to be accomplished during the race itself – a race that was run on a particular course. Not only, then, was the race itself to be completed, but the assignment delivered to Paul – an assignment to be carried out during the race, which was being run on a particular and assigned course.

Not only, then, was the race itself to be completed, but the assignment delivered to Paul – an assignment to be carried out during the race, which was being run on a particular and assigned course.

The manner in which Paul lived his life was not unique to him. This is what it means to forsake all and follow Christ (Lk 14:33) – something that is required of every disciple. This is what it means to count everything but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus the Lord (Phil 3:8-15). This is what is involved in living “unto Him which died for them and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15). To put it another way, Paul wrote, “For me to live is Christ” (Phil 1:21), and again, “I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me” (Gal 2:20).

If it is true that God has “set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18), then there is a work, or ministry, that each of them has been assigned to do. While it may differ from the work of an apostle like Paul, it is headed toward the same objective, and it is to be completed, for that is why it was given.

I remember well when the psychiatrists convinced the business world that it was necessary to set short-term and long-term goals. No one had talked much about such things until the early 80's. As is generally the case, it was not long until the professed church began talking in the same jargon, parroting the ways of the world. Instead of being a light itself to the world, it was being supposedly illuminated by the world. But the taint of the world was on this “purpose-driven” goal-setting mentality. It all centered in self, and what the individual personally perceived to be the most advantageous course. Also, none of it had to do with the person's state after death, or whether to not they would be acceptable to the Lord when they stood before Him. The whole matter was earth-centric, and had nothing whatsoever to do with morality, spirituality, or the stark realities of death and judgment.

Now Paul clarifies the central purpose of life – a purpose around which everything else must revolve. God has positioned men in both time and place, in order that they might seek and Lord AND find Him. He then puts them in the body of Christ where He wants them, and gives them a particular role in that body – a role that is beneficial to the other members of the body. The aim is to grow up in the capacity assigned to them, and to finish the work they have been given to do, whatever it is. In such a case, ones personal life is not counted “dear” to himself. That is, the preservation of life on earth and the realization of earthly aims are not the central reasons for living.

All of this certainly does not doom a person to live a frustrating life where nothing personal is ever achieved. The truth of the matter is that regeneration brings one into accord with the purpose of God, so that he intentionally lives for the Lord. Along with that, the Lord cares for the individual, not merely meeting his needs, but granting him the desire of his renewed heart. The outcome is a life that is satisfying and good, one in which the person can rejoice in the Lord always, and derive benefit from all of the other members of the body who are doing the same thing.

How Can Believers Know Their Course and Ministry?

There is no revealed details concerning this matter. To my knowledge, the only insight can be gained from the Scriptural record of those who successfully ran the race set before them. Even then, sanctified reasoning must be employed to gain any understanding of the subject at all.

As with all other aspects of life in Christ Jesus, valid knowledge is always obtained within the context of living by faith and walking in the Spirit. The individual who is not actually, consciously, and deliberately living for the Lord, cannot possibly perceive any aspect of this matter. There must be regular participation in the body of Christ, for it is within the context of body-life that such things are made known.

Your placement in the body of Christ is, as I see the matter, attended with the following. I do not use the word “need” to describe something defined by the people toward whom the ministry is focused. “Need” is defined by the purpose or objective of God. It is something that is required to equip the saints for the work of the ministry, and contributes to their growth, stability and unity in the faith.

- The perception of an area of spiritual productivity.
- A desire to meet that need.
- The opportunity to meet that need.
- An enjoyment in meeting the need.
- A heart that looks for the opportunity to minister to that need,
- Proficiency in meeting the need.
- Excelling in meeting the need.

While these cannot be approached from a purely systematic point of view, the person who is living by faith and walking in the Spirit will gain acquaintance with these matters, grow in their aptitude, and be competent in the execution of the work.

TO TESTIFY OF THE GRACE OF GOD

“ . . . to testify the gospel of the grace of God.” Other versions read, “to testify solemnly,” NASB “be a witness,” BBE “to bear witness,” NJB “telling others,” NLT “proclaiming, as of supreme importance,” WEYMOUTH and “to attest to,” MONTGOMERY

Paul did not see his purpose as answering the problems of humanity, or addressing all of the ills that were among men. He was not appointed to be a consultant or advisor. Rather, he was a proclaimer. This is the principle means by which Paul would open men’s eyes, turning them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, in order that they might receive the inheritance. He would do this by the proclamation of a message. This message would not be what men perceived to be their need. Rather, it was the message of something that had already been accomplished.

This message would not be what men perceived to be their need. Rather, it was the message of something that had already been accomplished.

Paul did not come to tell men what to do to be saved – although that was involved. This was the good news of “the grace of God” – grace that had constrained God to do something. That grace, or Divine favor, had been deposited and wrapped up in the Person of Jesus Christ, for apart from Him, there can be no realization of the grace of God. That is why Jesus is declared to be “full of grace” (John 1:17). The grace is also referred to as “the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ,” by which we are “saved” (Acts 15:11). Paul referred to it as “the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man, Jesus Christ” (Rom 5:15). The last words of the Bible are, “The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.” (Rev 22:21).

Oh, the glory of a ministry that majors on proclaiming and expounding the marvelous grace of God! That message is nothing less than the Gospel of Christ, which is “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16). Where this message is not proclaimed, the power of God will not work for the salvation of men. Salvation will neither be initiated or brought to fruition independently of this message. If a message is being preached that does not focus upon the grace of God, then it is “another gospel,” and is to be rejected as soon as it is heard. Those who preach such a gospel are subject to the curse of God. As it is written, “But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed . As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed ” (Gal 1:9).

There are other messages being delivered to the people in this time. Some of them affirm that this is a time when unparalleled prosperity can be realized. Others deliver a message that centers in marriage, rearing children, and the home. Others are promoting Jewish concepts, restoring the three major feasts of the Jews. Still others are proclaiming a message that centers in the keeping of the Sabbath day. Paul’s core message – the message from which all of his teaching sprang – was “the gospel of the grace of God.” Whatever he taught was brought back to that central theme. If he addressed the matter of morality, it associated it with what God’s grace has accomplished (1 Cor 6:19-20). If it was gathering an offering for the poor saints in Jerusalem, he connected it with the grace of God (2 Cor 8:9). The conduct of brethren toward one another was also related to this message of the grace of God (Rom 15:7).

This is the only message that addresses every aspect of life, and is inherently efficient and productive – from heaven’s point of view. It is imperative that this be seen.

PAUL’S LAST MEETING WITH THE BRETHREN FROM EPHESUS

“ 25 And now, behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.”

Paul now breaks the news to the Ephesian elders of something that he knows. The source of this knowledge can only have come from the Head of the church. Precisely how it was made known to him, we do not know. However, he is aware of the fact that this is the beginning of the end of his course. His ministry will soon come to a conclusion, as will be attested by the remainder of Luke’s record.

As he approaches the end of his ministry, and consequently the end of his life, he will run at full speed, sprinting, as it were, to the finish line. Luke records the following activities of Paul.

- Landed in Tyre, tarrying there seven days. There the disciples told Paul he should not go up to Jerusalem (21:3-5).
- Came to Ptolemais and saluted the brethren there, remaining for one day (21:6-7).
- Came to Caesarea where they remained with Philip the evangelist many days. Agabus warns Paul that he would be bound and delivered to the Gentiles in Jerusalem (21:8-14).
- They went to Jerusalem, and were gladly received by the disciples. Paul reported to them what God had wrought through him among the Gentiles(21:15-20a). As he approaches the end of his ministry, and consequently the end of his life, he will run at
- James tells Paul that many of Jews had heard he was telling the Jews to forsake Moses and not to circumcise their children. He then gave him some particular advise that would confirm this was not an accurate report (21:20b-26).
- The Jews, seeing Paul in the Temple, stirred up the people against him. They came and removed Paul from the Temple, determined to kill him. The chief of the military guard heard there was an uproar in Jerusalem and rescued Paul (21:27-32).
- The guard put Paul in chains and inquired who he was and what he had done. (21:32-39).
- Paul is allowed to make his defense before the people, causing great anger among them (21:39-22:23).

- Upon learning that Paul was a Roman, the official refused to beat him, or examine him by scouring, He presented Paul to the Jewish council to make a defense of himself. He was eventually released (22:24-23:10).

- The night following the Lord stood by Paul and assured him that just as he had given witness in Jerusalem, so he would bear witness of Jesus in Rome also (23:11).

- Paul is protected by the Romans, and sent to Felix the Governor (23:11-24:26).

- Paul is kept in prison for two years, until he is presented to Festus. It was during this time that Paul appealed to Caesar, and Festus consented to the arrangement (24:27-25-12).

- Paul gives an account in Caesarea before Agrippas (25:13-26:32).

- Paul begins his voyage to Rome, is shipwrecked on the isle of Melita, and, after many days, resumed the journey to Rome (27:1-28:13).

- Arriving at Puteoli, brethren were found, and Paul is permitted to remain with them for seven days (28:14).

- Upon resuming their journey, certain brethren from heard of them, and came to meet them, bringing great encouragement to him (28:14-16).

- Paul calls the chief of the Jews together, and presents a defense to them, a day being appointed for him to do so (28:17-29).

- Paul dwells two years in his own rented house, teaching all who came to him those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ (28:30-31).

- While the details are not supplied, Paul was martyred at the conclusion of this period. He was in a state of readiness to depart, having finished his work and kept to the course. In his own words, written during this period, he said: "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing" (2 Tim 4:6-8),

Thus we see the manner in which Paul concluded his life. During the remainder of the book four full years are accounted for, during which he was a prisoner. He was confined in Caesarea for two years, and in his own hired house, as an official prisoner of Rome, for two years. All of his activity pertained to the Kingdom. The two groups of people to which he spoke were the Jews and the brethren in Christ Jesus. A lot of preaching was done in his defenses before the Jews, and before political rulers.

I give this brief summary to make more clear something of the involvements in Paul finishing his course and fulfilling his ministry.

PREACHING THE KINGDOM OF GOD

“ . . . among whom I have gone, preaching the kingdom of God.” Other versions read, “preaching the kingdom,” NASB “proclaiming the kingdom,” NRSV “Whom I told about the kingdom,” GWN “Preaching the reign of God,” YLT “teaching the kingdom,” LIVING and “proclaiming the coming of the kingdom.” WEYMOUTH

Once again, the details of Paul ministry included opening men’s eyes, turning them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive the inheritance that is obtained by faith (Acts 26:18). The spiritual canopy that covered every aspect of this ministry was “the kingdom of God.” These things were not accomplished within the framework of human response, but were under “the kingdom of God.” They were not fully achieved within the framework of obedience, or knowing how and what to do, but within the framework of “the kingdom of God.” Every legitimate word and every valid human response is within the circumference of “the kingdom of God.” In other words, it is what God does that makes the real difference, not what man does. The new creation (2 Cor 5:17; Eph 2:10), being put into Christ (1 Cor 1:30), being made a partaker of Christ (Heb 3:14), being translated into His kingdom (Col 1:13), having one’s trespasses forgiven (Col 2:13), being circumcised by Christ (Col 2:11), having one’s name written in heaven (Heb 12:23), and being changed from glory to glory (2 Cor 3:18), are all traceable to Divine workings. These are things that the Lord does. Men experience them. It is certainly true that faith and obedience are to be found in men, but apart from “the kingdom of God,” neither of them is even possible.

Preaching and teaching the Kingdom of God involves declaring what the Lord has done in salvation, what He is doing, and what He will do. The matter of salvation must eventually become clear to the saved if they are to endure all things and at last land safely on that heavenly shore. The works that are to be expounded are “the wonderful works of God” (Acts 2:11). When it comes to what has been done, it is what the Lord has done that must be seen before anything else is clear (Psa 126:2-3).

Ponder the proclamation of the Kingdom of God in these revealed accomplishments.

- It is God that sent a preacher to us, by whom we have believed (Rom 10:14-15; 1 Cor 3:5).
- God gave us ears to hear (Deut 29:4; Acts 28:27; Rev 2:7).
- The Holy Spirit convicted us of sin, righteousness, and judgment (John 16:8).
- It was given to us to believe (Phil 1:29).
- It is God that granted repentance through Christ (Acts 5:31; 11:18).
- Through the Holy Spirit we confess that Jesus is Lord (1 Cor 12:3).
- The Spirit baptizes us into one body (1 Cor 12:13).
- It is God who put us into Christ (1 Cor 1:30).
- It is the Spirit who changes us (2 Cor 3:18).
- It is God who translated us into the kingdom of His dear Son (Col 1:13).
- God, through Jesus, has delivered us from this present evil world (Gal 1:4).
- In Christ, we are God’s creation (2 Cor 5:17; Eph 2:10).
- The grace of God brought us salvation (Tit 2:11).

Preaching the Kingdom of God is not merely telling people what to do, answering their questions, and resolving their difficulties. Rather, it is expounding what God Himself, through Jesus Christ, and by the Holy Spirit, has and is doing in salvation.

The grace of God teaches us to reject sinful inclinations, and to culture godliness (Tit 2:12).

- Jesus teaches us about God, confirming the nature of eternal life (1 John 5:20).
- God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself (2 Cor 5:18-20).
- The Lord keeps us from falling (Jude 1:24-25).
- The Lord preserves us to the heavenly kingdom (2 Tim 4:18).
- The Lord works in us to will and to do of His own good pleasure (Phil 2:13).
- The cutting away of the body of the sins of the flesh was accomplished by Christ

(Col 2:11-12).

- We are taught by God to love one another (1 Thess 4:9).
- God places the members in the body where it has pleased him (1 Cor 12:18).
- God has established the objective of salvation (Rom 8:29-30).
- God grants that we be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man, so that Christ can dwell in our hearts by faith (Eph 3:16-17).
- It is God who will bruise Satan under our feet (Rom 16:20).
- God causes us to triumph in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 2:14).
- God gives us the victory through Christ Jesus (1 Cor 15:57).
- It is God who will not allow us to be tempted above what we are able, but with the temptation provides a way of escape (1 Cor 10:13).
- It is Jesus who is the Captain of our salvation (Heb 2:10).
- It is Jesus who is bringing the sons to glory (Heb 2:10).

These are but a few samples of the works of the Lord, which are expressions of His Kingdom. It is the God- factor that makes salvation, salvation . Preaching the Kingdom of God is not merely telling people what to do, answering their questions, and resolving their difficulties. Rather, it is expounding what God Himself, through Jesus Christ, and by the Holy Spirit, has and is doing in salvation.

If you have experienced any measurable growth in Christ, it is largely, if not wholly, owing to a perception of the hand of the Lord in your salvation.

I spent many years in a religious system that did not expound these things. God was not at the center of the message being declared. His work was not the primary work. In fact, other than saying a few cursory things about the death of Christ, very little was actually said about what the Lord had done and is doing. The bottom line is that the Kingdom was not preached. I thank God for deliverance from that system of spiritually sterile thought – and it was a deliverance!

If you have experienced any measurable growth in Christ, it is largely, if not wholly, owing to a perception of the hand of the Lord in your salvation. Men in the grip of mere sophistry choose to argue about the Divine role in salvation. They attempt to attribute the decisive causes to men rather than to God. Such efforts are to be abandoned in favor of preaching the Kingdom of God.

Ponder what is said of this kind of preaching in Scripture.

- John the Baptist preached “the Gospel of the kingdom” (Mk 1:14), thereby preparing the way for Christ.
- Jesus preached “the Gospel of the kingdom” (Matt 4:23; 9:35; Lk 8:1).
- Jesus said, “I must preach the kingdom of God” (Lk 4:43).
- When Jesus first sent out the twelve, He told them to “preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand” (Matt 10:7; Lk 9:2).
- Jesus said “this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations” (Matt 24:14)
- Jesus said that the “law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it” (Luke 16:16).
