- The resurrection of the dead is among the principles of the doctrine of Christ. “Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead , and of eternal judgment” (Heb 6:2).

- The resurrection of the dead will precede the day of judgment. “And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them : and they were judged every man according to their works” (Rev 20:13)

A Word About Preaching and Teaching

Preaching and teaching that are not done with an acute consciousness of the resurrection of the dead will eventually go astray. If men preach and teach as though this life is the only life, or as though it was the primary or most important life, they actually push men into a helpless state. Thus it is written, “If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable” (1 Cor 15:19). If what is being declared to men in the name of Christ is not relevant in view of the resurrection of the dead, it cannot be from God. Such declarations are not to be received, honored, or in any way dignified. If men cannot make a connection between what they preach and the resurrection of the dead, then they should be not be preaching.

It is alarming how very little is being said these days concerning the resurrection of the dead. I remember a message I heard in the late 1990's by a young minister at a highly regarded preaching and teaching convention. He had been assigned the subject of the resurrection of the dead, and publicly declared that he regretted he did not have a subject with more relevancy. His statement had no apparent adverse impact on the audience. It also revealed that he had grasped very little, if any at all, of the truth of the Gospel.

It appears as though this is a very common way of thinking – that the resurrection of the dead is not germane to daily living for Christ. However, once in a while a man like the one just mentioned is ignorant enough to actually express such foolish thinking.

We know from the general condition of the churches that there is very little understood about the resurrection of the dead. The resurrection body, concerning which considerable is said in Scripture (1 Cor 15:12-37; 2 Cor 5:1-5; Phil 3:20-21), is a matter concerning which there is very little expressed interest. This is so because very little is being said about it. Contemporary issues and fads have no come to dominate what is called preaching and teaching, and the resurrection of the dead simply does not blend with such instruction.

There Is A Reason

There is a reason for the muted preaching and teaching of our day. It is not possible to capitalize on the resurrection of the dead for earthly fame, gain, or other temporal benefits. True faith moves a person to live with the aim of attaining “unto the resurrection of the dead” (Phil 3:11). That is, that the resurrection might prove to be a blessing (the resurrection of life), and not be unto cursing (the resurrection of damnation). If, when the resurrection takes place, our spirits have not been cultured for immortality, we shall be thrust from the presence of the Lord. While we were in this world, if our minds were preeminently occupied with the things of this world, there will be no place in the glory for us.

The resurrection of the dead will not transform our spirits. It has to do with our bodies. There will be no change of character at that time. If, while we were “in the body” of flesh and blood, we did not culture an appetite for God and the things of God, we will receive no such appetite at the resurrection. When the dead are raised, death will be swallowed up in victory (1 Cor 15:54). There will no longer be anything present that is dead or dying. The world shall have passed away, and everything that is in it. All temporal relationships will be gone. For those who had primary appetites for such things, the resurrection of the dead will be the commencement of unimaginable pain and regret. For the damned, all of the things they want will be gone, and yet their longing and preference for them will remain. Who is able to estimate the terror of such a condition?

Salvation Is To Be Seen Correctly

Men often view salvation with a mind for what can be realized in this world – and, indeed, there are present benefits to be realized. Lawful things include the remission of sins (1 John 1:7,9), times of refreshing (Acts 3:19; Tit 3:5), being taught to put off the old man and put on the new man (Eph 4:20-24), resisting and overcoming the devil (James 4:7; Rev 12:11), and receiving and enjoying lawful possessions and relationships (Mk 10:29-30). We have the opportunity to “do good unto all men, especially unto them which are of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10).

However, these things are only benefits in view of what takes place AFTER the passing away of the present heavens and earth. If there is no resurrection of the dead, there is no real point to forgiveness, renewal, profitable relationships, or overcoming the devil. All religion, and all attempts to be and do good are foolish and pointless if the dead are not raised. All of Divine benefits presume a conclusion to life in this world, the resurrection of the dead, and the day of judgment. Behind them all there must be a keen awareness of the fact that we will give an account of ourselves to God.

It is how you fare after the heavens and earth pass away that really matters. Your concern must be for what you will be when you are raised from the dead. It is your state after the day of judgment that should concern you. What will happen to you when Jesus comes, and you see Him as He is?

The Divine appointments of death and judgment must not be forgotten (Heb 9:27).

It is how you fare after the heavens and earth pass away that really matters. Your concern must be for what you will be when you are raised from the dead. It is your state after the day of judgment that should concern you. What will happen to you when Jesus comes, and you see Him as He is? Will you be fully conformed to His image then, or will you be targeted for “everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power” (1 Thess 1:9)? The coming of the Lord will be a time when all things are revealed.

These considerations, and more, are what move faithful men to teach through Jesus the resurrection. A lack of this awareness is what moves men to be silent about the resurrection, giving themselves to temporal matters, and things that are more pleasing to men.

THEY LAID HANDS ON THEM

“ 3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide.”

We are witnessing the outworking of the Holy Spirit being within men. Some have imagined that once you are in Christ Jesus, that circumstance alters the whole of life, so that you will have no more trouble with your enemies. Men must take care not to speculate in such a manner as to contradict the experience of holy men. Our theology must not reflect mere human perception. It must rather be in perfect harmony with the life and doctrine of Jesus, and the life and teaching of those in whom He works.

THEY LAID THEIR HANDS ON THEM

“And they laid hands on them . . . for it was now eventide.” Other versions read, “laid hands on them . . . for it was already evening,” NKJV “They seized Peter and John, and because it was evening,” NIV “they arrested them . . . for it was already evening,” NRSV “they took them . . . for it was now evening,” BBE “So the temple guards arrested them. Since it was already evening,” GWN and “So they laid hands on them (arrested them) . . . for it was already evening. AMPLIFIED

This is the first recorded persecution of Christ’s followers. It came from a collection of sinners: the religious sector (priests), the military sector (captain of the Temple), and the rationalizers (Sadducees). The priests held to corrupted religion, and were thus intimidated by the truth. The military sector saw the enthusiasm of faith as causing disruption. The rationalizers, who used human logic to interpret Scripture, saw the truth as toppling their way of thinking. These were all enemies of the faith and contradictors of truth.

These ungodly men forcibly took Peter and John, laying their hands on them. They even did so within the confines of a sacred environment. They seized and led off as prisoners [for so the words “laid hold” mean] these two holy men. In fact, they did this “as they were speaking.” NASB

These sinful men forced themselves upon Peter and John, so that, according to appearance, it looked as though they were stronger than the Apostles.

We are told that these enemies arrested Peter and John because it was late in the day. That is, things were going to be winding down in the Temple area, and they considered it too late to examine them at that time. As you know, this is a consideration that Jesus was not given. In fact, His trial was during the night.

THEY PUT THEM IN HOLD

“ . . . and put them in hold unto the next day .” Other versions read, “and put them in custody until the next day,” NKJV “and put them in jail until the next day,” NASB “and put them in ward until the morrow,” ASV “and put them in prison till the morning,” BBE “jailed them overnight,” LIVING and “put them under guard until the next day.” MKJV

As if it was not enough to forcibly seize these righteous men, this triad of wicked persons confined them over night, putting them in jail until the next day. Then, they would have more time to examine them and make a determination concerning their state. Thus the Temple discourse was cut short – or, at least, that is how it appeared.

Why? Why? Why?

How is it that chosen men, empowered by the Holy Spirit, and sent on a mission by Jesus, could be successfully opposed – at least according to appearance? How was it possible for their enemies to lay hands on them, arrest them, and place them in confinement? For those who are acquainted with the manner of the Kingdom, this is not difficult to process. However, for others who have a view of life in Christ that accents status in this world, it is more comfortable to simply ignore the whole situation.

Today we are faced with religious blusterers that speak of victory and triumph as though there really is no opposition at all. They remind us that “greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world” (John 4:4), but fail to accent how this is made known in overcoming opposition, not failing to have any of it. When the Lord asserts, “no weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper,” and “every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgement thou shalt condemn,” those conditions are not to be equated with smooth sailing and the absence of contradiction (Isa 54:17).

Jesus had prepared His disciples for the stark realities of spiritual warfare. “In the world ye shall have tribulation : but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world” (John 16:33). And again, “But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you , delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons , being brought before kings and rulers for My name's sake” (Luke 21:12). Now, the opposition begins. You will sense from the text that it does not surprise the apostles, nor are they hesitant to know what to do.

OUR REAL CONDITION

When men are saved, God has “delivered from the power of darkness, and translated . . . into the kingdom of His dear Son” (Col 1:13). However, until they die, or Jesus returns, they remain in the very world from which they have been delivered, even though they are separate from it. Their deliverance is seen in the change wrought in their character and the spiritual fellowship they have with Christ in the heavenly places (1 Cor 1:9; Eph 2:6). Yet, because they remain “in the body,” they are also in the presence of the ungodly. That circumstance sets the stage for opposition, suffering, and even persecution.

The world senses the enmity that exists between the redeemed and themselves, and therefore they lash out against them. The measure of the opposition will be as strong as the believer’s insistence on maintaining his walk with the Lord. It will erupt to the extent that the believer declares the truth. While the opposition may take different forms, and vary in its intensity, it will always be present. Light and darkness cannot avoid each other.

IN SPITE OF THE LEADERS, MANY BELIEVED ANYWAY

“ 4 Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand.”

Now, we will see if the opposition of men can cause the Word of God itself to cease to be effective. Can opposing the proclamation of the Gospel cause those with an ear for hearing to no longer profit from that word.

HOWBEIT

“Howbeit . . .” Other versions read, “ However ,” NKJV “But,” NASB “How be it,” TNT “and,” YLT and “ Nevertheless ,” PHILLIPS

“Howbeit” is like the flip side of the coin of Kingdom work. On the one side, there is aggressive opposition from those who have not received the love of the truth. On the other side, the Word does its work in the hearts of those who have received the love of the truth.

The working of the Lord continued just as though no opposition was present.

MANY WHICH HEARD THE WORD BELIEVED

“ . . . many of them which heard the word believed . . .” Other versions read, “many of those who heard the message believed,” NASB “a number of those who gave hearing to the word had faith ,” BBE “many of those who had heard the message became believers , GWN “many of those who heard the word came to believe ,” NAB “many of those who had listened to the message believed,” NIB “many of the people who heard their message believed it ,” NLT “many of the people who heard Peter and John preach believed the things that they said ,” IE and “many of those who heard the message believed (adhered to and trusted in and relied on Jesus as the Christ).” AMPLIFIED

Even though the Temple authorities were grieved by what Peter and John were preaching, many who heard their words were pleased with them and believed. The word “howbeit” indicates that the believing came after the confrontation with the priests, captain of the Temple, and Sadducees. That is, the rift with the religious authorities had no impact upon the people. They had a higher regard for the Gospel they had heard than for the officials who were opposed to it. The Temple authorities were offended by what Peter and John said, but the multitude was not. Here the word of Jesus was being fulfilled: “And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in Me” (Matt 11:6).

It is possible for the Gospel that is preached to be so marvelous that those who believe it will not be turned aside by the enemies of the faith. There are gospels – other gospels (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6) – that are not so characterized. They do not offer something that is transcendent to all that is in the world.

The Word Is Not Bound

Here is a wonderful example of the prevailing condition stated by Paul: “Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound ” (2 Tim 2:9). This is why Paul could say to the Philippians, “both in my bonds, and in the defense and confirmation of the gospel, ye all are partakers of my grace” (Phil 1:7).

Do you have something from God – a word from God, an insight, an understanding of the Gospel? Do not become discouraged if you face opponents, or those who attempt to curtail your influence. The word of God is “not bound,” and as you speak it boldly, it will yield results. God Himself has declared, “So shall My word be that goeth forth out of My mouth: it shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it” (Isa 55:11).

Also, if faith comes “by hearing” (Rom 10:17), then Deity must be involved in the process, else no such statement could be made. There can be no such guarantees on something that is wholly of man and through man. Because the circumstances of man himself are uncertain, everything he says and does obtain the same characteristics. The only way to avoid this fluctuation and uncertainty is for the deeds to be “wrought in God” (John 3:21). That is, if God is actually in the matter, His influence in it makes it certain. This is why “faith COMETH by hearing” – not that it may come, or is possible to so come, but that is actually does. It is the God-factor that makes this true.

Faith does not “come” according to some law of automation, or some impersonal principle. In the Kingdom of God, this is true of everything that is effective. God has not set certain principles in motion that automatically function when certain criteria are met. Men who represent the things of God as though this was the case have not told the truth. Take, for example, the matter of sowing and reaping – something that is being greatly corrupted in contemporary Christianity (which expression is really a misnomer).

Sowing and Reaping

Some declare that if you sow this or that, it will yield an increase – no matter who you are. This is a law that God has set in motion, they affirm, and it cannot fail. They have forgotten that it is written, “Thou shalt sow, but thou shalt not reap; thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil; and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine” (Micah 6:15). And again it is written, “And your strength shall be spent in vain: for your land shall not yield her increase, neither shall the trees of the land yield their fruits” (Lev 26:20). Again, it is possible to reap something you did not sow: “They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns” (Jer 12:13). One can also sow a lot, but bring in little, or store an abundant harvest in a place where it deteriorates and wastes away: “Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes” (Hag 1:6).

There are other factors entering into the equation that lie between sowing and reaping. Those factors relate personally to God Himself. First, the seed must be watered, or nurtured. Something must be done that assists the seed to do its work. Too, reaping does not come according to a law or principle, but according to the Living God. Here is how Paul stated it. “I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase. So then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase” (1 Cor 3:6-7).

In our text, Peter and John both planted and watered. They planted the seed of the Gospel – things that were accomplished prior to their time. They watered that seed by interpreting what had happened before them, exhorting the people to act, and setting before them the promises of God.

Kingdom benefits cannot be realized without the planting of Kingdom seed. Such things as the blotting out of sin, times of refreshing, and the sending of Jesus will not be experienced if the Gospel is not preached. Men are not brought to a liberating knowledge of the truth (John 8:32) without the truth actually being proclaimed. Religious tradition cannot produce “repentance unto life” (Acts 11:18). The wisdom of men cannot induce people to believe “unto the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:39). Cunningly devised fables cannot move men to “call upon the name of the Lord” (Acts 2:21).

Additionally, there is no way for a man of God to “water,” or nurture, humanly devised seed. Spiritual watering cannot be directed to the seed of traditional and lifeless religion. The principles of a religious movement cannot be watered with Scripture. Psychological appeals cannot be strengthened so that a person will believe the Gospel and call upon the name of the Lord. As rudimentary as these things may appear, they are not generally acknowledged.

From beginning to end, “Salvation is of the Lord” (Jonah 2:9; Psa 37:39). It is said to belong to the Lord (Psa 3:8). He is therefore referred to as “the God of salvation” (Psa 68:20). Because salvation is appropriately called an “everlasting salvation” (Isa 45:17), it can in no way be accomplished by “man, whose breath is in his nostrils” (Isa 2:22). It is God who begins the work, and it is God who will perform it “unto the day of Christ” (Phil 16). Faith itself has an “Author” and a “Finisher” as well – the Lord Jesus Christ (Heb 12:2).

Now, increase will come – a harvest that will spring from the seed that was sown and watered. In this record, we are to take due note of the means the Lord used to bring the people to believe. The words that Peter declared are the means.

ABOUT FIVE THOUSAND

“ . . . and the number of the men was about five thousand.” Other versions read, “the number of men came to about five thousand,” NKJV “the number of men grew to about five thousand,” NIV “and they numbered about five thousand,” NRSV “the number of the men came to be about five thousand,” ASV “they were now about five thousand,” BBE “and the number of the men had become about five thousand,” DARBY “and the number of the men was made five thousand,” DOUAY “and the number of the men was about five thousand,” GENEVA “so the number of men who believed grew to about 5,000,” GWN “ they were , in number, about five thousand men,” MRD “the total number of men had now risen to something like five thousand,” NJB “so the number of believers now totaled about 5,000 men, not counting women and children ,” NLT “and the number of the men was about five thousand,” TNT “There were about 5,000 men in the group of believers ,” IE “the number of adult men had now grown to be about 5,000,” WEYMOUTH “ their number grew and came to about 5,000,” AMPLIFIED and “the number of men alone rose to about five thousand.” PHILLIPS

There are two ways of viewing this count, and the commentators are by no means in agreement on it. First, this could be the number of men who believed on this occasion. Second, it could be a summation of all believers up to this point.

There are occasions in the book of Acts when the growth in the number of total disciples is the point: “the number of disciples was multiplied . . . the number of disciples multiplied greatly in Jerusalem . . . “so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily” (6:1,7; 16:5). There are other times when it is simply said that many believed, but no number is specified: “ many believed in the Lord . . . a great number believed . . . a great multitude both of Jews and also of Greeks believed . . . as many as were ordained unto eternal life believed . . . And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude , and of the chief women not a few . . . many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized . . . and many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds” (9:42; 11:21; 13:46; 14:1; 17:4; 18:8; 19:16).

It is not the manner of Luke to provide a running total of believers, and there is no reason to suppose that he is doing so in this text. We have done no violence to the text by taking it to mean that the number of those believing on this occasion was five thousand.

It is not beyond reason to say that at this early stage of the work eight thousand men had believed the Gospel. It is as though Jerusalem was invaded with the Gospel – and to date, according to the record, it had only been formally declared in a “house” on the day of Pentecost, and in the Temple.

We must not read this text through institutional eyes, supposing that an invitation was offered at the conclusion of Peter’s discourse. We know they entered into the Temple at “the hour of prayer.” That was “the ninth hour,” or three o’clock in the afternoon (Acts 3:1). At the time they were arrested it was “eventide,” considered to be after the sun set. McCLINTOK-STRONG At the earliest, therefore, the arrest took place at 6:00 PM. There is reason to believe it could even have been later, after darkness was beginning to settle over the land. Peter and John had been speaking for a minimum of about three hours, possibly more. During this time, around 5,000 men believed what they were preaching. They did not change their minds when Peter and John were arrested.

It is not beyond reason to say that at this early stage of the work eight thousand men had believed the Gospel. It is as though Jerusalem was invaded with the Gospel – and to date, according to the record, it had only been formally declared in a “house” on the day of Pentecost, and in the Temple. Years later James will draw Paul’s attention to the great number of Jews in Jerusalem who had believed. “Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe; and they are all zealous of the law” (Acts 21:20). The word translated “ many thousands” is an indefinite number similar to our word “myriad.” It is translated “innumerable company” in Hebrews 12:22, and “ten thousands” in Jude 1:14).

I do not want to leave this point without accenting the remarkable and refreshing growth of the body of Christ throughout the book of Acts. It is a phenomenon that testifies to the power of the Gospel of Christ, and the nature of salvation as well. It is worthy of our attention.

- “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls ” (Acts 2:41).
- “And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved” (Acts 2:47).
- “Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed; and the number of the men was about five thousand ” (Acts 4:4).
- “And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women)” (Acts 5:14).
- “And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied . . . ” (Acts 6:1).
- “And the word of God increased ; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly ; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith ” (Acts 6:7).
- “But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women ” (Acts 8:12).
- “Then had the churches rest throughout all Judaea and Galilee and Samaria, and were edified; and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied ” (Acts 9:31).
- “And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord ” (Acts 11:21).
- “For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith: and much people was added unto the Lord ” (Acts 11:24).
- “But the word of God grew and multiplied ” (Acts 12:24).
- “And when the Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed . And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region ” (Acts 13:48-49).
- “And so were the churches established in the faith, and increased in number daily” (Acts 16:5).
- “And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds. Many of them also which used curious arts brought their books together, and burned them before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed ” (Acts 19:18-20).

Why Did This Occur?

What was the reason for this remarkable burst of spiritual life? Is this something intended only to characterize the beginning of the church? Is it something that, by its very nature, would eventually wane? In the New Covenant is spiritual life at its strongest at the beginning? Is there anything about salvation that places the stress upon its start? Are spiritual beginnings noted for their largeness, only to be followed by decline and dissipation?

I must acknowledge that this is the nature of religious movements. They are their best in their beginning, but tend to diminish in both power and content. But that is not the subject of discussion here. In the book of Acts we are dealing with real beginnings, not fabled or traditional ones. The prophets foretold a this day of salvation as involving a Kingdom that would continue to increase. They did not make the slightest suggestion that it would be characterized by diminishment.

- “Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this” (Isa 9:7).

- “Ask of Me, and I shall give Thee the heathen for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession” (Psa 2:8).

- “He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth . They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and His enemies shall lick the dust. The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall bring presents : the kings of Sheba and Seba shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before Him: all nations shall serve Him ” (Psa 72:8-11).

- “And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever ” (Dan 2:44).

The beginning of this Kingdom revealed its nature, or character. It would not wax and wane. Wherever its seed was sown, God would bring results.

Jesus also confirmed it was the nature of the Kingdom to grow – to advance and to increase .

As soon as men attempt to mingle that Gospel with human wisdom, ignoble motives, and institutional objectives, the power is removed, and the results are not as they are in this text.

“The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs , and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof” (Matt 13:31-32).

- “The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened ” (Matt 13:33).

Add to this the increasing nature of spiritual life. Those in Christ are “being transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another” NRSV (2 Cor 3:18). Speaking of the era of the New Covenant, the Psalmist wrote, “They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God” (Psa 84:7). The strength of those who wait upon the Lord is renewed, not depleted (Isa 40:31).

All of this contradicts the notion that the life of the church itself, or the power of the Gospel, tends to degenerate. I do not know how a person could substantiate the view that the church began strong, and the Gospel was unusually effective at first, only to have things decline to an imagined state of normalcy after some time.

If there is a difference in the apparent success of preaching today, it cannot be owing to the nature of the Gospel or the manner in which the Lord works through that Gospel. It is not possible that those things could change!

By “institutionalism,” I mean a lifeless approach to religion that relies upon human organization, rules, and regulations. Today, the power of religion is thought to be in its external structure and hierarchical authority. It is characterized by form without power, and does not require the involvement of the heart.

Institutionalism has greatly impacted how men think about the power of the Gospel. Because God is left out of the reasoning process, men overlook what the Gospel can do. The whole city of Samaria, for example, gave heed to the preaching of Philip “with one accord” (Acts 8:5-8). All of this happened with opponents, adversaries, and even persecution. Yet, because the message was pure, and those delivering it were holy, it yielded great increase.

It is good for us to behold what takes place among believers and opponents when the pure Gospel is preached. As soon as men attempt to mingle that Gospel with human wisdom, ignoble motives, and institutional objectives, the power is removed, and the results are not as they are in this text. When men “turn away their ears from the truth,” embracing “fables,” they also abandon its power (2 Tim 4:4). When “after their own lusts,” they “heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears,” the work of God will no longer be done among them (2 Tim 4:3). Then, truth will fall in the streets, and integrity will not be able to enter (Isa 59:14).

The Identity of the People

Note how these people are identified: “many of them which heard the word believed.” This was not a preliminary, or preparatory activity, for a count was taken of them. This would not be acceptable language among many professing Christians. On the day of Pentecost it was stated, “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls” (Acts 2:41). Here, however, “believed” describes the response of the people. It is a precise, accurate and comprehensive description of the people.

Peter had previously told these people, “Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you” (Acts 3:19-20). By saying the people “believed,” we are to understand that they did what Peter had commanded them to do.

However, within the average American and European church, people are not noted for being “believers” – firmly convinced of the Person of Christ, and cleaving to Him with purpose of heart. The obedience that was characteristic of believers in Scripture is not all characteristic of contemporary Christians.

The word “believed” is not descriptive of a step in a procedure or plan. It rather depicts a response in which the message is heartily embraced. In such a case, the individual is eager to do whatever the Lord requires, and always does so.

The word “believed” is used to describe those who became aligned with the Lord Jesus Christ.

- “And all that believed were together, and had all things common” (Acts 2:44).
- “Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed ; and the number of the men was about five thousand” (Acts 4:4).
- “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common” (Acts 4:32).
- “But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women” (Acts 8:12).

- “And it was known throughout all Joppa; and many believed in the Lord” (Acts 9:42).
- “Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?” (Acts 11:17).
- “And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord” (Acts 11:21).
- “And it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed” (Acts 14:1).
- “And when they had ordained them elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they believed” (Acts 14:23).
- “And some of them believed, and consorted with Paul and Silas; and of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women not a few” (Acts 17:4).
- “Therefore many of them believed; also of honorable women which were Greeks, and of men, not a few” (Acts 17:12).
- “Howbeit certain men clave unto him, and believed: among the which was Dionysius the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them” (Acts 17:34).
- “And Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized” (Acts 18:8).
- “And many that believed came, and confessed, and showed their deeds” (Acts 19:18).

Those in Christ are also referred to as “believers” (Acts 5:14; 1 Tim 4:12).

Why Mention This?

This is so elementary some might wonder why I have mentioned it at all. However, within the average American and European church, people are not noted for being “believers” – firmly convinced of the Person of Christ, and cleaving to Him with purpose of heart. The obedience that was characteristic of believers in Scripture is not all characteristic of contemporary Christians. It is not evident in their lives or their assemblies. Further, it does not appear that there are many efforts being expended to produce believers and strengthen faith.

By its very nature a law-mentality is opposed to believing, for “the law is not of faith,” or, “is not based upon faith” NIV (Gal 3:12). Wherever there is a reliance upon rules and procedures, there is an abrasiveness to anything that requires or promotes faith. A system of thought that does not require faith will not allow the one embracing it to live by faith. Such a posture becomes impossible.

Also, this unacceptable condition exists wherever there is reliance upon human wisdom. In such a case, there is no perceived need for much of the word of God, or assemblies devoted to the edification of the saints. That, in my judgment, is the primary reason for the great difference between the preaching and responses in the book of Acts and our times. In Acts, there was a very real unity of the people with the Christ. Through the Spirit, they were in Christ, and Christ was in them.

THE OPPONENTS GATHER TOGETHER

“ 5 And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes, 6 And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.”

Now, in a remarkable display of unity, the wicked join together to oppose the truth of Christ and those who are proclaiming it. However, as Solomon well said, “Though hand join in hand, the wicked shall not be unpunished: but the seed of the righteous shall be delivered” (Prov 11:21). We will see how their efforts will fall, and whether or not they will be able to stop the spread of the Gospel.

The nature of the flesh is to gather the wicked together against the things of God. However, the amalgamation of the wicked can never remove the truth of God from a people or society. If truth falls in the street, or fails (Isa 59:14-15), it will not be because of its enemies! Such a condition can only come if those responsible for carrying the truth cease to do so, no longer being “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15). No law can effectively cause the Gospel to cease to be preached, or prayer to be made. It is only when the professing church becomes weak and emaciated that it will become powerless. Our text will confirm that this is the case.

The answer to a godless society is not Christian politicians, for government has not been charged with the dissemination of the truth of God. There is certainly nothing wrong with rallying Christians to vote for noble causes and good men. However, if the church remains in a weakened, ignorant, and lifeless state, it is all for nought. Government cannot compensate for that.

THEIR RULERS, AND ELDERS, AND SCRIBES

“And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes . . .” Other versions read, “rulers, elders, and teachers of the Law,” NIV “rulers and those in authority and the scribes,” BBE “their princes, and ancients, and scribes,” DOUAY “the Jewish rulers, leaders, and scribes,” GWN “their rulers, elders, and experts in the law,” NET “the council of all the rulers and elders and teachers of religious law,” NLT “the leading members of the council, the elders, and the scribes,” WILLIAMS “their magistrates and elders and scribes,” AMPLIFIED and “members of the council, the elders and scribes.” PHILLIPS

These three classes composed the Sanhedrin, ROBERTSON This was “the supreme council of the Jewish nation in and before the time of Christ.” McCLINTOK & STRONG The basis for its formation is said to be Numbers 11:16. “And the LORD said unto Moses, Gather unto me seventy men of the elders of Israel, whom thou knowest to be the elders of the people, and officers over them; and bring them unto the tabernacle of the congregation, that they may stand there with thee.” The members of the Sanhedrin, seventy in number, represented three classes of people: priests (24), elders (24), and scribes (22). The priests had expertise in holy procedures and the Temple activities. The elders were noted for their godly wisdom. The scribes were noted for their expertise in the Law and its application.

SANHEDRIN QUALIFICATIONS

The qualifications for membership were both very minute and very numerous. The applicant had to be morally and physically blameless. He had to be middle aged, tall, good looking, wealthy, learned (both in the divine law and diverse branches of profane science, such as medicine, mathematics, astronomy, magic, idolatry, etc.), in order that he might be able to judge in these matters. He was required to know several languages, so that the Sanhedrin might not be dependent upon an interpreter in case any foreigner or foreign question came before them (Menachoth, 65 a; Sanhedrin, 17 a; Maimonides, Iad Ha-Chezaka, Hilchoth Sanhedrin, 2, 1-8).

McCLINTOK & STRONGS CYCLOPEDIA

This group of people is frequently referred to as a gathering of the priests, elders, and scribes (Matthew 26:3, 57, 59; 27:41; Mark 8:31; 11:27; 14:43; Luke 9:22; 20:1; 22:66; Acts 5:1; 6:12; 22:30; 25:15). It is also referred to as “the council” (Matt 26:59; Acts 4:15; ; 5:21,27, 34; 6:12,15).

With all of its deficiencies, it ought to be noted that wisdom and Scriptural expertise was required in this body of people. There seemed to be an overriding awareness that there was a unique body of knowledge within the Old Covenant Scriptures and ceremonies. Although that knowledge was greatly corrupted by the leaders, it represents a perspective that has been largely lost in the modern church.

ANNAS, CAIAPHAS, JOHN, AND ALEXANDER

“ 6 And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander . . . ” Other versions read, and “with Annas the high priest, Caiaphas, Jonathan, Alexander.” NJB

Annas and Caiaphas

Annas was the father-in-law of Caiaphas (John 18:13), and was the previous high priest. Their tenure as high priests overlapped, as confirmed by Luke 3:2: “Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests.” Caiaphas was considered to be the official high priest (Matt 26:3,57; John 11:49). When Jesus was placed on trial, Annas, the outgoing high priest, had sent Him bound to Caiaphas, the new high priest (John 18:24).

John and Alexander

We are not told any more of these two men. It is certain that they were Jews, being member of the Jewish high council. Some commentators identify them as two rabbis, or teachers of the law, that were prominent among the people at that time. The Scriptures, however, provide no further details concerning them.

However, there is something to be seen here. It is as though the Holy Spirit is confirming that this council, together with all of its members, was duly noted in the heavens. They shall all appear before the judgment seat of Christ to give an account for their involvement in this event.

AS MANY AS WERE KINDRED OF THE HIGH PRIEST

“ . . . and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest . . . ” Other

Once again, I want to emphasize the hostility that exists between the Spirit and the flesh, between truth and error, and between believers and unbelievers . . . Whatever causes a person to be an enmity with God also produces hostility against His people.

versions read, “as many as were of the family of the high priest,” NKJV “and all who were of high-priestly descent,” NASB “and other man of the high priest’s family,” NIV “and all the relations of the high priest,” BBE “the rest of the chief priest’s family were present,” GWN “all who were of the high-priestly class,” NAB “all who were of high-priestly descent,” NAU “all the members of the high-priestly families,” NJB “everyone from the high priest’s family was there,” IE and “all others who belonged to the high priestly relationship.” AMPLIFIED

This is a continued explanation of those who made up the categories of priests, elders, and scribes. It particularly expands on “the priests,” identifying them as being chosen from among the relatives of the high priests, Annas and Caiaphas. As was characteristic under the Old Covenant, fleshly lineage was of great significance. Under Christ, however, it counts for nothing.

GATHERED TOGETHER AT JERUSALEM

“ . . . were gathered together at Jerusalem.” Other versions read, “met in Jerusalem,” NIV “assembled in Jerusalem,” NRSV “came together in Jerusalem,” BBE “assembled,” MRD and “held a meeting in Jerusalem.” NJB

It is apparent from the text that this meeting was called especially to deal with Peter and John. This is no doubt why those who arrested Peter and John put them in jail overnight, waiting until this group convened. They thought nothing of the comfort of Peter and John, but thought only of their own convenience. Flesh thinks like that.

Some of these people, if not all of them, had probably been among “the rulers” who had “gathered together against the Lord and His Christ” (Acts 4:26-27). At that time, they had fulfilled the second Psalm: “Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us” (Psa 2:3). Their gathering had been in vain at that time, and it would be the same on this occasion.

Once again, I want to emphasize the hostility that exists between the Spirit and the flesh, between truth and error, and between believers and unbelievers. Paul stated the case well when he wrote, “for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols?” (2 Cor 6:14-16).

Whatever causes a person to be an enemy with God also produces hostility against His people.

BY WHAT POWER OF NAME HAVE YOU DONE THIS?

“ 7 And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this? ”

With the Jewish council now convened, Peter and John will be questioned as though they were inferior to their judges. Their critics will present themselves as having authority over the situation.

THEY SET THEM IN THE MIDST

“And when they had set them in the midst . . .” Other versions read, “ placed them in the center,” NASB “had Peter and John brought before them,” NIV “ made the prisoners stand in their midst,” NRSV “sending for Peter and John,” BBE “after they had Peter and John stand before them,” CSB “they made Peter and John stand in front of them,” GWN “brought them into their presence,” NAB “made the prisoners stand in the middle ,” NJB “ brought in the two disciples,” NLT and “They had the apostles brought in to stand before them.” PHILLIPS

This group had convened to examine Peter and John, and now they have them brought before the council. This is what they did to Jesus Himself (Lk 22:54). Later they would do the same thing to Stephen (Acts 6:12). There were some in the church at Corinth that dared to examine Paul (1 Cor 9:3). Jeremiah was brought before Pashue, chief governor in the house of the Lord, as though Jeremiah was subject to him (Jer 20:1-3).

The language speaks of a vigorous interrogation, not the asking of a few casual questions. Further, there is a sense in which what they are asking is not honest. They are seeking an occasion to condemn, and do not have so much as a spark of interest in the truth.

Speaking of this kind of phenomenon Paul once wrote, “For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men” (1 Cor 4:9). Jesus did not choose the apostles and endue them with power in order that they might become famous, or be approved of men. Those who seek a career in religion must take this into consideration. In Christ, the ministry is not about obtaining financial security and becoming a celebrity of some sort. Those who faithfully serve the Lord might very well find themselves brought before the tribunals of men, and treated as though they were subject to institutional assessments.

Referring to the frequent reaction of religious men to his labors, Paul wrote, “And labor, working with our own hands: being reviled , we bless; being persecuted , we suffer it: Being defamed , we entreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day ” (1 Cor 4:12-13). Paul alluded to a statement made by Jeremiah: “Thou hast made us as the offscouring and refuse in the midst of the people” (Lam 3:45). Jeremiah referred to the punishment of Israel for walking in their own sinful ways. Paul was speaking of the effect of his ministry and message upon Jewish leaders.

In our text Peter and John are being treated as though they were the “filth of the world,” having dared to come into the Temple area preaching a Christ-centered message, and doing works to which the leaders were not accustomed. It will appear on the surface as though they had no power at all, even though they had just healed a man who was crippled from his mother’s womb.

Among other things, this confirms that God does not give power to men in order to get the attention of people or break down hostilities against the truth. Heaven’s intent is the promotion of the glory of God, and the exposition of the Lord Jesus Christ. Where men entertain little or no interest in either of these, Christ’s co-laborers will be viewed as intruders, and enemies of the religious systems that have been embraced.

THEY ASKED

“ . . . they asked . . . ” Other versions read, “they began to inquire,” NASB “ began to question them,” NIV “they asked the question,” CSB “they interrogated them,” MRD “ questioned them,” NAB “ began to interrogate them,” NJB “ demanded ,” NLT “they were inquiring ,” YLT “the Council demanded ,” LIVING “asked them again and again ,” IE “began asking ,” ISV “repeatedly inquired of them,” WILLIAMS “ repeatedly demanded,” AMPLIFIED and “they asked them formally .” PHILLIPS

The language speaks of a vigorous interrogation, not the asking of a few casual questions. Further, there is a sense in which what they are asking is not honest. They are seeking an occasion to condemn, and do not have so much as a spark of interest in the truth.

The hypocrisy of this council will be seen in the questions that they ask. The Temple authorities were grieved because Peter and John “taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead” (Acts 4:2). That is what occasioned this whole event. Yet, they will not ask a word about the resurrection of Christ, or the resurrection of the dead – not a word.

BY WHAT POWER?

“By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?” Other versions read, “By what power, or by whose authority have you done this,” LIVING “ How did you make this crippled man well? What name did you use? By whose authority did you do this?” IE “By what sort of power and authority have you done this?” WILLIAMS “By what sort of power or by what kind of authority did [such people as] you do this [healing]?” AMPLIFIED ““How did you do this? What power do you have or whose name did you use?” GNB and “By what sort of power, or by what sort of name did you do this?” LITV

Keep in mind that this event was preceded by approximately three and a half years of Christ’s ministry. It was one in which He was “approved of God” among them “by miracles and wonders and signs” (Acts 2:22). Jesus had gone about “doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). Jesus ministry was public – in the Temple, in the synagogues, and among the people. Himself a Pharisee, Nicodemus had told Jesus “no man can do these miracles that Thou doest except God be with Him” (John 3:2). Great multitudes had followed Jesus “because they saw His miracles which He did on them that were diseased” (John 6:2). During Jesus’ ministry, the chief priests and the Pharisees gathered in a council, “and said, What do we? for this man doeth many miracles ” (John 11:47). Yet now, they speak as though they had never been privy to a miracle such as the one wrought by Peter and John.

The issue here was really not the miracle. This is only a subterfuge. Peter and John have broke with religious convention, and it has upset those who did not have faith. It will become evident that these men have no interest in the man upon whom this miracle was wrought. They have not been relieved to see the oppressed liberated. They did not welcome his praise in the Temple courts. They found not one spark of delight in the earnest inquiry of the multitude, and were even agitated that they had dared to believe in the Temple courts.

They did not deny that a mighty work had been done. The “this” to which they refer is the healing of the lame man. They did not even insinuate that there was anything fake about it. This was a real healing, and they knew it.

When Jesus was among men, no doubt some of the very ones who were interrogating Peter and John, He was charged with doing miracles through the power of Satan. “But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils” (Matt 12:24). And again, “But some of them said, He casteth out devils through Beelzebub the chief of the devils” (Luke 11:15). They could not deny that a mighty work had been done, so they sought to associate it with an evil source.

By what Power?

A similar inquiry was made of Jesus by the chief priests and elders, who also asked the question when Jesus was teaching the people. “By what authority doest Thou these things? and who gave Thee this authority?” (Matt 21:23). Jesus exposed their hypocrisy by refusing to answer their question. “And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell Me, I in like wise will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; He will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet. And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And He said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things ” (Matt 21:24-27).

The very asking of this question confirmed that the Jewish leaders could not merely dismiss the healing of the lame man as though it did not occur. Later these very men will observe, “What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it ” (Acts 4:16). That is why they did not question the reality of the work. They rather asked about the power and authority through which this work was done.

These men knew the authority had not come from them, and yet they assumed that all rights to teach the people should originate with them. They could not accept an authority outside of their own. I do not doubt that they were seeking to intimidate Peter and John, causing them to back away from their work because of a fear of this council. The thought did not seem to occur to them that the miracle itself confirmed that Peter and John were empowered by the God of heaven.

Thus these men sought to silence God’s messengers by pressing their own imagined authority upon them. They sought to conform them to religious protocol and institutionalism. The council, or Sanhedrin, felt that only they could authorize people to speak in the name of the Lord, or teach the people. If we find any element of the fear of man in Peter and John, they will succumb to their interrogators.

This kind of trial did not end with the ministry of the apostles. To this very day, this spirit is found within the churches and Christian institutions. Men set themselves up as authorities, and seek to bind their own depraved wills upon servants of the Lord. I remember my own encounter with such a tribunal when but a young preacher. I was summoned before these judges to give an account for preaching on the street without being given official approval to do so. It was an intimidating and embarrassing experience for me. I was treated as though I was seeking to destroy their imagined kingdom, even though there was not a fragment of truth in their supposition. The outcome of the whole affair was my expulsion from the institution, and the successful barring of my presence from any of the churches sanctioned by that institution. That ostracization lasted for thirty years. Yet, it proved to be the means through which Jesus rescued me from lifeless religion.

There are countless ministers of the Gospel who have been ordered not to preach on this or that subject – or perhaps, not to preach at all. Councils of elders, church boards, and the likes, have sat in judgment upon men who declared truth that was perceived as threatening to the institution. This is so common that anyone who has labored in preaching and teaching has confronted some form of this kind of opposition. Like Peter and John, they have confronted men who could not conceive anything being valid that was at variance with their own stunted views.

We must learn from this text that it is never appropriate to yield to such men, as though their pretentious authority was sanctioned by God. When it comes to the body of Christ and the preaching and teaching of the Gospel, God recognizes no authority that seeks to neutralize or forbid the propagation of the truth. No God-ordained office has any authority to suppress the truth. It matters not if we are speaking of the Sanhedrin or a board of elders.

Peter's response to these men will display how faith reacts to opposition. It will confirm that it is never right to yield to those who are opposed to the truth. God's servants must speak boldly against such men in order that the truth be not blasphemed. That is why Paul wrote to young Timothy, "Do not receive an accusation against an elder except from two or three witnesses. Those who are sinning rebuke in the presence of all, that the rest also may fear" (1 Tim 5:19-20). The Amplified Bible reads, "Listen to no accusation [presented before a judge] against an elder unless it is confirmed by the testimony of two or three witnesses. As for those who are guilty and persist in sin, rebuke and admonish them in the presence of all, so that the rest may be warned and stand in wholesome awe and fear." Strong words, indeed, and yet they are to be strictly heeded.

No religious man is worthy honored who is opposed to the truth and those to speak it.

CONCLUSION

We are being exposed to Kingdom realities. When men of God are granted insight into the truth, and are empowered by Jesus to preach it with power, opposition will be encountered. Whatever you may think about Satan fleeing, do not entertain the notion that he is afraid of you, or will back away from you, allowing you to freely preach. God can cause this to happen, to be sure, but he does not always do so, as our text confirms. It is true that He that is in us is greater than he that is in the world (1 John 4:4). However, that does not mean your enemies will never have any influence over your circumstances. Peter and John may be arrested while they are speaking the truth to the people (Acts 4:3). Stephen may be stoned by a religious body (Acts 7:59). Paul may be incarcerated and chained, and eventually beheaded (Acts 24:27; 2 Tim 1:16; 2 Tim 4:6-7). Peter may be arrested and finally put to death (2 Pet 1:14-15). John may be exiled on the Isle of Patmos because he was preaching the Word of God (Rev 1:9). Timothy may be put into prison (Heb 13:23).

We must purge from our thinking the notion that well being equals blessing. While we do not seek to be opposed, we must not be alarmed when we are. Even though we endeavor to be peaceable (1 Pet 3:11), and not to intentionally offend the people (1 Cor 10:32), the truth has an abrasive effect upon all who do not love it.

Let all who seek to speak for Christ come to an understanding of the enmity of religious institutionalism – when the promotion of the organization supercedes a quest to glorify God. When life in this world is unduely exalted – for whatever reason – at some point, the truth of God will be opposed, together with those who declare it.

These observations are not theoretical. They are actually lived out in the book of Acts. We are made privy to the conduct of the tares when they are in the field with the wheat. It will become apparent what happens when good and bad fish are caught in the same net. When the children of the wicked one and the children of the kingdom confront each other, there is always friction, opposition, and conflict.

Our next Hungry Saints Meeting will be held on Friday, 12/8/2006. We will continue our current series of lessons on the book of Acts. The Seventeenth lesson will cover verses 8 through 14 of the fourth chapter: “PETER RESPONDS TO THE LEADERS.”

Peter and John are not intimidated by the opposing leaders. This is because they have embraced the message they are delivering, and have proved by their own experience that it is everything they have affirmed. Our meeting will begin at 7:00 P.M. You are invited to bring your family and friends for fellowship around the Word of God. Refreshments are served afterward, with a time of extended fellowship for everyone.

Lesson #17

PETER RESPONDS TO THE LEADERS

“ 4:8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel, 9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole; 10 Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. 11 This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. 12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. 13 Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus. 14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it. ” (Acts 4:8-14)

INTRODUCTION

Peter and John have been confronted by Jewish leaders from the Temple: the priests, the captain of the Temple guard, and the Sadducees. They have been asked concerning the power or authority under which they operated. This had particular regard to the healing of the lame man – a man with whom all the people were acquainted.

NO WORLDLY HELP AVAILABLE

Peter and John do not have an organization to represent them. There is no help group that has been set up to assist those oppressed by the authorities. What is happening to them is outside of the provisions of Roman law. They can make no appeal to Temple precedent, and the rights of men who heal people lame from birth. This is an occasion in which faith is their only asset. They cannot depend upon oratorical skills, and rely upon certain Temple friendships that have been developed over the years. There is no known defender of Temple rights, or some individual or group to champion the exercise of public religious liberties. There are no friends in the Roman senate who can intervene for Peter and John, negating the influence of the religious leaders. All of the supposed provisions for social and individual human rights of an imagined Christian nation are non-existent at this time.

FELLOWSHIP WITH CHRIST IS REQUIRED TO DO HIS WORK

What Peter and John do now will depend wholly upon the fellowship they have with Christ, and whether or not they are suitable vessels through whom He can speak and work. Their only effective resources will come through their faith. Of course, this is the manner of the Kingdom, and no work for God is ever done any other way. However, because of the prominence of carnal religion, scarcely a Christian leader is ever brought to the point where these things are clearly seen. There is too much fleshly help that is held out as available to opposed and oppressed believers.

For those who are working for the Lord – doing the real work of the Kingdom – a wholly different set of circumstances exist. If they are close to Christ, they will be sustained. If they are not close to Him, they will not be sustained. If they are abiding in Christ, the resources that are required will be ministered to them. If they are not abiding in Him, these resources will not be given to them. If they are laboring together with Christ, they will be granted what is necessary for those labors. If they are not laboring together with Christ, having rather adopted their own agenda, they will not be given such necessities. If their faith is strong, they will stand. If their faith is not strong, they will not stand. If they fear God more than men, He will come to their aid. If they fear men, they will fall into a snare. If they are holding fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope, they will not be intimidated. If they are not holding these fast, they will be shaken by opposition.

The work of Christ cannot be done apart from an immediate association with Him by faith. It is not so much that this is owing to a moral law, so that it is simply wrong to attempt to do the work of God apart from Christ. Rather, it is that it is impossible to do God's work apart from a lively affiliation with His Son. The body of Christ, whether individual members or as a whole, cannot function acceptably or effectively apart from its Head. All nourishment and required aptitudes are ministered "from the Head" as the members are holding to Him. As it is written: "And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God" (Col 2:19).

If the connection between the members and the Head is not being maintained, the work being done will fall to the ground. The work simply cannot be done without the involvement of the One for whom it is being done. Further, that involvement can be no stronger than the faith through which it is realized.

THE SERIOUSNESS OF NOT FEEDING THE FLOCK OF GOD

is not occurring, the people are actually becoming unsuitable vessels for the honor of God. Importing praise leaders, motivational gurus, and organizational experts will not make the people usable, or “meet for the Master’s use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21). A people who are not themselves being blessed by the Lord cannot, in any sense, become a source of genuine blessing to others.

There are “good works” that God has “before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10). Our involvement in those works, however, requires men to be “created in Christ Jesus.” That creation is “unto,” or in order to, the doing of the specified pre-ordained works. I am not sure that a suitable defense can be made for these being generic work’s that are only general in nature, and are common to all saints. To be sure, there are works like that, described as “doing good unto all men, specially those of the household of faith” (Gal 6:10). However, it seems to me that being “prepared unto every good work” carries the idea of specificity – a particular deed at a particular time, and regarding a particular people.

THE REQUIREMENT FOR HOLINESS

All believers are required to be holy – and the requirement is declared with unusual clarity. “But as He which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation ; because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy ” (1 Pet 1:15-16). “Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children ” (Eph 5:1). “For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness ” (1 Thess 4:7). “Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord ” (Heb 12:14).

In Christ God has provided all of the resources required to be holy in every aspect of our lives. There is really only one basic reason for a professing Christian to lack holiness – self interests have taken the precedence over the will of the Lord. This condition is a contradiction of new creaturehood (2 Cor 5:17). It belies any claim to newness of life (Rom 6:4). A lack of holiness is opposed to a condition in which the stony heart has been removed and a heart of flesh has been given (Ezek 36:26).

There are consequences for refusing to be holy. In a nutshell, those results may be summarized like this: all of the benefits associated with salvation are forfeited. Godlike qualities cannot be poured into un-godlike people.

I know that much of what is paraded as the work of the Lord fails to make these associations. The vitality and effectiveness of spiritual life have been upstaged by the traditions and institutions of men. Certain organizers and motivators, moved by the prevailing ignorance that is resident in the professed church, have crept in to market their wares, and they have been very well received.

But let me get more to the point of these words. I am saying that the account of Peter and John answering the Jewish council cannot fit into the modern view of the church, giving answers, and standing up for Christ. They conducted themselves in a manner that is at total variance with many of the ways that are being taught within the professed church. You sense in their reply that they are not placing a high value on their own lives, being accepted by their peers, or appearing successful before men – all of which rank very high in the institutional church. They are keenly aware of the sharp conflict between flesh and Spirit, this world and the world to come, and life and death. They are not trying to bridge the gap between the spiritually minded and the carnally minded. Their aim is not to impress men or be approved by them.

PETER, FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ 4:8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel.”

Concerning the healing of the man lame from birth, Peter and John have been asked, “By what power, or by what name have ye done this?" (4:7). Peter will now answer this question. He will not do so with his own welfare in mind, but will speak for the glory of the Lord, for he is His witness.

PETER, FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them . . .” Other versions read, “ being full of the Holy Spirit,” BBE “ because he was filled with the Holy Spirit,” GWN “full of the Holy Ghost,” PNT “ having been filled with the Holy Spirit,” YLT and “[because he was] filled with [and controlled by] the Holy Spirit. AMPLIFIED

This is now the second time a point is made of the servants of God being “filled with the Spirit” (2:4; 4:8). The point of the text does not seem to be that Peter became filled at this time, but that he had been filled previously, and the filling had remained. What is recorded of Peter must be perceived as him speaking through the Holy spirit, and not through the flesh.

- His preaching on the day of Pentecost (2:14-37).
- His answer to the inquirers on the day of Pentecost (2:37-40).
- The “apostles’ doctrine” in which the early believers continued (2:42).
- Peter’s words to the man born lame (3:6).
- Peter’s words to the people who noted the miracle of the healing of the lame man, and came running to them (3:12-26).

What Does It Mean to Be Filled with the Spirit?

What is involved in a person being “filled with the Holy Spirit.” Is this an experience that throws one into a subconscious state, where the mind and the will are basically unproductive – a state where the person becomes like a robot, speaking independently of the involvement of the human spirit?

First, the “Filler” is the Lord Jesus. He is the One who determines the recipient of the Holy Spirit, then sends Him to the individual. There is no automatic process involved in being filled with the Spirit that excludes the involvement of the One who gives the Spirit. Therefore, in his explanation of the initial pouring forth of the Holy Spirit, with which individuals were filled, Peter declared, “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear ” (Acts 2:33).

Second, being filled with the Holy Spirit involves the sanctification of the spiritual qualities of men – the heart, soul, mind, and strength. This, in turn, impacts upon the person’s expressive capabilities. They are able to think the thoughts of God, speak His Word, and do His works. All of this is done consciously and perceptively – with the “soul.” Unless those hearing and beholding the expressions of those filled with the Spirit are privy to the working of the Lord, there is nothing about the expressions that associate them with the Holy Spirit. They appear to the uninitiated to be human expressions. While they are unusual, and staggering to consider, those expressions are viewed as being purely human expressions. It is only when faith comes, and the individual is illuminated, that they can be recognized as the working of the Lord. All of this will become very evident in our text.

The book of Acts contains a number of references to people being filled with the Holy Spirit.

- The disciples were “filled” on the day of Pentecost (2:4).
- Peter’s defense in this text was made when he was “filled with the Holy Spirit” (4:8).

- All of the disciples after an insightful prayer was made to God (4:31).
- The first deacons were required to be “full of the Holy Spirit” (6:3).
- Stephen is said to have been “full... of the Holy Spirit” (6:5).
- When Stephen was being stoned to death he was said to have been “full of the Holy Spirit” (7:55).
- Ananias told Saul of Tarsus he was sent to him in order that he might be “filled with the Holy Spirit” (9:17).
- Barnabas is described as a “good man, and full of the Holy Spirit” (11:24).
- When Paul dealt harshly with Elymas the sorcerer, he was “filled with the Holy Spirit” (13:9).
- The disciples at Iconium were said to have been “filled with the Holy Spirit” (13:52).

Peter will now speak the mind of the Lord. His words will reflect Divine purpose and the will of the Lord. There will be no element of “flesh” in them – no worldly agenda or ambitions. They will fit the description Paul gave the Thessalonians: “For this cause also thank we God without ceasing, because, when ye received the word of God which ye heard of us, ye received it not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the word of God, which effectually worketh also in you that believe ” (1 Thess 2:13).

YE RULERS OF THE PEOPLE, AND ELDERS OF ISRAEL

“ . . . Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel.” Other versions read, “rulers of the people and men of authority,” BBE “princes of the people and ancients,” DOUAY “ rulers and leaders of the people,” GWN “rulers of the people and Elders of the house of Israel ,” MRD and “Rulers of the people and members of the council (the Sanhedrin).” AMPLIFIED

Previously, with regard to the crucifixion of Jesus, Peter had charged the leaders of the people with ignorance: “And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers” (Acts 3:17). At that time, the leaders did not appear to be present. Now, however, they are not only present, but are attempting to establish themselves as being the judges of Peter and John. Peter is not intimidated by this circumstance. He is filled with the Spirit, and will therefore speak the mind of the Lord on this matter. Here we will see how the Lord addresses leaders who have walked in ignorance.

Peter is not intimidated by this circumstance. He is filled with the Spirit, and will therefore speak the mind of the Lord on this matter. Here we will see how the Lord addresses leaders who have walked in ignorance.

We also learn from this text that rulers and leaders are held in account for their deeds. In this world, men imagine that leadership puts them beyond the scrutinizing eye. But this is not the case at all. Just as surely as servants are held responsible for properly serving, so leaders are held accountable for leading correctly. No position puts a person beyond the circumference of judgment – particularly the judgment of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The prophets declared the Messiah would be noted for righteous judgment.

- GOVERNING WITH A LOVE FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS, AND A HATRED FOR WICKEDNESS. “Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: the sceptre of thy kingdom is a right sceptre . Thou lovest righteousness, and hatest wickedness : therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows” (Psa 45:6-7; Heb 1:9).
- HE WILL JUDGE RIGHTEOUSLY AND REPROVE WITH EQUITY. “But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth . . .” (Isa 11:4).

- HE WILL REIGN IN RIGHTEOUSNESS AND RULE IN JUDGMENT. “Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment” (Isa 32:1).

- HE WILL EXECUTE JUDGMENT AND JUSTICE. “Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth” (Jer 23:5).

- HE WILL EXECUTE JUDGEMENT AND RIGHTEOUSNESS. “In those days, and at that time, will I cause the Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and He shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land” (Jer 33:15).

When Jesus walked among men, He held religious leaders in strict account for their devious manners. He rebuked the scribes and Pharisees severely (Matt 23:13-36). The lawyers also were subject to His righteous scrutiny (Lk 11:46-52). He rebuffed the Sadducees, telling them they erred because they did not know the Scriptures or the power of God (Matt 22:23-32).

This is a Divine characteristic that we do well to remember. It is said of God, “He hath prepared His throne for judgment” (Psa 9:7). And again, “Justice and judgment are the habitation of His throne” (Psa 89:14). And again, “righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne” (Psa 97:2). It was prophesied of the Messiah that he would order the Kingdom “to establish it with judgment and with justice” (Isa 9:7). Isaiah also saw the coming Savior “judging, and seeking judgment, and hastening righteousness” (Isa 16:5).

Now Jesus, through the Holy Spirit, will speak to the Jewish council – the priests, the captain of the Temple, the Sadducees and others who had convened to judge His apostles. While the circumstances appear to indicate that Peter and John were being examined and judged, it was really their critics who were now on trial.

IF WE ARE BEING EXAMINED

“9 If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole”

Peter will clear the air of the fog of vain tradition, clarifying the real issue, and shedding light upon what has been done in the Temple courts. He will not subject himself to the analysis of these men, or pretend as though their judgment was anything but wrong.

IF WE ARE BEING EXAMINED

“If we this day be examined . . .” Other versions read, “are judged,” NKJV “are on trial today,” NASB “are being called to account today,” NIV “are questioned today,” NRSV “called upon to answer,” DARBY “for as much as we this day are examined,” GENEVA “today you are cross-examining us,” GWN “if we are judged by you this day,” MRD and “If we are being put on trial [here] today and examined.” AMPLIFIED

At once, Peter shines the light on the nature of the work that had been done. A man who had been crippled from the moment he was born had been thoroughly healed, and was standing before them in perfect health.

Peter cuts straight to the heart of the matter. A naive person might have imagined that the council was asking an honest question. But Peter knew that was not the case. Even though Peter and John were the servants of the Lord, this council was examining them as though they were under their authority. It reminds me of Paul’s response to certain in Corinth who took it upon themselves to examine him. “But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged of you, or of man's judgment: yea, I judge not mine own self” (1 Cor 4:3).

The word “examined” comes from a word meaning “investigate, examine, inquire into, scrutinize, sift, question,” THAYER “hold a preliminary hearing, cross-examine, investigate, interrogate,” FRIBERG “sit in judgment, call to account.” UBS As used here, the examination was not an honest one. It was not an effort to establish the truth of a matter. Rather, the council was called because of the conflict of what Peter and John were preaching with the position of the leaders – particularly the Sadducees. Actually, Peter and John were already considered guilty of unacceptable conduct. This caucus was nothing more than an attempt to justify that conclusion.

THIS GOOD DEED

“ . . . of the good deed done to the impotent man . . .” Other versions read, “a good deed done to a helpless man ,” NKJV “a benefit done to a sick man,” NASB “an act of kindness shown to a cripple,” NIV “good deed done to someone who was sick ,” NRSV “ a good work done to a man who was ill,” BBE “good deed done to a disabled man ,” CSB “good deed done to an infirm man ,” DARBY “ the good we did for a crippled man,” GWN “the good deed to the ailing man ,” YLT “ the benefit conferred on a man helplessly lame,” WEYMOUTH and “a good deed done to benefit a feeble (helpless) cripple,” AMPLIFIED

At once, Peter shines the light on the nature of the work that had been done. A man who had been crippled from the moment he was born had been thoroughly healed, and was standing before them in perfect health. This court had referred to this good work as “this”: “By what power, or by what name, have ye done this ?” (4:7). Every version reads the same way: “this.”

Peter will not submit to such a demeaning reference to the working of the Lord. He will refer to it in the proper manner: “the good deed,” “benefit done,” NASB “act of kindness,” NIV and “benefit conferred.” WEYMOUTH This was one of those “good works” that had been ordained of old, to be done by Peter and John (Eph 2:10).

In confronting His critics, it was also Jesus’ manner to more precisely define what was being done. After calling for a man with a withered hand to “Stand forth” in the local synagogue, Jesus addressed His opponents. “ Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life , or to kill?” (Mark 3:4). Another time, when Jesus had healed a woman who had been bowed over with a spirit of infirmity for eighteen years, He faced an indignant ruler of the synagogue. Heartlessly this pretentious ruler said, “There are six days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and not on the sabbath day” (Luke 13:14). Jesus responded with these words, “The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath loose his ox or his ass from the stall, and lead him away to watering? And ought not this woman, being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the Sabbath day ?” (Luke 13:15-16). Another time, when the Jews took of stones to kill Jesus, He challenged them by saying, “Many good works have I showed you from my Father; for which of those works do ye stone Me?” (John 10:32).

The people of God do well to culture a godly manner of referring to

In my judgment, a severe weakness exists in the modern church when it comes to defining matters. Too often the jargon of the world is used, and that reduces, if not altogether removes, any need for appealing to the Word of God. It also excludes Divine power.

what the Lord has done. When facing questions about our life in Christ Jesus, let us be swift to call it what it is: “newness of life,” “born again,” “begotten of God,” the “new creation,” etc. Let us never speak in such a manner as to confuse darkness and light, or life and death. Well did Isaiah say, “Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!” (Isa 5:20).

BY WHAT MEANS

“ . . . by what means he is made whole” Other versions read, “ how this man has been made well,” NASB “how he was healed ,” NIV “ you want to know how he was made well,” GWN “ Are you asking us who made him well?” IE “as to how this man was cured ,” WEYMOUTH and “ by what means this man has been restored to health.” AMPLIFIED

Again, Peter speaks with wisdom and godly care. The Spirit of God is in him, sanctifying both his mind and his heart. What his judges have referred to as “this,” Peter refers to as the man being “made whole.” He will now testify to the “means” by which this man was “made whole.” That is not the way in which the council preferred to state the case, but Peter clearly defines the circumstance before declaring precisely how it was produced.

In my judgment, a severe weakness exists in the modern church when it comes to defining matters. Too often the jargon of the world is used, and that reduces, if not altogether removes, any need for appealing to the Word of God. It also excludes Divine power.

BE IT KNOWN UNTO YOU

“ 10a Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth . . . ”

The confidence with which Peter speaks will be very apparent. It is the assurance that proceeds from faith, and the unwavering persuasion of the truth concerning Jesus Christ. As Jesus had promised, it was given to Peter at that very hour what he should say: “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you” (Matt 10:19-20). Yet, Peter does not speak as a sort of robot. It is apparent that he knows what he is saying and is speaking with great personal confidence. That is what real faith does for a person.

BE IT KNOWN UNTO YOU ALL

“Be it known unto you all . . . ” Other versions read, “ Let it be known to you all,” NKJV “then know this ,” NIV “ Take note , all of you,” BBE “You . . . must understand ,” GWN “all of you . . . should know,” NAB “Let me clearly state to all of you,” NLT “ We want all of you . . . to know,” IE “Let it be known and understood by all of you,” AMPLIFIED and “it is high time that all of you . . . knew .” PHILLIPS

Those who are sent forth by God to speak a word, generally have a compelling desire to be understood. It is true that some of God’s messengers were told to speak to people who would not understand. That condition, however, constituted a sort of trial, because it is not a normal situation. Thus Ezekiel was told, “And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear: for they are most rebellious. But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house : open thy mouth, and eat that I give thee” (Ezek 2:7-8).

In this case, Peter is not rebellious, even though he is standing before his critics. He will speak boldly and call upon the council to comprehend what he says . “Be it known!” Here something that is not to be hidden. It is a public word, and it is to be spoken. This is what God told Ezekiel to say to Israel – “be it known unto you” (Ezek 36:32). It is what Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego said to Nebuchadnezzar when they refused to bow before his idol – “be it known unto thee” (Dan 3:18). It is what Paul declared to those in a synagogue in Antioch of Pisidia when he announced that through Jesus the forgiveness of sins was being preached – “be it known unto you” (Acts 13:38). During the close of his ministry, these are the words Paul spoke to some Jews when he boldly announced the salvation of God was being sent to the Gentiles – “be it known therefore unto you” (Acts 28:28).

We also see in this expression an essential aspect of the Kingdom of God. It is an economy of understanding and spiritual knowledge – not of raw emotion of feeling. There is a segment of the Christian community who teaches that utterances that are not understood are profitable, and even designed to build the faith of those who speak them. Such utterances cannot be preceded by, “Be it known unto you all.”

AND TO ALL THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL

“ . . . and to all the people of Israel . . .” One version reads “the whole house of Israel.” AMPLIFIED The others all read the same – “people of Israel.”

This word was not for the council alone. Peter is saying that his answer to the inquiry of his pretentious judges is not for them alone, but for all the people of Israel – all of the covenanted people. His words would be tailored for the group before him, but would not be limited to them. The promises pertained to all the house of Israel, and Peter knew it (Rom 9:3). Concerning the New Covenant, God has never made promises to only a segment of the people who would be accepted in Christ Jesus. Therefore, Peter addresses all of the leaders and all of the people of Israel. Earlier, on the day of Pentecost, he also said “the promise” was to “ all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:39).

The Gospel of Christ, and all things relating to it, is tailored for everyone – “every creature” (Mk 16:15). It addresses the needs that are common among men, and announces a resolution to a universal dilemma. Ponder what Peter has offered thusfar.

- The remission of sins (2:38a).
- The gift of the Holy Spirit (2:38b).
- Sins blotted out (3:19a).
- Times of refreshing (3:19b).
- God will send Jesus to them (3:20).
- Jesus sent to bless you (3:26a).
- Turning away every one from their iniquities (3:26b).

These are all benefits for all of those participating in the New Covenant.

BY THE NAME OF JESUS CHRIST OF NAZARETH

“ . . . that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth . . .” Other versions read, “in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth,” BBE “because of the power of Jesus Christ from Nazareth,” GWN “by the powerful name of Jesus Christ the Nazarene,” NLT “in the name and power of Jesus from Nazareth, the Messiah,” LIVING “by the authority of Jesus of Nazareth,” IE “through the name of Jesus the Anointed, the Nazarene,” WEYMOUTH “in the name and through the power and authority of Jesus Christ of Nazareth,” AMPLIFIED and “through the power of the name of Jesus of Nazareth.” GNB

The expression “the name of Jesus of Nazareth” is pregnant with meaning. I have never been fully satisfied with “the name of” being equivalent to “by the authority of.” It is true that “all authority” in heaven and earth has been given to the Lord Jesus (Matt 28:18). Peter, however, mentions the name of “Jesus Christ of Nazareth.” This is not the name by which Jesus is known in heaven. It is rather the name by which He was known particularly among the Jews, and those who were close to them – as Cornelius. The phrase is used seventeen times in Scripture (Matt 26:71; Mk 1:24; 10:47; 14:67; 16:6; Lk 4:34; 18:37; 24:19; John 1:45; 18:5,7; 19:19; Acts 2:22; 6:14; 10:38; 22:6; 26:9). He is referred to as “Jesus Christ of Nazareth” in Acts 3:6 and 4:10, and “Jesus the prophet of Nazareth” in Matthew 21:11.

The “name” is the repository into which what has been revealed of a person is poured. It stands for everything that is known about that person. In this case, there are certain things that have been tied to the name “Jesus” – the One came from Nazareth. These are things that had an impact in heaven as well as upon the earth. Upon earth, His human identity was established among men as “Jesus of Nazareth.” He was noted for being a spokesman for God – a “prophet, mighty in deed and word” (Lk 24:19). He was also noted for His deeds – “mighty works” (Matt 14:2; Mk 6:2). Nature yielded to Him, the wind and sea obeying Him (Mk 4:41). In all of these things, He was, in a sense, gaining a name.

But never was the name of Jesus more prominent than when He was exalted in heaven. As it is written, “Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given Him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth” (Phil 2:9-10). Again, speaking of the presence of Jesus in heaven, it is written, “. . . the working of His mighty power, which He wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church” (Eph 1:19-22).

Earlier in human history, it was revealed that “the heavens do rule” (Dan 4:26). It has always been true that God “doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, What doest Thou?” (Dan 4:35). That is the way it has always been! It has always been true that God’s counsel stands, and He does all of His pleasure. If He wants Adam and Eve in the Garden, He places them there. If He does not want them there, He expels them. If He does not want the building of the tower of Babel to continue, it will be stopped. If He no longer wants His earth to be contaminated by Sodom and Gomorrah, He will remove them. If He wants Joseph on the throne of Egypt, He will place him there. If He is displeased with King Nebuchadnezzar, He will remove him from the throne. In every way, and in every sense, “the heavens do rule.”

It was Jesus who actually did the work, but He did it through vessels who were “meet for the Master’s use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21). Further, if Jesus was not everything for which His name stands, the man would not have got up and walked.

Now, the exalted Christ is heaven’s Ruler. So far as men are concerned, He is “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). This is the very Jesus the Jewish leaders, before whom Peter and John are standing, rejected and “killed” (Acts 3:15). Now, two of Jesus’ men come into the Temple and do a work that no priest or Sadducee was ever able to do. They did not engage in a battle with the forces of evil, but simply told a man afflicted from birth to “rise up and walk” (Acts 3:6). The disease yielded to the word of these men because of the One for whom they spoke. They were not speaking a mere formula when they said, “In the name of Jesus of Nazareth.” If they had not been connected with that Jesus by faith, nothing would have happened.

It was Jesus who actually did the work, but He did it through vessels who were “meet for the Master’s use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21). Further, if Jesus was not everything for which His name stands, the man would not have got up and walked – it would have been impossible.

However, none of this is known by those who have taken upon themselves to examine Peter and John. Therefore, Peter will spell it out for them, confirming how this was done. He will not depend upon them going home and thinking about it, but will declare the truth of the matter, regardless of whether or not it is received.

HERE IS WHAT YOU DID, AND HERE IS WHAT GOD DID

“ 10b . . . whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.”

Fortunately, Peter had not been trained in the theology of our time. He will not say the Jews really were not responsible for Jesus’ death – that it was something for which all humanity was responsible. That might appear a wise course to take for those who are battling against racial prejudice. However, when men commit unusual sins, it is not to be swept under the rug as though such sins are common – or that all sin carries the same weight.

WHOM YOU CRUCIFIED

“ . . . whom ye crucified . . . ” Other versions read, “whom you put to death on the cross,” BBE “whom ye have crucified ,” DARBY “ You crucified Jesus Christ,” GWN “the man you crucified,” NLT “whom ye did crucify ,” YLT “Although you nailed Him to the cross ,” IE and “He is the One whom you crucified .” PHILLIPS

Is it possible for a clearer statement to be made on the matter? Think of the statements made on this subject through the inspiration of the Holy Spirit.

- “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain ” (Acts 2:23).
- “Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified , both Lord and Christ” (Acts 2:36).
- “The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus; whom ye delivered up , and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go” (Acts 3:13).
- “But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life , whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:14-15).
- “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree ” (Acts 5:30).
- “Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers ” (Acts 7:52).
- “ . . . the Jews: who both killed the Lord Jesus , and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men” (1 Thess 2:14-15).

The Jesus whom they killed, and whom God raised again, is the One through whom the man standing before them had been made perfectly whole. No natural man could have done this, and that was very apparent.

The Jews arrested and tried Jesus (Mk 14:60-65; Acts 2:23), delivered Him up (Acts 3:13), denied Him (Acts 3:14), demanded that He be crucified (Acts 2:36), and pressured Pilate on the matter (John 18:30; 19:7,12). They are categorically said to have crucified him (Acts 2:23,36), slain Him (Acts 2:23), killed Him (Acts 3:15; 1 Thess 2:15), hanged Him on a tree (Acts 5:30), and murdered Him (Acts 7:52).

It simply is not right to speak in a politically-right manner as though the Holy Spirit had not spoken clearly and concisely concerning the responsibility of the Jews in Christ's death. In fact, the following statement concerning Christ's resurrection will not have its intended power if the Jew were really not guilty of killing Him.

WHOM GOD RAISED FROM THE DEAD

“ . . . whom God raised from the dead . . .” Other versions read, “whom God gave back from the dead,” BBE “whom God has raised from among the dead ,” DARBY “whom God raised again from the dead,” GENEVA “God has brought Him back to life ,” GWN “whom God raised again from death ,” TNT and “whom God did raise out of the dead .” YLT

The resurrection of Jesus was a miracle – but it was more than a miracle. It was also a heavenly denunciation of all who rejected Jesus – particularly those who demanded his death. When Caiaphas asked Jesus, “Art Thou the Christ, the son of the Blessed,” Jesus answered Him in truth. “I am: and ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven” (Mark 14:61-62). Instead of Caiaphas believing the truth, he tore his clothes and said, “What need we any further witnesses. Ye have heard the blasphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him to be guilty of death” (Mark 14:64). Now, in raising Jesus from the dead, God exposed how wrong they were. He revealed the hardness of their hearts, and how they had been willing vassals of the devil himself.

IT IS BY HIM

“ . . . even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole.” Other versions read, “by this name this man stands here before you in good health,” NASB “by this man stands before you healed,” NIV “this man is standing before you in good health by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth,” NRSV “by Him this man is standing before you well,” RSV “it is by His authority that this man stands here healed,” LIVING “This man who was crippled is now well and able to stand here before you because of Jesus ,” IE “through that name this man stands here before you in perfect health,” WEYMOUTH “in Him does this man stand before you strong and well,” MONTGOMERY and “in Him and by means of Him this man is standing here before you well and sound in body.” AMPLIFIED

The Jesus whom they killed, and whom God raised again, is the One through whom the man standing before them had been made perfectly whole. No natural man could have done this, and that was very apparent. The works of the Lord are not only “great” (Psa 111:2) and “wonderful” (Psa 40:5), they are also unique, for only He can do them. They are all “done in truth” (Psa 33:4), and all of them are “holy” (Psa 145:17). None of them can be replicated by unholy or unacceptable people.

This confirms that the “same Jesus,” whom they rejected, is the One who, seated at the right hand of God, had wrought this deed they have all seen. The resurrected Christ was not a new Messiah, but the very One who had went about doing good, and healing all who were oppressed of the devil.

We learn something significant here about the resurrection of the dead. It is only the body that will be changed – not the person. It is the body, and the body alone, that is “sown in corruption,” “in weakness,” “in dishonor,” and as a “natural body” (1 Cor 15:42-44). The spirit, which is the essential man, is not “sown,” and it will not be “raised” from death. Those who belong to Christ will be brought back with Jesus when He comes again (1 Thess 4:14). However, they will come with the same character they had when they left the body. It will be the same for the wicked.

While this may not be expressly said by the modern church, it seems that a general notion exists that the resurrection will resolve basic character flaws. This is not so. The persons we are when we die will be the persons we are when we are raised from the dead. We know this is the case because of the resurrection of Christ. Further, His resurrection is the prelude of our own resurrection. As it is written, “And God hath both raised up the Lord, and will also raise up us by his own power” (1 Cor 6:14). And again, “Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you” (2 Cor 4:14).

THIS IS THE STONE YOU SET AT NOUGHT

“ 11 This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner.”

Peter will not let this matter go, only saying a few words about it, so as not to be too offensive. At this point, he is more interested in the honoring of Jesus than the appeasement of men. He will show the deliberate nature of the Jews’ treatment of Jesus, and how determined they were to fulfill their own will.

THIS IS THE STONE

“This is the Stone . . .” Other versions read, “He is the Stone,” NASB “This Jesus is the Stone,” NRSV “For Jesus is the one referred to in the Scriptures , where it says, 'The stone . . .’ NLT and “For Jesus the Messiah is [the One referred to in the Scriptures when they speak of] a Stone.” LIVING

Peter will base his statements upon the affirmation of Scripture. It is the responsibility of His hearers to see the truth of what He says. Of course, in that day, devout Jews were familiar with the Scriptures – particularly those regarding the Messiah. It ought to be noted here that when a professed church is not familiar with the word of God, it puts the preacher, as well as the people, at a great disadvantage. Sound reasoning, whether in the conviction of sin or the perfecting of the saints, must be founded upon the Word of God.

“The Stone”

Nearly eight hundred years before, David had written about the rejection of Christ by the Jewish leaders. “ The Stone which the builders refused is become the head stone of the corner. This is the LORD'S doing; it is marvelous in our eyes” (Psa 118:22-23).

Isaiah also spoke of this Stone as a foundation: “Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I lay in Zion for a foundation a Stone , a tried Stone , a precious corner Stone , a sure foundation: he that believeth shall not make haste” (Isa 28:16).

During the ministry of Jesus, he brought the attention of the leaders to these things, leaving them without excuse. “Did ye never read in the scriptures, The Stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes?” (Matt 21:42; Mk 12:10-12; Lk 20:17).

Later, in his First epistle to scattered believers, Peter wrote, “Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner Stone , elect, precious: and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded. Unto you therefore which believe he is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the Stone which the builders disallowed, the same is made the head of the corner” (1 Pet 2:6-7).

Jesus of Nazareth was, then, the prophesied “Stone” which would be the most prominent part of the “house” God was going to build for David (2 Sam 7:27). He was a Teacher, but not merely a teacher! He went about doing good, but there was more to Him than that. He decimated the devil’s kingdom, but He was sent to do much more than this!

The Word “Stone”

The word from which the word “Stone” is translated is a critical one. Interestingly, it is not the word translated “rock” (Pe,troj – petros, or pe,tral – petra). That word refers to a ledge of rock upon which the house is built. This is not the kind of “Stone” to which our text refers. This “Stone” is integral to the building itself. It is a smaller, yet most critical, stone. The word from which it is translated is li,qoj (lithos). This is the word used in the texts referring to Jesus as the “Stone” (Matt 21:42,44; Mk 12:10; Lk 20:17-18; Acts 4:11; 1 Pet 2:4,6,7,8). This “Stone” will be more precisely defined later.

SET AT NOUGHT OF YOU BUILDERS

“ . . . which was set at nought of you builders . . .” Other versions read, “ rejected by you builders,” NKJV “rejected by you, the builders ,” NASB “you builders rejected,” NIV “ set at nought of you the builders,” ASV “which you builders had no use for ,” BBE “ despised by you builders,” CSB “ cast aside of you builders,” GENEVA “ discarded by the builders,” LIVING “which you builders thought worthless ,” IE “ treated with contempt by you the builders,” WEYMOUTH “that was thrown away by you builders,” WILLIAMS “which was despised and rejected by you, the builders,” AMPLIFIED and “ having been rejected by you the builders.” ALT

The primary Stone of the building was “set at nought,” “rejected,” NKJV “discarded,” LIVING and “thrown away” WILLIAMS by the builders. They saw it, considered it, and “despised” CSB it. They thought it is “worthless,” IE treated it with “contempt,” WEYMOUTH and “had no use for” BBE it. The “Stone” had been placed among them, and was “approved of God” in their presence by unparalleled confirmations (Acts 2:22). In word and deed, He was confirmed to be superior. His words were with power, and His deeds with staggering effectiveness. Yet, “the builders” – THE BUILDERS – saw no use for the Stone.

“The builders” are the leaders charged with the responsibility of putting the people on the right path. They are responsible for the establishment of proper thoughts and objectives. It is their duty to prepare the people for what God gives, and lead them in seeing this world and the world to come with clarity. “The builders” are not merely religious leaders. They are to ready the people for the work of the Lord – the building. They are to prepare the people to receive the blessing. That is what they will be held accountable for doing. That is how they will be judged!

There is no acceptable excuse for “the builders” constructing something that is wrong. In the work of the Lord, whether preparing people for the initial appearance of Jesus, or when He appears “the second time,” the builders are to get the people ready. They are to make sure those who are under their influence have a proper perception of Jesus. Their ministry is to lead the people to see the Lord Jesus correctly, and to be prepared to be fed and led by Him to glory. If they do not do this, they will be held accountable for their negligence, for everything has been supplied for them to do the work. If that work is not done, it had better not be because of “the builders.”

In our text, Jesus of Nazareth did not fit in with what these “builders” were doing – no place for Him in the work in which they were engaged. Peter does not gloss this condition as though it did not exist. He plainly tells them “ you builders” have “set at nought” the main Stone!

It ought to be noted that this is also the reason for the general neglect of Jesus today. Men have chosen to specialize in other things, and they can find no prominent place for Jesus in those things. He simply does not fit into them as an emphasis, whose will is supreme and whose work involves deliverance from the world. Such men can use a little Jesus – something like a spiritual spice that supposedly makes their teaching palatable.

However – and it is essential that men know this – Jesus will not take second place! He will not come to assist men in fulfilling objectives that are wholly unrelated to God's revealed and eternal purpose.

WHICH IS THE HEAD OF THE CORNER

“ . . . which is become the head of the corner.” Other versions read, “which has become the chief cornerstone,” NKJV “but which is become the very corner stone ,” NASB “which has become the capstone ,” NIV “which was made the head of the corner,” ASV “which has been made the chief stone of the building,” BBE “which is set in the chief place of the corner,” TNT and “which became the capstone of the arch .” LIVING

CORNER-STONE Job 38:6; Isaiah 28:16; Sept. and N.T. a quoin or block of great importance in binding together the sides of a building. (On Psalm 144:12, see No. 9 above.) Some of the corner-stones in the ancient work of the temple foundations are 17 or 19 feet long, and 7.5 feet thick (Robinson, Researches , 1:422). Cornerstones are usually laid sideways and endways alternately, so that the end of one appears above or below the side-face of the next. At Nineveh the corners are sometimes formed of one angular stone (Layard, Nineveh , 2:201). The corresponding expression, “head of the corner,” in Psalm 118:22, is by some understood to mean the coping or ridge, “coign of vantage,” i.e. top-stone of a building; but as in any part a cornerstone must of necessity be of great importance, the phrase “corner-stone” is sometimes used to denote any principal person, as the princes of Egypt (Isaiah 19:13), and is thus applied to our Lord, who, having been once rejected, was afterward set in the highest honor (Matthew 21:42; see Grotius on Psalm 118; comp. Harmer, Obs . 2:356). The symbolical title of “chief corner-stone” is also applied to Christ in Ephesians 2:20, and 1 Peter 2:8, 16, which last passage is a quotation from Isaiah 28:16, where the Sept. has the same words. The “cornerstone,” or half-underlying buttress, properly makes no part of the foundation, from which it is distinguished in Jeremiah 2:56; though, as the edifice rests thereon, it may be so called. Sometimes it denotes those massive slabs which, being placed towards the bottom of any wall, serve to bind the work together, as in Isaiah 28:16. Of these there were often two layers, without cement or mortar (Bloomfield, Recens. Synop. on Ephesians 2:20). Christ is called a “corner-stone,” stone,” (1.) In reference to his being the foundation of the Christian faith (Ephesians 2:20); (2.) In reference to the importance and conspicuousness of the place he occupies (1 Peter 2:6); and (3.) Since men often stumble against a projecting corner-stone, Christ is therefore so called, because his gospel will be the cause of aggravated condemnation to those who reject it (Matthew 21:44). SEE STUMBLING-STONE . The prophet (Zechariah 10:4), speaking of Judah, after the return from the exile, says, “out of him came [i.e. shall come] forth the corner [i.e. prince], out of him the nail;” probably referring ultimately to the “cornerstone,” the Messiah. Some of the corner-stones in the ancient work of the Temple foundations are 17 or 19 feet long and 7 ½ feet thick. At Nineveh the corners are sometimes formed of one angular stone. The phrase "corner-stone" is applied to our Lord (Isaiah 28:16; Matthew 21:42; 1 Peter 2:6,7).

Binding together the sides of the building. Some of the temple ones are 19 ft. long and 7 ½ thick. Compare Solomon's temple, 1 Kings 5:17; 7:9. Christ is the true grainer stone, laid by the Father in Zion, on whom the whole church rests (Isa. 28:16). He is also "the head stone," or fifth crowning top grainer of the pyramid, in which the whole building meets and culminates (Zech. 4:7). Compare Gen. 49:24; Ps. 118:22; Mt. 21:42; Rom. 9:33,34; Eph. 2:21. FAUSSET'S BIBLE DICTIONARY

Part of the public or imposing buildings, to which importance has been attached in all ages and in many nations, both on account of its actual service and its figurative meaning. Ordinarily its use in the Bible is figurative, or symbolical. No doubt the original meaning was some important stone, which was laid at the foundation of a building. INTERNATIONAL STANDARD ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE BIBLE

In ancient architecture, the “cornerstone,” or “head stone of the corner,” was the primary stone of a building. As seen in the illustration, it not only joined the corners of a building, but was the foundation upon which an entrance arch was based. It is what held everything together, making the building stable.

God has made Jesus the primary Component of life, and of the church itself – the “Cornerstone.” The principal part of the church is not its members, but its Head. It is not its name, but the One presiding over it. It is not its role in society, but Christ’s role within it. Take Jesus out of the church, and it is nothing and has no purpose. The professed church is relevant only to the degree that Christ Jesus is working within it, fulfilling the will of the Father.

In the same way Jesus is the main component of life. No person will benefit from Christ by treating Him as an adjunct or accessory to life. He is not like medicine, to be taken when sick, but stored away when everything appears to be going well. Obtaining grace to help in “the time of need” (Heb 4:16) assumes that we are within the proximity of grace, living in fellowship with Christ and the communion of the Holy Spirit.

One of the Dangers of Our time

One of the great dangers of our time is the growing prevalence of an approach to religion in which Jesus is not the primary component. He is seen more as an assistant designed to help men fulfill their own ambitions. Life in this world is being held forth as the primary life, and thus Jesus is rejected as the “Head of the corner” of life. The nominal church assists the maintenance of this corrupt view by offering all manners extracurricular activities, designed to make carnally-minded people more comfortable. Everyone with even a modicum of understanding knows that Jesus Christ is not the center of such activities. His Gospel is not the primary subject of exposition, and the Scriptures themselves are largely unknown.

Let me be clear about this. There is no place for Jesus other than that of the Head of the corner. If He is not received as the primary Person, and His work as the primary work, He cannot be received, and no advantages can be experienced from Him. Jesus will not take a secondary position to anyone but God the Father Himself. He is the only one who is not subject to Christ (1 Cor 15:27). For Jesus to be anything but primary would be a sin, for the Father has exalted Him as “Head over all things” (Eph 1:22). It is not possible to receive Jesus as anyone but Lord, for that is what He is.

Jesus Refers to David’s Statement

Jesus referred to David’s statement concerning “the builders” rejecting the very Stone that became the Head of the corner. “Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes?” (Matt 21:42; Mk 12:10-11). Luke says of this Stone, “Whosoever shall fall upon that stone shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder” (Luke 20:18). That is, whoever rejects Jesus as the principal Person will be destroyed by Him. Paul affirms that Jesus is “the chief Cornerstone” (Eph 2:20). Peter says of Jesus, “To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious,” (1 Pet 2:4).

Peter also says of Jesus Christ, “Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture, Behold, I lay in Zion a chief corner stone , elect, precious: and he that believeth on Him shall not be confounded. Unto you therefore which believe He is precious: but unto them which be disobedient, the stone which the builders disallowed , the same is made the head of the corner, and a stone of stumbling , and a rock of offence, even to them which stumble at the word, being disobedient: whereunto also they were appointed” (1 Pet 2:6-8). Thus, Jesus is the Stone revealed in three different ways.

Failing to recognize the real Person of Jesus is disastrous in every sense of the word – particularly when we are speaking of “the builders.” Although I have said this before, I must affirm it again. Men cannot be wrong about Jesus!

- The Head of the corner , solidifying the house of God, which is the church.
- A stone of stumbling , that causes men who reject Him to stumble, or err.
- A rock of offense , that causes those who reject Him to fall into a helpless and hopeless state.

Failing to recognize the real Person of Jesus is disastrous in every sense of the word – particularly when we are speaking of “the builders.” Although I have said this before, I must affirm it again. Men cannot be wrong about Jesus!

If men do not receive Jesus as the “Head of the corner,” they will stumble over Him, falling into perdition. To perceive Jesus as anything but Head over all things, and the Objective of living, will cause Him to be offensive to the individual, and thus rejected. That is why Jesus said, “And whosoever shall fall on this Stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder” (Matt 21:44). To “fall on this Stone” means to depend wholly upon Him for salvation, willingly placing our destiny in His hands, and being subject to Him in all things. The result of that will be the destruction of self-will, and a godly sorrow over the vanity to which one has given himself. If, however, the person does not throw himself upon the mercy of the Lord, submitting to Jesus without any qualifications, Jesus will ultimately destroy him. He will “grind him to powder,” or punish him “with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power” (2 Thess 1:9).

Peter is setting the facts before “the builders” – the religious leaders – in order that they might recover from their blunder. He is calling upon them to fall upon the Stone that they had previously rejected, and thereby be saved. Their treatment of Jesus did not have any effect upon who He was and is. He is still the Head of the corner, even though the builders had rejected Him.

NO SALVATION OUTSIDE OF JESUS CHRIST

“ 12 Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.”

Because men speak too casually about salvation, it is particularly important to grasp what Peter here affirms. In heaven, there is zero-tolerance of those who do not receive Jesus as God has presented Him – “the record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-11). I am not speaking of how Jesus is referenced in creedal statements. This gets to the matter of how the individual or group actually goes about appropriating and maintaining salvation. If Jesus in any sense takes the back seat, or is perceived as being in a secondary or subordinate position to anyone or anything else, salvation is forfeited. God will not play games with men on this matter, or engage in semantics and philosophical bantering. Whatever men may perceive to be important, Jesus is always more important! Whatever men may identify as the critical issue, Jesus is a more critical issue! There is no leeway or margin of tolerance on this matter! If, for example, a person defers to anyone other than Jesus, he cannot possibly be a disciple of Jesus, be taught by Him, or led by Him. Here is how Jesus stated the matter: “If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:26). In this case, “hate” means that when there is a conflict between Jesus and father, mother, wife, children, brothers, sisters, or personal preferences, if the person does not choose Jesus, he cannot be Jesus’ disciple.

There is a single “name” through which we are “saved.” It is the “name” of the only Person God has unqualifiedly received, and to whom He has given all power in heaven and earth. He will honor to no other “name” – no other Person.

This is not an ideological statement. This is really the way it is, even though the statement appears to disqualify great segments of the professing church. An absolute requirement for being Jesus’ disciple is forsaking every competing interest. Jesus said, “So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:33). Jesus taught men to consider the cost of following Him, and to do so before they attempt to enroll in his ranks (Lk 14:27-32). Salvation is serious business, and that is why Peter is speaking as he does. Zealously rid yourself of any approach to salvation or being in Christ that allows for your interests to compete with His, or that permits you to give the affections that belong to Him to anyone else. Once you have made this decision, the words that follow will make perfect sense.

NEITHER IS THERE SALVATION IN ANY OTHER

“Neither is there salvation in any other . . .” Other versions read, “Nor is there salvation in any other,” NKJV “And there is salvation in no one else,” NASB “Salvation is found in no one else,” NIV “No one else can save us,” GWN “Neither is there deliverance in any other,” MRD “There is no salvation through anyone else,” NAB “Jesus is the only One who can save people,” IE “And in no other is the great salvation to be found,” WEYMOUTH “And there is salvation in and through no one else,” AMPLIFIED and “Salvation is to be found through Him alone.” GNB

Salvation has to be accomplished by someone outside of ourselves. We are saved by a Person, not a procedure. We are saved by God’s Man, not an organization. While this Savior is eager to save, He is not so eager as to violate the will of His Father, or to allow you to dictate the means by which you are saved. It goes without saying that the person who is to be saved must be on good terms with the Savior. Those good terms are met when faith is found in the individual – an unwavering trust in Jesus that compels the individual to cry out, “What wilt Thou have me to do” (Acts 9:6), and then responds to what he is told.

For multitudes, this has not yet dawned upon the soul: “Neither is there salvation in any other .” I know this is the case, for they seem to have no other interests than their own. They give too much value to their families, their peers and their favorite institutions. They speak too much of themselves, their friends, their church, their will, etc. However, if a person wants salvation, freedom from sin, deliverance from the curse, and reconciliation with God, he must come to the “none other” point – be able to perceive it and desire it above everything else.

NONE OTHER NAME UNDER HEAVEN

“ . . . for there is none other name under heaven . . .” Other versions read, “neither is there another name under heaven,” DARBY “Under all heaven there is no other name,” LIVING “His authority is the only power,” IE and “there is no second name under heaven.” WEYMOUTH

There is a single “name” through which we are “saved.” It is the “name” of the only Person God has unqualifiedly received, and to whom He has given all power in heaven and earth. He will honor to no other “name” – no other Person.

We should be interested in the expression “under heaven,” for that is where we presently are. Solomon spoke of things “done under heaven” (Eccl 1:13), but Peter speaks of a name that has been given “under heaven.” That is, this is a Person who has been given to “every creature under heaven” (Col 1:23). God has only given one name, and there is no other, even though some affirm that one exists.

GIVEN AMONG MEN

“ . . . given among men . . .” Other versions read, “given to men,” NIV “given among mortals,” NRSV “given to people,” CSB “given to the human race,” NAB “for men,” LIVING “given to the world,” IE and “appointed among men.” WILLIAMS

This is a Person who has been provided for men – Adam’s offspring, for he is the federal head of natural men, who, as a consequence of his transgression, are sinners (Rom 5:12). Jesus has not been given to angels, but to men.

By saying “among men,” Peter means that He has been made accessible to men. It would be pointless to declare this name if man could not derive eternal benefits from it. If any person remains ignorant of Jesus, it is not because He has not been made accessible to men. No person will ever be lost because God did not do enough! The catch is that the name of Jesus has been given to the church, who is the custodian of the truth of God (1 Tim 3:15). It is responsible for declaring the name, and making men aware of the salvation of God.

If the church is distracted from its stewardship to other things, a most serious condition will ensue, as confirmed in the Dark Ages, a dreadful period of spiritual darkness that spanned a thousand years (500-1500 A.D.). This was an era in which stagnation and obscurity dominated in literature and art – but chiefly in Christianity . It was a time when, in the minds of men, Jesus was displaced by the institutional church.

WHEREBY WE MUST BE SAVED

“ . . . whereby we must be saved.” Other versions read, “ by which we must be saved,” NKJV “ wherein we must be saved,” ASV “ through which we may have salvation,” BBE “whereby to live,” MRD “by which we are to be saved,” NAB “ in which it behoveth us to be saved,” YLT “for men to call upon to save them,” LIVING “ by and in which we must be saved,” AMPLIFIED and “it is by this name that we must be saved.” PHILLIPS

Being saved by the name of Jesus is not being saved by a formula, or merely fulfilling a routine. The idea here is that Jesus Himself is involved in the salvation. It is through Him that men are forgiven, escape the pollutions of the world, and receive the benefits of the New Covenant. As mediator of the New Covenant, Jesus administers the blessings of that covenant, as affirmed in Hebrews 8:10-12.

- He puts God’s laws into our hearts.
- He writes God’s laws in our minds.
- God becomes our God, not only by profession, but in allegiance and service.
- We become God’s people, being especially blessed by Him.
- We come to know the Lord, becoming acquainted with His ways and purpose.
- Being blotted out, our sins are remembered no more.

Jesus Himself brings to pass what is said to occur, or take place, in those who are made partakers (Heb 3:14) of Him (Heb 6:4-5).

- We are enlightened.
- We taste of the heavenly gift.
- We are made partakers of the Holy Spirit.
- We taste of the powers of the world to come.

The things that are said to occur when we are “saved” are accomplished in and through the exalted Christ – that is what it means to be saved by His name.

- We pass from death unto life (1 John 3:14).
- We die with Christ and are raised with Him (Rom 6:8; Col 3:1).

- Our “old man” is crucified (Rom 6:6).
- We are “made accepted” (Eph 1:6).
- Our names are written in heaven (Heb 12:23).
- We are begotten again to a living hope (1 Pet 1:3).
- We are begotten again to an incorruptible inheritance (1 Pet 1:4).

If Jesus does not save us, we will not be saved. In salvation we do not flee to a code but to a Savior, who not only wrought the basis for our salvation, but also accomplished that salvation in us. There is only one Person who can do this, and His name stands for His Person and everything that has been revealed about Him. God will honor no other name, and so no one else can save.

We are made “partakers of Christ” (Heb 3:14).

All of these, and more, are included in the term “saved.” Does anyone imagine that these experiences can be accomplished by a routine or procedure? These are all experiences that are transcendent to nature. They are not things that can be realized by some lifeless principle or law.

If Jesus does not save us, we will not be saved. In salvation we do not flee to a code but to a Savior, who not only wrought the basis for our salvation, but also accomplished that salvation in us. There is only one Person who can do this, and His name stands for His Person and everything that has been revealed about Him. God will honor no other name, and so no one else can save.

It ought to be noted that salvation denotes preservation as well as deliverance. Not only must a person be delivered from the world and translated into the kingdom of Christ (Col 1:13), that status must be maintained.

- We must also be “kept by the power of God unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time” (1 Pet 1:5).
- We must be kept “from falling” (Jude 1:24), and made to “stand” (Rom 14:4).
- A “way of escape” must be “made” for the saved, in order that they might bear up under temptation (1 Cor 10:13).
- They must be caused to triumph, or they will not do so (2 Cor 2:14).
- “All grace” must be made to abound toward them (2 Cor 9:8).
- The saved must be “filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).
- The “love of the truth” must be given so it can be “received” (2 Thess 2:10-11).
- The word of God must work in us “effectually” (2 Thess 2:13).
- There is also the matter of being made “to increase and abound in love one toward another” (1 Thess 3:12), and even being “taught of God to love one another” (1 Thess 4:9).
- We must be brought “to glory” (Heb 2:10)
- We must realize effective intercession (Heb 7:25), and be “helped” from within by someone greater than ourselves (Rom 8:26-27).

While there is human instrumentality in the salvation of God, the salvation itself, in its entirety, is wrought by Christ Jesus. Once men have, to some profitable degree, seen the greatness of salvation, the absolute necessity of Christ’s involvement becomes apparent.

Someone must make us “perfect in every good work to do His will” (Heb 13:21).

- After we have “suffered a while,” someone must “perfect, establish, strengthen, and settle” us (1 Pet 5:10).
- Faith must be finished as well as authored (Heb 12:2).
- The work of salvation must be continually performed “until the day of Christ” (Phil 1:6).
- Angelic ministers must be sent forth to assist us in our trek through this present evil world (Heb 1:13-14).
- And finally, we must be raised from the dead, receiving a glorious body (Phil 3:20-21).

These are all part and parcel of salvation – of being “saved.” There is no salvation from God that is without all of these glorious realities. And how are they all to be ministered effectively to us? It ought to be very clear that no mortal or group of mortals is capable of conferring or accomplishing such things. They all require a Person who is alive forever more – the Lord Jesus Christ.

No other religion offers such benefits, or anything remotely similar to them. The only other revealed religion – “The Jew’s religion” (Gal 1:13-14) – offered no such benefits. Rather, it “stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation” (Heb 9:10). There was no salvation through it, and it was never intended to be so. The Old Covenant, or the Law, was designed to prepare men for salvation, not to be a means of appropriating it. Therefore we read, “Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster” (Gal 3:24-25). There was no salvation in Moses. The only man prior to Christ that did not come behind Moses was John the Baptist. He himself confessed that Jesus was “preferred” before himself (John 1:15,27,30). John was the one of whom Isaiah prophesied, “The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight” (Matt 3:3). You may rest assured that if salvation was not in Moses or John the Baptist, it cannot possibly be found in some non-Messiah who followed them.

While there is human instrumentality in the salvation of God, the salvation itself, in its entirety, is wrought by Christ Jesus. Once men have, to some profitable degree, seen the greatness of salvation, the absolute necessity of Christ’s involvement becomes apparent. The difficulty is that men tend to have a very small view of “salvation.” They imagine that the forgiveness of sins is the whole of the matter, forgetting about “times of refreshing” and God sending Jesus to dwell with us (Acts 3:19-20).

Why Say These Things

I say these things because of my own background. I come from a heritage in which very little was made of this verse (Acts 4:12). Even though Peter makes much of this point, placing an obvious emphasis upon it, “we” did not make much of it. I know the conviction of realizing how very little was said about Christ’s necessary and pivotal role in salvation. Although, by God’s grace, I was given to correct my emphasis before I was twenty years old, I know of poor souls who remain in the grip of a lifeless and traditional religion, even though they are in their twilight years. This is a tragedy than cannot be overstated.

THERE IS NO OTHER ONE

Peter has charged “the builders” with rejecting the fundamental “Stone” of the house of God. Search as they may, as long as that “Stone” lies on the trash-heap of neglect, the building can be neither stable nor safe. There is absolutely no sense in which any individual can be “saved” while Jesus is neglected, and other foundations are either sought, declared, or embraced. It is not possible to be “saved” while rejecting Jesus Himself as the chief Component of “the house of God, which is the church of the Living God, the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15).

From a practical point of view, Jesus must be seen as the main Person in the church. He is its “Head,” and all distributions of grace are through Him. In fact, the church has absolutely no significance apart from Jesus. It has not been placed in the world to be a community leader, social reformer, or political advisor. Its exclusive role is to do the work of Christ. That has to do with preparing people for the revealed grand consummation when, according to God’s “eternal purpose,” and “in the dispensation of the fulness of times, He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him” (Eph 1:10). Apart from this objective, neither Jesus nor His church has any relevance. Everything of genuine value blends with that purpose, and, through heavenly influences, moves toward its realization.

Unfortunately, this has a strange sound to many professing Christians. They have adopted an approach to religion in which Jesus is not perceived as unqualifiedly essential. He can, in their mind, be neglected, or be received in a secondary role.

THEY SAW PETER AND JOHN AND TOOK NOTE OF THEM

“ 13 Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.”

Peter and John are not speaking as the scribes were noted for teaching – giving their seemingly learned disquisitions. During Jesus’ ministry the people noted how differently He spoke: “For He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes” (Matt 7:29; Mk 1:22). The Living Bible reads as follows: “The congregation was surprised at His sermon, because He spoke as an authority, and didn’t try and prove His points by quoting others – quite unlike what they were used to hearing.” Now, the Temple authorities will behold the different manner in which Christ’s apostles spoke.

THEY SAW THE BOLDNESS

“Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John . . .” Other versions read, “when they observed the confidence,” NASB “When they saw the courage,” NIV “When they saw that Peter and John were without fear,” BBE “seeing the constancy,” DOUAY “how boldly they spoke,” GWN “the speech . . . which they pronounced confidently,” MRD “the fearlessness shown by,” NJB “beholding the openness,” YLT “were not afraid to speak,” IE “so fearlessly outspoken,” WEYMOUTH “the glad fearlessness,” MONTGOMERY “the boldness and unfettered eloquence,” AMPLIFIED and “the complete assurance.” PHILLIPS

The word “boldness” comes from the Greek word parrhsian (par-ras-ian), which has the following lexical meaning. “Freedom in speaking, unreservedness in speaking . . . freely, openly, frankly, without concealment or ambiguity,” THAYER “courage, confidence, boldness,” FRIBERG and “boldness, confidence, assurance before the public.” UBS

The perception of “boldness,” or unembarrassed confidence, in Peter and John drew the attention of their critics. They were not intimidated by religious authorities and spoke with an obvious confidence. Not only was the Holy Spirit giving them insights and words that they might speak, He was also strengthening their hearts and minds. As they spoke, the truth was clear to them, and it was so refreshing and satisfying to them that it thoroughly neutralized any threats against them.

They did not speak haltingly as though they were not sure of what they were saying. They had no doubts concerning the Scriptures they had expounded, but knew they were right. They knew their view of the exalted Jesus was precisely correct. They knew their assessment of the actions of the Jews was flawless. There was no doubt in their minds concerning the rejection of Jesus by “the builders.”

These days, it is exceedingly rare to hear a man speak for God that exudes this kind of confidence. It is as though the church has been captured by the modern-day scribes – the religious academicians. When they evince some kind of confidence, it is rooted in the Greek, or in a hermetical principle, or in an historical position. It is not, however, rooted in spiritual insight or understanding. Perhaps they have assembled a collage of Scriptures that seems to support what they are saying. Any confidence they may have is traceable to the wisdom of men, not spiritual enlightenment or empowerment. They do not have the “spirit of faith” that moved Paul to say, “We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak; knowing . . .” (2 Cor 4:13-14).

I have personally been impressed with the number of supposedly learned men who cannot speak confidently and boldly concerning the pivotal matters and principal Person of the Kingdom. Often I have seen seemingly seasoned leaders unable to speak on the spur of the moment, or take the advantage of an opportunity to speak for Christ. It is a sad commentary on the impotence of a purely pedantic thrust.

In our text, we are being exposed to how men speak when they are “filled with the Holy Spirit” (4:8). This is a condition to be coveted, and there is nothing in the Word of God to suggest that this manner became obsolete after the first century.

PERCEIVED THEY WERE UNLEARNED

“ . . . and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men . . .” Other versions read, “perceived that they were uneducated and untrained men,” NKJV “ understood they were uneducated and untrained,” NASB “realized that they were unschooled, ordinary men ,” NIV “perceived that they were uneducated, common men ,” RSV “men of no education or learning ,” BBE “ unlettered and uninstructed ,” DARBY “ illiterate and ignorant ,” DOUAY “unlearned and without knowledge ,” GENEVA “No education or special training ,” GWN “unschooled ordinary men,” NIB “ uneducated laymen ,” NJB “with no special training in the Scriptures ,” NLT “ unlettered and plebeian [common, lowly],” YLT “obviously uneducated non-professionals ,” LIVING “illiterate persons, untrained in the schools ,” WEYMOUTH and “they were unlearned and untrained in the schools [common men with no educational advantages].” AMPLIFIED

It is essential that we comprehend what this text is saying. It is not saying that Peter and John were speaking clumsily, and as those who were illiterate. Reading their words should be sufficient to confirm that. I know of no individual who has ever read this text and concluded that Peter and John were crude and untaught men.

The point that boggled the minds of their critics is that these men had not been taught in their schools, yet spoke with confident boldness. They did not rely on rhetoric, or the astute observations of the elders, or the scholarly disquisitions of the scribes. This is the same thing they noted about Jesus. “And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?” (John 7:15). And again, “And when He was come into his own country, He taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?” (Matt 13:54). Even as a twelve year old boy, the doctors of the Law “were astonished at His understanding and answers” (Luke 2:47).

Those before whom Peter and John were now standing could not conceive of anyone being an expert in Scripture who was not taught in their schools – who had not been subjected to their training.

The religious schools of men too often produce a kind of theological clone. Official and historical positions are taught. There can even be theological buzz-words, catch phrases, and cliches that identify the particular school one attended.

You may remember that Paul said he was “brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers” (Acts 22:3). Yet, we have no record of anyone hearing Paul and concluding that he had been taught by Gamaliel. Further, none of his epistles makes any reference to Gamaliel or what he taught. The wisdom employed by Paul, as well as Peter and John, did not come from men. They were not clones of a religious system, but were men filled with the Holy Spirit.

The religious schools of men too often produce a kind of theological clone. Official and historical positions are taught. There can even be theological buzz-words, catch phrases, and cliches that identify the particular school one attended. I say this knowing full well that some who attend these schools rise above these trends and lay hold of the truth of God in spite of their surrounding. Their views come from their faith, not their training. Their boldness is the product of their confidence and assurance, not rhetorical skills or knowing how to manage a crowd.

The Example of My Father

My own father, Fred O. Blakely, is a most excellent example of one with learning who did not appropriate it in the schools of men. He lived during hard times, during and after the great Depression. As a result of economic conditions, he was forced to leave school after the seventh grade, even though he was an excellent student, and delighted in the appropriation of knowledge. At that time, he was twelve years old. Some, no doubt, considered him a helpless victim of circumstance.

As he advanced in years, he became a typesetter in the printing business. When he worked for a newspaper, he carefully read everything he set in type. When he later worked for a book publisher, he read every book he set in type, including three major sets of encyclopedias. When he was away from work, he devoured the Scriptures, memorizing great portions of the Word, and constantly seeking understanding from the Lord. During the same time, a well known man of God who taught in the area in which my father lived (Jesse A. Mason), observed my father’s love of the truth, and spent time with him, sharing what he had been given to see.

In his mid-twenties, my father began publishing “The Apostles’ Doctrine,” a periodical of several pages in which he shared his various insights and convictions. Later, he published two major volumes entitled “The Apostles’ Doctrine. These were widely distributed throughout the world. During the sixties and seventies, copies were given to thousands of Bible College graduates.

No one who has ever heard my father speak, or read his writings, has ever concluded that he was uneducated, simple, or unlearned. All, however, could pick up on the fact that he had not been trained in the standard religious schools. Today, he is with the Lord, and a host of insightful souls can trace their spiritual beginnings and advancements to his influence.

Today, it is very difficult for such men to surface – at least in the organized church. Some are even persuaded that no decisive influence can be exerted for Christ unless one is professionally trained for the work. They believe they will not be received unless they have acceptable religious credentials. It is not my purpose to condemn such men. However, I will observe that I have personally never known a man who relied upon such credentials, and yet by that means became a great influence for Christ.

What the Jewish council was witnessing were two men who had been taught by Jesus, were being illuminated by the Holy Spirit, and were dominated by faith and hope. They were not able to detect the source of Peter and John’s boldness, but were keenly aware of the fact that it was not received in their halls of learning.

Preachers and Teachers are Responsible

Developing effective communicators of the truth is the responsibility of every insightful preacher and teacher. As it is written, “Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ” (2 Tim 2:1-3). Note this sacred charge.

- Be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. There is a strength that comes from the grace of God. It enables one to resist evil encroachments, and live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world (Tit 2:11-12). The servant of God must be able to stand, press toward the mark, and resist the devil.

- Commit what is known to faithful men, who will be able to teach others also. No person is an end unto themselves. What they have been given to see is to be committed, or entrusted, to faithful men – men who have proved their allegiance to Christ – whose faithfulness to God has been confirmed. These are men who will be “able to teach others also.” If no such men are found where one is laboring, then one must labor to produce such. If they are still not present, then the minister should question the propriety of remaining there.

- Endure hardness as a good soldier. The servant of God must be able to stand in the furnace of affliction without wavering, and sit in the den of lions without being intimidated. The work of the Lord is no occupation for weaklings and overly sensitive people. This is why James wrote, “My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation,” or “will be judged more strictly” NIV (James 3:1).

None of these requirements (being strong, committing what is learned to faithful men, and enduring hardness) can be achieved in a purely academic environment. These are all of an intensely personal nature, and can only be realized while in fellowship with the Lord Jesus (1 Cor 1:9), and walking in the communion of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 13:14).

What the Jewish council was witnessing were two men who had been taught by Jesus, were being illuminated by the Holy Spirit, and were dominated by faith and hope. They were not able to detect the source of Peter and John’s boldness, but were keenly aware of the fact that it was not received in their halls of learning.

THEY MARVELED

“ . . . they marvelled . . . ” Other versions read, “they were marveling ,” NASB “they were astonished,” NIV “they were amazed ,” NRSV “they wondered ,” RSV “they were greatly surprised ,” BBE “they were wondering ,” YLT and “they were staggered .” PHILLIPS

The carnal mind cannot process the truth or properly assess those who speak it. Natural men (1 Cor 2:14) can only associate boldness and confidence with knowing the party-line, or the professional culturing of natural aptitudes. They cannot conceive of a person understanding human nature without having taken a course in psychology. They find it difficult to believe anyone can understand the Scriptures without an understanding of the Greek and Hebrew languages. They do not have the faintest notion how a man could assemble a group of people with a common interest in the truth of God without taking a course in church-planting. Such people view books like Romans and Hebrews beyond the reach of those uneducated in their schools, requiring special advanced training.

These people consider learning valid, only if it comes from their institutions. In their judgment, all other learning, at the very best, is vastly inferior.

Now, these men have heard Peter and John, and it is obvious to them that their minds have been challenged. What astounded them was that they could speak in such a manner without having gone

THEY TOOK KNOWLEDGE OF THEM

“ . . . and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.” Other versions read, “ they realized they had been with Jesus,” NKJV “and began to recognize them as having been with Jesus,” NASB “ they took note that these men had been with Jesus,” NIV “and recognized them as companions of Jesus,” NRSV “and knew they had been with Jesus,” CSB “and knew them, that they had been with Jesus,” GENEVA “and recognized them as having been conversant with Jesus ,” MRD “they recognized them as associates of Jesus ,” NJB “they were taking knowledge also of them that with Jesus they had been,” YLT “and realized what being with Jesus had done for them ,” LIVING and “They recognized them as men who had been with Jesus .” PHILLIPS

First, let us dispense with an imagination that seems to be reflected in certain translations. There is an insinuation that the council physically “recognized” Peter and John as having been with Jesus. It is as though they said, “Oh yes, we remember seeing these men with Jesus when He was teaching here and there.” This is a wholly erroneous view. Note the construction of the sentence: They saw the boldness of Peter and John . . . perceived they were unlearned and ignorant men . . . marveled . . . and took note that they had been with Jesus. The thing provoking these reactions was not the appearance of the Peter and John, but what they said, and the confident manner in which they spoke. How is it that what they said would move the men to look at their appearance and observe, “Oh yes, we remember now: these men were companions of Jesus.”

AN INSIGHTFUL WORD

“Had they not had his teaching, the present company would soon have confounded them; but they spoke with so much power and authority that the whole sanhedrin was confounded. He who is taught in spiritual matters by Christ Jesus has a better gift than the tongue of the learned. He who is taught in the school of Christ will ever speak to the point, and intelligibly too; though his words may not have that polish with which they who prefer sound to sense are often carried away.” ADAM CLARKE

First, Jesus had told His disciples they would be His witnesses, testifying of Him, and by His power. “But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth ” (Acts 1:8). Now, after hearing Peter and John, these men thought of Jesus, and of their association with Him – not a mere physical association, but by means of their message and the confidence with which they spoke. Because Jesus said they would be witnesses “unto” Him, it is evident that this involved Divine purpose or objective. That is, this was not something that men would be forced to conclude through mere human rationality. Rather, it would happen by Divine determination. I gather that Jesus Himself, through the Holy Spirit, was in some way instrumental in men making that association.

How Are Men Associated With Jesus?

How are men identified as being associated with Jesus – being His disciples, or followers?

- By profession. Peter and John did not hesitate to declare their identity with the Lord Jesus Christ, declaring Him as the One in whose name they were ministering. “ . . . we are witnesses . . . His name, through faith in His name” (3:15-16), “by the name of Jesus of Nazareth” (4:10).

- By their words. The words of Peter and John evidenced their obvious identity with Jesus. Were it not for Him, they would have had nothing to say. “In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth” (3:6), “ Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel” (4:8), “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole” (4:10).

- By their deeds. The works of Peter and John were of the same gender as those done by the Lord Jesus. “And His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all” (3:16). “If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole” (4:9).

- By their focus. There was a marked focus in the speaking of these holy men. Commencing with Peter’s words to the lame man, there are forty-three references to Deity in his words. Jesus Christ (2), God (9), His Son Jesus (2) Whom (5), Him (5), the Holy One (1), the Just (1), Prince of life (1), His name (2), His (2), Christ (1), He (3), the Lord (2), Which (2), Prophet (2), the name of Jesus Christ (1), the Stone (1), the Head (1). That focus was very obvious in the things they proclaimed. “And killed the Prince of life, whom God raised from the dead” (3:15), “God, having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him to bless you” (3:26), “preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead” (4:2), “Jesus Christ of Nazareth . . . whom God raised from the dead” (4:9), “none other name under heaven, given among men” 4:12).

- By their handling of the Scriptures. The manner in which they handled the Scriptures bore an undeniable similarity to the manner of the Master Teacher himself. “God before had shown by the mouth of all His holy prophets” (3:18), “which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets” (3:21), “Moses truly said unto the fathers” (3:22), “all the prophets from Samuel and those that follow after” (3:24) “the covenant made with our fathers, saying unto Abraham” (3:25), “this is the Stone net at nought of you builders” (4:11).

- By their demeanor. Peter and John conducted themselves as their Lord did. They went to the Temple for noble motives, and spoke as strangers and pilgrims in the earth. “Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour” (3:1), “Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk” (3:6), “And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?” (3:12).

- By their power. The works of Peter and John were reminiscent of the works of the Lord Jesus. They were characterized by power, or authority, which even the spectators could not deny. “. . . Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?” (3:12). “And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?” (4:7).

- By their boldness or confidence. Peter and John were not intimidated by men – even men of religious significance. They spoke respectfully to them, but altered none of their words to dull their power or leave their critics imagining they were afraid of them. “If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole” (4:9), Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John . . .” (4:13).

- By their clarity and pointed proclamations. There was no ambiguity in the words of Peter and John. They spoke clearly and to the point – a manner that clearly characterized their Master. “The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus, whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go” (3:13), “Unto you first God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities” (3:26),

“This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among However, in a society that has very little understanding of God, His ways, His Son, and His Word, preachers and teachers must take special care how they speak. men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:11-12).

AN OBSERVATION

Some of the unfortunate traits of our time are Scriptural illiteracy and very little acquaintance with the Lord Jesus Christ. All of this makes it exceedingly difficult to make an association of ministers with Jesus, for He is largely unknown. “Another Jesus” (2 Cor 11:4) is being proclaimed, and it has caused all manner of complications. Were it not for the Holy Spirit working through the Word of God, particularly the Gospel of Christ, it would be well-nigh impossible for anyone to be saved.

Peter and John could speak knowing that their listeners had a working acquaintance with Scripture. They could draw attention to pivotal texts that awakened the interest of the people. However, in a society that has very little understanding of God, His ways, His Son, and His Word, preachers and teachers must take special care how they speak. They must refuse to speak in the religious jargon of the day, for the people will come to wrong conclusions. If, for example, they speak of “praise and worship,” “the true New Testament church,” “cheap grace,” Sovereign grace,” “the baptism of the Holy Ghost with the evidence of speaking in tongues,” “the plan of salvation,” “the centrality of the family,” and other such terms, their message will have no power to it. The Holy Spirit does not work with such words. They are not a sword in His hands. Such terms are very small containers with very large holes, and cannot contain the truth, or bring grace to the hearts of the people.

This is a day when preachers and teachers must make a point to fulfill this word, “Which things also we speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth; comparing spiritual things with spiritual” (1 Cor 2:13). Those are the words to be affirmed and expounded, for the Spirit works through them – the Word of God being His sword. Even though, owing to ignorance, the hearers may not be able to detect the speaker has been with Jesus, the Holy Spirit will use such words to do His unique work, and bring holy influences to bear upon men..

THEY COULD SAY NOTHING AGAINST IT

“ 14 And beholding the man which was healed standing with them, they could say nothing against it.”

We are living in a time when religious appearance does not always match religious claims. There are professed healed people who still have the symptoms of their illness, and those who say they are forgiven, yet remain under the dominion of sin. We have New Testament churches without new Testament manners, and those who say they believe, yet do not possess the evidences of faith. Such things have become so common that scarcely a person has not become accustomed to them. Assuring us God really does work, even though there is no evidence of it, we are told not to judge a book by its cover, even though Jesus said we are to judge a tree by its fruit. When we are told not to judge according appearance (John 7:24), it is not suggested that holy people can have a wicked appearance, or that believers can appear as though they were unbelievers. The warning is that what appears good may not be good – not that what appears evil may not be evil. That is, a wicked person can feign godliness, but a righteous person does not and cannot feign wickedness.

BEHOLDING THE MAN WHICH WAS HEALED

“ And beholding the man which was healed standing with them . . . ” Other versions read, “But since they could see the man who had been healed standing there with them,” NIV “When they saw the man who had been cured standing beside them,” NRSV “And, seeing that the man who had been made well was there with them ,” BBE and “And they saw that the lame man, who had been healed, stood near them.” MRD

This is the manner of the Kingdom – the evidence of Divine working is put before the people. When Jesus the Righteous One was among men, the evidence of His righteousness was set before them. He challenged His critics, “Which of you convinceth Me of sin?” (John 8:46). He boldly said, “the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in Me” (John 14:30) – and no one could contradict it! He confessed, “I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in His love” (John 15:10) – and there was not a shred of evidence that was at variance with that statement. It is written of Him that He, “was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin” (Heb 4:15). The two thousand years that have followed that statement has not produced one valid claim to the contrary.

Now, since the Kingdom has been given to Jesus, it maintains the same qualities as its Head. When a legitimate work has been done, there is no evidence that can successfully negate it. For example, when Saul of Tarsus was converted, some of the disciples were hesitant to believe it, and feared that his presence among them was a subtle means of carrying out a persecution against them (Acts 9:26). However, “Barnabas took him, and brought him to the apostles, and declared unto them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that He had spoken to him, and how he had preached boldly at Damascus in the name of Jesus” (Acts 9:27). It is written that following that, Saul “was with them coming in and going out at Jerusalem” (Acts 9:28). There was not a single time when his life contradicted what Barnabas had said of him. That is the manner of the Kingdom.

When there is “newness of life” it manifests itself outwardly, just as surely as the healing of a lame man was confirmed by his outward appearance. Peter said of the man that was healed, “the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all” (Acts 3:16). There was nothing about the man that remotely suggested he did not have “perfect health.” NASB He had no limp, did not appear weak, and did not wear down as the evening came upon the people. He did not cry out with pain, had no difficulty walking, and was even leaping vigorously. The appearance confirmed what had been done.

And now, Peter and John make sure the evidence is kept before the people. I do not know if the man went to jail with Peter and John, but at this time, he was standing by their side – incontrovertible proof that a mighty work had been done. The judges could not help but see him. There he was, a living contradiction of their stilted theology.

Something To Ponder

The Gospels contain the record of at least thirty-five miracles wrought by the Lord Jesus. These do not include His death, in which He laid down His own sinless life, and His resurrection, in which he took back His life. Neither do they include the times when He healed multitude of people of divers conditions (Matt 4:24; 8:16; 12:15; 14:14; 15:30; 19:2; 21:14; Lk 4:40; 5:15; 6:19; 9:11). Because of the relevancy of this, I want to take the liberty to list our Lord's miracles.

1. Turned water into wine (John 1:1-11).
2. Healed the nobleman's son (John 4:46-54).
3. Commanded a great draught of fish (Luke 5:1-11).
4. Healed a demoniac with an unclean spirit (Mk 1:23-26; Lk 4:33-36).
5. Healed Peter's mother-in-law of a fever (Matt 8:14-17; Mk 1:29-31; Lk 4:38-39).
6. Cleansed a leper (Matt 8:1-4; Mk 1:40-45; Lk 5:12-16).

- 26). 7. Healed a paralytic carried to Him by four men (Matt 9:1-8; Mk 2:1-12; Lk 5:17-26).
8. Healed an impotent man at the pool of Bethesda (John 5:1-16).
9. Restored a withered hand to wholeness (Matt 12:9-13; Mk 3:1-5; Lk 6:6-11).
10. Restored a centurion's servant (Matt 8:5-13; Lk 7:1-10).
11. Raised a widow's son from the dead (Lk 7:11-16).
12. Healed a demoniac of blindness and dumbness (Matt 12:22-37; Lk 11:14-15).
13. Stilled the tempest (Matt 8:23-27; Mk 4:35-41; Lk 8:22-25).
14. Stilled the tempest again (Matt 14:32).
15. Casts a legion of demons out of the Gadarene (Matt 8:28-34; Mk 5:1-20; Lk 8:26-39).
16. Raises the daughter of Jairus from the dead (Matt 9:18-26; Mk 5:22-24,35-41; Lk 8:41-56).
17. Cures a woman with an issue of blood (Matt 9:20-22; Mk 5:25-34; Lk 8:43-48).
18. Restores sight to two blind men (Matt 9:27-31).
19. Feeds five thousand men with five loaves and two fishes (Matt 14:15-21; Mk 6:35-44; Lk 9:12-17; John 6:5-14).
20. Walks on the sea again (Matt 14:22-33; Mk 6:45-52; John 6:16-21).
21. Heals a demon possessed daughter of a Syrophenician woman (Matt 15:21-28; Mk 7:24-30).
22. Feeds four thousand men with seven loaves and a few little fishes (Matt 15:32-39; Mk 8:1-9).
23. Restores one who was deaf and had an impediment of speech (Mk 7:31-37).
24. Restores a blind man from Bethsaida (Mk 8:22-26).
25. Restores a lunatic child (Matt 17:14-21; Mk 9:14-29; Lk 9:37-43).
26. Causes a fish to deliver tribute money to Peter (Matt 17:24-27).
27. Restores ten lepers (Lk 17:11-19).
28. Opens the eyes of a man born blind (John 9:1-41).
29. Raises Lazarus from the dead (John 11:1-45).
30. Heals a woman with a spirit of infirmity, bowed together for eighteen years (Lk 13:10-17).
31. Cures a man with dropsy (Lk 14:1-6).
32. Restores two blind men near Jericho (Matt 20:29-34; Mk 10:46-52; Lk 18:35-43).
33. Curses a fig tree (Matt 21:17-22; Mk 11:12-14,20-24).
34. Heals the ear of Malchus, cut off by Peter (Lk 22:49-51).
35. Commands a second draught of fish (John 21:6).

Keep in mind, these were only samples of the mighty works of Jesus. John said of the signs wrought by Jesus after His resurrection specifically, and throughout His ministry in general: "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of His disciples, which are not written in this book" (John 20:30).

It would be of incalculable benefit if a holy church could be held forth as confirmation of the glorious work of the Savior. It certainly would not remove opposition to the truth, nor would it rid us of skeptics. It would, however, bring a greater glory to the doctrine if it was adorned with godly lives.

Yet, in all of those miracles, there was not a single instance in which the outward appearance did not perfectly confirm that the work had been done. No blind man remained partially blind. No lame man remained crippled to some small degree. No person healed of deafness required a hearing aid. There is no record of demons repossessing those from whom Jesus had expelled them. If Jesus fed a multitude they “were all filled” (Lk 9:17). Of course, these things are all evident, and no one with understanding contests the truth of them.

None of Jesus’ enemies charged Him with deceiving people with His miracles. They sought to charge Him with working these miracles through the power of Satan, but no one suggested the miracles were not real. That is the manner of the Kingdom – the result of Divine working confirms its reality. That is what we have in our text: a lame man who was healed who displays no evidence of ever being lame.

Making the Transition

We must be able to make the transition to spiritual realities, of which our Lord’s miracles were types. Is it possible for the benefits of the New Covenant to be realized, and yet there is no evidence of them. Permit me to name a few of them.

- A new heart (Ezek 36:26; Acts 15:9).
- A new spirit (Ezek 36:26; Rom 8:16).
- The circumcision of the heart (Col 2:11-12).
- The experience of newness of life (Rom 6:4).
- Reconciled to God (Rom 5:10).
- A new creation in which old things pass away and all things become new (2 Cor 5:17).
- The Holy Spirit sent into our hearts (Gal 4:6).
- Delivered from the power of darkness (Col 1:13).
- Born again (1 Pet 1:23).
- Receiving the love of the truth (2 Thess 2:10).

Is it possible for these to actually occur, and yet there be no evidence of them? And if it is possible, how can it be established that they took place?

I am aware that our condition is complicated by the presence of the “old man” (Eph 4:22; Col 3:9), also referred to as “the flesh” (Gal 5:17), and “the natural man” (1 Cor 2:14). It is possible for inconsistencies to occur in our lives because of this condition. For the believer, this is very troubling, as Romans 7:14-25 confirms. However, the absence of evidence of the new creation is also to concern us. That is why we are to examine ourselves to see if we are in the faith (2 Cor 13:5).

It would be of incalculable benefit if a holy church could be held forth as confirmation of the glorious work of the Savior. It certainly would not remove opposition to the truth, nor would it rid us of skeptics. It would, however, bring a greater glory to the doctrine if it was adorned with godly lives. If those who profess to be Christians had an obvious longing for glory, and it was equally apparent that they did not place an inordinate value on the things of this world, it might even cause some to be ashamed that they oppose the truth. Thus Paul wrote, “Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded.

In all things showing thyself a pattern of good works: in doctrine showing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you ” (Titus 2:6-8). Peter also wrote, “Having a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ ” (1 Pet 3:16). Again he wrote, “Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evildoers, they may by your good works , which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation” (1 Pet 2:12). And again, “For so is the will of God, that with well doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men ” (1 Pet 2:15).

An Example

Take, for example, a circumstance with which many of us are familiar. Even though the Scriptures speak with great clarity concerning baptism into Christ, many groups have chosen to view it as an option that is not really necessary. I come from a background in which great stress was placed on baptism. Formal debates were held on the subject, and baptism was aggressively promoted. However, there was a very troubling circumstance in the presence of all of this controversy. The people with whom I was identified were not generally a holy people. They appeared no different than the ones who did not practice baptism. Newness of life was not generally apparent among them, nor was any death with Christ, or circumcision of the heart – all of which are associated with baptism. The people were much like a group of helpless cripples, sitting on the ground and saying they had been healed. If those who faithfully spoke the truth about baptism could have pointed to a people who had the evidence of real baptism in them, their words would not have been so easily contested.

It is time for the evidence of newness of life to be presented to the world. Of course, it really has to be present for this to be done – just like the man in our text had to really be healed before the people really noticed him. It is out of order to tell people who say they are Christians to “act like Christians” – just as surely as it would have been out of order for Peter to commission the former lame man to “Go, and act like you are healed!”

That is how the work of the Lord is – whether it is Israel crossing the red Sea, the defeat of the Amalekites while Moses’ hands are lifted up, David slaying Goliath, or lame man made whole – it cannot be denied!

THEY COULD SAY NOTHING AGAINST IT

“ . . . they could say nothing against it. ” Other versions read, “they had nothing to say in reply,” NASB “there was nothing they could say ,” NIV “they had nothing to say in opposition ,” NRSV “they were not able to say anything against it,” BBE “they had nothing to say in response ,” CSB “they couldn't say anything against the two apostles ,” GWN “and they could say nothing to confront them ,” MRD “they could find no answer ,” NJB “the council could hardly discredit the healing,” LIVING “they had no reply to make,” WEYMOUTH “they could not contradict the fact or say anything in opposition,” AMPLIFIED “they could find no effective reply ,” PHILLIPS and “But they could not deny what had happened.” CEV

The evidence standing before those who were judging Peter and John was so potent that they could not deny it. Later they will confess, “that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it ” (Acts 4:16).

These judges could not speak against what had been done. They could not point to a flaw in the man who once sat at the gate of the Temple. His feet were not deformed. His ankles were strong and able to support him. Although he had never walked before, he now had great dexterity, walking, and even leaping, while he praised the Lord.

That is how the work of the Lord is – whether it is Israel crossing the red Sea, the defeat of the Amalekites while Moses’ hands are lifted up, David slaying Goliath, or lame man made whole – it cannot be denied! Men may not like it, but they cannot deny that something has happened to those in whom Jesus has really worked. Professing Christians who do not carry some evidence of new life within them are in a precarious position.

There are countless people who wear the name of Jesus who are a living contradiction of His salvation. They are like a man standing on crutches boasting that he has been healed of lameness, or a man with glasses testifying that he has been healed of blindness. Suffice it to say, such circumstances are a disgrace.

CONCLUSION

There is such an abrasiveness between the truth of God and institutional religion that it causes expressed conflict – like the Temple authorities arresting, incarcerating, and interrogating Peter and John. This was not a mere battle between human personalities. Ultimately, Peter and John were confronting the devil himself – the personality that was dominating the Jewish council.

This kind of dominance differed from demonic oppression, as evidenced in the demon-possessed people Jesus liberated. Those demons wrought all manner of physical afflictions upon the people: dumbness (Matt 9:32), a bowed back (Lk 13:11), blindness and dumbness (Matt 12:22), and a child thrown into convulsions, and into fire, and water (Matt 17:15-18). While these were the work of the devil, there is another kind of work that he does – a work that is not so evident. He takes the Word out of the hearts of those who have no interest in it (Lk 8:12). He also blinds the minds of those who do not believe (2 Cor 4:4). He can tempt people who do not control their lusts, drawing them into immorality (1 Cor 7:5). Through subtlety he can cause the minds of men to be corrupted from the simplicity that in Christ, so that their religion becomes pretentious (2 Cor 11:3). Through deceptive devices, he can gain the advantage over professing believers so that they serve him rather than God (2 Cor 2:11). He hurls temptations at believers – “fiery darts” – that are designed to lure them into sin (Eph 6:16).

This latter manner of working is what the apostles were facing. Just as with Jesus, no demon-possessed wild man ever attacked them. Their opposition originated in a rational form, even though it often led to beatings and other forms of physical abuse. They faced aberrant reasoning – contradicting intellectualism. Those who opposed them were not driven by madness, but by opposing concepts and persuasions.

This kind of opposition is the most dangerous because it wears the cloak of rationality. To be sure, it can erupt in the most vicious external abuse imaginable. Yet, at its root, it is not found in the physiological – the realm of flesh and blood, or living matter. This is why it is written, “For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places” (Eph 6:12). These evil personalities corrupt the mind, and they delight to do so through religion.

Throughout the book of Acts, the opposition of holy men will largely come in the name of religion. There was much opposition from corrupt Jews, as in our text (Acts 6:9-14; 7:1-60; 9:23-24; 13:50-51; 14:19; 17:5,13-15; 18:12-18; 23:12-15; 2 Cor 11:24; 1 Thess 2:14-15). There were also professing followers of Christ who proved to be opponents (1 Cor 9:3; 2 Cor 10:10; Phil 1:16; 1 Tim 1:19-20; 2 Tim 2:17-18; 4:14; 3 John 1:9). Even when Paul and Silas were beaten and cast into prison in Philippi, it was at the instigation of religious men who “made silver shrines for Diana,” a goddess of the Ephesians (Acts 19:24-35).

Therefore, in this book we are, among many other things, being subjected to the very nature of the “good fight of faith” (1Tim 6:12). A fight involves facing opponents and engaging in warfare.

Effective weaponry is required, as well as an alert military stance, consistency, and vigilance. Very often, the greatest opposition does not come from the worldly sector, but rather from the religious sector. It is important that you have a grasp of this circumstance.

DIALOG BETWEEN PETER AND THE LEADERS

“ 4:15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves, 16 Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it. 17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name. 18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus. 19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. 20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. 21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done. 22 For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was showed.” (Acts 4:15-22)

INTRODUCTION

The initial answer of Peter has moved the council to withdraw for a brief caucus. The apostle has proved a bit challenging for them, even though they considered him to be “unlearned and ignorant.” The wisdom of God that is graciously given to men is precisely that – wisdom! As also confirmed in Stephen, it is a wisdom that cannot be successfully resisted, or coped with by those who are opposed to it (Acts 6:10). This is precisely why Peter and John have been arrested, as though they were lawbreakers. Their opponents were not able to contend with what they were saying, so they resorted to threats and attempts to restrain them.

Because the leaders cannot contend with Peter and John on a rational level, they determine to stop the spread of this Gospel by threatening them. However, when they called for the two disciples to stand again before them, and informed them of their decision, they found it had no effect at all upon the men. They continued to speak boldly, challenging the council to consider if it was right to listen to men rather than to God. They then informed their judges that could not refrain from speaking what they had seen and heard, whether it met with their approval or not. The words of Peter and John, coupled with the people glorifying God for the work that had been done, so frustrated the council, that they would let them go.

It is important to take note of who is opposing Peter and John. It is not the political authorities – even though Pilate had been known to mingle the blood of some Jews with their sacrifices. Some people had “told Jesus about what had happened to some people from Galilee. Pilate had killed those people while they were worshiping, mixing their own blood with the blood of the animals they were sacrificing” IE (Lk 13:1). He had also had Jesus crucified, violating his own conscience, to please the people. Yet, this wretched man was not interfering with the preaching of Peter and John. Nor, indeed, was Herod, who had also joined in the responsibility for Christ’s death. He too was no defender of the faithful, and even “killed James the brother of John with the sword . . . because he saw it pleased the Jews” (Acts 12:2-3). Yet, even that despot was not seeking to stop Peter and John from preaching. Instead, their opponents were the “rulers of the people, and elders of Israel” – God’s chosen people.

When Peter and John began preaching “through Jesus the resurrection of the dead,” it “grieved” these leaders (4:2). It was disruptive to their work, and contradicted their influence. They could not view the apostles as men of spiritual understanding, but could only see them as competitors. How could such things be? How could those with a working acquaintance with Scripture raise such opposition against men chosen by God?

SOMETHING TO BE SEEN

Although all delusion is potentially damning, there is a form of delusion that is in a class by itself. It is religious delusion. There are at least five forms delusion can take. Ranked from the highest to the lowest they are, Christian delusion, Jewish delusion, heathen Idolatry, Philosophical, and Sensual. Permit me to briefly define these terms as I am using them.

- CHRISTIAN. This centers in “another Jesus,” “another Gospel,” and “another Spirit” (2 Cor 11:4). It involves the embrace of an erroneous view of Christ, and a spurious view of salvation and Divine purpose.

- JEWISH. This is a view of Judaism, or the Old Covenant, that does not accept Jesus Christ as the Savior. It sees Jesus as being in conflict with the truth, and thus vigorously opposes Him and those who embrace Him.

- IDOLATRY. This form of delusion embraces another God – not Jehovah. It maintains religious devotion, yet recognizes neither the true God, nor the Scriptures which He has given. This approach to religion is generally based on fear.

- PHILOSOPHICAL. This approach to life sees religion of all kinds as mindless superstition. It ranges from outright atheism to the power of positive thought.

- SENSUAL. This manner of life capitalizes on the lust of the flesh, and sees life as revolving around the satisfaction of lower appetites, ranging from pleasure and the accumulation of goods to all manner of fleshly indulgence and immorality.

Men tend to rank these manners of life from sensual to Christian delusion. However, they are actually ranked the opposite, with Christian delusion being the most difficult from which to recover. Jewish delusion comes next because it is a distortion of something God has revealed. Idolatry is next because it retains the idea of Deity, yet creates its own God, together with ideas of how to approach him.

The more revelation God has given on a matter, the more serious the perversion of it becomes. When there is an effort to attach meanings to Divine revelation that were not intended, Satan gains a more firm grasp on the mind and soul of the individual. Under such conditions the soul becomes insensitive to God, and the conscience becomes “seared” (1 Tim 4:2). This whole circumstance is enhanced if the individual has once known the truth, yet falls from it.

If a person has not received “the love of the truth” (2 Thess 2:10), or if they “turn away their ears from the truth” (2 Tim 4:14), they at once become hopelessly vulnerable to all of these forms of delusion. Recovery from such a condition is not simplistic, and can only take place through the authority of Christ and the truth of the Gospel, which is “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16).

IN OUR TEXT

In our text, the opponents of Peter and John have sinned against much truth. Certain advantages had been providentially given to them – all by divine intention.

- The ministry of the Law, that was designed to bring them to Christ (Gal 3:24).
- The ministry of the Prophets, whose children they were (Acts 3:25).
- The ministry of the Old Covenant, with its varied ceremonies and directives. They were the children of that covenant, and should therefore have prepared for Christ (Acts 3:25).
- The ministry of John the Baptist, who was sent by God to prepare the way for Christ (Lk 1:76; Mk 11:32).
- The ministry of the Son of God, whom God “approved” in their presence by many incontrovertible signs, miracles, and wonders (Acts 2:22).
- The notable miracle of the healing of the man who was lame from birth (Acts 4:14,16).
- The illuminating explanations of Peter and John (Acts 4:8-13).

It is not possible to account for the hardness of these people apart from the powers of darkness. Their condition confirms what happens when a place is made for Satan – whether on purpose or inadvertently. I say that because these men were not knowledgeably yielding to the devil. Yet, because of their refusal of the truth, Satan’s power over them was totally dominating. Only the true can free men from delusion. Therefore, when truth is rejected, delusion dominates.

Now, we will see if these men will yield to godly reasoning. Will their wills give way to the truth? Will they change their intentions, or acknowledge their own waywardness?

THEY CONFERRED AMONG THEMSELVES

“ 4:15 But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves . . .”

Peter has made his first defense, and it has been a powerful one. Consider again what he said.

Just as the wicked are prone to do, these men plot their strategy in secret, removing those on trial from their presence.

They had crucified Christ, yet He had made the man whole who was standing before them (4:10a).

- They had crucified Christ, yet God had raised Him from the dead (4:10b).
- He identified Jesus as “the Stone” that was rejected by them – “the builders” (4:11).
- He announced there was no salvation in any one other than Jesus (4:12a).
- He declared men “ must be saved” through Christ (4:12b).

Peter and John had spoken with remarkable power, so that the council marveled. They had also taken note of them “that they had been with Jesus” (4:13). They also had beheld the healed man standing before them, and “could say nothing against it” (4:14). Surely, that will be enough to turn their hearts!

THEY COMMANDED THEM TO GO OUTSIDE

“ But when they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, . . .” Other versions read, “ withdraw from the Sanhedrin,” NIV “ leave the council,” NRSV “leave the council room,” GWN “ remove them from the presence of the council,” MRD “ go away out of the sanhedrim,” YLT and “ sent them out of the Council chamber.” LIVING

Since the man that was healed was standing with them, it is probable that he was sent outside with Peter and John. At any rate, they did not want to continue their deliberations with them present. They could not speak freely while the men they were judging were in their presence. Had they been truthful and possessing noble motives, they could have proceeded with Peter, John, and the healed man in their presence.

Like the wicked whom David faced, this council spoke in secret about this matter. “Who whet their tongue like a sword, and bend their bows to shoot their arrows, even bitter words: that they may shoot in secret at the perfect: suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not. They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily ; they say, Who shall see them?” (Psa 64:4- 5).

Just as the wicked are prone to do, these men plot their strategy in secret, removing those on trial from their presence. “He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes are privily set against the poor. He lieth in wait secretly as a lion in his den: he lieth in wait to catch the poor: he doth catch the poor, when he draweth him into his net. He croucheth, and humbleth himself, that the poor may fall by his strong ones” (Psa 10:8-10).

When Peter and John began speaking, they did not ask for any religious officials among them to leave. In fact, being filled with the Holy Spirit, Peter said, “Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel” (Acts 4:8). Further, when Peter gave his first defense before the council he was careful to say, “Be it known unto you all , and to all the people of Israel” (Acts 4:10). But when these men address the matter, they put Peter and John away from the chamber in which they were meeting.

THEY CONFERRED AMONG THEMSELVES

“ . . . they conferred among themselves . . .” Other versions read, “discussed the matter with one another,” NRSV “had a discussion among themselves,” BBE “had a private discussion,” NJB “The Jewish Council wanted to talk among themselves ,” IE “They conferred [debated] among themselves,” AMPLIFIED and “hold a conference among themselves.” PHILLIPS

I suppose this would have been an excellent time to ask for the view of Gamaliel, a man held in high esteem among the Jews. Later, after considerably more had taken place, he would deliver a word of wise caution concerning the handling of Peter and

They did not sent out Peter and John so they could pray or seek the face of the Lord. They did not call for the high priest to bring in the Urim and the Thummim so they could inquire of the Lord. Nor did they call for a prophet who could declare the mind of the Lord to them.

John. However, at this stage of the events, the council appeared self confident in their own judgment.

These men were not aware that they were opposing the Lord Himself – but they were. The words of the Psalmist certainly applied to them: “There is no king saved by the multitude of an host: a mighty man is not delivered by much strength” (Psa 33:16). They were trusting in their own hearts, imagining they were sufficient to carry out an initiative against the messengers of Jesus of Nazareth. In this matter, they proved themselves to be fools. As it is written, “He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool: but whoso walketh wisely, he shall be delivered” (Prov 28:26).

They did not sent out Peter and John so they could pray or seek the face of the Lord. They did not call for the high priest to bring in the Urim and the Thummim so they could inquire of the Lord (Num 27:21). Nor did they call for a prophet who could declare the mind of the Lord to them (1 Sam 28:6).

This council gave no evidence of even the smallest degree of consciousness toward God. Of course, that is the way of “the flesh.” It does not reason with God at the center of thought. Instead, ungodly personal objectives and the maintenance of a cherished, yet lifeless, religious system is dictating their approach to this threatening situation.

To emphasize the matter, and lest we forget the absurdity of the flesh , let us remember the unsettling things that had happened in the Temple courts. These had arrested the attention of these men.

- A man who was lame from his mother’s womb had been healed, and was present with the people in a state of perfect health.
- Peter and John have been preaching through Jesus the resurrection of the dead.

Although a wonderful work had been done, and a marvelous Gospel was being preached, it had caused grief for the Temple authorities. Now a council has been called as though a law had been broken, and wrong had been done.

WHAT SHALL WE DO TO THESE MEN

“ 16 Saying, What shall we do to these men? for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it.”

When works and words of truth are disruptive, the cause that is disrupted by them is neither right nor true. Truth is always harmonious, and one facet of it never contradicts or competes with another aspect of the truth. Any valid work of God will never negate or diminish another work of God. The fact that what was done and said by Peter and John had caused trouble among the Jewish leaders proves they were not engaged in the work of the Lord.

WHAT SHALL WE DO TO THESE MEN?

“Saying, What shall we do to these men?” Other versions read, “What are we going to do with these men?” NIV

The idea here is not how they would punish the men, but how they could restrain them from preaching. Would it require the council to kill this pair of preachers? Would incarceration be the only alternative? Should they be severely punished? Or, was their authority sufficient to simply order Peter and John to stop preaching. That is what this unholy caucus was all about: stopping the apostles from preaching.

A NOTABLE MIRACLE

“ . . . for that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem . . .” Other versions read, “For, indeed, that a notable miracle has been done through them is evident to all who dwell in Jerusalem,” NKJV “ the fact that a noteworthy miracle has taken place through them is apparent to all who live in Jerusalem,” NASB “ Everybody living in Jerusalem knows they have done an outstanding miracle,” NIV “They said, “For it is obvious to all who live in Jerusalem that a notable sign has been done through them,” NRSV “for certainly it is clear to all who are living in Jerusalem that a most important sign has been done by them,” BBE “for surely a manifest sign is done by them, and it is openly known to all them that dwell in Jerusalem,” GENEVA “clearly, they've performed a miracle that everyone in Jerusalem knows about ,” GWN and “For that an extraordinary miracle has been performed by (through) them is plain to all the residents of Jerusalem.” AMPLIFIED

The miracle of the lame man being made whole was “notable” in that it was seen by all: “And all the people saw him walking and praising God. And they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him” (Acts 3:9-10).

We will find that incontrovertible facts do not necessarily cause the opponents of the Lord to change their mind. This is because they are not driven by sound reasoning. Their minds have been “blinded” by the god of this world, so that they cannot receive the Christ or believe the Gospel that declares Him.

The reaction of the council is reminiscent of the reaction of the same council to Jesus. “Then gathered the chief priests and the Pharisees a council, and said, What do we? for this Man doeth many miracles. If we let Him thus alone, all men will believe on Him: and the Romans shall come and take away both our place and nation” (John 11:47).

Exactly what can men do when they face a work of God – a “notable work” that contradicts the thrust of their religion. What do they do when the work is done in the name of the One they rejected, delivered up, crucified, and killed? What justification can be offered for opposing such a work and the One in whose name it was done?

We will find that incontrovertible facts do not necessarily cause the opponents of the Lord to change their mind. This is because they are not driven by sound reasoning. Their minds have been “blinded” by the god of this world, so that they cannot receive the Christ or believe the Gospel that declares Him. Because of this condition the light of Divine illumination does not shine upon them. As it is written, “But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them ” (2 Cor 4:3-4). Unlike citizens of Samaria who would later believe, this council did not see the miracle that was done. That is, they did not perceive or discern it. They knew something supernatural had been done, but they obstinately refused to embrace its implications.

WE CANNOT DENY IT

“ . . . and we cannot deny it.” Other versions read, “and it is not possible to say that it is not so,” BBE “we are not able to deny it,” YLT and “that is something we cannot deny.” PHILLIPS

It was not that these men could not deny that a notable work had been done. It was rather because that work was “manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem.” That is why they could not deny it. It was not because their conscience would not let them deny it. That would have been easy enough for them to do, for they were not honest men. Now, however, they are out of their league. Their religion consisted of nothing more than talk. Peter and John had backed up their message with a mighty work, and it was done publically. The healing of the lame man was not an experiment. It was rather a revelation of the power of the exalted Christ. These men would appear to be nothing more than fools if they denied the miracle of a healed man who was standing before them – a miracle that was known throughout the city of Jerusalem.

Not A Kingdom of Talk

The Kingdom of God is not a domain of talk. As it is written, “For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power” (1 Cor 4:20). That is, it is not limited to talk, doctrine, or verbal communication. Even the preaching of the Gospel would be pointless if “the power of God unto salvation” was not resident in it (Rom 1:16). Spiritual life is more than a belief system contained in words. Words without power are like a body without a spirit. Herein is the uniqueness of the Gospel – it is “the power of God” to effect a very real salvation, or deliverance.

This is not to insinuate that speaking has no place in the Kingdom of God. In fact, the primary placements in the body of Christ had to do with the communication of knowledge: “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that . . .” (1 Cor 12:28). However, these words are supported by eternal verities, and are the means through which the very power of God is realized. When it comes to life in Christ Jesus, men are not merely promoting philosophical views. Jesus said His words were “spirit and life” – i.e., they give and sustain spiritual life. The miracle of the healing of the lame man confirmed this was the case, for it was brought about by words: “In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk” (Acts 3:6). That same power undergirded the teaching of Peter and John, which had so irritated the Temple officials. Those officials were grieved because “they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead” (4:2).

The Need for Something in Religion That Men Cannot Deny

Contemporary Christianity suffers much because of the inconsistency of many of its adherents. When the lives of those who profess identity with Christ contradict the “doctrine of Christ” (Heb 6:1; 2 John 1:9), a most serious condition exists. A doctrine that affirms deliverance from the world does not allow for harmony with the world. A doctrine that places stress on the hope of what is to come cannot be joined with a stress that is placed on things that are here and now. If citizenship in heaven is fundamental, there can be no room for at-homeness in this world. If we have been “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17), there can be no place given for a lack of interest in Him. If we escape the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of God, and obtain everything pertaining to life and godliness through the same means, how is it possible for a fundamental ignorance of God to exist in those so described?

What I am saying is that a religion that has a manner that contradicts its profession cannot possibly be true. Those who wear the name of Christ must have lives that support the doctrine – “that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things” (Titus 2:10). This is letting our light shine (Matt 5:16), walking worthy of the vocation wherewith we have been called (Eph 4:1), living a life that becomes the Gospel of Christ (Phil 1:27), shining as lights in the world (Phil 1:27), having our manner of life honest among the Gentiles (1 Pet 2:12), and being in possession of a good conscience (1 Pet 3:16). It involves walking in wisdom toward those who are without (Col 4:5), giving no occasion to the adversary (1 Tim 5:14), and making no place for the devil (Eph 4:27).

By walking in the Spirit (Gal 5:16,25) and living by faith (Rom 1:17; Gal 3:11; Heb 10:38), we will remove any justification for the enemies of Christ to accuse us. We will be like the testimony of the healed lame man before the council. They will behold righteous and focused life that cannot be effectively denied.

A WORLDLY SOLUTION

“ 17 But that it spread no further among the people, let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.”

Thus the members of the council are cast upon the horns of a dilemma. They cannot deny the reality of what has been done, because the inhabitants of Jerusalem have seen it, and know it is true. Furthermore, however, they can find no just cause to punish Peter and John, for they have broken no law – either of God or man. Still, they will not back away from this matter. They will insist on maintaining their opposition.

THAT IT SPREAD NO FURTHER

“But that it spread no further among the people, . . .” Other versions read, “But to stop this thing from spreading any further among the people,” NIV “But that it be noised no farther among the people,” GENEVA “But that the fame of it spread no further,” MRD “But to keep this matter from spreading any further among the people,” NET “But to keep them from spreading their propaganda any further,” NLT “But perhaps we can stop them from spreading their propaganda,” LIVING and “But in order that it may not spread further among the people and the nation .” AMPLIFIED

The council feared the spread of the report of this healed man – but even more, the spread of the Gospel preaching that had attended it. These men could not deny that the miracle had occurred, but they sought some means to suppress the spread of the report of it.

The teaching and preaching of Peter and John were so diametrically opposed to that of the council that they felt it should not be allowed to spread. Particularly since it was confirmed by this leaping and praising man whom everyone knew had been sitting helpless at the Temple gate for years.

The council feared the spread of the report of this healed man – but even more, the spread of the Gospel preaching that had attended it. These men could not deny that the miracle had occurred, but they sought some means to suppress the spread of the report of it. This particularly referred to the report and interpretation of the event by Peter and John. “Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk? . . . And His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong , whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by Him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all . . . Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole ” (Acts 3:12,16; 4:10). That is the particular report they were seeking to suppress.

It is the nature of lifeless institutionalism to oppose anything that does not promote its own interests. This is particularly true of the proclamation of the name of Jesus. It is very obvious to “the enemies of the cross of Christ” (Phil 3:18) that the message of Christ cannot promote their cause. It is at a sharp variance with it, and therefore they oppose it in every way possible.

However, when those who profess to follow Christ support the truth of God by their manner of life, it makes it more difficult for opponents to suppress the Gospel. They will not be altogether stopped unless they are judged from heaven, but they will have to work harder in their efforts to suppress the truth of God.

LET US THREATEN THEM

“ . . . let us straitly threaten them, that they speak henceforth to no man in this name.” Other versions read, “let us severely threaten them , that from now on they speak to no man in this name,” NKJV “let us warn them to speak no more to any man in this name,” NASB “we must warn these men to speak no longer to anyone in this name,” NIV “let us put them in fear of punishment if they say anything in future in this name,” BBE “let us threaten them severely no longer to speak to any man in this name,” DARBY “let us threaten and charge them , that they speak henceforth to no man in this Name,” GENEVA “So let's threaten them. Let's tell them that they must never speak to anyone about the one named Jesus .” GWN “let us interdict their speaking any more to any man in this name,” MRD “We'll tell them that if they do it again we'll really throw the book at them ,” LIVING “we must make them afraid to talk to anyone about this man,” IE and “let us warn and forbid them with a stern threat to speak any more to anyone in this name [or about this Person],” AMPLIFIED and “let us warn them that if they say anything more to anyone in this name it will be at their peril .” PHILLIPS

These men have an inordinately high estimation of their own perceived authority. They imagine that their word carries a lot of weight. That supposition, however, is founded upon two cracked pillars.

- The assumption that those who declare the truth have any respect for authorities who oppose the truth.
- That those who proclaim Christ have interest in any organization that is an end unto itself.

Righteous men are not motivated by the fear of man, or the institutions they have formed. Ungodly men, however, have no understanding of this. They cannot conceive of someone who does not shake with fear when they are called to account before them.

Righteous men are not motivated by the fear of man, or the institutions they have formed. Ungodly men, however, have no understanding of this. They cannot conceive of someone who does not shake with fear when they are called to account before them. Thus, when charges were brought against Jesus and He did not reply to them, the high priest “arose, and said unto Him, Answerest Thou nothing? what is it which these witness against Thee? But Jesus held his peace” (Mat 26:62-63). Again, when the high priest “asked Jesus of His disciples, and of His doctrine. Jesus answered him, I spake openly to the world; I ever taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither the Jews always resort; and in secret have I said nothing. Why askest thou me? ask them which heard Me, what I have said unto them: behold, they know what I said. And when He had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so? Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil: but if well, why smitest thou Me?” (John 18:19-23). You sense the consternation of the high priest at a person who did not fear him at all.

Our Lord faced the same thing when He stood before Pilate. “And Pilate asked Him again, saying, Answerest Thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against Thee. But Jesus yet answered nothing; so that Pilate marvelled” (Mark 15:4-5). Again stymied by the conduct of Jesus, Pilate said to Him, “Speakest Thou not unto me? knowest Thou not that I have power to crucify Thee, and have power to release Thee? Jesus answered, Thou couldest have no power at all against Me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered Me unto thee hath the greater sin” (John 19:10-11).

Completely unacquainted with this kind of fearlessness, the council actually thinks a severe threat will cause Peter and John to cease preaching in the name of Jesus. These holy men knew something the council did not know: “The fear of man bringeth a snare: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD shall be safe” (Prov 29:25). They had heard Jesus speak concerning the fear of man, and had heartily embraced His words. “And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell” (Matt 10:28). And again, “And I say unto you My friends, Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: Fear Him, which after He hath killed hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear Him” (Luke 12:4-5).

I do not doubt that the Spirit brought these words to the minds of Peter and John, buoying up their spirits, granting them boldness, and making them more firm in the resolute determination to declare the truth in the persuasion and confidence of faith.

Now, we will behold the audacity of carnal men, who think they have a right to suppress speaking in the name of Jesus. We will also see how those who did not fear such men will respond. There is much in this text that needs to be learned in our generation.

COMMANDED NOT TO SPEAK OR TEACH

“ 18 And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus.”

The council now summons Peter and John into their presence. They have settled among themselves how they will address, what they conceive to be, a most serious problem.

THEY CALLED THEM

“And they called them . . .” Other versions read, “summoned them,” NASB “called them in again,” NIV “sent for them,” BBE “called them back,” NAB “called the apostles back in,” NLT and “they recalled the Apostles.” WEYMOUTH

Although we have nothing to fear from the tribunals of men, I must admit I am still irritated by the brazenness of religious professionals. They have the temerity to summon holy men before them and speak to them as though they are, in any legitimate sense, subject to them. Oh, that more would have the spirit of Paul in such circumstances: “But with me it is a very small thing that I should be judged by you or by a human court . In fact, I do not even judge myself” NKJV (1 Cor 4:3). It is ever true, “But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man ” (1 Cor 2:15). It is not that godly men fear such conflicts. Rather, it is that they attach no real significance to them.

If one was to judge according to appearance, which Jesus expressly forbids (John 7:24), it would seem that Peter and John were actually subject to these men. However, they were not, for those who declare the truth are not subject to those who reject it. Peter and John know this, but the members of the council do not. They will therefore proceed as though the two men before them were under their jurisdiction.

COMMANDED NOT TO SPEAK

SOME MODERN EXAMPLES

1. In March 1998, The ACLU put pressure on the small town of Republic, Missouri to remove a fish symbol from its official logo, calling it a "secret sign of Christianity."
2. In April 1998, Rev. Patrick Mahoney was arrested for praying on the steps of the Supreme Court.

3. Tourists visiting Washington D.C. in 1997 were ordered by the police to stop praying in the rotunda of the U.S. Capitol.

4. In 2003, the National Park Service removed 30 year-old plaques inscribed with Bible verses at Grand Canyon following complaints from the American Civil Liberties Union.

5. A Christian employee of Hewlet Packard was fired for posting Bible verses condemning homosexual behavior on his desk in response to posters displayed during a company campaign to promote a diverse work force.

6. The City council in Oceanside, CA banned public prayers that begin or end with the phrase "in the name of Christ."

7. In 1997 U.S. District Court Judge Ira DeMent struck down a law that required schools to allow voluntary student-initiated prayers at school events, saying it created excessive state entanglement in religion. He ordered the end to school-sponsored religious activities, such as prayers during morning announcements and at school events even though it isn't forced on students.

8. In 1997, a high school student in Florida was suspended for handing out religious literature before and after - but not during - school hours.

9. Two high school students in Texas were told by their principal they could not wear rosaries. The Principal claimed that they were symbols of gang activity, even though the boys were not involved in any gang.

10. In 2002, music teachers in Michigan, Maryland, and Virginia didn't allow students to perform traditional carols like "Silent Night" and "The First Noel" during Christmas.

11. A New Jersey public school banned the Charles Dickens play, "A Christmas Carol" because of its spiritual overtones and message of redemption.

12. Confessed child rapist James Arnett's sentence was overturned by an Ohio appeals court. The reason: the judge in his case quoted from Matthew 18:5-6 during sentencing.

13. Even though Krispy Kreme promises to give students a free doughnut for each "A" on their report cards, a store in Schereville, Indiana refused to reward the Kamp children for A's received in Bible classes.

Taken from, JEREMIAH PROJECT: War Against Christianity – <http://www.jeremiahproject.com/prophecy/warxian.html>

“ . . . and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach . . . ” Other versions read, “ ordered them not to speak or teach at all,” NRSV “ charged them not to speak or teach at all,” RSV “gave them orders not to make statements or give teaching,” BBE “gave them a warning on no account to make statements or to teach ,” NJB “told them never again to speak ,” LIVING “ordered them altogether to give up speaking or teaching ,” WEYMOUTH “ imperatively instructed them not to converse in any way or teach at all,” AMPLIFIED and “ ordered them bluntly not to speak or teach a single further word.” PHILLIPS

Notice with what authority they speak – yet these men did not have so much as one weightless mote of authority over Peter and John. Jesus had told them to preach (Matt 28:19; Mk 16:15), and now these men command them not to speak at all or teach, and are bold to do so. Flesh is that way – it asserts itself against the believer. Our text will provide us an example of how those in Christ react to legislation against the spread of the Gospel or the promotion of the name of Jesus.

Believers cannot be naive about this matter. In American we are already experiencing aggressive initiatives against those who speak of Christ and things associated with Him. Below are a few examples.

- Not to pray publicly in the schools.
- No more religious baccalaureate services.
- Not to pray in Jesus' name (Armed Services chaplains).
- Not teach creation in the schools.
- School children in some states forbidden to carry Bibles.
- Some schools forbid singing Christmas carols.
- A move to remove "in God we trust."
- A move to remove "one nation under God."
- Ordered to remove public manger scenes.
- Ordered to remove Ten Commandments from public places.
- Removing Christian meeting places on the basis of zoning (currently [11/2006] Washington DC and Tennessee).

The Gravity of the Situation

When the church is in a weakened state, laws like these can be more readily passed. Some will counter that we should not be concerned about this. Since the church is the pillar and ground of the truth, they say, we should not expect Christian representations to be condoned by the State. However, this reasoning is not sound.

First, modern attempts are to remove a presence that already exists. It is an effort to withdraw from society an existing influence, thereby reducing the level of God-consciousness. In that case, this Divine utterance applies: "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Psa 9:17).

IN THE NAME OF JESUS

"... in the name of Jesus." Other versions read, "teach about Jesus , or even mention His name ," GWN "about Jesus," LIVING and " by the authority of Jesus." IE

They did not command Peter and John to do no more healing – although they were no doubt opposed to that because of the interest it caused. It was speaking in the name of Jesus that raised their furor. I suppose if Peter and John had healed the man, swearing by the gold of the Temple, it would have been acceptable (Matt 23:16-17).

Because "there is none other Name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12), Satan opposes speaking or acting in His name. Candidly, he has no aggressive objections to people speaking with the family in mind, or the government, or the assistance of the poor. None of these things are wrong of themselves, but they are not the foundation upon which eternal issues are based. The remission of sins and the gift of the Holy Spirit do not depend upon such matters. Nor, indeed, is the New Covenant centered in them. As vital as they may seem, they are auxiliaries to life, and not life itself.

The real issues of life all depend upon Jesus Christ – who He is, what he has accomplished, and what he is doing! Therefore, the powers of darkness, against whom we wrestle, seek to put Jesus into the background at the least, and altogether remove Him from consideration at the worst. They are very active in our time. These powers have moved the Sanhedrin to mandate the cessation of speaking in the name of Jesus, or even mentioning His name. How will holy men respond to that?

ANSWERING WITH A QUESTION

“ 19 But Peter and John answered and said unto them, Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.”

There are statements that ought to be answered, and there are also times when silence is golden. Blessed is the one who can distinguish between the two. There is no handy set of rules that make that distinction easy to perceive. Such wisdom is rather the result of walking in the light as Jesus is in the light.

Just as Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, Peter and John are “not careful” to respond to the demand of the counsel (Dan 3:16). That is, they really did not even “need to answer” NKJV what was demanded of them. The Sanhedrin had overstepped their bounds, and Peter and John were not obligated to enter into any dialog with them. Actually, the council is responsible for their own conduct, not Peter and John. Therefore, the two apostles will hurl the matter back at their accusers.

PETER AND JOHN ANSWERED

“But Peter and John answered and said unto them, . . .” Other versions read, “But Peter and John replied,” NIV “But Peter and John answered them,” NRSV “Peter and John, however, said to them in reply,” NAB “But Peter and John retorted,” NJB and “But Peter and John gave them this reply.” PHILLIPS

Here is an interesting thing: the council had not asked them anything, but had rather made a threatening demand of them. Yet, Peter and John are said to answer them – answering a commandment of men! That is, when men speak foolishly and outside the circumference of their responsibility, it is correct to challenge them to think more clearly about what they have required.

Note that the boldness of Peter and John did not wane when they were threatened, and even order, to keep silence. If anything, this council has increased their boldness, so that their mouths will not be stopped.

There are statements that ought to be answered, and there are also times when silence is golden. Blessed is the one who can distinguish between the two. There is no handy set of rules that make that distinction easy to perceive. Such wisdom is rather the result of walking in the light as Jesus is in the light.

RIGHT IN THE SIGHT OF GOD

“ . . . Whether it be right in the sight of God . . .” Other versions read, “right in God’s sight,” NIV “right in the eyes of God,” BBE “righteous before God,” DARBY “just in the sight of God,” DOUAY “whether God wants,” GWN “God wants us,” NLT and “What would God want?” IE

The Law-mentality asks, “Is it wrong?” The insightful person asks, “Is it right.” The word “right” comes from the Greek word di,kaiο,n (di-kai-on), which has the lexical meaning, “righteous . . . such as it ought to be, upright, righteous, virtuous,” THAYER “morally and ethically righteous, upright, and just,” FRIBERG “conforming to the standard, will, or character of God; upright, righteous, good, just, right,” UBS and “pertaining to being in accordance with what God requires.” LOUW-NIDA

Peter adds “in the sight of God” – that is, in the presence of God, or before Him. In other words, if a person was consciously in the presence of Almighty God, would this be considered the right thing to do? Would it incur the judgment or approbation of God? Would it please or displease Him? For the sensitive soul, this is an arresting consideration.

Of old time, the whole of a persons life was evaluated upon the basis of whether he did what was right in the eyes of the Lord or not.

- The Law commanded men to do “that which is right in the eyes of the LORD thy God ” (Deut 13:18).

- It is said that David, “did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD , and turned not aside from any thing that He commanded him all the days of his life, save only in the matter of Uriah the Hittite” (1 Kgs 15:5).

- During the first part of his rule, Asa also “did that which was right in the eyes of the LORD , as did David his father” (1 Kgs 15:11).

- Omri, on the other hand, “wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD , and did worse than all that were before him” (1 Kgs 16:25).

- Jehoshaphat “walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the Lord ” (1 Kgs 22:43).

- Zedekiah “did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD , according to all that Jehoiakim had done” (Jer 52:2).

- Jesus spoke of things that were highly regarded or esteemed by men, yet were “abomination in the sight of God” (Luke 16:15).

- Paul wrote to Timothy concerning things that were “good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior ” (1 Tim 2:3).

- The aim of the redemption that is in Christ Jesus is to present the people of God “holy and unblameable and unproveable in His sight ” (Col 1:22).

- All of this is accented by the fact that no person “is not manifest in His sight : but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13).

No imagined earthly advantages will exist at that time. No personal agendas will be in place, other than the purpose of God Himself. No institutions or competitive kingdoms will exist, for they shall all have been decimated by the Kingdom of God. At that time, it will be evident that only God’s will really matters.

Peter and John do not philosophize about right and wrong. They do not leave the matter to human discretion, as though every person had a right to their opinion. They knew that “we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad?” (2 Cor 5:10). Things that are “right in the sight of God” will be “right” in that day – after “the heavens and the earth which are now” have passed away (2 Pet 3:7-12). No imagined earthly advantages will exist at that time. No personal agendas will be in place, other than the purpose of God Himself. No institutions or competitive kingdoms will exist, for they shall all have been decimated by the Kingdom of God (Dan 2:44). At that time, it will be evident that only God’s will really matters.

Now Peter and John call upon their judges to consider their mandate with Divine judgment in mind. They insist that their judgment be in light of God, not their own corrupted wills. They make no allowance for their judges to say they do not know what God wants, or how He views their decision. If they are religious leaders, it is their business to know the will of the Lord, and to have an accurate perception of what it right in this matter.

JUDGE YE

“ . . . to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye.” Other versions read, “to listen to you more than to God, you judge,” NKJV “to give heed to you rather than to God, you be the judge,” NASB “to obey you rather than God, you must judge” NRSV “It is for you to say . . . to give attention to you more than to God,” BBE “to give heed to you rather than to God, you be the judge,” NAS “Should we obey you or God ?” IE and “to listen to what you say rather than to what He says .” PHILLIPS

This is a weighty consideration, indeed! The men now addressed are religious men. In fact, they are leaders among the chosen people of God. They have a knowledge of Scripture, and some measure of awareness of the One who gave them. Now, rather than allowing this council to judge them, Peter and John call upon them to turn their supposedly discerning minds to this consideration. Is it right for their word to supercede the word of the Lord? Is it proper in the sight of God for His servants to go about as though they were actually answerable to this council?

Peter and John challenge their critics to consider that they are demanding their word to be honored above the word of the One whom God had approved among them. Of course, Peter and John will not subscribe to that condition. Their fear is of God, not man, and they choose to obey Him.

The response of Peter and John may appear to be pointless. Flesh reasons that their critics had hard hearts and would not subscribe to an honest consideration of this challenge. Therefore it reasons, “What is the use of making such a statement?” When one considers the nature of the Kingdom, and the involvement of heavenly influences, it makes perfect sense to speak as Peter and John did. Their words became a means through which the Holy Spirit would work – either to convict or harden. Additionally, their determination was precious in the sight of God. He would therefore take their side in this matter, and work in their behalf.

There Are Matters to be Judged

Even if we had not been specifically told to judge certain matters, we should know to do so by what has been said about our future. “Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world? and if the world shall be judged by you, are ye unworthy to judge the smallest matters? Know ye not that we shall judge angels? how much more things that pertain to this life?” (1 Cor 6:2-3). These words are not given to us to promote speculation and vain imaginations. Rather, through this revelation we are provoked to learn to judge righteously while we are tabernacling in the flesh: “judge righteous judgment” (John 7:24). Believers are exhorted, “Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way” (Rom 14:13). Again Paul wrote, “I speak as to wise men; judge ye what I say” (1 Cor 10:15). And again, “Let the prophets speak two or three, and let the other judge” (1 Cor 14:29).

The Right Approach

Let men have done with merely emotional approaches to the things of God. Every word and every action among those wearing the name of the Lord is subject to righteous scrutiny. If someone says they have a word from God, the wise among the assembly must judge whether it is the truth. If a person declares God has shown something to him, then those with the mind of Christ must put it to the test. If the apostle Paul challenged those to whom he wrote to judge what he said, where is the person who would draw back from such an approach today?

Those who speak in the name of the Lord are to submit to the judgment of the wise, as confirmed in Paul’s direction to the Corinthian prophets (1 Cor 14:29).

A Mode of Reasoning

There is a mode of reasoning that characterizes newness of life. It enables one to arrive at proper conclusions and avoid falling into Satan’s snare. The word “judge” comes from a word meaning, “to separate, put asunder, to pick out, select, choose,” THAYER “reaching a personal or group decision,” FRIBERG “to come to a conclusion in the process of thinking and thus be in a position to make a decision,” LOUW-NIDA and “distinguish.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

All of this presumes contradicting things that must be weighed, being carefully considered. This judgment is to lead to a conclusion that is in keeping with what is right – the will and nature of God. Because righteousness and truth hold up under the strictest scrutiny and most careful consideration, honest and good hearts will arrive at the proper God-honoring conclusion. Further, this summons to “judge” is not an invitation to express a private opinion. This is rather a call to judge righteously. Peter and John already know the answer to the question. That is why they have chosen to obey God. It is why they have chosen to hearken to Him rather than to men.

Notice that Peter and John do not preface their remarks by suggesting that the council’s view of God and His will have any bearing on the subject at all. They obviously have no tolerance for varying views of God or His ways. If there is only one God, which the Jewish Scriptures affirm (Deut 6:4), His ways cannot possibly be diverse, for that would contradict the revealed concept of God.

This is not a philosophical question, as though these apostles were merely asking the council what they thought about the matter. There are, in effect, asking the council to judge whether Peter and John were right in hearkening unto God, or whether the council was right in demanding that they not do so. In other words, these two men were actually doing what God had told them to do, and now a council of religious authorities was commanding them not to do it.

There are issues within the religious community that must be addressed in a similar manner. Men should be called to judge whether it is right to do this or that. Let me give you a few examples. Is it right to hearken unto God and insist that elders be “apt to teach” (1 Tim 3:2), or is it right to allow men to be elders who do not have the slightest interest in teaching? Is it right to hearken to God and insist that wicked and immoral men be expelled from the church (1 Cor 5:13), or is it right to allow them to remain in hopes of changing them? Is it right to hearken to the Lord and command men who believe to be baptized (Acts 10:48; Mk 16:16), or is it right to declare baptism is nothing more than an option? Is it right to hearken to God and require all things to be done “unto edification” (1 Cor 14:26), or is it right to let the novices establish the priorities of an assembly?

Oh, that there were more godly men and women who would demand that righteous judgment be found among those who profess to be leaders. When there is a disputation, particular regarding what is spoken, someone must be found who can distinguish who is hearkening to the Lord and who is not. What is more, a demand ought to be placed upon the decision-makers, that they make a determination if it is better to listen to God or to men. Once that judgment is made, let the will of God be clearly articulated and substantiated. The modern church is deficient in this matter. However, there is no need for it to remain in this condition. Salvation provides for making right choices.

COMPELLED TO SPEAK

Hearkening to God assumes that He has addressed words to Peter and John – that He has made demands of them, and revealed certain matters to them. Peter and John are engaged in doing the good and acceptable and perfect will of God, and they are challenging their opponents to put their deeds to the test, and to do so publicly.

THE COMPULSION OF LOVE

“For we cannot but speak . . .” Other versions read, “for we cannot stop speaking,” NASB “we cannot help speaking about,” NIV “it is not possible for us to keep from saying,” BBE “for we are unable to stop speaking about,” CSB “for as for us we cannot refrain from speaking of,” DARBY

“We cannot stop talking about,” GWN “for it is impossible for us not to speak about,” NET “We cannot stop proclaiming,” NJB “We cannot stop telling about,” NLT “We are not able to keep silent,” IE “We cannot keep quiet about,” CEV and “For we can do none other but to speak.” EMTV

Peter and John were not compelled by a moral law. They were not motivated by the threat of condemnation if they did not speak. It is to be acknowledged that men can be moved by law and threats. Further, this is not necessarily wrong – although the requirement for such things confirms a deficiency in the person that must be so constrained. That is a valid, but lower, form of motivation. It is for those whose hearts have not been touched by grace, and are more obstinate in their rebellion. That is why Jesus said to the Pharisees, “Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation” (Mat 23:14). And again, “Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?” (Matt 23:33). He did not set the hope of glory before them, for their hearts were hard – calloused by sin.

This was not the case with Peter and John. Their hearts had been made new. Their affections had been purified, and their consciences purged. In such a state, there is a loftier and more effectual constraining power: “For the love of Christ constraineth us” (2 Cor 5:14). In my own estimation, the following traits characterize those who cannot refrain from speaking the things of God, even when they are severely threatened. This is by no means a complete list, but does show the kind of traits that make for competent and faithful witnesses.

- A pure heart (1 Tim 1:5).
- A strong faith (Rom 4:20).
- Living hope (1 Pet 1:3).
- Full assurance of faith (Heb 10:22).
- Full assurance of hope (Heb 6:11).
- Full assurance of understanding (Col 2:2).
- Purged conscience (Heb 9:14; 10:22).
- Confidence (Heb 3:6).
- Fellowship with Christ (1 Cor 1:9).
- Communion of the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 13:14).
- Walking in the light (1 John 1:7).

The person who has a dominating love for Jesus obtains the ability to hear and see what He is doing. With that love comes a determination to speak that cannot be suppressed. This is being lived out in our text.

Separation from the world (1 John 2:15).

- Crucifixion of the flesh (Gal 5:24).
- Pressing toward the mark (Phil 3:14).
- Compelling desire to know Christ (Phil 3:10).
- Dominate desire to do God’s will (John 7:17).
- Thankful spirit (Col 3:15).
- Spiritual understanding (Col 1:9).
- The love of the truth (2 Thess 1:9).

Things of this order cannot be produced by Law. They can be commanded, but in order for them to be experienced, the heart must be drawn to the Lord through a perception of His great love and great salvation. I affirm that it is not possible to truly love Jesus until His love for us, and His great salvation are perceived to some significant measure. That is why the Scriptures speak of knowing Christ's love: "And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God" (Eph 3:19). Knowing a love that surpasses knowledge is not knowing about that love, by realizing it by experience. Through the Holy Spirit, who sheds the love of God abroad in our hearts (Rom 5:5), a measure of understanding is realized that cannot be obtained academically.

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD

"... the things which we have seen and heard." Other versions read, "the things which we saw and heard," ASV "the wonderful things we saw Jesus do and heard Him say," LIVING and "what we have actually seen and heard ." PHILLIPS

In order for one's religion to be effective, it must be lifted out of the realm of philosophy. In some effectual way, the individual must be exposed to the person of Jesus Christ. For Peter and John, this exposure was twofold: in the flesh and in the Spirit. At the time of their exposure to Jesus in the flesh, their perception was very limited. When, for example, Peter, James, and John came down from the mount of transfiguration, Jesus told them not to say anything about what they saw and heard until He was risen from the dead. At that time the disciples "kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean" (Mark 9:10). Following Christ's ascension into glory, however, they spoke discerningly of what they had seen and heard on that mountain (John 1:14; 2 Pet 1:16-18). This is owing to the indispensable ministry of the Holy Spirit. Jesus promised them the following.

- "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, 1 He shall teach you all things, and 2 bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you" (John 14:26).

- "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, 3 He shall testify of me" (John 15:26).

- "Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, 4 He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and 5 He will show you things to come" (John 16:13).

- "6 He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall 7 show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are Mine: therefore said I, that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you" (John 16:14-15).

There are seven things Jesus promised the Holy Spirit would do.

1. Teach them all things.
2. Bring what Jesus had said to their remembrance.
3. Testify of Christ.
4. Guide them into all truth.
5. Show them things to come.

6. Glorify Christ.

7. Show the things of Christ to them.

In this text, we see the impact of the ministry of the Holy Spirit upon the hearts and minds of the apostles. Once the truth was seen in clarity, and its extensive horizon dawned upon their souls, it was not possible to keep them silent. They became like young Elihu who spoke to Job – they could contain what they confidently knew within. They had to speak it out. Elihu said, “For I am full of matter, the spirit within me constraineth me. Behold, my belly is as wine which hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles. I will speak, that I may be refreshed: I will open my lips and answer” (Job 32:18-20).

The Spirit of Faith

Peter and John had “the spirit of faith,” that always moves a person to speak. As it is written, “We having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken; we also believe, and therefore speak; Knowing that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you” (2 Cor 4:13-14.).

Observe the role of believing and true knowledge in holy speaking: “we also believe,” and “knowing that . . .” This is a micro view of confidence: whole-heartedly believing the truth, and knowing, or possessing a cognitive familiarity [thinking and reasoning, as opposed to mere emotion or exhilaration] with what has been seen and heard.

This is something that cannot be accomplished through academic learning or humanly devised routines of learning. This relates to “the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual” – something Paul affirmed is required by those who are in Christ Jesus (Col 1:9).

This also involves “rightly dividing,” or “handling accurately” NASB the word of truth (2 Tim 2:15). That is, not only must what has been seen and heard be declared accurately and without error, it must be discreetly imparted, so that the audience is given what is appropriate for the occasion. It would not have been proper for Peter and John to have described what they saw and heard when Jesus came walking to them on the water, and even summoned Peter to join him on the tumultuous water (Matt 14:25-33). That would certainly have been true, but it would not have been what was needed at that time.

They Preached the Resurrection of the Dead

The circumstance that brought about this whole occasion was Peter and John preaching “through Jesus the resurrection from the dead” (4:2). This revealed the decided advancement in their understanding that had taken place after Christ’s enthronement.

Remember that at the time of the transfiguration the disciples questioned among themselves “what the rising from the dead should mean.” However, in our text, they have been preaching “through Jesus the resurrection of the dead,” affirming that Jesus Himself had been raised from the dead (4:10). In other words, they were declaring what they had “seen and heard” with understanding. They were not merely rehearsing some mysterious facts, but expounding their significance as well as their reality. Their love for Christ and understanding of the Gospel would not allow them to keep silence on these matters, regardless of the demands of the council before whom they stood.

This, among other things, is why you cannot train people to be witnesses. Nor, indeed, is it possible for one man to confer spiritual understanding upon another. Effective witnesses have been exposed to the truth in their hearts as well as their minds. They have a love for the truth as well as a knowledge of it.

This, among other things, is why you cannot train people to be witnesses. Nor, indeed, is it possible for one man to confer spiritual understanding upon another. Effective witnesses have been exposed to the truth in their hearts as well as their minds. They have a love for the truth as well as a knowledge of it. They not only see the need for declaring the truth, but have an unquenchable desire to do so. This kind of experience moved the prophet Jeremiah to say, “Then I said, I will not make mention of Him, nor speak any more in His name. But His word was in mine heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay” (Jer 20:9).

The modern church stands in great need of competent witnesses – people who know and love the truth, see its implications, and are compelled to declare it without regard to the consequences of doing so. Such people will not yield to the threats of the ungodly, but will speak for and of Jesus. They will faithfully bring the truth to bear upon the consciences of the people.

As painful as it is to consider, much of contemporary Christianity has very little to do with proclamation – with the confident affirmation of eternal verities. The variety of pulpit offerings to the people appear to cover a range of things from entertainment to problem resolution. In the seemingly more advanced assemblies, the presentations are peppered with “good words and fair speeches” through which the people are “deceived” (Rom 16:18). However, there is very little proclamation of spiritual verities that have been “seen and heard.” This is a tragic circumstance with far reaching implications.

NOTHING WORTHY OF PUNISHMENT

“ 21 So when they had further threatened them, they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.”

How important is it that the church be holy? What if all kinds of questionable conduct is found within it? Will that circumstance have any impact on its message – if it is, indeed, even noted for its message?

A Peculiar Modern Circumstance

The nominal church has introduced a peculiar circumstance. It is perpetrating a doctrine that tends to minimize sin and transgression. Unacceptable behavior is being traced to things like physiological conditions, chemical abuse, environment, or some other influence that has nothing to do with choice or human reference.

There are certain things that God has associated with sin – things that have been revealed. Although these are rarely mentioned in church circles, they are very much present wherever sin is found. A failure to clarify the association of these things with sin has caused the people to be unable to relate them to the moral flaws that are found within the church itself, which are often traced to psychological disadvantages. Here is a sampling of those terms or conditions.

- Rebellious. “Because they rebelled against the words of God, and contemned the counsel of the most High” (Psa 107:11). To rebel is an aggressive human response against God – one in which the individual refuses to hear or obey the Lord.

- Blindness . “But he that hateth his brother is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth, because that darkness hath blinded his eyes” (1 John 2:11). This has to do with not being able to understand, perceive, or discern. Since Jesus has come, there is no justification for such a condition, for regeneration includes God shining light and knowledge into the heart, so that sin is seen and can be avoided (2 Cor 4:6).

- Hardness of heart . “And when He had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts ” (Mark 3:5). This is a deliberate hardness, where the people steel themselves against the Lord and His word.

- Stiffnecked . “Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do ye” (Acts 7:51). This is yet another human response in which they refuse to turn to the Lord, choosing rather to indulge themselves in sin.

- Disobedience. “For which things' sake the wrath of God cometh on the children of disobedience ” (Col 3:6). Disobedience is deliberate. It takes place when one knows what God requires, yet refuses to yield the heart to Him.

- Not wanting God. “But my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of Me ” (Psa 81:11). Here men prefer their own ways to those of God, and therefore do not want Him or His influence among them.

- Unholy. “For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy ” (2 Tim 3:2). This is being unlike God – that is, contrary to Him.

8. Reprobate. “Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates ?” (2 Cor 13:5). The ultimate conclusion of sin is reprobacy, or being rejected by God. If a person refuses to turn from sin, this is the inevitable result.

Whatever may be said about being only human, or being among those who are beset with moral or spiritual weaknesses, no such charges are leveled against Peter and John. They have broken no law of God, nor have they violated any known law of man.

Rejecting the Word. “The wise men are ashamed, they are dismayed and taken: lo, they have rejected the word of the LORD ; and what wisdom is in them?” (Jer 8:9). In this case, the person hears the Word of the Lord, but simply refuses to receive or yield to it.

- Impenitence. “But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God” (Rom 2:5). This is a refusal to turn or repent. The soul who is impenitent is obstinate, and insists on continuing in sin, even when he knows it is wrong.

- Being of the devil. “He that committeth sin is of the devil ; for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil” (1 John 3:8). Sin is the result of the devil’s work, and where it is committed, he is always present. Sin within the church is a flagrant contradiction of the affirmation that Jesus came to “destroy the works of the devil.”

- Displeasing to God. “And God was displeased with this thing; therefore he smote Israel” (1 Chron 21:7). God does have a reaction to sin, and it is not one of pleasure or pity.

I have mentioned these things because they are totally absent in our text. Peter and John have not been confronted with any personal sin, spiritual dulness, or inappropriate conduct before God. The work for which they have been called to account – the healing of the lame man – was unquestionably a good one. The word that had grieved their critics – preaching through Jesus the resurrection of the dead – was also good, announcing through Jesus the resurrection of the dead.

Whatever may be said about being only human, or being among those who are beset with moral or spiritual weaknesses, no such charges are leveled against Peter and John. They have broken no law of God, nor have they violated any known law of man. They have not participated in an insurrection like Barabbas (Mark 15:7). They were not like a notable Egyptian who would surface later, causing an uproar and leading four thousand known murderers into the wilderness (Acts 21:38). They have not been charged with any moral indiscretions.

Now we will see that however their judges may view them, it will not be as immoral people who have displeased the Lord, or those who have not spoken in strict accord with Scripture.

THEY FURTHER THREATENED THEM

“So when they had further threatened them . . .” Other versions read,. “After further threats,” NIV “After threatening them again,” NRSV “And when they had said more sharp words to them,” BBE “The authorities threatened them even more ,” GWN “The court repeated the threats ,” NJB “The court added further threats ,” WEYMOUTH and “So the Council warned them even more strongly .” GNB

These warnings all postulate a fear of those who were speaking them. They assume that those who were warned were afraid to fall into the hands of this tribunal. It is not possible to have a legitimate “threat” if these things are not so. For example, if a man in the ICU unit of a local hospital who possessed neither authority nor influence threatened you, there would be no reason to fear his words. Or, if a two-year-old boy shouted a threat at you, it would mean nothing, and would simply be discarded. Threats presume that the ones issuing them are actually dangerous, and that their words must be respected.

Now, on the surface, it may appear that this council should have been feared. Later they would stone Stephen, so they were actually able to carry out a judgment leading to death – at least that is the way it appeared. However, Peter and John have knowledge of One who is greater than their judges, and they are deferring to Him. They have already announced His exaltation by “the God of the Jews” (Rom 3:29; Acts 2:33-34),. His power was confirmed in the raising of the lame man in the presence of the people (Acts 3:16). They have also confirmed the word of Moses that foretold anyone failing to listen to Jesus would be “destroyed from among the people” (3:23).

Fearing Men Is Sinful

Solomon said, “The fear of man bringeth a snare: but whoso putteth his trust in the LORD shall be safe” (Prov 29:25). That is, “the fear of man” is the exact opposite of trusting in the Lord, producing danger rather than safety. For those who believe, such a fear is wholly unwarranted. That is why God Himself said, “Stop regarding man, whose breath of life is in his nostrils; For why should he be esteemed?” NASB (Isa 2:22).

When king Saul went against the word of the Lord, he confessed, “I have sinned: for I have transgressed the commandment of the LORD, and thy words: because I feared the people, and obeyed their voice” (1 Sam 15:24). That, however, was not a satisfactory explanation. Samuel corrected Saul by saying, “thou hast rejected the word of the Lord” (1 Sam 15:26).

Those whose faith is in the Lord will not be moved by the threats of mere mortals. Thus it is written, “So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my Helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me ” (Heb 13:6). The liberating knowledge of God strengthens the soul, so that the servants of God are not moved by the threats of men. Therefore, when Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego were threatened by the King of the whole world with death if they did not bow to his image, they replied, “If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up” (Dan 3:17-18). When Daniel was threatened with an edict from a world emperor that prohibited prayer being made to the God of heaven, “he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime” (Dan 6:10).

Only a person with faith has any intelligent view of these reports. Such know that the fear of God is a legitimate fear, while the fear of man is nothing but the result of delusion.

Notwithstanding these fairly obvious facts, they were neither perceived or acknowledged by the council. They placed an inordinately high value on their position among the Jews, and thus imagined that their words were with power. Because this council cannot be moved by the fear of the Lord, God will restrain them in other ways, even though they will not be able to detect them.

NO CAUSE FOR PUNISHMENT

“ . . . they let them go, finding nothing how they might punish them . . .” Other versions read, “they let them go, finding no way of punishing them ,” NKJV “they let them go (finding no basis on which they might punish them),” NASB “they let them go. They could not decide how to punish them ,” NIV “they released them. They found no way to punish them,” CSB and “they let them go, not seeing how they could secure a conviction against them .” AMPLIFIED

Some of the versions totally obscure the meaning of the text, suggesting that they simply could not reach a consensus among themselves on how to punish Peter and John.

Those in Christ are not to be found with glaring moral and spiritual blemishes that can be perceived by the ungodly. That is what James would call the “superfluity of naughtiness,” or the “overflow of wickedness.” Such things are to be “put away,” together with “all filthiness.” There can be no defense of moral corruption within the church.

The key to this text is found in the words “finding nothing.” First, they diligently sought for a person or a condition that would clearly justify the punishment of the two standing before them. However, they could find “nothing.” There was no person, word, or deed that clearly justified the punishment of these men – and they made a diligent search to find one. I suppose they could have hired someone to bear false witness. However, the next clause explains why they did not choose that course of action.

Spotless Lives

Believers are reminded to be “blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world” (Phil 2:15). Blamelessness is something to be found in the body, as well as the spirit and the soul (1 Thess 5:23). Paul admonished Titus to take care to show himself a “pattern of good works,” having “uncorruptness” in his doctrine and “sound speech, that cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of you” (Titus 2:8). The structure of contemporary Christianity makes no such demands. Instead, a God is being presented that does not require such a condition. When these things are absent, we are told to be patient and uncondemning, for the transgressor has just showed his human weakness. Such approaches betray corrupt hearts, and bring reproach upon the cause of Christ.

Peter admonished all believers to maintain “a good conscience; that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evildoers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ ” (1 Pet 3:16). While no child of God will boast that they are perfect, all of them will confess their earnest desire to be found in such a state. Those in Christ are not to be found with glaring moral and spiritual blemishes that can be perceived by the ungodly. That is what James would call the “superfluity of naughtiness,” or the “overflow of wickedness.” NKJV Such things are to be “put away,” together with “all filthiness” (James 1:21). There can be no defense of moral corruption within the church. Such a condition gives power to the enemy, a place being made for the devil (Eph 4:27).

The council could find no cause for punishing Peter and John – that is, they could find no wrong in them. The apostles could have shouted out as Paul did before another tribunal: “to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest” (Acts 25:10). If they had been able to lay some “wrong” at the feet of Peter and John, the whole of Christian history would have been impacted. Such a condition would have contradicted the message Peter preached, affirming that “God, having raised up his Son Jesus, sent him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities ” (Acts 3:26).

One of the seeming advantages of a false gospel is that it sets the stage for a carnal allowance of iniquity. There is not a shred of this kind of preaching at the time of our text. Nor, indeed, was flawed conduct kindly tolerated among the believers. I do not doubt that in today’s Christian circles, the sin of Judas would be conveniently explained, and a hearty effort made to restore him to his office, or bishopric. However, such an approach is not found in Scripture.

BECAUSE OF THE PEOPLE

It ought to be noted that we should have a holy optimism about the power of the truth. While we may not be surprised when people reject the truth, we certainly should not be astounded if they receive it. Throughout history God has spoken of the acceptance of the truth by the people.

“ . . . because of the people: for all men glorified God for that which was done.” Other versions read, “ on account of the people , because they were all glorifying God for what had happened,” NASB “because all the people were praising God for what had happened,” NIV “because of the people; for all men were giving praise to God for what had taken place,” BBE “because they didn't know how to punish them without starting a riot . For everyone was praising God,” NLT “on account of the people, because all gave God the glory for the thing that had happened,” WEYMOUTH and “because all the people continued to praise God for what had happened.” ISV

This statement must be understood within its context. If they could have found some supposedly credible witness of iniquity in Peter and John, they would have proceeded with punishing them. They did so after false witnesses rose up against Jesus (Matt 26:60-62), and against Stephen as well (Acts 6:13-14).

The point here is that the people were so praising God for the work that had been done through Peter and John, that the council did not dare to conjure up false witnesses against them. The work of Peter and John was too unique, and the glory of it was still fresh in the minds of the people. The council saw it would be politically incorrect to make any attempt to invent charges against the two standing before them.

Not the First time

This was not the first time rebellious Jews faced the good response of the people to Divine workings.

- “And the scribes and chief priests heard it, and sought how they might destroy Him: for they feared Him, because all the people was astonished at his doctrine ” (Mark 11:18).
- “But if we shall say, Of men; they feared the people : for all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed” (Mark 11:32).
- “And they sought to lay hold on Him, but feared the people : for they knew that He had spoken the parable against them: and they left Him, and went their way” (Mark 12:12).
- “And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people ” (Luke 22:2).

All of this would have been of little consequence if they could only have substantiated a legitimate charge against Peter and John. If they could have found a true charge against them, they would have presented that to the people and proceeded with their opposition. However, no such charge could be validated. This is an example of being “blameless and harmless, the sons of God without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation” (Phil 2:15).

The Power of Truth

It ought to be noted that we should have a holy optimism about the power of the truth. While we may not be surprised when people reject the truth, we certainly should not be astounded if they receive it. Throughout history God has spoken of the acceptance of the truth by the people. Understanding that more is involved here than meets the eye, we do well to take heed to these proclamations.

- “The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto Him ye shall hearken ” (Deut 18:15).
- “ All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the LORD : and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee” (Psa 22:27).
- “And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it ” (Isa 2:2).
- “And He said, It is a light thing that Thou shouldest be My servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give Thee for a light to the Gentiles, that Thou mayest be My salvation unto the end of the earth” (Isa 49:6).
- “For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD , as the waters cover the sea” (Hab 2:14).
- “And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me ” (John 12:32).

The point to be seen is that the Gospel is powerful, and capable of provoking instant and extensive results. Of course, we cannot afford to be naive about this matter. This does not mean that every time the Gospel is preached there are marvelous results without opposition. Our text confirms this is the case. Even though above 5,000 men have believed, yet Peter and John have been arrested, and are standing before a critical and hostile tribunal.

Gospel Power Revealed

The power of the Gospel is not only revealed in its acceptance, but in its rejection as well. Just as the sowing of the seed revealed the manner of the soils upon which it fell, so the Gospel makes known the hearts that are subjected to it. Paul stated it this way : “Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savor of His knowledge by us in every place. For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish : to the one we are the savor of death unto death ; and to the other the savor of life unto life . And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:14-16).

When declared with power and insight, the Gospel reveals the hearts of men. This is seen in both the conversion of the city of Samaria (Acts 8:5-8), and the rejection and the stoning of Stephen (Acts 7:58-59). In our text, the turning of 5,000 men, and the provocation of the Temple authorities were both owing to ministry of the Gospel.

Requirements for the Gospel Being “Unto salvation”

There are two fundamental requirements for the realization of salvation through the Gospel.

- First, the true Gospel, not “another Gospel” (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6) must be preached. Salvation is never realized through a spurious gospel. Spiritual freedom is never experienced through a lie.

The extensive length of time during which hard-hearted people are exposed to the truth does not necessarily break them down. It can also make them more hardened. When men continue to labor among dull people, their message tends to become weaker and weaker. Their hearts grow heavy, and they can even become insensitive to the unacceptable condition of the people.

- Second, the Gospel must be received by “honest and good hearts” (Lk 8:15). We know from the Scriptures that when the minds of people are blinded by the devil, they will not believe (2 Cor 4:4). This condition is not determined by men, but is revealed in the failure of people to believe the Gospel.

There Are Ungodly Generations

There are whole generations, fully known to God, that are fundamentally ungodly, and who will not be changed. The generation of Israel who fell in the wilderness was such a generation (Num 32:13). It is called an “evil generation” (Deut 1:35). God referred to them as a “froward generation” (Deut 32:20). It made no difference how many wonderful works they saw, their hearts remained obstinate.

When Jesus dwelt among men, there was a body of people who “could not believe” (John 12:39). God Himself confirmed their fundamental hardness by blinding their eyes and hardening their hearts (John 12:40). Even the prodigious and gracious ministry of the Son of God could not turn them from their ways. They were a generation among whom He could “do no mighty work” (Mk 6:5). It is sobering to consider the presence of such a generation.

David spoke of “a stubborn and rebellious generation; a generation that set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not steadfast with God” (Psa 78:8). Solomon affirmed, “There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness” (Prov 30:12). Jeremiah referred to “the generation of His wrath” (Jer 7:29). Only the Lord is able to fully identify such generations – but He does do so, and we must learn to reckon upon that.

When men perpetually have the marks of a rejected generation, we must consider and confirm the validity of our presence and ministry among them. This is a judgment the laborer must make for himself – but it must be made.

It is possible to expend labor on the wrong people, so that all of one’s work is pointless. Paul referred to this dreaded circumstance when he wrote to the Galatians, “I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain” (Gal 4:11). Paul and Barnabas left some people, refusing to spend any more time among them (Acts 13:46). Peter and John will not develop a special ministry to the council, or the Sanhedrin.

The extensive length of time to which hard-hearted people are exposed to the truth does not necessarily break them down. It can also make them more hardened. When men continue to labor among dull people, their message tends to become weaker and weaker. Their hearts grow heavy, and they can even become insensitive to the unacceptable condition of the people. It is true that we are to be longsuffering and forbearing (Eph 4:2; Col 3:13). It is also true that we are to turn away from those who insist on maintaining a form of godliness while rejecting the power of it (2 Tim 3:5).

When men – even religious men – are grieved with the proclamation of the truth, we must not cease to declare it. This must be done even when we are in the territory over which they imagine they have complete control. If we have the opportunity to speak the truth, we must do so – in season and out of season (2 Tim 4:2). If the people can be saved, then it will be through the declaration of the truth. If they cannot be saved, the truth will also make that circumstance known.

This verse is an explanation for the people glorifying God “for the work that was done” (4:21). The response of the people was a reasoned one, not hype. It proceeded from thought, not hysteria. Peter and John had not whipped up the people, as some false prophets are prone to do. They had wrought a work before the people, and then expounded how that work had taken place.

Although much of modern Christianity relies on raw emotion, and the expert rallying of the emotional capacities of people, this is not the manner of the Kingdom of God. This is a Kingdom that involves perception, discernment, understanding, and other facets of thought – like consideration, contemplation, and reasoning. We now will be exposed to one facet of this miracle that moved the people to give glory to God.

“For the man was above forty years old . . .” Other versions read, “ over forty years old,” NKJV “ more than forty years old,” RSV and “a man who had been lame for more than forty years.” NLT

The age of the man is important because he had been “lame from his mother’s womb” – and everyone knew it (Acts 3:1,16). Thus his age also defined the length of his affliction – “more than forty years.” NRSV Here was an uninterrupted malady that had gripped the man for over four decades. There had to be a remarkable level of physical deterioration in his legs and ankles, so that no recovery could be expected from natural resources. As with the miracles of our blessed Lord, this man was in a helpless state. The work could only be accounted for by working of the Lord.

It is not that a miracle wrought on a child is any less a marvelous work of God. It takes no more power to raise the twelve year of daughter of Jairus, than to raise the grown man Lazarus who had been in the grave for four days. It is only in the minds of men that duration seems to diminish possibilities. However, this work was done to get the attention of men, and to elevate their thoughts to a point where they could see God alone was capable of doing such a work.

The Necessity of Better Things

When God receives credit for things than can be done through natural means, the glory is not great. In our time, a lot is associated with the Lord that is not unique, to say the least. Perhaps it is straightening out one’s marriage or finances, or getting a child off the streets to be more productive. It may be deliverance from some purported addiction, or enslavement to immorality. Claims to recovery from things like this are also boasted by spiritists, yoga experts, psychiatrists, and doctors of medication and diet.

I must speak with care on this subject, lest I be misunderstood. Such works were never emphasized in Christ’s miracles, or those of His disciples. There is no record of Jesus healing a drunk, a sloth, a harlot, a whoremonger, or a talebearer. He is never said to have corrected by means of a miracle a marriage, a financial condition, or a wayward child. That such conditions are a great weight to those having to deal with them cannot be denied. Nor, indeed, am I suggesting that such things should not be taken to the Lord. What I am saying is that these are only symptoms of a more serious problem – being enslaved by Satan. Thus Jesus referred to a woman bowed over for eighteen years as being “bound” by Satan (Lk 13:16).

I am not sure that Jesus specializes in providing shortcuts to conditions that can be achieved by mere human discipline and attention. That is why our condition before being in Christ is described as one of absolute hopelessness: “dead in trespasses and sins,” “no hope,” and the impossibility of being saved (Eph 2:1,12; Matt 19:26).

There are professing Christians who say that the secret to the spread of the truth is the conversion of the youth. In our text, the healing of a man who had been lame for over forty years was the means through which 5,000 men believed! That condition is in stark contrast to such reasoning. Men tell us it is too difficult to change people who are set in their ways. That is like saying it is more difficult to heal a man who has been lame for forty years than a boy who has been lame for only a few months.

What I am saying is that a mediocre church is quite willing to settle for religious improvement that is, at the best, only slight. God said of Israel's degenerate priests and prophets, "They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace" (Jer 6:14; 8:11). The result of their activity was only superficial. Such things will not move men to glorify God, for there are also a myriad of fleshly experts who boast of being able to make slight improvements in the lives of people.

I am not sure that God is glorified through mediocre, average, and usual means. Something must be done in His name that can be distinguished from other works. The economy of grace is one of abundance, better, and great.

Better

- We are persuaded of "better things" (Heb 6:9).
- We have a "better hope" (Heb 7:19).
- Jesus is the Surety of a "better testament" (Heb 7:22).
- We have a "better covenant, which is established upon "better promises" (Heb 8:6).
- The heavens have been cleansed with "better sacrifices" (Heb 9:23).
- We have in heaven "a better and an enduring substance" (Heb 10:34).
- We "desire a better country" (Heb 11:16).
- God has provided "some better thing for us" (Heb 11:40).

Abundance

- Jesus came that we might "have life, and have it more abundantly" (John 10:10).
- In Christ we receive "abundance of grace" (Rom 5:17).
- God is able to do "exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think" (Eph 3:20).
- The grace of God is "exceeding abundant with faith and love" (1 Tim 1:14).
- God has shed His Holy Spirit "abundantly" on us (Tit 3:6).
- We have been begotten through God's "abundant mercy" (1 Pet 1:3).

"Great"

- Those in Christ are said to do "greater works" (John 14:12).
- God loved us with a "great love" (Eph 2:4).
- We have "great joy" (Phil 1:7).
- We have been granted a "great salvation" (Heb 2:3).
- We have a "great High Priest" (Heb 4:14).
- Jesus is ministering in a "greater and more perfect tabernacle" (Heb 9:11).
- Our confidence has a "great recompense of reward" (Heb 10:35).

- God has given us “exceeding great and precious promises” (2 Pet 1:4).
- “Greater is He” that is in us than he that is in the world (1 John 4:4).

Exceeding

- The New Covenant is described as one that exceeds in glory (2 Cor 3:9).
- Our afflictions work for us a “far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory” (2 Cor 4:17).
- The “exceeding grace of God” can be in a person (2 Cor 9:14).
- God’s power toward those in Christ is characterized by “exceeding greatness” (Eph 1:19).
- In accordance with the power that is at work in us, God is able to do “exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think” (Eph 3:20).
- Our faith can grow “exceedingly” (2 Thess 1:3).

All of these extend beyond the circumference of mediocre, ordinary, average, and common. That is because everything about the Kingdom of God is related to the two fundamental aspects of salvation: deliverance from the powers of darkness, and translation into the kingdom of God’s Son – that is, the Kingdom over which He is presently presiding (Col 1:13). Deliverance from the powers of darkness necessarily involves deliverance from this present evil world (Gal 1:4). Mediocrity relates more to the realm from which we have been delivered, and has no place in the Kingdom into which we have been translated. That is why we are to “excel to the edifying of the church” (1 Cor 14:12), and “abound to every good work” (2 Cor 9:8).

The works of God invariably have His traits – that is how an association with Him can be seen in them. Works that can be accomplished without God ought not to be placed before the people as being from Him. It will take an extraordinary effort to substantiate that the God of heaven assists men to do what can really be done independently of Him.

Spiritual Babylon

Spiritual Babylon has perpetrated a false view of God, Christ, and their work. It claims an association with the Lord, but provides no evidence of such an affiliation. Because this is so dominant, men have grown accustomed to religious deadness and ineffectiveness. They have now accommodated themselves to claims of conversion that provide no evidence of change, theological positions that do not agree with the truth, and professions of loving Jesus that are not accompanied by obeying His commandments.

At the time of our text, these corruptions had not yet penetrated into the church. Years later Peter warned the saints that false prophets and teachers would be found “among” the people of God, and would privately bring in “damnable heresies” (2 Pet 2:1). Paul warned of the same intrusion (Acts 20:30). One of the telling effects of this prophesied invasion of lies is the dominance of religious mediocrity, or averageness. Jesus referred to the condition as being “lukewarm,” and affirmed that it would not be tolerated among His people, all excuses notwithstanding (Rev 3:16).

A MIRACLE OF HEALING SHOWED

“ . . . on whom this miracle of healing was showed.” Other versions read, “on whom this miracle of healing had been performed,” NKJV “who was miraculously healed,” NIV “on whom this sign of healing had been performed,” NRSV “on whom this act of power was done,” BBE “in whom that miraculous cure had been wrought,” DOUAY “on whom this miracle of healing was showed,” GENEVA “this miracle of restoration to health had been performed,” WEYMOUTH and “on whom

this wonderful cure had been performed.” WILLIAMS

This passage is an example of the church at work – or, more accurately, of the church being used by God to do the works He has ordained. This view of the matter is consistently emphasized in Scripture. It is especially refreshing to consider it in a time when human strategies and methodologies are being stressed.

The living testimony standing before the people was one in whom “a miracle of healing” had been “showed.” Some of the translations point our thinking in the wrong direction: i.e. “performed,” NKJV/NRSV and “done.” BBE This tends to place the accent on Peter and John rather than the work itself. The word “showed” comes from the Greek word evgego,nei (e-geg-on-ei). The following is its lexical definition: “to become, so come into existence, begin to be . . . to come to pass, happen . . . to appear in history,” THAYER “come to be, originate . . . to be produced . . . be made, be done, be brought into existence,” FRIBERG “to be created, to come about,” LEH “to be made, created, or done.” GINGRICH

This was a work that was ordained before it took place, and therefore is said to come into being. The Spirit refers to such works in Ephesians 2:10: “For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10). Although, from one point of view, Peter and John did the work, it was actually God working His will through them . They were involved because they were suitable vessels, “meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

This is an example of the church at work – or, more accurately, of the church being used by God to do the works He has ordained. This view of the matter is consistently emphasized in Scripture. It is especially refreshing to consider it in a time when human strategies and methodologies are being stressed.

DIVINITY WORKING IN HUMANITY

This is a wonderful consideration, and opens up some of the remarkable involvements revealed in salvation.

- “And what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of his mighty power ” (Eph 1:19).
- “And hath put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be the head over all things to the church, which is His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all ” (Eph 1:22-23).
- “For we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them ” (Eph 2:10).
- “Whereof I was made a minister , according to the gift of the grace of God given unto me by the effectual working of His power ” (Eph 3:7).
- “Now unto Him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us ” (Eph 3:20).
- “From whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part , maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love” (Eph 4:16).

- “For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

- “Whereunto I also labor, striving according to His working, which worketh in me mightily ” (Col 1:29).

- “Now the God of peace . . . Make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Heb 13:20-21).

What we have in our text is an example of the above affirmations – God working in and through the members of the body of Christ. This is in perfect accord with the nature of salvation and the revealed characteristics of the Covenant Jesus is presently mediating.

The New Covenant is not an economy of works, but one of God working within His people “to will and to do of His own good pleasure.” In Christ Jesus men are “joined to the Lord,” so that He can work through them in unprecedented ways. Because their natures have been changed, the people enter into the work insightfully and joyfully, thereby causing glory to be brought to the Lord.

There is no prophecy of a time when Christ, by intent, will cease working in His church. The prophets did not associate the New Covenant with a beginning alone. In fact, the description of the covenant is, by its very nature, something that is ongoing.

- God putting His laws into the mind.
- God writing His laws into the heart.
- God being to the people “a God.”
- The people being to God “a people.”
- Every one within the covenant, from the least to the greatest, knows God.
- God is “merciful to their unrighteousnesses.”
- God remembers their sins “no more.”

Exactly what is there about that covenant that is temporal, limited to a beginning, or destined to cease before the end of the world? Has it not been ratified as an “everlasting covenant” (Heb 13:20)?

The sophist will ask what this has to do with our text. It has much to do with it. Our text reveals a working that is within the framework of the New Covenant. If that is not the case, then we have a temporary agenda that has been adopted. I would consider such a postulate to be heretical from beginning to end!

In this text, Jesus is working as the Savior of the world. He is doing the will of the Father through those who have been reconciled to God and joined to Him through the Holy Spirit. He is working for the glory of God, and in strict concert with His Father’s revealed eternal purpose.

CONCLUSION

We have been exposed to the hostilities of corrupt religion. Such is never indifferent to the truth when powerfully and insightfully delivered. Further, because false religion always tends to institutionalization, it cannot tolerate those who proclaim the Divine emphasis, and do works that are consonant with the salvation of God. This circumstance is owing to the nature of truth, as well as that of the lie. What is true can never be merged with what is not true. What flows out from God’s eternal purpose cannot blend with the purposes of men. There is a hostility between what is false and what is true, and it cannot be avoided.

As soon as men begin to adjust their message to make the lie and those who embrace it more tolerable, they move into the unacceptable category. If they choose to obey men they at once cease to obey God. If they choose to please men, they immediately begin to displease God. If the world and its citizens become their focus, God can no longer be seen or understood. These are the stark realities of the case. Peter and John knew these things, and therefore refused to give heed to the Temple authorities. In so doing, they have set the standard for all Kingdom labors. Paul stated it well when he wrote, “For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ ” (Gal 1:10). That is something to be regarded with the utmost sobriety! This is particularly true when we are considering religious men who seek to suppress the truth of God.

DIALOG BETWEEN PETER AND THE LEADERS

“ 4:23 And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them. 24 And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to GOD with one accord, and said, LORD, THOU art GOD, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is: 25 Who by the mouth of THY servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things? 26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the LORD, and against HIS CHRIST. 27 For of a truth against THY HOLY CHILD JESUS, whom THOU hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together, 28 For to do whatsoever THY hand and THY counsel determined before to be done. 29 And now, LORD, behold their threatenings: and grant unto THY servants, that with all boldness they may speak THY word, 30 By stretching forth THINE hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of THY holy child Jesus. 31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.” (Acts 4:23-31)

INTRODUCTION

Because the council could find no cause for punishment in Peter and John, and because they feared the people and were therefore unwilling to trump up charges against them, they determined to let them go with a stern warning. Having been with this council for some time, and because they were devoted to the Lord who gave Himself for them, and had chosen them to be His witnesses, when they were released, they immediately repaired to their brethren. Because they were not ignorant of Satan's devices, they perceived that a bold and intense initiative was being launched against them. They did not determine to go to another place, for Jesus had solemnly commissioned them to fill Jerusalem, Judea, and Samaria with the Gospel. Therefore, having made a report to the brethren, and undaunted by the threats of the council, they all prayed to the Lord, petitioning Him to grant them boldness to preach His word. Their prayer was insightful, got the attention of heaven, and a great visitation from God was experienced. This is one of the great events of the book. That is a summation of the text before us.

There is much to be learned from this text, particularly when we consider the realities to which we are being exposed.

- We are beholding the clash of the Spirit with the flesh, truth with error, and life with tradition.
- The initiative of faith is evident, as Peter and John boldly affirm what they have seen and heard.
- The full assurance of understanding is evident, which cannot be suppressed by opposition.
- We are introduced to messengers that are holy as well as bold, and therefore no legitimate cause of punishment can be found in them.
- Among the faithful, there is a total absence of institutionalism.
- There is no division in the body of Christ.
- There is no absence of the love of the truth among the disciples.
- There is no discernable outward pattern that allows for an external duplication of the responses of Peter and John.

If you were lay the activities of the average mega-church [and most smaller churches as all] beside this record, you would be at a total loss to find any similarities. The message is different. The manner is different. The motives are different. The focus is different. There is a level of zeal that is virtually unknown. There is a degree of confidence that challenges the religious mind. These observations are very evident.

The mitigating factor is that we are beholding real life, real faith, and real commitment. This is how men of God respond to opposition. The difference between then and now is that a significant departure from the truth has taken place between the time of our text and our day – a “falling away.”

This falling away was foretold by the Lord Jesus. He traced it to the prevalence of iniquity, and the consequent diminishment of a love for Himself among those professing His name. “And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold” (Matt 24:12). When love grows cold, NKJV the fruits that spring from love wither and die.

The Apostles also spoke of a time of falling away, delivering various insights into its cause and nature. It was always an obvious point of concern.

• BECAUSE TRUTH WILL NOT BE LOVED, GOD WILL SEND STRONG DELUSION UPON THE PEOPLE, CONSTRAINING THEM TO BELIEVE A LIE.

“Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition . . . And with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness” (2 Thess 2:3,10-12).

• FAITH WILL NO LONGER BE PIVOTAL, AND THUS DEMONIC DOCTRINES WILL BE EMBRACED. “Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils; speaking lies in hypocrisy; having their conscience seared with a hot iron” (1 Tim 4:1-2).

• A POWERLESS FORM OF RELIGION WILL BE EMBRACED THAT ALLOWS FOR SIN TO REMAIN AMONG THE PEOPLE. “This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away” (2 Tim 3:1-5).

• ABANDONING THE TRUTH OF GOD, MEN WILL STRUCTURE THEIR RELIGION AROUND THEIR OWN FLESHLY INTERESTS. “For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables” (2 Tim 4:3-4).

• DOCTRINES WILL BE BROUGHT IN THAT LEAD MEN INTO CONDEMNATION AND CAUSE THE TRUTH TO BE MALIGNED. “But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of” (2 Pet 2:1-2).

It is not that such displays of Divine power and influence were assigned to a specific age, or that they were limited to certain men. The book of Acts is revealing the manner of “the day of salvation.”

The falling away foretold was of great concern to the apostles. Paul, for example, admonished Timothy to “preach the word; be instant [ready NKJV] in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine . . .” (1 Tim 4:2). That is, in view of the coming falling away, he was to make the most of the time, letting no opportunity pass him by. The time was coming when “sound doctrine” would not be tolerated by the professing church. It would develop its own agenda and priorities, ignoring Divine purpose and emphasis. There would be a marked propensity to preaching and teaching that would please those with no faith. That means it would be anchored to the world – the temporal order. Teaching would be man-centered, not Christocentric, or Christ-centered. Note again the traits of this “falling away.”

- No love for the truth.
- An empty form of godliness.
- Powerless religion.
- An tolerance of worldiness.
- A lack of interest in sound doctrine.
- Turning away from the truth.
- Gathering of teachers who will pacify the desires of sinful men.
- Doctrines that push one into the broad leading to destruction.
- Inconsistencies in Christianity that will lead men to speak evil of truth.

I am drawing attention to these characteristics because none of them were present at the time of our text. Their absence, together with the hearty embrace of the truth, is what enabled such mighty works and powerful preaching to take place. It is not that such displays of Divine power and influence were assigned to a specific age, or that they were limited to certain men. The book of Acts is revealing the manner of “the day of salvation.” It is unveiling the nature of the New Covenant, showing us the results of men being truly reconciled to God and in fellowship with Jesus Christ.

GODLY RESULTS CANNOT BE REALIZED WITHOUT GODLY CAUSES

Godly results can only proceed from godly causes. Powerful outcomes can only come from powerful causation. If men abandon the truth, they lose all access to the experiences wrought by truth. These include:

- Freedom (John 8:32).
- Sanctification (John 17:19).
- The teaching of Jesus (Eph 4:21).
- The experience of hope (Col 1:5).
- Salvation (2 Thess 2:10-12).
- Believing (2 Thess 2:13).
- Godly knowledge (1 Tim 2:4).
- A valid ministry within the church (1 Tim 3:15).
- Repentance (2 Tim 2:25).
- Obedience (1 Pet 1:22).
- A godly life (1 John 1:6).
- Assurance (1 John 3:19).

If “the truth” is removed, all of these benefits go with it – all of them! If there is no “love of the truth,” there is no possible way to experience the benefits that come from it. If it appears as though these things are present while the truth is absent, there really is only a simulation of them. What is derived from the truth itself cannot be obtained independently of that truth.

When we are faced with a fundamentally flawed church, it is because somewhere men have chosen to deny or abandon the truth. At some point they cease to love it and demand it. Their ears were turned away from the truth.

I have taken the time to say these things because they help to explain the realities that are taking place in our text. The evidences of falling away are totally absent. There is, at this point, no false teaching among professing Christians. Not only are they together, they are “of one heart and of one soul” (4:32). The truth is being proclaimed with power, and it has accomplished two things:

- Men have been brought to believe.
- The enemies of Jesus have been provoked.

Thus the marks of the New Covenant are being clearly shown. “For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish : to the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:16).

We have every reason to believe that if the professing church will “walk in the light as He is in the light,” God will work through it to bring glory and honor to his own name. This will be done by flushing out those who have no love for the truth, and by awakening those who do have such a God-given love. When this happens, God will work for good.

THEY WENT TO THEIR OWN COMPANY

“ 4:23 And being let go, they went to their own company, and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.”

Here we will see a trait of newness of life: it moves men to seek out kindred spirits. Peter and John will not go into hiding, but will immediately join themselves to fellow believers.

THEY WENT TO THEIR OWN COMPANY

“And being let go, they went to their own company . . .” Other versions read, “their own companions,” NKJV “their own people,” NIV “their friends,” NRSV “their own fellowship,” CSB “their fellows,” GENEVA “their brethren,” MRD “their fellow believers,” NET “the community,” NJB “the other disciples,” LIVING “the other apostles,” GWN and “their own group.” IE

The word “company” means “pertaining to oneself . . . family . . . generation . . . one’s own people,” THAYER and “one’s own people, family, household, countrymen.” FRIBERG

One modern translation affirms “their own company” to be the apostles themselves. GWN This is not true. There is no evidence that the apostles tended to cluster together following Christ’s ascension into heaven. They were not a group unto themselves, but were placed within the body of Christ, being a part of the whole (1 Cor 12:28). Thus we read in the book of acts of “the apostles and the brethren” (11:1). Special gatherings for the examining of issues and drawing valid conclusions involved “the apostles and elders” (15:2,4,6,22,23; 16:4). Once a mass of people were noted for siding “with the apostles” NKJV (14:4). Key analysis and decisions were made by James, the Lord’s brother, after the apostle James had been killed (Acts 12:17; 15:13; 21:18).

In our text, “their own company” does not describe the office they held in the church – “apostles” – but those with whom they had commonality in Christ Jesus.

- A common salvation (Tit 1:4; Jude 1:3).
- A common faith.

Following Christ’s ascension, the eleven “continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with His brethren.” At that time, we are told, there were “together” about one hundred and twenty (Acts 1:14-15). When Jesus rose from the dead, He did appear to “the twelve” (1 Cor 15:5), but He also did to James, and to “above five hundred brethren at once” (1 Cor 15:5,7). When Jesus appeared to the disciples and “opened their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures,” there were others “with” the eleven, including several women and Cleopas and his companion (Lk 24:33-44).

Following ascension of Jesus, there is not a single clear account in all of Scripture of the twelve apostles having a unique gathering by themselves – not a single one. What would lead anyone to imagine that, in this text, “their own company” means only the apostles themselves?

After Pentecost, the believers “were together” (Acts 2:44). Later, when Peter was miraculously delivered from prison, “he came to the house of Mary the mother of John . . . where many were gathered together praying” (Acts 12:12). Following ascension of Jesus, there is not a single clear account in all of Scripture of the twelve apostles having a unique gathering by themselves – not a single one. What would lead anyone to imagine that, in this text, “their own company” means only the apostles themselves?

What we have here is an circumstance similar to that which was experienced in the days of Malachi. “Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon His name” (Mal 3:16). In my judgment, we do a great disservice to the church by suggesting the apostles were a group unto themselves. While they did possess special gifts, and were given a unique role within the church, they did not isolate themselves from the rest of the body. They were part of the “all that believed” that were “together” (Acts 2:44). While their faith was adapted for their ministry, it was nevertheless a “common faith,” and blended perfectly with the faith of those who believed on Christ through their word (John 17:20).

This is actually a critical point of sound doctrine – the apostles doctrine . That is why Peter wrote this to scattered believers, “Simon Peter, a bond-servant and apostle of Jesus Christ, to those who have received a faith of the same kind as ours , by the righteousness of our God and Savior, Jesus Christ” NASB (2 Pet 1:1). There is, after all, only “one faith,” and it perfectly joins the people of God together (Eph 4:5). The apostles did not have a different kind faith, but a different “measure” – and there is a vast difference between those two concepts (Rom 12:3; Eph 4:7,16).

The Preference of Godly People

The fact that people of God do not fear men does not suggest that they attach no significance to their threats. Believers know very well that they are not of themselves equal to the challenges of opposition. Further, their connection with the “Head over all things” is through their faith.

Faith brings to the heart a preference for godly people – “the household of faith” (Gal 6:10), or “the whole family” (Eph 3:15). Where this preference is absent, a most serious deficiency exists! For some people “their own company” has absolutely no reference to the children of God. However, in our text, it provides us insight into the very real closeness among brethren that is produced by fellowship with, and the love of, the Lord Jesus Christ.

Peter and John sensed they were not alone in this warfare. In their hearts they had already appropriated the truth of Romans 12:15: “Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep.” Here we will behold an example of “striving together for the faith of the Gospel” (Phil 1:27). They will call upon the brethren to “strive together” in “prayers to God” for them (Rom 15:30). This will be an excellent example of being “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10). We will be exposed to a “whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth” (Eph 4:16).

Of course, such things are not even possible if there is not a preference for the people of God. Such a preference is inherent in brotherly love which, under no circumstances, is to be lacking among the saints of God. That such a love was present is confirmed by what follows. At this time, the brethren did not require exhortations to love one another, or be mindful of one another, or to labor together. This will not be a response to an admonition, or the fulfillment of a commandment. It is rather the spontaneous response of those who were walking in the newness of life.

THEY REPORTED IT ALL

“ . . . and reported all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them.” Other versions read, “gave an account of all,” BBE “ related all,” DOUAY “ showed all,” GENEVA “ told them all,” MRD “told them everything ,” NJB and “ declared whatever.” YLT

The fact that people of God do not fear men does not suggest that they attach no significance to their threats. Believers know very well that they are not of themselves equal to the challenges of opposition. Further, their connection with the “Head over all things” is through their faith. They cannot live as though their enemies did not exist, or their empowerment and protection were automatic. I acknowledge that some people appear to live in this manner, but it is not right to do so. To suggest that we have been called into the fellowship of God’s Son (1 Cor 1:9), only to have Him work in us apart from that fellowship, is nothing but an imagination. If we have been “joined to the Lord,” and are “one spirit” with Him (1 Cor 6:17), how is it that Divine benefits could possibly pass to us apart from that joining ? It is the lively connection between brethren that becomes the channel through which the Head ministers nourishment to them. As it is written, “ . . . the Head, from Whom the entire body, supplied and knit together by means of its joints and ligaments, grows with a growth that is from God.” AMPLIFIED

As confirmed in Ezekiel’s valley of dry bones, a disjointed and disassembled body is utterly useless. That is because it has no power, much less mobility and dexterity. An army cannot be assembled from bones, no matter how many there are, and irrespective of their imagined antiquity. It is not that a divided church IS not doing anything, it is rather that it CANNOT do anything. This is confirmed by the judgment at the tower of Babel. At the very instant the people became separated from one another, “they stopped building the city” NASB (Gen 11:8).

Further, let no man imagine that the marvelous affinity revealed in our text is apart from a lively awareness, or consciousness. Salvation includes the confirming testimony of the Holy Spirit, who “beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God” (Rom 8:16). It is within the framework of an acute consciousness of God – called “the knowledge of Him” – that men receive everything pertaining to life and godliness (2 Pet 1:1) – including the abilities to give insightful reports, and to pray with obvious power.

Now the disciples are going to go to the Lord concerning the threats that have been made to Peter and John. It is in view of this that the two reported everything that had been said to them. They know they have “access . . . unto the Father,” and they will avail themselves of it” (Eph 2:18). As Job said he would do, and in keeping with the nature of the New Covenant, they will “order” their cause before the Lord (Job 23:4), and “plead” with Him, (Isa 43:26), producing their “cause,” and bringing forth their “strong reasons” (Isa 41:21).

To assist the brethren in framing their petition, a full report of the cause has been given. Now, like spiritual lawyers, they will present their case to, and reason with, the Lord.

THEY LIFTED UP THEIR VOICE TO GOD WITH ONE ACCORD

“ 24a And when they heard that, they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said . . . ”

We will now be exposed to the unity of the Spirit and its utility in Kingdom matters. Unity is not an end in itself. Its value is seen in its effects. This is owing to the peaceable environment that it produces – an environment in which “the fruit of righteousness” is sown (James 3:18). No genuine and lasting work of God will be accomplished where division in heart and mind exist.

In the Spirit, legitimate difference involves differing, yet harmonious, perspectives of the same things. In the Spirit the truth is loved as well as the brethren. The Divine agenda has been adopted, and purely selfish interests are mortified. Therefore, the unity of the Spirit is conducive to godly productivity and advance.

In the flesh, difference results in competition and division. It drives people apart rather than bringing them together. The truth is not loved, nor are the brethren. Carnal interests drive the objectives of those walking in the flesh. Therefore, the work of God cannot be done in such an environment. This is because “the carnal mind is enmity against God.” Therefore, “they that are in the flesh cannot please God ” (Rom 8:7-8).

Our text involves people that are “spiritually minded.” Therefore life and peace will exude from the assembly (Rom 8:6). When they hear the report, there will be “no divisions” among them. There will not be differing and conflicting views of the report. These are people who have “ears to hear,” and such ears are tuned to the same heavenly frequency. These are people who are “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).

In modern Christian cultures, there must be admonitions to have the “same mind,” and to be harmonious in judgment. That is because corruption has crept into the church. Now, because the corruption is at the fountainhead of the institution, a great amount of time must be spent correcting, directing, rebuking, and instructing. This condition began very early in the history of the church – like a seemingly harmless crack in a dam. We will see it’s entrance as we progress through the book of Acts.

However, in our text, this condition did not yet exist. There will be no need to admonish the brethren to be of one mind. Peter and John will not have to suggest various ways in which this problem can be addressed. Time will not have to be spent warning the disciples what to avoid. Here, we will behold the spontaneous expression of real spiritual life. When there are no inhibiting obstacles to perception or devotion, this is what the people of God do. Anything less, or where there is a variance with this response, it is always owing to carnality, the flesh, and worldly-mindedness.

WHEN THEY HEARD THAT

“And when they heard that . . .” Other versions read, “hearing it,” BBE “having heard it,” DARBY “when the apostles heard this,” GWN and “upon hearing the story.” WEYMOUTH

Again, I draw the flawed translations of this text to your attention. As I have already stated, nothing in the text, or the book of Acts itself, justifies the view that this group was limited to the apostles. That is an opinion that is driven by a traditional view of the Kingdom. Secondly, this is not a “story” – a word which should be stricken from our vocabulary when speaking of Scriptural accounts. While the word “story,” in an archaic sense, can apply to historical incidents (hi-story), it is too impersonal for use here. What these people heard was the report of a personal experience – one that bore directly upon the work of the church.

By saying “they heard,” an interest in what was said is implied. That is, they “heard” the report as those who were themselves involved in its implications. They were not simply hearing a report of the experiences of someone else.

Also, the disciples “heard” with discernment. That is, they were able to associate the report with life in Christ Jesus, the preaching of the Gospel, and the need for Divine assistance. They could see the source of the opposition. They could discern its relation to the worldly opposition that was revealed in the death of the Lord Jesus. They knew this opposition had been prompted by the devil, and they realized their personal inability to deal with it. It was apparent to them that this could not be ignored, as though it never happened, or had no direct bearing upon them. Under the direction of the Holy Spirit, they had launched a bold spiritual initiative. Now, Satan had retaliated with an opening move of his own. They knew his efforts would not wane, but would rather intensify. Therefore they immediately called upon the name of the Lord.

THEY LIFTED UP THEIR VOICE WITH ONE ACCORD

“ . . . they lifted up their voice to God with one accord, and said . . . ” Other versions read, “they raised their voice to God with one accord,” NKJV “they raised their voices together ,” NIV “they all, with one mind, made prayer to God,” BBE “raised their voices to God unanimously ,” CSB “they were united and loudly prayed to God,” GWN “ unitedly lifted up their voice to God,” MRD “raised their voices to God with one mind ,” NET “lifted up their voice to God with one heart ,” NJB “all the believers lifted their voices together in prayer to God,” NLT “they prayed to God with one purpose ,” IE “with one united prayer to God,” WILLIAMS “lifted their voices together with one united mind to God ,” AMPLIFIED and “ with one passion lifted voice to God.” LITV

Here is an aspect of human expression that is rapidly waning in our time – the lifting up of the voice. From an etymological point of view, lifting up the voice is straightforward. The expression “lifted up” comes from a single Greek word meaning, “to lift up, raise up . . . raise upward, elevate.” THAYER The word “voice” comes from a Greek word meaning “a sound, tone . . . the sound of the uttered voice.” THAYER When the human voice is lifted up, it is made louder and stronger. More energy is put into speaking. If we say someone lifts up their hands, every knows what we mean. If we ask someone to lift up their eyes, it is apparent we are asking them to raise their heads and focus on some sight above the ground. If we ask someone to lift up their voice, we mean to speak louder.

God commanded the Levites to speak to the people “with a loud voice ” (Deut 27:14). When Solomon prayed and blessed the people, he did so “with a loud voice” (1 Kgs 8:55). When the Lord spoke to a troubled and timorous people He said, “Lift up thy voice, O daughter of Gallim: cause it to be heard unto Laish, O poor Anathoth” (Isa 10:30). When He challenged Jerusalem to spread good tidings He said, “O Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up , be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God!” (Isa 40:9). He told Isaiah, “Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet , and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins” (Isa 58:1). When Peter preached on the day of Pentecost he “lifted up his voice” (Acts 2:14). In the book of the Revelation, a “loud voice” is mentioned thirteen times (5:2,12; 6:10; 7:2,10; 8:13; 10:3; 12:10; 14:7,9,15,18; 19:17).

Now the brethren lift up their voice to God in elevated tones. They do not do this to be better heard by God, but to be more focused, and to be of more assistance to each other. Even their external expression is in harmony with their hearts, confirming the urgency of the situation. Also, the lifting up of the voice is a kind of sacrifice in which the best of one’s ability is thrown into the act of praying.

With One Accord

Now the brethren lift up their voice to God in elevated tones. They do not do this to be better heard by God, but to be more focused, and to be of more assistance to each other. Even their external expression is in harmony with their hearts, confirming the urgency of the situation.

There were not a lot of examples of men doing something “with one accord” prior to Christ. The Israelites, with very few exceptions were noted for strife and dissension rather than single-mindedness. In all of Moses and the prophets, they are never said to have been “in one accord.” The expression “one mind” is never applied to them. Once they were said to have been of “one heart to make David king” (1 Chron 12:38). Once “the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD” (2 Chron 30:12).

However, in Christ, as promised by the prophets, such marvelous oneness occurs. Isaiah prophesied, “they shall see eye to eye, when the LORD shall bring again Zion” (Isa 52:8). Jeremiah prophesied, “And I will give them one heart, and one way” (Jer 32:39). Through Zechariah the Lord promised, “For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent” (Zeph 3:9). These are not things that should take place in Christ – something like goals to be achieved. Rather, these traits would characterize the people of the Lord. They would be the result of being reconciled to God. Where they are not found, “the flesh” is in control, and men are walking in it. Further, walking in the flesh is always willing, for “the flesh” cannot override the Spirit. We know this is the case because it is written, “This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh” (Gal 5:16). Unity is “of the Spirit” (Eph 4:3), and divisions are “of the flesh” (dissensions, factions NASB – Gal 5:20).

Now, in our text, the people are one – “with one accord.” They are all of “one mind and one mouth” (Rom 15:6), and are “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment,” and therefore will “speak the same thing” (1 Cor 1:10). They will require no exhortation to be this way, for their faith has already done the work. We do not know if they all prayed at once, spoke individually, or one or more spoke for all. The point is that the prayer flowed out from a people who had one mind and one purpose. There was no dissenting voice or heart among them. The flesh had not yet risen in their presence, and no place had been made for the devil.

This is spiritual life in all of its pristine pureness. It is how those who have maintained the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace pray to God.

THOU ART GOD

“24b . . . Lord, Thou art God, which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is . . .”

Reference to Deity

Before beginning this exposition, I want to draw attention to the many references to Deity that are found in this prayer. They provide us a glimpse into the nature of effective prayer, which concentrates on the Lord and His will primarily, and human need secondarily. “1 to God . . . 2 Lord . . . 3 Thou . . . 4 God . . . 5 which . . . 6 Who . . . 7 Thy servant David . . . the 8 Lord . . . 9 His Christ . . . 10 Thy Holy Child . . . 11 Jesus . . . 12 whom 13 Thou hast anointed . . . 14 Thy hand . . . 15 counsel . . . 16 Lord . . . 17 Thy servants . . . 18 Thy word . . . 19 Thine hand . . . 20 the Name . . . 21 Thy Holy Child 22 Jesus.”

There are competitors to be sure – other “gods,” as well as men who think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. However, they are all under the true God, and must yield to Him at His word. These disciples know this is the case, and therefore they present their supplication to the Lord, knowing full well that their opponents cannot stand against Him.

Here was a body of people whose minds were immersed in Scripture. They had a grasp of the purpose of God, as well as His Sovereignty. Consider the marvelous scope of their understanding.

- LORD, THOU ART GOD – they recognized His dominion and power.
- CREATOR – They traced all things back to Him.
- THY SERVANT – They saw David as serving God’s interests and purpose.
- THE LORD – He is Sovereign.

- HIS CHRIST – The Lord was perceived as primarily serving Divine interests.
- THY HOLY CHILD JESUS – Only a holy Christ could save men.
- THOU HAST ANOINTED – Christ’s purpose and power was traced back to God.
- THY HAND – God is involved in the affairs of men.
- THY COUNSEL – The death of Jesus is seen as the outworking of God’s purpose.
- DETERMINED TO BE DONE – God’s will is causal – it makes things happen.
- LORD, BEHOLD – God focuses on the affairs of men.
- THY SERVANTS – The disciples pray as bond slaves to God and His purpose.
- THY WORD – This word reflects God’s purpose, and is empowered to accomplish it.

One time, while Jesus was yet with them in the flesh, His disciples asked Him, “Teach us to pray” (Lk 11:1). Somewhere between Luke 11:1 and Acts 4:24, some Divine tutelage had been realized. No deficiency in prayer will be apparent on this occasion. The saints will pray with insight, persuasion, and confidence. They will not ask what they should do, but will pray for boldness to do what they already know to do.

THOU ART GOD

“ . . . Lord, thou art God . . .” Other versions read, “O Lord,” NASB “Sovereign Lord,” NIV/NRSV/RSV/ESV/NAB/NIB/ WEYMOUTH/MONTGOMERY/AMPLIFIED “Master,” CSB “Master of all,” NET “Lord, You are God,” PHILLIPS and “Master, You are the God,” ALT

The sophist sees no need for such a confession. To such, these words appear to be a pointless redundancy. However, this is not the recitation of a formula or a standardized introduction to supplication. This is the confession of faith – the acknowledgment of something that has been seen, or comprehended. Elsewhere we are apprised, “he that cometh to God must believe that HE IS , and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him” (Heb 11:6).

“Thou art God” is the confession that the people believe that “He is.” There is no point in praying if God is nothing more than an idea, or part of a creed, or something other than a real person.

The word “God” is intentionally singular. Lexically, and as used in this text, the word means “the supreme Divine being, the true, living, and personal God,” FRIBERG It is true that Satan is also referred to as “god” (same Greek word – qeo.j). However, the domain over which he rules is limited. Therefore he is called “the god of this world .” However, the God of our text is appropriated called “the God of gods,” for He is over them and rules them all. “For the LORD your God is God of gods, and Lord of lords, a great God, a mighty, and a terrible, which regardeth not persons, nor taketh reward” (Deut 10:17). Being “the God of gods,” He knows all things, thereby distinguishing Him from other gods. “The LORD God of gods, the LORD God of gods, He knoweth, and Israel He shall know; if it be in rebellion, or if in transgression against the LORD, (save us not this day)” (Josh 22:22). David also confessed that God was “the God of gods” (Psa 136:2). When Daniel interpreted the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, the king confessed, “Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings” (Dan 2:47).

There are competitors to be sure – other “gods,” as well as men who think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. However, they are all under the true God, and must yield to Him at His word. These disciples know this is the case, and therefore they present their supplication to the Lord, knowing full well that their opponents cannot stand against Him.

RELATING THE CREATOR TO THE CIRCUMSTANCE

“ . . . which hast made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is . . .” Other versions read, “Thou didst make,” NASB “Maker of,” BBE “Creator of,” LIVING “the One having made,” ALT and “You created.” CEV

Here is a fundamental view that must not be distorted. It is consistently affirmed throughout Scripture, so that there can be doubt about this – God’s association with the heaven, the earth, the sea, and everything inhabiting them.

This is the “heaven and the earth” that was created “in the beginning” of time. “In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth” (Gen 1:1). It is the first thing about God that Scripture affirms. The “heaven” is the area around the earth, filled with celestial bodies beyond number. The “earth” is the area in which everything housed in a body lives – man, beast, fowl, and creeping things. The sea is the vast collections of water in which both animal and vegetable life is maintained, the number of which is also unimaginably vast.

This is the domain some have called the universe. Scripture refers to it as “the worlds” (Heb 1:2; 11:3). It also refers repeatedly to these three domains: heaven, earth, and sea (Ex 20:11; Psa 146:6; Ezek 38:20; Amos 9:6; Acts 14:15; Rev 5:13; 10:6; 14:7). This entire domain, with all three of its components, will eventually pass away according to Divine appointment (Rev 21:1).

One might wonder why the disciples prayed in this manner. There is a basic postulate behind this confession, and it is marvelous to consider. The One who made these realms governs and controls everything within them.

It is not possible to have a proper view of God that ignores the fact that He “made heaven, and earth, and sea, and all that in them is.” This includes the fact that He made them “in six days,” as affirmed in Exodus 20:11 and 31:17. Men may haggle over what kind of days these were – 24 hour days, or very lengthy periods of time. However, each of the six days in which the Lord created the heaven, earth, sea, and everything within them are each summarized with the words, “and the evening and the morning were” (Gen 1:5,8,13,19,23,31). This confirms they were periods of identical length, each consisting of two components. There is not a shred of Scripture – not so much as a syllable – that suggests these days were anything other than the days with which we are familiar.

While I do not stand in judgment of anyone’s faith, those who do not acknowledge God as the Creator [as it is presented in Scripture] cannot possibly be serving the true God. They cannot confess God as these disciples did. What I am saying is that God himself is identified as the One created the worlds, thereby distinguishing Him from all other gods, over whom he rules.

The Basic Postulate

One might wonder why the disciples prayed in this manner. There is a basic postulate behind this confession, and it is marvelous to consider. The One who made these realms governs and controls everything within them. There is no personality, thing, or activity within them over which God does not have absolute dominion. This is particularly good news when facing opposition.

WHY DID THE HEATHEN RAGE

“ 25 Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said, Why did the heathen rage, and the people imagine vain things?”

Spiritual minds gravitate to Scripture. There is where the mind of God is articulated, and the thoughts of God are communicated to men. The Scriptures are the means through which we learn to speak properly concerning the things of God. That is why it is through them that the man of God is made “perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17).

Now we will behold how a grasp of Scripture impacts upon forming a prayer to God.

BY THE MOUTH OF DAVID

“Who by the mouth of thy servant David hast said . . .” Other versions read, “by the Holy Spirit, through the mouth of our father David Thy servant,” NASB “by the Holy Spirit through the mouth of Your servant, our father David,” NIV “by the Holy Spirit through our ancestor David , your servant,” NRSV “who by the mouth of our father David, thy servant, didst say by the Holy Spirit,” RSV “who through the mouth of our father David, your servant, said by the Holy Spirit,” ESV “ and You said through the Holy Spirit, who spoke through your servant David (our ancestor).” GWN

Here is a glimpse of what can be involved in God speaking to men. There are few examples of God speaking directly to men: Adam (Gen 3:9-12), Noah (Gen 6:13), Abraham (Gen 17:9), Jacob (Gen 35:1), and Moses (Num 12:7-8), etc. Some of the occasions during which God was said to speak to men were actually accomplished through an angel. Some examples are Moses at the burning bush (Ex 3:1-4:19; Acts 7:30), and the giving of the Law at Sinai (Ex 20:1-19; Acts 7:53; Gal 3:19). Several other instances where it is stated that the Lord spoke to men could actually have been accomplished through angels, as when Jacob said He had seen God “face to face” (Gen 32:30), yet had actually wrestled with an angel (Hos 12:4).

Here, however, we have a reference to the more standard way of God speaking to men – if, indeed, any such way can be called standard . The affirmation of the text is that God delivered a word to men through David – a prophecy of the coming Messiah. Some versions read, “by the Holy Spirit through the mouth of David.” NASB The King James and New King James Versions, together with several others, do not contain the reference to the Holy Spirit. There is no need to balk at this, as we are informed elsewhere that “holy men of God spoke as they were moved by the Holy Spirit” NKJV (2 Pet 1:21). This is what “the inspiration of God” means, as stated in Second Timothy 3:16.

We also know that fallen man cannot have direct access to God Himself. Jesus said, “And the Father Himself, which hath sent Me, hath borne witness of Me. Ye have neither heard His voice at any time, nor seen His shape” (John 5:37). Again He said, “Not that any man hath seen the Father, save He which is of God, He hath seen the Father” (John 6:46). Additionally, John wrote, “No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, He hath declared Him” (John 1:18). All of this shows how Divine communication is, in a manner of speaking, filtered as it comes to man.

Here is a profitable thing to ponder – something that accents the extent to which the human race has fallen. The manner in which God speaks to us confirms that sin has created a separation between man and God. Even though in Christ we are reconciled to God, there must still be someone between us and God to deliver His words. In the past, through the Spirit and holy angels, he spoke to men through the prophets. Now, however, He speaks to us through the Son. As it is written, “God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also He made the worlds” (Heb 1:1-2). Now the Son is in total charge of all communication with men. If sinners are to be convicted , the Son must send the Spirit to do so (John 16:8-11). If the Scriptures are to be opened to us, and the eyes of our understanding be illuminated, the Son must do it (Eph 1:18). The government is upon His shoulder, and hearing and understanding the truth is within the perimeter of His Kingdom.

Now the disciples will speak to God about something He had spoken through the Spirit and by David the prophet. They will discern this particular passage of Scripture, and be able to correlate it with the events that have recently occurred in their presence.

WHY DID THE HEATHEN RAGE?

“Why did the heathen rage . . .” Other versions read, “Why do the nations rage?” NKJV “Why did the Gentiles rage?” NASB “Why are the nations so violently moved ?” BBE “Why have the nations raged haughtily ?” DARBY “Why do the nations act arrogantly ?” GWN “Why this uproar among the nations?” NJB “Why were the nations so angry ?” NLT “Why do the heathen rage against the Lord ?” LIVING “Why were the nations so mad?” IE “Why did the heathen (Gentiles) become wanton and insolent and rage ?” AMPLIFIED and “Why are the Gentiles so furious ?” CEV

The passage to which they are referring is Psalm 2:1-6: “Why do the heathen rage, and the people imagine a vain thing? The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD, and against His anointed, saying, Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath, and vex them in His sore displeasure. Yet have I set My king upon My holy hill of Zion.”

“The heathen” is a reference to the Gentile peoples – the nations to whom no revelation was given, and who were not in covenant with God. It speaks of the opposition of the nations to the purposes and objectives of God Almighty. We will see that it particularly relates to the enthronement of the Lord’s Christ.

The word “rage” speaks of arrogant and haughty behavior – like a prancing horse to stomps on the ground wildly. What caused the nations to be agitated and bluster about against the Lord? Why were they so angry, and moved to violence?

There are numerous examples of this rage. In an introductory manner, it was made known in Cain slaying Abel (Gen 4:8), Ishmael mocking Isaac (Gen 21:9-10), and Esau threatening Jacob (Gen 27:41). The nations raged against Israel, the covenanted people: Egypt, Assyria, Syria, Philistia, Media, Samaria, Chaldea. They raged at a people who were blessed by the Lord, and were given a land of their own. They raged at their religion, their prophets, and their law?

Behind all of this, Satan was at work, seeking to stop the promised Seed from coming into the world. Following Christ’s entrance into the world, the devil focused on Him, making every effort to turn Him from His mission or destroy Him. His efforts were all in vain, as Jesus triumphed over him, destroying Him by means of His death (Heb 2:14).

Following our Lord’s resurrection, ascension, and enthronement, Satan would continue to harass the disciples of Christ, trying to stamp them out from the earth (Rev 12:17). In this effort he would also employ the nations of the world – heathen governments. Though seemingly successful in some of his efforts, this too would prove to be futile. All who are in Christ Jesus will be brought safely home to glory.

WHY DID THE PEOPLE IMAGINE VAIN THINGS?

Imagining vain things is the development of cunning plots that were destined to failure. It is the making of plans that cannot be fulfilled. It is not because the plans are foolish of themselves, but because they are against the Lord, whose purpose cannot be overthrown.

“ . . . and the people imagine vain things?” Other versions read, “And the people plot vain things ?” NKJV “And the peoples devise futile things ?” NASB “and the peoples plot in vain ?” NIV “and why are the thoughts of the people so foolish ?” BBE “and the peoples meditated vain things ?” DARBY “Why do their people devise useless plots ?” GWN “and the peoples entertain folly ?” NAB “this impotent muttering of the peoples?” NJB “Why did they waste their time with futile plans ?” NLT “and the foolish nations plan their little plots against Almighty God ?” LIVING “Why did the people of the world plan things ?” IE “and the people make vain designs,” WILLIAMS “and the people imagine and study and plan vain (fruitless) things [that will not succeed]?” AMPLIFIED “and [the] people think about [fig., plot futile][things]? ALT and “and the people conspired vain things ?” EMTV

Some have conjectured that “the people” refers to the heathen in another way – as individuals rather than nations. They reject the idea that it refers to the Jews, who were a unique people in the world. However, I am rather inclined to see this as the Jews – particularly since the disciples make that connection in the expressions that follow.

We have numerous examples of the Jews objecting to, and opposing, the words and working of the Lord. They murmured against Moses (Ex 15:24; 16:2; 17:3; Num 14:2; 16:41). They persecuted, and even killed, the holy prophets (Matt 23:31; Acts 7:32; Thess 2:15). They killed Stephen (Acts 7:59), and took delight in the beheading of James (Acts 12:2-3). They hounded Paul in his prodigious travels throughout the world (Acts 9:22-23; Acts 13:45,50; 14:19; 17:13; 18:12; 20:3; 21:27; 23:12; 25:7; 2 Cor 11:24; 2 Thess 2:14). All of this opposition started with “the people” rejecting Jesus, and imagining vain things against Him.

Imagining vain things is the development of cunning plots that were destined to failure. It is the making of plans that cannot be fulfilled. It is not because the plans are foolish of themselves, but because they are against the Lord, whose purpose cannot be overthrown.

Why ???

In asking “Why?” the heathen raged and the people imagined vain things, neither the Psalmist nor the disciples are not seeking an answer. Rather, through the Spirit, they are declaring the absurdity of their actions. Although they did not know it, they were nothing more than vassals of Satan, and Satan cannot overthrow God. This is confirmed by the fact that he himself was cast out of heaven with his angels. As it is written, “And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him” (Rev 12:9). His opposition against God in the heavenly realms was futile. It is also futile upon the earth.

The futility of all opposition to God reaches an apex in the matter of Christ’s enthronement. After citing the raging of the heathen and the plotting of the people, the second Psalm continues, “He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh: the Lord shall have them in derision. Then shall He speak unto them in His wrath, and vex them in His sore displeasure. Yet have I set My king upon My holy hill of Zion ” (Psa 2:6). All opposition, from the slaying of Abel to the crucifixion of Christ, was nothing more than an exercise in vanity. God did what He had purposed, and there was not a chance that any person or group of persons could thwart or delay it. As it is written, “as I have purposed, so shall it stand ” (Isa 14:24), and “I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass ; I have purposed it, I will also do it ” (Isa 46:11).

Now, the disciples will reason with the Lord. They will build their case upon the truth of the second Psalm. They do so because they know they are in synch with Divine purpose, and thus call upon Him to sustain them in their work. This is a prayer of remarkable insight, revealing how the Spirit works in those whose hearts have been submitted to the Lord. Much can be learned here.

THE KINGS AND RULERS GATHERED TOGETHER

“ 26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the rulers were gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ.”

This is heaven’s view of the conspiracy against Jesus. It is depicted as a bold and deliberate initiative against God Himself and His Christ, or Anointed One – the One chosen to take away the sins of the world, soundly defeat the wicked one, and administrate the Kingdom of God with a mind to bringing many sons to glory.

THE KINGS OF THE EARTH STOOD UP

“The kings of the earth stood up . . .” Other versions read, “The kings of the earth took their stand .” NKJV “The kings of the earth set themselves in array ,” NRSV “The kings of the earth were lifted up ,” BBE “The kings of the earth were there ,” DARBY “The Kings of the earth assembled ,” GENEVA “The kings of the earth stood together ,” NET “Kings on earth take up position ,” NJB “The kings of the earth prepared for battle ,” NLT “the kings of the earth came near ,” WEYMOUTH and “The kings of the earth took their stand in array [for attack] .” AMPLIFIED

From the human point of view – which is never the right one – it may appear as though “the kings of the earth” were, from one extreme, only pleasing the people. While, from the other extreme, they may be thought to be nothing more than pawns manipulated by the King of kings. However, such views are too simplistic. Man does have a will, and he is responsible for the way he uses it.

“Kings” are rulers over large areas of the earth – some were global in their power, ruling the entire world. This is what the kings of the earth eventually do – stand up against God. They initiate opposition to righteousness in order to promote their own cause. If Joseph be sited as an example of king who did not do this, it must be remembered that he was king in the earth, but not of the earth. He was not spawned by the world’s system, but assumed his office according to Divine appointment.

To be more specific, “the kings of the earth” stand for the governments of the world – the heads over the kingdoms which will all be crushed by the real Lord Jesus Christ, who is “the King of kings” (1 Tim 6:15). Eventually, “their kingdoms will “become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ” (Rev 11:15). Until then, they are in competition with the Lord and the Truth that he has brought to the world (John 1:17). At some point, “kings,” who stand for the governments of the world, stand up against Christ . History can boast of no significant or global government that has altered its manner to agree with the truth of God. Even where amiable governments exist who tend to favor Christianity , there comes a time when they in some way stand up against Christ. Our own country, the United States of America, is a case in point.

THE RULERS GATHERED TOGETHER

“ . . . and the rulers were gathered together . . .” Other versions read, “the rulers gather together ,” NIV “the rulers have gathered together,” NRSV “the rulers came together ,” BBE “the rulers assembled together,” CSB “and the princes assembled together,” DOUAY “Rulers make plans together ,” GWN “the potentates stood up,” MRD “princes plot together ,” NJB and “and the rulers were assembled and combined together .” AMPLIFIED

As this pray will affirm, the “rulers of the people” are not just another way of saying “kings of the earth.” This rather refers to religious leaders, as seen in the leaders of Israel. More specifically, it is corrupt religious leaders than find the apex of their expression in spiritual Babylon, depicted so vividly in the book of Revelation (Rev 17:1-18:24). There she is depicted as a whorish woman sitting upon a beast – a graphic picture of an religion being carried along by the principles that support worldly governments.

The “rulers” of reference lead in the name of God, but they lead people into the ditch, error, and outright opposition to God. This will be clarified when we come to the application the disciples make of “the kings of the earth and the rulers.”

AGAINST THE LORD, AND AGAINST HIS CHRIST

“ . . . against the Lord, and against his Christ.” Other versions read, “against the Lord and against His Anointed One,” NIV “against the Lord and against His Messiah,” NRSV “against the Lord and against His anointed,” ESV “against the Lord, and too, against His Christ,” WILLIAMS and “against the Lord and against His Anointed (Christ, the Messiah).” AMPLIFIED

“The Lord” is God the Father – “the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 1:3). “His Christ” is the Man God has anointed to deal with the human situation. It is the Lord Jesus Himself, who was sent to remove sin, the inhibiting factor, thereby providing a basis upon which men could be rescued and brought into Divine favor. The “Christ” was also the Divine means of putting a crystal-clear representation of God Himself among the people. It is said of Jesus, “in Him dwelleth the fulness of the Godhead bodily” (Col 2:9). And again it is said of Him, “Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person” (Heb 1:3). Jesus Himself said, “he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father” (John 14:9).

When it is said the kings and rulers “gathered together against the Lord and His Christ,” it does not mean they stood up against two perceived personalities. Precisely how do “kings and rulers” gather together against an invisible God? This rather means that when the people opposed “His Christ,” they opposed the God who sent Him as well, for “God was in Christ” (2 Cor 5:19). Jesus also made this fact clear when He said, “He that hateth Me hateth My Father also” (John 15:23). And again, “he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me” (Luke 10:16). This is further accented by the fact that whoever receives Jesus receives the Father also. As it is written, “he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me” (Matt 10:40). Therefore, whether we are speaking of receiving Christ or rejecting Him, the action is considered to apply to both the Father and the Son – “the Lord and His Christ.” Thus it is clear that two peoples cannot worship the same God while one of them rejects Christ.

It must be clear in our minds that God takes the rejection or neglect of His Son personal. It is impossible for God to extend His mercy to those who are rejecting, and even opposing, His Son. That is why it is utterly impossible for those who stand up against Jesus to succeed, seeing they oppose both God and Christ – an opposition that cannot possibly succeed.

Now, we will see how the disciples employ this understanding in prayer – how they take the truth and work with a situation through prayer.

GATHERED TOGETHER AGAINST THE HOLY CHILD JESUS

“ 27 For of a truth against thy holy child Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together . . . ”

Here we are exposed to the exactness, or precision, of “wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9).

FOR

“For . . .” The word “for” is “a particle of affirmation and conclusion” THAYER That is, it is a way of drawing a conclusion, or applying the truth that was just stated. In other words, in the hearts of the disciples, what follows is an example of the Second Psalm. Two parallels in particular are to be seen.

- Opposition to God and His Christ.
- The utter vanity of such opposition.

AGAINST GOD’S HOLY CHILD

“ . . . of a truth against thy holy child Jesus . . . ” Other versions read, “holy Child, Jesus”

DOUAY/PNT/RWB/TNT/WEB/YLT/BISHOPS/LITV/MJKV “Your holy Servant Jesus,” NKJ “Thine holy Son Jesus,” GENEVA/MRD “Your Son . . . Your holy Servant,” LIVING and “Your holy Child and Servant.” AMPLIFIED

Again, as in Acts 3:13 and 26, several versions use the word “servant” instead of “child” (“Son” in Acts 3:13 and 26). I offer the following as a brief exposition of this matter because, when referring to Jesus, any alternative to the word “Son” must be buttressed with sound reasoning and linguistic expertise.

“Son” Versus “Servant”

Nearly all later translations say “Servant” instead of “Son” NKJV/NASB/NIV/ NRSV/RSV/ASV/BBE/CSB/DARBY/ERV/ESV/GWN/NAB/NAS/NAU/NET/NIB/NJB/NLT/LIVING/IE/ WEYMOUTH/ISV / WILLIAMS , and MONTGOMERY . Two of the literal translations (Young’s Literal and Literal Translation of the Bible) translate the word “child.” The Amplified Bible translates it “Servant and Son.”

This confirms that those who oppose Jesus oppose God also. Those who reject His words, reject God also. Those who argue with what Jesus says speak against God. Those who are indifferent to Jesus are indifferent toward God. It makes no difference what such people affirm.

The Greek word translated “Son” and “servant” is common in all Greek manuscripts. It is pai/da , (pie-dah), and is in the masculine gender. Its lexical meaning is “a child,” with the second usage “servant, slave,” THAYER “in reference to age, child; in reference to descent son, in reference to social position servant, slave,” FRIBERG “servant, slave, child,” UBS “a young person,” LOUW-NIDA “in relation to Descent, a son, in Relation to age, a child, in relation to Condition, a slave, servant,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “child (in relation to parents,” LEH and “boy, son, but even more probable is servant, slave.” GINGRICH

It is clear from the lexical definitions that the meaning of the word is not cut and dried. It is used in a number of differing ways to denote age, descent, and social status. If this word was used to describe anyone other than Jesus, I would carry the matter no further. However, since this is descriptive of Jesus, it seems to me that we must extend ourselves to be sure we hold a God-honoring view of the term.

The complicating factor is the words modified by this expression: “His Son (Servant) JESUS.”

First, this precise Greek word is used five times in Scripture. Luke 9:42 (“child,” KJV “boy” NASB), Acts 3:13 (“Son,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child” YLT), Acts 3:26 (“ on,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child.” YLT), Acts 4:27 (“Child,” KJV “Servant,” ASV “Child.” DOUAY), and Acts 20:12 (“young man” named Eutychus, “lad,” ASV “youth,” DOUAY “boy.” NASB

There can be no question about Jesus being God’s Servant. That is how Isaiah spoke of the coming Messiah (Isa 42:1; 49:5-7; 50:10; 52:13; 53:11). Zechariah also prophesied of the Messiah as God’s “Servant the Branch” (Zech 3:8). Matthew specifically confirms Jesus is the “Servant” of Isaiah’s prophecy (Matt 12:16). None of these prophecies had to do with the exaltation or glorification of Jesus. They rather had to do with Him carrying out God’s commission in the earth – accomplishing salvation.

I affirm that, from a technical point of view, Jesus was exalted in the capacity of the Son of God and “Jesus.” In this capacity He is the Foundation upon which the church is Built (Matt 16:16-18; 1 Cor 3:11). Our faith involves a persuasion that Jesus is “the Son of God” (John 20:21; Acts 8:37; 1 John 5:5). The text loses nothing by retaining the expression “He Hath glorified His Son Jesus.” KJV, DOUAY, GENEVA, MRD, PNT, RWB, TNT, WEB, BISHOP’S BIBLE, MKJV

Notice how the disciples relate the opposition to Christ with the kings of the earth and the rulers of the people gathering together against “the Lord and His Christ.” This confirms that those who oppose Jesus oppose God also. Those who reject His words, reject God also. Those who argue with what Jesus says speak against God. Those who are indifferent to Jesus are indifferent toward God. It makes no difference what such people affirm. As “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15), the church is to make this clear to the people. Our attitude toward Jesus reflects our attitude toward God – the God before whom we will surely stand.

“Holy”

Several things are to be noted in this singular expression. It is only mentioned here, and later in verse 30. Coming from the Greek word agion (hag-ion), this word has several primary meanings.

- WAY HE IS VIEWED. Viewed with veneration because of association with God. THAYER
- MANNER OF EMPLOYMENT. Set apart for God, being exclusively His. THAYER
- HIS ORIGIN. Prepared for God – that is, having its origin exclusively for Divine employment. THAYER

Now, how successful will “the kings of the earth” and “the rulers of the people” be in gathering themselves together against this “holy child?” The answer to this question will determine whether or not men are ever justified in fearing man rather than God.

HIS CHARACTER. In a moral sense, pure, sinless, and upright. THAYER

- HIS TOTAL ACCEPTANCE BY GOD. A quality of one who can be brought into the presence of God with perfect acceptance. FRIBERG
- ABSOLUTE SUPERIORITY. Superior in all respects and possessing certain Divine qualities that set him apart from all other created beings. LOUW-NIDA

“Child”

This has particular regard to Christ’s origin. He was begotten by God through the Holy Spirit, and is therefore properly and fully referred to as God’s “Son.” Thus, when providing an explanation for her conception of a child, the angel Gabriel said, “The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God” (Luke 1:35).

This means there was nothing from the fallen race within Jesus, even though he took upon Himself the human “form” (Phil 2:7). He came in “the likeness of sinful flesh,” but Himself was not housed by “sinful flesh” (Rom 8:3). He had a body – a specially prepared body (Heb 10:5), but it was not a “vile body” (Phil 3:21), or a “body of this death” (Rom 7:24). In other words, there was nothing from Adam in Jesus! That is why He is called “the last Adam” (1 Cor 15:45), and “the second man” (1 Cor 15:47).

In reckoning genealogies, the seed is always reckoned through the man. Thus we read, “And Adam . . . begat a son in his own likeness” (Gen 5:3), and “This is the book of the generations of Adam . . .” (Gen 5:1-32). Matthew traces the genealogy of Jesus from Abraham to Jesus, always mentioning the men as begetting (Matt 1:1-16). Luke traces the genealogy from Jesus back to Adam, also mentioning the men as begetting (Lk 3:23-38). From the human point of view, the birth of Jesus was through Mary, not her husband Joseph. He is properly referred to as the “seed” of the woman (Gen 3:15), thus setting apart from all other men. Thus Isaiah prophesied, “a virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and shall call His name Immanuel” (Isa 7:14; Matt 1:23).

Jesus, therefore, came from heaven, not from “the loins of a man,” as did others (Ex 1:5; Heb 7:5,10). This is why Jesus referred to Himself as “He that came down from heaven” (John 3:13). He also said, “I came down from heaven” (John 6:38), and “I am the living bread which came down from heaven” (John 6:51). Jesus is, then, the only person ever born of a woman that pre-existed. If that is not the case, this language would have no meaning, nor would He have been unique.

Now, how successful will “the kings of the earth” and “the rulers of the people” be in gathering themselves together against this “holy child?” The answer to this question will determine whether or not men are ever justified in fearing man rather than God.

AGAINST THE ONE WHOM GOD ANOINTED

“ . . . whom thou hast anointed . . .” Other versions read, “who was marked out by You as Christ,” BBE “Your anointed Son,” LIVING “the One You made Messiah,” IE “whom You had consecrated,” WILLIAMS “Whom You consecrated by anointing,” AMPLIFIED and “Your chosen Messiah.” CEV

Not only was Jesus uniquely born, He came into the world for a unique purpose. Through the prophets, God made known that a diligent search had been made by the Omniscient One to see if there was anyone in all the human race who was capable of addressing the human dilemma. “And I looked, and there was none to help ; and I wondered that there was none to uphold : therefore Mine own arm brought salvation unto Me; and My fury, it upheld Me” (Isa 63:5). Again it is said of Christ’s vicarious sacrifice, “I have trodden the winepress alone ; and of the people there was none with Me ” (Isa 63:3). The expression “of the people” refers to the chosen people, who were the most unique people in all the world. They had been chosen and cultured by God Himself, given every possible advantage to correct their behavior. Yet, among even this people, no one could be found who could take away sin, destroy the devil, and provide a just basis for salvation.

Jesus – the incarnate Word (John 1:14) – anointed to do this work. That is, He was sanctified, or set apart to accomplish what had to be done for men to be delivered from the clutches of the devil, as well as sin and death. There was no other compelling reason for Him to come into the earth. It is true that God the Father was seen in Him (John 14:9), and that He was the appointed expositor of Him (John 1:18). It is also true that “Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps” (1 Pet 2:21). But none of these were His primary or fundamental reason for coming into the world. Rather, they all were related to Him laying down His life, and taking it up again (John 10:17-18). Were it not for those requirements, the other things would have no real purpose.

How serious do you suppose it is to be aligned against such a Man – “the Lord’s Christ” (Lk 2:26). Understanding who sent Him into the world, and the “eternal purpose” that provided the reason for sending Him, how successful will anyone be in standing up against Him?

Knowing these things, the disciples will now spell out in their prayer precisely what was involved in the kings and rulers of the people gathering together against the Lord and His Christ.

HEROD, PILATE, THE GENTILES, AND THE PEOPLE OF ISRAEL

“ . . . both Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, were gathered together . . .” Other versions read, “both Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the nations, and peoples of Israel , have been gathered together in this city,” DARBY “ In this city Herod and Pontius Pilate made plans together with non-Jewish people and the people of Israel,” GWN “Herod and Pilate, with the Gentiles and the congregation of Israel, have been combined together in this city ,” MRD “in this very city Herod and Pontius Pilate plotted together with the gentile nations and the peoples of Israel ,” NJB “In fact, this has happened here in this very city ! For Herod Antipas, Pontius Pilate the governor, the Gentiles, and the people of Israel were all united,” NLT “That this is what is happening here in this city today ! For Herod the king, and Pontius Pilate the governor, and all the Romans – as well as the people of Israel,” LIVING “These words came true when Herod, Pontius Pilate, the nations of the world, and the Jewish people all came together,” IE “Herod and Pontius Pilate with the Gentiles and also the tribes of Israel,” WEYMOUTH “Herod and Pontius Pilate actually met together with the Gentiles and the people of Israel,” ISV “Herod and Pontius Pilate, with the heathen and the peoples of Israel ,” WILLIAMS and “Herod and Pontius Pilate got together with the Gentiles and the people of Israel.” CEV

Now the disciples give the names of the opponents they have experienced, and of their disdain of the Christ. Herod Antipas was the fickle king, and Pilate the crafty governor. There was a time when these two men did not get along. However, when it came to being against Jesus, they came into agreement and were reconciled. It is written, “And Herod with his men of war set Him at nought, and mocked Him, and arrayed Him in a gorgeous robe, and sent Him again to Pilate. And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves ” (Luke 23:11-12).

Notice how the people relate the crucifixion of Jesus to the opposition just experienced by Peter and John . They do not consider the opposition to be against Peter and John, but against the Lord and His Christ. This is a liberating view, freeing us from the fear of man, which does bring a snare (Prov 29:15). These brethren know that if the opposition is against God and His Christ, the response to that opposition will be orchestrated from heaven, accomplishing the will of God, not of man.

It ought to be noted that only those who are laboring together with God in His revealed purpose can pray in this manner. Those who have adopted the agendas of men, and are engaged in sectarian enterprises cannot call God to their aid – at least not with any confidence.

Those who choose to abandon the revealed work of God have, by that very action, forfeited the right to ask for His empowerment and assistance. Although a vital view, it does not appear to me that this is commonly known among professed believers.

TO DO WHAT DIVINE COUNSEL HAD DETERMINED

“ 28 For to do whatsoever thy hand and thy counsel determined before to be done.”

FOR TO DO

“For to do whatsoever . . .” Other versions read, “to do whatever,” NKJV “they did what ,” NIV “they did everything ,” GWN “to do as much ,” NET “to bring about everything ,” NJB “to do all that ,” ISV “to carry out all .” AMPLIFIED

The purpose of this gathering was to do something. They did not come together to talk, but to fully implement their own desires. These men were meeting to carry out their desires concerning the presence of the “Jesus of Nazareth.” They had analyzed the situation before them and determined what they felt had to be done. In fact, viewing the whole matter according to the flesh, it looked as though they did carry out their designs, finally ridding themselves of this troublesome Teacher and miracle worker. However, the disciples do not view this matter as something the kings and rulers intended to do. They will confess to God that what they did really had very little to do with their intentions.

THY HAND

“ . . . Thy hand . . .” Other versions read, “to do whatever Your hand,” NKJV “to bring about the very thing that you in your strength.” NJB

The “hand” of the Lord speaks of what He does – of His works, and the execution of his will. The Psalmist said of God’s hand, “The right hand of the LORD is exalted : the right hand of the LORD doeth valiantly ” (Psa 118:16). The fact that God’s right hand is “exalted” means that He is in a position to do whatever He pleases. The fact that His right hand does “valiantly” means that what He sets His hand to do is effective. As it is written, “He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay His hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?” (Dan 4:35).

Viewed from heaven’s perspective, the enemies of Christ were assembled to execute the will of God the Father. None of this was apparent to them, and at the time it was not even apparent to the followers of Christ. But that is not the case now. At this time they have been enlightened, and are praying with an acute understanding of what really took, place when Jesus was crucified.

THY COUNSEL

“ . . . and Thy counsel . . . ” Other versions read, “ Your purpose ,” NKJV “and will ,” NIV “and your plan ,” NRSV “and thy pleasure ,” MRD “and Your wisdom .” NJB

The “counsel” of the Lord has to do with His purpose, intention, or aim. Men might associate God’s “counsel” with His plan, or what He wills to do. A “council” plotted the death of Christ (Matt 26:59; Mk 14:55). A “council” “bound Jesus, and carried Him away, and delivered Him to Pilate” (Mk 15:1). A “council” had also forced Peter and John to stand before them, and issued a threat to them (Acts 4:15). But this is not the kind of counsel that is in the minds of the disciples as they pray.

They now see the whole matter of Christ’s death as associated with the will and purpose of the God of heaven – which it was. If God had not purposed that Jesus die, it would not have been possible for Him to die.

DETERMINED BEFORE TO BE DONE

“ . . . determined before to be done.” Other versions read, “ predestined to occur ,” NASB “predestined to take place ,” NRSV “ foreordained to come to pass ,” ASV “had been fixed before ,” BBE “ decreed to be done ,” DOUAY “You had already decided should be done,” GWN “ previously marked out to be done,” MRD “had long ago planned to take place,” NAB “had decided beforehand would happen ,” NET “had predetermined should happen ,” NJB “made Your plan come true;” IE and “had predestined (predetermined) should occur .” AMPLIFIED

Viewed from heaven’s perspective, the enemies of Christ were assembled to execute the will of God the Father. None of this was apparent to them, and at the time it was not even apparent to the followers of Christ. But that is not the case now. At this time they have been enlightened, and are praying with an acute understanding of what really took, place when Jesus was crucified.

This is something that all of the disciples saw, for they were praying “with one accord” (4:24). At this point we confront a fact that jars against the flesh – a point with which many have a controversy. On the one hand, we have read about “the kings of the earth and the rulers of the people.” It might appear on the surface as though they are running the affairs of the earth. However, there is a Divine will that is superimposed upon the human will, and it causes things to happen.

The second Psalm is a bold affirmation of the futility of opposition to God. In the case of Jesus, the opposition itself is an expression of God’s determination. This is exactly what Peter declared on the day of Pentecost, not many days before the time of our text. “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain” (Acts 2:23).

For some, this is too hard to accept. To those so described it is viewed much like the saying of Jesus concerning eating His flesh and drinking His blood. The doubters replied, “This a hard saying, who can hear it,” or “This teaching is difficult; who can accept it?” NRSV (John 6:60). However, men do well to mortify such distracting thoughts, for they suggest the absence of God from the affairs of men, as though the world was running independently of its Creator.

Does God Really Determine Things?

Some suggest that God really does not determine things, for, say they, this interferes with the free will of man. But what will they do with the worst thing men have ever done – gather together against the Lord and His Christ and kill

“The Prince of life” (Acts 3:15). Here the disciples declare this was done in strict accordance with God’s counsel, and was something He had determined before to be done.

What kind of reasoning leads people to imagine that God determined the worst things to be done, but left everything else to men? Is it possible to live in God’s world, employing the life that He has given, and yet to do be completely apart from any involvement from Him? And how would a person go about substantiating such a notion?

God once sent a prophet to king Amaziah who “said, I know that God hath determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel” (2 Chron 25:16). The record confirms that Amaziah was not able to avert that Divine determination (25:27). Job confessed that man’s days “are determined,” adding that God has “decreed the number of his months and have set limits he cannot exceed” NIV (Job 14:5). Isaiah spoke of a “consumption,” or “complete destruction” NASB of the land that had been “determined” by God (Isa 10:23). Isaiah also prophesied of a time when Judah would be a terror to Egypt according to “the counsel of the Lord, which He hath determined against it” (Isa 19:17). Daniel spoke of “seventy weeks” that were “determined upon the people and the holy city” (Dan 9:24), also affirming “for what has been determined shall be done” NKJV (Dan 11:36). Paul announced to the Athenians, “From one man he made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and he determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live” (Acts 17:26).

In this prayer it comes across that the disciples were convinced of the absolute Sovereignty of God. They did not have all of the answers concerning their situation, but they knew who did. They prayed to the God who controls men as well as created them. With them, being aligned with the purpose of God had placed them in a position to pray with such keen insight and holy boldness.

We do well to learn from this account. If we pray as though this world is governed by men, we pray in error. It is still true, “The earth is the LORD’S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein” (Psa 24:1). That includes our opponents as well as our friends. It encompasses the saved and the lost, the tender and the hard.

BEHOLD THEIR THREATENINGS

Why would the saints pray in such a manner, asking the Lord to pay attention to, behold, or look upon the threats that had been made against them? The sophist might perceive this to be rather foolish, seeing that “all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13). Others might reason, “Is it not true he looks from heaven, beholding the sons of men? (Psa 33:13). Why would we ask the Lord to behold something that is already being assessed by Him? Is it not true that ‘by Him actions are weighed’ (1 Sam 2:3)? Is there anything that is hidden from Him, or that He does not see? If God is omniscient, why should any informed person pray in such a manner?” Such is the prattling of fools who have no understanding. They do not know of Divine manners, and that is why their thinking is so flawed.

Do you wonder how unconventional it is for believers to bring their enemies to the attention of the Lord? Those who live by faith do not avenge themselves. They know the Lord has said, “Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people” (Heb 10:30). Of course, as the statement indicates, there are two sides to that vengeance. The first is His vengeance upon those who persecute His people. The second is the judgment of His people for their omissions, commissions, or folly.

This prayer seeks for God’s intervention on both sides. First, toward His enemies, that their ways may not prosper. Second, to give them grace to avoid His judgment for failure to do his revealed will.

Holy men have taken their enemies before the Lord in prayer. These prayers have come under the harsh criticism of those who are not acquainted with His ways. Nevertheless, they are a facet of spiritual life that are to be addressed in wisdom.

- “Arise, O LORD; save me, O my God: for thou hast smitten all mine enemies upon the cheek bone; thou hast broken the teeth of the ungodly” (Psa 3:7).
- “Let all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed: let them return and be ashamed suddenly” (Psa 6:10).
- “Arise, O LORD, in thine anger, lift up thyself because of the rage of mine enemies: and awake for me to the judgment that thou hast commanded” (Psa 7:6).
- “O my God, I trust in thee: let me not be ashamed, let not mine enemies triumph over me” (Psa 25:2).
- “But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed” (Gal 1:8).
- “Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil: the Lord reward him according to his works” (2 Tim 4:14).

We are to understand these prayers as relating to persecutions for the cause of Christ, which threaten to obstruct His servants. I understand that this prayer is of that order. The call for God to “behold their threatenings” is a plea to do something about them.

The Nature of God in Such Matters

It is God’s nature to bring men into His purpose. He did so in the matter of Christ’s crucifixion, as already affirmed in this text, and He also does so in the matter of assisting His people. Through Ezekiel, God once made some elaborate and extensive promises – all related to a specific work among them. Permit me to itemize some of the things He said He would do. They are recorded in the thirty-sixth chapter of Ezekiel.

- He would be sanctified in them (23b).
- He would take them from among the heathen, gather them out of all countries, and bring them into their own land (24).

- He would sprinkle clean water on them, making them clean from their filthiness, and cleansing them from all their idols (25).

- He would give them a new heart and a new spirit (26a).

This is the way the Lord works, and we are seeing it in this very text. The people are praying to God with one accord, asking Him to take special note of the threats that have been made against them. They do so because they know the Lord is affected by what He sees. They know He hates unrighteousness, loves His people, and will come to their defense.

He would remove their stony heart and give them a heart of flesh (26b).

- He would put His Spirit with them, and cause them to walk in His statutes and keep His judgments (27).

- They would dwell in the land He gave to their fathers (28a).

- They would be His people (28b).

- He would be their God (28c).

- He would save them from all of their uncleannesses (29a).

- He would “call for the corn,” increase it, and lay no famine upon them (29b).

- He would multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field (29c).

- They would no more receive the reproach of famine among the heathen (30).

- They would remember their evil ways and doings that were not good, and would loathe themselves in their own sight because of their iniquities and abominations (31).

- He would not do this for their sakes (32).

- In the day he cleanses them from all their iniquities, He will also cause them to dwell in cities, and the wastes will be built (33).

- The desolate land will be tilled, which lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by (34).

- Now, the passers by will say the land is like Eden, and places once lying waste would become fenced and inhabited (35).

- Then the heathen that are left around them will know that God builds ruined places, and plants that which was desolate (36a).

- Solemnly the Lord says, “I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it” (36b).

This is the God of heaven with whom there is nor restraint, whose purposes are executed flawlessly precisely as planned, when they were appointed, and to the extent they were determined. It is a God with whom many professed Christians are not acquainted.

An Extension of the Promise

But there is more to these promises than their utterance – although that is quite sufficient to cause them to come to pass. As He said elsewhere, “I have spoken it, I also will bring it to pass” (Isa 46:11). Of another purpose He said through Jeremiah, “because I have spoken it, I have purposed it, and will not repent, neither will I turn back from it” (Jer 4:28). There is no question, therefore, about the decrees and promises of God coming to pass! It is HOW they come to pass that is of particular interest here. This is matter of “the ways of God.”

In the text I have outlined above, God revealed something more. “Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them ; I will increase them with men like a flock” (Ezek 36:37). Here we are exposed to the Divine manner. He moves His people to ask for what He has promised. This is what is intended by a Psalmic expression: “LORD, Thou hast heard the desire of the humble: thou wilt prepare their heart , thou wilt cause thine ear to hear” (Psa 10:17).

Solomon said, “The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the LORD” (Prov 16:1). When David prayed for the people, He asked God to “prepare their heart unto Thee” (1 Chron 29:16). Hezekiah rejoiced when “God had prepared the people” (2 Chron 29:36). Once, in the land of Judah, “the hand of the Lord was to give them one heart” (2 Chron 30:12).

The Lord’s Way of Working

This is the way the Lord works, and we are seeing it in this very text. The people are praying to God with one accord, asking Him to take special note of the threats that have been made against them. They do so because they know the Lord is affected by what He sees. They know He hates unrighteousness, loves His people, and will come to their defense. They know how He feels about the record He has given of His Son, and of its faithful proclamation among the people. They are not praying because they are afraid, but because they know the Lord. They are not praying because they are intimidated, but because they have a heart to preach the Word. They are not praying in the spirit of vengefulness, but for His kingdom’s sake.

GRANT BOLDNESS TO YOUR SERVANTS

“ 29b . . . and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word . . . ”

“ . . . AND . . . ”

“ . . . and . . . ” The disciples do not conclude their prayer with the consideration of their persecutors. They turn to the consideration of the work they have been sent to do. Their personal inconvenience is not the issue with them, or person-to-person opposition. They sense they have been “joined to the Lord,” and their lives are not their own. This is an expression of people who are living “unto Him which died for them and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15).

GRANT! GRANT! GRANT!

“ . . . grant unto thy servants, . . . ” Other versions read, “grant that Thy bond-servants,” NASB “enable your servants,” NIV “give your servants,” BBE “grant that Your slaves ,” CSB “give to Thy bondmen ,” DARBY “allow us,” GWN “help Your servants,” NJB “give us , Your servants,” NLT and “We are Your servants. So make us .” CEV

The words “grant unto” come from a single Greek word which means, “of one’s own accord to give something . . . to bestow, give as a gift . . . give to one asking, let hand . . . to supply, furnish, necessary things,” THAYER and “to give authority to carry out a task . . . as a favor or privilege to give . . . as giving something valuable to gain a return investment,” FRIBERG

There are several conditions or circumstances that attend a “grant” from God.

- That the resource cannot be obtained anywhere else.
- That there is a willingness on the part of the One granting the favor.
- That the work in which the petitioner is engaged is a God-ordained one.
- That there is a willingness on the part of the one receiving the benefit to do the task requiring the resource.

Note that petitioning a grant from the Lord is not the last recourse of the disciples. They did not attempt other strategies, or run from the challenge they were facing. Right here, at the threshold of trouble, much of the heart of those being oppressed is discovered. If they immediately resort to flesh-and-blood resources, they are at once displeasing to the Lord.

Note that petitioning a grant from the Lord is not the last recourse of the disciples. They did not attempt other strategies, or run from the challenge they were facing. Right here, at the threshold of trouble, much of the heart of those being oppressed is discovered. If they immediately resort to flesh-and-blood resources, they are at once displeasing to the Lord. This was precisely the point at which the Lord became displeased with Israel. “Woe to them that go down to Egypt for help; and stay [rely] on horses, and trust in chariots, because they are many; and in horsemen, because they are very strong; but they look not unto the Holy One of Israel, neither seek the LORD!” (Isa 31:1). Again, it is written, “Lo, thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it: so is Pharaoh king of Egypt to all that trust in him” (Isa 36:6). By seeking help from heathen rulers, the Lord told Israel they had debased themselves. “And thou wentest to the king with ointment, and didst increase thy perfumes, and didst send thy messengers far off, and didst debase thyself even unto hell” (Isa 57:9).

Ezekiel was told to tell the people that in sending ambassadors to Egypt for help, they had actually rebelled against God. “But he rebelled against Him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?” (Ezek 17:15). The Psalmist contrasted those who trusted in human help and innovations with those who trust in the Lord. “Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the LORD our God” (Psa 20:7). The Spirit even moved the Psalmist to declare true deliverance does not even come from men. “There is no king saved by the multitude of an host: a mighty man is not delivered by much strength.

An horse is a vain thing for safety: neither shall he deliver any by his great strength” (Psa 33:16-17).

We are categorically told that, when it comes to matters of the Kingdom, the wisdom of this world is worthless. “For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain” (1 Cor 3:19-20).

It is necessary to say these things because of the propensity of the modern church to trust in men and their wisdom. This accounts for the staggering increase of counselors and how-to gurus.

However, you will find none of these inclinations in our text. The disciples immediately resort to the Lord, and the Lord alone. This is what people do who are really walking by faith and in the Spirit. This is the manner of newness of life.

Also ponder the manner in which they describe the servants of the Lord: “Thy servants.” The word “servants” has a rich and strong meaning. It does not refer to a mere social status, or one that is forced upon a servant. This is a status that is preferred, and is as thorough as though the individual was a bond-slave, being made to serve against his will. The word used here does mean one that is bound, or tied, to the service of another. Technically, the word “servant” means “a slave, bondman, man of servile condition . . . one who gives himself up wholly to another's will.” THAYER The distinction here, however, is that this is a willing servant, or slave. This is not a slave such as those during the era when black people were treated as mere chattel, purchased and sold as personal property without any respect or fairness. The kind of “servants” referenced in this text are described in the ceremonial law. It is the kind of servant that is primarily depicted in the Lord Jesus Himself, and secondarily in His followers. Here is the law of the willing servant.

“If thou buy an Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve: and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing. If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself: if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him. If his master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself. And if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife, and my children; I will not go out free : then his master shall bring him unto the judges; he shall also bring him to the door, or unto the door post; and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl; and he shall serve him for ever ” (Ex 21:2-6).

That law is fulfilled in Jesus, who refused to live in self-interest. He volunteered to remain in a place of subjection to the Father in order that he might be with His children. Thus it is written of Him, “And when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him that put all things under Him , that God may be all in all” (1 Cor 15:28). That is the ultimate fulfillment Exodus 21:2-6.

However, the true disciple of Christ possesses the nature of Christ. As it is written, “It is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master, and the servant as his Lord” (Mat 10:25). And again, “The disciple is not above his Master: but every one that is perfect shall be as his Master” (Luke 6:40). Therefore, the servants of Christ have voluntarily chosen that position. They have willingly laid aside their own interests in preference for “that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God” (Rom 12:2). For them, there is no alternative to serving the Lord. Now, the disciples of our text know what the will of the Lord is, and they have heartily acquiesced to it. However, they know full well that His will cannot be done in their own self-strength. Therefore, they are asking for what it takes to DO what that will, and they are doing so with all of their heart, soul, mind, and strength – that is, they WANT to do this. This is the manner of the Kingdom. Where this spirit is missing, there is a fundamental spiritual deficiency. Furthermore, it is quite possible that a state of full-blown alienation exists because of a lack of conversion and consequent divine acceptance. It is rather startling to consider that this situation actually exists in many professed churches.

THAT WITH ALL BOLDNESS THEY MAY SPEAK THY WORD

“ . . . that with all boldness they may speak thy word . . .” Other versions read, “may speak Thy word with all confidence ,” NASB “ to speak your word with great boldness ,” NIV “to be preachers of your word without fear ,” BBE “may speak Your message with complete boldness ,” CSB “to continue to speak your word with all boldness,” ESV “that they may proclaim thy word boldly ,” MRD “to speak your message with great courage ,” NET “with all freedom to speak Thy word,” YLT “great boldness in their preaching ,” LIVING “speak the things You want us to say without fear,” IE “to proclaim Thy Message with fearless courage ,” WEYMOUTH “with perfect courage to continue to speak your message,” WILLIAMS “[full freedom] to declare Your message fearlessly ,” AMPLIFIED and “ brave enough to speak your message.” CEV

Remember, what is being asked will come by means of a “grant” – by God’s willing conferment of the required blessing. That means that the petition is in keeping with His will (1 John 5:14), and that the ones making the request are “meet for the Master’s use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21). You must not allow yourself to think of this text independently of these considerations.

“With All Boldness”

As used in Scripture, the word “boldness” carries a more weighty meaning than is reflected in its common usage. The lexical meaning of the Greek word is, “freedom in speaking, unreservedness in speech . . . openly, frankly, and without concealment . . . without ambiguity or circumlocution [unnecessarily large number of words] . . . without the use of figures and comparisons . . . free and fearless confidence, cheerful courage, boldness, assurance . . . of the confidence impelling one to do something . . . the deportment by which one becomes conspicuous or secures publicity,” THAYER “in attitude of openness that stems from freedom and lack of fear; (1) in speech boldness, plainness, outspokenness . . . in public work openness.” FRIBERG

As is apparent, the disciples are not asking to appear bold, but to actually be forward and fearless in the proclamation of God's Word. This involves the following characteristics, which are integral to spiritual boldness.

- PLAINNESS . That is, without ambiguity or vagueness; being unequivocal in the proclamation of the word.
- CONSPICUOUSNESS . That is, obvious, not hidden, and apparent; attracting the attention of the people.
- FEARLESS . That is, brave, and without fear; not intimidated by the enemy, or challenging circumstances.
- ASSURANCE . That is, being certain in the mind of what is being said; freedom from all self doubt or uncertainty.
- COURAGE . That is, mental, moral, and spiritual strength that enables one to speak in difficult situations.
- CONFIDENCE . That is, a consciousness of Divine support and acceptance; knowing the certainty of what one is proclaiming.
- CLEARNESS . That is, purity, clarity, unmistakable. Because of its contrast with darkness, the spoken Word becomes more readily apparent.
- FRANKNESS . That is, forthright, sincere, candid, willingly and without hesitation declaring what is clear to the one speaking.

I do understand that it is not necessarily sinful to employ the use of figures, parallels, illustrations, and the likes. However, when they become the focus of preaching, that preaching becomes nothing more than a means of entertaining the people.

OPENNESS . That is, not hiding behind commonly accepted traditions, or veiling the truth with words that tone it down and make it more acceptable to the disinterested.

- FREEDOM . The absence of coercion or a sense of mere obligation; free from the cares and worries that proceed from the fear of man, a defiled conscience, and the restraints of ignorance and uncertainty.

“May Speak thy Word”

This has particular reference to the Gospel – “the record” God has given of His Son (1 John 5:10-11). If it is, as the Spirit affirmed, “the power of God unto salvation” (Rom 1:16), then it must be courageously and forthrightly declared, or affirmed. While explanations, or expositions, of the Gospel are important, they are never in order until the Gospel itself has been reported, declared, or announced. Before Jesus and the salvation He has wrought can be clear, the facts in the case must be presented by someone who himself discerns them.

These disciples do not pray for boldness to present the view of some sect, or the historical perspective of a movement, or a peculiar list of the tenets of a belief-system men have created. They rather seek to declare what God has revealed – His Word.

What Is “Thy Word”

Although it may sound rather simplistic, preaching God's Word is affirming, or announcing, what God has actually said. It is not merely saying something religious or theoretically helpful. It is not declaring what one may think God meant by what He said. It is not surrounding God's Word with all manner of humanly-devised parallels and stories, and pawning it off to men as though that is what God said. I do understand that it is not necessarily sinful to employ the use of figures, parallels, illustrations, and the likes. However, when they become the focus of preaching, that preaching becomes nothing more than a means of entertaining the people.

That is precisely why Paul confessed, “And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified” (1 Cor 2:2). He knew that the employment of such things tends to upstage the Gospel, for they have more of an appeal to the soulish part of man, and leave only a small impact upon the heart.

This condition is owing to the fact that the Word of God is the “sword of the Spirit” (Eph 6:17). He simply does not use other means to bring Divine power to bear upon a situation. If you want the Spirit to actually work, convicting the world (John 16:8-11), or comforting and edifying the saints (1 Thess 4:18; 5:11), then you are going to have to preach, or declare, the word of God. You will have to tell the people what God has said – i.e., “thus saith the Lord” (Jer 15:2; Ezek 12:23), “the Scripture saith” (Rom 10:11; 1 Tim 5:18), or “hear what the Spirit saith” (Rev 3:22).

Once a person knows what is to be declared, and is firmly resolved to do so, this prayer will make perfect sense – particularly when significant opposition is faced. However, until that happens, it will appear to be only a historical record. Perhaps it will be viewed as novel, and maybe even interesting. However, in such a case, it will be void of power.

STRETCH FORTH YOUR HAND TO HEAL

“ 30 By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus.”

Notice that they did not pray that their lives might be preserved, or that their enemies might go away, or that they might be directed into another area. They did not pray for protection, but for God to stretch forth His hand. They did not pray for eloquence, but for boldness that would flow from a perception of the working of the Lord.

If a person is living with an acute awareness of the current Christian environment, this request will have a strange sound. It might be viewed as peculiar to the times, and thus is completely irrelevant for our times. It might also be considered to be idealistic, and thus impractical. However, such conclusions will become repugnant to us when we consider the purity and commitment of these brethren. This is the expression of real spiritual life. Institutionally structured thinking was not yet in place. There was no bad leaven among the brethren – no hypocritical people. To be sure, such would soon surface, but none were known at this time. The disciples had not been distracted to lesser things, but were totally absorbed with the will and word of the Lord. When they thought of the work of the Lord, they were not thinking of relief work, community service, impacting the youth, familiarizing the community with their church, and the likes. None of those corruptions were present at the time.

This is the pouring out of a petition from pure hearts that are acquainted with the ways of the Lord, and are wholly devoted to doing His will. As simplistic as that may appear, it significantly alters the way the passage is perceived.

STRETCH FORTH THY HAND TO HEAL

“By stretching forth thine hand to heal . . .” Other versions read, “by stretching out Your hand to heal,” NKJV “while Thou dost extend Thy hand to heal,” NASB “Stretch out your hand to heal,” NIV “while your hand is stretched out to do works of mercy,” BBE “while You stretch out Your hand for healing,” CSB “By stretching forth thy hand to cures,” DOUAY “So that thou stretch forth thine hand, that healing,” GENEVA “Show your power by healing,” GWN “Stretch out your hand with healing power,” NLT “and send your healing power,” LIVING “Show your power: make sick people well ,” IE “whilst Thou stretchest out Thine arm to cure men ,” WEYMOUTH and “Show your mighty power, as we heal people .” CEV

People with a theological background like my own, approach this text with a turtle-shell mentality. That is, they withdraw into their shell – a theological shell – for this text does not fit into their theology.

First of all, this was not a mechanical prayer – something uttered without the involvement of spiritual minds. This prayer was birthed by faith and understanding. These disciples knew that when Jesus was among men, He went about “healing all who were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). When He sent out the twelve, He told them “Heal the sick” (Matt 10:8). When He sent out the seventy He said, “heal the sick” (Lk 10:9). When He delivered what is called “the great commission” to His disciples, He said those who believed would “lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover” (Mk 16:18). At no time did Jesus suggest this healing was only a temporary. Now, those are just the facts in the case – facts that were apparent to those who were praying.

Notice that they did not pray that their lives might be preserved, or that their enemies might go away, or that they might be directed into another area. They did not pray for protection, but for God to stretch forth His hand. They did not pray for eloquence, but for boldness that would flow from a perception of the working of the Lord.

Furthermore, this entire episode of opposition had been initiated by a “miracle of healing” (Acts 4:22). The “natural man” (1 Cor 2:14), or “the carnal mind” (Rom 8:7), would reason that healing would not be the wise thing to pursue. Such a mind would see this as fundamentally disruptive, and would associate wisdom with choosing another approach to preaching the Word. Of course, these were not carnal people, so they did not think in such a manner.

The fulfillment of this prayer is described in these words: “And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following . Amen” (Mark 16:20). The book of Hebrews also alludes to this. “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will ? ” (Heb 2:4). It is important to note that the words “at the first” specifically refer to the words that “began to be spoken by the Lord.” Another version reads “After it was first spoken through the Lord, it was confirmed to us by those who heard.” NASB What we are reading of is the confirming – that is, the disciples were preaching the same doctrine Jesus preached, and the signs proved it.

The disciples do not pray that God would merely give them power to heal, but that He would stretch forth His hand to do so. That is, they knew healing was only possible through Divine discretion.

By saying “stretching forth thy hand,” the disciples were pleading for God to exert His mighty power by focusing it on their situation. In other words, no legitimate mighty work can occur independently of Divine involvement, and they knew it. God did not wind up the Kingdom like a clock, and let it tick away of its own accord. There really is no such thing as a ministry or heavenly-approved activity that does not require the hand of the Lord! The activities of the modern church would be radically revolutionized if this was seen.

Should We Pray In This Manner?

Let me first be clear about this. There is nothing in the Scriptures themselves that suggest this prayer became obsolete after the death of the apostles. There is no point of apostolic doctrine that clearly affirms such a thing. It is to be acknowledged that some have taken certain texts and presented their reasoning on those texts to justify such a claim. Allow me to give two examples.

• TEXT #1. “But when that which is perfect is come, then that which is in part shall be done away” (1 Cor 13:10). Here, some reason that “that which is perfect” is the completed canon of Scripture – the compiling of the full sixty-six books. It is further conjectured that “that which is in part” included the working of miracles, which were required to buttress, what is conceived to be, partial revelations. Once the Word of This is a matter that requires the merging of faith, insight, and a fervent commitment to the proclamation of the Word. If those things are not present, there is no need to even was in written form, they hypothesize, there was no further need for miracles, because they confirmed the spoken word. Therefore, the miracles ceased to occur, for they were no longer needed. This composite blob of human reasoning is then presented as apostolic doctrine. Any work that is contrary to it is considered to be spurious. Now, keep in mind that the text did not really say these things, but that is the meaning assigned to it by certain men. What the text DID say is that when what was perfect came, what was in part would be done away. That can more properly be perceived as meaning at least two things. First, it obviously explains the next verse, which speaks of spiritual maturity, which is a form of perfection. “When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things” (1 Cor 13:11). Second, it also explains what will happen in, what Jesus called, “the regeneration” when everything that is partial, introductory, or in a first-fruit form, will be done away. With this in mind Paul continued, “For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known” (1 Cor 13:12).

• TEXT #2. “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him” (Heb 2:3). Here the text is read as though it said, “at the first only, the Word was confirmed.” However, that is not what it says – in any version or manuscript. Further, the words “them that heard Him” are conceived to be only the apostles. However, there were others who heard Him, including the seventy, the holy women, the two on the road to Emaeus, Joseph called Barnabas, James the Lord’s brother, a cluster of above five hundred brethren, and a host of others. The text does not forbid men to think that God still stretches out His hand to heal.

So, is it right to pray this prayer? Why would a person ask such a question? Remember that God placed “gifts of healing” within the church (1 Cor 12:9,30), and there is no word that clearly states He has taken them out. Also, James, who was not an apostle, gave a procedure to be followed dealing with the sick (James 5:14-16). His words were addressed to the twelve scattered tribes – believing Jews who were in a state of retrogression. Nothing in his book suggests his word was only for the first century, or that there would come a time when God would no longer honor the approach he makes known.

This is a matter that requires the merging of faith, insight, and a fervent commitment to the proclamation of the Word. If those things are not present, there is no need to even discuss the matter.

THAT SIGNS AND WONDERS MAY BE DONE

“ . . . and that signs and wonders may be done . . . ” Other versions read, “and signs and wonders take place ,” NASB “and perform miraculous signs and wonders,” NIV “performing miracles, and doing amazing things ,” GWN “and prodigies ” [something extraordinary and beyond explanation], MRD “ to bring about miraculous signs and wonders,” NET “and to work miracles and marvels ,” NJB “and may miracles and wonders be done ,” LIVING “ give proofs , and cause miracles to take place,” IE “and to give signs and marvels,” WEYMOUTH “ grant too , that signs and wonders may be done,” MONTGOMERY “and work miracles and wonders,” CEV and “and grant that wonders and miracles may be performed . GNB

Perhaps you have heard some prideful person say to some who were noted for seemingly doing miracles: “If you can really work a miracle with me, come to the hospital, and raise a few sick people.” Or, “Why don’t you go to some of those oppressed countries and cure all of their sick?”

Following the initial events of the day of Pentecost, “many wonders and signs were done by the apostles” (Acts 2:43). There was also the healing of the lame man at the gate beautiful (Acts 3:6). Yet, here they appear to pray as though such things had never taken place – at least that is how a novice would view it. Perhaps some would even dare to say there was unbelief among the disciples, else they would not have prayed in this manner. Others might suppose they were fearful, and that is why they so addressed the Lord. However, such notions are nothing more than worldly nonsense, and betray a mind that is out of synch with heaven.

It is true that the apostles were truly gifted men. Yet, it is clear from this text that they could not go about healing people at will. It is true that the Kingdom will be given to the saints of the most high God (Dan 7:18,22,27). Now, the saints are in the Kingdom (Col 1:13), and have been given the first fruits of that Kingdom. However, they do not possess the whole of it yet, nor are they yet significant participants in its government. Jesus is presently administrating the Kingdom. From time to time, we may participate in that rule in some extraordinary way, but it is presently only a sampling of what is to come. As long as we remain in the body, it is ever true that “it doth not yet appear what we shall be” (1 John 3:1-2). Of course, if we have unbridled control of the Kingdom, that saying would be true, and we all would be very evident, even to the world.

Even extraordinarily gifted men cannot employ their gifts at will. Paul, for example, who had wrought several healings (Acts 13:11; 14:10; 16:18; 19:11-12; 28:8-9), lay in a cell with sick Epaphroditus, and could not heal him (Phil 2:27). He did not heal chronically ailing Timothy, but admonished him to treat the matter medicinally (1 Tim 5:23). He could not simply summon up the gift, and heal people at will – nor could any other man.

Perhaps you have heard some prideful person say to some who were noted for seemingly doing miracles: “If you can really work a miracle with me, come to the hospital, and raise a few sick people.” Or, “Why don’t you go to some of those oppressed countries and cure all of their sick?” For some, this is an infallible argument. However it really displays a remarkable level of ignorance. First, miraculous power was never used in such a way (Luke 4:27). Second, a sign will not be given to an unbelieving generation (Matt 12:39). Third, any spiritual aptitude is strictly administered by the Lord (1 Cor 12:5), are operated by God (1 Cor 12:6), and come through the manifestation of the Spirit (1 Cor 12:7).

With the knowledge of such things, the disciples implore the Lord to work in a special way, in order that they might preach His word with boldness. Nothing in Scripture suggests that it is no longer proper to approach God in this manner. However, if anyone does come to the Lord with a petition like this, they had better have something insightful to say, and refuse to be silenced in the saying of it. If that is not the circumstance, they should pray for other matters.

IN THE NAME OF THY HOLY CHILD JESUS

“ . . . by the name of thy holy child Jesus.” Other versions read, “done through the name of Your holy Servant Jesus,” NKJV “by the name of Thy holy Son Jesus,” DOUAY “by the power of Jesus , Your holy servant,” IE “by the authority of your holy Servant Jesus,” WILLIAMS “ through the authority and by the power of the name of Your holy Child and Servant Jesus,” AMPLIFIED and “through the power and the name of your holy servant Jesus.” GW

Here is the real circumstance. Jesus had been raised from the dead by the glory of the Father. He had returned to heaven, and had been invested with all power in heaven and earth. Through Him, men may receive forgiveness of sins, and an eternal inheritance.

Everything is subject to Christ, with the only exclusion being the Father Himself. Jesus is bring many sons to glory, and the government is on His shoulder. That is the way things really are! However, it does not look as though these things are true. Appearance does not seem to support such a message. Jesus did not appear to be preeminent, and His power was not evident.

It is in view of this circumstance that the disciples pray. They are praying for the honoring of Jesus, not for their own exaltation. They desire for it to become apparent to the minds of men that what they are saying is true, and that salvation is within the reach of fallen man. They know Jesus is on the throne of the kingdom (Acts 2:30-31), ordering and establishing it, and causing it to increase (Isa 9:7).

Now, they ask for God to draw attention to this fact by stretching forth His hand to heal, and to do signs and wonders, for that is the message they are bringing.

THE PLACE WAS SHAKEN, AND THEY WERE FILLED

“ 31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness.”

After men have speculated about this prayer, they must consider how heaven received it , for, after all, that is the most important thing. We know that certain promises are made concerning answered prayer.

When Answers Are Guaranteed

- AGREEMENT. “Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them” (Matt 18:19-20).

- ASK BELIEVING. “And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive” (Matt 21:22).

- ASKING IN JESUS’ NAME. “And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask any thing in my name, I will do it” (John 14:13-14). And in that day ye shall ask me nothing. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you” (John 16:23).

- ABIDING IN CHRIST, AND HIS WORDS ABIDING IN US. “If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you” (John 15:7).

- BEARING FRUIT THAT REMAINS. “Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain: that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you” (John 15:16).

- COMING BOLDLY. “Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need” (Heb 4:16).

- KEEPING HIS COMMANDMENTS, AND DOING THOSE THINGS THAT ARE PLEASING IN HIS SIGHT. “And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight” (1 John 3:22).

• ASKING ACCORDING TO GOD’S WILL. “And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us: And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of Him” (1 John 5:14-15).

The condition of the people themselves is vital. They must be in agreement, be abiding in Christ and His words abiding in them, bearing fruit that remains, and keeping his commandments and doing the things that are pleasing in His sight

Now, according to these texts, we will see if this prayer qualifies for heaven’s approval and a favorable answer. The condition of the people themselves is vital. They must be in agreement, be abiding in Christ and His words abiding in them, bearing fruit that remains, and keeping his commandments and doing the things that are pleasing in His sight. How they come to God is critical. They must come believing, asking in Jesus’ name, and approaching the throne with boldness. The nature of this petition appears to me to require that all of these things be found in the ones presenting it. For those who associate spiritual maturity with lengthy periods of time, these people have not had a lot of time to mature. Yet, the circumstance requires that condition.

THE PLACE WAS SHAKEN WHERE THEY WERE ASSEMBLED

“And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together . . .” Other versions read, “the place where they were was violently moved,” BBE “the place in which they were assembled shook ,” DARBY “their meeting place shook,” GWN and “the house where they were assembled rocked .” NJB

The word “shaken” comes from a word meaning, “the motion produced by winds, storms, waves, etc: to agitate or shake . . . to cause to totter [tremble or rock as if about to fall] . . . to shake thoroughly,” THAYER “to shake, cause to move to and fro, cause to waver or totter, make to rock,” FRIBERG “to cause something to move back and forth rapidly, often violently - to shake,” LOUW-NIDA “to cause to rock, make to oscillate, shake to and fro,” LIDDELL-SCOTT

The environment in which they resided was disturbed, moving too and fro as though situated on a stormy sea. Yet, there appeared to be no fear, even though, judging from appearance, the place where they were meeting appeared to become suddenly unstable.

This was the effect of God’s presence in the natural realm. It is caused by the impact of Divine purity and holiness upon a defiled and decaying domain. There are other instances of such disruptions.

• WHEN THE LAW WAS GIVEN AT SINAI. When God came down on Sinai there were thunders, lightnings, smoke ascended from the mountain like a furnace, and the whole mountain quaked greatly (Ex 19:16-18)

• THE DEATH OF CHRIST. When Jesus died, the gigantic Temple veil was ripped in two from the top down, the earth quaked, the rocks split, and many bodies of the saints that slept rose from the dead (Matt 27:51-52).

• THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST. When Jesus arose, and an angel came down from heaven to the sepulcher, there was a great earthquake (Matt 28:2).

the era of the New Covenant is appropriately described as “the ministration of the Spirit,” or “ministry of the Spirit. Salvation itself involves the shedding forth “abundantly” of the Holy Spirit upon the regenerated ones. It should not surprise us, therefore, to read of people be “filled with the Spirit.”

THE DAY OF PENTECOST. On the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Spirit was poured out by Jesus, there was a sound from heaven as a mighty rushing wind, it filled all of the house where they were sitting, and there appeared tongues of fire that separated and rested upon the heads of those present (Acts 2:1-3).

- THE PHILIPPIAN JAIL. When Paul and Silas sang praises at midnight, suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken, and the doors opened (Acts 16:26).

Both naturally and spiritually the earth becomes unstable when the Lord draws near. Spiritually, for the ungodly, there is fear and dread, agitation, and disquietude. For the godly, there is comfort, empowerment, and holy aptitude.

There are also times when peace and tranquility are the signs of the Lord's absence. Such times are described by Jeremiah. "They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace" (Jer 6:14). When Jesus was born, and news of the birth of a King reached the ears of Herod, "he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him" (Matt 2:3).

In our text, however, there will be no disruption, agitation, or fear among the disciples. Instead, the powers of darkness will be shaken.

THEY WERE ALL FILLED WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT

" . . . and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost . . ." Other versions read, "they were all filled with the Holy Spirit," NKJV "and they all became full of the Holy Spirit," BBE "and they were, one and all, filled with the Holy Spirit," WEYMOUTH and "and all of them were filled with the Holy Spirit." ISV

I have mentioned before that the era of the New Covenant is appropriately described as "the ministration of the Spirit," or "ministry of the Spirit: NKJV (2 Cor 3:6). Salvation itself involves the shedding forth "abundantly" of the Holy Spirit upon the regenerated ones (Tit 3:5-6). It should not surprise us, therefore, to read of people be "filled with the Spirit."

This is now the third time in the book of Acts when people are said to have been filled with the Holy Spirit.

- "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost , and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4)

- "Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost , said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel" (Acts 4:8).

- "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost , and they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:31).

Thus far the results of being "filled with the Spirit" all have to do with intelligent speech: 1 speaking with other languages that were understood by the audience, 2 Peter speaking to the ruler and elders of the people, and now, 3 speaking the Word of God with boldness.

We also know that being filled with the Holy Spirit was not a unique or one time event.

- Stephen is described as a man who was "full of faith and the Holy Spirit" (Acts 6:5).
- When Stephen died by stoning, he was "full of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 7:44).
- Ananias told Saul of Tarsus he had been sent to him in order that he might receive his sight and be "filled with the Holy Spirit" (Acts 9:17).
- Barnabas is described as "a good man, and full of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 11:24).

- When Paul confronted Elymas the sorcerer who was seeking to turn someone to whom Paul was speaking away from the faith, he was “filled with the Holy Spirit,” and soundly rebuked him, even striking him blind for a season (Acts 13:8-11).

- All believers are admonished to “be filled with the Spirit; speaking . . .” (Eph 5:18-19).

It is most arresting to consider that every one of these instances involved speaking in the behalf of God. Whatever one may conjecture about the meaning of being filled with the Spirit, all of the instances we have did equip people to speak with boldness and absolute truth. We know from other occasions, that this was not a kind of robotic response, but involved the consciousness, minds, and intelligence of the people. Being filled with the Spirit sanctifies human capacities so that a flawless and relevant word is delivered from God to the people through one of their peers. Such will be the case in our text also.

THEY ALL SPAKE THE WORD OF GOD WITH BOLDNESS

“ . . . and they spake the word of God with boldness.” Other versions read, “and began to speak the Word of God with boldness,” NASB “and spoke the Word of God boldly ,” NIV “preaching the word of God without fear,” BBE “and began to speak God's message with boldness,” CSB “and they spoke the word of God with confidence ,” DOUAY “and continued to speak the word of God with boldness,” ESV “and began to speak the word of God courageously ,” NET “and began to proclaim the word of God fearlessly ,” NJB “Then they preached the word of God with boldness,” NLT “and were speaking the word of God with freedom ,” YLT “and boldly preached God's message,” LIVING “and they began to speak God's message without fear ,” IE “and proceeded to tell God's Message with boldness,” WEYMOUTH “and continued courageously to speak God's message,” WILLIAMS “and they continued to speak the Word of God with freedom and boldness and courage ,” AMPLIFIED and “and bravely spoke God's message.” CEV

The request of these brethren was, “grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word” (Acts 4:29). Now, no sooner have they finished their petition, than Jesus sends forth the Spirit to fill them, and they begin (or continue) preaching the word of God with boldness. Then ALL spoke the word of God with boldness!

This would be equivalent to a scenario that Paul posed to the Corinthian church. “If therefore the whole church be come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in those that are unlearned, or unbelievers, will they not say that ye are mad? But if all prophesy , and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all” (1 Cor 14:23-24). Paul’s secondary point related to a stranger coming into the assembly and being convicted by the absolute oneness of many people insightfully declaring the word of the Lord. In our text, conviction was not the point, but courageous and confident proclamation. They spoke with great freedom, confidence, and clarity.

In them the prophecy of Isaiah was fulfilled, “the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly ” (Isa 32:4). Again, as it is written, “The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned , that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned” (Isa 50:4).

And how was all of this done? By the Lord filling them with his Holy Spirit, sanctifying all of their expressive capacities. Their minds were able to navigate in the truth, and their mouths were able to utter it. This is truly an experience much to be coveted. It is sorely needed in this day of dead religious institutionalism and pumped up enthusiasm. You cannot nominate and choose someone to lead people into this condition. It is something that comes from receiving from God, not human leadership.

When “all” assuredly speak the Word of God, those present are edified and provoked “to love and to good works” (Heb 10:24). They are built up “in the most holy faith” (Jude 1:20), and comfort one another with insightful proclamations of the truth of God.

A FINAL NOTE ON THIS

I am compelled to comment on the role of encouragement, confidence, and freedom when preaching the Word. Anyone who has publicly declared the truth of God knows how discouragement can impact the speaker. Such a condition cannot be avoided by organization, scholastic preparations and the likes. This is something that is ministered out of the Throne from which Jesus is administering the Kingdom. As seen in this text, it is in order to seek the face of the Lord for boldness when men are in a spiritually cast down state.

A person must have recourse to some brethren who will react properly when religious threats are leveled against those who preach the Word. Peter and John went to “their own company” when they faced this challenge. They reported in detail what had been said to them, and the brethren knew what to do about it.

As in the text before us, this kind of relationship is to be initiated and cultured. Somewhere in our religious connections, we must have access to a group of holy people. If such are not in the house of God or among religious leaders, they still must be found. There must be someone with whom the preacher or teacher is of “one accord” – someone with the same heart and mind – like Timothy was to Paul (Phil 2:20). This is not the fabled accountability approach, where men make themselves accountable to one another. Rather, this is a means of survival – the cultivation of friendships that are based solely upon the life that is in Christ Jesus, and working together with Him.

CONCLUSION

As the work of the Lord proceeds, it is as though Satan has been caught off guard. At the very first, the believers are described as “having favor with all the people” (Acts 2:47). However, we see, this did not last long. The reason for this is the very real enmity that exists between “this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), and the people of God. Jesus said it succinctly and powerfully when He told His disciples, “If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept My saying, they will keep yours also. But all these things will they do unto you for my name's sake, because they know not Him that sent Me ” (John 15:19-21). Now, this is the way it really is. Jesus has chosen us OUT of the world, and the world takes it personally.

The fundamental enmity that exists between the person born of the flesh and the one born of the Spirit cannot be neutralized or removed. It is there because heaven and earth are at war. This is owing to Satan being the prince and god of this world (John 12:31; 2 Cor 4:4). In fact, “the whole world is under the control of the evil one” NIV (1 John 5:19). He will not allow his children to make peace with God’s children, and God will not allow His children to make peace with them.

This condition is why it is true in every age, “Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution” (2 Tim 3:12). The persecution may take differing forms, but it will be there. This too is being played out in the book of Acts.

The first opposition the church faced was from the religious world – the Temple authorities. It was not bloody or unto death in the beginning. As confirmed in this text, it only consisted of words – threats. These enemies, however, will not be content to spout words. Soon they will be throwing stones, and rejoicing when one of the apostles is beheaded.

For this, and a number of other reasons, it is utter folly to attempt to adapt the truth to the carnal mind. First, if it is the truth that makes men free (John 8:32), what have you accomplished when you water it down to make it palatable, or even withhold it altogether? If the sword of the Spirit is the Word of God (Eph 6:17), what can you possibly achieve by mixing it with the wisdom of the world, or becoming something other than a preacher of the Word? If the Gospel is God's power in order to salvation – all of it from “A” to “Z,” what have you really done when you build your theology or your work around some other message? If the church is actually “the pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15), what can possibly be more important than declaring it and bringing it to bear upon the affairs of men?

All of these things are issues in our day – but they were not in the time of our text. That is precisely why the disciples knew what to do. They were in an environment where the Spirit of God could move about and work freely. But it will not be long, until some tares will be sown among the wheat, and corrupting influences will begin. We must remember, however, that tares were sown “while men slept” (Matt 13:25). They still are!

THE UNITY OF THE SPIRIT

“ 4:32 And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. 33 And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all. 34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, 35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need. 36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.” (Acts 4:32-37)

INTRODUCTION

Within the context of the modern church, the subject of “the unity of the Spirit” is largely theoretical. The professed church at large is a gigantic contradiction of unity, being torn asunder by division. Within the organized church, there is very little awareness of true unity. Things have been reduced to being able to get along amiably, and that generally is perceived as requiring being quiet about the things of God.

Men think of uniting on a certain point, or around a project or effort of some kind. For example, if they can agree on the priority of reaching the lost, that is counted for unity. Or, if they can find some kind of agreement on the inspiration of the Bible, that is thought to be a considerable advancement in the cause for unity. But all of this has nothing whatsoever to do with the real “unity of the Spirit.”

Under the New Covenant unity is created by a common birth, and the constituents of the covenant are told to keep the unity that comes with being born again. While modern efforts are little more than talk, real unity is actually lived out in our text. It really existed, and was therefore manifested. It was not the result of exhortation, but of genuine life.

Because an understanding of the nature and reality of unity will assist us in appreciating this text, I want to take the time to look more closely at unity. The church is to be a place where this marvelous oneness is revealed, not a place where it becomes a goal!

The word unity is not found often in Scripture. However, when the Spirit used this word it was always very weighty. The following table shows where this word is used in the major versions of Scripture.

KING JAMES VERSION. Psalm 133:3 – “. . . how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity . . . for there the Lord commanded the blessing.” Ephesians 4:3 – “. . . keep the unity of Spirit in the bond of peace.” Ephesians 4:13 – “Till we all come in the unity of the faith.”

NEW KING JAMES VERSION. In addition to the above, Job 10:8 – “Your hands have made me and fashioned me, An intricate unity ” (“together round about.” KJV)

NEW AMERICAN STANDARD VERSION. In addition to the three listed under the KJV, John 17:23 – “. . . that they may be perfected in unity” (“in one.” KJV) Colossians 3:14 – “. . . love, which is the perfect bond of unity ” (“bond of p[erfectness.” KJV)

NEW INTERNATIONAL VERSION. In addition to the four listed under the NASB, 2 Chronicles 30:12 – “. . . the hand of God was upon the people to give them unity of mind” (“one heart.” KJV) Romans 15:5 – “. . . God who gives endurance and encouragement give you a spirit of unity ” (“like-minded.” KJV)

NEW REVISED STANDARD VERSION. In addition to the three listed under the KJV, Zechariah 11:7 – “. . . I took two staves; lone named Favor, and one names Unity ” (“Bands” KJV). Zechariah 11:14 – “. . . I broke my second staff Unity .” 1 Peter 3:8 – “. . . have unity of Spirit ” (“Bands” KJV).

The word “unity” is translated from the Greek word e`no,thta (hen-o-tes), which is a noun. It is used with the definite article (“the”), which signifies something special, with a specific identity: i.e.

“I am speaking of THE real thing.” Lexically the word means, “equivalent to unanimity, agreement,” THAYER “oneness, unity, unison,” FRIBERG and “to be as one person.” LOUW-NIDA

In Scripture, “unity” has to do with oneness – like the various parts of our anatomy comprise one body. It assumes working together for a common objective – like the parts of an engine, or a machine. There is something that holds the things united together – like ligaments, cartilage, and muscle hold a body together. We will also see that true unity is an evidence of Divine activity as well, and that only Divine influences and resources can hold the people of God together.

First, there is a certain “unity,” or oneness, that is created when we are “set,” “placed,” NASB , or “arranged,” NIV in the body of Christ by God (1 Cor 12:18) – for “by His doing you are in Christ Jesus” (1 Cor 1:30). NASB No person who comes into Christ is excluded from this unity. He is placed into Christ’s body as a functional part that works harmoniously and effectively with the rest of the body. Unlike the social entities of this world, the church has no true misfits at the point they are born again.

It is in view of this that the church is admonished, “I therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering, forbearing one another in love; endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (Eph 4:3). In this case, the unity already exists, created by the Lord Himself, who alone can ,make diverse things into one thing. Now, it is the work of every believer individually, and of all members collectively, to be “diligent to preserve the unity,” NASB “make every effort to keep the unity,” NIV or to be “eager to maintain the unity.” RSV It is not that the unity is an end of itself, or the fundamental objective. Rather, it is that the Divinely appointed objective cannot be accomplished without the unity.

WALKING WORTHY OF OUR CALLING

How is it that the unity into which we were placed is to be maintained? First, the lives of the members are to be lived in strict keeping with the calling – “worthy of the vocation wherewith ye were called.” Our lives cannot contradict the purpose for which God called us. If Jesus delivered us from “this present evil world,” then we dare not live as though that there the place of our primary citizenship (Gal 1:4). If He called us to be holy, then we must give attention to being “holy in all manner of conversation,” or conduct (1 Pet 1:15-16). If we have been called to suffer for Christ, then what fools we would be to make any attempt to avoid that suffering by modifying our conduct to please the world. Living in a manner that is not in strict consonance with our call disrupts the unity, handicaps the body of Christ, and dishonors the Lord.

Secondly, this unity is maintained by refusing to live for self – “with all lowliness and meekness, forbearing one another.” This is a life in which men do not seek their own good primarily, but the good of their brethren. They actually live “in honor preferring one another” (Rom 12:10), “esteeming other better than themselves” (Phil 2:3), and being “subject one to another.” At the point an individual asserts self-will, the unity is disrupted. In such a case, the person has violated a fundamental tenet of life in Christ Jesus: “And He died for all, so that all those who live might live no longer to and for themselves, but to and for Him Who died and was raised again for their sake” AMPLIFIED (2 Cor 5:15). Let it be clear, it is not possible to truly live to and for Jesus and yet fail to be united with all others who are doing the same.

On this matter, I must note the stultifying influence of institutionalism. By stultifying, I mean an influence that causes right to appear absurd and without advantage. It is like causing a person’s vision to be blurred, so that truth cannot be seen clearly. I have noticed that many of the things that now appear quite evident to me were once hidden from me. I could not see them, even though now they appear quite plain – things like the spiritual qualities that are revealed in this text. Further, I do not recall hearing the preachers, teachers, and professors under whom I sat mention such things, much

Why did this circumstance exist? It was largely, if not totally, owing to the fog of a sectarian environment. It taught men to live with disunity, and settle for division. It actually moved us to break the commandment, not keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Subtly, it caused men to sanction a life that was not harmonious with the call of God.

There is a kind of unity that requires extensive effort on our part to achieve. While based upon “the unity of the Spirit,” there is a sense in which it is separate from it. The Spirit refers to this as “the unity of the faith.” “Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ” (Eph 4:13). This is not a long-range plan, but an immediate objective. A person or group cannot fail to accomplish this and yet remain in Divine favor. That is because this is a Divine objective, and it is not possible to ignore a heavenly objective, and yet be treated as though such a deviation did not occur.

There are two spiritual components within this unity: faith and knowledge. That is, faith and trust in Christ, and reliance upon Him; and an intimate knowledge of, or acquaintance with Him and His ways. This is what is referred to as becoming “a perfect man,” which is a Scriptural synonym for spiritual maturity.

There are two spiritual components within this unity: faith and knowledge. That is, faith and trust in Christ, and reliance upon Him; and an intimate knowledge of, or acquaintance with Him and His ways.

There are revealed things that lead men into this unity. These conditions are not by means of special procedures and disciplines. The appointed means are the various teaching gifts that have been placed within the church. “And He gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; FOR the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ” (Eph 4:11-12). Simply stated, the Divinely established objective is this: to build up, and edify the church until its individual members fit and work together in faith. That faith, which involves “the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1), enables the saints to live consistently and endure, while seeing Him who is invisible (Heb 11:27). That faith has a unifying power against which Satan cannot devise an effective delusion or inhibition.

In contradiction of the claims made by many, “the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the son of God” is not academic. It is not seeing everything alike, for everything is not seen by everyone. Perception is developed, and everyone does not move at the same pace. However, what is truly seen will be seen alike, for truth does not have contradicting characteristics. If brethren do not see the Scripture alike (which is the articulation of the mind of God, or His purpose), then at least one of them is wrong, and both of them can be wrong. Furthermore, it is not right to be wrong, and consequently it is never acceptable.

This is why the work of godly teachers and preachers is to aggressively promote the growth of the people of God – not the number of the people, but their personal growth. I know of no commandment that charges Christian leaders with causing the church to grow numerically. If they execute their ministry properly the Lord will do just as He did at the beginning – adding “daily to the church such as should be saved” (Acts 2:47).

WHY SAY THESE THINGS?

It might appear as though there is little or no need to say such things. However, the religious culture that is all about us make it necessary to speak about this. Because of the condition of the modern church, much that is in the book of Acts is totally foreign, from the standpoint of experience. For this reason, some are prone to view the activities and

In these lessons, I am approaching the recorded events as an expression of spiritual life. It is an example of what Jesus said would happen once He was glorified at the right hand of God. He plainly spoke of things that would occur in those who believe on Him.

responses of those early believers as something peculiar to the first century. Others perceive the record as a kind of goal to be achieved by means of a regimen. Still others think of it as a kind of superhuman effort that is wholly unrelated to life in Christ Jesus.

In these lessons, I am approaching the recorded events as an expression of spiritual life. It is an example of what Jesus said would happen once He was glorified at the right hand of God. He plainly spoke of things that would occur in those who believe on Him. “He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water . (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified)” (John 7:39). This is similar to what Jesus said to that Samaritan woman who met Him at the well of Jacob. “Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life ” (John 4:13-14).

What we are seeing in this text is living waters flowing out from the inmost part of believers.

- It is the well of the water of life “springing up.”
- This is the spontaneous expression of spiritual life. It is an interpretation of life “more abundantly” (John 10:10).
- This is an example of grace reigning through righteousness unto eternal life (Rom 5:21).
- It is what happens when the Spirit is not grieved (Eph 4:30) or quenched (1 Thess 5:19).
- The “unfeigned love of the brethren” is exhibited in this text (11 Pet 1:22).

If the same faith and life that were in those brethren are in us, they will also express themselves in most remarkable ways. They will rise to any occasion to the glory of God.

THOSE WHO BELIEVED WERE OF ONE HEART AND SOUL

“ 32a And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul . . . ”

How do you refer to a body of people who have been “baptized into Christ” (Gal 3:27)? What kind of primary identity do you reference when speaking of them? If you were asked to summarize them as a group, what would you say? In our time, some prefer to refer to believers in terms of the movement with which they are associated: i.q. The Reformation Movement, The Restoration Movement, and The Holiness Movement.

Other classified Christian movements include, but are not limited to, the following. Some people think it to be sufficient to be identified with them.

- The Brethren Movement, arising in Britain and Ireland in the 1830's.
- The Charismatic Movement, of Neo-Pentecostals – renewal among what was traditionally called Pentecostals .
- The Grace Movement, a movement during the 1930's that embraced a dispensational system of Bible Interpretation.
- The Oxford Movement, originating in the nineteenth century, which sought to more closely align Anglicanism with its Roman Catholic heritage.

Other broad classifications of Christians include the following.

- Calvinists
- Armenians
- Fundamentalists
- Liberals.
- Premillennialists
- Postmillennialists
- Amennialists
- Preterists
- Trinitarian
- Non-Trinitarian

Then there are more many additional group names that reflect the body of theology the particular community embraces. There are numerous sub-groups within each of these. Familiar names include Catholics, Orthodox, Reformed, Lutheran, Methodist, Baptist, Apostolic, Church of Christ Non-Instrumental, Church of Christ Instrumental, Christian Church, Presbyterian, Mennonite, Quaker, Shakers, Assembly of God, Church of God, Anglican, etc, etc, etc.

Of course, none of these distinctions existed at the time of our text. They are all post-apostolic, and were the result of some form of spiritually wayward thinking . The Gospel will not replicate or contribute to any of these movements. The Holy Spirit will not lead someone into any of them, or sustain them while within them. Whatever good may be found in them, the movements themselves were originated by men.

It is not unusual to hear the general term Christians used to describe the entire body of believers – although no inspired person ever so described the body of Christ. It is true that it is written, “And the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch” (Acts 11:26). Even though some affirm they were Divinely called by that name, there is no evidence that this is the case. No apostle ever referred to the aggregate church, either locally or globally, as “Christians.” Rather, it appears clear that this name was given to the children of God by the Gentiles among whom they were found. That is, it was so readily apparent WHO they were following, that they ascribed this term to them, which means “follower of Christ.” FRIBERG It is a noble term, to be sure. However, it is only proper if it is very evident that the people are, in deed, followers of Christ. It is an evidential appellation, not a formal one.

How did inspired men refer to collections of Christ’s followers, and of them as a whole? What kind of perspective did the Holy Spirit inspire? It is good to make a special note of this, for it reveals something of the manner in which grace impacts upon the mind.

THE MULTITUDE OF THEM THAT BELIEVED

“And the multitude of them that believed . . .” Other versions read, “of the multitude of those that had believed,” DARBY “the whole group of believers,” GWN “And in the assembly of the persons that believed,” MRD “The community of believers .” NAB “And the congregation of those who believed,” NAS “All the believers,” NIB “Among all those who had embraced the faith,” IE “Among the large number who had become believers,” PHILLIPS and “The group of followers .” CEV

Within any of the groups that I have mentioned, and literally thousands of others, this kind of description is not sufficient to identify the whole of the church. It would take in some people an institutionalist would not take in. The term “believed” would also be too limited.

What a wonderful and precise expression this is: “the multitude of them that believed ..” Exactly what does the word “believed” mean? The word is translated from a Greek word meaning, “to think to be true; to be persuaded of . . . place confidence in; a. universally . . . the conviction and trust to which a man is impelled by a certain inner and higher prerogative and law of his soul; thus it stands . . . absolutely to trust in Jesus or in God as able to aid either in obtaining or in doing something ,” THAYER “to believe something to be true and, hence, worthy of being trusted - to believe, to think to be true, to regard as trustworthy,” LOUW-NIDA “believe, believe in, be convinced of, give credence.” GINGRICH

Although believing does involve the intellect, it is not primarily intellectual. More of the person is involved in believing than the part that processes thoughts. There is a strong conviction that compels the individual to do something because he believes – something that agrees and blends with what is believed. Conviction calls for an action that is consistent with the truth. There is also an unwavering persuasion – like Abraham had when he offered up Isaac – being “fully persuaded that, what” God “had promised, he was able also to perform” (Rom 4:20). There is also the reality of being obligated from within – from the heart. There comes a compelling desire that is perceived as rational, or reasonable, and thus cannot be denied. To be impelled from within is to be driven forward by faith. There is also unwavering trust – a willingness to entrust one’s life into the hands of the Lord, because the truth of the Gospel has been seen.

In our society individuals so described are exceedingly rare in the average congregation. In the early church, this was a suitable description of everyone in the church – “all that believed.” This was not descriptive of a handful of people, but of the entire “multitude,” for unbelievers are excluded from the church, and are in no sense a part of it (Lk 12:46; Mk 16:16; Rev 21:8).

In the book of Acts, some form of “believe” appears no less than thirty-six times (2:44; 4:4,32; 5:14; 8:12,37; 9:42; 10:43,45; 11:17,21; 13:12,39,48; 14:1, 23; 15:5,7,11; 16:1,31,34; 17:4,2, 34; 18:8,27; 19:2,4,18; 21:20,25; 22:19; 24:14; 26:27; 28:24).

- The followers of Christ are described as those who had “believed” (2:44; 4:32; 10:45; 11:17; 14:23; 15:5,7,11; 18:27; 19:2; 21:20,25; 22:19; 24:14)
- Those responding to the Gospel are described as those who “who heard the word” and “believed” (4:4; 8:12; 11:21; 13:12; 14:1; 16:1; 16:34; 17:4, 12,34; 18:8; 19:18; 28:24), and as “believers” (5:14).
- Those inquiring about appropriating salvation were told to “believe” (8:37; 16:31; 19:4)
- The promise of “remission of sins” was offered to those who “believed on Him” (10:43).
- Justification is said to be realized by “all that believe” (13:39).
- It is said that “as many as were ordained to eternal life believed” (13:48).
- When challenging Agrippa, Paul spoke of believing (26:27).

It is fully appropriate, therefore, to refer to those who are in Christ as those who have “believed.” It is an all-encompassing word that does not permit the omission of any required obedience. All “that believed” were all who had embraced and obeyed the Gospel. They were the ones relying upon and trusting in the Lord – the ones persuaded that He is, and that He is a Rewarder of them that diligently seek Him.

Now, what will be said of these believers? How will they be described, and what traits will they possess?

THEY WERE OF ONE HEART

“ . . . were of one heart . . . ” Other versions read, “ “the heart. . . were one,” DARBY “ . . . lived in harmony ,” GWN “ . . . were one in heart ,” NIB “ . . . was united, heart ,” NJB “ . . . were joined in their hearts ,” IE “ . . . there was but one heart ,” IE “Now there was but one heart . . . in the vast number of those who had become believers,” WILLIAMS “ . . . there was complete agreement of heart ,” PHILLIPS and “ . . . all felt the same way about everything .” CEV

“Heart” is a word to which the Holy Spirit assigns a new meaning. The word itself is translated from the Greek word kardi,a (kardia), which means “properly, that organ in the animal body which is the center of the circulation of the blood, and hence, was regarded as the seat of physical life,” THAYER “heart, as the seat of physical life” GINGRICH Theologically it means “the causative source of a person's psychological life in its various aspects, but with special emphasis upon thoughts - 'heart, inner self, mind,” LOUW-NIDA

God has made man after His own image. This involves a kind of central headquarters in the human makeup that determines how a person thinks, and what he says and does. It is like the throne of the human personality from which all motives are determined. The Scriptures refer to this as “the heart of man” (1 Cor 2:9; Psa 104:15; Prov 12:25; 18:12; 20:5; 27:19). As used in Scripture, the word “heart” speaks of centrality – like “this is the heart of the matter.” It is the core of man’s makeup – what he really is. From one point of view, this appears to limit people to individuality. However, that is not the case here.

- Jesus said that the evil THOUGHTS of a man originate in his heart: “For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts ” (Mark 7:21).
- He also said a man SPEAKS out of the abundance of his heart: “out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh ” (Mat 12:34) – that is, what he really is comes out.
- He added deeds are really expressions of the heart: “A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things : and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things ” (Mat 12:35).
- He also spoke of the deeds of men as coming from the heart. “For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies” (Matt 15:19). There you have the entirety of human expression – thoughts, words, and deeds – proceeding from the heart.

The Heart Apart From Christ

Apart from Christ, the heart was man’s primary problem – the one from which all other moral and spiritual deficiencies sprang. Thus it is written of those of Noah’s day, “the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually ” (Gen 6:5). The judgment of the flood did not alter this situation, for after the flood had subsided, and an acceptable offering was presented to God, this is what He said in His heart: “I will not again curse the ground any more for man's sake; for the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth ” (Gen 8:21). Years later, the prophet Jeremiah confirmed this condition had not changed. “The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?” (Jer 17:9).

Knowing this condition, Solomon threw out an unanswerable challenge to humanity: “Who can say, I have made my heart clean, I am pure from my sin?” (Prov 20:9). Again he affirmed, “the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil ” (Eccl 8:11). Again he said, “This is an evil among all things that are done under the sun, that there is one event unto all: yea, also the heart of the sons of men is full of evil, and madness is in their heart while they live” (Eccl 9:3).

Of the choice people of the earth, the very ones God Himself chose and cultured, it is written, “Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint” (Isa 1:5). Of the entire Gentile world Paul wrote, “Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart” (Eph 4:18). From the human point of view, the situation was utterly hopeless. Man was sinful at the core, and had no power at all to alter or renew that core. In fact, God challenged the only people upon the earth who were acquainted in any way with Him, “Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?” (Ezek 18:31). Even in those spiritually primitive times, honest men knew that only God could create such a heart. Thus David pled, “Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me” (Psa 51:10).

The Divine Remedy

Speaking through the prophets, the Lord revealed that He was going to give men a new heart. How marvelous the promise must have sounded to those who had been convinced of their natural condition through the ministry of the Law. “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh” (Ezek 36:26). The heart that had become hard because of sin – that stony heart – would be personally removed by the Lord. The new heart and spirit would be prone to God, and would constrain the people to walk in His ways, willingly and consistently. Therefore He continued, “And I will put My spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:27).

Although this new heart would be conferred upon individuals, it would not be individualized – tailored for the person. The heart would be the same in all of the people – “one heart.” It would be tailored for the things of God, and designed to properly constrain and motivate His people. That is why the Lord also said through Ezekiel, “And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God” (Ezek 11:19-20). A “heart of flesh” is living heart, one that can grow and be enlarged for the glory of God (Psa 119:32). This would be a heart that did not consider the commandments of God “grievous” (1 John 5:3).

THE BELIEVERS OF OUR TEXT HAD THAT “NEW HEART”

The marvelous unity, or oneness, that was experienced by these brethren was not something they accomplished. It was not hammered out at a negotiating table, or taught in a classroom. This is the church in its infancy, and yet it realized things the church of our time only dreams about. The Lord promised, “I will give them one heart!” Our text affirms, “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart.” They had the heart that was promised, receiving it when they were “joined to the Lord” (1 Cor 6:17). For them, old things had passed away, and all things had become new (2 Cor 5:17). They were all looking to Jesus (Heb 12:2). All of them had their affection set on things above (Col 3:2). None of them were friends with the world (1 John 4:4).

THEY WERE OF ONE SOUL

“And the multitude of them that believed were . . . of one soul . . .” Other versions read, “and mind,” NIV and “and they were united in spirit.” IE

These brethren were also of “one soul.” It is as though one principle of life animated them all, moving them to think in the same direction, and feel the same way about pivotal and essential matters.

The soul is distinguished from the heart. Thus God commanded the Israelites, “thou shalt find Him, if thou seek Him with all thy heart and with all thy soul” (Deut 4:29). Again it is written,

“And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul , and with all thy might” (Deut 6:5). Yet again they were admonished to “ serve the LORD thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul ” (Deut 10:12). They were further admonished to “ lay up these my words in your heart and in your soul ” (Deut 11:18). When they strayed from the Lord. They were commanded to return to the Lord “with all thine heart and with all thy soul ” (Deut 30:2).

When the Lord circumcises the heart – something that occurs when we are baptized into Christ (Col 2:11) – it is done in order that we might love Him with all of our heart and soul. Thus God spoke to Israel through Moses, “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul , that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6). Jesus confirmed that our relationship to God was to be one involving ALL of our soul (Mark 12:30). This “soul” is singular, being the same in all of the brethren – “one soul.”

What Is The “Soul?”

The soul has more to do with the expression of the individual. It is connected with rationality, or the ability to reason, desire, and purpose. Here is where man perceives, remembers, and wills. The soul has its seat in the mind, not the heart or spirit. It is a part of us that is governed from within, by our spirit, or heart.

Sometimes the word “soul” is used to describe man as an individual personality. Thus we read of “eight souls ” being saved in the ark Noah built (1 Pet 3:20). Similarly, when referring to a group of people who did the same thing, the expression “every soul ” is used (Lev 17:15). Also, when referring to the totality of humanity, the Lord says, “all souls are mine” (Ezek 18:4). On the day of Pentecost, amidst all of the startling events, it is said, “fear came upon every soul ” (Acts 2:43).

In this text, however, the word is not used of the individuals themselves, but of a part of their created makeup. Viewed technically, man is comprised of three parts. Listed in order of their priority, they are spirit, soul, and body. Perceived from the evidential point of view, and listed in order of their manifestation, they are body, soul, and spirit.

The Word of God makes clear that each of these remarkable components is intended to be for the Lord. Thus, it is written, “And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly ; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ” (1 Thess 5:23).

It is said of the body, “Now the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord; and the Lord for the body” (1 Cor 6:13). Even more explicitly it is stated, “your bodies are the members of Christ” (1 Cor 6:15). The text continues by affirming that our spirits, or essential persons, also belong to the Lord. “For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit , which are God's” (1 Cor 6:20). In a special benediction to the Galatians Paul wrote, “Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit . Amen” (Gal 6:18). The same was written to Philemon (Phile 1:25).

In a most arresting statement, the Scriptures declare that the Word of God is able to distinguish between the two unseen parts of man – the spirit and the soul, two parts that men have a great deal of difficulty distinguishing. “For the word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit ” (Heb 4:12).

But what about the “soul?” The soul has more to do with the expression of the individual. It is connected with rationality, or the ability to reason, desire, and purpose. Here is where man perceives, remembers, and wills. The soul has its seat in the mind, not the heart or spirit. It is a part of us that is governed from within, by our spirit, or heart. If the heart (which is more closely aligned with the spirit), is corrupt, it causes thoughts, intentions, and all manner of reasoning to be corrupt. If the heart is right, it sanctifies the mind, and consequently the rational part of our makeup becomes spiritually productive.

Technically speaking, the soul has not yet been saved or delivered. Thus Peter writes to those who are in Christ, “Whom having not seen, ye love; in whom, though now ye see him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory: receiving the end of your faith, even the salvation of your souls ” (1 Pet 1:8-9). The soul of the redeemed has the capacity to think and desire wrongly. Here is the area of our persons at which Satan hurls his “fiery darts” – “flaming arrows,” NASM or “flaming missiles” NIV (Eph 6:12). These “darts” or “arrows” are designed to inflame evil passions, and awaken the old nature. If they are not quenched, they will spread their deadly venom throughout our minds, bringing us into captivity. This warfare is the subject delineated in Romans 7:15-25).

When our text says the people were of “one soul,” the following conditions are briefly comprehended in the saying.

- They were “perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10).
- They were dwelling “together in unity ” (Psa 133:1).
- They were minding “the same thing,” or thinking in the same manner (Phil 16).
- In matters requiring judgment, they were of “ one accord” (Acts 5:12).
- They had “ one mind” (Phil 2:2).
- They were of “the same mind one toward another” (Rom 12:16).
- They spoke “the same thing” (1 Cor 1:10).
- They had “the same care one for another” (1 Cor 12:25).
- They were “like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, one mind” (Phil 2:2).
- They were walking “by the same rule,” of principle (Phil 3:16).
- They were “of the same mind in the Lord” (Phil 4:2).
- They were showing “the same diligence” (Heb 6:11).
- They were ministering “the same one to another” (1 Pet 4:10).

These are examples of what happens when men receive a new heart and a new spirit, and walk in newness of life. These are fruits that grow unhindered where the Spirit is not grieved or quenched. When people are seeking the things that are above, and delight themselves in the Lord, this is what happens – but only so!

In most Christian circles, being of “one soul” is nothing more than a distant goal that looks beyond reach. However, in our text, not long after the day of Pentecost, this was a reality – they were of “one soul.” There was one animating principle of life among them. This was, in fact, a sterling example of “the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.”

At this point, it is necessary to make some few brief observations about unity – particularly in view of the complex nature of man. Unity – or being of “one heart and of one soul” – is not something accomplished in “the new man” alone. It is essentially a uniting of what we really are, and secondarily a harmony in the way we think, perceive, desire, and purpose. Our souls and bodies are involved in the unity because of the governing ability of the renewed spirit – the “new man.” The parts of our person that have not yet been regenerated (the soul and the body), must be brought into subjection. This is what Paul was referring to when he wrote, “But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway” (1 Cor 9:27).

Unity – the unity of the Spirit and of the faith – is not on the intellectual level. The intellect is associated more with the soul than the body, and is characterized by staggering limitations. If professing believers attempt to unite the people of God by bringing them to all see the Scriptures alike, for example, they will never be united. That is why unity is referred to as “the unity of the faith” (Eph 4:13), not the unity of views.

This by no means suggests that there are differing views of Scripture that are all valid. Difference is not created by faith, but by unbelief and a lack of discernment. A person’s view of Scripture is strictly determined by their level of maturity and degree of insight. Actually, there is no provision for any person in Christ affirming things he does not know. Such a posture involves thinking of oneself more highly than he ought to think (Rom 12:3). It throws one in the category of those described as “understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7). When, like Jesus, men speak what they “know” (John 3:11), they will be perfectly harmonious with everyone else who speaks what they know.

Our text is a classic illustration of the effects of receiving the love of the truth, and walking in the light as He is in the light (1 Thess 2:10; 1 John 1:7). As we proceed through the text, it will become apparent what being of one heart and soul causes people to do. Remember, this is genuine spiritual life working itself into the circumstances of life, like leaven into a lump of dough. Because it is comprised of the Divine nature, that “newness of life” always has the same character and preference. If it is not suffocated with the dreaded blanket of institutionalism, it will still cause those who have it to address challenging circumstances with singleness of heart, and do so effectively and for God’s glory. It cannot conduct itself any differently.

THEY HAD ALL THINGS COMMON

“32b . . . neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.”

I want to ever keep before you that what we are witnessing is not the result of detailed teaching on “how to” live. There is absolutely no evidence that continuing steadfastly in “the apostles’ doctrine” (Acts 2:42) involved procedural instruction concerning handling crises, what to do if needs arose, and similar matters. Since the motivators and proceduralists have gained prominence in the church, it is most difficult for some to conceive of anyone doing what is right without having to be told to do so. However, when men receive the love of the truth, and are subjected to the unveiled Gospel, they are taught within themselves how to abide in Christ. Rather than memorizing procedures and submitting themselves to ordinances, they become “partakers of the Divine nature.”

The Doctrine

The marvelous capacity to partake of the Divine nature is by means of the “exceeding great and precious promises,” not a set of commandments or ordinances. Thus it is written that God “hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust” (2 Pet 1:3-4). The promises set before us are “the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him” (1 Cor 2:9). These are very real things, and because of that circumstance “the Spirit of truth” can work with them to teach us.

Concerning this teaching of the Spirit, it is written, “But the anointing which ye have received of Him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you: but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth, and is no lie, and even as It hath taught you, ye shall abide in Him” (1 John 2:27). Abiding in Christ involves several factors. It is more than staying saved. It also involves being sanctified, or being those in whom God works to will and do of his own good pleasure (Phil 2:13; Heb 13:20-21). This impacts upon how men live in this world, and how they respond to life’s challenges.

John is not saying believers can be isolated from the teachers God has set in the body (1 Cor 12:28). John himself was, after all, teaching them. Here, he is rather referring to the implications of the truth that relate to translating it into life. Jesus referred to the one who “doeth truth,” or “practices” NASB it (John 3:21). The Spirit takes the truth to which we have been subjected, and directs our paths through our perception of it. There is no need for “how-to” sessions, which have become so popular in the church today. Men have elevated problem resolution and developing goals and objectives as though they were of paramount importance.

This teaching assumes the condition of several things. First, that the individual has, in fact, been “delivered from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4). That deliverance is not theoretical, but is very real. In it, the individuals have lost affinity with the world, and is now constituted a “stranger and a pilgrim” (1 Pet 2:11). They are, after all, citizens of heaven (Phil 3:20-21). Such an one has a fundamental inclination to the “things that are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God” (Col 3:1-2).

Having been delivered from the world, and experientially detached from it, these liberated souls are utterly selfless – for it is attachment to this world that causes people to be selfish.

Why Say These Things?

It is necessary to say these things because, in this text, we are being exposed to the expression of spiritual life. The brethren in the fourth chapter of Acts were really new in Christ Jesus, and their conduct confirmed it.

THEY DID NOT SAY THE THINGS THEY POSSESSED WERE THEIR OWN

“ . . . neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own . . .” Other versions read, “and not one of them claimed that anything belonging to him was his own,” NASB “No one claimed that any of his possessions was his own,” NIV “and no one claimed private ownership of any possessions,” NRSV “and not one of them said that ought of the things which he possessed was his own,” ASV “and not one of them said that any of the things which he had was his property only ,” BBE “no one claimed private ownership of any possessions,” NJB “And they felt that what they owned was not their own ,” NLT and “and not one of them claimed that anything which he possessed was [exclusively] his own.” AMPLIFIED

It is one thing to talk about being “born again,” it is quite another thing to confirm it in life. Remember, we are not talking about a small nucleus of people – like the apostles. This is not a statement made concerning a single extraordinary person. There was not a single individual among them who said what he possessed belonged to him alone – not a single one!

From a higher point of view, this was actually a test of the faith of those early disciples. Just as the Israelites were tested in their trek through the wilderness, so this circumstance was testing the faith of these new converts.

It ought to be apparent that this statement is made of those of whom it was said, “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul. . .” This affirmation is being said of that entire multitude.

In our time, this would qualify as a mega-church. Considering that the five thousand who believed could have been just “men” (4:4), we are being confronted with a significant number of possibly well over 10,000. It is absolutely inconceivable that any such group of believers in our time could be so described – “one heart,” “one soul,” and “no one claimed that any of his possessions were his own.” NIV

It is at once obvious that these people looked at life in a wholly different manner. They were really sojourners, seeing this world as temporal, and their possessions as a stewardship from God.

These people had “mortified” covetousness, as all believers are admonished to do (Col 3:5). They had done what Paul exhorted the Ephesians to do – not letting covetousness be named one time among them (Eph 5:3).

This whole incident reminds me of the prayer of David upon gathering an abundant offering for the building of the Temple. It is said of those who gave, “Then the people rejoiced, for that they offered willingly, because with perfect heart they offered willingly to the LORD” (1 Chron 29:9). Commenting on that marvelous circumstance David said, “But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of Thee, and of Thine own have we given Thee. For we are strangers before thee, and sojourners, as were all our fathers: our days on the earth are as a shadow, and there is none abiding” (1 Chron 29:14-15). Upon seeing such display of cheerful giving, observe the manner in which David reasoned.

- He marvels that they were “able to offer so willingly,” knowing that the aptitude came from the Lord.
- He knew that every comes from God.
- He knew that God owns everything – even the things we have in our hand.
- He knew they had really returned to God what already belonged to Him.
- He knew they were strangers and sojourners in the world, and therefore should hold lightly what was in their hands.

All of these observations were embraced by the brethren in our text. They also had the advantage of being delivered from the world and given a “joy unspeakable and full of glory” (1 Pet 1:8). They did not have to be told to have this view. Their view was the result of their understanding. They had a perspective of salvation that was more thorough, and more becoming of those who wear the name of the Lord.

A Trial Of faith

There is another view of this text that is essential. From a higher point of view, this was actually a test of the faith of those early disciples. Just as the Israelites were tested in their trek through the wilderness (Deut 8:2), so this circumstance was testing the faith of these new converts. Multitudes were among them who did not live in Jerusalem. They were from other countries, and were there because of their new identity in Christ. They did not have the normal provisions for living. There was probably a considerable amount of inconvenience associated with this. How would the disciples react to it? I have no doubt that holy angels were leaning over the ramparts of heaven to see their response. Less than two months before this, some of these same people had called for the crucifixion of “the Prince of life.” Now, what would they do?

Had a change really taken place in them? Were they walking in the newness of life? Were they walking in the Spirit, refusing to quench or grieve Him? Their response to this challenge will tell the real story!

THEY HAD ALL THINGS COMMON

“ . . . but they had all things common.” Other versions read, “but all things were common property to them,” NASB “but they shared everything they had,” NIV “but everything they owned was held in common,” NRSV “I nstead , they shared everything,” GWN “but whatever was theirs, it was the community's,” MRD “everyone was sharing,” LIVING and “but everything they had was in common and for the use of all .” AMPLIFIED

This was not a response to a law, or an edict by the apostles. This was a spontaneous response of newness of life . The language tends to sound strange to our ears because of the glaring absence of unity among professing believers. These are spiritually dark days, even though we are living in the blazing light of “the day of salvation” and “the accepted time” (2 Cor 6:2). However, the experience available to men during this time, and their actual attainment are two different things. This is confirmed by the near-total absence of apparent unity among professing Christians . Even in the smallest congregations – which are nothing in comparison to the numbers involved in this text – there are often abrasive differences and divisions. However, if we are to appreciate this text, we must rise high above this circumstance in our thinking. There are reasons for the vast chasm between the church of which we are reading and the church of our day.

In conversion – real conversion – there are a number of things that happen. These are all involved in the primary term “believed” – “all that believed” (2:44), and “the multitude that believed” (4:32).

- Sins remitted (Acts 2:38).
- Justified from all things (Acts 13:39).
- Reconciled to God (Col 1:21).
- The conscience purged (Heb 10:22).
- Joined to the Lord (1 Cor 6:17).
- Made partakers of Christ (Heb 3:14).
- Made righteous (Rom 5:19).
- Born again (1 Pet 1:23).
- Holy Spirit sent into heart (Gal 4:6).
- Baptized into one body by the Spirit (1 Cor 12:13).
- Made a new creation (2 Cor 5:17).
- Created in Christ Jesus unto good works (Eph 2:10).
- Baptized into Christ’s death (Rom 6:3).
- Baptized into Christ (Gal 3:27).
- Our old man is crucified (Rom 6:6).
- Raised up by God to walk in newness of life (Rom 6:4).
- Washed, sanctified, and justified in the name of Jesus and by the Spirit of our God (1 Cor 6:11).
- Delivered from the Law (Rom 7:6).
- Escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust (2 Pet 1:4).
- Were enlightened (Heb 6:4).

- Christ made us free (Gal 5:1).
- Placed in the body where God pleased (1 Cor 12:18).
- Called into the fellowship of God's Son (1 Cor 1:9).
- Given access into the grace wherein we stand (Rom 5:2).
- Entered into a process in which we are changed from one degree of glory to another by the Spirit (2 Cor 3:18).
- Started out in unity with all other believers (Eph 4:1).
- Were taken out of the people by God for Himself (Acts 15:14).
- Became citizens of heaven (Phil 3:20).

These twenty-eight things are common to every single person who is in Christ, has been saved, or has been born again. There is no real Christian in whom these things, and many more, have not been realized. They are not benefits that come later in spiritual life, but are all integral to "newness of life." It is to be acknowledged that many, because of flawed teaching, lived for some time in Christ before coming into the knowledge of these things. Notwithstanding that deficiency, they are all very real possessions of those who have "believed."

Can These Take Place Without Impacting Upon One's Morality?

I do not mean to philosophize on this matter, and therefore will labor to avoid leaving that impression. Is it remotely possible that such significant benefits could be obtained without altering both thought and conduct? And if such a thing is possible, precisely what is conversion, and how does one know when it has been experienced? I am going to affirm that it is not possible to be a new creature without undeniable evidence of the change. This is the very point made in Second Corinthians 5:17. "Therefore, if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creation; old things have passed away; behold, all things have become new". NKJV The Amplified Bible reads, "Therefore if any person is [ingrafted] in Christ (the Messiah) he is a new creation (a new creature altogether); the old [previous moral and spiritual condition] has passed away. Behold, the fresh and new has come!" There is not the slightest possibility that this is false, a misrepresentation, or an exaggeration!

Revealed In our Text

The condition that is realized "in Christ Jesus" accounts for the totally selfless spirit described in our text. These people had really cut loose from the world, and they knew why. They had found a better thing in Christ, and were living in the satisfaction of it.

Their view of life in this world perfectly comported with their situation in Christ Jesus. The Savior clearly said when He walked among men, "I am not of this world" (John 8:23). Now, having been joined to the Lord, the believers were also "not of this world." Jesus had also said, "I seek not Mine own will" (John 5:30). Now that they were in Him, they also sought not their own will.

While with His disciples in the body, Jesus said to them, "Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life" (John 6:27). Now, that is precisely what these brethren were doing. Christ also said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth" and "lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven" (Matt 6:19-20).

Statements that are made concerning those in Christ are being lived out in this text.

- "Ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you" (Rom 8:9).
- ". . . ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ ministered by us, written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God . . . ” (2 Cor 3:3).

- “Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints, and of the household of God” (Eph 2:19).
- “For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God” (Col 3:3).

THEY HAD ALL THINGS COMMON

Therefore, we should not consider it strange that these brethren “had all things common,” or “shared everything they had.” NIV

This is the manner in which newness of life reacts. The exact circumstances may not be the same as those of our text. However, wherever men are living by faith, they will “prefer other better than themselves.” They will consider their resources as a stewardship to be used in a manner that glorifies God and brings edifying advantages the saints.

This does not mean they at once divested themselves of all their goods and property, warehousing it for equal distribution. We know that Barnabas did not sell his property unto later, when he deemed it was best to do so (4:36-37). At this point, the emphasis is not on what the believers did, but how they thought: “neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own” (Acts 4:32).

That is, they thought of themselves according to truth: they were stewards, handling the goods of their Lord. When speaking of wealth (“mammon”), Jesus said this: “He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much: and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give you that which is your own?” (Luke 16:12). The time when the Lord will give the faithful what is their “own” will be when He comes again, bringing His reward with Him (Rev 22:12).

Until that time, what we have is really not ours – it still belongs to the Lord. Men look upon wealth as something they have either earned, invested, or accumulated. Those in Christ Jesus look as it as something they have been given. Therefore, when they refused to say what they possessed was their own, they were simply acknowledging the truth. They had seen the transitory nature of life, and simply accommodated themselves to it.

The proceduralizers will find they cannot reproduce the circumstances of our text by human wisdom. This was the expression of spiritual life, not adherence to a system. We know this is the case because of the next incident in which two people are judged for lying to the Holy Spirit. They had overstated what they had received for a possession they had sold, doing so in an attempt to look better than they really were. Peter told Ananias, “Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power?” (Acts 5:4).

Thus, at the time of our text, the totally selfless spirit that was evidenced as strictly voluntary. It was the result of personal insight and commitment.

This is the manner in which newness of life reacts. The exact circumstances may not be the same as those of our text. However, wherever men are living by faith, they will “prefer other better than themselves” (Phil 2:3). They

As men examine themselves to see of they are in the faith, this is something to take into consideration. We know that this kind of response is not the result of long-term maturity, for most of these brethren had been in Christ only a few days.

will consider their resources as a stewardship to be used in a manner that glorifies God and brings edifying advantages the saints. They will do what God intended to be accomplished by redemption: “And He died for all, so that those who live might live no longer for themselves, but for Him who died and was raised for them ” (2 Cor 5:15). Because of their view of, commitment to, and fellowship with, Christ Himself, their view of His people is elevated. Now they have a heart to live “in honor preferring one another” (Rom 12:10), being “subject to one another” (1 Pet 5:5). This is also revealed in the spirit of an admonition Paul delivered to certain in Ephesus: “Let him that stole steal no more: but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth ” (Eph 4:28). Only the intrusion of “the flesh” can interfere with these results.

As men examine themselves to see if they are in the faith, this is something to take into consideration. We know that this kind of response is not the result of long-term maturity, for most of these brethren had been in Christ only a few days. It cannot be argued that the attitude of these brethren was the result of a miraculous and overriding intrusion of the Lord into the situation. It should rather be viewed as a sterling example of what the Lord does when men have thrown off the sins and weights that so easily beset them. When men are walking in the light as He is in the light, they DO “have fellowship one with another” (1 John 1:7). This is revealed in very practical ways, as this text confirms.

Another example of this is seen in the poverty-stricken brethren of Macedonia. Although their circumstances were less favorable than those of the Corinthian brethren, they excelled in giving to the needy brethren in Jerusalem. They reacted to the need of which they heard, much as the brethren of our text. Paul said of them, “Moreover, brethren, we do you to wit of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia; How that in a great trial of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality. For to their power, I bear record, yea, and beyond their power they were willing of themselves ” (2 Cor 8:1-3). That is the kind of response that cannot be commanded or orchestrated. It is the overflow of the well of the water of life.

A POWERFUL WITNESS

Where the people are filled with the Holy Spirit, there tends to be an extension of holy speaking. This took place on the day of Pentecost. First, all the people spoke, testifying to “the wonderful works of God” (2:4,11). Then Peter rose and spoke with inspired precision (2:14-36). Then he delivered an extended discourse to those who inquired what they should do (2:38-40). A very similar thing took place when Peter and John went to the Temple. First, they spoke to a lame man, healing him in the name of Jesus (3:1-9). Then they spoke to the multitude concerning the death and resurrection of Christ (3:12-26).

We are living in a time when there is an ungodly predilection for brevity in the proclamation of the Word of God. We are now being told that the attention span for most people is around twenty minutes. After that, it is imagined that people cannot really benefit from what is being said. Such a case cannot be made from the Word of God. Even under the Old Covenant, Divine communication and holy instruction were never characterized by briefness. The delivering of the Law at Sinai was certainly not brief (Ex 19:17-24:3). When God communicated with Moses, he did so for forty consecutive days (Ex 24:18; Deut 9:9-11). The children of Israel stood for a fourth part of the day, hearing the Word of God read (Neh 9:3). When Jehosaphat made an extensive petition to the Lord, “all Judah stood before the Lord, with their little ones, their wives, and their children” (2 Chron 20:13). God never led Israel into a convenient religion!

While it is true that these brethren were all filled with the Holy Spirit, it is also true that they were fillable . That is, their hearts were pure, their faith strong, and their hope stable.

WITH GREAT POWER GAVE THE APOSTLES WITNESS

“And with great power gave the apostles witness . . .” Other versions read, “And with great power the apostles were giving witness,” NASB “With great power the apostles continued to testify,” NIV “With great power the apostles gave their testimony,” NRSV “And with great power gave the apostles their witness,” ASV “The apostles testified powerfully,” NLT “And the apostles preached powerful sermons,” LIVING “The apostles used great power to give evidence,” IE “while the Apostles with great force of conviction delivered their testimony,” WEYMOUTH and “And with great strength and ability and power the apostles delivered their testimony.” AMPLIFIED

Now, just as on the day of Pentecost, the apostles confirm that they have been set “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). While all of the brethren there had been speaking the Word with boldness (4:31), now the apostles rise to establish the people, for the church is “built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets” (Eph 2:20).

In the body of Christ, speaking plays a primary role. This is seen in the first three gifts placed within the church: “And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that . . .” (1 Cor 12:28). Paul expressed the same order to the Ephesians, combining three gifts into the latter category. “And He gave some, 1 apostles; and some, 2 prophets; and some, 3 evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers” (“pastors and teachers being a single gift that has two sides – Eph 4:11). In this text, “evangelists” (proclaimers), and “pastors” (shepherds) “teachers” (instructors) are a breakdown of the wider term used in First Corinthians – “teachers.” In these offices the truth of God is declared and expounded. You will notice there is no office termed “praise leader,” “worship leader,” or something similar. In the Divine economy, a leader is a teacher who leads the people into spiritual thoughts, not in an external exercise. That concept is more in keeping with the Old Covenant than the New Covenant. The term “rule” (also translated “led,” NASB) and “leaders,” NIV , also carries the connotation of leading by insightfully speaking God’s Word. “Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God : whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation” (Heb 13:7).

Types of Speaking

In my judgment, there are at least four different kinds of helpful speaking among the saints. All of them are not equal. Here are some general comments concerning those kinds of speaking.

- FOUNDATIONAL. This is the communication of the verities upon which faith is established. These cannot be changed, and have been wrought or declared by the living God. They are expressions of God’s “eternal purpose,” center in the Lord Jesus Christ, and bear directly upon the salvation of the soul.

- IMPLICATION. Implications are inherent to the verities, yet are not apparent to the unlearned. For example, in the sacrifice of Himself Christ “put away sin.” That is an inseparable part of His death. Yet, it must be proclaimed. This type of speaking can be called exposition or the expounding of the truth.

- EXHORTATION. An exhortation is a spiritually logical conclusion that flows out from the implication of truth. It summons the people to involvement in the truth, calling upon them to believe what they have heard, do what God requires of them, and use what they have been given.

TESTIMONY. A testimony is the witness of something personally experienced by the believer. It can take the nature of a report, as when Paul “declared particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry” (Acts 21:19).

Being of first rank in the church, the apostles were not limited in what they said. They operated freely in all four of these areas, knowing the foundations of the faith and their implications – fully able to handle the word of God correctly.

In this text, we will see how the apostles spoke of something foundational – something containing many implications, and upon which exhortations and admonitions were based.

Particularly during the past few years, there has been a marked decrease in this kind of speaking within the professed church. There is even a growing tendency to expound psychological and sociological principles rather than Scripture, and to exhort people in areas that are not extensively addressed by Scripture – such as finances, marriage, and material success.

The Apostles

With regard to the “apostles,” these were the men chosen by Jesus to lay the foundation, declaring the pivotal matters on which faith is built. In a unique way, the Holy Spirit directed them into all truth (John 16:13). The eternal purpose of God was revealed to them. That purpose was introduced by the prophets, but it was revealed in its fulness to the apostles. Paul had particular insight into this purpose (Eph 3:1-12).

In the apostles’ witness, they would not major on local issues or matters unrelated to faith. Their objective was to bring men to, and ground them in, faith. In doing this, their proclamation always centered in the Gospel itself – something into which they were given unique insight. It is not possible for men to read the Gospel accounts of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, and arrive at the conclusions proclaimed by the apostles. As a witness to this, consider some of the things the apostles revealed about the death of Christ. Independently of the apostles, no man is ever represented as having arrived at these conclusions. It is necessary that men see this.

- He bore, or carried, our sins in His body on the tree (1 Pet 2:24).
- He was made to be sin for us (2 Cor 5:21).
- In His death, He was cursed by God (Gal 3:13).
- God has set Jesus forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood (Rom 3:25).
- We are justified through His blood (Rom 5:9).
- We are reconciled to God through the death of His son (Rom 5:10).
- God condemned sin in the flesh of His Son (Rom 8:3).
- God did not spare His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all (Rom 8:32).
- We are bought with the price paid in Christ's death (1 Cor 6:20).
- If One died for all, then all are dead (2 Cor 5:14).

There is not an equality among the members of the body concerning insight or understanding. Some revelations are not made to everyone, but are passed on by means of the teaching of those who received the revelations.

He died that we might no longer live unto ourselves, but unto Him who died for us (2 Cor 5:15).

- He gave Himself to deliver us from this present evil world (Gal 1:4).
- In His death, He redeemed us from the curse of the Law (Gal 3:13).
- We are made nigh unto God by the blood of Christ (Eph 2:13).
- In His flesh, Jesus abolished the enmity, even the law of commandments contained in ordinances (Eph 2:15).
- He gave Himself to sanctify and cleanse the church (Eph 5:26).

- Christ died in order to present His church to Himself without spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing (Eph 5:27).
- He made peace through the blood of His cross (Col 1:20).
- In the cross, He plundered principalities and powers, making a public display of them (Col 2:15).
- In His death, he delivered us from the wrath to come (1 Thess 1:10).
- He died for us that whether we wake or sleep, we might live together with Him (1 Thess 5:10).
- He gave Himself to redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a special people, zealous of good works (Tit 2:14).
- He tasted death for every man (Heb 2:9).
- Through His death, He destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14).
- He obtained eternal redemption for us (Heb 9:12).
- In offering Himself in death, Jesus has perfected forever all who are sanctified (Heb 10:14).
- Through His blood, we are washed from our sins and made kings and priests unto God (Rev 1:5-6).

This should be sufficient to show why the apostles rose to prominence in any assembly of the godly. There is not an equality among the members of the body concerning insight or understanding. Some revelations are not made to everyone, but are passed on by means of the teaching of those who received the revelations.

This is why no person can grow in grace and truth while ignoring the writings of the apostles. Thus it is said of early believers, “they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine . . .” (Acts 2:42). Anyone that is only casually familiar with the modern church knows there is a staggering ignorance of apostolic teaching. Some are more familiar with Proverbs and Ecclesiastes than with the Epistles. Others feel quite content to know John 3:16, imagining that the most profound theology of all is, “Jesus loves me this I know, for the Bible tells me so.” This is a very foolish statement, and betrays an unsettling ignorance among the people. No apostle ever approached the love of God as revealed in Christ in such a manner.

Therefore, it ought to be clear why the apostles rose to prominence in this grand prayer gathering. Then, following the prayer, all who were there began to speak the Word of God with boldness. Now the apostles step forth to deliver their revealed understanding, which pertained to the role of Jesus Himself in the new Covenant economy. We are given a word about the manner in which the apostles gave their witness.

With Power

Here is a word that remains very nebulous among professing Christians. The word used here is the same word used in Romans 1:16 (du, namij – doon-a-mis), which describes the Gospel as “the power of God.” Lexically this word means “strength, ability, power . . . inherent power, power residing in a thing by virtue of its nature, or which a person or thing exerts or puts forth,” THAYER “ability, capacity,” UBS “power, might, authority,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “influence,” LEH Somehow, all of that tends to muddy the waters for many people.

As used in this text, the word “power” means the apostles were able to witness effectively – that is, in strict comportment with, and in fulfillment of, God’s objective for them. In particular, this means they were able to strengthen and build up the saints with their insightful words.

Paul spoke of possessing that same kind of power. “Therefore I write these things being absent, lest being present I should use sharpness, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction” (2 Cor 13:10). Again he wrote, “For though I should boast somewhat more of our authority, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed” (2 Cor 10:8). Paul was emphasizing the purpose of the power, our text is emphasizing its effectiveness.

This is the only text in Acts and the Epistles that uses the phrase “great power.” This is true in every major translation KJV, NKJV, NASB, NIV, NRSV/RSV/ASV as well as 24 other translations. They had the ability to establish the saints – a God-given ability. Speaking with power is not shouting louder, or speaking with a tone of authority. It is speaking that yields results.

A Controversial Point

At this point I will say something that will appear very controversial and perhaps even agitating. But it is the truth, and I challenge you to weigh it in the balances of spiritual understanding and the Scriptures. Why is it that some men can preach for years, and yet those who are paying attention to them never become spiritually stable, discerning, or spiritually strong? It is because the speaker has not been given power to edify – else that is what he would be doing! If this is the case, they have usurped the office of preacher (evangelist) or teacher, for we are pointedly told that the purpose of those functions is to perfect the saints and edify the body of Christ (Eph 4:11-12). On the other hand, there are preachers and teachers who deliver words that establish and mature those giving heed to them. That condition is owing to the fact that they have been given power, or the ability, to edify.

It might be countered that some have possibly been given the ability, but do not use it. In that case, they are unfaithful stewards, and the ability will be taken from them, as confirmed in the parables of the talents and the pounds.

Now, the matter the apostles witnessed with “great power” is specified. They did not speak in mere generalities, but focused upon a pivotal pillar of sound doctrine. It will have particular relevance under the circumstances.

OF THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

“ . . . of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus . . .” Other versions read, “the coming back of the Lord Jesus from the dead,” BBE and “that the Lord Jesus has been raised from death.” IE

Again, let me emphasize that the implications and conclusions that are resident in the Gospel cannot be discovered by human wisdom. No amount of study, even of the four Gospels themselves, will lead one to the inspired conclusions concerning resurrection life that were made known to the apostles.

Given their situation – being threatened by the religious authorities – some might have thought it appropriate to speak on being steadfast, or the role of suffering in the life of faith, etc., etc. In this circumstance, however, the apostles are filled with the Spirit, and are speaking to their brethren who are also filled with the Spirit. Their message is being directed from the throne of heaven, not by the wisdom of men.

Again, let me emphasize that the implications and conclusions that are resident in the Gospel cannot be discovered by human wisdom. No amount of study, even of the four Gospels themselves, will lead one to the inspired conclusions concerning resurrection life that were made known to the apostles. Let me mention a few of these marvelous revelations.

- In regeneration, we are united with Him "in His resurrection" (Rom 6:5).
- The desire to know the power of His resurrection dominates those living by faith (Phil 3:10).
- Jesus was declared to be "the Son of God with power, by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom 1:4).
- We are begotten again to a living hope "by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead" (1 Pet 1:3).
- The resurrection of Christ is what validates our baptism (1 Pet 3:21).
- The resurrection of Christ validated His death, and inducted Him into His intercessory ministry (Rom 8:34).
- We are reconciled by His death, and saved by His (resurrection) life (Rom 5:10).
- He is able to save us because, being raised from the dead, He "ever lives to make intercession" for us (Heb 7:25).
- The blood of the cross obtained its effectiveness when, after His resurrection, Jesus entered into heaven with it (Heb 9:12).
- The risen Christ, having entered into heaven, is now appearing in the presence of God "for us" (Heb 9:24).
- The power employed to raise Jesus from the dead, is precisely the power that is now devoted to those in Christ (Eph 1:19-21).
- Jesus was "raised for our justification" (Rom 4:25).
- His resurrection is God's pledge that we will also be raised (1 Cor 6:14; 2 Cor 4:14).
- Jesus being raised from the dead, we can now be joined to Christ and bring forth fruit unto God (Rom 7:4).
- The same Spirit that raised Jesus from the dead, dwells in believers, giving life to their mortal bodies (Rom 8:11).
- Confessing the Lord Jesus with our mouth, and believing in our heart that God raised Him from the dead, results in our salvation (Rom 10:9).
- If Christ is not raised, our faith is vain (1 Cor 15:17).
- Believers are raised up together with Christ and made to sit with Him in heavenly places (Eph 2:6).
- In His resurrection, we were "delivered from the wrath to come" (1 Thess 1:10).

Giving a powerful witness of the resurrection of Christ is not merely repeating the fact that Jesus was raised from the dead, reiterating it in varied tones and voice inflections. The resurrection of Christ is like a great net in which many perspectives of salvation are found – as illustrated above. Part of the witness of the apostles no doubt included their personal contact with the resurrected Christ, and the things that took place at that time. He did meet with them at the conclusion of the first day of the week on which He was raised (Lk 24:36-45). He appeared to them again on the next first day of the week (John 20:26-29). There was the time He appeared on the shore after some of them went fishing, and directed a great catch of fish to come into their nets (John 21:3-25). Luke tells us Jesus spent forty days speaking with the disciples "of things pertaining to the kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3). The apostles may have born witness to these things. However, to do so powerfully, or effectively, the effectiveness and implications of that resurrection must have been delineated. All of the disciples knew the fact that Jesus had been raised from the dead. However, with the resurrection a number of marvelous realities were being experienced. These included the new birth, justification, sanctification, reconciliation, the gift of the Holy Spirit (who was not given until Christ was glorified – John 7:39), the intercession of Jesus, and the pledge of our own resurrection from the dead.

Paul spoke of his compelling desire to “know,” or participate in, “the power of His resurrection” (Phil 3:10). He knew that we “shall be saved by His life” (Rom 5:10). That is not the life Jesus lived before He died. To be sure, that was an impeccable holy life, thoroughly pleasing to the God of heaven. Yet, that life is not the means through which we are saved. Christ’s holy life was in order to make Him a suitable sacrifice. It was not the means through which our sins were remitted and we are set right with God. When Jesus dwelt among men, He “went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:38). But that is not the means by which we are being saved! We are being saved “by His life” – His resurrection life. That is the life by which we are begotten again – God has “begotten again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ” (1 Pet 1:3). He “is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them” (Heb 7:25).

The “power of the resurrection” is particularly comforting to those who are experiencing opposition and persecution. This is because it testifies of coming back power – coming back from the ultimate adverse experience in the body – death. All other bodily circumstances are secondary to that, and are thus comprehended in the greater experience of death itself.

This precise point is a matter of apostolic doctrine, and may very well have been expounded at this point. Paul said it this way. “That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him: the eyes of your understanding being enlightened; . . . what is the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe, according to the working of His mighty power which He worked in Christ when He raised Him from the dead and seated Him at His right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality and power and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this age but also in that which is to come. And He put all things under His feet, and gave Him to be Head over all things to the church, which is His body, the fullness of Him who fills all in all” (Eph 1:18-23).

Therefore, in declaring the resurrection of Christ, liberating truth was brought to bear upon their immediate circumstance. The power of God was fully capable of delivering these brethren from what appeared to be impossible circumstances! They had access to the very same power that raised Jesus from the dead. In Fact, that power was toward them – intentionally focused on them by the God who raises the dead.

There are several pertinent things to be seen in the marvelous prayer just cited.

- That there are certain things godly leaders strive for the people to have: “. . . my prayers that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ may give unto you.”
- That all spiritually profitable knowledge springs from knowing, or being acquainted with, God Himself: “the spirit of wisdom and revelation These early believers were able to grasp these things, deriving comfort and strength from them. Their view of the things of God had not been contaminated with the wisdom of men and thinking that springs in the knowledge of Him.”

- The greatness of the power that is “toward us” transcends all human, or natural, wisdom: “may give unto you . . . that ye may know.”
- That the perception of this wisdom and knowledge requires the opening of the eyes of our understanding: “the eyes of your understanding being enlightened.”
- That God alone can open these eyes: “That the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you.”

- That the opening of these eyes permits certain existing realities to be known, or discerned: “that ye may know what is . . . ”

- That the magnitude of the power that is particularly for those who believe must be perceived: “what is the exceeding greatness of the power to us-ward who believe.”

- That this is an active power, not rooted in history, but in Divine activity: “according to the working of His mighty power, which he wrought.”

- That the power was demonstrated in the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, and His enthronement at the right hand of God: “which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead, and set Him at His own right hand in heavenly places.”

If this kind of power is devoted to working in, and in the behalf of, those who believe, what possible circumstance can put those people – those who believe – beyond the reach of that power? If death, “the last enemy,” was impotent before this power, what of all of the experiences that derive their power and effectiveness from death?

These early believers were able to grasp these things, deriving comfort and strength from them. Their view of the things of God had not been contaminated with the wisdom of men and thinking that springs out of the flesh . It is apparent from the results that followed that their faith took hold of the truth of Christ’s resurrection, associating it with the threatenings that had been hurled at them. They knew such men had no ultimate power over Jesus. He came back from the lowest possible depths of human experience. Through faith, spiritual reasoning will now move the disciples to a conclusion. They will be able to triumph over this threatened assault on their faith – one that came from religious authorities.

GREAT GRACE

“ 33b . . . and great grace was upon them all.”

The language of the text will sound strange to those who have been immersed in the institutional church. A highly profitable assembly is generally measured by the number of the people who were there, a hearty response to some financial appeal, or perhaps the honoring of some elite member. It will generally pertain to something the people have done. However, in this text, it will be measured by what came upon the people from the Lord.

GREAT GRACE

“ . . . and great grace . . . ” Other versions read, “ abundant grace ,” NASB “much grace,” NIV “God’s abundant good will ” GWN “ “there was warm fellowship ,” IE “there was warm fellowship among all the believers,” WILLIAMS “God greatly blessed His followers,” CEV “and great grace (loving-kindness and favor and goodwill) rested richly,” AMPLIFIED and “God poured rich blessings .” GNB “ among all the believers ,” LIVING

Exactly what is “great grace?” For some, the very expression is foreign. In the minds of many, greatness is generally associated with human achievement. We hear of a “great person,” “a great business man,” “a great athlete,” or a “great mechanic.” Someone may say that had a “great day,” or a “great time.” But what does “great grace” mean?

Keep in mind that this is traceable to two things: (1) A powerful prayer that was answered, and (2) A powerful word that was spoken. Both of them were God glorifying and Christ honoring.

“Great”

The word “great” comes from the Greek word mega,la (mega-la), which lexically means, “large, abundant, and extraordinary,” THAYER “extensive.” LOUW-NIDA It speaks of something superlative, and outside of the bounds of normality. If we speak of a great distance, it is very long . A great light is very bright . A great weight is very heavy . A great number is very high in count . A great trial is severe and unusual. A great noise is very loud . Something that is “great” goes beyond the standard, exceeds the norm, and transcends the familiar.

“Grace”

This is a word that, by its very nature, is worthy of much consideration. This is the first time it is mentioned in the book of Acts. It is only mentioned four times in the Gospels.

- The grace of God was upon the growing young Jesus (Luke 2:40).
- When Jesus came into the world, He was “full of grace and truth” (John 1:14).
- It is “of His fulness that we have all received, and grace for grace” (John 1:16).
- Grace and truth “came by Jesus Christ” (John 1:17).

By way of comparison, “grace” is mentioned 126 times from Acts through Revelation. This confirms the marvelous effect of Christ’s death, burial, resurrection, and enthronement.

As to the technical meaning of the word, it comes from the Greek word ka,ri (kar-is), which is rather nebulous in its lexical meaning. Generally, it means “good-will, loving-kindness, favor,” THAYER “grace, kindness, mercy, goodwill,” UBS and “favor, grace, gracious care or help, goodwill.” GINGRICH Theological definitions assigned to this word by contextual considerations include: “contains the idea of kindness which bestows upon one what he has not deserved . . . pre-eminently of that kindness by which God bestow: favors even upon the ill-deserving, and grants to sinners the pardon of their offences, and bids them accept of eternal salvation through Christ . . . the merciful kindness by which God, exerting his holy influence upon souls, turns them to Christ, keeps, strengthens, increases them in Christian faith, knowledge, affection, and kindles them to the exercise of the Christian virtues.” THAYER Although very true, these contextual considerations are interpretive, not definitive.

- The favor or good will of God is contrasted to rendering a reward that is due. Thus, a person who earns what he receives from God does not receive it by grace: “Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace , but of debt” (Rom 4:4).
- The basis for obtaining grace is faith, which is itself the gift of God. Thus it is written, “Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace . . .” (Rom 4:16).
- Grace is associated with the gift of righteousness, which is contrasted with the effects of Adam’s offence. “But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one many be dead, much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace , which is by one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many” (Rom 5:15).
- Grace is known for its superior and abounding qualities. “Moreover the law entered, that the offence might abound. But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound ” (Rom 5:20).
- Being under grace is contrasted with being under Law. “For sin shall not have dominion over you: for ye are not under the law, but under grace” (Rom 6:14).
- Something received by grace is contrasted with something received by works. “ And if by grace, then is it no more of works : otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise work is no more work” (Rom 11:6).
- Rather than grace being associated with the works of men, it is connected with the purpose of God. “Who hath saved us, and called us with an holy calling, not according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began” (2 Tim 1:9).

All of this leaves the matter of defining grace academically extremely difficult. If you research lexicons, dictionaries, and encyclopedias on the subject of grace, you will be struck with the difficulty men have defining it. They draw some very proper conclusions, but leave us grasping when it comes to a technical definition. For example, the English word “grace” is defined as “unmerited divine assistance given humans for their regeneration or sanctification b : a virtue coming from God c : a state of sanctification enjoyed through divine grace.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER Technically, that is a use of the word, not a definition of it. The definition is lexically brief: “good-will, loving-kindness, favor.”

Briefly stated, the grace of God speaks of God’s basic inclination to bless, or benefit – something He does because of desire, not obligation. With this in mind, “great grace” equates to abundant favor, copious benefits, and unusual profit resulting from the presence of the Lord. It is God lavishing His care upon men, as He did upon His Son, in whom He was “well pleased” (2 Pet 1:17).

What Does This Tell Us?

First, this confirms that the concept of a God of favor and good will is foreign to human thought. That is precisely why it is so difficult to explain “grace.” The traditional definition of grace is unmerited favor. That very definition assumes that the basic Divine tendency is to give men what they deserve. Grace, in such a case, is a departure from the normal Divine reaction. This, however, is a distorted view. The basic Divine inclination is to show favor and goodwill. Sin, however, brought forth the wrath of God, for it clashed with His holiness. It is not that God wants to condemn us, but has grace on us instead. Rather, He wants to show us favor, and now He can do so because of Jesus, and by means of our faith, which we receive from Him. In other words, the whole purpose for the salvation of God is in order that He might do what He wants to do – show forth His grace.

Under the Law

On Mount Sinai, God revealed to Moses His inclination to show favor: “And the LORD passed by before him, and proclaimed, The LORD, The LORD God, merciful and gracious, longsuffering, and abundant in goodness and truth, Keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, and that will by no means clear the guilty; visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children’s children, unto the third and to the fourth generation” (Ex 34:7).

Note that although the Divine hatred for sin is clearly made known, yet His gracious disposition is mentioned first and most extensively. Even so, those living under the Law were not left with this view of the Lord. All their lifetime they lived “in fear of death” (Heb 2:15). Every time the Lord’s glory was seen, the people feared and quaked (Ex 20:18-19; Deut 5:5; 9:19). Even the appearance of an angel from God caused great dread to come on the people (Judges 13:21-22).

Heathen Religions

This inability of natural men to discern this primary Divine trait of grace is also seen in all heathen religions. They depict God as basically angry, requiring that men do something to appease His wrath. This is a universal perception.

Things Grace Presumes

There are a number of things presumed by the New Covenant experience of God’s grace.

- That a satisfactory atonement for sin has been accomplished.

- That sin has been put away from Divine consideration.
- That the person has been reconciled to God.
- That a fundamental peace between God and man has been made.
- That faith is found in the recipient of the grace.
- That God finds delight in the one receiving the grace.
- That a suitable Representative of redeemed humanity is sitting at God's right hand.

Where these, and similar, traits are found, grace can be dispensed: that is, God's favor, good will, and loving-kindness can be righteously lavished upon the people.

What This Means

All of this means that at the time of our text, the people had a heightened awareness of the Person of God and the effectiveness of the work of Jesus Christ. To put it another way, their faith was strong. Their prayer had yielded results in them that was bringing glory to God, and he was kindly disposed toward them. Rather than provoking the Lord, as some in Corinth would do later (1 Cor 10:22), they were walking "worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God" (Col 1:10).

In this, the threats that had been leveled against them no longer had any effect upon them. Like the righteous do, they became "bold as a lion" (Pro 28:1), confidently and insightfully speaking forth the word of God without being intimidated in the slightest by their enemies.

If "great grace" was found among them, then the things grace brings must have been abounding. If it is true that we have "believed through grace" (Acts 18:27), then believing must have risen to unprecedented measures, pushing all doubt and fear from their presence. If it is true that God has "given to us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace" (2 Thess 2:16), then enriching comfort must be been poured forth in copious measures, and hope must have risen to prominence. In this, the threats that had been leveled against them no longer had any effect upon them. Like the righteous do, they became "bold as a lion" (Pro 28:1), confidently and insightfully speaking forth the word of God without being intimidated in the slightest by their enemies. They were thus enabled to boldly conduct their lives toward God in a hostile world and a threatening religious environment. Paul spoke of this posture when he wrote, "For our rejoicing is this, the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of God, we have had our conversation in the world, and more abundantly to you-ward" (2 Cor 1:12).

One other thing that accompanies "great grace" is great Divine tutelage. This perspective is encapsulated in the word declared in Titus 2:11-12. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that, denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ" (Titus 11-2:13).

This being the case, a great outpouring of grace would result in a keen discernment of both good and evil, together with a undiminished preference for righteousness and an abhorrence for ungodliness. There would also be a corresponding fervent looking for, and anticipation of, the return of the Lord Jesus. The presence or absence of such virtues testifies to the presence or absence of the grace of God.

WAS UPON THEM ALL

" . . . was upon them all." Other versions read, " was with all of them," GWN "among all the believers," IE "and a wonderful spirit of generosity pervaded the whole fellowship." PHILLIPS

This confirms there were more at this meeting than the apostles. First, as I have mentioned before, we have no text of Scripture that clearly states that the apostles gathered together alone following Christ's ascension into heaven.

There are frequent references to "all" in the book of Acts. None of them clearly indicate they are limited to the apostles, and there is no reason to be bound to such a conclusion here.

- "These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Mary the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren" (Acts 1:14).

- "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place" (Acts 2:1).

- "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance" (Acts 2:4).

- "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses" (Acts 2:32).

- "And all that believed were together, and had all things common" (Acts 2:44).

- "And when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness" (Acts 4:31).

- "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all" (Acts 4:33).

- "And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things" (Acts 5:11).

- "And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch" (Acts 5:12).

- "And Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judaea and Samaria, except the apostles" (Acts 8:1).

I conclude that "great grace" all of the church – particularly those who prayed. That great outpouring of Divine favor followed the powerful witness of the resurrection of Christ by the apostles. It is as though God was well pleased to hear His Son extolled, for He Himself had exalted Him high above all things.

Finally, "great grace" is for the whole church, not just a segment of it. It was the apostle John himself, who is a central figure in our text, that wrote, "And of His fulness have all we received, and grace for grace" (John 1:16). Concerning that "fulness" it is also written "the church, which is his body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all" (Eph 1:22-23). The church, therefore, is the intended repository for the fulness of Christ Jesus, which includes "great grace."

If we desire "great grace" to be upon the church today, we must be about speaking the things that honor Jesus and point to His glorious triumph over ever foe of man: the devil, the world, corrupt religion, death, and the grave. We must not allow anything to upstage the risen and exalted Christ – particularly a message that centers in the church. When the Gospel message becomes corrupt, great grace will not be conferred upon the people.

FERVENT BROTHERLY LOVE

" 34 Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold . . . "

At that time, a little over thirty years later, considerable carnality had crept into the church through false teachers. That necessitated an exhortation to have fervent love for one another.

Peter, also prominent in our text, wrote to scattered believers, “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22). And again, “And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves” (1 Pet 4:8). Again he wrote, “And beside this, giving all diligence, add . . . to godliness brotherly kindness” (2 Pet 1:7). At that time, a little over thirty years later, considerable carnality had crept into the church through false teachers. That necessitated an exhortation to have fervent love for one another.

James, doubtless among the number of our text, also had to speak about the matter of fervent charity and brotherly kindness, being compelled to do so by the miserable state of those to whom he wrote. “If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body; what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone” (James 2:15-17). But he did not have to speak in this manner on the occasion of which we are reading.

John delivered a similar exhortation to those receiving his first epistle. “But whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him? My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth” (1 John 3:17-18). In our text, however, no such exhortation was required.

Even though there may not have been full maturity in these saints, yet they were able to participate in a level of spiritual life that is scarcely seen in our time. It was their purity of heart and total enthrallment with the Savior that moved them in this direction, for this is the manner of newness of life. They had crucified the flesh, as we are told those in Christ do, and therefore were more mindful of one another. “And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts” (Gal 5:24).

It is important that we see why the following conditions were found within the early church. They did not represent a major achievement, preceded by sundry exhortations. It was rather owing to two primary causes.

- They had severed their association with the world, having effectually “escaped” its corrupting influence (2 Pet 2:2).
- Unlike the Corinthians, they were experientially “reconciled to God,” putting them in harmony with Him (2 Cor 5:20).

I cannot overemphasize that the present state of the church is not a normal one. What we have on our hands is a church at large that is not the intended outcome of Christ's atoning death. Generally speaking, the modern church cannot appropriately be described as the bride of Christ who is making herself ready for her Husband. However, this is the description of those who will be “forever with the Lord.” As it is written, “Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and His wife hath made herself ready” (Rev 19:7).

The church in our text is not the pattern church, it is the normal church – the one that is living by faith and walking in the Spirit. That is what accounts for the conditions of which we now read. This is the kind of thing the Holy Spirit does in those who do not quench, grieve, or resist Him (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19; Acts 7:51).

NONE THAT LACKED

“Neither was there any among them that lacked . . .” Other versions read, “For there was not a needy person among them,” NASB “For neither was there any one in want among them,” DARBY “None of them needed anything,” GWN “And no one among them was destitute,” MRD “None of their members was ever in want,” NJB “no poverty,” LIVING and “Nor was there a destitute or needy person among them.” AMPLIFIED

We know that at least one member of the early church was formerly a beggar. It was the man around which all of this controversy was initiated (Acts 3:2,3,10). But he was not begging now! Luke is very specific in his statement, going out of his way to reveal the condition that existed among those early followers of Jesus. “None of their members was ever in want.” NJB “None of them!” That is an arresting statement.

This text does not mean that everyone divested themselves of all property, bringing the proceeds to a common place for equal distribution among the brethren. This was not the practice of communism, as ordinarily perceived. Rather, this was done from time to time, and on an as needed basis.

This text explodes the “prosperity” myth. These brethren did not lack because they owned things, or was blessed by the Lord with an abundance, as some allege, saying that this is involved in being freed from the curse of the Law. Rather, it will be confirmed, no one lacked because they became recipients of mercy from the rest of the brethren. That is wholly a different matter than obtaining personal wealth.

If the “prosperity” gospel was true, this is the time when it would have been demonstrated, for the church was pure. Now, the Spirit moves Luke to provide an explanation for this remarkable circumstance.

AS MANY AS WERE POSSESSORS

“ . . . for as many as were possessors of lands or houses. . . .” Other versions read, “for all who were owners of land or houses,” NASB “owned property or houses,” NAB “possessors of fields or houses,” YLT and “owners of farms or houses .” WILLIAMS

Not everyone had lands or houses, therefore we read of those who did, which distinguished them from the others in this regard. This again contradicts the “prosperity” doctrine that, as of 2007, is sweeping the church world. Here was the church in its purest state, yet of all the grace that was showered upon them (and “great grace was upon them all”) that grace did not include an increase of property and possessions.

Being moved along by the Holy Spirit, Luke provides an explanation for why not a single person lacked among them. This is the manner in which the lord worked within the body of Christ.

SOLD THEM AND BROUGHT THE PRICES

“ . . . sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold” Other versions read, “sold them and brought the proceeds,” NKJV “would sell them and bring the proceeds of the sales,” NASB “From time to time . . . sold them and brought the money from the sales,” NIV “exchanging them for money, took the price of them,” BBE “Selling them, brought the price of what was sold,” DARBY “would sell them , bring the proceeds of the sale,” NAB “were selling them and bringing the proceeds from the sales,” NET and “proceeded to sell them , and one by one they brought (gave back) the amount received from the sales” AMPLIFIED

This text does not mean that everyone divested themselves of all property, bringing the proceeds to a common place for equal distribution among the brethren. This was not the practice of communism, as ordinarily perceived. Rather, this was done from time to time, and on an as needed basis. When any of the brethren, particularly those who were from other parts of the world, ran out of needed resources, those with lands and houses rose to the occasion, selling some of their possessions in order to obtain the funds required to meet the need of other brethren.

All of this is against the backdrop of these brethren being very real “pilgrims and strangers” in the world (1 Pet 2:11; Heb 13:14). They did not love the world, or the things that are in the world. Unlike in later times, these brethren did not need to be exhorted, “Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him” (1 John 2:15). This is what being born again does in a person. Only the intrusion of “the flesh,” in which “dwelleth no good thing” (Rom 7:18), can alter this frame of mind.

These brethren were also aware that their citizen was in heaven. Therefore, what they had upon the earth, they held lightly.

This outpouring of brotherly kindness was not a response to a commandment. Nor, indeed, was it their reaction to an exhortation. This was a response of newness of life to a very real need among the brethren. This is a most excellent example of loving one another fervently, and of having no attachment to this present evil world. It reflects priorities that are not common today.

As ought to be apparent, this is not something that can be legislated. Nor, indeed, is it intended to be a precedent bound on all believers. That is not the nature of the New Covenant.

When genuine spiritual life is nurtured, this is the kind of thing that will happen. There will be a holy spontaneity when “needs” arise among the saints.

SUBMISSIVE GIVING

There is a willing submissiveness revealed here that is most refreshing to ponder. Personal humility is perceived, as well as giving honor to those to whom honor is due. All of this flowed out from those upon whom “great grace” had been lavished because of sound and foundational preaching.

“35 And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.”

There is a willing submissiveness revealed here that is most refreshing to ponder. Personal humility and sacrifice are perceived, as well as giving honor to those to whom honor is due. All of this flowed out from those upon whom “great grace” had been lavished because of sound and foundational preaching. Herein a great deal can be perceived.

LAID THEM AT THE APOSTLES FEET

“And laid them down at the apostles' feet . . .” Other versions read, “and put them at the apostles' feet,” NIV “to the apostles,” GWN “and placed it at the feet of the legates,” MRD “placing them at the apostles' feet,” NET “to present it to the apostles,” NJB “and bring the money to the apostles,” NLT “were laying them at the feet of the apostles,” YLT “and gave it to the apostles,” LIVING and “and to put it at the disposal of the apostles.” WILLIAMS

There was a recognition of the leaders God had appointed. Doctrinally, we are told God placed the apostles “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). At the first, this was made clear by what they did as well as what was said of them. From the very first, those in Christ were said to have “continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine” (Acts 2:42). There was not competitiveness at that time, as when Korah and his rebels objected to Moses' leadership (Num 16:1-50), or when Moses' own brother and sister challenged him by asking if God had spoken to Israel only by him (Num 12:1-16). In both cases, God responded to the insolence of those objecting to the leaders He established. Korah and all of his followers were swallowed up as the earth opened wide and received them into an early grave. Miriam was stricken with leprosy in the other incident, being healed only when Moses prayed for her.

Later in the history of the church, some will dare to doubt the apostles. Some at Corinth did not respect Paul as an apostle, even doubting that he was one (1 Cor 9:1-3; 2 Cor 12:12-13). Diotrophes, one of the leaders of the church toward the close of the first century, did not receive John the apostle, even casting out of the church those who did (3 John 1:9). But there was none of that in our text. It was a time in which the church was enjoying purity, which is the result of real life from God.

While this was not intended to be a permanent arrangement, as the next chapter will confirm, everyone seemed to recognize that the apostles had been endued with much wisdom. It is apparent that one of the enduements given to the apostles was that of how to wisely commence a needed practice. In other words, they knew how to employ the truth of the Gospel in practical ways, and in usual times.

The thing that is refreshing here is that their capacity in the church was recognized and honored. All of this accrued to the glory of Christ, who had made the apostolic appointments. The respect these brethren had for the apostles was not due to the office they held. Rather, it was because the people themselves were subject to Christ in all things. That is why they could do this. On the surface, it may appear as though the people had confidence in the wisdom of the apostles. And, indeed, there probably is an element of truth to that. However, speaking more precisely and in keeping with the life of faith, their faith was in the Christ who had appointed these men to their office.

DISTRIBUTION WAS MADE TO EVERY MAN

“ . . . and distribution was made unto every man . . .” Other versions read, “and they distributed to each one,” NKJV “and they would be distributed to each,” NASB “and it was distributed to anyone,” NIV “for distribution to everyone,” BBE “to give to those,” NLT “each person was given,” LIVING and “then distribution was continuously made to everyone.” WILLIAMS

No one was intentionally excluded from the distribution. There were no individuals or groups that received special consideration because of their age, gender, or social status.

This was a managed distribution. They did not simply place all of the goods in a kind of warehouse, with each taking what they said they required. The apostles themselves made the distribution, employing their God-given wisdom to do so. They would also make distribution as those who themselves did not love the world, were not covetous, were content with what they themselves had, and were consciously strangers and pilgrim in the world. That would dictate how they assessed “need.”

ACCORDING AS HE HAD NEED

Other versions read, “as anyone had need,” NKJV “according as anyone might have need,” DARBY “anyone who needed it,” GWN “the things he needed,” LIVING and “in proportion to his need.” WILLIAMS

The Spirit makes a point of accenting the basis for the distribution – “need.” Precisely what is “need?” The Greek word from which this is translated means “necessity, need . . . what is absolutely necessary for life,” THAYER “necessities of life,” FRIBERG Dispelling any doubts about the meaning of this term, Jesus said, “Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat ? or, What shall we drink ? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed ? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things . But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you” (Matt 6:31-33).

Paul referred to these as “necessary uses,” or “pressing needs” NASB (Tit 3:14). “Need” is also to be understood within the framework of our Lord’s words. They follow immediately after the above text. “Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof” (Matt 6:34). Just as the traveling Israelites were not permitted to hoard up manna, so these brethren were not given license to accumulate for themselves from the general storehouse, or on a long-range basis. This, of course, requires a keen sensitivity to the tenuous nature of life in the flesh. We simply do not know what tomorrow will bring – or what a day may bring forth.

All of this was done in consideration of those with “need.” There was no rule against having property or goods. That is what makes this incident all the more remarkable. The brethren were content with this arrangement – at least for the time being. They considered life in Christ Jesus to be superior to any life that is related to this world.

Fulfillment of a Principle

There is a Divine manner made known here that is taught elsewhere. It pertains to the way in which God works among His people. Because he had to deal with lethargic spirits in Corinth, Paul made special mention of this Divine manner. “But to have equality [share and share alike], your surplus over necessity at the present time going to meet their want and to equalize the difference created by it, so that [at some other time] their surplus in turn may be given to supply your want . Thus there may be equality, As it is written, He who gathered much had nothing over, and he who gathered little did not lack. [Exod. 16:18]” AMPLIFIED (2 Cor 8:14-15).

The principle is this: a surplus is what is used to provide assistance for those who lack. It was first lived out when Israel gathered manna during their wilderness trek. Every family gathered according to the number in their tent. This included all adults and all children. Each person was allowed one omer of manna. As the food was prepared and set before them, everyone ate according to their appetite. When the day’s meals were completed, everything equaled out. Those with a larger appetite ate more, and those with a smaller one ate less. Everyone had their required sustenance. This we read, “And when they did mete it with an omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered little had no lack; they gathered every man according to his eating” (Ex 16:18).

Paul then applied that principle to the Corinthians in regards to the collection for the poor saints in Jerusalem. In Jerusalem the brethren had little. In Corinth they had an excess. That excess provided for the less fortunate brethren in the mother church.

This is the kind of giving that took place in our text.. Everyone thought in terms of what they needed, not what they wanted. No one was reduced to poverty by giving, for there was no one among them that lacked. Those who did have lands and possessions felt moved to sell them as a need arose among the brethren, laying the proceeds at the apostles’ feet for distribution to the needy.

It ought to be obvious to all that this kind of arrangement cannot be accomplished by means of Law. It cannot be replicated by means of a convenient and heartless procedure.

AN EXTRAORDINARY MAN SURFACES

“ 36 And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation,) a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet.”

The environment of the early church was conducive to the revelation of good and godly men. It is written, “And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace” (James 3:18). One of the great consequences of a dead church is that righteous men do not rise to the surface within it. If there are any such men present in such a place, they remain buried under the rubble of mediocrity. This is because there really is no perceived need for them. Consequently, they are ignored in the preference of those who have little or nothing profitable to offer. Thus, a Jezebel could rise to a place of prominence in Thyatira simply because the people allowed her to do so (Rev 2:20-25). Those who are of a godly temperament and possess some measure of insight know the effects of a lukewarm and indifferent assembly upon them. If they are recognized at all, it is only a token recognition that is couched in an institutional setting. I am aware of no small number of gifted and knowledgeable believers who attend churches where they feel like a fish out of water. There appears to be no perceived need of them in such environs.

But this was not the case with the brethren in our text. There was a spiritual surrounding there. People resorted first to the Lord, and sought grace to do his will, even in the face of growing opposition. In this case, a hard circumstance caused a gracious spirit to become known.

A Godly Environment

A godly environment will cause great men and women of God to surface. It is one of the great benefits of brethren dwelling together in unity. It is often through such souls that the Lord “commands the blessing,” bringing comfort, edification, and all manner of advantage to hungering and thirsting souls. Contrary to what is being taught by many today, a spiritual environment of this kind cannot be produced by outward exercises or disciplines. People who have been living in practical attachment to this world cannot be suddenly changed into spiritual people by singing a few choruses, or a prayer beseeching the Lord to come among them. Legitimate spiritual change is wrought by the Holy Spirit while people live beholding the face of Jesus, considering His Person and ministry (2 Cor 3:18). If that has not been the manner of the people outside of the assembly, it cannot be their manner in the gathering of the saints. Transformation does not come from being in the assembly, but by steadfastly beholding the face of the Lord Jesus. That is a matter of revelation.

Growth is not from flesh to faith, but from faith to faith (Rom 1:17). Men do not make a quantum leap from being swallowed up with the cares of the world to being strong in faith, giving glory to God. As in the assembly we are considering, the people entered full of faith. They heard a report of threatening being made against Peter and John, and instantly knew what to do and where to go. Having prayed powerfully, heaven answered by filling them with the Holy Spirit. Then they all spoke the Word of God boldly and insightfully. The meeting rose to an even higher pitch when the apostles stepped forth and powerfully gave witness to the resurrection of Christ. It is then stated that “great grace was upon them all.” This is a sterling example of going from “strength to strength” (Psa 84:7), “faith to faith” (Rom 1:17), and “glory to glory” (2 Cor 3:18). It is no wonder that a man of the caliber of Barnabas surfaced during this time.

A MAN WHO WAS SURNAMED

“And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is, being interpreted, The son of consolation) . . .” Other versions read, “And Joses, who was also named Barnabas by the apostles (which is translated Son of Encouragement),” NKJV “And Joseph . . . who was also called Barnabas by the apostles (which translated means, Son of Encouragement), NASB “And Joseph, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas (which is, being interpreted, Son of exhortation),” ASV “And Joseph, who was given by the Apostles the name of Barnabas (the sense of which is, Son of comfort),” BBE “Joseph . . . The apostles called him Barnabas, which means ‘ a person who encourages ,’” GWN “For instance, there was Joseph (the one the apostles nicknamed ‘Barnabas, the encourager ,’” LIVING “One of the believers was named Joseph. The apostles called him Barnabas. (This name means ‘a person who encourages others’), IE and “ It was at this time that Barnabas (the name, meaning son of comfort, given by the apostles to Joseph.” PHILLIPS

Apostolic priorities are seen in the surnaming of Barnabas – “the son of consolation,” encouragement, or comfort. This was the ministry this man had to the saints of God, for no others can be truly consoled, comforted, or encouraged in the name of the Lord. This kind of comfort is of particular significance to God.

The name “Joses” is understood by some to be the Greek form of “Joseph,” although that is difficult to substantiate, for both “Joses” and “Joseph” are represented by unique Greek words – not the same word (Joses – Viwsh/j), and Joseph – Viwsh.f). The name Joses means “exalted.”

There are three men bearing this name in the New Covenant Scriptures.

- One of the brothers of Jesus (Matt 13:55; Mk 6:3).
- A brother of a man named “James the less,” whose mother was Mary, who was distinguished from our Lord’s mother (Mk 15:40,47; Matt 27:56).
- The distinguished man of our text.

It is said that the apostles gave this man a “surname,” which stands for a title. These surnames were given to either distinguish the man from others having the same name, or to emphasize some aspect of his character or ministry. Other examples of surnaming include the following.

- Jesus “surnamed” Simon “Peter,” which means “a rock” (Mk 3:16; Acts 10:16).
- Because of their apparent volatility, Jesus “surnamed” James and John Boanerges, which is, “The sons of thunder” (Mk 3:17).
- Judas was surnamed “Iscariot,” meaning “man of Kerioth,” a town in the souther part of Judah.
- One of the men selected as qualified to fill the office vacated by Judas was “Joseph called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus,” meaning Just one (Acts 1:23).
- There was also a man chosen by the apostles and elders, with the whole church, to send with Paul and Barnabas, “namely Judas surnamed Barsabas,” which means the son of Sabas (Acts 15:22).

Apostolic priorities are seen in the surnaming of Barnabas – “the son of consolation,” encouragement, or comfort. This was the ministry this man had to the saints of God, for no others can be truly consoled, comforted, or encouraged in the name of the Lord. This kind of comfort is of particular significance to God. Of old time He said through Isaiah, “Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God” (Isa 40:1). Again God said of His own ministry to Israel, “Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak comfortably unto her” (Hosea 2:14).

Thus the apostles duly noted Barnabas, and dubbed him “son of consolation,” because of his ministry to the people of God. They did not identify him with his travels, any church he had founded, or the number of people he had made disciples. None of those things are wrong, but they are not worthy of great Kingdom distinction. In the end, Jesus will assess “all nations” upon the basis of how they treated His brethren, the saints of God : “I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. . . Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.” The former will “inherit the kingdom,” and the latter will “go away into everlasting punishment” (Matt 25:32-46). Therefore it should not surprise us that the apostles assessed Barnabas upon the basis of what he did for the children of God.

We also know that Barnabas was also a prophet and teacher, as stated in Acts 13:1: “Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas . . .” He was of such significance at that time that while the brethren there “ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them” (Acts 13:2). It is said that they were “sent out by the Holy Spirit” NKJV (13:4). This man is mentioned twenty-four times in the book of Acts (4:36; 9:27; 11:22,25,30; 12:25; 13:1,2,7,43,46,50; 14:12,14,20; 15:2 12,22,25,35,36,37,39). His name is mentioned more than any of the twelve apostles, with the single exception of Peter (by “Peter” 57 times, and by “Simon” 5 times). Barnabas is also described as “a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith” (Acts 11:24)

BARNABAS, A MAN FROM OUT OF TOWN

“ . . . a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus . . .” Other versions read, “A Levite of Cyprian birth,” NASB “A Levite from Cyrus,” NIV “a Levite, a native of Cyrus,” NRSV “a Levite, a man of Cyprus by race,” ASV “a descendant of Levi, had been born on the island of Cyprus,” GWN and “He was from the tribe of Levi and came from the island of Cyprus.” NLT

In stating the natural identity of Barnabas, Luke first associates him with Israel, the chosen people, then with his native country. He was a Levite, that is, of the tribe and lineage of Levi, from which the priestly order was taken. However, he was a faithful Levite, and not like the one Jesus depicted as passing by a wounded Samaritan (Lk 10:32).

He was also from the Island of Cyprus, an island that is one hundred and forty miles long, and varies in width from one to five miles. Coincidentally, this was the first place Barnabas and Saul went to preach after they were sent out by the Holy Spirit (Acts 13:4-13). According to Pliny, the island was separated from Syria by an ancient earthquake. Ib. 50:2. c. 88 According to historians this city was “Notorious for its licentious worship of Venus, or the Assyrian Astarte.” FAUSSET’S Another resource says of this island, “The Pagans worshiped Astarte (Venus), in a licentious manner.” SMITH’S BIBLE DICTIONARY Yet, here was a man who remained godly, though a native of a godless environment. He was unlike those whose love, because iniquity abounded, “waxed cold” (Matt 24:12). Certainly he is a noble example for our generation. Like Jesus, and in his own measure, he was like “a root out of a dry ground” (Isa 53:2).

WHAT THIS MAN DID

apostles' feet.” Other versions read, “and who owned a tract of land, sold it and brought the money and laid it at the apostles' feet,” NASB “sold a field he owned and brought the money and put it at the apostles' feet,” NIV “He had some land . He sold it and turned the money over to the apostles,” GWN “He owned a piece of land and he sold it and brought the money and presented it to the apostles,” NJB “He was one of those who sold a field he owned and brought the money to the apostles for distribution to those in need,” LIVING “sold the farm he had and brought the money and put it at the disposal of the apostles,” WILLIAMS and “Sold a field which belonged to him and brought the sum of money and laid it at the feet of the apostles .” AMPLIFIED

Barnabas was one of several who did this, divesting himself of earthly possessions for the sake of the people of God. We do not know where this piece of land was located – whether in Cyprus or Judea, where the disciples were at the time of our text. However, wherever it was located, it required some inconvenience to sell it and obtain liquid assets that could be used for the support of needy brethren. There is no word about how Barnabas went about doing this. I do not doubt that this is owing to the human tendency to systematize and emulate others. We are only told that he sold the property, and what he did with the proceeds. That kind of brevity allows us to maintain a godly focus, as the details of human involvement must be divulged with great discretion, and with godly objectives.

Being a godly man, and recognizing the role of the apostles, Barnabas placed the proceeds at their feet, to be used as they deemed proper. These were Jesus' hand-picked and appointed men, with duly sanctioned authority for directing the church.

Barnabas did not consider himself equal to them in rank, but willingly submitted to them as Christ's special servants. Whether he was the first man to sell his property, or merely one of a number of willing servants, we do not know. However, special mention is made of him because he was, like Andronicus and Junia, "of note among the apostles" (Rom 16:7). He is also noted because of his prominence throughout the first half of the marvelous record of the early church – working extensively with the beloved apostle Paul.

CONCLUSION

Up to this point in the book of Acts, we have beheld a body without "spot or wrinkle or any such thing." No false teachers, erroneous doctrines, or covetous or immoral person has surfaced. The environment has been peaceable, faith has been strong, and commitment has been consistent. From this point on, however, sundry difficulties will be faced – situations that require holy judgment, words, and action. Doctrinal challenges will be faced as well.

As I have mentioned before, it is possible to view the introduction of corruption as a kind of inevitability. In such a view, the beginning of the book of Acts, and of spiritual life itself, is perceived as a blazing fire that gradually dissipates, and eventually dies out, or remains in a perpetual smouldering state. That this is the manner of the natural order is readily acknowledged. That situation is because the curse of God is upon it – it is destined to pass away, together with all of the objects of its lusts (1 John 2:17). However, this is not the nature of spiritual life.

In Christ, the lowest point is the beginning point, as in a race that is being run. From that point, increase is the mode of the Kingdom. This is a point that must be ever set before us, lest we lapse into a carnal way of thinking.

- Speaking of those who dwell in the presence of the Lord David wrote, "They go from strength to strength, every one of them in Zion appeareth before God" (Psa 84:7).

- Isaiah clearly prophesied this when he spoke of the Kingdom of the Messiah: "Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end . . . zeal of the LORD of hosts will perform this" (Isa 9:7).

- Jesus said, "The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof" (Mat 13:31-32).

- Through Paul, the Spirit said the righteousness of God, which is given to men, is revealed in a process called "faith to faith" (Rom 1:17).

- Transformation is described as a change "from one degree of glory to another" RSV (2 Cor 3:18).

- The part of us that is born again – the "inward man" – is described as being "renewed day by Day" (2 Cor 4:16).

- The aim for every believer is "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God" (Eph 3:17-19).

- The maturity of believers is declared to be coming into "the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ ” (Eph 4:13).

Spiritual growth is described as going “on unto perfection ” (Heb 6:1).

Any backward motion or retrogression among believers is soundly condemned, for it contradicts the very nature of the Kingdom, dishonors King Jesus, and makes God a liar. Let there be no question about this, for the Spirit has made it abundantly plain.

- “Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing , but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men” (Matt 5:13).

- “They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away ” (Luke 8:13).

- “Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God ” (Heb 3:12).

- “Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief” (Heb 4:11).

- “For when for the time ye ought to be teachers , ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat” (Heb 5:12).

- “Now the just shall live by faith: but if any man draw back, My soul shall have no pleasure in him . But we are not of them who draw back unto perdition ; but of them that believe to the saving of the soul” (Heb 10:38-39).

I know that people have become accustomed to church members who do not grow, failing to advance in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. Somehow they have the idea that spiritual growth is more of a luxury than a necessity – something that may be required for leaders, but certainly not for the average church member. I cannot begin to tell you the number of professing Christians I have seen and known who are not advancing toward glory. They seem to think they are holding their own, forgetting that we are advancing upwardly, not horizontally.

If a person does not grow in Christ, it is inevitable that they will fall away. That is the exact reason of the sixth chapter of Hebrews. “Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection . . . For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame” (Heb 6:1-6).

It is not possible for spiritual life to be maintained in a static condition. No person can fail to grow and yet be guaranteed of their acceptance with God. That is because spiritual life must be nourished to continue. Further, when it is nourished, it is its nature to grow.

Our text has exposed us to genuine life in Christ Jesus, and what occurs when people walk in the light, live by faith, and walk in the Spirit. They cannot be silenced. They will not abandon the work of the Lord. They will resort to the Lord in times of testing. They will be willing to sacrifice in the interest of their brethren. They will not hold tightly to the things of this world. Now, it only remains for each one to examine themselves on these matters.

The Acts of the Apostles

Commentary

Lesson #21

THE CASE OF ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA

“ 5:1 But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession, 2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it, at the apostles' feet. 3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? 4 Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. 5 And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things. 6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him. 7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in. 8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much. 9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out. 10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband. 11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things. ” (Acts 5:1-11)

INTRODUCTION

In this text we are introduced to a pair that sharply contrasted with Barnabas, who sold some land and gave the proceeds to the apostles for distribution. Here is a couple who appeared outwardly to follow the example of Barnabas, yet did not have his heart. In fact, they had made their hearts available to the old serpent . This is the first recorded sin within the church, and it is traced back to the working of Satan himself. Because of the time and nature of the sin, it will be judged quickly and harshly, lest it spread further contamination within the body of Christ. Here we will be exposed to the deadly nature of sin, even though it might appear mild, with no danger of harming others – like the first sin in Eden. It will also be made quite clear how sin in any form is viewed from heaven. Additionally, we will obtain a perspective of the dispatch with which sin is to be addressed. This whole matter could never have been detected according to appearance. It had to be revealed by God – and it was.

This is the second attack against the church. The first was from without – by the Temple authorities and the Sanhedrin. The second is from within the church, through a weak section of the body. In this we are being exposed to the devil's malicious attack against the people of God. This attack is depicted in the Revelation, in which the aggressiveness and the wrath of Satan is accentuated.

THE APOCALYPTIC GOSPEL

The Revelation contains the apocalyptic Gospel. The word “apocalyptic” means a revelation that is contained in a figure that is threatening and pernicious. In the depiction of revelation, Satan is seen as attempting to destroy Christ, but being frustrated in his effort. He is then declared to have been cast out of heaven into the earth, experiencing Divine indignation. Then, he is also set forth as launching an aggressive initiative against the church of God, which is provided a haven of protection from his wrath.

• THE TWO PARTIES IN CONFLICT. First, the two parties in conflict are set before us. “And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars” (Rev 12:1). This is Israel in particular, and is set forth in a figure quite similar to that of a dream given to Joseph in his youth (Gen 37:9). “And there appeared another wonder in heaven; and behold a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and seven crowns upon his heads. And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and did cast them to the earth . . .” (Rev 12:3-4). This is a portrayal of the devil, after his insurrection in heaven, during which a vast host of angels “kept not their first estate” (Jude 1:6).

Once Jesus had entered into the true holy place, and obtained eternal redemption for humanity (Heb 9:12), there as no further basis for Satan's accusations. With an Intercessor in heaven, the accuser was cast out.

THE WOMAN IS TO BRING FORTH A CHILD. The woman (Israel) is depicted as about to bring forth a child, which refers to the Messiah. “And she being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered” (Rev 12:2). This is the primary reason for God raising up Israel. It was the nation out of which the Savior of the world would come forth.

• SATAN STANDS READY TO DEVOUR THE CHILD. Having lost his position

in heaven, Satan now endeavors to stop the entrance of the Savior into the world. “. . . and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her Child as soon as it was born” (Rev 12:4). This initiative accounts for the slaughter of the innocents by Pharaoh (Ex 1:22; Acts 7:19), the string of barren women in the Messianic lineage (Gen 11:30; SARAH 25:21; REBEKAH 29:31 RACHEL), and the slaughter of the infants by Herod (Matt 2:16).

• THE MESSIAH WAS BROUGHT FORTH. The Christ of God was born in spite of Satan’s efforts. He completed His ministry upon earth, taking away the sins of the world in His death, and justifying men by His resurrection. He then ascended into heaven without the slightest setback by Satan. “And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron: and her child was caught up unto God, and to His throne” (Rev 12:5). Thus, the prophesied purpose of God was brought to completion in exacting precision.

• THE PEOPLE OF GOD ARE PROTECTED FROM THE DEVIL. In the interim between Christ’s ascension and His appointed return to gather the saints, the people of God are provided a hiding place from the wrath of the devil. “And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God, that they should feed her there a thousand two hundred and threescore days” (Rev 12:6). The specified period is figurative of the time during which the church is targeted by the devil for persecution and destruction (Rev 11:2-3; 12:14; 13:12). 1,260 days, 42 months, and time, times, and half a time (3 ½ years) all refer to the same period of time – a time of affliction and opposition (1260/30=42 months; 42/12=3 ½).

• WHEN JESUS ASCENDED INTO HEAVEN, AND THE RECONCILIATION WAS FINALIZED, SATAN WAS EXPELLED. Once Jesus had entered into the true holy place, and obtained eternal redemption for humanity (Heb 9:12), there as no further basis for Satan’s accusations. With an Intercessor in heaven, the accuser was cast out. “And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, and prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him” (Rev 12:7-9). This was a permanent expulsion, for the redemption was an eternal one.

Satan becomes more dangerous as his anger increases. Now, since he has been defeated by the Messiah he vainly sought to destroy, he will pick up his aggression – particularly against the people of God. He knows he does not have long to work, so he will be relentless in his efforts.

WITH SATAN’S EXPULSION FROM HEAVEN, THE DAY OF SALVATION BEGAN.

Now, with a satisfied God (Isa 53:11), the Savior seated at God’s right hand, and the expulsion of the devil from the heavenly realms, salvation was brought to men, and God’s kingdom was set up on earth, fulfilling Daniel’s prophecy (Dan 2:44; Matt 3:2; Acts 28:23,31). “And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night” (Rev 12:10). Now, the Good News could be freely declared because of the satisfaction of God and the absolute frustration of the devil. A just basis for remission had not been provided that not even the devil himself could contest.

• VICTORY OVER THE DEVIL IS NOW EXPERIENCED BY THE PEOPLE OF GOD. Now, because of the purging of the conscience and the experience of Divine power, the people of God can triumph over their enemy . “And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death” (Rev 12:11). Both the expression (“word of their testimony”) and the character (“loved not their lives unto the death”) become the means of the saints overcoming the devil.

• THE HEAVENS REJOICE, BUT DANGER REMAINS IN THE WORLD.

Although Satan has been expelled from heaven, he has increased his activity upon the earth, which is now a danger zone. “Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabitants of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time” (Rev 12:12). Satan becomes more dangerous as his anger increases. Now, since he has been defeated by the Messiah he vainly sought to destroy, he will pick up his aggression – particularly against the people of God. He knows he does not have long to work, so he will be relentless in his efforts.

• UPON REALIZING HIS UTTER DEFEAT, SATAN TURNS HIS ATTENTION TO THE PEOPLE OF GOD. It appears as though Satan was caught off guard, and, speaking as a man, had to re-group. As soon as he gathered his diabolical composure, he leveled an attack against the people of God with whom the Messiah was associated. This includes believing Jews and Gentiles, but particularly the Jewish Christians at the first, before Gentiles were added in any significant numbers to the church. “And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child” (Rev 12:13).

• THE PEOPLE OF GOD ARE PROTECTED FROM THE DEVIL BY MEANS OF A SPECIAL PLACE AND SPIRITUAL NOURISHMENT. Doctrinally, the people of God have been placed in the heavenly places, in which God has placed “all spiritual blessings” for their sustenance (Eph 1:3; 2:6). This is set forth pictorially in the Revelation. “And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent” (Rev 12:14).

• SATAN MAKES AN EFFORT TO GAIN ACCESS TO THE SAINTS, TO REMOVE THEM FROM THEIR SAFE HABITATION . Although he himself has been excluded from the heavenly realms he seeks to gain access to the people of God as a whole, by means of a flood – something from the world over which he is “god” (2 Cor 4:4). “And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood” (Rev 12:15).

• SATAN IS UNSUCCESSFUL IN HIS EFFORTS, AS THE AGGREGATE PEOPLE GOD ARE GIVEN HELP. Here, the people of God are considered as a whole, and the earth helps them. This is another way of portraying them as scattered, absorbed, as it were, into the nations. This makes it impossible for Satan to destroy them as a whole – as a “woman.” “And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the flood which the dragon cast out of his mouth” (Rev 12:16).

• BEING FRUSTRATED IN HIS EFFORTS TO REMOVE THE CHURCH FROM THE EARTH, SATAN TURNS HIS ATTENTION TO INDIVIDUAL BELIEVERS. Satan was not able to divert the church as a whole, as he was with Israel. Therefore, he seeks to introduce corruption through individuals who are a part of the church. “And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ” (Rev 12:17).

All of this is being lived out in our text. Within a short period of time, Jesus has ascended into heaven, been enthroned, and unseated principalities and powers that had enslaved humanity. He has then poured forth His Spirit. Within as few days, thousands have been added to the church. Efforts to bring the church down working with the Sanhedrin have been dashed to the ground, as the disciples have prayed, are now speaking the word of God with unparalleled boldness, and “great grace is upon them all.” Satan, however, has not given up, and it is not his nature to do so.

He will now try to penetrate the ranks of believers through a person, as he did when Achan coveted the spoils of the first Israelite victory in Canaan. He saw “a goodly Babylonish garment, and two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels weight,” coveted them and took them, even though he had to break the commandment of God to do so (Josh 6:18-19; 7:21). It is said of his sin, “But the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing: for Achan, the son of Carmi, the son of Zabdi, the son of Zerah, of the tribe of Judah, took of the accursed thing: and the anger of the LORD was kindled against the children of Israel” (Josh 7:1). That sin went undetected among both the leaders and the people of Israel. As a result, an army of 3,000 Israelites were soundly defeated by an extremely small number of men from the little city of Ai, and 36 of them were killed, causing the hearts of the Israelites to “melt” (Josh 7:5).

Remarkably, the “old serpent” will use the same tactic – “covetousness” – in his attempt to bring down the church. In this, however, he is working with a people who are a new creation in Christ Jesus. They have been reconciled to God, and there is an abundant and free access to God, as well as the enjoyment of the “treasures of wisdom and knowledge” that are hidden in Christ Jesus. He will not be able to work as covertly as he did under the Old Covenant. In this case, we ought not expect the results to be the same as they were with Israel.

A CERTAIN MAN AND HIS WIFE

“ 5:1 But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession, 2 And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it, at the apostles' feet.”

The time is at the beginning of the New Covenant period, in which the saved were occupying new territory – the “heavenly places.” The circumstance is much like that of Israel when they began its occupation of the promised land. There had already been a great triumph in the adding of 3,000, and then 5,000 believers to the body of Christ. That paralleled the occupation of the city of Jericho. People had experienced a great outpouring of the Spirit upon praying for boldness. Believers are speaking the Word of God with boldness, and great grace is upon them all. Alas, however, we now face the revelation of some corruption among them. This is nothing less than a manifestation of Satan’s working. It is like a menacing flood sent forth by him to lure the church out of its hiding place – away from spiritual nourishment into the world.

The circumstance is much like that of Israel when they began its occupation of the promised land. There had already been a great triumph in the adding of 3,000, and then 5,000 believers to the body of Christ. That paralleled the occupation of the city of Jericho.

ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA SOLD A POSSESSION

Perhaps the action of Barnabas (4:36-37) provoked this deed. The fact that Barnabas had received special attention by the apostles might also have played a role in this. If so, neither his person nor his deed were seen correctly.

This is the only place in all of Scripture that Ananias and Sapphira are mentioned. In the book of Acts, there are two other men with the name Ananias. The first was a righteous man chosen by God to go to Saul of Tarsus, in order that he might receive his sight, be filled with the Holy Spirit, and be called into the apostleship (Acts 9:10-17; 22:12). The second was a high priest before whom Paul the apostle once stood. This is the priest who commanded that Paul be smitten on the mouth (Acts 23:2; 14:1).

Ananias and Sapphira are like several others concerning which only their transgression is known. Among the others are, Judas, Alexander the coppersmith, Hymanaeus, Philetus, Diotrephes, and others. This circumstance confirms these people are examples to be duly noted. It is possible for an individual to be known only for the iniquity they do – even people who were associated with the church, as the example before us corroborates.

Although this verse does not specify what the “possession” was, the third verse tells us it was a piece of land. Coincidentally this is the same kind of possession Barnabas had sole – “land” (Acts 4:37). To this point, the deed seems very commendable – that is, if we judge according to appearance. The Spirit, however, divulges a condition that will affect the nature of the deed itself.

Sin in any form is always out of order. However, it is even more serious when it is within the framework of greater grace and truth, and more brightly shining light. When unusual benefits are lavished upon men from heaven, unusual responses are also required.

THEY KEPT BACK PART OF THE PRICE

“ . . . and kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it . . . ” Other versions read, “And he kept back part of the proceeds , his wife also being aware of it,” NKJV “and kept back some of the price for himself, with his wife's full knowledge ,” NASB “With his wife's full knowledge he kept back part of the money for himself,” NIV ‘with his wife's knowledge, he kept back some of the proceeds ,” NRSV “And by fraud kept back part of the price of the land, his wife being privy thereunto,” DOUAY “And kept away part of the price , his wife also being of counsel ,” GENEVA “They agreed to hold back some of the money they had pledged ,” GWN “and carried away [part] of the price and concealed it, his wife consenting ,” MRD “With his wife's consent, he kept the rest,” NLT “and did keep back of the price – his wife also knowing,” YLT “His wife had agreed to this deception ,” LIVING “with her full knowledge and consent, dishonestly kept back part of the price which he received for I,” WEYMOUTH “kept back some of the purchase price, with the connivance of his wife .” MONTGOMERY and “And with his wife’s knowledge and connivance he kept back and wrongfully appropriated some of the proceeds .” AMPLIFIED

Remember the environment in which this deed occurred. A number of brethren who “were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold , And laid them down at the apostles' feet” (Acts 4:34-35). Among these was a notable man named Barnabas who had a piece of land, “sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet” (Acts 4:37). In both references, all of the proceeds were being brought for distribution among those who had “need.” Furthermore, this was strictly voluntary, with no compulsion being placed upon the people other than their own conscience.

In addition to this, these people were in a spiritually charged environment. The church had been filled with the Holy Spirit and were speaking the Word with much boldness (4:31). Everyone was of “one heart and of one soul,” and no one said that what they possessed was their own (4:32). The apostles had powerfully given witness to the resurrection of Jesus Christ, and “great grace was upon them all” (4:33).

Sin in any form is always out of order. However, it is even more serious when it is within the framework of greater grace and truth, and more brightly shining light. When unusual benefits are lavished upon men from heaven, unusual responses are also required. Jesus Himself said, “For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required ” (Luke 12:48). God will not receive mediocre responses to extraordinary grace – much less sinful ones! When a lot has been given and revealed from heaven, a lot is expected of the people to whom it was granted.

When Jesus walked among men, it is said of His ministry, “The people who sat in darkness saw a great light ” (Matt 4:16). To reject or spurn that light constituted a greater transgression. That is why Jesus said to those who saw Him work, yet did not receive Him, “And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee” (Matt 11:23-24). And again, “The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here” (Matt 12:41). And yet again, “The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it : for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here” (Matt 12:42).

And, why is it that Sodom and Gomorrah will receive more consideration on the day of judgement than many who were exposed to Jesus? Why will the city of Nineveh rise up in the day of judgment and condemn whole generations who knew about Jesus? What is the reason for the Queen of Sheba condemning those who did not avail themselves of the ministry of Jesus? It is because all such people and generations had been give more – more advantages, more truth, more opportunities! This is the manner of the Kingdom, and it has always been that way.

Take, for example, our own assembly. All who know the situation here know that we have been given more, see more, and have a greater understanding than is ordinarily found in the churches. No person of sound mind will contest that we are regularly exposed to matters of greater depth and larger scope than the average Christian. However, all of that does not justify any boasting. It means that God expects more of us. Mediocrity and spiritual stupidity had better not been found among us. None among us can be guilty of leaving their first love, or growing tolerant of sin, or even indulging their carnal appetites. This is not a matter of moral law, but of spiritual principle. God will simply not shower an abundance of holy rain upon a field, then stand by tolerantly when it yields “thorns and briars.” Should that circumstance be found, we are solemnly told the land “is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing; whose end is to be burned” (Heb 6:8).

They Kept Back Part

The words “kept back” are most arresting. They come from a Greek word that is only used three times in the Scriptures – twice in this text, and once in Titus 2:10. There is it translated “purloining,” KJV “pilfering,” NASB or “steal.” NIV For those who are interested, the Greek word used here is evnosfi,sato (e-nos-fi'-sa-to). Its lexical meaning is, “to purloin, embezzle, withdraw covertly and appropriate to one’s own use,” THAYER “misappropriate, steal, embezzle,” FRIBERG “to steal, to rob,” LEH “put aside for oneself, misappropriate.” GINGRICH

How serious is it when someone gives something to the Lord and His work, then holds back part of it for themselves? When once a decision has been made to commit something to the Lord, whether it is one’s life, their goods, or a portion of their money, does it make any difference whether or not that person decides later to keep back a portion for himself? This text refers to that kind of act as embezzlement, theft, and misappropriation. It is really taking something that no longer belongs to the person.

The seriousness of this deed will be confirmed in what happened to both Ananias and Sapphira. This is a record of heaven’s response to covetousness, deception, and making a place for Satan. Actually, we will be told exactly what took place in this incident, so there will be no question about what was involved.

An Application

The practice of Ananias and Sapphira is far more common within the professed church than may be thought. It is not at all unusual for someone to formally commit their life to Christ, then take back some of it for themselves. There are those who promise to honor the Lord the firstfruits of their labor, as God requires (Prov 3:9), for the tithe is the Lord's, as holy men of all ages have acknowledged (Gen 14:20; 28:22; Deut 14:22; Mal 3:8-10; Matt 23:23; Heb 7:8). Referring to the practice of the tithes supporting the Levitical priesthood, Paul said, "Do ye not know that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple? and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (1 Cor 9:13-14).

Yet, some take of this firstfruits for themselves, as though it belonged to them. If ever we are tempted to engage in such activity, we must remember this incident. It will contribute to our sobriety in this most personal, yet vital, part of living unto the Lord. In the case of the tithe (which existed before the Law), there is a slight difference. The tithe in its entirety belongs to the Lord. In the case of our text, the determination of the people was the point. They were not under any obligation to sell their land and give the proceeds to the apostles for distribution. However, when that determination had been made, it became a moral law to them, and was not to be violated in any way.

THEY BROUGHT A CERTAIN PART

" . . . and brought a certain part, and laid it, at the apostles' feet." Other versions read, "and bringing a portion of it, he laid it at the apostles' feet," NASB "but brought the rest and put it at the apostles' feet," NIV "and brought only a part and laid it at the apostles' feet," NRSV "and took the rest and put it at the feet of the Apostles," BBE " and turned only part of it over to the apostles," GWN "took the remainder , and put it at the feet of the apostles," NAB "He brought part of the money to the apostles, claiming it was the full amount ," NLT "and, from the sale, he gave some of the money to the apostles," IE and "and brought only a part of it and put it at the disposal of the apostles ." WILLIAMS

As will be made clear, the sin here was in representing the "certain part" as though it was the whole. Once the proceeds had been devoted to the Lord, it became unlawful to separate them for personal use. Therefore, there was deceit in this matter, as well as a deliberate lie and misrepresentation. While the whole incident may appear minor on the surface, the consequences will show that a great deal of significance was attached to it.

The Figures Given Under the Law

Under the Law, which contained deliberate and numerous figures of New Covenant realities, the Lord introduced the principle violated by Ananias and Sapphira. The principle is this: what is given to the Lord cannot be taken for personal uses . An example is the incense that was used in the tabernacle. It emitted a fragrant odor, yet could not be compounded for personal use. "And thou shalt beat some of it very small, and put

Ananias and Sapphira had taken what they publically said was given to the Lord, and kept it for their own use. They surely knew the Law concerning making vows to the Lord. "When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee" of it before the testimony in the tabernacle of the congregation, where I will meet with thee: it shall be unto you most holy. And as for the perfume which thou shalt make, ye shall not make to yourselves according to the composition thereof : it shall be unto thee holy for the LORD" (Ex 30:36-37). The firstfruits of the land were also devoted exclusively to the Lord, and were to be given without delay. " Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me" (Ex 22:29). The tithe was also to be given wholly to the Lord – all of it. "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the LORD'S: it is holy unto the LORD" (Lev 27:30).

Also, in the sacking of the city of Jericho, the people were told to take all of the "silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron,” and bring them into the treasury of the Lord. They were consecrated to Him. “But all the silver, and gold, and vessels of brass and iron, are consecrated unto the LORD: they shall come into the treasury of the LORD” (Josh 6:19). Ignoring the word of the Lord, Achan saw “two hundred shekels of silver, and a wedge of gold of fifty shekels.” He did not bring them into the “treasury of the Lord,” but rather put them in his own tent, mingled with his personal possessions (John 7:18-19). His deed “troubled” the whole house of Israel, and cost him his life, as well as the lives of his sons and daughters. He had put what belonged to the Lord in his own tent, and thus was judged.

Ananias and Sapphira had taken what they publically said was given to the Lord, and kept it for their own use. They surely knew the Law concerning making vows to the Lord. “When thou shalt vow a vow unto the LORD thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it : for the LORD thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee” (Deut 23:21). They departed from the spirit of David, from whose lineage the Savior had come according to the flesh. They would have done well to have embraced the spirit of David, and said, “I will pay Thee my vows” (Psa 66:13), and “I will pay my vows unto the LORD now in the presence of all His people” (Psa 116:14,18). God takes the vows of men seriously.

SATAN FILLS HIS HEART, AND ANANIAS LIES TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ 3 But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?”

In Eden, there was no door of repentance opened for Eve, nor for Adam. Once Cain had committed his dreadful deed, there was no provision for recovery. When Esau sold his birthright, it could not be recovered. After Judas had betrayed the Lord Jesus, there was no way to undo the deed. There have been sins from which recovery was not possible – like the sins of Uzzah (2 Sam 6:6-7), Onan (Gen 38:9-10), Jehoram (2 Chron 21:18-19), Herod (Acts 12:23), and others. In this text, no space will be allowed for Ananias to repent and recover. Here, judgment will be rendered immediately.

Among other things, this account would produce a high level of sobriety among professing Christians. There is an attitude about sin in the modern church that is altogether too tolerate. Somehow, a God has been proclaimed that can easily endure sin, and is not at all provoked when it is found among those who claim identity with Him. In such a case, the name of the Lord has been taken in vain, violating the commandment of the Lord: “Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain,” or “You shall not use or repeat the name of the Lord your God in vain [that is, lightly or frivolously, in false affirmations or profanely]” AMPLIFIED (Ex 20:7a). In my judgment, this includes the following.

- Claiming to worship Him, while serving other gods, and having other priorities.
- Singing to Him without having grace in the heart.
- Expressing humorous anecdotes concerning God.
- Thoughtlessly speaking out His name in oaths and other forms of profanity.

If we wonder how the Lord feels about the flippant use of His name, here is what He said about it: “for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh His name in vain” (Ex 20:7b). Another version reads, “You shall not take the name of the LORD your God in vain, for the LORD will not leave him unpunished who takes His name in vain.” This text will reveal some of the involvements in taking God’s name in vain. Remember, the incident before us regards selling a piece of land that was owned by the sellers, receiving proceeds from the sale, and the seller keeping back a part of those proceeds for himself. All of this is within the context of an appearance that suggested the entire proceeds from the sale of the land were being given.

WHY HAS SATAN FILLED YOUR HEART?

“But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart . . .” Other versions read, “how is it that Satan has so filled your heart,” NIV “why has the Evil One put it into your heart,” BBE “why hath Satan tempted thy heart,” DOUAY “why did you let Satan fill you with the idea,” GWN “how can Satan have so possessed you,” NJB “wherefore did the Adversary fill thy heart,” YLT “why has Satan taken possession of your heart,” WEYMOUTH “why has Satan so completely possessed your heart,” WILLIAMS and “why has Satan so filled your mind.” PHILLIPS

Right here we see the superiority of the New Covenant over the Old. When Achan coveted the goods in Jericho, it was not known at the time it took place. Joshua did not know about the whole matter until some time later, after the Israelites had suffered defeat at the hand of the small city Ai, and a few of their men. Joshua “tore his clothes, and fell on the earth on his face before the ark of the Lord,” remaining there until evening, and “with the elders of Israel,” while putting dust upon their heads. He then pled with the Lord, saying that the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land would hear of this embarrassing defeat, surround the Israelites, and cut off their name from the earth. God then told him to get up. He proceeded to tell Joshua the following:

- Israel had sinned.
- Israel transgressed the covenant which God commanded them.
- Israel took of the accursed thing.
- Israel had stolen.
- Israel had dissembled, or lied.
- Israel had put what was cursed among their own stuff, or belongings.

Keep in mind, technically, only Achan had committed this deed. However, that is not the way the Lord viewed the matter, and the Lord’s view is really the only view.

Now, in this new era, Peter through the Holy Spirit sees the matter before it spreads or causes any spiritual decline among the saints.

Satan Filled Ananias’ Heart

You may remember that Satan “put it into the heart of Judas Iscariot, Simon’s son, to betray” Jesus (John 13:2).

There are other instances where God Himself put certain things into the hearts of people.

- God put it in the heart of Artaxerses to beautify the temple of God (Ezra 7:21-27).
- God put it into the heart of Nehemiah to restore the wall around Jerusalem (Neh 2:12).
- God put it into the heart of Nehemiah to gather the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, for a genealogical reckoning (Neh 7:5).
- God put an earnest concern for the Corinthians in the heart of Titus (2 Cor 8:16).
- God put it in the heart of kings of the earth to fulfill His will purpose, and give their kingdoms to the beast (Rev 17:17).
- God turned the heart of the Egyptians to hate His people and deal craftily with them (Psa 105:25).
- God put wisdom in the heart of Solomon, when he was tender and humble before the Lord (1 Kgs 10:24; 2 Kgs 22:19; 2 Chron 9:23).

- The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, and He turns it however He pleases (Prov 21:1).

- In the promised New Covenant, God said He would put His fear into their hearts so they would not turn away from Him (Jer 32:40).

For those who are champions of men naturally having a free will, precisely how are these texts explained? Did the people have the option to reject what was put into the hearts? And if that is the case, how can it be established that they had such an option. Or, where is there a case where either God or Satan is said to have put something in the heart of a person, yet they failed to fulfill what was placed there?

The condition of the heart determines who writes upon it, and God alone is the one who assesses the condition of the heart. He alone searches the hearts of men (1 Chron 26:9), knows their hearts (Lk 16:15; Acts 15:8; Rom 8:27), and tries their hearts (Prov 17:3). When they are not pure in His sight, Satan is often given leave to put things into them, such as was put into the heart of Ananias. If they are right in His sight, noble things can be put into them – things that accord with God's purpose.

If people choose to live at a distance from God, they are in great jeopardy, having been made accessible to the wicked one. This is why wicked people often surface within the church itself, even opposing the choicest of saints, as Diotrephes did John the beloved (3 John 1:9).

Peter affirms that Satan not only put something in the heart of Ananias, but that he had "filled" his heart. That is, Ananias, was under the control of Satan, taken captive by him at his will (2 Tim 2:26). This happened because he failed to "resist the devil," and therefore the devil did not "flee" from him (James 4:7). The faith of this man failed, because he did not repel the adversary's attack by remaining "steadfast in the faith" (1 Pet 5:8-9). This was not a thoughtless deed. It was not committed inadvertently, but was founded upon deliberation and purpose. Satan cannot captivate the one who resists him. Those who are remaining "firm" NASB in their faith, cannot be deceived or knocked down by the devil! At some point, Ananias ceased to embrace the fact that Jesus was the Son of God, else he would not have been overcome. As it is written, "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" (1 John 5:5).

Therefore, Satan not only hurled a fiery dart at Ananias – one that could not be repelled because of his lack of faith – but the dart stuck in his heart, emitting its venom throughout his soul. Thus Peter said Satan "filled" his heart, compelling him to do something unthinkable!

The Circumstances Under Which This Occurred

All of this happened in the midst of a great spiritual awakening, and the experience of profound empowerment. When other souls were filled with the Holy Spirit, Satan filled the heart of Ananias. While others were bold to speak out the Word, Ananias was brazen enough to think only of himself. While "great grace" was upon all of the others, great deception was upon Ananias and Sapphira.

Spirituality and holiness are not caught by being where it is evident in others! I understand that men tend to think if they can only get others to sit under the sound of the truth, and be around those who are filled with the Spirit, that some of it will rub off on wayward souls. However, the case of Ananias and Sapphira prove that this is not the case. The truth of God must be loved (2 Thess 2:10). The things of the Spirit of God must be received (Rom 8:5). The Spirit Himself must not be grieved, quenched, or resisted (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19; Acts 7:51). The Word of God must fall on honest and good hearts (Lk 8:15). One's affection must be set on things above, and there must be an earnest quest for the things that are resident where Christ is sitting on the right hand of God (Col 3:1-2). We cannot afford to be naive about these things.

LYING TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

“ . . . to lie to the Holy Ghost . . . ” Other versions read, “that you have lied to the Holy Spirit,” NIV “to be false to the Holy Spirit,” BBE “that you could deceive the Holy Spirit ,” GWN “that thou shouldst lie against the Holy Spirit,” MRD “you are lying to the Holy Spirit,” MONTGOMERY “that you should lie to and attempt to deceive the Holy Spirit,” AMPLIFIED and “that you could cheat the Holy Spirit.” PHILLIPS

This is a most arresting word! First, I have no doubt that Ananias did not think of his report as a lie. He and his wife had already determined to keep back part of the price of the land, and now the thought was not of how this appeared to God. He was no doubt only thinking of his own determinations, and not the pronouncement of the living God upon such decisions. He was not aware of the presence of the Holy Spirit, but thought of himself as having only to deal with Peter. Further, it is evident that he did not perceive Peter as one possessing the keys of the kingdom of heaven (Matt 16:19).

A Pervading Spiritual Environment

Among things this is like a commentary on the spiritual environment of that early church. The Spirit was maintaining a pervading presence, inspiring and directing the assembly. That surrounding was of such a nature that a lie was considered to be to and against the Holy Spirit Himself. That is, in order to speak as Ananias did, he had to purposefully thrust Divine influences from himself. We know that the Holy Spirit strongly desires the heart and affection of the people of God, lusting against the propensities of the flesh. Thus it is written, “The Spirit lusteth against the flesh,” or the Spirit sets its desire “against the flesh,” NASB or “what the Spirit desires is opposed to the flesh” NRSV (Gal 5:17). James states this condition in a most unique way: “The Spirit who dwells in us yearns jealously” NKJV (James 4:5). Another version reads, “The Spirit Whom He has caused to dwell in us yearns over us and He yearns for the Spirit [to be welcome] with a jealous love?” AMPLIFIED

Do not imagine for a moment that Ananias did not feel the tug of the Spirit here, yearning for his heart and affection. He had to run roughshod over such desires, choosing to give place to the devil, and to follow the vastly inferior callings of the flesh. Within such a context, it is clear that he was lying to the Holy Spirit. There is no adequate way to put the seriousness of that circumstance into words.

KEEPING BACK PART OF THE MONEY

“ . . . and to keep back part of the price of the land?” Other versions read, “and have kept for yourself some of the money you received for the land?,” NIV “and put aside for thyself a part of the price of the estate,” ESV “and conceal of the money of the price of the field,” MRD “When you claimed this was the full price ,” LIVING “You misused the sale price of the land,” IE and “and should [in violation of your promise] withdraw secretly and appropriate to your own use part of the price from the sale of the land.” AMPLIFIED

This whole matter did not have the appearance of iniquity. However, it was altogether iniquitous in spirit. In fact, there are some similarities between this transgression and that of Eve in the garden.

There are at least five parallels here, and each one is worthy of noting. All of these presume the presence and

The original deception of Eve and the transgression of Ananias both occurred at the beginning of an era. At that time, things were pure, and no defilement had yet entered. This should teach us not to trust in beginnings, but in the One who Himself is “the Beginning” influence of the wicked one, who is ever seeking to destroy the people of God.

- The original deception of Eve and the transgression of Ananias both occurred at the beginning of an era . At that time, things were pure, and no defilement had yet entered. This should teach us not to trust in beginnings, but in the One who Himself is “the Beginning” (Rev 22:13).

- Both sins had to do with appearance – things that could be seen with the natural eye – the fruit of a tree, and the fruit of man’s labor. Neither of them appeared to be dangerous according to appearance.

- A decision was required in both cases. Temptation was leveled at the parties by the devil, but they had to decide to yield to his influence. Neither of them were captured by brute force, but by deception.

- In both cases, the transgression of the one was shared with the spouses: Eve gave the fruit to Adam, and Sapphira consented to the sin of Ananias.

- Both transgressions resulted in death. In both cases, the parties involved suffered death. Their’s was a “sin unto death” (Rom 6:16; 1 John 5:16).

The Strategy Seen in the Revelation

This also parallels the strategy of the devil as depicted in the Revelation. There he is also seen as aggressive at the beginning, or as soon as he was aware of what was happening. The twelfth chapter contains the following pictures.

- Satan stood before the woman, ready to devour her child as soon as it was born. “. . .and the dragon stood before the woman which was ready to be delivered, for to devour her child as soon as it was born” (Rev 12:4).

- As soon as Satan was cast into the earth, he set out to persecute the woman. “And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child” (Rev 12:13).

- As soon as the woman began to be nourished, the serpent cast out a flood to destroy her. “And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood” (Rev 12:15).

The devil was frustrated in all of his efforts, never able to fully accomplish what he intended. He made inroads into human activity, but was not able to subvert the purpose of God.

The Strategy Seen in Israel’s Beginning

The same was true in the case of Israel. We have no record of them murmuring until the time of their deliverance came. It was then that they objected to Moses’ intrusion into, what they conceived to be, their affairs (Ex 2:14). After their exodus from Egypt, when they faced the Red Sea, they said they wanted to go back and serve the Egyptians (Ex 14:12). When they found only bitter waters in the wilderness, they murmured (Ex 15:23). Prior to the Lord sending them manna, when they ran out food, they again murmured against the Lord (Ex 16:1-20). Once again, when they could find no water at all, they also murmured (Ex 17:2-3). All of this was at the beginning of their trek to Canaan, and after officially becoming a covenanted people.

This was all the evidence of Satan, seeking to thwart Israel’s entrance into Canaan. He was not able to fulfill his objectives. However, God did fulfill His purpose.

Seen In Zerubbabel’s Experience

When Zerubbabel was stirred up by the Lord (Hag 1:14), and “began to build the house of God” (Ezra 5:2), the beginning proved to be very challenging. The people did not cooperate, spending more time on their own houses than on the house of the Lord (Hag 1:2). The heart of Zerubbabel grew faint, and he became discouraged with the beginning of the work. It did not appear to even be getting off the ground, so to speak. God sent him two prophets, Haggai and Zechariah, to strengthen his hand in the Lord (Ezra 5:1-2).

God sent His prophets to Zerubbabel to admonish him not to despise the day of “small things,” or “small beginnings.” NAB They assured him the work would be finished, just as God had said – and, indeed, that is precisely what happened: “this house was finished on the third day of the month of Adar, which was kin the sixth year of the reign of Darius” (Ezra 6:15). Satan tried to stop the work from its beginning, but was not able to do so.

Written for Our Admonition

The records of the covenanted people have been provided “for our admonition” (1 Cor 10:11), and “for our learning” (Rom 15:4). Not only do they provide a sterling example of the nature of the flesh, but they also speak of both Divine and Satanic activity. They confirm God’s wisdom, Satan’s craftiness, man’s weakness, and our need for Divine guidance and empowerment. From the very dawn of human history, Satan has opposed holy beginnings. It should not surprise us that he did the very same thing when Jesus began building His church (Matt 16:18). His efforts, however, will not produce the results he desires.

IT WAS THEIRS, AND THEY COULD DO WHAT THEY WANTED

“4a Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power?”

Peter now reasons with Ananias, but he does not do so to persuade him. He will rather set the stage for the Lord to receive glory and honor in this matter. Because of the nature of the transgression, and the circumstances under which it was committed, recovery is not possible. This will be confirmed by what follows.

Those who flirt with sin, willingly providing a place in which Satan can work, must learn from this incident. This was an example of tempting the Lord – seeing how far one could go in testing Divine tolerance and longsuffering. Such efforts are sinful, as both covenants confirm. In the law it is written, “Ye shall not tempt the LORD your God, as ye tempted him in Massah” (Deut 6:16). It was at Massah, when the people encountered bitter water that it is written, “the people did chide with Moses, and said, Give us water that we may drink. And Moses said unto them, Why chide ye with me? wherefore do ye tempt the LORD?” (Ex 17:1-2).

Those in Christ are also reminded concerning tempting the Lord: “Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of serpents” (1 Cor 10:9). And again, “Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness: when your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years” (Heb 3:9). Once more it is written, “Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than he?” (1 Cor 10:22).

After everything has been said about how much God loves every soul, how He has good plans for us, and wants us to have the best of everything, we must consider the text before us – the case of Ananias and Sapphira.

IN SENSE, IT BELONGED TO YOU

“Whiles it remained, was it not thine own?” Other versions read, “While

I want to emphasize that Ananias’ decision would not be considered a serious matter in the average church. It might be considered unwise, or dishonest, but not worthy of as much attention as Peter is giving to the issue. However, this is a serious matter because it revealed a lack of the fear of the Lord, and of faith as well.

it remained unsold, did it not remain your own ?” NASB “Didn’t it belong to you before it was sold?” NIV “While it remained unsold, did it not remain your own ?,” NRSV “While you had it, was it not your property ?,” BBE “the property was yours to sell or not sell, as you wished ,” NLT and “ before you sold the field , it belonged to you.” IE

This confirms that the selling of their goods was not something compulsory for the early church. It was not driven by the presence of need, but by “the law of Christ,” which has love and faith as its primary pillars (Gal 6:2,6). There was not an inexorable law that required all believers to meet the needs of their brethren. This was a matter addressed by brotherly love and kindness, not by law.

Thus Peter reminds Ananias that as long as the land remained in his care, he could have done with it what he pleased. He did not have to sell it. Yet, when he chose to do so, and to associate that sale with the people and work of the Lord, personal preferences had to be mortified. Selfish interests and godly interests cannot be served by the same action. If something is given to God, self-will is taken out of the picture.

YOU COULD HAVE HANDLED THE MONEY AS YOU SAW FIT

“ . . . and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power?” Other versions read, “And after it was sold, was it not in your own control ?,” NKJV “And after it was sold, wasn't the money at your disposal ?,” NIV “and after you had given it in exchange, was it not still in your power ?” BBE “After it was sold, you could have done as you pleased with the money,” GWN “And when sold, again thou hadst authority over the price of it ,” MRD “and having been sold, in thy authority was it not ?,” YLT “Even after you sold it, you could have used the money any way you wanted ,” IE “And [even] after it was sold, was not [the money] at your disposal and under your control ?” AMPLIFIED and “and after the sale the disposal of the price you received was entirely in your hands , wasn't it?” PHILLIPS

Once again, neither the apostles nor the church had required that the complete proceeds of anything sold were to be given to the apostles. If Ananias had said he had decided to give nothing, he would not have been confronted by Peter in this manner. Neither would this confrontation have been necessary if Ananias had said he was giving a part of the proceeds, doing so cheerfully and with a pure heart.

How he handled the proceeds was entirely at his discretion. That is, if he had sold the property purely as a business transaction, then he could have used the money in any way he saw fit. Peter even suggests that after he sold the property, he could have diverted some of the funds for his personal use, as long as he had stated this was the case. However, when he said he was bringing the whole of the proceeds for distribution as every man had need, that changed the whole matter.

I want to emphasize that Ananias’ decision would not be considered a serious matter in the average church. It might be considered unwise, or dishonest, but not worthy of as much attention as Peter is giving to the issue. However, this is a serious matter because it revealed a lack of the fear of the Lord, and of faith as well. Nothing that is represented as being done unto the Lord is minor. Anything and everything that is associated with His name gets the attention of heaven. Such things are expected to be precisely what they are represented as being. If it is giving, it is to be done cheerfully and to the Lord (2 Cor 9:7). If it is singing, it is to be done with grace in the heart unto the Lord, while the word of Christ is dwelling in us richly (Col 3:16). If it is living itself, it is to be done in self denial, carrying the cross, and following Jesus (Matt 16:24; 2 Cor 5:15). If it is dying, it is to be done “unto the Lord” (Rom 14:8).

Here we are confronted with the sin of hypocrisy – of pretending to be something that one is not. In this case, Ananias pretended to have sold his property with the Lord in mind, then given all of the proceeds to His work, as Barnabas did.

This type of conduct is resident in the wisdom of the world, and is wholly incompatible with the wisdom that comes down from above – which wisdom is “without hypocrisy” (James 3:17). The wisdom of this world, which is the only wisdom possessed by the natural man, is always thinking of personal worldly advantage. The spiritual man is always thinking of the glory of God.

You may recall how sternly Jesus spoke to hypocrites, pronouncing repeated woes upon them (Matt 15:7; 16:3; 22:18; 23:13,14,15,23,25,27,28,29). Solemnly He told His disciples, “be not as the hypocrites” (Matt 6:2,5,16). We are told that a hypocrite shall not come before the Lord – that is, in a state of approval (Job 13:16). The tabernacles of hypocrites will be left desolate (Job 15:34). Isaiah declared that “the vile person” is the one who is a hypocrite (Isa 32:6). Yet here, in the early church, this dreadful sin is found among them.

No body of believers must live as though they were insulated against the attacks of the wicked one, or that he cannot penetrate the thinking of some of their members. We can never take faith for granted, or imagine that we can enter a spiritual coasting mode while we remain in the body. It is not in vain that we are admonished, “Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world” (1 Pet 5:8-9). Men who do not take this adversary seriously are very foolish, and they are sure to be overcome by him. Believers cannot live casually!

It is true that we are also reminded, “Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world” (1 John 4:4). However, the presence of this gracious Guest, the Holy Spirit, must not be confronted with disinterested souls who grieve and quench Him. In such a case, the blessing of the Spirit will not be experienced by the individual, and he will consequently be overcome – like Ananias.

SIN WAS CONCEIVED IN THE HEART, AND THE LIE WAS TO GOD

“4b . . . why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.”

Here we will see a fulfillment of something Jesus told His disciples they would do. “Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven”

Peter continues to reveal what has actually taken place in the heart of Ananias. The Holy Spirit has made this known to Peter, for “what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him?” (1 Cor 2:11). Here we will see a fulfillment of something Jesus told His disciples they would do. “Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven” (Mat 18:18). What Peter says will be fully implemented, confirming that the power of Christ was resting upon him. Today, there are some men who say they are binding and loosing things upon the earth, but it is largely nothing more than talk. Peter’s words are with both discernment and power.

CONCEIVED IN THE HEART

“ . . . why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart?” Other versions read, “What made you think of doing such a thing ?” NIV “How is it that you have contrived this deed in your heart?” NRSV “how has this purpose come into your mind ?” BBE “Why is it that you planned this thing in your heart?,” CSB “So how could you do a thing like this?,” GWN “Why hast thou set thy heart to do this purpose ?” MRD “How have you thought up this deed in your heart?” NET “What put this scheme into your mind ?” NJB “How could you do a thing like this ?” NLT “why is it that thou didst put in thy heart this thing?” YLT “ Why did you think of doing this evil thing?” IE “How is it that you have cherished this design in your heart?” WEYMOUTH “How could you have the heart to do such a thing!” WILLIAMS “Why then, is it that you have proposed and purposed in your heart to do this thing? [How could you have the heart to do such a deed?]” AMPLIFIED and “Then whatever made you think of such a thing as this?” PHILLIPS

On the one hand, Peter said Satan filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Spirit (5:3). Now he asks Ananias why HE conceived of this deed. From this we see that Satan works in those who make themselves available to him, taking them captive at his will (2 Tim 2:26), and working in them (Eph 2:2).

Second, sin is always unreasonable – totally nonsensical. That is why Peter challenged Ananias with the word, “Why?” The land was his. The choice of what to do with the proceeds from its sale was his. There was no compulsion placed upon him by the apostles to do this thing. It was not a requirement of the collective brethren. Ananias could have resisted the devil. He could have told the truth concerning the whole transaction.

Add to this some of the things he could have done – things that everyone in Christ can do.

- He could have asked for wisdom from the Lord for the occasion (James 1:5).
- He could have sought for grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16).
- He could have followed the Spirit’s leading to mortify the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13).
- He could have drawn nigh to God, and then resisted the devil (James 4:7).
- He could have considered his ways (Hag 1:5,7).
- He could have responded to the grace of God that teaches men to deny ungodliness (Tit 2:11-12).
- He could have set his affection on things above instead of on things upon the earth (Col 3:1-2).
- He could have called upon the name of the Lord and been delivered (Rom 10:13).
- He could have avoided the appearance of evil (1 Thess 5:22).
- He could have preferred the brethren over himself (Rom 12:10).
- He could have put on the new man and put off the old man (Eph 4:22-24).
- He could have sought and found the way of escape that comes with every temptation (1 Cor 10:13).
- He could have refused to make a place for Satan (Eph 4:27).
- He could have been sober and vigilant (1 Pet 5:8).
- He could have “put on the whole armor of God,” and thus been able to stand in the evil day (Eph 6:10-18).
- He could have made “no provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof” (Rom 13:14).

The question was a rhetorical one, like the one God asked Adam: “Hast thou eaten of the tree?” Or the one He asked Cain: “Why art thou wroth?” A rhetorical question is actually one in which no answer is expected. It is rather asked for effect – in this case to emphasize the absolute foolishness of what was done.

It is really not as easy for a Christian to sin as some allege. Some aver that all one has to do is nothing – but that is not true! Failing to do the things I have just mentioned is not synonymous with doing nothing . It is rather doing something other than what ought to be done. A person does not sin, or plan to sin, by doing nothing, but by doing something. They choose to walk in the flesh, listen to the wrong voice, and put their affection in the wrong place.

When Peter asked Ananias, “Why is it that you have conceived this deed in your heart?” NASB he was not seeking an answer. The question was a rhetorical one, like the one God asked Adam: “Hast thou eaten of the tree?” (Gen 3:11). Or the one He asked Cain: “Why art thou wroth?” (Gen 4:6). A rhetorical question is actually one in which no answer is expected. It is rather asked for effect – in this case to emphasize the absolute foolishness of what was done. Ananias’ deed was done with thought and careful planning and deliberation. Then it was carried out in meticulous detail and without any evidence of shame or a twinge of conscience.

LYING TO GOD

“. . . thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God.” Other versions read, “You did not lie to us , but to God!” NRSV “you have been false, not to men, but to God,” BBE “You didn't lie to people but to God!” GWN “Thou hast not lied against men , but against God,” MRD “You have lied not to human beings , but to God,” NAB “You have been lying not to men , but to God,” NJB “It is not to men you have told this lie , but to God,” WEYMOUTH and “You have not [simply] lied to men [playing false and showing yourself utterly deceitful] but to God.” AMPLIFIED

On the surface, it certainly looked like Ananias was lying to men. I am sure that God was not in his mind when he delivered a thoroughly false view of what he was doing. Although it is true that this man sought to deceive men, yet that was not his crowning sin, and Peter knew it. At the root of the matter, sin is against God himself, the Creator and Sustainer of all men. That is why David, when convicted in his heart concerning the incident with Bathsheba, cried out to the Lord, “ Against Thee, Thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in Thy sight : that Thou mightest be justified when Thou speakest, and be clear when Thou judgest” (Psa 51:4).

When Israel murmured against Moses and Aaron, the Lord said they had “gathered together against the Lord ” (Num 16:11). When Israel rejected Samuel, their aging judge, the Lord told Samuel, “they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me ” (1 Sam 8:7).

Ananias had not transgressed an apostolic commandment, for they had not issued one in regard to this matter. God Himself is the One who said, “Thou shalt not bear false witness” (Ex 20:16). Again He said, “. . . neither deal falsely, neither lie one to another” (Lev 19:11). Jesus also confirmed this commandment: “Thou shalt not bear false witness” (Matt 19:18). Ananias, however, chose to ignore this word, and even planned to do so, conceiving sin in his heart, and then carrying it out.

The only way to arm the church against such intrusions is to deliver the truth, for only the knowledge of the truth makes men free. In this regard, the church is the appointed “pillar and ground of the truth.” Whatever the church may or may not get done, this is its fundamental work – to make the truth known! It is to set forth an accurate view of both God and Christ.

As the fifty-first Psalm indicates, this constituted doing evil in God’s sight, or sinning in His face, so to speak. It likewise involved judging God, as also declared in David’s confession. That is, Ananias evaluated his own judgment above that of the Lawgiver Himself! Of course, in order to commit sin, this is what a person has to do – he has to give the greater weight to his personal view, and the lesser weight to the word of the Lord.

Seeking to Deceive God

Lying to God is nothing less than an attempt to deceive Him. There are several ways that this can be done.

- First, sin assumes that it will not be detected by God, and thus the person will not be called into account for it. Deceived souls reason, “The Lord seeth us not” (Ezek 8:12). Thus, when Israel tried to hide their counsel from the Lord, they reasoned in their hearts, “Who seeth us? and who knoweth us?” (Isa 29:15). Sensitive souls, however, know such a thought is nothing more than a delusion. That is why David wrote, “For there is not a word in my tongue, but, lo, O LORD, Thou knowest it altogether ” (Psa 139:4).

- Second, in order to sin, a false view of God must be embraced – a view in which it is thought that sin is not repulsive to God, and that He will not respond adversely to it. Israel had this attitude when they dishonored the Lord with unacceptable sacrifices. In insolence they said, “Wherein have we despised Thy name?” and “Wherein have we polluted Thee?” (Mal 1:6-7). When God charged them with robbing him, they replied, “Wherein have we robbed Thee?” (Mal 3:8). How is it that they could reason in such a manner – one that was diametrically opposed to the Divine assessment of their condition? It was because they had an improper view of God.

As shown above, neither of these false postulates is true. God not only beholds the actions of men, but weighs them in the balance of Divine judgment. As it is written, “the LORD is a God of knowledge, and by Him actions are weighed ” (1 Sam 2:3). Yet, Satan so deceives the hardened heart that the one who is sinning reasons that either his sin will not be detected, or that God will be gentle and forbearing when He sees it. Both views are dangerously wrong, as this incident will confirm.

The incident of Ananias and Sapphira took place when the people were being submitted to “sound doctrine” and the preaching of “all the counsel of God” (Acts 2:42; 20:27; 1 Tim 1:10). While it is true that this was a most unusual occurrence, it does confirm the intrusive nature of the flesh.

The only way to arm the church against such intrusions is to deliver the truth, for only the knowledge of the truth makes men free (John 8:32). In this regard, the church is the appointed “pillar and ground of the truth” (1 Tim 3:15). Whatever the church may or may not get done, this is its fundamental work – to make the truth known! It is to set forth an accurate view of both God and Christ. It is to assist men in obtaining a proper view of both the nature and purpose of God. If the church does not do that, it makes no difference what else it may appear to be doing.

God has declared Himself to be “a God of truth” (Deut 32:4). That is, not only does the truth issue forth from Him, but He works within the context of truth. Nothing in all of Scripture suggests that God works for the good of people within the context of a lie, or the misrepresentation of His Person. And, where is there an insightful person who does not know there are serious falsifications of God within the church. Let me remind you of a few of them.

- That God’s love is unconditional, even though Jesus declared it was conditional (John 14:21,23; 16:27).

- That God gravitates to praise, even though the actions of the people themselves are not “thankworthy” (1 Pet 2:19).

- That if people are winning souls, that offsets every other moral and spiritual condition – when God has declared walking “worthy of God” is the critical factor (1 Thess 2:12).

- That God desperately wants to be part of every person’s life, when reconciliation is clearly declared to be that of man to God, not God to man (Col 1:20-21).

- That God has established certain inexorable laws for good that will be fulfilled in every person, whether they are true worshipers or now – when God has declared “unto them that are defiled and unbelieving is nothing pure” (Tit 1:15).

- That God is tolerant of an ignorance of Himself – even though that is the kind of ignorance that alienates people “from the life of God” (Eph 4:18).

- That God does not require holiness – even though He has affirmed of holiness, “without which no man shall see the Lord” (Heb 12:14).

- That a person can remain in a state of spiritual juvenility, and still be acceptable to God – even though we are told that failing to go on to perfection leads to falling away and perdition (Heb 6:1-6; 10:38-39).

Add to this the fact that only Jesus really knows who the Father is, and that He must “will” to reveal Him to a person before they can know Him. As Jesus said, “Nor does anyone know the Father except the Son, and the one to whom the Son wills to reveal Him” NKJV (Mat 11:27). If, therefore, a person does not know God, or is unacquainted with His ways, Jesus has not instructed him. If that person has been in an environment in which Jesus has been obviously teaching and working (as in our text), then they have ignored the teaching Jesus, choosing their own way over His.

Remove the truth from the picture, and the new birth, growth, and spiritual stability are rendered impossible. Men cannot be established with a lie, or bear fruit unto God by means of misrepresentations of Him.

First, if the religious environment has not been one in which Jesus is teaching and working, then it is because the truth has not been set forth – for Jesus always teaches and works within the context of truth. In that case, both the church leaders and the ones who are ignorant will be held in account. Because the blind led the blind, they both will fall into the ditch. Jesus said of the false leaders of his day, “Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch” (Matt 15:14). The injunction “Let them alone” means “Leave them,” NIV “ignore them,” NLT and “disregard them.” AMPLIFIED The reason for getting away from them ought to be obvious. First, they are a living contradiction to the fact that the church is “the pillar and ground of the truth.”

Second, God does not root and ground His people through a defective message and emphasis. This is because true growth is preceded by speaking “the truth in love” (Eph 4:15). It also is the direct result of being taught by Christ “as the truth is in Jesus” (Eph 4:21). Remove the truth from the picture, and the new birth, growth, and spiritual stability are rendered impossible. Men cannot be established with a lie, or bear fruit unto God by means of misrepresentations of Him.

All of this ought to be readily apparent, and require no further proof. If God allowed any form of genuine life to be initiated or maintained by means of a lie, He would have to deny Himself – and that is something that simply is not possible (2 Tim 2:13). These are matters that must be declared by teachers and be pondered by the elect.

ANANIAS DIES AND IS BURIED

“5 And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things. 6 And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.”

The words of Peter have been strong. Will the God of heaven stand behind them? Has the transgression of Ananias really been as serious as the insightful assessment of Peter suggests? Is this occasion nothing more than an exchange of opinions? Or is this actually a revelation of an unacceptable condition? In a time such as ours, when religious is largely powerless, and the Lord is not obviously at work within the professing church, it becomes easy to say, “That is just your opinion.” Or, “I cannot agree with what you have said.” Or, “That is not the way I see it.” But in an environment charged with the presence of the Lord that will not always be the case. The more God is evident, the more clearly His work will be seen. The more the name of the Lord is at stake, the more likely it is that contradicting conduct will be judged. There is no law, or principle, revealed on this matter. It is possible for Herod to kill James, and the council to have Stephen stoned. However, when it is essential for the propagation of the truth, and the execution of the purpose of God (things He alone knows), we can count on Him to judge sin. Such a case is before us.

ANANIAS FELL DOWN AND GAVE UP THE GHOST

“And Ananias hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost . . .” Other versions read, “Then Ananias, hearing these words, fell down and breathed his last,” NKJV “When Ananias heard this, he fell down and died,” NIV “And at these words, Ananias went down on the earth, and his life went from him,” BBE “When he heard these words, Ananias dropped dead,” CSB “and Ananias, hearing these words, fell down and expired,” DARBY “When Ananias heard these words he collapsed and died,” NET “As soon as Ananias heard these words, he fell to the floor and died,” NLT and “As soon as Ananias heard these words, he fell to the floor, dead!” LIVING

Remember, this is an account of a “sin unto death” (1 John 5:16) – that is, a sin that led to death, which could not be averted. John reminds us that prayer has no point in such cases: “There is a sin [that leads] to death; I do not say that one should pray for that.” AMPLIFIED

In his words to Ananias, Peter was not calling him to repentance, and Jesus gave him no space at this time to repent. There are times when such “space” is granted (Rev 2:21), but men cannot insist that such an allotment of time be given to them. There is a sense in which any and every sin can potentially lead to instant death – as in this case. Men ought to keep this in mind when they are assaulted with temptations. It will assist them in standing against the wiles of the devil.

Ananias Heard Peter’s Words

There is a sense in which any and every sin can potentially lead to instant death – as in this case. Men ought to keep this in mind when they are assaulted with temptations. It will assist them in standing against the wiles of the devil.

It seems to me that the manner of Peter’s speech, and the remarkable level of insight that he had been given, must have captured the attention of Ananias. It would have been exceedingly difficult for him to be indifferent at that time. This is because there is a certain weightiness to the spoken truth that penetrates to man’s inner being.

An example of this is Paul’s reasoning with Felix concerning “righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come.” Upon hearing those words, “Felix trembled.” However, in spite of that trembling, he opted to not respond to Paul’s words. He thought it best to wait for a “more convenient season” (Acts 24:25). So far as the record is concerned, that season never came. Again, when Paul reasoned with Agrippa, the king responded, “Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian” (Acts 26:28).

The words delivered to Ananias were also weighty and powerful – but they were not intended to provoke repentance. The point to see here is that, contrary to all fleshly inclinations, Ananias did not speak so much as a word in the defense of his deceptive deed. Neither was he gripped with contrition of heart – at least there was no indication of such a reaction. You can rest assured he was not indifferent to what Peter said to him. It will become apparent that this judgment was primarily for the sake of those who saw it and heard about it.

Ananias Falls Down Dead

Here a case where heaven stood solidly behind Peter's inspired assessment of the case. Ananias did not drop dead due to natural causes. This was a judgment from God. There are numerous judgments record in Scripture that are of this order. Here are a few examples.

The Ungodly In the World Slain

There are several instances of the wicked who had no covenant association with God being judged unto death.

- THE FLOOD. The judgment of the entire world at the time of Noah. "Every man" died as a result of Divine judgment, with the exception "eight souls" (Gen 7:21; 1 Pet 3:20).
- SODOM AND GOMORRAH. The cities of Sodom and Gomorrah and "the cities of the plain" were decimated by fire and brimstone, together with "all the inhabitants" (Gen 19:24-25).
- ONAN. The Lord "slew" Onan because he "did the thing which displeased the Lord" (Gen 38:9).
- THE FIRSTBORN IN EGYPT. The firstborn of all of Egypt were smitten dead in the last plague the Lord leveled upon Egypt – "all the firstborn in the land of Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the firstborn of the captive that was in the dungeon; and all the firstborn of cattle" (Ex 12:29).
- PHARAOH'S ARMIES. Pharaoh and his armies were drowned in the Red Sea at the direction of God (Ex 14:28; 15:4).
- THE ARMIES OF THE AMORITES. Great numbers of the Amorite armies were killed with "large hailstones from heaven" (Josh 10:11).
- KING HEROD. King Herod was smitten dead for receiving honor that was due only to the God of heaven (Acts 12:23).

Death Judgments Among the Covenanted People of God

There have also been judgments of death ministered from heaven against those who were numbered among the covenanted people of God. Here are a few examples.

- NADAB AND ABIHU. Nadab and Abihu, sons of Aaron, were killed with fire from heaven because they offered "strange fire" upon the altar (Lev 10:1-2).
- THE UNFAITHFUL SPIES. The men who brought up an evil report when they spied out the land of promise, "died by the plague before the Lord" (Num 14:37).
- AN INSURRECTION AGAINST MOSES. 14,700 men died because of an insurrection that was raised up against Moses (Num 16:49).
- FIERY SERPENTS SENT. "Much people of Israel died" in the judgment of fiery serpents, sent among them by the Lord because they murmured (Num 21:6).
- AN OUTBREAK OF IMMORALITY IN ISRAEL. 24,000 Israelites died because of an outbreak of whoredom with "the daughters of Moab" (Num 25:9).
- KORAH'S INSURRECTION. In the insurrection of Korah against Moses, the earth opened up and swallowed them, with an additional 250 men being devoured by fire (Num 26:10).

• THE ISRAELITE BELIEVE A FALSE REPORT. 600,550 Israelites died in the wilderness because they believed a false report concerning the promised land (Num 1:44-45; 14:22-23,29,32-33; Heb 3:17).

• THE BENJAMITES. 25,100 of the Benjamites were killed because “they trusted unto the liars in wait which they had set beside Gibeah” (Judges 20:35).

• THE CASE OF UZZAH. The Lord was “kindled against” Uzzah because he touched the ark of the covenant, and “smote him” so that “he died by the ark of God” (2 Sam 7).

• KING SAUL. King Saul “died for his transgression which he committed against the Lord” – specifically in asking counsel from a woman with a familiar spirit (1 Chron 10:13-14).

• THE CORINTHIANS. The Lord caused some in Corinth to die because of their conduct at the table of the Lord (1 Cor 11:30).

Some Conclusions

What takes place in our text should not be counted as a strange thing. The Scriptures clearly make known a God who is wholly intolerant of sin. They also reveal that He does judge iniquity in this world as He deems best.

The “true God” (John 17:3) can react in the manner made known in our

In this day, we have a situation similar to a time in the history of Israel. It is said of that period, “Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law.” God had certainly not ceased to exist, but he was no longer being proclaimed to any measurable degree.

text, and we cannot afford to be ignorant of that fact. In this day, we have a situation similar to a time in the history of Israel. It is said of that period, “Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law” (2 Chron 15:3). God had certainly not ceased to exist, but he was no longer being proclaimed to any measurable degree. Today, people have been led to believe that the “God of love and peace” (2 Cor 13:11) is limited to that description. However, in that capacity, God is promised ONLY to those who give heed to this admonition: “Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you” (2 Cor 13:11) – or, “and [THEN] the God of love . . . will be with you,” AMPLIFIED or “And then God who gives love and peace will be with you.” WEYMOUTH

In this text, not only are we being exposed to genuine faith and legitimate spiritual life, the “true God” (1 John 5:20) is also being made known, as well as the real “Head of the body” (Col 1:18).

Babylon the Great has seriously distorted both God and Christ, so that neither is known to any significant degree within the professing church. In our text, sinners were the exception within the church. In our day, it is the godly who are the exception. We do well to be aware of these things, and to arm ourselves for that situation. It is a dangerous one.

GREAT FEAR CAME ON THOSE WHO HEARD

“ . . . and great fear came on all them that heard these things.” Other versions read, “And great fear seized all who heard what had happened,” NIV “and great fear came on all who were present,” BBE “Everyone who heard about his death was terrified,” GWN “and great fear gripped all who heard about it,” NET “Everyone was terrified,” LIVING “Everyone who heard about this was filled with fear,” IE “and all who heard the words were awe-struck,” WEYMOUTH “and a strange awe seized everybody who heard it,” WILLIAMS “And great dread and terror took possession of all who heard of it,” AMPLIFIED and “All who were within earshot were appalled at this incident.” PHILLIPS

There are two ways in which this text can be understood.

- First, it may be thought that this was a private incident, involving only Peter and Ananias, and during which no one else was present. In this case, when the word got out to the rest the saints, great fear took hold of them.
- Second, this matter took place before witnesses, who saw and heard what took place. In this case, the fear seized the ones who were in attendance when the confrontation of Ananias and his death took place.

I am persuaded that the latter is the meaning. That is, there were witnesses present, and fear took hold of them when they heard what Peter said, and saw Ananias drop dead. Two versions represent this meaning: “all who heard the words ,” WEYMOUTH and “all who were within earshot .” PHILLIPS The literal rendering of the text is “heard these [things IMPLIED],” NOT “heard OF these things.” The fact that these things were later said to have been reported to those outside of the immediate surroundings (verse 11), justifies the view that this verse is speaking about those with a first-hand knowledge of what took place.

Although I have made mention of this in a previous lesson, it seems to me that it should also be accented here. As used in this text, the word “fear” is a noun, not a verb. That is, this was something that came upon and seized the people. This was not a mere human reaction, as some versions suggest i.e., “was terrified,” NLT “were appalled.” PHILLIPS This fear is something that originated outside of men, came upon them, and took hold of them, or seized them. This was not something within the control of men. Those who heard with any degree of understanding were seized by this fear. It was not like the fear of a wild beast or threatening storm. All of the standard versions read “fear came .” Other versions expand the word owing to the fact that in the English there is no adequate noun for “fear,” as used in Scripture: “fear seized ,” NIV/NRSV “fear gripped ,” NET “awe- struck ,” WEYMOUTH “strange awe seized ,” WILLIAMS “great dread and terror took possession ,” AMPLIFIED

Remember, there were people there who were filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 4:31). They were of “one heart and one soul,” and were living selfless lives, wholly devoted to the Lord, and great grace was upon them (Acts 4:32-35). Yet, a certain terror gripped them when they heard and saw the judgment of the Lord.

The Missing Perception

Here is an aspect of the Lord that is largely unperceived in our day. There is a certain dread that accompanies the immediate presence of the Lord, or the perception of that presence through some judgment coming from Him. David depicted this in most vivid language. “Clouds and darkness are round about Him: righteousness and judgment are the habitation of His throne. A fire goeth before Him, and burneth up His enemies round about” (Psa 97:2-3). This is precisely why Moses, to whom God spoke face to face, feared and quaked in the presence of the Lord (Acts 7:32; Heb 12:21). It is why Habakkuk “trembled” in himself when he heard a word of judgment directly from the Lord (Hab 3:16). It is why the centurion “feared greatly” when Jesus died, and he was convinced He was the Son of God (Matt 27:54). This is the reason the three disciples, who had personally witnessed the transfiguration of Jesus, and Moses and Elijah speaking with him, “feared as they entered into the cloud,” in which God addressed them personally (Lk 9:34-35).

No one has ever been keenly aware of the presence of the Lord, or of His focus on the place they occupy, and been casual about it. After Jacob had encountered the Lord in a dream he awakened and said, “Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not” (Gen 28:16). It is written that “he was afraid, and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven” (Gen 28:17) – and that was his response to a blessed confrontation!

Today, we are being introduced to a “God” that bares the characteristics of a congenial grandfather who has no real hatred for anything, and is scarcely capable of becoming angry. However, this is not the God we see in the book of Acts.

Some people associate the presence of the Almighty with tingling sensations, carnal surprise, and fleshly curiosity. Such reactions, however, are evidence of spiritual blindness and ignorance, not of wisdom and spiritual understanding. No person in the body, however tenured in spiritual life, can knowingly be in the presence of God without experiencing the gripping reality of fear. That is the result of being in a body that cannot survive Divine confrontation, for “flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God” (1 Cor 15:50), and, as God Himself said, “there shall no man see Me and live” (Ex 33:20).

A measure of the legitimacy of any body of professed believers is their response to the awareness of the Lord. If they are prone to question His requirements, stagger at His judgements, and be angry with Him when things do not go their way, they are not thinking of the real God. Such people have, in fact, embraced an idol – a God that has not been taught by Jesus. Thus John concludes his first epistle by saying, “And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know Him that is true, and we are in Him that is true, even in His Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life. Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen” (1 John 5:21). An “idol” is any God other than the One Jesus leads us to “know.”

The brethren in our text were keenly aware of the God who “is true.”

THE YOUNG MEN BURIED HIM

“ . . . And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.” Other versions read, “And the young men arose and wrapped him up, carried him out, and buried him.,” NKJV “And the young men arose and covered him up, and after carrying him out, they buried him,” NASB “Then the young men came forward, wrapped up his body, and carried him out and buried him,” NIV “And the young men went and made ready his body, and took it out, and put it in the earth,” BBE “And the young men, rising up, swathed him up for burial, and having carried him out, buried him,” DARBY “Some young men got up, wrapped his body in a sheet, carried him outside, and buried him,” GWN and “The young men got to their feet and after wrapping up his body carried him out and buried him.” PHILLIPS

The dispatch with which these young men operated is arresting.

- They got up.
- They came forward.
- They found Ananias dead.
- They wrapped his body.
- They carried him outside.
- They buried him.

All of that required thought, perception, and action. All of this took place while fear had seized, or gripped them. This was not, then, a paralyzing fear. It was rather a motivating one. Immediately these men knew to get the dead body out of the church, or away from those who were alive unto God. They knew that the body of Ananias had to be placed out of sight. It no longer could remain among the living.

These were “the young men,” not the old men. They were obviously discerning and devoted. They apparently knew what to do, and did not need to be told. Their promptness indicates that they were privy to what had happened, hearing Peter’s words and beholding the collapse of Ananias. They were not stunned into a stupor, but aroused into action.

These are the kind of “young men” faith produces. The words “young men” come from the Greek word new,teroi , which means “younger people,” or youthful ones.” THAYER It covers a wide range of ages ranging from children with understanding, to those who are eligible for marriage. These younger brethren had not isolated themselves from the rest of the church, but were a part of it. They did not have a separate leader, but, with the others, were under the leadership of the apostles. They were familiar with the gatherings and activities of the people of God, as this text confirms.

One wonders how “the young men” of the average American church would respond to such an event. How would those enamored of entertainment, music, and games, react to a member of the church dropping dead before their eyes after hearing a scathing rebuke by a man of God? Well, the text before us records precisely how such persons reacted when the church had not been defiled with all manner of erroneous instruction and false doctrine. No divisions existed in the church at this time, and they were all together with one accord. Think of a new youth ministry such as that of our text – carrying out and burying the dead ones. Given today’s situation, that could be very demanding!

SAPPHIRA IS QUESTIONED

“ 7 And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in. 8 And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.”

The seriousness of this occasion can be measured in part by the Lord’s extended judgment of it. It does not conclude with the stern rebuke and death of Ananias. A further confirmation will be given of the total intolerance of God for sin, and the unacceptability of it within the body of Christ. Actually, men should be able to deduce this from the very nature of salvation. If God could endure even the minuscule presence of sin (if there be such a thing), why would there even be a need for forgiveness, justification, and the advocacy and intercession of Jesus Christ? Why would there be a need for the new birth, sanctification, and the mortification of the deeds of the body if God could tolerate sin in any measure? However, the entrance of sin into the human race brought a certain obtuseness toward God, and thus, even among the saved, a point must be made of the repulsiveness of sin to the holy and eternal God.

THE SPACE OF THREE HOURS

This is a miniature picture of day of judgment, when all men will be called into account for what they have done, whether it be good or bad.

“And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in . . .” Other versions read, “Now there elapsed an interval of about three hours , and his wife came in, not knowing what had happened,” NASB “And it fortuned as it were about the space of three hour after that his wife came in ignorant of that which was done ,” TNT “ About three hours later , the wife of Ananias came in, but she did not know what had happened to her husband,” IE and “About three hours later, his wife came in, without having learned what had taken place .”

WILLIAMS

Ananias, who apparently hatched this plan (for Satan had filled his heart), was not given space to repent. Instead, he died immediately upon hearing his wicked deed exposed. However, it appears that his wife was granted sufficient space to have repented of this deed – three hours. It was not a day or a week, but “about the space of three hours.” The incident was not forgotten because judgment had been poured out upon Ananias, but “about the space of three hours” was allotted before the matter was dealt with once again. During this time, sufficient time was granted for Sapphira to consider what had been done and repent of the deed.

Every advantage is given for an honest and good heart to surface. She did not know what had happened to her husband, so she could be prompted by any genuine love for the Lord and his people that she may have possessed. She was even brought in by herself, so there would be no intimidation from her husband.

Peter does not take for granted that Sapphira remains hardened. He earnestly seeks for an opportunity to show mercy, inquiring if the money Ananias had brought was the amount they had received for the land. He knew that Sapphira had been privy to the matter, being an accomplice in the determination.

This is a miniature picture of day of judgment, when all men will be called into account for what they have done, whether it be good or bad.

PETER ASKS THE QUESTION

“ . . . And Peter answered unto her, Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much?” Other versions read, “And Peter responded to her, ‘Tell me whether you sold the land for such and such a price ?’” NASB “Peter asked her, ‘Tell me, is this the price you and Ananias got for the land?’” NIV “And Peter answered her, Tell me if ye gave the estate for so much ?” DARBY “ Peter said to her, ‘Tell me, were the two of you paid this amount for the land ?’” NET and “‘Tell me, how much money did you receive for your field? Was it this much ?’” IE ” Other versions read, “And Peter responded to her, ‘Tell me whether you sold the land for such and such a price ?’” NASB “Peter asked her, ‘Tell me, is this the price you and Ananias got for the land?’” NIV “And Peter answered her, Tell me if ye gave the estate for so much,” DARBY “Peter said to her, ‘Tell me, were the two of you paid this amount for the land ?’” NET and “‘Tell me, how much money did you receive for your field? Was it this much ?’” IE

Peter does not take for granted that Sapphira remains hardened. He earnestly seeks for an opportunity to show mercy, inquiring if the money Ananias had brought was the amount they had received for the land. He knew that Sapphira had been privy to the matter, being an accomplice in the determination. The property had been sold by “Ananias, with Sapphira his wife” (5:1a). Further, a certain amount had been kept back for personal use, “his wife also being privy to it” (5:1b).

Some might consider this to be prying into private matters, and, ordinarily, such an inquiry would not have been launched. However, a statement had been made concerning what was given – that it was the whole price of the land. This was not the truth, and therefore Peter seeks confirmation of the complicity of Sapphira in the whole matter, at the same time providing an opportunity for her to reassess her involvement and repent of the deed.

Sapphira Agrees That Was the Price

“And she said, Yea, for so much.” Other versions read, “And she said, ‘Yes, that was the price ,” NASB “‘Yes,’ she said, ‘ that is the price ,’” NIV “And she said, Yes, for so much ,” DARBY “Sapphira said, ‘ Yes, that much ,’” NET and “‘Sapphira answered, ‘Yes, that was all we got for the field,’” IE

This will prove to be a dreadful error! To conspire to lie is one thing. It is still worse to proceed with the doing of it. But what can be said of a person who slams the door of escape in the face of the one making it available?

Here we see the hardening effect of sin upon the individual. The longer it is held within the heart, the more calloused the heart becomes. A certain proverb comes to mind in reading this account. “He, that being often reprov’d hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy” (Prov 29:1). In view of this, men ought to be quick to repent, and not provoke the Lord to anger, for He is stronger than us (1 Cor 10:22). In this case, the wife following her husband and submitting to his judgment will prove to be disastrous. Here, the wife will be responsible for her decision independently of her husband.

AGREEING AND TEMPTING THE SPIRIT

“9 Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out. 10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost: and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.”

There is a certain mind-set that is penetrating the modern church. It has a wholesome sound to it, yet it is punctured with many flaws. It is this – that the church is in the world to “help people.” By this men mean that the church is at its finest when it is assisting people with their difficulties, and helping them over situations which are many times the result of their own miserable choices. In fact, a considerable percentage of religious professionals are devoted to this very work – helping people resolve their problems. Theological schools have joined this enterprise by provided courses that equip and credential people for this purported ministry. We now have marriage counselors, financial advisors, life coaches, and a host of other professionals devoted to helping people recover from wrong choices.

When I question the validity of this kind of religious thrust, it will at once appear that I am heartless. It is assumed that this is a God-ordained work, and is more or less implied in the Gospel of Christ. “Hurting people” need help, we are told, and then reminded that is the work of the church. Behind this whole facade is an overemphasis of the importance of life in this world. If we approach life here without the perception that is it an allotted time in which we prepare for death, the day of judgment, and eternity, we will at once find ourselves on an uncharted sea.

How do you suppose these pseudo-professionals would have approached Ananias and Sapphira? Perhaps they would have assigned them to a four or six week course on Handling Your Finances, or How to Include God In Your Finances, or How to make sound decisions. Nothing of that sort is found here. I can tell you that there is not a person with a counseling mind-set in the world that would have considered the sin of Ananias and Sapphira to be one worthy of instant death. Anyone suggesting such a thing would be considered a religious bigot.

However, after men have philosophized about human difficulties and flawed decisions, we have a case before us that is provided by the Holy Spirit of God. The issues are spelled out in precise detail. The people involved are specified. The nature of the sin is declared, together with the results that were imposed by God. The whole matter is totally lacking of any mystery or ambiguity. All of this demands that we take the incident seriously.

WHY DID YOU AGREE TO TEMPT THE SPIRIT?

“Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord?” Other versions read, “How is it that you have agreed together to test the Spirit of the Lord ?” NKJV “Why is it that you have agreed together to put the Spirit of the Lord to the test ?” NASB “Why have you made an agreement together to be false to the Spirit of the Lord ?” BBE “How could the two of you even think of conspiring to test the Spirit of the Lord like this ?” NLT “How could you and your husband even think of doing a thing like this – conspiring together to test the Spirit of God's ability to know what is going on?” LIVING “How was it . . . that you two agreed to try an experiment upon the Spirit of the Lord ?” WEYMOUTH “How could you two have agreed and conspired together to try to deceive the Spirit of the Lord ?” AMPLIFIED and “ How could you two have agreed to put the Spirit of the Lord to such a test?” PHILLIPS

In order to avoid committing sin, it must be addressed at the temptation level, when the individual is “carried away and enticed by his own lust.” That is the point at which grace can be “obtained,” for it is the time of need

This question is asked against the background of reconciliation, the New Covenant, and the new creation. Jesus had reconciled the world to God (2 Cor 5:18-20). The New Covenant was in effect, in which the laws of God were written upon men’s minds, and put into their hearts (Heb 8;10; 10:16). Those in Christ were a new creation, with old things passing away and all things becoming new (2 Cor 5:17). These were not mere goals, they were realities. Add to these the marvelous things that had been taking place among the disciples. Three thousand souls were added to the church on the day of Pentecost. People had been witness of great miracles wrought through the hands of the apostles. A man lame from birth was healed, and in the aftermath, about 5,000 men believed on the Lord Jesus Christ. When threatened by the temple authorities, Peter and John reported the events, and a great prayer meeting was held. Everyone was in one accord at that time. Following the prayer, the place where they were was shaken, all of the people were filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spoke the Word of God with great boldness. The apostles stepped forth and gave powerful witness to the resurrection of Christ. As a result, great grace was upon them all. That grace was evidenced in a remarkable display of selflessness and liberality among the disciples. A man of great faith stepped forward, sold a piece of land that he owned, and laid the proceeds at the feet of the apostles.

Now, in view of that, Peter asks, “How could you two have agreed and conspired together to try to deceive the Spirit of the Lord?” AMPLIFIED Aside from the moral and spiritual compulsions of the new man , how could they have proceeded with this embezzlement with the evidence of a present God all around them? What line of sound rationality could have possibly moved these two to plan such a deceitful move? Had they forgotten that “all things are open and laid bare to the eyes of Him with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13)?

Of course, sin, when seen properly, is totally irrational. One aspect of deception is that it renders all views of sin to be theoretical, and therefore opens the door for a kind of self-definition of it. Ananias and Sapphira did not consider what they did to be sin. That is why they did it. Perhaps they thought it expedient, preferable, or more advantageous to their own social condition. But they did not view it as a transgression against God, and lying to the Holy Spirit.

This is an aspect of sin that those who flirt with the unlawful fail to see. Their senses become numbed, like a moth who flies round and round a flame, as though it was impervious it, only to finally singe it’s wings and fall to helpless to the ground. That is a illustration of James’ portrayal of sin. “But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death” (James 1:15).

In order to avoid committing sin, it must be addressed at the temptation level, when the individual is “ carried away and enticed by his own lust.” NASB That is the point at which grace can be “obtained,” for it is the time of need (Heb 4:16). For whatever reason, Ananias and Sapphira had conducted their lives so that an awareness of the tug of the flesh was not apparent to them – at least, not as it could have been. They had lived too close to the world, thereby creating a place in which Satan could work more freely.

In asking this question, Peter has shown the absurdity of what they had done. In order that the rest of the church might be duly warned, Sapphira will not be allowed to recover from her error. Peter will now announce that her death is imminent. Nothing further will be heard from her, and no additional time will be allotted to her.

THE YOUNG MEN ARE WAITING

“. . . behold, the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out . . .” Other versions read, “See, the feet of the young men who have put the body of your husband in the earth, are at the door, and they will take you out ,” BBE “Those who buried your husband are standing at the door, and they will carry you outside for burial,” GWN “Listen, the footsteps of those who have buried your husband are at the door , and they will carry you out,” NAB “The men who have buried your husband are already at the door , and they will carry you out,” WEYMOUTH and “Listen, you can hear the footsteps of the men who have just buried your husband coming back through the door , and they will carry you out as well!” PHILLIPS

No sooner had Peter spoken, than Sapphira dropped dead, just as her husband did – a judgment from the Lord. They conspired together, they lied together, they died together, and they will be buried together.

How true it is, “It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God,” or “It is a fearful (formidable and terrible) thing to incur the divine penalties and be cast into the hands of the living God!” AMPLIFIED (Heb 10:31). Whatever men may think about God, His nature, and His will, their thoughts cannot change this fact. God is not One with whom men may trifle – conducting their lives as though He loves them so much that He cannot be moved against them, or raise His hand against them. Ananas and Sapphira had tread in the courts of the Lord. They had been identified with his people, had seen His hand move among them, and heard the truth declared. Yet, they chose the pathway of their own will over His, all the while presenting themselves as sacrificial servants of God.

Now Peter tells Sapphira that her death is sure, and those who will bury her are on their way to perform that task. We are not told what thoughts coursed through her mind in that brief moment, but you may be sure her mind was active, and there was no indifference in her. The point here is Divine judgment, not human feelings. By the Spirit, Peter knew what was going to happen, and made no effort to forestall it. No prayer was made for Sapphira, and no appeal was made for her to repent. With her husband, she had crossed the line of Divine forbearance.

SHE FELL DOWN AND DIED

“ 10 Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost . . .” Other versions read, “Then immediately she fell down at his feet and breathed her last,” NKJV “At that moment she fell down at his feet and died,” NIV “Instantly she dropped dead at his feet,” CSB “At once , she fell down at his feet and breathed her last,” NAB “At once she collapsed at his feet and died ,” NET “Instantly she dropped dead at his feet,” NJB “and she fell down presently at his feet, and expired ,” YLT and “Instantly she fell to the floor, dead .” LIVING

No sooner had Peter spoken, than Sapphira dropped dead, just as her husband did – a judgment from the Lord. They conspired together, they lied together, they died together, and they will be buried together.

She Yielded Up the Ghost

The words “yielded up the ghost” are translated from a single Greek word – evxe,yuxen (ek-spool-khen). The word means, “to expire, to breathe out one’s life,” THAYER “breathe one’s last,” FRIBERG “die,” UBS “the process of dying.” LOUW-NIDA Other versions read, “her life went from her,” BBE “expired,” DARBY “breathed her last,” ESV and “died.” MRD

This expression is to be understood in view of the creation of Adam. It is written that God “breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul” (Gen 2:7). During the flood, when every living creature died, and all men, except the eight in the ark, those dying are described as “all in whose nostrils was the breath of life” (Gen 7:22). Job described life in this way, “All the while my breath is in me, and the spirit of God is in my nostrils” (Job 27:3). The frailty of man is described in these words, “whose breath is in his nostrils” (Isa 2:22).

In death, the breath of life that is given by God is called back by Him. When the call is issued, there is no way of resisting it, or creating a way of sustaining that life. Thus death is said to be “yielding up the ghost,” or the unseen part of the human constitution. While the word “ghost” is generally considered from a superstitious point of view, the modern primary definition of the word is, “The seat of life or intelligence: soul <give up the ghost>” MERRIAM-WEBSTER Websters Unabridged Dictionary 2003 gives the definition as “the life principle or vital spark : the soul regarded as the seat of life or intelligence — now used chiefly in the phrase to give up the ghost.”

This is a more precise view of what is involved in dying. From a medical point of view, the brain ceases to function, the heart stops beating, the organs no longer operate, and breathing stops. However, that is a purely physiological view of death. It describes the symptoms of death, and not death itself.

Solomon described the difference between man and the brute creation when he wrote, “Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward, and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?” (Eccl 3:21). Elsewhere he wrote that the spirit returned to the God who gave it: “Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it” (Eccl 12:7). Solomon is not using the word “spirit” in its most refined sense, as defined in Christ Jesus (1 Thess 5:23; Heb 4:12; 2 Tim 4:22). The word translated “spirit” in Ecclesiastes is taken from a Hebrew word meaning “wind, or breath,” STRONG’S and refers to the most apparent evidence of life, and not life itself.

The idea is that just as God breathed into Adam’s nostrils giving him life, so He withdraws life from man, as though inhaling instead of exhaling. In other words, life in any form cannot be maintained independently of the Author of life. When the Lord took Sapphira’s life from her, her body collapsed to the ground, for “the body without the spirit is dead” (James 2:26).

With this in mind, death is described as the essential person and personal life itself, leaving the body.

- Departing (Gen 35:18; 2 Chron 21:20; Phil 1:23).
- Giving up the ghost (Gen 25:8; 35:29; Lam 1:19).
- Going to ones fathers (Gen 15:15; 25:8; 35:29).
- Putting off the tabernacle of the body (2 Pet 1:14).
- God requiring the soul (Lk 12:20).
- Going in a way from whence there is no return (Job 16:22).
- Being gathered to our people (Gen 49:33).
- Fleeing like a shadow (John 14:2).

Only God can recall the soul of an individual, refusing to allow life to

The circumstances were different, and therefore the judgment meted out was also different. The church was in the midst of a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit and grace. continue. So far as judgment in this world is concerned, this is the ultimate Divine judgment in which the Sovereign God determines that a person is no longer fit to live.

Lest we are prone to minimize sin, the transgression that caused this Divine edict was lying about how much money was appropriated in a land sale! Further, the lie was said to be to the Holy Spirit and God, even though it was spoken to Peter.

SAPPHIRA IS BURIED

The young men were busy that day. It only took them three hours to wrap the body of Ananias, carry him out, and bury him. Now, they return from the burial site to find another dead body. They were perceptive, and not distracted to other things as young men are often wont to do. Immediately they are described as “seeing that she was dead.” LIVING They did not comment about the matter, but simply did what had to be done. They “carried her out and buried her by the side of her husband.” PHILLIPS I cannot help but wonder how such a sight would be handled in a modern-day assembly.

A BRIEF ANALYSIS OF THE SIN

Ananias and Sapphira sinned against the Spirit of God by lying. Although they were clearly covetous, that is not the transgression with which they are charged. Their overriding sin was that they wanted to appear more generous than they really were, i.e. being counted in the class of Barnabas – “the pride of life” (1 John 2:15).

The immediate death for this couple, and that within the brief span of three hours, might appear too harsh of a judgment. After all, Simon of Samaria, a sorcerer, tried to buy the ability to confer the Holy Spirit from Peter. That was certainly an offence of great magnitude, yet he did not die because of it. Peter rebuked him sharply, saying he had no part in what Peter was doing, admonishing him repent and pray to God, “if perhaps the thought” of his heart might be forgiven him (Acts 8:18;24). And what of Elymas the sorcerer who sinned grievously when he sought to turn the proconsul of Cyprus away from the faith. But he did not die. Instead, he was struck blind for a season (Acts 13:8-11). But Ananias and Sapphira are stuck down by sudden death.

The circumstances were different, and therefore the judgment meted out was also different. The church was in the midst of a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit and grace. Sin is out of order under any circumstances, but especially when it is committed during a time of great blessing, renewal, and insight.

Also, because this was a beginning, the unacceptability of sin had to be emphasized. If this did not take place, the foundation upon which the people were being built would not have been sturdy.

Also, it needed to be established that it was not possible to deceive the Lord. A body of believers is in no way harmonious with the course of this present evil world. Should they be tempted to pursue such a route, it will be at the expense of the essential ministry of the Holy Spirit.

THE DESCRIPTION OF THE SIN

This text contains several different views of the sin of Ananias and Sapphira – and all of them are most sobering.

- First, they embezzled money that had been committed to the work of the Lord, keeping back part of the price a property they sold (5:2).

- Second, Satan filled the heart of Ananias, moving him to sin against the Lord, and Sapphira agreed to it (5:3a). Thus they both had made a place for Satan, and had quenched the Spirit as well.

They tempted the Spirit of God (5:9). In this deed, they were putting God to the test. This couple obviously thought they could get by with what they had done. In this case, the temptation was for God to remain gracious toward them, even though they had lied to Him.

Third, both Ananias and Sapphira lied to the Holy Spirit (5:3b). They sought to deceive the Spirit, proceeding as though the Spirit could not see what they were doing. In lying to a man of God, they were lying to the Spirit who was within him.

- Even though Satan filled his heart, Ananias is charged with conceiving this plan in his heart (5:4a). Simply put, he planned to sell the property, keep back part of the proceeds for himself, yet say that the whole price was being given to the apostles for distribution as needed.

- They did not lie to men, but to God (5:4b). Even though it appeared as though the lie was told to men, Peter emphatically says it was not to men, but to God. That is how heaven viewed the matter, and that is how it was.

- Ananias and Sapphira agreed together (5:9). This was a joint effort, with both parties agreeing to what was being done. There was no dissent by either party.

- They tempted the Spirit of God (5:9). In this deed, they were putting God to the test. This couple obviously thought they could get by with what they had done. In this case, the temptation was for God to remain gracious toward them, even though they had lied to Him. The Word of God makes clear that He does not operate in this manner. “With the pure Thou wilt show Thyself pure; and with the froward Thou wilt show Thyself unsavory” (2 Sam 22:27). “With the pure thou wilt show thyself pure; and with the froward thou wilt show thyself froward” (Psa 18:26).

WERE ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA DAMNED?

The question might be raised, “Were Ananias and Sapphira damned?” The bottom line answer is, We do not know. The fact that this is not revealed confirms that we should not press the matter. We do know that there are cases when people are turned over to Satan “for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord” (1 Cor 5:5). We also know that there is chastening from the Lord “that we should not be condemned with the world” (1 Cor 11:32). However, we have no idea whether either of these applied to Ananias and Sapphira or not. In fact, their record is in the Scripture in order to induce fear among those who are sloppy in their approach to sin. Here we are not talking about the sin of fornication, as found in Corinth. In that case, it was a low level of fornication that was not even tolerated among the Gentiles “who know not God” (1 Cor 5:11; 1 Thess 4:5). That fornicator was expelled from the church, and given a space to repent. What is even more, he did repent, and the church was urged to receive him graciously (2 Cor 2:6-8).

Suffice it to say, every person professing faith in Christ should culture an absolute hatred for sin.

The case of Ananias and Sapphira has been recorded to confirm to our hearts how serious it is to find sin in the body of Christ – any sin! Let us thrust from us any tendency to be tolerant of iniquity.

FEAR FALLS UPON THE CHURCH

“ 11 And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things.”

How should reports like this effect those who know the Lord? How should the church react when it is evident the Lord has judged a person? Our text does not proclaim a teaching on the subject, but gives us an example – an example that the Holy Spirit selected to be included in Scripture.

UPON ALL THE CHURCH

“And great fear came upon all the church . . .” Other versions read, “And great fear came upon the whole church,” NASB “Great fear seized the whole church,” NIV “The whole church . . . were terrified,” GWN “Great fear gripped the whole church,” NET “And a great fear came upon the whole church,” NJB “and great fear came upon all the assembly,” YLT “Terror gripped the entire church,” LIVING “This incident struck terror into the whole Church,” WEYMOUTH “So a strange awe seized the whole church,” WILLIAMS “And the whole church . . . were appalled [great awe and strange terror and dread seized them],” AMPLIFIED and “At this happening a deep sense of awe swept over the whole Church .” PHILLIPS

Here is a body of people that have been basking in the grace of God. Permit me to recall what has been said about those within the number of these people to this point.

- 3,000 of them had been “pricked in hearts” on the day of Pentecost, and inquired what they ought to do (2:37).
- Those among them are described as having “gladly received his Word, and were baptized” (2:41).
- They were continuing “steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine and fellowship, and the breaking of bread, and in prayers” (2:42).
- Fear had come upon every soul as they witnessed “many wonders and signs done by the apostles” (2:43).
- Those who believed “were together and had all things common” (2:43).
- They “continued with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house” (2:46a).
- They ate their food “with gladness and singleness of heart” (2:46b).
- They were “praising God” (2:47).
- At one time, about 5,000 of them had believed when the Temple authorities opposed Peter and (John 4:4).
- When they had heard the report of Peter and John, they had all prayed with one accord (4:24-30).
- They were all filled with the Spirit, and spoke the Word of God with boldness (4:31).
- The multitude of those who believed were of one heart and of one soul (4:32).

For anyone in the body, a keen sense of the Lord’s presence is actually terrifying. This is owing to the absolute holiness of the Lord, and the total unprofitability of the flesh. The more the Lord becomes evident, the more our comparative weakness and uncomeliness become manifest.

It is again witnessed that they had all things common, with no one saying that what he had was his own (4:32).

- After hearing the apostles witness of the resurrection of Christ, “great grace was upon them all” (4:33).

These were the people who were “seized” by a “great fear.” NIV They had been close to the Lord and blessed by Him, yet they were not close enough to be casual before Him, or blessed enough to not tremble in His presence.

Again, I want to emphasize that the word “fear” is a noun, and not a verb. “A great fear came upon all the church” is not exactly the same as “all the church were found fearing.” Here, the word fear refers to “that which arouses fear,” GINGRICH or causes men to be in terror or trembling. One lexical definition is, “In an objective sense, that which strikes terror.” THAYER

An example of this condition is articulated by Isaiah the prophet. “Sanctify the LORD of hosts himself; and let Him be your fear, and let Him be your dread ” (Isa 8:13). It is only men’s lack of the awareness of God that permits them to live in a slovenly manner, parading the flesh before God, speaking unadvisedly with their lips, and entertaining foolish thoughts.

For anyone in the body, a keen sense of the Lord’s presence is actually terrifying. This is owing to the absolute holiness of the Lord, and the total unprofitability of the flesh. The more the Lord becomes evident, the more our comparative weakness and uncomeliness become manifest.

- This is precisely why Daniel said of his experience of an arresting vision from God, “And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days; afterward I rose up, and did the king's business; and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it” (Dan 8:27).

- On another occasion, after he had seen a vision, Daniel records, “Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, and there remained no strength in me : for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength ” (Dan 10:8).

- When an angel came to tell him of the vision, Daniel said, “O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me , and I have retained no strength . For how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me ” (Dan 10:16-17).

- When Habbakuk heard a message of coming woe from the Lord, he said of the occasion, “When I heard, my belly trembled; my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself ” (Hab 3:16).

- This accounts for the reaction of John to seeing the glorified Christ: “And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead . And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last” (Rev 1:17).

- It is why Moses, while in the presence of the Lord, said, “I exceedingly fear and quake” (Heb 12:21).

Men today speak very loosely about the presence of the Lord, often associating it with mysterious and uninterpretable evidences. However, we would see a sudden and drastic change in men’s behavior, attire, and words if something like the striking down of Ananias and Sapphira took place in the average church.

David, the man after God’s own heart, who panted for the living God, said, “My flesh trembleth for fear of Thee ; and I am afraid of thy judgments” (Psa 119:120).

- When Isaiah saw the Lord, he responded, “Woe is me! for I am undone ; because I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the LORD of hosts” (Isa 6:5).

None of the men I have just mentioned were ungodly. All of them stood tall among men, and had few, if any, equals upon the earth. Yet, in the presence of the Lord, even their comeliness turned into corruption. If we were to take Jesus out of the equation of salvation, there would be no hope of enduring the confrontation of the Living God.

In our text, God was, so to speak, experientially very near, having lavished both grace and power upon the people. However, when that nearness was clearly evidence in striking Ananias and Sapphira dead (members of the church) – a great fear took hold of the entire congregation. What had aroused His anger was not heavy on the moral scales of men. No government official would have arrested or incarcerated a person for misrepresenting their gift. However, when the presence of the Lord is clearly known, men think more seriously about themselves, sin, and judgment.

For those with faith, a sense of the Lord's nearness can be a most profitable experience. For those who are unbelieving and riveted to the earth, it produces the ultimate jeopardy and danger. Men today speak very loosely about the presence of the Lord, often associating it with mysterious and uninterpretable evidences. However, we would see a sudden and drastic change in men's behavior, attire, and words if something like the striking down of Ananias and Sapphira took place in the average church.

Fear Came Upon All the Church

This is only the second mentioning of the word "church" (evkkllhsi,an) in the book of Acts. We first read of the Lord adding "to the church daily such as should be saved" (2:47). Now, for the first time, we read of "all the church" – all believers, everyone who was in Christ Jesus. Fear came upon them "all." They had been exposed to a holy God, who will not tolerate sin among His people. That is why "judgment must begin with the house of God" (1 Pet 4:17). When Ezekiel was given a vision concerning the punishment of Jerusalem, he heard the Lord instruct an angel to "set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof." Having done that, six heavenly messengers were sent on a mission of destruction. They were told to spare those who had been marked, but to "slay utterly" everyone else, sparing no additional persons. Confirming this, the Lord then added, "and begin at My sanctuary !" (Ezek 9:4-6).

That is precisely what the Lord was doing in our text. His judgment was beginning with His house, and the purging started in his sanctuary. The presence of extensive corruption within the professed church does not testify to the Divine leniency, but to the absence of the living God! There is absolutely no way to dignify such a condition, for it is one in which the fear of God cannot possibly be experienced.

AND AS MANY AS HEARD

" . . . and upon as many as heard these things." Other versions read, " and upon all who heard of these things," NKJV "and all who heard about these events ," NIV "and on all who had knowledge of these things ," BBE and "and into the hearts of all who heard of it ." WEYMOUTH

The news of these two deaths spread rapidly, for it was the working of the Lord. No sooner had people heard of the first death, than the report of a second sounded in their ears. Amidst an environment of great and unparalleled blessing, a severe judgment had taken place. The people were not mystified, they were terrified. They did not have a lot of questions, but a lot of fear. They made the association between the death of the wayward couple and the hand of the Lord. They had witnessed the holiness of God, and it was sobering.

I do not doubt that similar judgments have occurred in our day, yet have not been recognized. This is largely owing to the propagation of a false God. The God that is embraced by multitudes of people is not even capable of action such as that to which we have been exposed. However, this is the real God, who will "by no means clear the guilty" (Ex 34:7), and "not at all acquit the wicked" (Nah 1:3).

In Christ, God has provided a way out of the category of “the guilty” and “the wicked.” However, He has promised neither forbearance nor mercy for those who insist on remaining there. Our text, as well as the general tone of Scripture demolishes any argument to the contrary..

CONCLUSION

The passage we have just considered confirms heaven’s sensitivity to sin. It is in perfect harmony with all of Scripture, which leaves this indelible impression, beginning in the third chapter of Genesis. The very first sin committed by the human race appeared incidental. However, the Divine response to it confirms that was not the case at all. In his epistle to the Romans, Paul spells out something of the involvements of Adam’s single transgression. The ramifications of that solitary sin have sent a devastating wake across the whole of human history, down to this very day. It has even impacted upon the entirety of the natural creation. The universe was cursed, from the earth on which we live, out to the extremities of the celestial order. The impersonal creation was consigned to “the bondage of corruption” because of that single deed (Rom 8:20-21). As for the effect of Adam’s sin (singular) upon humanity, this is what has been revealed.

- SIN ENTERED THE WORLD . By means of that transgression, sin entered into the world (Rom 5:12a).

- DEATH ENTERED THE WORLD. Death entered the domain of humanity by means of that single sin (Rom 5:12b).

- DEATH PASSED ON ALL MEN. Death passed upon all men, being imposed upon them independent of their own will or action (Rom 5:12c).

- SIN REIGNED OVER THOSE WHO VIOLATED NO LAW. Sin reigned over the progeny of Adam until Moses, even though they did not sin after the same manner as he did – infracting a law. Men die because of Adam’s sin, for there was no law from Adam to Moses (Rom 5:13-14).

- EVERY MEMBER OF THE HUMAN RACE DIES. Because of the sin of Adam, all of his generations are dead (5:15).

- JUDGMENT RESULTING IN THE CONDEMNATION OF ALL. Adam’s sin brought judgment to condemnation throughout the entirety of the human race (5:16).

- DEATH REIGNS OVER HUMANITY TO THIS VERY DAY. To this very day, death reigns because of Adam’s transgression (5:17).

- ONE SINNED, ALL ARE CONDEMNED. By the offense of Adam, judgment came unto all “to condemnation” (5:18).

- ONE SINNED, MANY (ALL) MADE SINNERS. By Adam’s single act of disobedience, “many were made sinners” (5:19).

And what was the sin that caused these devastating global effects? What deed was done that caused death to be imposed upon every person, every living thing, and the entirety of the domain of matter? It was eating a piece of fruit!

What human court would judge Adam’s sin to be worthy of such dire consequences? Apart from those who have been illuminated by God, what individual is there in all of history, or in all of the world, who would defend such a sweeping and unwavering judgment? To this very day, theologians haggle about Adam’s sin and its effects upon the human race. But God has spoken on the matter, and stamped his decision throughout the entire domain of nature, and upon all who inhabit it.

Our text has exposed us to another judgment from God that does not appear to the flesh to match the sin committed. Those, however, who struggle with this do not know how serious sin is, and what is involved in committing the most apparently minor transgression.

A person has to rebel against God to sin – to commit any sin! When king Saul failed to carry out the commandment of the Lord, Samuel told him his sin was a display of “rebellion” and “stubbornness,” which were themselves akin to “witchcraft” and “idolatry” (1 Sam 15:23). Israel’s sin was said to have stemmed from being “stiffnecked,” and unwilling to turn (Ex 32:9). Their unwillingness to give heed to the Lord was a state identified as “impudent and heardhearted” (Ezek 3:7).

Modern Day counselors and psychologists have rendered a great disservice to the church by providing all manner of explanations for sin. In attempting to rationalize iniquity, they have muddied the waters, dulled ears, and hardened hearts.

The sin of Ananias and Sapphira was addressed sternly because it, like all sin, was serious. But that condition is only made worse when the environment in which sin is committed is one in which the Lord has been working for good.

A MICROCOSM OF THE DAY OF JUDGMENT

This passage is a sort or micro-view of the day of judgment. Whereas the day of judgment will deal with all of the counsels of the heart, every word, and every deed, our text dealt with one counsel, one deed, and one lie. However, in those things all of the requirements of the day of judgment are revealed.

The Certainty of the Day of Judgment

When we speak of “the day of judgment,” we are not speaking theoretically. In the Gospels, Jesus refers to “the day of judgment” five times (Matt 10:15; 11:22,24; 12:36; Mk 6:11).

- Sodom and Gomorrah will be at the day of judgment, together with the generations that followed (Matt 10:15; 11:24; Mk 6:11).
- The citizens of Tyre and Sidon will be at the day of judgment, together with the generations that followed (Matt 11:22).
- Men will give an account for “every idle word” in the day of judgment (Matt 12:36).

Jesus referred to the same occasion as “the judgment” four times (Matt 12:42; Lk 10:14; 11:31,32).

- The queen of the South, or the Queen of Sheba, will be there, together with the generations that followed (Matt 12:42; Lk 11:31).
- Tyre and Sidon will be there with the generations that followed (Lk 10:14).
- The men of Nineveh will be there with the generations that followed (Lk 11:32).

The epistles refer to the certainty of the day of judgment, and the accounting that will take place at that time.

- We will all “stand before the judgment seat of Christ” (Rom 14:10).
- We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ “to receive the things done in the body . . . whether it be good or bad” (2 Cor 5:10).
- It is appointed to men to die once, then appear at “the judgment” (Heb 9:27).
- God knows “how to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished” (2 Pet 2:9).
- The present heavens and earth are “reserved unto fire against” [or for] “the day of judgment” (2 Pet 3:7).
- Those living by faith and walking in the Spirit can “have boldness in the day of judgment” (1 John 4:17).

- God has “reserved” the fallen angels “in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day” (Jude 1:6).

- Solemnly men are told that God is going to “judge the world in righteousness by that Man whom he hath ordained; whereof He hath given assurance to all men, in that he hath raised Him from the dead” (Acts 17:31).

In order for men to be convinced of the reality of the judgment, there are numerous examples in Scripture of the judgment of men while they remained in this world. This does not always happen when men sin against the Lord. This circumstance has caused some men to be presumptuous, imagining that they will escape the judgment of God.

In order for men to be convinced of the reality of the judgment, there are numerous examples in Scripture of the judgment of men while they remained in this world. This does not always happen when men sin against the Lord. This circumstance has caused some men to be presumptuous, imagining that they will escape the judgment of God. Thus Solomon wrote, “Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil” (Eccl 8:11). Others reason, “Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation” (2 Pet 3:4). Because of the hardness of their hearts, such people do not know they are actually piling up a treasure of wrath that will be poured out upon them in the last day. This is why Paul wrote to presumptuous Christians, “But after thy hardness and impenitent heart treasurest up unto thyself wrath against the day of wrath and revelation of the righteous judgment of God; who will render to every man according to his deeds” (Rom 2:5-6).

For this reason, and no doubt many more, examples of God’s intolerance of sin are recorded for our learning. I have already listed numerous examples of such judgments, particularly those resulting in death, in the commentary of verse five, under the heading “The Ungodly In the World Slain.”

The case of Ananias and Sapphira provide some details of Divine judgment.

- The fulness of the deed committed was made known (5:1-2).
- The reason for the deed was revealed – Satan filled Ananias’ heart (5:3).
- Exactly what was done was made public (5:3).
- The unreasonableness of the deed was made clear (5:4).
- The agreement made between Ananias and Sapphira was made known (5:9).
- The confirmation of Divine judgment was declared (5:9).

The day of judgment will be characterized by such details. It is then that the counsels of the heart will be revealed (1 Cor 4:5). The absurdity of sin will be proclaimed while others who had lesser advantages declare their superior responses during inferior times – like the queen of Sheba and the city of Nineveh.

It is no wonder the church is warned, “For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men ; but we are made manifest unto God; and I trust also are made manifest in your consciences” (2 Cor 5:11). We must not adopt as view of God or of His purpose that ignores the reality of His intolerance of sin. One of the associations contained in the Gospel is that “the wrath of God is revealed against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold” [hinder , ASV suppress , NKJV keep down , BBE detain , DOUAY hold down , ERV] “the truth in unrighteousness” (Rom 1:18). That is, “the truth” is inhibited by the presence of wickedness – particularly among those who claim identity with God! That is precisely why the wrath of God is “against” all ungodliness and unrighteousness in men!

In an environment where the truth is being declared, such as that of our text, those who remain hard hearted, seeking and doing their own will and ignoring the will of God, are taking their lives into their own hands. There simply is too much in the Word of God about this for it to be doubted. Further, the church is to faithfully make this known.

In all ages, whether during the era of the Old Covenant, or in these latter days of the New Covenant, when the truth has not been proclaimed, iniquity has become dominant. The ascendancy of sin further has a dampening effect upon what little truth is being proclaimed. A perusal of history will confirm this to be the case. Further, recovering from such times has always been a monumental work in which Divine working and influence was an absolute requirement.

No generation has ever recovered from a falling away by means of scholarship, discipline, or mere human organization. Renewal and recovery have always come by means of the declared truth – particularly that of the Gospel of Christ and the distinctions of the New Covenant. Where these proclamations were not in place, the professing church was locked into mediocrity and deadness. Liberty simply cannot be realized independently of the truth (John 8:32).

DIVINE INFLUENCES

INTRODUCTION

The church has been purged of Ananias and Sapphira, and the people have been seized by great fear. Judgment had begun in the house of God, just as Peter would write much later, and just prior to his appointment with death (1 Pet 4:17). The government had been placed upon Christ's shoulder, as Isaiah had prophesied (Isa 9:6-7), and He was adjudicating that Kingdom with "all power in heaven and earth," which had been given to Him (Matt 28:18). Believers were "added" to the church by Him (Acts 2:47), and those who proved to be unworthy were removed from it, as the fifth chapter of Acts confirms. The latter activity – removing Ananias and Sapphira – and was followed by a wake of fear throughout the church, and among all others who heard of the matter.

However, this does not bring a cessation to the working of the Lord among the brethren, as those in the flesh might be prone to think. Instead, the work seems to accelerate, now that the "old leaven" has been purged out of the assembly. When Corinth had uncomely people among their number, Paul wrote, "Purge out therefore the old leaven, that ye may be a new lump, as ye are unleavened. For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us" (1 Cor 5:7). When iniquity is found among the people of God, it is always detrimental, and must be dealt with in forthrightness and discretion. This has been done, and now our text proceeds.

Many signs and wonders are wrought "among the people" by the apostles. There continued to be a remarkable unanimity among the people of God, as they were all with one accord in Solomon's Porch, where the initial opposition arose. Fear – even trembling fear – did not stop them from assembling, being of one accord, or continuing in the apostles’ doctrine.

There was a sense among the general populous of the things that were occurring among the believers. Those who were not in Christ Jesus did not dare to join themselves to the church. There seemed to be a lively sense of the holiness of God upon every soul – so much so that insincere people were afraid to be numbered with the disciples.

THE FRESHNESS OF NEW LIFE REVEALED

The freshness of newness of life is revealed in this text. There is a total break with empty ceremony and lifeless rituals. The people were gathered together in a place noted for ceremony and ritual, yet such are not evidenced in their gatherings.

There are a number of firsts in this text. Permit me to mention them so they will be more obvious as we go through the next few verses.

- For the first time, we read about people being afraid to be identified with this body of believers (5:13a).
- Outsiders magnified or praised the believers (5:13b).
- People were said to have been “added to the Lord ” (5:14a).
- For the first time, women are mentioned as being added (5:14b).
- People sought to have the even the shadow of Peter pass over the sick 5:15).
- For the first since Jesus returned to heaven, everyone was healed (5:16).

These are the results of having the laws of God written upon the heart and put into the mind. This is what occurs when the people acknowledge the true God to be their own, and He identifies Himself with them. When the people know God, as everyone in the New Covenant does, these are the things that can take place.

The nature of new life is clearly emerging in the book of Acts. This is what happens when people are “washed,” “sanctified,” and “justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God” (1 Cor 6:11). These are the results of having the laws of God written upon the heart and put into the mind. This is what occurs when the people acknowledge the true God to be their own, and He identifies Himself with them. When the people know God, as everyone in the New Covenant does, these are the things that can take place.

Permit me to briefly review what has been said to this point of receptive and believing hearts,

- “These all continued with one accord” (1:14).
- “They were all with one accord in one place” (2:1).
- “Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart , and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (2:37).
- “They that gladly received the word were baptized” (2:41).
- “And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers” (Acts 2:42).
- “Fear came upon every soul” (2:43).
- “And all that believed were together, and had all things common” (2:44).
- “And they , continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart” (2:46).

- “Howbeit many of them which heard the word believed ; and the number of the men was about five thousand” (4:4).
- “They lifted up their voice to God with one accord ” (4:24).
- “. . . they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spake the word of God with boldness” (4:31).
- “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul : neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common” (4:32).
- “. . . great grace was upon them all ” (4:33).
- “Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold ” (4:34).
- “. . . and great fear came on all them that heard these things” (5:5).
- “. . . and great fear came upon all the church” (5:11).
- “. . . and they were all with one accord in Solomon’s porch” (5:12).

The prophets foretold that the age of the Messiah, the era of the New Covenant, would be characterized by dramatic changes. It was not to be a period of new laws, but rather of new life and holy aptitudes. The recollection of some of their statements is like holy fragrance that clears the air of spiritual contaminants.

- A CIRCUMCISED HEART. “ And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deu 30:6).
- PROTECTION IN THE MIDST OF DANGER. “And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land” (Isa 32:2).
- GOING FROM UNDISCERNING TO DISCERNING. “And the eyes of them that see shall not be dim, and the ears of them that hear shall hearken. The heart also of the rash shall understand knowledge, and the tongue of the stammerers shall be ready to speak plainly” (Isa 32:4).
- GOING FROM INABILITY TO ABILITY. “Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing: for in the wilderness shall waters break out, and streams in the desert” (Isa 35:6).
- A HIGHWAY OF ULTIMATE SAFETY. “And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein” (Isa 35:8).
- MAN NO LONGER AT VARIANCE WITH GOD’S LAW. “But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people” (Jer 31:33).
- FAMILIARITY WITH GOD. “And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the LORD: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more” (Jer 31:34).
- TOTAL NEWNESS OF CHARACTER. “And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh: that they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God” (Ezek 11:19-20).

• THE HOLY SPIRIT PUT WITHIN. “A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:27).

• PURENESS OF SPEECH, AND ONENESS AMONG THE PEOPLE. “For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent” (Zeph 3:9).

What we are witnessing in the book of Acts is the RESULT of these Divinely instituted changes. The character of the people, as well as their marvelous unity, is the result of walking in the “newness of life” (Rom 6:4). No regimented procedure could have produced such changes. This was not the result of special tutoring by the apostles on how to live. This is what happens when the Father and the Son take up residence in men. Jesus promised, “If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him” (John 14:23). Technically speaking, spiritual empowerment does not come because we love Christ and keep His words. It is the indwelling of the Father and the Son that follows these responses, that is the source of this much-needed empowerment.

When Christ and man are united through the Holy Spirit, and through faith there is a participation with the Lord. The only limits imposed upon man relate to the choice, will, and purpose of God. There is no point at which the Lord relinquishes the government of His Kingdom to men. Their insight and participation in the Kingdom directly relate to Divine discretion and purpose. That is why Jesus said to His apostles, “I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you ” (Matt 17:20).

The execution of mighty works among men is not at the behest of the will of man. The government of the Kingdom is with the exalted Christ, not men. All accomplishments within that Kingdom are according to Divine purpose – the grand master plan that drives all that God does. His will is associated with the details of that plan, and nothing is accepted by Him outside the perimeter of that will. His choice involves the selection of those who become a part of what He is doing. Our text will focus particularly upon His apostles, which have been placed “first” in the church.

When God’s will is done on earth as it is in heaven – something for which Jesus taught us to pray (Matt 6:10) – the purpose of God is accomplished by His determined will being done through men of His choice. Faith is the appointed means through which it is done. This will become very apparent in this text as we behold what is done through Christ’s appointed men, as well as what is done within them. It will be evident that men cannot cause such things to happen. Apart from Christ, they are simply impossible. They are the Lord’s doing!

SIGNS AND WONDERS WERE WROUGHT BY THE APOSTLES

“ 5:12a And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people . . . ” Other versions read, “The apostles performed many miraculous signs and wonders among the people,” NIV “Now a number of signs and wonders were done among the people by the hands of the Apostles,” BBE “Now many signs and wonders were regularly done among the people by the hands of the apostles,” ESV “Thus by the hands of the Apostles were many signs and wonders showed among the people,” GNV “The people saw the apostles perform many miracles and do amazing things,” GWN “And through the hands of the apostles came many signs and wonders among the people,” YLT “Meanwhile, the apostles . . . did many remarkable miracles among the people,” LIVING “The apostles did many miracles and powerful things among the people,” IE “Many signs and marvels continued to be done among the people by the Apostles,” WEYMOUTH “Now many signs and wonders were continuously being performed by the apostles among the people,” ISV “Now by the hands of the apostles (special messengers) numerous and startling signs and wonders were being performed among the people,” AMPLIFIED and “Many signs and wonders were now happening among the people through the apostles' ministry.” PHILLIPS (part of v 15)

This is the third time miracles are said to be have done through the hands of the apostles.

• THE DAY OF PENTECOST. “And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles” (Acts 2:43).

• AT THE TEMPLE. “Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God” (Acts 3:6-8).

• FOLLOWING THE DEATHS OF ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA. “And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch” (Acts 5:12).

This is the second time that the apostles are said to have worked a multiplicity of signs and wonders – “many wonders and signs” and “many signs and wonders.” When the disciples prayed for boldness to be granted to them to speak the Word of God, they supplicated, “By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus” (Acts 4:30). Now, that is precisely what is taking place. Their supplication is being answered.

Notice that their prayer was that they might be granted boldness to speak the word through this means. In referring to such incidents, Mark says the Lord was “working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen” (Mark 16:20). Speaking of this beginning of the Gospel Paul also wrote of, “so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will?” (Heb 2:3-4). This was not extraordinary men doing extraordinary things, but God working through men in strict accordance with His own will. That is how we must think of this text.

The Spirit is not establishing an official doctrine concerning the working of miracles, even though men have done their best (or worst) to establish such a teaching. I come from a background where the attempt was made to limit the period during which miracles were wrought. Others go to the opposite extreme, saying that it is always God’s will to work miracles, and that you ought to expect Him to do so. Neither position has been revealed from God, but is rather only the imaginations of men.

Many

The word “many” comes from a Greek word meaning, “multitude, many, numerous, great . . . abundant, plenteous.” THAYER “of extent or magnitude great, large much, many, plentiful,” FRIBERG “for a large sum,” UBS “a great deal of, a great number,” LOUW-NIDA and “many, numerous, great, populous.” LEH The idea is that of abundance, and great in type or order.

Throughout the history of the world, there have been exceedingly few periods of time in which signs and wonders were in plentitude.

The Plagues of Egypt

The first outbreak of several miracles occurred prior to Israel's deliverance from Egypt. The epochal signs were ten in number, and unparalleled for sheer magnitude.

1. WATER TURNED TO BLOOD. (Exodus 7:14-25) – Rivers and other water sources turned to blood, and all the fish in them die, causing the water to stink. Water in all vessels was also turned to blood, and the Egyptians could not drink the water from the river.
2. PLAGUE OF FROGS. (Exodus 8:2-8:11) – The plague of frogs, coming out of the river and covering the land, and entering every Egyptian house.
3. PLAGUE OF LICE. (Exodus 8:16-18) – The plague of lice. The sand became lice throughout all the land of Egypt, covering both man and beast.
4. PLAGUE OF FLIES. (Exodus 8:21-28) – The plague of swarms of flies, filling every house in Egypt and corrupting the land.
5. LIVESTOCK PLAGUED. (Exodus 9:1-3) – A grievous plague was imposed upon on all the livestock in Egypt, including cattle, horses, asses, camels, oxen, and sheep.
6. PLAGUE OF BOILS. (Exodus 9:8-12) – The plague of festering boils that broke out upon every man and beast in Egypt.
7. PLAGUE OF HAIL AND FIRE. (Exodus 9:13-35) – Hail mixed with fire, with the hail beating down, killing every beast in the fields, and destroying all of the grain..
8. PLAGUE OF LOCUSTS. (Exodus 10:4-15) – Plage of locusts that covered the ground so the earth could not be seen. They ate every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left, and nothing green remained in the land.
9. THICK DARKNESS. (Exodus 10:21-29) – Thick darkness covered the land that could be felt. For three days the Egyptians were not able to see one another, and no one left their house.
10. DEATH OF ALL EGYPTIAN FIRSTBORN. (Exodus 11:1-12:36) – The death of all the firstborn in Egypt, from the firstborn of Pharaoh, to the firstborn of the maidservants, and of even the beasts.

Israel experienced several miraculous things in their journey through the wilderness. Daily miracles included being led by a pillar of cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night (Ex 13:21), the provision of manna (Ex 16:35), their clothes not becoming old (Deut 8:4a), and their feet not swelling (Deut 8:4b). There was the miraculous provision of water (Ex 17:6; Num 20:11), and the healing of polluted waters (Ex 15:25). There were also miraculous judgments, such as consuming fire (Num 11:1; 16:35), a plague of poisonous snakes (Num 21:6), and the ground opening up and swallowing rebels (Num 16:32). These, together with some great deliverances, occurred over a period of forty years.

Aside from these occasions, and with the exception of the prodigious ministry of Jesus, clusters of miracles were exceedingly rare. In fact, there were very lengthy periods of time during which no miracle was recorded. One such time was in the days of Gideon, during which he asked an angel, “where be all His miracles which our fathers told us of? ” (Judges 6:13). However, in the book of Acts, within a period of a few days, there has already been two periods in which “many” signs and wonders have been done (Acts 2:42; 5:21). This was more owing to the time than to abilities imparted to men.

The term “signs” presumes that there is some overriding reality that is being established. The “sign” is pointing to a fact that has been obscured by either circumstance or obtuseness. In this case, the reality was the Gospel itself, which proclaimed the exalted Christ and the opening of the door of salvation – neither of which could be detected by human senses. In addition to this, and in answer to the prayers of the church, boldness was granted through this means for the word of God to be preached boldly and confidently.

Wonders

A “wonder,” by definition, is a “portent, or prodigy” – something that foreshadows a coming event. THAYER Again, the wonder itself is not the point, but what it moves people to consider. In this case, it would be the unquestionable presence of God Almighty, to whom all men are accountable.

As is apparent, signs and wonders are not an end of themselves. That is, after they have been witnessed, they are not intended to leave the people thinking about what they have seen. Rather, the Person and cause behind the signs and wonders, together with the message that is being declared, are to be pondered.

An Unjustified Trend

It has now become fashionable in certain Christian circles to speak of your miracle – some special supernatural work tailored particularly for you, and with your personal interests in mind. While there may be some small fragment of reality in the statement, it is exceedingly small, and much like a jewel in a swine’s snout (Prov 11:22). Such a view tends to contradict the centrality of Divine purpose, and the working of God according to His own will. Miracles have never been an end of themselves, but have always been an indication of something greater that was to be apprehended. I do not believe any person can support the statement that God wants every person to have their own miracle. In fact, Jesus Himself contradicted this doctrine when He said in His hometown synagogue, “But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land; But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow. And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian” (Luke 4:27).

God does not work with a primary interest in men, but with His own immutable purpose in mind. His works are consistently “done in truth,” not with a mind to simply please men (Psa 33:4). He is not merely sympathetic in His works, but is declared to be “holy in all His works” (Psa 145:17). It is never right to approach the subject of the miraculous as though mankind was at the center of Divine purpose, or was ever the sole object of His focus.

The Apostles and Miracles

Throughout the history of the world, there have been exceedingly few periods of time in which signs and wonders were in plentitude.

To this point in Acts, no one but the apostles have worked a sign or wonder. As I understand it, this reflects the superior rank of the Apostles as the foundation of the church – that is, they laid down the foundation upon which faith and hope could be built. In view of their position, they were given power to confirm the truth of what they were speaking by working signs and wonders that substantiated that message. However, their miracles were never designed to merely satisfy the desires of any given person. If that was their objective, then the fact that they did not stamp out all illness would be evidence of a respect for persons.

Rather, the miracles that came through their hands were precisely after the manner of those wrought by the Lord Jesus Himself. Jesus said of His miraculous works, “the same works that I do, bear witness of Me , that the Father hath sent Me” (John 5:36). And again, “The Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do : for what things soever He doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise” (John 5:19). Like their Lord, the apostles did not come to satisfy the quest of men for the miraculous, or to resolve everyone’s problems. By their very nature, the working of the miraculous is always discretionary, and in strict accordance with the Divine agenda. I know of no exception, in any age, or under any circumstance, to this rule.

A False View of Apostolic Empowerment

During my early days, I was taught that the apostles received the miraculous gift of the Holy Spirit , which accounted for their ability to work miracles. Their reception of “the gift of the Holy Spirit” was thus declared to be different from that of the ordinary believers. Of course, such a teaching is dashed to the ground in the account of the conversion of the house of Cornelius. Peter confirms that God gave the household of Cornelius the Holy Spirit “ as on us at the beginning” (Acts 11:15). Aside from magnifying God in other languages, the household of Cornelius is nowhere noted for working miracles as did the apostles – even though they received the same Spirit in the same manner as the apostles. In addition to this, Peter declared that the “gift” received by those on the day of Pentecost was available to the multitudes who heard him, and to “all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:38-39).

To my knowledge, the promised coming of the Spirit is not specifically associated with the working of miracles, as ordinarily conceived. This includes promises by the prophets, and the Lord Jesus Himself.

- “For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour My spirit upon thy seed, and My blessing upon thine offspring” (Isa 44:3).
- “And I will put My spirit within you, and cause you to walk in My statutes, and ye shall keep My judgments, and do them” (Ezek 36:27).
- “And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out My spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions” (Joel 2:28).
- “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you” (Matt 10:19-20).
- “And I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another Comforter, that He may abide with you for ever” (John 14:16).
- “But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you” (John 14:26).
- “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me: and ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with Me from the beginning” (John 15:26-27).
- “And when He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment” (John 16:8).
- “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall He speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you” (John 16:14).

Later, other men will work miracles, including Stephen (Acts 6:8), Philip (Acts 8:6), and Ananias (Acts 9:17-18). Also, Paul will write that one of the gifts God placed in the church was “the working of miracles” (1 Cor 12:10). However, even that gift, so far as rank is concerned, was put into the church only “after” the gifts of apostles, prophets, and teachers had been given (1 Cor 12:28) – and then it was given to certain individuals and not to every member of the body (1 Cor 12:29).

The point here is that nothing in Scripture suggests to us that God has determined that miracles would become common among His people, so that everyone has a right to expect one to be wrought particularly for them. To begin with, that would contradict the very concept of a miracle, which is a departure from the norm.

The point here is that nothing in Scripture suggests to us that God has determined that miracles would become common among His people, so that everyone has a right to expect one to be wrought particularly for them. To begin with, that would contradict the very concept of a miracle, which is a departure from the norm.

This does not mean that God has determined a time when miracles will no longer be possible among His people on the earth. It does mean that they are always wrought in strict accordance with His will, and with His established purpose in mind. Miracles are always circumscribed by the purpose of God and the faith and spiritual condition of His people.

It might also be noted that many of the professed miracles of our time are not of the same order as those recorded in Scripture. Many of them, though they may very well involve answers to prayer, would appear out of place if they were recorded in Scripture. This is not to be construed as a denial that the hand of the Lord is working among His people.

This rather has to do with the loose and unwarranted use of words like “miracles,” “signs,” “wonders,” and the likes. For such things to become commonplace would make them counterproductive. One of the powerful testimonies of miracles, signs, and wonders is their uniqueness. The fact that they are not common is what draws the attention of people to them.

Following Christ’s commission to “preach the gospel to every creature,” promising that “He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned,” Jesus gave a word concerning certain signs that would follow. “And these signs shall follow them that believe; In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover” (Mark 16:17-18).

There are some who affirm that this is a general word to all of the churches, and is intended for every believer. It all sounds innocent enough, yet such a representation is not made by any writer of Scripture. No church was told such a thing. No new believers were promised this was intended for them – i.e., something that would follow every person who believed.

This promise does not obviate the subjection of all things to the Lord. Nothing is here sanctioned that is not in strict comportment with the good and acceptable and perfect will of God. Neither, indeed, does this mean that every time anyone believes, these signs will break forth. The text refers primarily to those who preached the Gospel, and secondarily to those who believe that Gospel. The signs follow by Divine discretion, and are nowhere declared to be automatic. Even in the book of Acts, there were times when such signs are not said to have followed those who believed. Cases in point include the following.

- When the Gentiles in Antioch of Pisidia believed (Acts 13:48).

- When the Philippian jailor and his household believed (Acts 16:34).
- When certain in Athens believed (Acts 17:4).
- When Crispus, his household, and many Corinthians believed (Acts 18:8).

During Paul's stay in Iconium, where several did believe, many signs and wonders were wrought by Paul and Barnabas ("they"). The record is carefully stated, and confirms the miracles did not simply take place automatically. "Long time therefore abode they speaking boldly in the Lord, which gave testimony unto the word of his grace, and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hands" (Acts 14:3). The word "granted" is truly discretionary. It does not refer to some law or principle that had been set in motion. That ought to be apparent.

We cannot be overly simplistic in our understanding of the Lord's words in Mark sixteen. Just as in His own ministry, the confirmation of His word was according to the strict prudence of the Father. When it is appropriate for such workings to occur, they will be done in accordance with the will of the Lord and the presence of faith. We know this did not happen every time someone believed the Gospel.

- There is no record of any of them occurring among those who believed on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:37-47).

- None of them occurred when about five thousand men believed in the Temple (Acts 4:4).

- None are recorded as being wrought by believers when the whole city of Samaria believed, where the miracles are said to have been done by Philip (Acts 8:6-7).

- One of them took place at the house of Cornelius (Acts 10:46).

- In their report of the great conversions among the Gentiles, Barnabas and Paul made no reference to the believers themselves doing such thing, but plainly declared the "miracles and wonders" were wrought by them personally (Acts 15:12).

- None of these miracles were reported to have happened at the conversion of Lydia's household (Acts 16:14-15).

- None are said to have taken place among the Philippian jailor's household (Acts 16:32-34).

- There is no record of them in the household of Crispus and "many of the Corinthians" (Acts 18:8).

- Those who believed in Achai are not said to have wrought such signs (Acts 18:27).

- One of the signs was wrought in certain disciples from Ephesus who believed (Acts 19:2-6).

- When a goodly number of people from Ephesus believed, these signs did not follow. Instead, they burned their occultistic books (Acts 19:17-20).

- None of the Epistles contain evidence of the working of these signs among all those who believed. Corinth was reminded of individuals among them who were granted the gift of "the working of miracles" (1 Cor 12:10) – but were also reminded all of them had not received such a gift (1 Cor 12:29).

- The Galatians were also reminded that certain among them "worketh miracles" (Gal 3:5), doing so according to "the hearing of faith."

It cannot be true, therefore, that Mark 16:17-18 is intended to teach that men everywhere ought to expect the signs of reference to break out wherever men believe the Gospel. Indeed, some are bold enough to affirm that this is, in fact,

Let us thrust from us the doctrines of men, and choose to believe on the Lord Jesus, laboring in hope for Him, and, in our hearts, submitting to Him who works in accordance with His own immutable will.

what Jesus was promising. But they are not right. They are merely spouting a tradition they have received from men. How is it possible for the Head of the church to make a commitment to the church, and then the Holy Spirit omit its fulfillment in His record of conversions?

Let us thrust from us the doctrines of men, and choose to believe on the Lord Jesus, laboring in hope for Him, and, in our hearts, submitting to Him who works in accordance with His own immutable will.

There may be environments like Bethsaida in which Jesus can do “no mighty work” (Mk 6:5) – even though there were some believers from that city (Philip, Andrew, and Peter (John 1:14)). There may also be a “wicked and adulterous generation” to whom the Divine nature refuses to show a sign (Matt 16:4) – even though a holy remnant of disciples may be found within it, like the apostles themselves. We cannot afford to be naive on this matter.

Why signs and wonders?

At this time, there are at least three reasons for many signs and wonders being done through the hands of the apostles.

- First, this was an answer to the prayer of the church just previous to this: “And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word, By stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus ” (Acts 4:29-30). This was taking place in a way that could not be denied.
- Second, they had been preaching in the name of Jesus, and these signs and wonders were an obvious proof of the truth of that claim. These were the type of works Jesus Himself did, and the association of the apostles with Him was now beyond all question.
- The results of these displays, coupled with the preaching of the powerful Gospel of Christ, confirmed that this was the purposeful and timely working of the Lord (Acts 5:14).

DOCTRINE CANNOT BE DEVELOPED FROM EXAMPLES AND PRECEDENTS

It is important to establish one more thing in regard to these matters. It is never proper to found doctrine upon examples, precedents, or human interpretation. “Sound doctrine” (1 Tim 1:10) is factual, not the result of interpretation. It consists of the affirmation of unalterable realities. True doctrine relates primarily to the Lord Jesus, and is therefore called “the doctrine of the Lord” (Acts 13:12), “the doctrine of Christ” (Heb 6:1; 2 John 1:9), and “the doctrine of God our Savior” (Tit 2:10). If we read of “the doctrine of baptisms,” the reference is not to a network of teaching developed by men. It is rather factual Divine affirmations on that subject, such as are found in Romans 6:1-23 and Colossians 2:10-15). You cannot compile a valid doctrine on baptism by gathering all of the examples of baptism and piecing them together like a puzzle. It is what the Spirit has declared on the subject that constitutes the doctrine .

Those who have confused the body of Christ with their contrived teaching on miracles have harmed the people of God. They have led people to believe that miracles are common, when, with the single exception of the ministry of Jesus, this has never been the case. Even in the book of Acts, the recording of miracles being done is not an emphasis. References to them even diminish as the book progresses. The graphic on the right charts the use of the singular and plural use of the words “miracles,” “signs” and “wonders” in all the book of Acts. I have limited the references to affirmations that an individual or individuals did these might works.

The point is that there is no apostolic doctrine concerning miracles. There is no promise to believers concerning their frequency, or guarantee of their perpetual availability. They are never an apostolic emphasis. A rebuke is never administered because they are not present within the church, and a commendation is never granted because they are present in any given assembly.

When Paul was in prison with Epaphroditus, and this brother almost died, Paul did not cry out, “Where are the miracles?” He did not claim the promise that if he laid hands on Epaphroditus he would recover. Instead, he wrote that “God had mercy on him; and not on him only, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow” (Phil 2:27). The mercy was probably an answer to prayer – the prayer of a known miracle-worker.

In view of this, when our text affirms that “many signs and wonders were wrought among the people” “by the hands of the apostles,” we are to understand that an unusual thing was taking place – which is the whole point of the text. This marvelous working was in answer to their prayer, and it was yielding results that appropriately glorified God. We must be willing to leave the matter there, and be confident that God will continue to work in accordance with His own good pleasure. God is too holy and too powerful for men to guess about His intentions.

The frequency of such ,marvelous works will not be determined by our persuasion that they can take place. Actually, no person who has faith in God, or knows Him, has any question about the possibility of the miraculous. To develop a theological position that boldly announces that, by Divine intention, miracles have ceased, is to betray the presence of unbelief. Men do not have a right to banter about the possibility of the supernatural, or assign time periods and limitations to the discretionary working of the Lord. If they are engaged in such efforts to neutralize what they conceive to be false doctrine, let them cast down such imaginations with the Men cannot control the miraculous, or make grandiose announcements about its borders or assigned time periods. It will rather be governed by what God is doing in any given generation, and whether or not there are vessels present that are “meet for the Masters use, and prepared unto every good work” assigned spiritual weaponry provided for this purpose (2 Cor 10:4-5). If they are unskilled in the use of that weaponry, they should leave iconoclastic work to those with more Kingdom understanding, who are able to wield the appointed weaponry effectively.

Men cannot control the miraculous, or make grandiose announcements about its borders or assigned time periods. It will rather be governed by what God is doing in any given generation, and whether or not there are vessels present that are “meet for the Masters use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

Some generations are being judged (Lk 21:20), while others are being blessed (Matt 4:16). The eyes of some are being opened (Acts 26:18), while the eyes of others are being shut (Isa 44:18). Some are being awakened (John 5:25, while others are having the spirit of deep sleep poured out upon them (Isa 29:10). For some, desires are withheld (Matt 16:4), while for others, and answer to “the prayer of faith” is promised (James 5:15). I know of no word from God that leads to the conclusion that there will ever be a time when the Kingdom of Christ will continue to function without His involvement. If that seems ludicrous, consider that such would have to happen if the miraculous were ever to cease, and things functioned strictly according to nature, and within the boundaries of human power.

Should anyone care to postulate that such a supposition is right, they owe us an explanation of how such an arrangement brings glory to God. It appears to me that such efforts tend to glorify the institutions of men, not God. It cannot be countered that God has placed everything under men at this time. We are expressly told that this is the purpose of God, but that it is not yet being fulfilled. Thus is it written, “Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he put all in subjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we see not yet all things put under him . But we see Jesus . . .” (Heb 2:8-9).

That is, the ONLY Man who presently has everything under His feet is Jesus Christ. The redeemed will have their part in that subjugation in the world to come, but not in this world.

THEY WERE ALL OF ONE ACCORD

“ 5:12b . . . and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch.”

The threats of the Jewish leaders have not driven the disciples underground. Rather, having been filled with the Spirit, granted boldness, and with great grace upon them all, they have returned to the Temple area with power – the very area in which they had first encountered fierce opposition. Further, it is not only the apostles that have returned, or the apostles with a handful of faithful ones. Multitudes were gathering, and they were all of one accord.

These days the professing church has degenerated into such a condition in which relatively few people in the average congregation are noted for diligence and spiritual stamina. In fact, it is exceedingly difficult, if not altogether impossible, to get all of the people together at one time. Who does not know that this is the case?

However, we must not allow ourselves to look at the contemporary church scene and think of it as being ordinary. What we see today is NOT an appropriate view of the body of Christ, but is more of an lifeless apparition – the phantom church!

What we are being exposed to in the book of Acts is the real church. This is the authentic body of Christ, over which He presides, and in which He dwells. Their manners are the ways of “the elect of God.” This is how “newness of life” makes itself known. These people do not meet because they have been commanded to do so, but because their desires compel them to come together. They do not meet to “play,” as Israel did at the foot of Mount Sinai (1 Cor 10:7). They have a solitary focus, and one heart and soul animates them all. When we behold them, they are not a pattern of what we SHOULD be, but the evidence and confirmation of what people ARE in Christ Jesus.

These are not people who can be emulated. Their spiritual stance is too aggressive and too consistent for anyone who does not have a new heart and a new spirit. Institutional Christians are like invalids in this kind of arena. They cannot climb the mountains these people climb, or walk into intimidating areas like they do. A mind that is riveted to the earth cannot adopt the priorities of such people.

Notice the candor with which the Spirit speaks. He does not move Luke to marvel at what these people are doing. He simply reports it as a fact – and one that is not at all surprising. Yet, if the very thing mentioned in this verse was to actually take place in the average church, it would be astounding beyond all measure.

ONE ACCORD

“ . . . and they were all with one accord . . . ” Other versions read, “And all the believers used to meet together,” NIV “and they were all together ,” BBE “By common consent they would all meet,” CSB “The believers had a common faith in Jesus,” GWN “And they were all assembled together ,” MRD “ One in heart , they all used to meet,” NIB “And all the believers were meeting regularly .” NJB “Meanwhile, the apostles were meeting regularly,” LIVING “The apostles were together . . . they all had the same purpose ,” IE “And by common consent they all met together ,” AMPLIFIED “and they were all of one mind ,” ALT “All of the Lord's followers often met ,” CEV and “they were all with one passion .” LITV

This is now the fifth time believers are said to have been “in one accord” (1:14; 2:1,46; 4:24; 5:12). The words “one accord” are translated from a single Greek word: ο`μοϋμαδο.ν (hom-oth-oo-mad-on). It means “with one mind, of one accord,” THAYER “with one purpose, by common consent,” FRIBERG “unanimously,” LOUW-NIDA and “with one mind or purpose or impulse.” GINGRICH

“One accord” is an expression for which there is no single English word that is adequate. As is evident in the various versions of Scripture, the wide-ranging meaning of the term is somewhat difficult to put into words. It should not surprise us that the extent of spiritual experience transcends the capacity of language. This is why the range of translations for this expression include “together,” NIV “common consent,” CSB “common faith,” GWN “one in heart,” NIB “had the same purpose,” IE “one mind,” ALT and “one passion.” LITV

The technical meaning of the word includes unanimous . LOUW-NIDA This is a fairly good view of the meaning. The English word “unanimous” means “being of one mind.” Related words are listed as “agreed, agreeing, concordant, concurrent, and harmonious.” Contrasting words are listed as “differing, disagreed, disagreeing, discordant, and inharmonious.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER 2003

When it comes to matters related to religion, and within the context of the modern church, the very concept of unanimous, one accord, and agreement , is staggering to consider. Often, I have heard preachers and teachers say they know of no one with whom they are in perfect agreement. The very existence of differing bodies of theology confirms that division and a lack of harmony is at the very root of institutionalized religion. Few people expect harmonious thought to ever exist among professing Christians. Therefore, all manner of approaches are taken to get people to work together, forget their differences, and try to concentrate on the few things upon which they may happen to agree. Instead of harmony, men have come to believe that tolerance is commendable, and agreement is not even expected. All of this exists in spite of the fact that “God is one” (Deut 6:4; Mk 12:29; Gal; 3:20), and Christ is not “divided” (1 Cor 1:13).

After all the arguments have been presented, and the various defenses of contradicting hermeneutics have been put forward, our text thunders at us with a tone of rebuke: “they were all with one accord.” “THEY were all of one accord!” They were ALL of one accord!” They were all of ONE accord!” They were all of one ACCORD !” In this, the prophecy was fulfilled, “ they shall see eye to eye , when the LORD shall bring again Zion” (Isa 52:8). Jeremiah foretold, “And I will give them one heart, and one way ” (Jer 32:39). Zephaniah said the people would serve the Lord “with one consent ,” or “one accord” NKJV (Zech 3:9).

In this text, with all of the divisions within the Jewish community, there was a body of considerable size who were “all” of one accord. It is as though one heartbeat was in them all, and they were animated by a single soul. They were, in fact, a sterling example of “one body,” fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplies (Eph 4:16). This is not merely what the people of God should be, it is what they are when they mortify the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13-14; Col 3:5), live by faith (Heb 10:38), walk in the Spirit (Gal 5:16), and put off the old man, while putting on the new man (Eph 4:22-24). If those conditions are found in our time, the very same unity and oneness will be exhibited.

THEY MET IN SOLOMON’S PORCH

This was the very area where the conflict with the Temple authorities arose (Acts 3:11). It is also a place where Jesus walked during the Feast of Dedication, when “it was winter” (John 10:22-23). At that time, Jesus also taught in this area, as the people came to Him (John 10:24-39). It is evident that it was a place where large numbers of people could convene for a common cause. In the case of our text, the cause was to hear the apostles, for to continue “steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine” (Acts 2:42), it had to be regularly heard. Here we see the people aggressive to gather together, submitting their hearts and minds to the truth as declared by Christ’s ambassadors.

No man can find the truth of justification, sanctification, the coming of the Lord, or the hope of glory independent of the doctrine of the apostles! If you are ever going to learn of the struggle of the flesh and with Spirit, you will have to become familiar with what the apostles said about it.

Solomon’s porch was of considerable size, being 800 feet long. That is nearly three football fields placed end-to-end. It was a covered area, with the covering supported by 162 Corinthian pillars. The pillars were one hundred feet high – that is equivalent to a ten story building. I do not know the width of the porch , although some have estimated it to have been about one hundred feet wide. Whatever the estimate, it is evident that it was of considerable size, and could have accommodated a significantly large crowd of people.

At this point, the people did not break up into small groups, meeting only in houses, as some have alleged. When these disciples met from “house to house” (Acts 2:46), it was apparently in addition to these general gatherings. It appears that the apostles did not move about from house to house, but taught in the Temple, as they were later expressly told to do (Acts 5:20).

Feeding the Flock

Converts did not go on their way, resuming their lives as they were lived before. Now they were alive unto God (Rom 6:11), and that life could not be sustained independently of the Word, as expounded by the apostles. Neither, indeed, did the converts return to take up the Scriptures (Moses and the Prophets) and begin deciphering them for themselves. Spiritual babies can no more eat properly than babies in the flesh, They must be “fed” by someone who can properly dispense spiritual nourishment (John 21:16-17; Acts 20:28; 1 Pet 5:2). This was particularly true before the apostles’ doctrine was in written form. The body of Christ could not be established by independent thinking and the voicing of varied opinions. The people had to be subject to the teaching of those who had themselves been taught by God, and knew whereof they spoke.

How would the people know of the cessation of the sacrifices and the necessity of circumcision as a sign of the covenant? How would they learn of the leading of the Spirit and the implications of the newness of life. What person would be able to comprehend as they should the truth of justification, the presence of the grace of God, and the existence of a High Priest in heaven? Are such things simply discovered along the way without due proclamation? That such a thing is possible with the writings of the apostles cannot be denied. There have been a few noble souls who have found the truth in that manner, but it was generally preceded by a very lengthy period of heart-wrenching searching, during which there were very fundamental flaws in their thinking.

The point to be seen here is that the people were conscious of the need to be fed with knowledge by men of spiritual understanding. Thus the word of Jeremiah would be fulfilled, “And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding” (Jer 3:15). Here were people who were hungry and thirsty for righteousness. Together, and with one accord, they purposefully assembled in Solomon’s commodious porch to hear the word of the Lord.

The apostles were especially guided into all truth for the purpose of putting the church on a solid foundation. This is the reason for the common consent of the people to gather in the Temple – not merely for informal fellowship, but to hear the word of the Lord from the apostles. The word, as our text affirms, was attended by many confirming “signs and wonders” that were wrought by the hands of the apostles. Mark says that as the apostles preached, God worked with them “confirming the word with signs following” (Mk 16:20). Paul also testifies of those early days when the apostles, who had personally been taught by Jesus, continued to deliver His word. It is said of that time that God Himself was “also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to His own will” (Heb 2:4).

Our text is relating one of the historical occasions when these things were taking place. The people were being established in the faith through the words of God-ordained men of understanding, and God was verifying their word by an outburst of many signs and wonders. All of this was done in answer to their prayer.

The Need for the Apostles’ Doctrine Today

While the Spirit does direct people into the truth today, it is not in the precise manner as He directed the apostles. No man can find the truth of justification, sanctification, the coming of the Lord, or the hope of glory independently of the doctrine of the apostles! If you are ever going to learn of the struggle of the flesh and with Spirit, you will have to become familiar with what the apostles said about it. If you want to know what really took place when you were baptized into Christ, you will have to sit at the feet of the apostles. If you desire to know the rationale behind fleeing from fornication, you must be subjected to the apostles doctrine. Where else can you learn about “the whole armor of God” (Eph 6:10-18), the “fruit of the Spirit” (Gal 5:22-23), or the continual change that is wrought within the saints by the Holy Spirit (2 Cor 3:18)?

The ministry of the apostles has not been given to anyone else. Respecting doctrine, they are still the foundation of the church (Eph 2:20). If a person chooses to neglect apostolic doctrine, spiritual ignorance will prevail. It simply is not possible to grow up into Christ while neglecting the apostles' doctrine.

This is confirmed by the general condition of the professed church, together with the vast majority of its ministers. There is such an abysmal level of ignorance concerning the apostles' doctrine that it is mind-boggling. This gross deficiency of understanding has given rise to a plethora of religious charlatans. Their air waves, religious book stores, and schools of purported higher learning are filled with their flawed and misdirected works – and men love to have it so.

Today, within the average church, “the apostles’ doctrine” is lying dormant in sectarian ruins. The people do not even know what the doctrine says, much less what it means. For this reason nothing significant can be built for God where this condition exists.

However, in our text, these conditions did not yet exist. The conversions were unquestionably genuine. When pretenders surfaced, they were at once known, and God dealt with them. The people had a faith that could not be suppressed, and a love of the truth that dominated their hearts and minds. They loved each other, and came together to be taught “the truth as it is in Jesus” (Eph 4:20). They did not come together to be entertained.. They did not come together reluctantly, or because they were forced to do so. One heart, one soul, and common consent brought them together – a common faith, a single hope, and a love of the truth.

Not Intended To Be Unique

Do not think that this was something unique to the first century! This very same thing has happened throughout history when the apostolic doctrine was again found and treasured. That doctrine presents a precise picture of Jesus and His great salvation. Once believed, all of heaven becomes involved.

Our times are much like those that existed in Israel during the reign of Josiah. In the eighteenth year of his reign it was determined “to repair the breaches” of the house of the Lord. As they went about their work, Hilkiah the high priest said to Shaphan the scribe, “I have found the book of the law in the house of the Lord!” The book was read before the king, and it registered upon his heart. Upon hearing the words, he knew at once that the nation was living in contradiction of their God, and he set out to obtain more of the mind of the Lord on the matter (2 Kgs 22:8-20).

Today, within the average church, “the apostles’ doctrine” is lying dormant in sectarian ruins. The people do not even know what the doctrine says, much less what it means. For this reason nothing significant can be built for God where this condition exists. The foundation of the apostles is not there, and thus the house cannot be built. The question must be asked of this generation, “If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?” (Psa 11:3).

The conditions of the church in the book of Acts cannot be replicated independently of the causes behind them. It is not possible to have the blessing without the Blessor, or the gifts without the Giver. Understanding cannot be had without God-sent teachers. Organization cannot achieve these things. Any effort to do so cannot possibly succeed.

AMONG THE REST, NO MAN DARED TO JOIN THEM

“ 13a And of the rest durst no man join himself to them . . . ”

Real disciples are always observed. Further, the nature of what they possessed is, to some degree, sensed by those who watch them attentively them. What happens among Christ's followers eventually gets out – just as it did on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:6). In our text, word had circulated about these people, what they said, and what took place among them.

This was not the result of promotion. It was rather the revelation of the nature of new life in Christ Jesus – which life tends to manifest itself. It obtains the same nature as the Savior Himself, who shed light wherever He was. Life in Christ Jesus emits a certain glory that cannot be hidden. Paul said of the Philippian brethren, “Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world ” (Phil 2:15). That is, when our walk is in the Spirit, our light will shine!

If we devote ourselves to the proper priorities, a godly influence will come from us that cannot be hidden. Paul referred to this condition when speaking of certain traits of the New Covenant. He applies this truth particularly to himself, and the preaching in which he was engaged. The principle, however, is also woven into the very fabric of the life that is in Christ Jesus. “Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savor of his knowledge by us in every place. For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ , in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the one we are the savor of death unto death ; and to the other the savor of life unto life . And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:16). In the place of “savor,” other versions use “aroma,” NKJV “fragrance,” NASB “smell,” NIV “sweet perfume,” BBE “sweet odor,” DARBY “sweet wholesome fragrance,” LIVING and “pleasant smell.” IE

In the above passage, there are several different recipients of the “savor,” or fragrance.

- TO ALL WHO HEAR THE GOSPEL. “. . . God . . . maketh manifest the savor of His knowledge by us in every place ” (2 Cor 2:14). The Gospel of Christ is like the pervading aroma of a powerful incense. Wherever it is preached in truth, people become keenly aware of a non-worldly influence – one that is not found in the common course of life in the flesh.

- TO GOD HIMSELF. “We are unto God a sweet savor of Christ” (2:15). The faithful heralds of the Good News are themselves a sweet and pleasant aroma of Christ to God. That is, it is Christ in them that brings great pleasure to the Father. Further, that presence is something that is not taken for granted. Jesus does not remain where He is not wanted, or is stifled. He Himself affirmed that He manifests Himself only to the ones who love Him. He further defined that love as having His commandments and keeping them, or maintaining a hold upon them (John 14:21). It is the manifesting Christ who causes us to emit a pleasant odor to the Living God.

- TO THE PERISHING. “To the one we are the savor of death unto death ” (2:16a). To the ones who are perishing, the fragrance of the godly appears as the offensive stench of death. It is not pleasant to them at all. In fact, it only serves to drive them still further from the Lord. That is, it is the smell of death that moves them deeper into spiritual death.

- TO THOSE WHO ARE SAVED. “. . . to the other the savor of life unto life ” (2:16b). The very same fragrance that is offensive to those who are perishing, is most pleasant to those who are being saved – pleasant in the same sense as it is to God. Instead of driving them further from the Lord, it brings them closer to Him.

Our text will show us the response “in them that are saved, and in them that perish” (2 Cor 2:15) – a fragrance that repels, and a fragrance that draws. No one will be neutral, for in spiritual life, there is no such thing as neutral. As Jesus Himself said, “He that is not with Me is against Me” (Matt 12:30). And again He said, “he that is not against us is for us” (Lk 11:23).

THE REST

“And of the rest . . . “ Other versions read, “Yet none of the rest,” NKJV “No one else,” NIV “The others ,” BBE “None of the other people,” GWN “The other believers,” LIVING “Not one of those on the outside ,” WILLIAMS “And none of those who were not of their number ,” AMPLIFIED “But as far as the others were concerned,” PHILLIPS and “No one outside their group .” CEV

There are varied opinions within the Christian community concerning the identity of “the rest.” Lightfoot, a notable commentator, says it refers to “the remainder of the 120 disciples of whom Ananias had been one; and that they feared to put themselves on an equality with the apostles.” A cluster of commentators, including Pricaeus, Morus, Rosenmuller, Schleuser, and others suppose “the rest” refers to “the rich men, or people of authority and influence among the Jews, of whom Ananias was one.” In this case, no one from this group stepped forward to donate proceeds from the sale of their goods. John Gill believes “the rest” refers to the rest of the real Christians who did not dare “to come nigh to the apostles, or familiarly converse with them, much less put themselves on an equal foot with them, but with great reverence of them kept their distance from them.” A more reasonable explanation is given by the commentator Calmet who observes “that the Jewish nation was then divided into many different sects, who entertained widely different opinions on various articles. The apostles adopted none of these jarring sentiments, and none of the different sects dared to join themselves to them; neither Pharisees, Sadducees, nor Herodians, as such, were found in this simple, holy Church.”

I am not satisfied with any of these explanations. With the exception of the last one, they appear to be said to justify a theological persuasion rather than open up the text. To me, it is clear that “the rest” refers to those who were not “of one accord” (5:12). The Living Bible could not possibly be more wrong in its representation of this verse – “the other believers.” If that is a proper rendition, then those who believed were not of “one accord.”

The word “rest” comes from a word meaning, “the remaining . . . the rest of any number or class under consideration.” THAYER At this point a comparison is not being made to the apostles, for the subject of reference is “all the church” (5:11). Further, it does not do justice to the text to imagine that it was only, or even primarily, the apostles who were meeting in Solomon’s court, working signs and wonders among themselves. This is the view represented by the International English Version: “The apostles were together in Solomon's Porch; they all had the same purpose.” IE Such a view is utterly foolish!

The main subject of the verse is those who “were all of one accord in Solomon’s porch.” However, they were not the only ones in Solomon’s porch. Verse fourteen will affirm that, as a result of the apostles’ words and works during this occasion, “multitudes” believed. There were, then, others who were also hearing and observing what was taking place. Those who were not “of one accord” constitute “the rest,” or “the others.” BBE

I know of no text that directly states or infers that believers ever purposed to gather together with “the rest,” or outsiders. The presence of an “unlearned” people, or “unbelievers” is considered something unusual – something that is part of an “IF” factor.

You will note that nothing about the text suggests that these gatherings were tailored for “the rest.” That does not mean that words were not addressed to them. It does mean that the purpose was to separate them from that unholy number, not cater to them while they remained there. It was the believers who convened this meeting – those who “were all of one accord.” The purpose of their gathering related primarily to them. Otherwise the expression “the rest” makes no sense. The term “others” presumes a core group of which such people were no part.

I know of no text that directly states or infers that believers ever purposed to gather together with “the rest,” or outsiders. The presence of an “unlearned” people, or “unbelievers” is considered something unusual – something that is part of an “IF” factor (1 Cor 14:23). It is quite true that in an institutional setting, such people are critical to success, for the aim is generally numerical growth, which is a primary means of sustaining the institution. Some have even invented gathering formulae that postulates the necessity of a considerable percentage of the people being “unbelievers.” The most recent (2007) figure is 25% – that is, an ideal church gathering is constituted of 75% Christians and 25% non-Christians. Together with this concept comes the necessity to dumb-down things that take place in the assembly. This is done to make an appeal to people who really do not have a preference for the things of God. In order to dumb-down things relating to the Lord, you must mix them with the things of this world. This may be done by simply speaking more about human experience than the truth, or by modifying the truth itself in an attempt to shape it so it is not offensive.

The transgression of this approach is this: as soon as something from man is theoretically mingled with the truth, the truth loses its power, and is no longer truth. It is the same principle that was made known under the Law. When building the altar of God, there could not be a stone in it that was hewn, or fashioned by man’s hand. No matter how skillful the stone-worker may have been, his work could not be included in God’s altar. Therefore the Law reads, “And if thou wilt make Me an altar of stone, thou shalt not build it of hewn stone: for if thou lift up thy tool upon it, thou hast polluted it ” (Ex 20:25). Moses faithfully commanded the people on this critical matter. “Therefore it shall be when ye be gone over Jordan, that ye shall set up these stones, which I command you this day, in mount Ebal, and thou shalt plaster them with plaster. And there shalt thou build an altar unto the LORD thy God, an altar of stones: thou shalt not lift up any iron tool upon them ” (Deut 27:4-5). Upon entering into the promised land, Joshua built an altar to the Lord, faithfully adhering to Moses’ word. “Then Joshua built an altar unto the LORD God of Israel in mount Ebal, as Moses the servant of the LORD commanded the children of Israel, as it is written in the book of the law of Moses, an altar of whole stones, over which no man hath lift up any iron : and they offered thereon burnt offerings unto the LORD, and sacrificed peace offerings” (Josh 8:30-31).

Carrying this idea even further, Paul affirmed that he took care in the presentation of the Gospel not to mingle it with the wisdom of this world. “And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God . . . And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom , but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power” (1 Cor 2:1.4). This was not something Paul thought up on his own. He makes clear that Jesus sent Him to preach the Gospel, but NOT with wisdom of words. “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect” (1 Cor 1:17). He also declared that he preached only the Gospel, without human additives, “That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God” (1 Cor 2:5).

In view of these things, transgression is involved in the effort to attract sinners by anything other than the Gospel and a godly life. I understand that it is not fashionable to speak in this manner. Many men would have very little, if anything at all, to say if they could not speak in the jargon of this present evil world. However, such a posture cannot in any way be dignified. If it is declared that the people doing this mean well, we simply reply that this cannot be supported. How can a heart be pure when it adopts a manner that conflicts with the revealed purpose of God?

The church must learn to think in terms of “the rest,” thereby placing the accent on the people of God’s choice! God has made known the people who are preeminent before Him. This is made clear by such expressions as “the elect of God” (Col 3:12), “God’s elect” (Tit 1:1), “a peculiar (special NKJV) people” (Tit 2:14), “a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people” (1 Pet 2:9), and “the people of God ” (1 Pet 2:10). These are the only people on the face of the earth He has washed, sanctified, and justified (1 Cor 6:11). They are the only people to whom He has given “His Holy Spirit” (1 Thess 4:8). The intercession of Jesus is only for these people (Heb 7:25). Only these people have been given “all things that pertain to life and godliness” (2 Pet 1:3). These are the only people who are “led by the Spirit” (Rom 8:14).

Who is the person who has the audacity to call a meeting of these people, and then speak to someone other than them? Where is the professing minister who would stand before these people and throw our carnal trivia in an attempt to impress the ungodly? Words fail me to emphasize the seriousness of such folly. In such a setting, the saints become conceptually “the rest,” when all of heaven knows they are the primary people in the world!

Every gathering of God’s people must be one in which those who are of one accord and those who are “the rest” should be evident.

DURST NO MAN JOIN

“ . . . durst no man join himself to them . . . ” Other versions read, “ dared to join them,” NKJV “dared to associate with them,” NASB “dared join them,” NIV “in fear, kept back from joining them,” BBE “no one ventured to come near them,” MRD “ was daring to join himself to them,” YLT “dared to attach themselves to them,” WEYMOUTH “dared to join and associate with them,” AMPLIFIED and “was daring to be joining himself to them.” ALT

And, what of “the rest” of those found in Solomon’s Porch? How did they feel about this impressive and growing body of people who were exuding the very life of Christ? Were they attracted to their size? It was sufficient to get anyone’s attention. Did the signs and wonders being wrought by the hands of the apostles compel them to be part of what was happening? An institutional man might imagine this to be an ideal setting to attract outsiders. But that was not the situation at all!

These “rest” did not dare join this number of disciples – “durst no man.” They stood aloof from believers, not finding any particular thing to criticize, as did the Temple authorities, yet afraid to be identified with them. The word “durst” comes from a Greek word that means, “not to dread or shun through fear . . . to be bold, bear oneself boldly,” THAYER “being bold enough to defy danger or opposition,” FRIBERG “be brave,” UBS “to be so bold as to challenge or defy possible danger or opposition,” LOUW-NIDA “to undertake, take heart either to bear or do anything terrible or difficult,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “to have courage, to be brave enough.” GINGRICH In the English, the word means, “to confront boldly: invite the opposition of fearlessly.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER 2003 In others words, “the rest” did not have the courage to join these disciples. It took a lot of boldness to do so, and they did not have it.

As is apparent from these texts, joining is not merely being added to a roster, or obtaining a kind of formal identity with a group. It has to do with actually being a functional part of that to which one is joined. It includes participation, and a bodily presence.

In the context of the nominal church, this verse sounds exceedingly strange. Why would anyone be afraid to join a body of people who were being blessed by the Lord – a people whose sins had been forgiven, preached a glorious message, and among whom all manner of signs and wonders were being wrought? It just does not make sense to the carnal mind, and it is not considered an appropriate response to a modern church – perhaps a mega-church . Of course, the church to which we are being introduced was, by modern standards, a mega-church, consisting of several thousand members, and growing rapidly.

“Join Himself to Them”

The expression “join himself” comes from a single Greek word which means, “to glue, glue to, glue together, cement, fasten together, hence universally, to join or fasten firmly together.” THAYER This word is used several times in Scripture. The manner in which it is used clarifies precisely what is meant in this verse.

- The prodigal son “joined himself” to a citizen of “that country” in which he had squandered his living (Lk 15:15).

- The Spirit directed Philip to “join thyself to this chariot,” in which the Ethiopian eunuch was riding (Acts 8:29).

- Following his conversion, Saul of Tarsus made an effort to “join himself to the disciples” in Jerusalem (Acts 9:26).

- When Peter met Cornelius he told him that it had been “an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation” (Acts 10:28).

- Following Paul’s preaching in Athens, “certain men clave unto him, and believed” (Acts 17:34).

- Concerning the responsibility of believers toward the good, Paul wrote, “cleave to that which is good” (Rom 12:9).

- A description of what occurs in regeneration is, “he that is joined to the Lord is one spirit” (1 Cor 6:17).

As is apparent from these texts, joining is not merely being added to a roster, or obtaining a kind of formal identity with a group. It has to do with actually being a functional part of that to which one is joined. It includes participation, and a bodily presence. There is a oneness of the individual with the group which includes both his heart and mind. This is quite different from the concept of being a member of a given church, yet rarely meeting together. That concept is one borrowed from the world.

Two Key Factors

There are two factors that caused “the rest” to draw back. Both of them are very intimidating to an unbeliever.

It should be noted that it is foolish to avoid the body of Christ out of a fear of being judged. In view of the fact that God will ultimately judge every individual, it is far better to repent and seek His face now. In this time, before Jesus returns, a person can call upon the name of the Lord and be saved.

Remember, those who are not in Christ have themselves as their primary interest, while believers have the Lord as their fundamental concern, and are aggressive in crucifying themselves, denying themselves, and taking up their cross to follow Jesus. For those who lacked these higher motivations, here are two insurmountable conditions.

- First, the Jewish authorities opposed these people. The priests, captain of the Temple guard, and Sadducees opposed them (Acts 4:1-3). The Sanhedrin, consisting of the Jewish “rulers, and elders, and scribes” also opposed them (Acts 4:5). In addition, the high priests Annas and Caiaphas, together with a key man named John, Alexander, and the kindred of the high priest opposed this body of people. This conglomerate of Jewish authorities did not approve of the message of these people, and had issued an ultimatum for them “not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus” (Acts 4:18). When they finally let the spokesmen Peter and John go, they “further threatened them,” being unable to find a technical point that would justify punishing them (Acts 4:21).

- Secondly, it was now general knowledge that dishonest people did not fare well among these believers. Ananias and Sapphira had been stricken dead after hearing a pointed word of rebuke and exposure by Peter. Such an assembly was not at all attractive to “the rest.”

Given these two arresting factors, all interest in this assembly disappeared among those who did not have honest and good hearts. The “rest” had an unlawful respect for the religious leaders, and a fear that their ways would be discovered, should they join themselves to this number.

It should be noted that it is foolish to avoid the body of Christ out of a fear of being judged. In view of the fact that God will ultimately judge every individual, it is far better to repent and seek His face now. In this time, before Jesus returns, a person can call upon the name of the Lord and be saved. However, when the Lord appears in all of His glory, no such opportunity will be granted. The fear one may entertain now about being judged by the Lord is nothing to compare with the experience of facing the glorified Christ without having been justified and made accepted in the Beloved (Eph 1:6).

Of course, none of these attitudes are evidenced when people confront a powerless church, or one that carries upon itself the stench of this world. The modern church is not vigorously opposed by the world, and its message is quite palatable to worldly people. Some are opposed to the church because of its stand on political and/or social issues. The Scriptures, however, provide no example of this kind of opposition to believers. It is a modern day phenomenon that reflects the adoption of distorted priorities by the professing church.

Something That Is Dangerous

A word also ought to be said about the danger of an academically-based religion – that is, a message and stance that is based upon scholarship, research, statistics, and the likes. Scholarship can neither produce nor maintain faith, without which it is not possible to please God (Heb 11:6). This may be said of any approach to the things of God that does not absolutely require faith. Faith is the catalyst for all understanding and spiritual growth. It is the appointed means by which we perceive, will, and do. Furthermore, faith cannot be passed from one person to another. It cannot be derived from a theological system, or identification with a historical religious movement. If faith could not be produced by those who were scholarly experts in a revealed religion – like the Law of Moses – you may be sure it cannot be produced by experts in some systematic theology invented by men. Faith simply cannot be commenced or maintained from the wellspring of this world’s wisdom. It is too shallow, and its waters are stagnant.

The remarkable productivity of the early church was owing to its separation from the world, and the awareness of its complete dependence upon the Lord. During those early days the truth itself was the point, and not a particular view of it.

BUT THE PEOPLE MAGNIFIED THEM

“13b . . . but the people magnified them.” Other versions read, “but the people esteemed them very highly,” NKJV “however, the people held them in high esteem,” NASB “even though they were highly regarded by the people,” NIV “but the people held them in high honor,” RSV “but the people made much of them,” BBE “but the people praised them highly,” CSB “although everyone spoke highly of them,” GWN “but the people were loud in their praise,” NJB “but the people were magnifying them,” YLT “but all had the highest regard for them,” LIVING “but all of the people were saying good things about them,” IE “but the people held them in high regard and praised and made much of them,” AMPLIFIED “even though their general popularity was very great,” PHILLIPS and “even though everyone liked them very much.” CEV

Here is a third observation made of the people within Solomon’s court. First, there were the believers who were all of one accord. Second, there were those who were afraid to join themselves to the believers. Third, it is said that “the people” magnified the believers, even though many, if not all, of them did not dare to join them.

I am of the persuasion that here, the expression “the people” equates to “the common people” of the Gospel account of Jesus’ ministry. It is written, “and the common people heard Him gladly” (Mk 12:37). At that time, Jesus was teaching in the Temple. A number of people were listening to Him, among whom were the Sadducees, some scribes, and others (Mk 12:1-36).

Everyone did not receive His words. In fact, some even sought to take hold of Him (12:12), while others sought to trap him with crafty questions (12:13-28). When, therefore, the Mark text refers to “the common people,” it is referring to the remnant of the people who were not sceptics, or seeking to trap Jesus.

That is the kind of thing that is involved here. “The people” are those who were not opposed to the apostles’ preaching, as were the Temple authorities. And, while they did not rush forward to join the disciples and continue in the apostles’ doctrine, they saw something good in the people, and therefore “magnified them.” In this they fulfilled the word of Jesus, “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven ” (Matt 5:16).

The word “magnified” is an aggressive one, meaning, “to deem or declare great, i.e. to esteem highly, to extol, laud, celebrate,” THAYER “pay great respect to, highly honor,” FRIBERG “Praise, hold in high honor,” UBS “exalt, glorify, praise, extol.” GINGRICH In other words, the people “were saying good words” about the believers. IE They “esteemed” NKJV them, “highly regarded” NIV them “spoke highly of them,” GWN and “their general popularity was very great.” PHILLIPS

This is the kind of thing that first occurred on the day of Pentecost when the believers were “having favor with all the people” (Acts 2:47). This also had particular regard to the teaching of the apostles, which sharply contrasted with that of the scribes and Pharisees. This same kind of response also occurred when the lame man was healed. As it is written, “for all men glorified God for that which was done” (Acts 4:21).

When men participate in the traits of the Kingdom of God – “righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit” NKJV (Rom 14:17) – there is a comeliness to it all that appeals to good men. Thus it is said of such people, “For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men ” (Rom 14:18). That is, there is nothing about spiritual life that contradicts the general consciousness of honesty and goodness. Thus believers can commend themselves to every man’s conscience in the sight of God, knowing that grace works nothing in the heart that is inherently wrong or offensive. Those who oppose the people and work of God do not do so because of any fundamental flaw in them, but because of their own love for the world and consequent hatred of God.

I understand that such a condition does not always prevail – a circumstance where the people of God are being praised and respected. There have been times when holy men have been “defamed,” and made “the filth and offscouring of all things” (1 Cor 4:13). However, the majority of the opposition against the church, that is recorded in Scripture, has come from religious men.

There are records of persecution against the following Christians: the whole Church (Acts 8:1; 9:1-3; Gal 1:13), James (Acts 12:2), the apostles (Acts 4:1-5:52), Peter (Acts 5:3-9), Stephen (Acts 6:9-15; 7:1-60), Paul (Acts 9:23-29; Acts 16:19-25; 20:23-24; 21:27-28; 23:10-15; 2 Cor 11:23-33; 2 Tim 3:11-12), The Thessalonians (1 Thess 2:14); Timothy (Heb 13:23), John (Rev 1:9), Antipas (Rev 2:13), the church of Smyrna (Rev 2:8-10), and the church of Philadelphia (Rev 2:9-10). Most of these oppositions were generated by either Jews or idolaters – religious men. This was also generally true of the persecutions prior to Christ, with proportionately few exceptions. Even in the bloody persecutions of the Roman empire, religion was the issue, as the believers would not bow to Caesar, even as Shadrach, Meshech, and Abednego would not bow to Nebuchadnezzar’s image.

The point to be seen here is that true believers have never been opposed because of immorality, a lack of goodness, or fundamental inconsideration. They have never been noted for being bad citizens, or being an essential hindrance to the welfare of humanity. Those who were aggressive against the saints had to generate false reports about them, and raise spurious accusations. The strength of their morality, and their devotion to their God was never the issue. When the church was spiritually strong, as in our text, those things were always apparent.

In our time, and in our country, Christians, as a whole, are not well spoken of – at least not in the sense of our text. They do not have a good reputation in the financial world, or in the business world. Often they are associated with slothfulness, questionable appearances, and misrepresentation. Their distinctiveness, if, indeed, they have any at all, is not generally found in the domain of wisdom, spirituality, or good works. Some professing Christians are noted for their social oddity, others for their flamboyance, and still others for their political persuasions. Some are only noted for their institutional prominence, impressive building structures, and social involvements. Among professed Christian experts there are those who deal with marital life, economic issues, motivation, and even health. Proportionately few Christian leaders are noted for their expertise in the word and ways of God, or their insightful exposition of the Scriptures.

The thrust was never placed on outsiders, yet outsiders were brought in! The message pertained exclusively to the Lord Jesus, and yet individuals perceived enough relevance in the message to believe! No special interest groups! No contemporary social issues addressed! Yet, “believers were the more added!”

It is not that these are all unlawful areas. Rather, it is that they are not primary, or fundamental domains of thought and deed. None of them require a strong faith, everlasting consolation, or good hope. They are all on the periphery of life, and not at its center .

The church of our time has been led to involvement in extracurricular activities, which they have been taught to view as primary. The result is that its spiritual light has dimmed, if not gone out altogether. It is associated too much with this present evil world , from which Jesus is said to have delivered it (Gal 1:4). In our text, the Herodians, a political branch of the Jews (Matt 22:15-16; Mk 12:13) were not inclined to join themselves to the disciples – at least not in the capacity of Herodians. The Zealots, particularly promoting Jewish Law and Institutions, did not set up camp in the church – even though one of their number, Simon the Zealot (Lk 6:15) was called to be an apostle – but not in the capacity of a Zealot.

The point is that the light of the church shines most brightly in its unwavering commitment to the Lord and its separateness from the world. The more intimately it becomes involved in the affairs that are limited to this world, the less its light shines. I understand that the modern church sees involvement with the world as a means through which its light shines more effectively. That view, however, contradicts the affirmation of Scripture: “For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty (influential NIV) , not many noble , are called” (1 Cor 1:26). This is the call that comes from God Himself! He has not called many who are great in the flesh. However, if the postulate that spiritual light is shed more profusely within the framework of worldly involvements is true, this text could not possibly be right. Nothing in Scripture remotely suggests that the conversion of prominent worldly men and women will result in more godly influence. If that was the case, God would call a lot of them, not a few!

In this text, the people did not praise the believers because they were great athletes, businessmen, entertainers, or politicians. It was because of the spiritual and moral nobility that was evident in their lives, just as it is in believers today! Of course, it will not be possible to exploit this condition for personal advantage. No person can gain worldly prominence by being holy, spiritual or heavenly minded.

MULTITUDES OF BELIEVERS WERE ADDED, BOTH MEN AND WOMEN

“ 14 And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women.”

Wisdom is “justified of her children,” or “vindicated by her deeds” NASB (Matt 11:16). That is, the results of wisdom confirm that it is, in fact, true wisdom. In our text, the manner in which the church was proceeding was confirmed to be the God-ordained one, for the work of the Lord was being made known through their activity. Lest we forget, permit me to once again set before you what these holy brethren had been doing.

Here Is What Had Happened

- Prior to Pentecost, the disciples had first met and prayed together (1:14).
- On the day of Pentecost they were all together in one place and in one accord (2:1).
- On the day of Pentecost, the Holy Spirit was poured forth, resulting in the supernatural speaking of the “wonderful works of God” (2:4,11).
- When a crowd of people gathered, Peter stood up and delivered a word that precisely told what had happened when Jesus died, and how He had been exalted to the right hand of God (2:14-36).
- When the people inquired what they should do, they were told to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ and for the remission of sins, and they would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit (2:37-39).

Wisdom is “justified of her children,” or “vindicated by her deeds.” That is, the results of wisdom confirm that it is, in fact, true wisdom.

With many other words, Peter exhorted the people, telling them the promise was for them, and that they should save themselves from that wayward generation (2:39-40).

- The word was gladly received and obeyed (2:41).
- The disciples continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine, and in fellowship, and in the breaking of bread, and in prayers (2:42).
- Great fear came upon every soul, and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles (2:43).
- All that believed were together and had all things common (2:44-45).
- They continued daily with one accord in the Temple, breaking bread from house to house (2:46).
- When healing a man lame from birth, Peter again gave an insightful summary of the death and exaltation of Christ (3:12-18).
- He told the people to repent so their sins could be forgiven, times of refreshing would come to them, and God would send Jesus to them (3:19-26).
- Peter and John preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead (4:1).
- About 5,000 men believed the preaching (4:4).
- When questioned by the Temple authorities, Peter delivered a stirring exaltation of the Lord Jesus (4:8-12).
- When released, Peter and John reported to the church how they were threatened, and they immediately prayed an insightful prayer, asking for boldness to preach the Word (4:23-30).
- When they had prayed, the house was shaken, they were all filled with the Spirit, they spoke the word of God with boldness, the apostles gave powerful witness to the resurrection of Christ, and great grace was upon them all (4:31-33).
- No one among them lacked, as those who were possessors of lands or houses, sold them and gave the proceeds to the apostles for distribution (4:34-36).
- Ananias and Sapphira were stricken dead for lying to the Holy Spirit (5:1-10).

- Great fear came upon the whole church, and as many as heard what had happened (5:11).
- The disciples gathered with the apostles, and in one accord, in Solomon’s porch, where many signs and wonders were done by the apostles (5:12).

Ponder the Environment

The nature of all of these things is most arresting. They all had to do with the Lord and His great redemption . There was no word delivered concerning contemporary issues. There was no exhortation about the poor and the needy. There was no appeal to any particular age group – like the youth. There was no social outreach in the community. There was no political crusade. There is no record of any attempt to stamp out poverty in Jerusalem. There was no praise service. No man or group of men were unduly exalted. There was no word about the family structure. There was no inquiry about possible personal problems among the people. There was no entertaining event to attract the people – in fact, they were meeting in the Temple, not a local coliseum. No one announced a specialized ministry, asking for support. The solitary Person that was extolled was Jesus, and the only documented reference was the Word of God.

This Is the Context

This is the kind of context in which it is now said, “And believers were the more added!” The thrust was never placed on outsiders, yet outsiders were brought in! The message pertained exclusively to the Lord Jesus, and yet individuals perceived enough relevance in the message to believe! No special interest groups! No contemporary social issues addressed! Yet, “believers were the more added!”

Why was this so? It was because they were in the heart of the will of God, and therefore His hand was made known among them! Men may theorize about what is effective, and there certainly is a lot of that these days. However, in the book of Acts, we have a record of the work of God actually being accomplished. It is not a study on how to do the work, but a report of the work itself!

Keep in mind that this occurred in spite of, what could be viewed as, hindering influences: the threats of the Jewish council, and the sudden death of Ananias and Sapphira.

ADDED TO THE LORD

“And believers were the more added to the Lord . . .” Other versions read, “And believers were increasingly added to the Lord,” NKJV “And all the more believers in the Lord . . . were constantly added to their number,” NASB “ Nevertheless . . . believed in the Lord and were added to their number,” NIV “Yet more than ever believers were added to the Lord” NRSV “had faith, and were joined to the Lord ,” BBE “Believers were added to the Lord in increasing numbers ,” CSB “also the number of them that believed in the Lord, both of men and women, grew more and more ,” GENEVA “And the more were those added who feared the Lord,” MRD “and the numbers . . . who came to believe in the Lord increased steadily ,” NJB “Yet more and more people believed and were brought to the Lord,” NLT “and more and more believers in the Lord joined them ,” WEYMOUTH “Nevertheless, still more believers . . . were being added to the Lord,” ISV “but still a vast number of people . . . who believed in the Lord, continued to join them ,” WILLIAMS “More and more there were being added to the Lord those who believed [those who acknowledged Jesus as their Savior and devoted themselves to Him joined and gathered with them],” AMPLIFIED and ”more than ever believing [ones] were being added to the Lord.” ALT

For the first time we read the expression “added to the Lord.” In the second chapter it is written that 3,000 souls were “added unto them” (2:41), and that the Lord “added to the church” (2:47). The fourth chapter affirms 5,000 “believed” (4:4). Here, however, we read of the same kind of response in different words: “added to the Lord.”

Some of the versions drift at this point, distorting what was said. They render an interpretation of the text rather than a translation: “added to their number,” NASB “came to believe in the Lord,” NJB “brought to the Lord” NLT “continued to join them,” WILLIAMS

The word “added” is not a numerical one, but rather speaks of the process of uniting one to another. It comes from the Greek word proseti,qento , which means, “to put to, to add, join to,” THAYER and “to add something to an existing quantity.” LOUW-NIDA The object to which the addition is made is particularized – tw/l kuri,wl , “the Lord.” The idea is that believers “kept on being added to the Lord.”

The thought of being added to the Lord is also expressed in these words, “But he that is joined unto the Lord is one spirit ,” or “one spirit with Him” NKJV (1 Cor 6:17). Another way of saying this is that we have been “made to drink in one Spirit” (1 Cor 12:13). Again, one might say it this way, “For we are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones ” (Eph 5:30).

Jesus spoke of this marvelous addition, or joining, when He prayed on the night of His betrayal: “That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me, and I in Thee, that they also may be one in Us . . . I in them , and Thou in Me, that they may be made perfect in one . . .” (John 17:21-23).

Being added to the Lord Himself does not make Him any larger, or bring to Him any inherent advantages. It does, however, put us in a position where we can receive of His fulness (John 1:16). Christ is in us (Rom 8:10; 2 Cor 13:5; Col 1:27), and we are in Him (1 Cor 1:30; 16:24; 2 Cor 5:17; 1 John 5:20). Because of this circumstance, the aim is for Christ to be “formed” in us, so that His life is lived out in us (Gal 4:19). Paul put it this way, “Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body. For we which live are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our mortal flesh ” (2 Cor 4:10-11). You see, then, what a marvelous thing is accomplished when a person is “added to the Lord.”

This particular facet of redemption is also delineated in the exposition of men being put into “the body of Christ,” which is His church. The Holy Spirit baptizes us into that body (1 Cor 12:12-13). The relationship of this body to Jesus Himself is reflected in the words, “For we are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones” (Eph 5:30).

MULTITUDES BOTH OF MEN AND WOMEN

“ . . . Multitudes both of men and women.” Other versions read, “ more and more men and women .” NIV “ great numbers of both men and women,” NRSV “a great number of men and women,” BBE “ crowds of both men and women,” CSB “the numbers of men and women who came to believe in the Lord increased steadily ,” NJB “ including great numbers of both of men and woman,” WEYMOUTH “a vast number of both men and women,” ISV and “both men and women in really large numbers .” PHILLIPS

This is the first time women are mentioned in the increase of believers. They were included in the pre-Pentecost disciples (Acts 1:14). As time progressed, women were considered an integral part of the body of Christ. When Saul of Tarsus launched a persecution against the church, he dragged off both “men and women” (Acts 8:3; 9:2), which indicates they were not in a non-functioning role. When the whole city of Samaria believed the powerful preaching of Philip the evangelist, “they were baptized, both men and women ” (Acts 8:12). The first converts in Macedonia were some women (Acts 16:13). When Paul preached in Athens a number of the “chief women,” or “leading woman,” NASB believed and joined Paul and Silas (Acts 17:4). In Thessalonica a number of “honorable women which were Greeks” believed, and in his record of their conversion, Luke lists them before the men who also believed (Acts 17:12).

The increase of believers, and the growth of the body of Christ, included the women. They are nowhere declared to be second class citizens of the heavenly Kingdom, although they are clearly declared to be in subjection to their own husbands. However, husbands and wives and not apt descriptions of members of the body of Christ, for in Him there is “neither male nor female” (Gal 3:28).

In Paul’s letter to the Romans, he mentions several women who were prominent in the work of the Lord. They include Phebe (Rom 16:1), Priscilla who is listed before her husband Aquila (16:3), Mary (16:6), Junia, who was imprisoned with her husband (16:7), Tryphena and Tryphosa who “labored much in the Lord” (16:12), Julia, the sister of Nereus (16:15). Paul also mentioned some women to the Philippians who labored with him “in the Gospel” (Phil 4:3). Philip also had four daughters who were prophetesses (Acts 21:9).

Therefore, as the church begins to grow and people are added to the Lord, the glorious extent of salvation is being made known by the addition of both men and women.

Those who are added to the Lord obtain all of the advantages inherent to being in Him. This includes washing, sanctification, and justification (1 Cor 6:11). It includes access to God (Rom 5:2; Eph 3:12), the right to obtain grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16), and being taught by the grace of God

Throughout the history of God’s people, men and women have been involved in the work of the Lord and devotion to Him. For example, when the gathering of supplies for the building of the tabernacle took place, “both men and women, as many as were willing,” brought gifts (Ex 35:22). When Moses gathered the people together for the hearing of the covenant, the Lord commanded him to “gather the people together, men, women, and children” (Deut 31:12). When a great time of repentance occurred during the ministry of Ezra, “there assembled unto him a very great congregation of men and women and children” (Ezra 10:1). When he delivered the Law to the people, it was before “men and women and all that could hear with understanding” (Neh 8:2).

Now, in our text, the cleansing wave of the Gospel sweeps over both “men and women.” It was not merely brought to the men, who, in turn, delivered it to the women and the children. Both men and women received the Gospel and were “added to the Lord.”

What Is Involved In Being Added to the Lord?

Those who are added to the Lord obtain all of the advantages inherent to being in Him. This includes washing, sanctification, and justification (1 Cor 6:11). It includes access to God (Rom 5:2; Eph 3:12), the right to obtain grace to help in the time of need (Heb 4:16), and being taught by the grace of God (Tit 2:11-12). Those who are “in Christ” have been placed in the heavenly places, and have access to “all spiritual blessings” (Eph 1:3; 2:6). They are “complete” in Christ (Col 2:10), and have been “created unto good works” (Eph 2:10). They are a part of the body of Christ (1 Cor 12:13), and therefore have a necessary function within the body itself (1 Cor 12:18). They have access to “all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” that are hidden in Him (Col 2:3). They are among those of whom it is written, “Now the God of peace . . . make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Heb 13:21). All of the promises of God are “Yes” in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 1:20). All believers are “made the righteousness of God in Him” (2 Cor 5:21). All of those things were made available to the multitudes of men and women who were “added to the Lord.”

Faith brought them to the arena of spiritual blessing and plentitude far beyond the conception of any man. No redemptive distinctions were declared.

INSOMUCH THAT THEY BROUGHT FORTH THE SICK INTO THE STREETS

“ 15 Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.”

We are witnessing the outbreak of spiritual life, and it was all brought on by the powerful preaching of the Gospel. It is the belief of the Gospel, not the witnessing of miracles, that results in men and women being “added to the Lord.” Now, the word of what is happening in Solomon’s porch spreads throughout the city, and eventually even into surrounding areas. That indicates that this was an extended period of blessing – one that was befitting of an enthroned Savior and “the glorious gospel of the blessed God” (1 Tim 1:11). God is being glorified in these responses.

INSOMUCH

“Insomuch . . .” Other versions read, “so that,” NKJV “to such an extent that,” NASB “As a result,” NIV “And they even,” BBE “Thus,” NAB “so as,” YLT and “in consequence .”
MONTGOMERY

The word “insomuch” is translated from the Greek word w[ste (hoce-the), which is a consecutive conjunction, expressing consequence. The lexical meaning of the word is, “so that,” THAYER “therefore for this reason . . . so that, with the result that,” FRIBERG and “the result or effect of the action in the principle clause.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

The fifteenth verse is a continuation of the first part of verse twelve. After stating that many signs and wonders were being done through the hands of the apostles, there is a parenthetical statement. It enlarges on what was taking place at that time, showing the blessed harmony between what the apostles were saying and doing.: (“and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch. And of the rest durst no man join himself to them: but the people magnified them. And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women”) – (Acts 5:12b-14).

Therefore, the word “insomuch” provides an explanation for the extent of the signs and wonders that were being done by the apostles. This was a most unusual display of Divine power. In a way, it is reminiscent of one of the occasions during which Jesus wrought many miracles. It is written of that occasion, “and the power of the Lord was present to heal them” (Lk 5:17). On another occasion it is said of Jesus, “for there went virtue out of Him, and healed them all” (Lk 6:19).

In this text, Jesus, as the Administrator of the Kingdom, is working from heaven through the men He had ordained to represent Him. He is not working in a static or unchanging manner, but with holy variableness. He knows when to send forth a special measure of power, and when to seemingly withhold it, as when James was beheaded some time later. As always, these works were done in strict accord with the will of God, and in keeping with His eternal purpose.

As with all spiritual gifts, the power to work signs and wonders was not resident in the apostles themselves. It was delegated to them in a Divinely determined and timely manner. No person endued with such power can employ it at will. The power is given to the faithful in order to do God’s will alone. Once this is seen, it will assist in diffusing the inclination of men to want to emulate the working of miracles. Those who have such a desire have a marked tendency to overstate the works that are done, and to make valiant efforts to assign to God things that do not bear Divine distinction. I find this is a common weakness in certain Christian circles.

However, no such thing will be found in the signs and wonders that were wrought through the hands of the apostles. The effectiveness of their work is confirmed by the flood of people who brought forth the sick when they heard of what was happening. These people did not come out of curiosity, but in a full persuasion that genuine miracles were taking place.

Keep in mind that this has all happened suddenly and totally without any human planning. It is something that was initiated from heaven, and all the powers of darkness could not diminish the greatness of what was happening. It is as though Satan's arms and legs withered, and he became impotent. Even though he filled the heart of Ananias to lie to the Holy Spirit, and embezzle funds that had been pledged to God, the devil was not able to stem the tide of renewal that was breaking forth in Jerusalem.

In this text we are given confirming evidence of the exaltation of Jesus, the superiority of His rule, and the power of the Gospel. It speaks of a certain purity of heart and whole-hearted commitment to the Lord that was present. In my judgment, this was an environment in which the Lord could work more freely. Consider the following descriptions of the surroundings.

- The unvarnished truth of the Gospel was being preached.
- An unquestioned faith and commitment was found in those who were speaking.
- The believers were of one heart and soul, and were thus of one accord.
- A certain priority was present regarding the Lord Jesus Christ, His accomplishments, and His ministry.
- Sin had been purged from presence of believers.

In the early days of the church, there was a more rapid spread of the Gospel, and a more extensive multiplication of disciples, in addition the display of many wonderful works. It appears to me that this was directly related to the moral and spiritual purity that were found among the disciples, as well as the unadulterated Gospel that was being preached.

In such surroundings, the Spirit would not be quenched, grieved, or resisted. Any expression of unbelief would come from those who were clearly against the preaching of the Gospel, and were not numbered with the believers. In addition to these cursory observations, the reports of the workings of the Lord would go abroad, for God "hath made His wonderful works to be remembered" (Psa 111:4).

The Nature of Those Times

In the early days of the church, there was a more rapid spread of the Gospel, and a more extensive multiplication of disciples – in addition the display of many wonderful works. It appears to me that this was directly related to the moral and spiritual purity that were found among the disciples, as well as the unadulterated Gospel that was being preached. Some allege that these traits gradually reduced and finally disappeared because they were Divinely assigned only to the beginning of the New Covenant era. I am rather inclined to think that it is the introduction of pervasive false teaching and hypocrisy that caused this apparent reduction.

Early in the church, corrupt doctrine was introduced by profane teachers (Acts 15:1,5; 20:29-30; Rom 16:17-18; 1 Cor 11:18-19; 2 Cor 2:17; 11:3-4,13-15; Gal 1:6-8; 5:10; Eph 4:14; Phil 1:15-16; 3:2; Col 2:4,8,18-19; 1 Tim 1:3-7; 4:7; 6:3-5; 6:20-21; 2 Tim 2:14-18; 2 Tim 3:6-9; Tit 1:10-14; Heb 13:9; 1 John 2:18,26; 4:1-5; 2 John 1:7,10-11).

Error and falsehood cannot be introduced within the professing church without impacting upon the working of the Lord among men. There are several reasons for this condition.

- Sin in all of its deceptive forms quenches and grieves the Holy Spirit.
- Truth is held back by unrighteousness, particularly when it is found among confessing Christians (Rom 1:18).
- When found among God's people, sin drives a wedge between men and God, as confirmed in the case of Achan (Josh 7:10-26).

Thus, the purity of the environment of the time can, in part, account for the outstanding things that took place during it.

THEY BROUGHT THE SICK

“ . . . that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches . . .” Other versions read, “they even carried the sick out into the streets , and laid them on cots and pallets,” NASB “people brought the sick into the streets and laid them on beds and mats ,” NIV “they even took into the streets people who were ill, and put them on beds,” BBE “into the broad places to bring forth the ailing , and to lay them upon couches and mats,” YLT “So that they [even] kept carrying out the sick into the streets and placing them on couches and sleeping pads,” AMPLIFIED “people would bring out their sick into the streets and lay them down on stretchers or bed ,” PHILLIPS “ [they were] bringing out the sick and laying [them] on cots and mats along the open streets ,” ALT and “ sick people were brought out to the road and placed on cots and mats.” CEV

This was not an experiment, for it is doubtful that people would put themselves to such an inconvenience for something that was doubtful. The signs and wonders that were being done by the apostles were genuine, and the people knew it.

The text does not say sick people came, although I do not doubt that many such people came in the press – people like lepers (Matt 8:2) and the woman with an issue of blood (Matt 9:20). Here, however, the emphasis is on the sick being “brought” to the apostles – even as they were often brought to Jesus (Matt 4:24; 8:16; 9:2; Lk 4:40). The fact that the sick were laid on “beds and couches” confirms they were invalids, or in an extremely weakened and hopeless condition. The people had done the same thing when Jesus ministered among them. As it is written, “And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew Him, and ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick , where they heard he was” (Mk 6:54-55).

This was not an experiment, for it is doubtful that people would put themselves to such an inconvenience for something that was doubtful. The signs and wonders that were being done by the apostles were genuine, and the people knew it. There was no doubt about their reality. Even those who were openly opposing the apostles said of the particular work that caused their opposition to surface, “that indeed a notable miracle hath been done by them is manifest to all them that dwell in Jerusalem; and we cannot deny it” (Acts 4:16).

Many of the professed miracles of our day are viewed with scepticism. However, that was not the case in the book of Acts – and particularly in our text.

AT LEAST THE SHADOW OF PETER

“ . . . that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.” Other versions read, “so that when Peter came by, at least his shadow might fall on any one of them ,” NASB “ so that at least Peter's shadow might fall on some of them as he passed by,” NIV “that as Peter came by at least his shadow might fall on some of them,” RSV “so that when Peter went by, some of them might be in his shade ,” BBE “that when Peter came, his shadow at the least, might overshadow any of them, and they might be delivered from their infirmities ,” DOUAY “so that at least Peter's shadow might fall on some sick people as he went by,” GWN “for Peter's shadow to touch them when he came by,” IE and “[in the hope] that as Peter passed by, at least his shadow might fall on some of them.” AMPLIFIED

This suggests that we are reading of an extended period during which the apostles were going in and out of the Temple, walking through the streets. It also confirms the leadership of Peter among the apostles, as Paul affirms (Gal 1:18; 2:7-8). Additionally it gives us a commentary on what was involved in Jesus giving the keys of the Kingdom of heaven to Peter (Matt 16:19). That is why Peter is the only one of the twelve that is mentioned in Acts after 12:2.

Luke provides no further explanation for this most remarkable incident. We are not told why the people concluded that even the shadow of Peter's body was sufficient to work a miracle of healing. Further, Luke does not suggest their perception was wrong. The very fact that he records it strongly suggests its possibility. Perhaps this had happened before – something like those who sought to touch Jesus that they might be healed (Lk 6:19). There was also the woman who reasoned, "If I may but touch His clothes, I shall be whole" (Mk 5:28). Later, a multitude of people "sought Him that they might touch only the hem of His garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole" (Matt 14:36). In the book of Acts we read that "God wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul: so that from his body were brought unto the sick handkerchiefs or aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the evil spirits went out of them" (Acts 19:12).

What we are seeing here is Jesus building His church, just as He said He would. He was not doing it through the strategies and methodologies of men, but through the Gospel and mighty deeds. The apostles had filled Jerusalem with their doctrine largely by means of reports, and what they had declared being "noised abroad"

Such miracles were by no means a standard way of Divine working. This kind of miracle is classified as "special," or "unusual." NKJV These were, then, wrought according to the will of God, as affirmed in Hebrews 2:4. There is no need to suppose that the reasoning of those who sought for even the shadow of Peter to pass over the sick was not rewarded with healing. After all, there is such a thing as Divine working that is "according to your faith" (Matt 9:29). I am going to assume that is the case here, for there is no clear reason to do otherwise.

It does not seem reasonable that this is a proper place to insert the record of futile deeds that were driven by misconceptions of what the apostles were doing. Further, the fact that this verse is an extension of the statement that "by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people" (v 12), seems to me to compel the conclusion that the people's quest was favorably seen by the Lord.

There is no need for us to impose modern-day skepticism on the text. Nothing about it suggests that the people had misjudged what was possible, or that this is nothing more than a record of their wishes. This comes under the general heading of "inasmuch" – i.e., it is an extension of apostolic miracles.

A MULTITUDE CAME FROM SURROUNDING CITIES

" 16 There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one. "

This verse also supports the conclusion that people were really healed when Peter's shadow fell upon them. If this had not been the case, the report of failure would also have spread, and would not have contributed to such a remarkable multitude being brought into Jerusalem. Remember, this is still part of the "insomuch" statement that elaborated on the many signs and wonders being done "by the hands of the apostles."

MULTITUDES CAME, BRINGING SICK FOLKS

"There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them which were vexed with unclean spirits . . ." Other versions read, "Also a multitude gathered from the surrounding cities to Jerusalem, bringing sick people and those who were tormented by unclean spirits," NKJV "And also the people from the cities in the vicinity of Jerusalem were coming together, bringing people who were sick or afflicted with unclean spirits.” NASB “Crowds gathered also from the towns around Jerusalem , bringing their sick and those tormented by evil spirits, NIV “A great number of people would also gather from the towns around Jerusalem, bringing the sick and those tormented by unclean spirits,” NRSV “And numbers of people came together from the towns round about Jerusalem, with those who were ill and those who were troubled with unclean spirits ,” BBE “and there were coming together also the people of the cities round about to Jerusalem, bearing ailing persons, and those harassed by unclean spirits.” YLT “They were coming from all the towns around Jerusalem . They brought their sick and those who were bothered by evil spirits,” IE “The inhabitants, too, of the towns in the neighborhood of Jerusalem came in crowds , bringing sick persons and some who were harassed by foul spirits,” WEYMOUTH “The people of the towns near Jerusalem also continued to come in crowds , bringing their sick and those who were harried by unclean spirits,” MONTGOMERY “And the people gathered also from the towns and hamlets around Jerusalem, bringing the sick and those troubled with foul spirits ,” AMPLIFIED and “In addition a large crowd collected from the cities around Jerusalem , bringing with them their sick and those who were suffering from evil spirits.” PHILLIPS

Behold how rapidly the people were multiplied! There was no human plan, no contrived strategy, no special advertisement or appeal to the multitudes. The people came together upon the basis of a report of what was taking place – just as they on Pentecost (Acts 2:6), and when the lame man was healed at the Gate Beautiful (Acts 3:11).

Later the “council” will charge the apostles with filling Jerusalem with their doctrine (5:28). Actually, there is no record of them going throughout the city preaching. At this point, we are expressly told that the preaching was going on in the Temple, in Solomon’s Porch. I do not doubt that wherever the apostles went they spoke the Word, but to this point they were generally gathered with believers, with outsiders, or “the rest,” being drawn to them because of their great works and poignant words.

What we are seeing here is Jesus building His church, just as He said He would (Matt 16:18). He was not doing it through the strategies and methodologies of men, but through the Gospel and mighty deeds. The apostles had filled Jerusalem with their doctrine largely by means of reports, and what they had declared being “noised abroad” (Acts 2:6).

It is most difficult for a person in the grip of spiritual Babylon to think in this manner about the spread of the truth and the gathering of people. Notwithstanding, this should not surprise us. Jesus said if He was “lifted up from the earth,” speaking of His death, He would “draw all men” to Himself (John 12:32). That is, when He had put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, and returned to heaven, He would compel men from within to come to Him. This would be done through the powerful Gospel, the light of the good works of His people, and the report of “the wonderful works of God.”

Where these things are not present, men must caucus together and figure out a way to reach the people. For example, in my fifty-five years of ministry (as of 2007), I have heard the professing church speaking endlessly about reaching the world for Christ. In the past twenty-five years, we have been hearing a lot about the “10/40” window of the world, which represents the people groups largely unreached by the Gospel. This window lies across Africa and Asia from 10 degrees latitude north of the equator to 40 degrees latitude north of the equator. More than 3.2 billion people live in this area – about half of the world’s population. There are literally hundreds of mission groups plotting ways to carry the Gospel to these areas – and the area remains basically the same. So far as I know, no significant number of people from these areas are migrating to where the work of God is being reported.

But that is the kind of thing that is happening in our text. Already, when the church was launched on the day of Pentecost, there were devout Jews there “from every nation under heaven” (2:5). The growth in the number of disciples is recorded in these words: “there were added unto them about three thousand souls . . . the Lord added daily to the church . . . many of them which heard believed, and the number of the men was about five thousand . . . and believers were the more added to the Lord, both men and women” (2:41,47; 4:4; 5:14). All of this without any human organization, strategy, or initiative! As it is written, “This is the LORD'S doing; it is marvelous in our eyes” (Psa 118:23).

Now the people pour into the city of Jerusalem from the surrounding towns. To give an idea of the number of towns surrounding Jerusalem, the following towns were within a five mile radius of the Holy City. (1) Ramah JOSH 18:25 , (2) Shiloh, JOSH 18:1 (3) Beth-Horon, 1 KGS 9:17 (4) Bethel, JOSH 18:13 (5) Ai, JOSH 10:1 (6) Michmash, 1 SAM 13:2 (7) Gilgal, JOSH 15:7 (8) Ajjalon, JOSH 21:24 (9) Ramah, JOSH 18:25 (10) Jericho, MATT 20:29 (11) Anathoth, JOSH 21:18 (12) Zorah, JOSH 19:41 (13) Zanoah, JOSH 15:34 (14) Jarmuth, JOSH 15:35 (15) Bethlehem, MATT 2:1 (16) Makkedah Gedor, JOSH 15:41,58 (17) Adullam, JOSH 15:35 (18) Keilah, JOSH 15:44 (19) Mamre, GEN 14:13 (20) Machpelah, GEN 23:9 (21) Hebron, JOSH 21:11 and (22) Engedi. JOSH 15:62

During Christ’s ministry, people often came to Him out of many different cities (Matt 14:13; Mk 1:45; 6:33). Now, after He had ascended into heaven and assumed the reins of the Kingdom, the same thing is happening regarding the ministry of His apostles. Also, during Christ’s ministry they brought the infirm and “laid the sick in the streets, and besought Him that they might touch if it were but the border of His garment” (Mk 6:56). Here again, the sick were placed in the street.

The point to be seen here is simply that God can so work that people will flock to hear the Word and experience deliverance. That working, however, requires both a pure message and a holy people. There is no human strategy that can manipulate God into a position where He draws people in the manner seen in this text. This drawing is a result of a heavenly determination, not a human scheme.

I must confess that I long to behold such marvelous workings on a among an obviously holy people with spiritual understanding. Already, as a sort of firstfruits, we have seen this kind of drawing in our assembly. It has not been the result of promotion, or some human initiative. The only thing we have to offer is a revealed and unchanging message that is the appointed catalyst for Divine working and blessing.

EVERY ONE WAS HEALED

“ . . . and they were healed every one.” Other versions read, “and they were all healed,” NKJV “and they were all being healed,” NASB “ and all of them were healed,” NIV “ and they were all cured ,” NRSV “and they were all made well ,” BBE “and each person was cured ,” GWN “who were all healed ,” YLT “and every one of them was healed,” LIVING “ All of these people were healed,” IE “ and they were cured, one and all ,” WEYMOUTH

The Scriptures contain several references to everyone being healed by Jesus . “ . . . and He healed them . . . and healed all that were sick . . . and He healed them all . . . he laid His hands on every one of them, and healed them . . . “for there went out of Him virtue, and healed them all” (Matt 4:24; 8:16; 12:15; Luke 4:40; 6:19).

This was not always the case. Sometimes it is said that Jesus healed “many.” “And He healed many that were sick . . . for He had healed man” (Mk 1:34; 3:10). Once it is written that He healed them “that had need of healing” (Lk 9:11). Another time it is written that “as many as touched were made perfectly whole” (Matt 14:36; Mk 6:56). Once the Lord was at the pool of Bethesda where “a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, and withered” were found. Passing over them all, Jesus singled out a solitary man and healed him, commanded the man to pick up his bed and walk (John 5:1-9).

In the wilderness, when Israel was plagued with poisonous snakes, Moses was commanded to make a serpent of brass and hoist it on a pole. Any person who was bitten, “when he beheld the serpent, he lived” (Num 21:9).

The point to be seen here is the extraordinary nature of the times. Jesus did not always heal everyone, which indicates that is not always the will of the Father – for Jesus always did the things that pleased His Father (John 8:29). This was a time when the extraordinary Gospel was being preached by spiritually uncommon men, in an environment of strong faith.

The Lord was working in such a manner as to confirm who He was, and the reality of His great salvation. This does not mean the Lord only worked in such a manner at the beginning of the New Covenant era – the day of salvation. It does mean that God works in such a way when His purpose is advanced by this manner of working.

The aim was not merely to heal sick people. If that was the aim, then they all would have been healed when Jesus walked among them. This is evident, because a whole host of sick people were brought in from outlying areas – areas in which Jesus preached for more than three years. Mind you, this was the area around Jerusalem, where our Lord spent considerable time, especially during the latter part of His ministry. Yet a few weeks after His ascension back into heaven, a multitude of sick people still remained. It should not be difficult to see that there is a higher purpose being fulfilled by the exalted Christ than ensuring that everyone has good health.

Again, this was a fulfillment of the prayer of the church: “And now, Lord, behold their threatenings: and grant unto thy servants, that with all boldness they may speak thy word, by stretching forth thine hand to heal; and that signs and wonders may be done by the name of thy holy child Jesus ” (Acts 4:30). Until that time, so far as the record of the apostles’ working is concerned, there had been a single healing – the man at the gate Beautiful (Acts 3:1-11). On Pentecost, the apostles were said to have done “many wonders and signs” (Acts 2:43). These probably included healings, although a point is never made of it. What should be seen here is the sudden quantum leap from very little healing to an abundance of it. Limiting ourselves to the written record, we have one man being healed. A short time later many sick people were brought in from the neighboring cities were all healed – “every one.”

Throughout history there have been periods of spiritual dryness, when men and women of faith longed for the Lord to bare His holy arm, working in an apparent manner. Our text has confirmed that in a very short span of time there can be an outbreak of spiritual life and Divine workings – workings with an impact upon men.

This should establish to our hearts that nothing is too hard for the Lord, His arm is not shortened, and He can suddenly show Himself strong and convincingly. It seems to me that, if we are engaged in the will of the Lord, it is in order to pray for the Lord to work in such a manner. This is in keeping with David’s petition, “O Lord God. . . show Thyself!” (Psa 94:1). With, David, the plea was for recompense upon his enemies. For Moses it was for glory. Both sought revelation.

CONCLUSION

The remarkable incidents that are chronicled in our text took place immediately after a great judgment – the death of Ananias and Sapphira. At the time of that judgment, the Spirit moved Luke to record a number of things.

- “Great fear came upon all them that heard these things” (5:5).
- “And great fear came upon all the church, and upon as many as heard these things” (5:11).

- “And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people” (5:12).
- “And of the rest durst no man join himself to them” (5:13a).
- “. . . but the people magnified them ” – the apostles in particular, and the believers in general (Acts 5:13b).
- “And believers were the more added to the Lord, multitudes both of men and women)” (Acts 5:14).

Those who are prone to think in terms of, what is called, positive thought, and of its power, could not navigate well in such a surrounding. No amount of positive thought, no matter how extensive, could have produced the things of which we are reading.

Apart from the working of the Lord, where could such a mixture of human responses be found? As natural men perceive things, some of these responses are so contradictory they could never occur at the same time – i.e., fearing and magnifying, no man daring to join yet believers being added in great numbers, etc. The working of the Lord does not fit into the natural order, but is rather imposed upon it! It stands separate and apart from nature, which has no powers to produce such things – things that liberate the soul, glorify God, and clarify His eternal purpose. There simply is no power resident in the natural order that can produce such marvelous things.

Those who are prone to think in terms of, what is called, positive thought , and of its imagined power, could not navigate well in such a surrounding. No amount of positive thought, no matter how extensive, could have produced the things of which we are reading. The recollection of Ananias and Sapphira being struck dead would keep the people sober, forbidding the outbreak of carnal jubilation or fleshly joy. The signs and wonders wrought by the apostles would remind the people that God ’s power was the source of blessing as well as judgment, and that it was altogether transcendent to the natural order. Multitudes of believers being added to the Lord would accent the power of the Gospel, and neutralize any inordinate fear brought on by the appearance of supernatural works.

I get the impression that the blessing of the Lord was poured forth because of His good pleasure in the proclamation of the record He had given of His Son. He had exalted the Lord Jesus, and His messengers received the word with joy, quickly proclaiming it. He was also pleased with those who had embraced the Son, and were fleeing to Him for refuge, to lay hold on the hope that was being set before them (Heb 8:18). These were the kind of people that could be multiplied to the glory of God.

Under such conditions, there is no need to try and produce additions. The “truth of the Gospel,” when proclaimed, will produce fruit, for it is undergirded by Divine power. As it is written, “. . . the word of the truth of the gospel; which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit , as it doth also in you” (Col 1:5-6). Those who believe the Gospel know this to be true. Such have every right to expect the Lord to work where faith and truth are found.

Jesus once taught His disciples, “the seed is the word of God” (Lk 8:11). That, according to His own word, was a facet of “the mysteries of the kingdom of God” (Lk 8:10). The “word of God” has particular reference to the Good News – “the Gospel of the Kingdom” that Jesus heralded among men (Matt 4:23; Matt 9:35). After His resurrection, when Jesus spent forty days with His disciples, He spoke to them “of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God” (Acts 1:3). When Philip preached in Samaria, he spoke of “things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ” (Acts 8:12). When Paul preached in Ephesus, for three months he disputed and persuaded men “concerning the Kingdom of God” (Acts 19:8). When he left that area he confessed he had gone among them “preaching the Kingdom of God” (Acts 20:25). When he was in his own hired house in Rome, held as a prisoner, a day was appointed to him for the people to come into his lodging. It is written that “he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus” (Acts 28:23). The last verse in the book of Acts tells us that Paul dwelt two years in that house, receiving all who came to him, “preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 28:31).

Should the time come when the church returns to the emphasis that is clearly seen in this record of the activities of the people of God, it may very well be that the Lord will work as He did in the book of Acts. However, as long as the professing church is content to dabble in political, domestic and social issues, it will remain fundamentally powerless, for such words are in no sense “the seed of the Kingdom.” The Gospel is not A power, but is THE power of God!

It is not right for men to make a business out of religion, building financial empires, and institutions that bear their own names, and glorify their own persons and objectives. Attempting to sanctify such things as fund-raising and expertise in organization are nothing more than an exercise in vanity. There is a reason why a record of such efforts is not found in the Word of God. They have no spiritual power. The fact that such entities are characterized by spiritual impotence confirms this to be the case. It is ever true that Divine power can only be employed for holy purposes. It is not possible for a holy God to dispatch His power for unholy purposes. Heavenly gifts cannot be used in the fulfillment of purely earthly objectives. The Kingdom of God is one that is strictly governed by the exalted Christ (Isa 9:6-7), so that Divine resources are always matched with Divine purposes. Not only for the King determine what is to be done, but also how it will be done, as well as who does it. The book of Acts – in particular the text we have just covered – is a confirmation of this unvarying reality. These realities are being lived out in the text.

Lesson #23

THE APOSTLES ARRESTED

INTRODUCTION

This text records the third time the apostles have confronted irate Jewish authorities – men who were disturbed by the message and works of the ambassadors of Jesus. Further, they boldly confronted and opposed the apostles, even doing so openly.

• (1) – “And as they spake unto the people, the priests, and the captain of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them, being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead. And they laid hands on them, and put them in hold unto the next day: for it was now eventide” (Acts 4:1-3).

(2) – “And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem. And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?” (Acts 4:6-7).

• (3) – “Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation, and laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison” (Acts 5:17-18).

The truth of the Gospel disrupted the manner of thinking of these leaders, and conflicted with their emphasis – an emphasis they thought perfectly comported with the Law. Although a highway had been raised up by God to escape the condemnation of the law, the world, and all of its misconceptions, these men stand up in defiance against the messengers of the Gospel – the good news that announced and facilitated spiritual liberty. This highway had been prophesied by Isaiah: “And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called The way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein ” (Isa 35:8). However, these opposing leaders saw no correlation between the prophecies of holy prophets and the Lord Jesus Christ and His ambassadors. They could not make the connection between the Person and accomplishments of Jesus and the testimony of the law and the prophets. Speaking of this inability Paul wrote, “But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: which none of the princes of this world knew : for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory” (1 Cor 2:8).

The thrust of modern religion makes too much room for boasting, and too little for faith. There is a lot of disinterest, casualness, and downright carnality.

These men had dominated the Jewish scene, so that few people dared to oppose them, or conduct their lives in a manner that was not approved by them. Some had even shunned to confess Christ before men because of the stilted requirements imposed upon them by this motley group of pretenders. On one occasion during Christ’s ministry, He healed a man who was born blind. The miracle was very disconcerting to the religious leaders, and thus they questioned the man’s parents to confirm how he was healed. His parents declined to answer, saying their son could answer for himself. John provides an explanation for that refusal. “These words spake his parents, because they feared the Jews : for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confess that he was Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue. Therefore said his parents, He is of age; ask him” (John 9:23).

Not long before He was betrayed into the hands of wicked men, there were a number of “chief rulers” who believed in Jesus. Yet, they would not acknowledge that fact, but concealed it from the people, not confessing Jesus. John again gives the reason for their conduct. “Nevertheless among the chief rulers also many believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him , lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God” (John 12:42-43).

Now, however, these pretentious men will confront liberated souls who are walking with Christ and filled with the Spirit. These holy men will not be intimidated by these false leaders. They know “the fear of man bringeth a snare” (Prov 29:25). They are also keenly aware of the One they are serving: “the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords” (1 Tim 6:15). They had personally heard the risen Christ say, “All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth” (Matt 28:18). With them, this was not merely a religious view, or the official position of the newly formed church. This was something that was alive in their spirits.

There are a number of things in contemporary Christianity that are outside the perimeter of God’s “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11). However, at the head of the list is the promotion of a teaching that does not leave people with an acute awareness of the living God and His Christ. The members of the churches in our land are not being brought to a place where they live by faith and walk in the Spirit. A flood of human wisdom is poured over them that is quenching the Spirit and promoting fame for men. The average American congregation is not walking in the light as the Lord is in the light (1 John 1:7), and most everyone knows it. There is no spiritual cognizance of the presence of the Lord, and their best services are something like a high school pep rally that produces effects that soon wear off. The thrust of modern religion makes too much room for boasting, and too little for faith. There is a lot of disinterest, casualness, and downright carnality.

Notwithstanding these conditions, our text is delivering an arresting message to the modern church. Here we are reading of a different breed of teachers. They are absorbed with the message Christ, and are totally unimpressed by the threats of men. The people who hear them are forward to come together, submitting themselves to the Word of the Lord, and doing so with one accord and joy. When they are opposed by the highest ranking religious officials in their nation, they ignore their threats. When they are visited by messengers from heaven, they instantly obey. Their message has moral and spiritual power, and it produces satisfying effects in those who receive it. Make no mistake about this, we are being exposed to real spiritual life – the life Jesus being lived out in those who are living by faith.

THOSE WHO WERE FILLED WITH INDIGNATION

“ 5:17 Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation”

Remember, the apostles are teaching in the Temple, and multitudes of people are hearing and giving heed to them. They have been preaching good news. Allow me refresh your minds about the good things that have been declared from the day of Pentecost to this time.

- The prophecy of Joel concerning the pouring forth of the Spirit upon “all flesh” has been declared as taking place (2:15-18).
- Whoever calls upon the name of the Lord will be saved (2:21).
- Jesus had worked among the people, being “approved of God” among them “by miracles and wonders and signs ” (2:22).

When men and women are first born again, it is difficult for them to of conceive others not wanting what they have. They know what the truth has done for them, and they are sure that everyone else will be happy with truth of Christ also. However, it is not long before they find out this is not the case.

Although Jesus had been “delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,” God had raised Him from the dead (2:23-32).

- It was impossible for death to maintain its hold on Jesus (2:24b).
- Jesus, being exalted to the right hand of God, had shed forth the Holy Spirit (2:33).
- God had made Jesus “both Lord and Christ” (2:35).
- Those who repented and were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, would receive the gift of the Holy Spirit (2:38).
- The promised Spirit was for all who heard the Gospel, their children, and even those who were afar off (2:39).
- Men were told to “repent and be converted” in order that their sins might be “blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord” (3:19).
- God would “send Jesus” to the people, which was before preached to them (3:20).
- To the Jews first, God raised up Jesus, and sent Him to bless them, in “turning away” every one of them from their iniquities (3:26).
- Jesus was the Stone whom the builders rejected. Yet, God made Him the Head of the corner (4:11).
- There is no salvation in any other, “for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12).
- Peter and John boldly affirmed they could not “but speak the things which” they had “seen and heard” (4:20).
- With great power the apostles had given “witness to the resurrection of Christ” (4:33).

The apostles had also spoken frankly about sin, refusing to gloss it (2:23; 3:13-15,17; 4:11,19; 5:3-

Behold the candidness with which they spoke, and the unquestionable focus of their preaching. They did not address the state of the nation as such. Modern day domestic, social, and political issues were not addressed. Although they were Jews like Barabbas, they were not insurrectionists like him. They were not seeking political freedom or financial security. They were not preaching about the blessing of abundant wealth, financial security, and the health of the body. Every emphasis of this kind was introduced by other men. The apostles had no part in such preaching and teaching – and they are the foundation of the church (Eph 2:20).

Lest men become naive, thinking that such a good message will surely be received by all, our text will confirm this is not the case. When men and women are first born again, it is difficult for them to conceive others not wanting what they have. They know what the truth has done for them, and they are sure that everyone else will be happy with truth of Christ also. However, it is not long before they find out this is not the case.

Those Who Opposed the Apostles

When those who are obviously caught up in the ways of the world reject the truth of God, it is not so surprising – although even that is disappointing to the tender of heart. However, when those who profess to be followers of God and devoted to His word reject the truth, that is another matter. That is the kind of thing that we find in our text. Here is opposition from the religious sector! Further, this was no ordinary religious sector. These were leaders among the people of whom it is said, “Who are Israelites; to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 9:4-5). Let me again emphasize, it is the LEADERS among the chosen people that will take an aggressive stand against the apostles.

Already these leaders have opposed Peter and John (Acts 4:1). Now they come against the apostles as a whole.

THE HIGH PRIEST AND ALL THAT WERE WITH HIM

“Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) . . .” Other versions read, “the high priest and all his associates , who were members of the part of the Sadducees” NIV “the high priest took action ; he and all who were with him (that is, the sect of the Sadducees),” NRSV “Then the high priest intervened with all his supporters from the party of the Sadducees,” NJB “The High Priest and his relatives and friends among the Sadducees reacted ,” LIVING “This roused the High Priest. He and all his party - the sect of the Sadducees,” WEYMOUTH “Now the high priest took a stand , and all his friends, the party of the Sadducees,” WILLIAMS and “But the high priest rose up and all who were his supporters, that is, the party of the Sadducees.” AMPLIFIED

The high priest of reference was Caiaphas, who held that office throughout Christ’s ministry, consistently opposing the Lord, and even seeking his death. He was not a high priest after the order of Aaron, but, according to history, was appointed to his office by the procurator Valerius Gratus, under Tiberius. He continued in office from A.D. 26 to 37. FAUSSET’S BIBLE DICTIONARY It appears from Acts 5:17 that he himself was of the sect of the Sadducees. In reality, he was nothing more than a political pawn, appointed by the Roman government to assist in keeping the Jews in subjection to the government.

The high priest had a number of people who were aligned with him, and no doubt chosen by him. They are called his “associates,” NIV “his supporters,” NJB “his relatives and friends,” LIVING

“All his part,” WEYMOUTH and “all his friends.” WILLIAMS They are further described as “the sect of the Sadducees.” Keep in mind that this sect, gathered by the high priest, was noted for their spiritual obtuseness. They said “there is no resurrection, neither angel, nor spirit” (Acts 23:8; Matt 22:23; Mk 12:18; Lk 20:27). That contradicted the clear affirmations of both Moses and the prophets (Gen 16:7; Ex 3:2; 14:19; 33:2; Judges 6:11; Psa 91:11; Dan 3:28; Zech 1:9; Job 14:12; Isa 26:19). Yet, an alliance with these heretics suited the objectives of the high priest, and thus the Sadducees held a prominent part in the Jewish culture.

This is one of the plagues of institutionalized religion: it allows the for people with seriously contradicting views to be joined together in the name of the Lord. In such a case, the touchstone of acceptance has very little to do with God or Christ. God’s “eternal purpose,” though it has been revealed and expounded, has no place in such alliances. Therefore there is no necessity for men to subscribe to the revealed details of that purpose.

A God-Ordained Office

The “high priest” was a God-ordained office (Lev 21:10). Further, the high priest was a representative of the people, not a tyrant placed over them (Heb 9:7). Their duties had to do with Divine service, not public authority. Some of the ordained duties included the following.

- Had charge of the sanctuary and the altar (Num 18:2 – Aaron and sons).
- Offered sacrifices (Heb 5:1; 8:3).
- Designated subordinate priests for various duties (Num 4:19).
- Officiated at the consecration of the Levites (Num 8:11-21).
- Had charge of the treasury (2 Kgs 12:10).
- Lit the lamps in the Tabernacle, and the Temple (Ex 27:20-21).
- Burned incense (Ex 30:7).
- Placed showbread on the table (Lev 24:2,8).
- Offered sacrifices for his own sins and that of the people (Lev 4:3-12; Heb 5:1).
- Had special duties on the day of atonement (Ex 30:10; Lev 16:1-34; Heb 9:7).
- Took count of the people (Num 1:3).
- Officiated at the appointment of a ruler (Num 27:18-21 – Eleazar, Aaron’s oldest son, and his successor as high priest)
- Distributed spoils of war (Num 31:26-29 – Eleazar).

This is not intended to be an exhaustive list, but it does provide a sort of index concerning the duties of a high priest. He was more of a representative, than a ruler of the people. When he was involved with the people themselves, it was in order to bring the mind of the Lord to bear upon the matter.

In our text, there had been a departure from the real ministry of the high priest. Now he was viewed more as an authoritarian among his peers – almost like a king. In Jesus’ day, he dwelt in a “palace” (Matt 26:3; mk 14:54). When Jesus was arrested in the Garden a military band was sent from the high priest to lay hold on Him (Mk 14:47,53). Any likeness between the high priests of that day and the time of Aaron was purely coincidental. The office itself had become corrupted.

In the days of king Jehoash, the high priest Jehoiada was charged with repairing the house of the Lord (2 Kgs 12:7-12). In the days of king Josiah, Hilkiah the high priest also worked on the house of the Lord. He is the one who found the book of the Law in the house of God. He also removed from God’s house the vessels made for Baal (2 Kgs 22:4,8; 23:4). In the days of Nehemiah, Eliashib the high priest “rose up with his brethren, and they built the sheep gate and sanctified it” (Neh 3:1). In the days of Haggai, Joshua the high priest also engaged in rebuilding the house of the Lord (Hag 1:12-14). Zechariah had a vision of Joshua the high priest standing before the Lord receiving a change of raiment and deliverance from the power of Satan. He was also given a word about the coming Messiah (Zech 3:1-8).

However, in the time of our text, with all of that sacred history, the high priesthood was not noted for the work of the Lord. Rather, it is noted for opposing the work of the Lord. In the Gospels, the high priests are renowned for being against, arresting, trying, and condemning the Son of God (Matt 26:3,57-65; Mk 14:47-66; Lk 22:50; John 11:49-51; 18:13-26). Now, in the book of Acts, they are also noted for fighting the work of the Lord, as done through the apostles (Acts 4:6; 5:17,21,24,27; 7:1; 9:1; 22:5; 23:2,4,5; 24:1; 25:2).

What a remarkable degeneration had taken place in this ordained office! Instead of being servants of God, the high priest and council were fighting against Him, rejecting His Son, and opposing the apostles of the Lamb!

What a remarkable degeneration had taken place in this ordained office! Instead of being servants of God, the high priest and council were fighting against Him, rejecting His Son, and opposing the apostles of the Lamb!

Now, upon seeing all of the activity within the Temple, and particularly in the large area of Solomon’s porch, the high priest and those with him “rose up.” That is, they “rose up” in defiance and opposition. They pushed themselves into the holy assembly, and “intervened” NJB in those sacred gatherings. They “took action” NRSV against the apostles, and were “roused” WEYMOUTH to a state of hostility against the truth of God.

Godly Jewish Leaders of the Past

In the Jewish history, godly leaders called for scribes and knowledgeable men to obtain Divine wisdom when needed.

- Under the Law, the dedication of leaders involved asking counsel of the Lord concerning them (Num 27:21).
- Of old time, when men set out to inquire of the Lord, they sought out a prophet, who was then called a “seer” (1 Sam 9:9).
- Jehoshaphat sought a prophet of the Lord who might inquire of the Lord for him (1 Kgs 22:5; ,7; 2 Kgs 3:11).
- When he fell ill, Benhadad, king of Syria, sent a man to inquire of Elisha if he would recover from the disease (2 Kgs 8:8).
- Hezekiah prayed to the Lord with the prophet Isaiah (2 Chron 32:20).
- Zedekiah sent messengers to Jeremiah, asking the prophet to pray for him (Jer 37:3).
- King Jeroboam, when judged by God, asked a man of God to pray for him (1 Kgs 13:6).
- When David confronted the Philistines, he inquired of the Lord concerning what he should do (1 Sam 23:2,4).
- When convicted that the nation was headed in the wrong direction, Josiah commanded a priest, a scribe, and other key men, to inquire of the Lord for him and all the people (2 Kgs 22:12-13).

For any informed Israelite, there was sufficient in the Law and the history of their nation to provoke them to ask of the Lord concerning something they not understand. Of all people, the high priest should have been most aware of this, for he was “ordained for men in things pertaining to God” (Heb 5:1).

However, in the text before us, the high priest did not inquire of the Lord concerning the activities of the apostles. Their religion had crystalized around their own traditions, so that holy procedures were altogether forgotten. They will proceed in their own worldly perspective, not seeking wisdom from the Lord. This contradicted the nature of their office, and confirmed how far the Jewish system had drifted from its ancient moorings.

The Danger of a Traditional Religion

By a traditional religion, I mean one that is anchored in human interpretation rather than Divine utterance. In a traditional religion, the Scriptures, if they are used at all, are employed to buttress the tradition, which is perceived as the main thing. If the Scriptures appear to contradict the tradition, an effort is made to explain away the obvious meaning of them. The attempted explanation may be based on history, etymology, historic manuscripts, contextual relevance, or some other expression of human wisdom.

Because of the nature of tradition, the strongest appeal is not to spiritual understanding, but to scholarship, hermeneutics, language studies, church authority, and the likes.

This is done because of the nature of the Scriptures themselves. They are fundamentally the revelation of the mind of the Lord, with absolutely no regard for the establishment of the wisdom or positions of men. Their design is to make the man of God mature in the presence of the Lord, and equip him to do the works of God that have been ordained for him (2 Tim 3:17). Their aim is not to make the world a better place to live, or to improve the social involvements of humanity. Rather, they are written to inform man of his real condition, together with the appointed demise of this world, and the appearing of the world to come. They also provide the means of preparing for these inevitabilities, so that one may enter into the joy of the Lord.

In our text, although the apostles have expounded the Scriptures, and confirmed Jesus of Nazareth to be the One of whom they spoke, the Jewish authorities are not at all pleased – particularly since the people have given heed to them. The words delivered by the apostles have contradicted the teaching of these leaders.

THEY WERE FILLED WITH INDIGNATION

“ . . . and were filled with indignation.” Other versions read, “filled with jealousy,” NASB “were full of envy,” BBE “filled with wrath,” DARBY “were extremely jealous,” GWN “filled with zeal,” YLT “reacted with violent jealousy,” LIVING “filled with angry jealousy,” WEYMOUTH “This aroused bitter indignation,” MONTGOMERY “filled with jealousy and indignation and rage,” AMPLIFIED and “in a fury of jealousy.” PHILLIPS

Make no mistake about this, the truth has an adverse effect upon those who have not received a love for it (2 Thess 2:10). During the time of our text, when the truth of God is being powerfully proclaimed, it has been like a disrupting storm falling upon the ears of the high priest and his cohorts. It has pierced their ears and hearts causing inward pain, for there is no way it can fit together with their ideas and words.

The opponents are “filled with indignation.” That is, their response was anything but casual. Their wicked hearts would not let them be tolerant of the apostles’ contradicting words.

The word “indignation” is very strong, just as it sounds. The word speaks of a volatile emotion. Its root lexical meaning is, “excitement of mind, ardor, fervor of spirit.” As used in this text it speaks of a “an envious and contentious rivalry, and jealousy,” and carries the idea of malicious outbursts of anger. THAYER Other meanings include, “jealousy, envy,” FRIBERG and “factionalism, and party strife.” GINGRICH

The indignation of these men was aroused because of the contradicting and competing nature of the apostles’ doctrine. It contradicted what the high priest and his associates were teaching, and competed with their objectives. The world, whether religious in nature, or otherwise, can easily abide things that do not compete with its own interests or contradict its priorities. Like the Athenians, purely worldly minds often delight to hear some new thing (Acts 17:21), as long as there is no moral obligation in it. Such minds delight to be in the marketplace of thought, just as long as they are not move out of their comfort zone, or challenged to think differently.

The Truth

In every way, the truth is unique. One ought to expect this to be the case since the knowledge of the truth makes men free (John 8:32), and the love of the truth is a primary means by which we can be saved (2 Thess 2:10). The truth is a large word that speaks of a vast body of interrelated realities. Truth has a single emphasis, and a solitary direction. Among other things, it consists of affirmations – a declaration of unchangeable facts or realities. It also involves exhortations, in which the individuals hearing the facts are urged to live in comportment with them. There are also corrections which inform wayward individuals that they are on the wrong course, and calls upon them to correct it lest they be destroyed. Truth also involves instruction that clarifies how the truth is actually lived out.

There is a perfect harmony in all such things. The facts never contradict themselves. Exhortations, correction, and instruction are always in view of the facts and never in competition with them. For example, if it is true that men will all die, and the present heavens and earth will pass away, truth will never move a person to exhort others to become more attached to the world. If truth has an eternal emphasis, those who embrace it will not accent temporal things.

In Our Text

In this text, the high priest and his colleagues are moved to indignation by the teaching of the apostles because it contradicts what they have embraced and teach. If what the apostles are saying is true, then it is obvious that what they have been saying is false – accenting the wrong things and headed in the wrong direction.

On a more practical level, the religion of these opponents was a haven in which they were able to maintain a distance from God, all the while assuming the reins of religious leadership. They did not have to know God, be conversant with His purpose, or have an understanding of His ways. Their position could be maintained independently of such knowledge. They were not required to be assured of the blessing of the Lord, or be personally conscious of His approval. That was not required for the work in which they were engaged. Neither, indeed, was it essential that they heartily embrace the will of God, submitting wholly to it, and living their lives within its perimeter. The type of activities in which they were engaged did not demand such submission.

They could be religious and maintain their own agenda – the one they themselves had either developed or embraced. The sanctity of their religion was not found in Divine associations, but in the traditions and wisdom of men. Further, the Scriptures were essential only to the degree that they supported their own objectives. That is why the high priest could work side by side with the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection, the existence of angels, and the reality of spirit. Although these were all gross deficiencies, the system in which these men operated allowed them to rise to places of prominence and authority. They proudly declared they were part of a system that was of Divine origin, and they were being honored by the premier people in the world. They boasted of having Abraham as their father (John 8:39), and declared themselves to be ardent disciples of Moses (John 9:28).

These men had credentials, and were not among those whom they referred to as “having never learned” (John 7:15), or being “unlearned and ignorant” (Acts 4:13). Of course, the criterion they used to determine these classifications was their own creation. They did not look at teachers from the standpoint of truth, or judge them according to their understanding of the things of God. They considered themselves authorities in matters of religion, yet their only credentials were the ones they had given themselves. For them, the touchstone of theological validity was their own positions or the traditions they had embraced.

However, now they are faced with men who have not been trained in, or authorized by, their religious system. These men – the apostles – are, by their estimation, inferior. Yet, they are speaking and working with obvious authority, and are capturing the attention of the people. The whole thing was irritating to these men, and therefore they arose and intervened in the affairs that were going on in the Temple complex. Prior to this they had been against Jesus, and now they assert themselves against His servants.

Our Times

In a way, our times are very much like those during which our text took place. There are at least four components, or factors, in this comparison: The leaders, the teaching, the people, and the environment or place.

The leaders are those exercising influence over the people in matters pertaining to God. The teaching is the message that is presented, including its content and thrust. The people are those subject to the teaching of the teachers. The environs are where the people are gathered together for religious purposes.

With these in mind, men of God were found to be in contradiction to the religious leaders of the time. Their message, the Gospel, conflicted sharply with the teaching of those leaders, which was firmly anchored in the traditions of men. The people who were of one accord in Christ are to be compared with a people whose distinction was their identity with God by antiquity, yet whose nature had not been changed. The environment was a place devoted to the worship and service of God.

Who is not able to see the parallel in our own time. Here and there men of spiritual understanding are raised up who are sent by God to the people. Yet, when they come, they are largely rejected by the Christian institutions of the times. If they do not come with official credentials, they are not considered seriously. They are not perceived as Scriptural scholars if they did not receive training in officially recognized places. If they are perceived as knowing anything at all, or speaking with any particular power, their judges marvel that they have attained such wisdom outside of the sanctioned religious institutions. Their message bears no resemblance to the religious fads of the day, and they do not appear to be in tune with the current issues. If they are found speaking in the places reserved for Christians they are viewed as peculiar, too strong, or altogether irrelevant.

This passage will confirm to us the boldness of the flesh against those who speak in the behalf of Christ. It will also substantiate the manner in which the threats of men are viewed by those who are abiding in Christ and bringing forth fruit. They will not be intimidated by those who oppose the truth of God, for they trust in God.

ARRESTED AGAIN, AND PUT IN THE COMMON PRISON

“ 18 And laid their hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.”

The saints of God cannot afford to be naive about life in this world. It is possible to entertain a view of Divine protection that contradicts both the record of valid experiences and the doctrine of Christ.

There are certain promises in Scripture concerning the safety of the saints. When understood properly, our text will not be perceived as contradicting them. Permit me to give you a few of these Divine commitments.

- “The angel of the LORD encampeth round about them that fear Him, and delivereth them” (Psa 34:7).

- “For He shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways. They shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone” (Psa 91:11-12).

- “Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy: and nothing shall by any means hurt you” (Luke 10:19).

- “And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake. But there shall not an hair of your head perish” (Luke 21:17-18).

- “So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me” (Heb 13:6).

This is not all that the Lord has said about opposition. He also said the following to His disciples.

- “Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city” (Matt 23:34).

- “Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for My name's sake” (Matt 24:9).

- “But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues” (Matt 10:17).

- “Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute” (Luke 11:49).

The saints of God cannot afford to be naive about life in this world. It is possible to entertain a view of Divine protection that contradicts both the record of valid experiences and the doctrine of Christ.

“But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for My name's sake” (Luke 21:12).

- “Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept My saying, they will keep yours also” (John 15:20).

- “They shall put you out of the synagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service” (John 16:2).

All of the apostles were persecuted, and all of them were martyred, with the exception of John the beloved. History attests that his persecutors did try to kill him, but could not do it. Paul provides a brief listing of his trials and persecutions, which listing itself is staggering to consider (2 Cor 6:4-10; 11:23-28).

Add to this what the apostles taught the church concerning persecution.

- “And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together” (Rom 8:17).

- “Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For Thy sake we are killed all the day long ; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter” (Rom 8:36).

- “But as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now ” (Gal 4:29).

- “That no man should be moved by these afflictions: for yourselves know that we are appointed thereunto ” (1 Thess 3:3).

- “Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution ” (2 Tim 3:12).

- “Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you ” (1 Pet 4:12).

- “Yet if any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf ” (1 Pet 4:16).

- “Wherefore let them that suffer according to the will of God commit the keeping of their souls to Him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator” (1 Pet 4:19).

One of the serious weaknesses of the average American Christian is the inability to endure suffering. When it comes to personal sufferings like illness and severe disadvantages, there are some who actually become angry with God, as though suffering was, in fact, a “strange thing”

Let those who imagine that in Jesus we are insulated against opposition and persecution abandon their simplistic way of thinking. Persecution has been the ordinary lot of the people of God from Abel until this day. The prophets were persecuted (Matt 5:12; Acts 7:52; James 5:10). The Lord Jesus Himself was persecuted (John 5:16; 15:20). The apostles were persecuted (Acts 5:40; 1 Cor 4:9). The church was persecuted (Acts 8:1; 12:1).

When, therefore, we read of the apostles being arrested, we certainly are not happy. However, we are not surprised. These are by rank “first” within the church (1 Cor 12:28), and yet they were not shielded from persecution.

It ought to be noted, however, that persecution did not terminate their work prematurely. They were kept until their work was done. When that point came, like Paul, they willingly laid down their lives, just as their Lord. Satan cannot overturn the work of the Lord!

THEY LAID THEIR HANDS ON THE APOSTLES

“And laid their hands on the apostles, . . .” Other versions read, “arrested the apostles,” NIV “took the apostles,” BBE “grabbed the apostles,” IE “had the apostles arrested,” WILLIAMS “apprehended the apostles,” MONTGOMERY and “seized and arrested the apostles (special messengers).” AMPLIFIED

Mark well that this apprehension took place while they were engaged in the work of the Lord – a work to which they had been appointed. If you think the hosts of hell tremble before the saints, think again! There is not a single account of any of Satan’s hosts trembling, falling down before, or petitioning anyone but Jesus Himself (Matt 8:29; Mk 5:6-7; Lk 8:28; Mk 5:10). Satan has neither respect nor fear for believers. If it was not for the Savior Himself and his absolute submission to Him, he would have devoured them long ago.

It breaks my heart to read of these wicked men laying their hands on the “holy apostles” (Eph 3:5; Rev 18:20). However, fellowship with Christ includes the “fellowship of His sufferings” (Phil 3:10), and a measure of them have been left behind to be “filled up” by His disciples (Col 1:24).

One of the serious weaknesses of the average American Christian is the inability to endure suffering. When it comes to personal sufferings like illness and severe disadvantages, there are some who actually become angry with God, as though suffering was, in fact, a “strange thing” (1 Pet 4:12). Others compromise their faith and adopt the manners of the world in order to avoid opposition, bartering their souls for temporary relief. I have long been chagrined at many reports of persecution which are often viewed as a violation of civil rights. It is not unusual for some to make appeals to the government to protect Christians in the name of civil liberty. It is not that such appeals are of themselves wrong. However, it seems to me that men ought to seek help from their God.

Paul asked the church to pray that he and those with him would be “delivered from unreasonable and wicked men” (2 Thess 3:2). He was not praying for personal comfort, but for the dissemination of the “word of the Lord,” that is might “have free course, and be glorified” (2 Thess 3:2).

Thus the apostles, while engaged in the work of the Lord, fulfilled the word of Isaiah: “Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey : and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment” (Isa 59:15). If they had not stayed in Jerusalem, perhaps this would not have happened. But the Lord had commanded them to “preach in His name . . . beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47). They are obeying His word regardless of the consequences.

THEY PUT THEM IN THE COMMON PRISON

“ . . . and put them in the common prison.” Other versions read, “public jail,” NASB “public prison,” NRSV “public ward,” ASV “the city jail,” CSB and “public custody.” ALT

The apostles were dignitaries in the Kingdom of God – princes among men. Yet, they were not afforded any dignity by this motley group of Jewish leaders. The “common prison” was a public one, so that the prisoners were “in full view of all,” THAYER “publicly, openly before the people.” FRIBERG This would be a source of great shame to the timorous, and would serve as a solemn warning to the people not to follow these apostles – at least that is what the high priest and his conspiratorial Sanhedrin thought. This is now the second time this group of wicked men has incarcerated Christ’s apostles. The first time, it was Peter and John (4:3). They were not able to remove them from preaching at that time, and they will not be able to do so now.

HEAVEN RESPONDS TO THE CIRCUMSTANCE

“ 19 But the angel of the Lord by night opened the prison doors, and brought them forth, and said, 20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life. 21a And when they heard that, they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught.”

So far as we know, all of heaven is involved in the salvation of God.

- THE FATHER. The purpose that is being fulfilled in salvation is that of the Father Himself. It is He that sent the Son (1 John 4:14), delivered Him up (Rom 8:32), raised Him from the dead (Acts 4:10), and exalted Him to his own right hand (Eph 1:20-21). He is still imminent in every facet of salvation.

- THE SON. The Son came to the earth to do the will of the Father. He put away sin (Heb 9:26), reconciled the world to God (Col 1:21-22), brought an end to the Law as a means to righteousness (Rom 10:4), destroyed the devil (Heb 2:14), and spoiled adversarial principalities and power (Col 2:15). He is bringing us to God (1 Pet 3:18, and intercedes for the saved (Rom 8:34; Heb 7:25).

- THE HOLY SPIRIT. The Holy Spirit convinces the world of sin, righteousness and judgment (John 16:8-11). He is the one who sets the people apart to God (2 Thess 2:13), facilitates the new birth (John 3:8), intercedes for the saints from within (Rom 8:26-27), and leads the saints in the mortification of the deeds of the body (Rom 8:13-14).

• THE HOLY ANGELS. The angels are “ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation” (Heb 1:13-14). They desire to look into the things contained in the Gospel (1 Pet 1:12), are fellow servants with the saints (Rev 19:10; 22:9), and are among those to whom believers “are come” (Heb 12:22).

The word of God makes clear that those in Christ come into fellowship with the Father (the Judge of all—Heb 12:23), the Son (Jesus the Mediator – Heb 12:24), the Holy Spirit (Phil 2:1), and the holy angels (an innumerable company of them – Heb 12:11).

It should not surprise us, therefore, that an angel becomes involved in the affairs of our text. Through holy commissioned involvements, they are integral to the experiences related to this salvation.

In view of heaven’s commitment to the salvation of the elect, you can see how utterly absurd it is for men to have no interest in it. When those who profess to be in Christ are slothful in things pertaining to God, attempting to coast through life with the imagination that God has received them, they are at variance with heaven, not in harmony with it. Such people are tottering on the brink of eternal ruin, and do not know it.

BUT THE ANGEL OF THE LORD

“But the angel of the Lord . . .” Other versions read, “messenger of the Lord.” YLT

When those who profess to be in Christ are slothful in things pertaining to God, attempting to coast through life with the imagination that God has received them, they are at variance with heaven, not in harmony with it. Such people are tottering on the brink of eternal ruin, and do not know it.

The expression “the angel of the Lord” is mentioned fifty-eight times in Scripture: fifty times from Genesis through Malachi, and nine times in Matthew through revelation. Aside from the angels Michael and Gabriel, these servants remain anonymous, even though they are of a high order, possessing greater wisdom (2 Sam 14:20), and are “greater in power and might” (2 Pet 2:11) than men. Unlike Jesus, they are not noted for who they are, but for what they do. Jesus holds the distinction of being noted for both who He is and what He has done, is doing, and will do. Angels are noted for their instant obedience, quickly doing the will of God and returning to the One who commissions them (Psa 103:20).

Now, in fulfillment of their mission as ministers to the heirs of salvation, one of their number is dispatched to bring help to the imprisoned apostles.

BY NIGHT OPENED THE PRISON DOORS

“ . . . by night opened the prison doors . . .” Other versions read, “at night opened the prison doors,” NKJV “during the night opened the gates of the prison ,” NASB “during the night opened the doors of the jail ,” NIV “ opening the doors of the prison,” BBE “Opened the gates of the jail ,” LIVING “ threw open the jail doors,” WILLIAMS and “opened the doors to their cell .” GW

Your perusal of Scripture should confirm that angels never have any difficulty with earthly circumstances – no matter what they are. Earth and its inhabitants in no way challenge holy angels. People to whom angels have appeared include the following.

- Abraham (Gen 22:11).
- Hagar (Gen 16:7).
- Lot (Gen 19:1).
- Jacob (Gen 28:12; 31:11).
- Moses (Ex 3:2).
- The Israelites (Ex 14:19).
- Balaam (Num 22:31).
- Joshua (Josh 5:15).
- Gideon (Judges 6:11).
- Moanoah (Judges 13:6,15).
- David (1 Chron 21:15-16).
- Elijah (1 Kgs 19:5).
- Elisha (2 Kgs 6:17).
- Daniel (Dan 6:22).

Angels have been known to fight in the heavenly realms . . . However, no angel or group of angels ever fought a war among men, or in this world. This domain is vastly inferior to them, and instantly yields to their authority.

- Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego (Dan 3:25).
- Zechariah (Zech 2:3).
- Joseph (Matt 1:20).
- Mary (Lk 1:26).
- Zecharias (Lk 1:11).
- The shepherds (Lk 2:9).
- Jesus (Lk 4:11; Lk 22:43).
- The women at the tomb of Jesus (Matt 28:2-6).
- The disciples when Jesus ascended (Acts 1:10-11).
- The apostles (Acts 5:19).
- Philip (Acts 8:26).
- Cornelius (Acts 10:3).
- Peter in prison (Acts 12:7).
- Paul (Acts 27:23).
- John (Rev 1:1).

Ponder some of the remarkable things angels have done on earth without any extended effort or apparent difficulty.

- Guard the way to the tree of life so no one can approach it (Gen 3:24).
- Smote the men of Sodom with blindness (Gen 19:11).
- Destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah (Gen 19:1,13-14).

- Stood between Israel and the Egyptian army, so that they could not approach Israel (Ex 14:19).
- Saved Israel from destruction (Isa 63:9).
- Destroyed the entire army of Sennacherib in a single night – an army numbering 185,000 (2 Kgs 19:35).
- Struck 70,000 Israelites dead with a pestilence, and would have destroyed Jerusalem if God had not stayed his hand (2 Sam 24:15-17).
- Struck king Herod dead (Acts 12:11).
- They are depicted as causing destructive judgments and plagues upon the earth with which men could not contend (Rev 8:5-21).
- An angel will “gather the vine of the earth” and hurl it into the winepress of the wrath of God (Rev 14:19).
- Angels will gather out of God’s kingdom everything that offends and all them that do iniquity (Matt 13:41).
- Angels will gather together the elect from the uttermost part of earth to the uttermost part of heaven (Mk 13:27).

Angels have been known to fight in the heavenly realms. One angel fought against “the prince of Persia” for twenty-one days, even requiring the assistance of the mighty angel Michael (Dan 10:13). Michael and his angels fought against the devil and his angels soundly defeating them, and thrusting them out of the heavenly domain (Rev 12:7-9). However, no angel or group of angels ever fought a war among men, or in this world. This domain is vastly inferior to them, and instantly yields to their authority.

In Consideration of Jesus’ Return

This is something that has not been duly considered by those who believe Jesus is going to come to earth and fight against the wicked. He Himself declared that when He returns, he will be accompanied by “all the holy angels” – not a representative number of them, but all of them (Matt 25:31). The idea that any form of resistance against them will be realized is an utter absurdity – and angels do not have the authority that Jesus has. They are rather His servants, and worship Him. One of their number has the power to bind Satan and throw him in a bottomless pit – and there is not a thing that Satan can do about it (Rev 20:1-3). Is there any person of sound mind who thinks the kings of the earth, to say nothing of those who are under them, could present the slightest challenge to these exalted creatures? And what of the One they obey – the Lord Jesus Christ, who is “Lord of all?”

The notion of a bloody battle with men, led by the Lord Jesus Christ who is accompanied by every single holy angel in existence is demeaning of Christ. It betrays an abysmal understanding of God and Christ, and it ranks high in the echelon of stupidity. Those who teach such things are in the class of people described by Paul, “understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm” (1 Tim 1:7).

This Has to Do With the Text?

The relevance of these cursory observations is seen in our text. An angel comes down from heaven to do something among men. When he arrives there is no resistance of any kind – not so much as a single syllable of speech, to say nothing of any hostility or aggression. He came “by night,” when the “rulers of the darkness of this world” (Eph 6:12) are especially active. He approaches a prison that had been secured, so that no man could escape from its confines. Without any apparent effort, and in an instant without having to work at it, he simply opens the doors of confinement. The opening of the doors was not an exhibit of raw strength, but of heavenly authority – and earth always yields to the imposition of heavenly authority. This is true because “the heavens do rule” (Dan 4:26).

It is especially comforting to consider that the holy angels are our ministers (Heb 1:14). They can deliver us with very little effort – just by camping around us as they did around Israel (Psa 34:7). Jesus warned men not to harm one of His little ones, for “their angels do always behold the face of My Father which is in heaven” (Matt 18:10). Promoting great sobriety among those who fear God, Solomon once wrote, “Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before the angel, that it was an error: wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands?” (Eccl 5:6).

It also seems fitting that an angel should be dispatched to deliver those who had been incarcerated by the Sadducees, who officially professed that there was no such thing as an angel (Acts 23:8).

AND BROUGHT THEM FORTH

“ . . . and brought them forth . . .” Other versions read, “and brought them out,” NKJV “and taking them out,” NASB “and leading them out,” DARBY “and led them out,” GWN “let them out,” MRD “he led them out,” NJB “the angel led the apostles outside,” IE and “and having brought them out.” ALT

There you have it – one moment the apostles were in prison, and the next moment they were out. They themselves had to do nothing but walk through the open doors. The judgment of the council had been reversed by Divine edict, and there was absolutely nothing that could be done to resist that determination. Here we have lived out what Jesus declared to the church in Philadelphia: “I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it” (Rev 3:8).

In our preaching and teaching, we must not leave people with the idea that they have been locked into a state of oppression and confinement. The door of hope must be left ajar by reporting the wonderful works of God. The record of them is not mere history, but is designed to acquaint us with the ways of the Lord.

I know of no word in Scripture that declares there is a time when angels will no longer minister in this way. I say this in full recognition of the fact that they did not always work in this manner. Here were times when the prison doors were not opened. Joseph was in prison for as long as thirteen years (Gen 37:2; 41:46). John the Baptist was left in prison, and finally beheaded there (Matt 14:3,10). On one occasion, Paul was in jail for two whole years (Acts 19:10; 28:30).

In our preaching and teaching, we must not leave people with the idea that they have been locked into a state of oppression and confinement. The door of hope must be left ajar by reporting the wonderful works of God. The record of them is not mere history, but is designed to acquaint us with the ways of the Lord. We must come to see that should our deliverance be conducive to the glory of God, and if it is suitable to the work that we have been assigned, that deliverance can be wrought very easily. A word from the Lord can cause it to happen, or an angel sent from God (Acts 12:11), or the changing of the king’s heart (Prov 21:1), or the death of our enemies (Matt 2:20). We have every reason not to despair when things are not going well for us!

AND SAID . . .

“ . . . and said . . .” Other versions read, “and said to them,” MRD “Then he told them,” NLT “The angel said,” CEV and “saying.” PHILLIPS

The Tongues of Angels

On one occasion, Paul referred to “the tongues . . . of angels” (1 Cor 13:1). Although certain men have made much of this solitary reference, and even structured doctrines around it, this is all that is said of it in Scripture.

Perhaps this is the kind of speaking Paul heard when he was caught up into paradise. He said he heard words “which it is not lawful for a man to utter,” or “which a man is not permitted to speak,” NASB (2 Cor 12:4). The word “utter” comes from the Greek word lalh/sai (lal-es-ai), which lexically means, “to utter a sound . . . to utter or form words with the mouth,” THAYER “to give forth sounds, sound out,” FRIBERG and “to give forth sounds or tones.” GINGRICH

The reference is not speaking of a message being uttered, or a report being given, but of a sound being uttered with the human voice. Paul was saying that there was no human capacity for repeating what he heard. The human mouth and voice are not adapted to do so. The supposition, therefore, that men can say something with their voice that is in an angelic tongue cannot be supported by any Scriptural example.

In the text in the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, I do not know that it can be established that all of the things Paul mentioned were actually taking place among the Corinthians. He mentions several things (verses 1-3).

- Speaking with the tongues of men.
- Speaking with the tongues of angels.
- Having the gift of prophesy, understand ALL mysteries, and ALL knowledge.
- Have ALL faith, so that I could remove mountains.
- Bestow all my goods to feed the poor.
- Give my body to be burned.

Paul is teaching the necessity of charity, not the extent of abilities given to the saints. While some might make a case for being able to speak with the tongues of men, or giving all of one’s goods to the poor, or even giving one’s body to be burned, what of the other things. Where is the person who can boast of understanding ALL mysteries? Or possessing ALL understanding? Or removing (not moving) mountains? Let no man attempt to push into this text something that the Holy Spirit did not put there!

What We Do Know

We have no example – not so much as a single one – where an angel said something to men in words that could not be understood. Further, we have no example of any man speaking with an angel, employing “the tongues of angels.” Those are the facts in the case.

We do know that there are several instances in Scripture when angels were heard speaking directly to men, or within the range of their hearing. Here are a few of them.

- An angel spoke to Hagar, and she understood what he said (Gen 16:7-13).
- An angel called to Abraham, and he understood what was said (Gen 22:11-12, 15-18).
- An angel spoke to Moses out of a burning bush, and Moses understood what he said (Ex 3:2-4:17; Acts 7:30-35).
- An angel spoke with Balaam, and he knew what was said (Num 22:22).
- The angel of the Lord spoke to all of Israel, and they understood him (Judges 2:1-4).
- Gabriel, a significant angel, talked with Daniel, and he understood what was said (Dan 9:22-27).

- A holy angel delivered a lengthy discourse to Daniel, who understood what he said (Dan 10:13-21).

- The angel Gabriel appeared to Zacharias, and when the angel spoke, he understood (Lk 1:11-20).

- The angel Gabriel was sent to the virgin Mary to announce the birth of Christ, and she understood all that he said (Lk 1:28-38).

- An angel appeared to some shepherds, announcing the birth of Christ. A heavenly host broke out in praise at that time. The shepherds understood what was said (Lk 2:10-14).

- An angel appeared to Cornelius, giving him instructions, and Cornelius understood him (Acts 10:22; 11:13).

- The voice of many angels was heard AND understood by John (Rev 5:11-12).

- John heard AND understood what one angel said to four other angels (Rev 7:2-4).

- John heard AND understood an angel pronouncing a woe to the inhabitants of the earth (Rev 8:13).

- John heard AND understood what one angel said to seven other angels (Rev 16:1).

This will suffice to make the point, although many other examples could be provided. We have no example – not so much as a single one – where an angel said something to men in words that could not be understood. Further, we have no example of any man speaking with an angel, employing “the tongues of angels.” Those are the facts in the case.

It should not surprise us, therefore, if this angel speaks to the apostles in words they can understand, and in words that they did, in fact, understand. Among other things, this confirms that angels minister to the heirs of salvation in ways that can, to some measurable degree, be understood. In other words, ministry is in the context of discernment, not mystery! To my knowledge, there is no example of a man beholding angels doing something that was not perceived, or saying something in words that could not be understood.

Those who tell us that they themselves, or someone they know, has delivered a word in an angelic tongue must provide more proof than their own testimony. If angels themselves do not speak to men in such a tongue, what kind of reasoning supports that God would move men to do so? For that matter, precisely what is the purpose of any word being delivered to men that cannot be understood? The fact that such a communication is useless is confirmed by the requirement that men must be brought to understand what was said, even if it was uttered in a tongue they did not understand (1 Cor 14:13-14). Whether we are speaking of angels or men, words that cannot be comprehended cannot deliver edification, rebuke, correction, exhortation, or instruction in righteousness. If angels adhere to this principle, what must be said of mere mortals who do not?

ALL THE WORDS OF THIS LIFE

“20 Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life.” Other versions read, “Go your way, stand and speak to the people in the temple the whole message of this Life,” NASB “Go, stand in the temple courts,” he said, “and tell the people the full message of this new life,” NIV “Go, take your place in the Temple and give the people all the teaching about this Life,” BBE “Go and stand in the temple complex, and tell the people all about this life,” CSB “Stand in the temple courtyard, and tell the people everything about life in Christ,” GWN “Go on, and standing, speak in the temple to the people all the sayings of this life,” YLT “Go over to the Temple and preach about this Life,” LIVING “Go and stand in the Temple, and go on proclaiming to the people all this Message of Life,” WEYMOUTH “Go and take your stand in the temple square and continue to tell the people the message of this new life,” WILLIAMS and “Go, take your stand in the temple courts and declare to the people the whole doctrine concerning this Life (the eternal life which Christ revealed).” AMPLIFIED

The apostles had just been arrested in the Temple, and now the angel sends them back! They had not yet finished their testimony concerning the life that is in Christ Jesus. The angel has not the slightest sense of danger in this matter. He has just reversed the judgment of the high priest and his court, and he knows there is nothing to fear from them.

Speak In the Temple

The angel does not tell the apostles to stand in the street, but “in the Temple.” He does not send them to a synagogue, but to “the temple.” They are not to return to the house where they once prayed for power, but to “the Temple.” He does not tell them to break up into groups and go into the homes, but “in the Temple.” There is where the covenanted people will be gathered, and the words of this life was promised to them. The Gospel is God’s power unto salvation “to the Jew first” (Rom 1:16), and the Temple was well suited for preaching that Gospel.

I do not know how those who are opposed to believers meeting in larger structures would have handled the word of the angel. It seems to me they ought to have the honesty to come to grips with it. However, the apostles had no difficulty with it at all, even though they had twice been arrested in that area. The flesh would reason that it was not wise to return to the Temple and resume preaching, particularly after they had already been arrested twice for doing that very thing. However, when the flesh is crucified, as it ought to be, such difficulties do not arise.

Speak All the Words of This Life

It is important to see what the apostles are told to speak: “all the words of this life.” He does not mean life in this world, but the life that is in Christ Jesus. These are the same kind of words Jesus spoke – words that are “spirit, and they are life” (John 6:63). They are “the words of eternal life” (John 6:68), not words pertaining to worldly life. John referred to such words as “the record that God gave of His Son,” further defining that record in these words, “that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son” (1 John 5:10-11).

“The words of this life” are an objective message - one that lies outside of men themselves. Christ is the center, or heart and core, of the message. In it, man is incidental, and Christ is fundamental. By way of comparison, the traditions of men are subjective, having man and what he does, or is to do, as its center, or emphasis. An objective message brings something for men to obtain. A subjective message accents what men can achieve. The words of this life enable men to anchor their lives in eternity. The traditions of men are designed to optimize life in this world.

The core message of the church has never changed. The very nature of salvation, as well as the character of the Lord Himself, demands that it remain the same. When men begin to emphasize the peripheral matters, neglecting the heart of things, their message becomes powerless. This is because the power is in the Gospel itself (Rom 1:16), and not in humanly conceived priorities. If, for example, the family structure is being weakened, the key is not moving the emphasis from Christ to the family. The matter must be addressed from the perspective of life in Christ, not with a primary consideration for the family itself. A proper emphasis will yield exemplary families among all who embrace it. This should not be difficult to comprehend, because we are “complete” in Christ (Col 2:10). How absurd it is to emphasize the benefits rather than the One who gives them!

What Is Means By “Emphasis?”

As simplistic as it may seem, there is considerable confusion concerning the word “emphasis” itself. Some conclude that if the emphasis is point A , there can never be mention made of point B. However, an emphasis is to teaching, what the melody is to a song. If some one was to play the song “Amazing Grace,” playing only the alto, tenor, and base notes, who would appreciate what was being played? Emphasis is to teaching what a hub is to a wheel. If you attempted to make a wheel without a centralized hub, it could not possibly fulfill the purpose of a wheel. Without a proper doctrinal emphasis, the doctrine itself loses its value, for it is the emphasis that gives it power and worth.

From the standpoint of its objective, the emphasis of apostolic teaching was “the words of this life.” Viewed from the standpoint of the key Person, it was “the Gospel of Christ.”

Real Life

This is life that has to do with being “alive unto God” (Rom 6:11). It is the “life” into which we pass as we exit from death in trespasses and sins (John 5:24; 1 John 3:14). It is the “newness of life” of which Paul wrote (Rom 6:4). It is the life in which we “reign” by Jesus Christ (Rom 5:17). It is elsewhere sated that this is the “life” that results from being “spiritually minded” (Rom 8:6). This is the “life of God” from which we were once alienated (Eph 4:18).

The angel does not send the apostles to the Temple to speak about national life, but “speak all the words of this life.” They are not to deliver stirring orations about family life, but “the words of this life.” They are not sent to tell the people about the acquisition of possessions and wealth, or about health and various foods. They are rather sent to declare “all the words of this life.” They were not sent to deliver a message concerning the younger generation, but were to “speak all the words of this life.” Their’s was not a message of Biblical interpretation, or hermeneutics, but was limited to “all the words of this life.”

Remember, this is the church in a pure state, with unquestionably faithful teachers. The substance of preaching and teaching was precisely summarized: “all the words of this life.” Nothing was to be withheld, but “all the counsel of God” was to be delivered (Acts 20:27).

Over the years, I have found that very little is being said about what ought to be taught. Every denomination has its emphasis – one that enables the sect to continue with its static message. Some make rather generic statements about what is to be preached and taught: i.e., “the Bible,” “the truth,” or “whatever is relevant.” And, indeed, there are instructions like this in Scripture: i.e., “preach the word” (2 Tim 4:2). However, there are also specific matters to be declared.

- “Preach the Gospel ” (1 Cor 1:17).
- “Preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead ” (Acts 4:2).
- “Preached unto him Jesus ” (Acts 8:35).
- “Preached unto you the forgiveness of sins ” (Acts 13:38).
- “Preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection ” (Acts 17:18).
- “Preached unto you the gospel of God ” (2 Cor 11:7).
- “ Repentance and remission of sins should be preached” (Lk 24:47).
- “Preaching the kingdom of God , and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ” (Acts 28:31).

The substance of true preaching and teaching is objective reality. By that I mean realities that exist independently of men. Their cause is not traced to men, but to God. At the root of objective reality are the eternal God (Deut 33:27) and His eternal purpose (Eph 3:11). While men benefit from both, they are, by nature, separate from them.

By “human experience” I mean things related to life in this world, or in the body – things that are temporal by nature, and cannot extend into the world to come. When preaching and teaching deals primarily with human experience, it is headed in the wrong direction.

Because the purpose of God has to do with removing us from this world, and uniting us with the world to come, it is in every sense wrong to make anything or any relationship in this world the axis upon which preaching and teaching turn. That ought to be evident enough to require no further explanation. The bald truth of the matter is that much of the preaching and teaching of our day not only lacks a Scriptural basis, but is actually contrary to the marked emphasis of the apostles doctrine.

THEY ENTERED THE TEMPLE EARLY AND TAUGHT

“ 21a And when they heard that, they entered into the temple early in the morning, and taught.” Other versions read, “And upon hearing this , they entered into the temple about daybreak , and began to ,” NASB “At daybreak they entered the temple courts, as they had been told , and began to teach the people,” NIV “When they heard this, they entered the temple at daybreak and went on with their teaching ,” NRSV “And hearing this, they went into the Temple at dawn , and were teaching,” BBE “In obedience to this , they entered the temple complex at daybreak and began to teach,” CSV “And when they heard it, they entered very early into the temple and taught,” DARBY “Early in the morning, after they had listened to the angel , the apostles went into the temple courtyard and began to teach,” GWN “They did as they were told ; they went into the Temple at dawn and began to preach,” NJB “So at daybreak the apostles entered the Temple, as they were told, and immediately began teaching ,” NLT “When the apostles heard this, they went into the temple courtyard. It was early in the morning . The apostles began to teach the people,” IE “Having received that command they went into the Temple, just before daybreak , and began to teach,” WEYMOUTH “So they obeyed , and about the break of day they went into the temple square and began to teach,” WILLIAMS “And when they heard this, they accordingly went into the temple about daybreak and began to teach,” AMPLIFIED and “After receiving these instructions they entered the Temple about daybreak, and began to teach.” PHILLIPS

There was no hesitancy to obey in the apostles – even if their well being appeared to be at stake. They had “learned obedience” in their time with Jesus, consistently doing what they were bidden to do. If Jesus told them to get in a boat and go to the other side of the sea, they did so without question (Matt 14:22). If they encountered a storm on the way that was contrary to them, they continued “toiling in rowing” (Mk 6:48). If the Lord told them to make a hungry multitude sit down in groups of fifties to eat, even if they saw no food with which to feed the, the disciples obeyed the Master (Lk 9:14-15). When He told two of His disciples to go into the city, locate a specific man, and inform him Jesus was going to eat the Passover in his guestchamber with His disciples, they instantly did what Jesus said (Mk 14:13-16). When the Master told Peter to throw a hook in the water, take up a fish, and take a piece of money out of its mouth, Peter did so without any question (Matt 17:27).

Obedience

Among other things, obedience reveals the condition of the heart. It is also one of the evidences of true understanding. As it is written, “a good understanding have all they that do His commandments: His praise endureth for ever” (Psa 111:10). Obedience is integral to following Jesus, and is characteristic of all of His people. The Lord said, “My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me” (John 10:27). Moses prophesied, and Peter confirmed the truth of it, that the soul that did not hearken to Jesus would be cut off from the people. “And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people” (Acts 3:23; Deut 18:19).

Scripture informs us that obedience is “unto righteousness,” or “leads to righteousness” NIV (Rom 6:16). That is, there is a sort of practical separation that takes place in obedience. In order to obey, one must depart from the path of waywardness. The point to be seen in this text, is that obedience is characteristic of those who are living by faith, walking in the Spirit living “unto Him which died for them and rose again” (2 Cor 5:15).

Behold how aggressive the apostles were to obey. They rose “entered into the Temple early in the morning, and taught” – just as the angel commanded them to do.

Ponder some things said of holy people who obeyed God, remembering that this is the manner of the New Covenant, and was the exception prior to and under the Old Covenant.

- ABRAHAM. “By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went ” (Heb 11:8). “And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice ” (Gen 22:18).

- ZERUBBABEL, JOSHUA THE HIGH PRIEST, AND A HOLY REMNANT. “Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God , and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD ” (Hag 1:12).

- THOSE BAPTIZED INTO CHRIST. “But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you” (Rom 6:17).

- THOSE IN CHRIST. “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22).

Among other things, the response of the apostles to the word of the angel was in perfect keeping with the nature of the New Covenant. In the fulfillment of ancient prophecies, their stony hearts had been removed, and they had received hearts of flesh (Ezek 11:19). They were willing in the day of the exalted Christ’s power, just as the Psalmist prophesied (Psa 110:3). Just as Moses said the people would do, they hearkened to the voice of Jesus, the promised Prophet who had dispatched the angel to direct them (Deut 18:15).

STANDING BEFORE INFERIOR JUDGES

This is an aspect of the Kingdom that must be understood. True deliverance is from the aim of the devil, and not from all of his efforts. Until this is understood to some measurable degree, life will become confusing to the child of God.

“ 21b But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought. 22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told, 23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within.”

Those who understand the received power of God as making men invincible and surrounding them with insulation against their enemies must consider this passage. It does not always serve the purpose of God to relieve men of trouble and make them superior to their enemies. If that was the case, there would never have been a single martyr who died in the name of Jesus. Persecution would then be impossible if the church was strong. Yet, throughout history, persecution has generally come when the people of God were strong – as in the eight chapter of Acts.

In this text we have Jewish authorities who deny Christ laying their hands on the very ambassadors of Christ. They arrest them and will incarcerate them. Instead of delivering the apostles altogether from their enemies, the Lord will deliver them from the intention of their enemies. This is an aspect of the Kingdom that must be understood. True deliverance is from the aim of the devil, and not from all of his efforts. Until this is understood to some measurable degree, life will become confusing to the child of God. Unjust things will happen to the saints, as it has from the beginning, when Cain slew Abel. However, the wicked one has never been able to achieve his intentions. This is because he operates under the strict government of the enthroned Jesus – the “blessed and only Potentate” (1 Tim 6:15). The devil cannot cross a single line that has been drawn by the King of kings. He cannot scale any “hedge” of protection reared up by the Lord of lords, as confirmed in the case of Job (Job 1:10).

The wicked “gather themselves together against the soul of the righteous” (Psa 94:21), but they are impotent to carry out their malicious designs. Thus, in the 94 th Psalm, David continues, “But the LORD is my defence; and my God is the rock of my refuge. And He shall bring upon them their own iniquity, and shall cut them off in their own wickedness; yea, the LORD our God shall cut them off ” (Psa 94:23).

This is precisely why the righteous can boldly, or confidently, say, “The Lord is my Helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me ” (Heb 13:6). The apostles will not cease to preach because they were ordered to do so by their enemies. They will rather declare all “the words of this life” as the holy angel has enjoined them to do. They know that the Divine agenda cannot be countermanded by the prince of the power of the air – even though they may experience some grievous opposition, which, for a season, may even appear to be successful.

Time would fail me to mention men that I have personally known who modified their message only because of the pressure of their religious peers. It may have been a school, a church board, a group of elders, some friends, or even some influential church members. Such men do well to sit at the feet of these apostles and learn how to conduct themselves before their enemies when they appear to have the upper hand.

THE HIGH PRIEST CAME AND CALLED A COUNCIL

“But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called the council together, and all the senate of the children of Israel.” Other versions read, “Now when the high priest and his associates had come, they called the Council together, even all the Senate of the sons of Israel,” NASB “. When the high priest and his associates arrived, they called together the Sanhedrin – the full assembly of the elders of Israel,” NIV “But the high priest and those who were with him got together the Sanhedrin and the representatives of the children of Israel,” BBE “And when the high priest was come, and they that were with him, they called together the council and all the elderhood of the sons of Israel,” DARBY “The chief priest and those who were with him called together the Jewish council , that is, all the leaders of Israel ,” GWN “When the high priest arrived, he and his supporters convened the Sanhedrin – this was the full Senate of Israel,” NJB and “When the high priest arrived, he and his supporters convened the Sanhedrin – this was the full Senate of Israel.” LIVING

Those commanding that the apostles be brought to them are a body of people, probably well over one hundred, who were poised to pronounce judgment on the men they had apprehended. It is clear that their word was considered to be with some authority, for they called for the apostles to be brought to them

It did not take the core of opponents long to convene together. They were anxious to bring to an end, what they considered to be a disruption in the Temple. Previously they had released Peter and John, threatening them with further reprisals if they continued to preach or teach in the name of Jesus (Acts 4:21). Now, they imagined, they would fulfill those threats and bring this teaching to an end once and for all.

“All the Senate of Israel”

These are said to be in addition to the Sanhedrin, which was the highest judicial branch of the Judaism of the day. It is said to have consisted of seventy-one members, patterned after the practice Moses instituted by the direction of the Lord, which consisted of seventy elders plus Moses (Ex 24:9; Num 11:25).

The “senate of Israel” appears to have been additional elders who were not a part of the Sanhedrin, yet were noted for their wisdom. They were no doubt brought in for counsel. Together with the high priest and the Sanhedrin they constituted a potentially intimidating body of critics. Now we will see how they fare in their opposition to the apostles.

THEY SENT TO THE PRISON

“ . . . and sent to the prison to have them brought .” Other versions read, “and sent orders to the prison house for them to be brought,” NASB “and sent to the jail for the apostles,” NIV “ and sent to the prison to get them .” BBE and “and sent to the gaol for them to be brought.” NJB

If “the common prison” was a public one, as the word suggests, then the incarceration of the apostles was also public. By the same token, getting them out of prison and bringing them to the council would also be known. This would apparently accent the authority of the council, and subject the apostles to further public humiliation. Those commanding that the apostles be brought to them are a body of people, probably well over one hundred, who were poised to pronounce judgment on the men they had apprehended. It is clear that their word was considered to be with some authority, for they called for the apostles to be brought to them. However, heaven did not honor their word, and that is what will be made apparent.

THEY FOUND THEM NOT IN PRISON

“ 22 But when the officers came, and found them not in the prison, they returned, and told, 23 Saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the keepers standing without before the doors: but when we had opened, we found no man within,” Other versions read, “But when the officers came and did not find them in the prison, they returned and reported, saying, Indeed we found the prison shut securely, and the guards standing outside before the doors ; but when we opened them, we found no one

As men view things, those kind of conditions make non-violent escape impossible. The gates were locked, and could not be opened without some form of noisy and apparent force. The guards were present to prevent a violent prison break, or a hostile takeover of the prison, resulting in the forced release of the prisoners.

inside!” NKJV “But on arriving at the jail, the officers did not find them there. So they went back and reported, We found the jail securely locked, with the guards standing at the doors; but when we opened them, we found no one inside .” NIV “But the men who were sent saw that they were not in the prison , and came back with the news, Saying, The doors of the prison were safely shut , and the keepers were at the doors, but when they were open, there was nobody inside,” BBE and “But when the attendants arrived there, they failed to find them in the jail ; so they came back and reported, We found the prison quite safely locked up and the guards were on duty outside the doors, but when we opened [it], we found no one on the inside.” AMPLIFIED

An angel from heaven had visited the scene during the night, and no one knew what had happened – even though the prison was public, and guards were stationed at the doors. Just as in the resurrection of Christ, the Lord can effectively work without men’s knowledge, and while little is going on among them.

What was done by the angel contradicted the conditions: the doors were securely locked, and guards were positioned at the doors. As men view things, those kind of conditions make non-violent escape impossible. The gates were locked, and could not be opened without some form of noisy and apparent force. The guards were present to prevent a violent prison break, or a hostile takeover of the prison, resulting in the forced release of the prisoners. So far as the high priest and his colleagues were concerned, they had ensured the apostles would remain in the common prison until they were ready to try them.

Of course, none of these things were true, because heaven was also involved in this series of events. That changes the whole scenario. Men dare not allow their vision to rest on circumstance if God, Christ, and holy angels are in the picture – and when the saints are involved, heaven IS involved!

This puts a limit on what men can do. It is why every temptation comes with a special way of escape, that the believer may be able to bear it. The faithfulness of God is at stake here. As it is written, “For no temptation (no trial regarded as enticing to sin), [no matter how it comes or where it leads] has overtaken you and laid hold on you that is not common to man [that is, no temptation or trial has come to you that is beyond human resistance and that is not adjusted and adapted and belonging to human experience, and such as man can bear]. But God is faithful [to His Word and to His compassionate nature], and He [can be trusted] not to let you be tempted and tried and assayed beyond your ability and strength of resistance and power to endure, but with the temptation He will [always] also provide the way out (the means of escape to a landing place), that you may be capable and strong and powerful to bear up under it patiently.” AMPLIFIED (1 Cor 10:13). If someone responds that this is referring to committing sin, and not to trials such as the one in our text, consider this. If God is over all, then despairing is sinful, for it is an expression of unbelief.

Once again, in this text, the doctrine relating to Divine involvements with men is being lived out in valid and instructive human experience. The faithfulness of God, and the invincibility of faith are confirmed in this historic occurrence among men. Truth is being translated into life.

THE WAY THE FLESH THINKS

“24 Now when the high priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things, they doubted of them whereunto this would grow.”

With such remarkable evidence staring them in the face, you might think the high priest, Sanhedrin, and Jewish elders would see the error of their way, yielding to the truth as the people did on the day of Pentecost (2:37). Perhaps they too will cry out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” After all, their judgment has been openly reversed. Surely they will be able to see it, perceiving they were wrong in their opposition to the apostles and determination to judge them.

However, this is not the way the flesh thinks. It “is not subject to the law of God,” neither indeed can be” (Rom 8:7). It can make no sense out of the truth. As it is written, “But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14). Those who imagine that religion can be governed by cold and calculating logic fail to see this aspect of things. The things of God, whether heard with the ear or seen with the eye, extend beyond the border of human reasoning. In order to profit from them, the element of faith must be found. Where that faith is not present, the most profound works and words of God cannot possibly be understood. Those who have anchored the exegesis of Scripture to logic or various forms of interpretation have not seen this, and have brought a great disadvantages to the church.

WHEN THEY HEARD, THEY DOUBTED OF THEM

“Now when the high priest and the captain of the temple and the chief priests heard these things they doubted of them . . .” Other versions read, “Now when the captain of the temple guard and the chief priests heard these words, they were greatly perplexed about them” NASB “ were greatly troubled,” BBE “As the captain of the temple police and the chief priests heard these things, they were baffled about them,” CSB “ they were astonished at them,” MRD “were at a loss about them” NAB “ they were frantic ,” NJB “The captain of the temple and the most important priests heard this, They were confused .” IE “ they were utterly at a loss with regard to it ,” WEYMOUTH “Now when the military leader of the temple area and the chief priests heard these facts, “they were much perplexed and thoroughly at a loss about them ,” AMPLIFIED and “they were completely mystified at the apostles' disappearance.” PHILLIPS

Something had happened that was completely outside the boundaries of nature. The fact and implications of the work extended beyond the perimeter of human wisdom. This was particularly difficult for the Sadducees, who did not believe in things outside the realm of human experience. They refused to acknowledge the resurrection and the existence of angels and spirits. To them, an unseen world, unseen personalities, and supernatural power were all foolish.

Even though there are involvements now between this present world and the one to come, they are not apparent. Therefore, those without faith cannot perceive them. It is impossible. Couple that with the theology of the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection and the existence of angels and spirits, and you account for the utter blindness of this court. It was, in fact, a blind judicial court, devoid of any understanding in the very matter they were judging.

Therefore, since what has happened cannot be accounted for within the framework of their wisdom, they “doubted” – that is, they were thrown into a state of consternation. The word translated “doubted” means, “to be entirely at a loss, to be in perplexity.” THAYER Their wisdom was like a withered hand that could not take hold of this fact. They could not even see it from afar, and were like blind men being told of something that could not be touched or sensed in any way other than that of sight.

In my judgment, a lot of wasted time is spent in the Christian world trying to convince such men of the truth. Of whatever worth the field of Apologetics may appear, in view of this text it certainly cannot be one of preeminent value. Precisely how would you go about convincing the court in this text of the real nature of the apostles' deliverance? How could you possibly substantiate that an angel delivered them, when the larger part of the court did not even believe angels existed? And how could you prove the gates were opened without a key, or any noise, or completely apart from the knowledge of those who were keeping them safe?

That is why these men were “greatly perplexed,” NASB “greatly troubled,” BBE “astonished,” MRD “at a loss,” NASB “frantic,” NJB “confused,” IE and “completely mystified.” PHILLIPS They were so hard of heart they would not admit they had sinned, or even that they had made a mistake in their judgment. That is simply not the way in which the flesh thinks. When it confronts the mind of God or the works of God, the flesh grows even more hostile, refusing to admit that it has been thoroughly frustrated. It rather chooses to believe it is just at a temporal loss for words. However, given due time, flesh imagines it will be able to figure it all out.

Fleshly thinking, in reality, is irrational rationality, foolish wisdom, and unreasonable reasoning. That is why it is ignorance gone to seed to reach into that domain to account for the things of God, explain them, or comprehend them.

WHEREUNTO THIS WOULD GROW

“ . . . whereunto this would grow.” Other versions read, “they wondered what the outcome would be ,” NKJV “as to what would come of this ,” NASB “wondering what might be going on ,” NRSV “about what might be the end of this business,” BBE “ “what this would come to ,” DARBY “about what could have happened ,” GWN “and they studied what this could mean ,” MRD “they wondered what could be happening ,” NJB “wondering what would happen next and where all this would end ,” LIVING “They wondered, ‘What will happen because of this ?,” IE “wondering what would happen next ,” WEYMOUTH , wondering into what this might grow ,” AMPLIFIED and “and wondered what further developments there would be .” PHILLIPS

The idea here is that the court did not know what to do – what road to take from here. You could view them as thinking, “What can we do now, when even the attempt to incarcerate them has failed?” Herod had the same kind of response when He heard of the mighty deeds being done by Jesus. “Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was perplexed , because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead” (Luke 9:7). There was no further basis for confidence – they could not think of anything else to do. Their wisdom had run out – or, to put it more accurately, the poverty of both their wisdom and their power had been confirmed and made known.

One might imagine that these men would now abandon their efforts to suppress the preaching of the apostles. Did it not make sense to now cease from such vain attempts? However, that is not the way the flesh thinks. It does not give up, call for a truce, or throw in the towel. Hard hearts do not yield. Whether it is the blinded sodomites of Sodom wearying themselves trying to find a door (Gen 19:11), or the frustrated Jewish council and elders trying to suppress the preaching of Jesus, flesh is relentless. That is why we cannot be casual or slothful in dealing with “the old man,” which is the flesh personalized. Our bodies, for example, which are the vehicle used for the ultimate expression of the flesh , must be forcibly subdued and brought into subjection (1 Cor 9:27). The body cannot be brought to the point where it volunteers to do what is good and acceptable in the eyes of the Lord. When it comes to the newness of life, everything about it is unreasonable and foolish to the natural man. There is no possible way of presenting the things of God so that they become appealing, sensible, and desired by those who remain in the flesh . Those who engage in such efforts are wasting all of the time. The fact that such an approach is currently fashionable does not change that reality. This text confirms that this is true. As it progresses this will become evident.

THEY ARE STILL PREACHING!

“ 25 Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.”

I do not doubt that the convened court thought the men had escaped and gone into hiding. That is probably what someone directed by human understanding would do. However, the apostles had been directed by a holy angel, and not by the will of the flesh . He had directed them to return to the Temple, and speak “to the people all the words of this life.” Consequently, because they walked by faith, that is precisely where they will be found, and what they will be found doing. May God cause a revival in our part of the world that yields this kind of obedience to the truth and boldness to declare it. How sorely it is needed!

THEY ARE STANDING IN THE TEMPLE AND TEACHING THE PEOPLE

“Then came one and told them, saying, Behold, the men whom ye put in prison are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.” Other versions read, “Then someone came and said, “Look! The men you put in jail are standing in the temple courts teaching the people,” NIV “Someone came and reported to them , ‘Look! The men you put in jail are standing in the temple complex and teaching the people,’” CSB “Then a man arrived with fresh news . ‘Look!’ he said, ‘the men you imprisoned are in the Temple. They are standing there preaching to the people ,” NJB and “But some man came and reported to them, saying, Listen! The men whom you put in jail are standing [right here] in the temple and teaching the people !” AMPLIFIED

How humiliating it must have been for the council to hear the report: “the men whom you put in prison.” NKJV The men were in the Temple, doing precisely what they had done before, just as though nothing had happened to them. The implication is that the men were calm and reposed. It was a noble display of their hearts being ruled by the peace of God. As it is written, “And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful” (Col 3:15). Here is an example of that being done. The condition was not produced by a promise of good things to come. Rather, it was the result of a great deliverance and the directions of the very angel who delivered them. The apostles were able to correlate the word of the Lord with circumstance. They could associate deliverance with duty, and therefore go about their ordained work in both peace and power, knowing the Lord was with them.

An Example of Perseverance

The apostles were able to correlate the word of the Lord with circumstance. They could associate deliverance with duty, and go about their ordained work in both peace and power.

Here is an example of perseverance of a different kind. Ordinarily we think of perseverance as uninterrupted continuance. In this regard, continuing in the faith would be a case in point (Acts 14:22; Col 1:23), or abiding in Christ (1 John 2:27-28), or not being moved away from the hope of the Gospel Col 1:23), or cleaving to the Lord with purpose of heart (Acts 11:23) or running the race set before us (Heb 12:1). Also, there is standing fast in the liberty for which Christ has freed us (Gal 5:1), not being weary in well doing (Gal 6:9), and holding fast the profession of our faith without wavering (Heb 10:23). These are all wide areas of consideration that involve a number of details.

There are also focused activities in which believers are said to continue, or persevere. One such activity is prayer, which often calls for strong perseverance (Col 4:2; Eph 6:18). Another is taking heed to ourselves and to the doctrine (1 Tim 4:16). The early church continued steadfastly, or persevered, “in the apostles’ doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers” (Acts 2:42). There is also the matter of enduring chastening (Heb 12:7). Whether we are speaking of the general focus of our lives, of the details of them, as just listed, they are all involved in being “faithful until death” (Rev 2:10), or being “steadfast and unmovable” (1 Cor 15:58).

In this text, the activity was preaching, or teaching. That is what the apostles had been doing prior to their arrest (Acts 4:2,18). Upon being released, they were commanded to reenter the Temple and commence preaching again, speaking “to the people all the words of this life” (5:20). Promptly, the apostles reentered the Temple early in the morning, and resumed their teaching (5:21). Now, it is reported that this is precisely what they were doing – “standing in the Temple, and teaching the people” (5:25).

This is an aspect of perseverance that has been largely lost in our day. This is a day of religious fads and trends – and they all tend to diminish preaching and teaching. Within the professed church, men of understanding and spiritual aptitude are not held in high regard. Preaching and teaching are low on the list of priorities, and are often even despised. An organizer, promoter, worship leader, or even youth leader, are often more prominent than someone who can handle aright the word of God (2 Tim 2:15). Of course, in the context of this passage, such exaltations would at once appear to be what they really are – a distraction.

When Jesus chose and ordained His apostles, He had a twofold purpose in mind: “that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach” (Mark 3:14). Now, these men are faithfully continuing in those activities – abiding in Christ by faith, and preaching, or declaring the words of “this life.”

Others Who Persevered

In accenting the preciousness of this kind of faithfulness, allow me to briefly mention three other examples of perseverance in ordained activities . In each of these cases, a concerted effort was made by their enemies to bring a cessation to the faithfulness of the men of God. Those efforts, however, failed.

- DANIEL. Daniel was noted for his consistent periods of prayer. When a law was passed that forbade such prayers, he continued praying anyway (Dan 6:10).

- SHADRACH, MESHACH, AND ABEDNEGO. When they were commanded to bow before an idolatrous image set up by Nebuchadnezzar, these men refused to bow. When confronted with the threat of death if they did not bow, they continued in their refusal (Dan 3:17-18).

- JEREMIAH. When ignored and plotted against, he determined not to speak any more in the name of the Lord. Yet, God's word was like a fire burning in his bones, and he could not refrain from speaking, for he was "weary with forbearing" (Jer 20:8-9). He therefore continued to prophesy.

Once a person knows the will of the Lord, and is committed to the doing of it, the degree of their spiritual strength will be made known in how they respond to any opposition to their work. When they confront resistance, will they continue to do what they know to be right, or will they cease their efforts because of the fear of man? Those who trust God will continue.

THEY BROUGHT THEM BACK, BUT FEARED THE PEOPLE

" 26 Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned."

I must admit that it is heart-wrenching to read of godly men like the apostles being brought back to stand before those who are opposed to their work. They had been chosen, taught, and sent forth by the King of kings, and yet they appear to be in subjection to those who are, in every way, inferior to them. However, lest we moved into the corner of foolish speculation, there are some basic things to be considered.

First, the Kingdom of God is not about men, but about God. There are higher purposes being served than purely personal interests and comfort.

Second, this world is not the only world, and the injustices that take place here will not end here. There is a purpose being served that involves the revelation of the hearts of men. There is also an appointed day of judgment when all wrongs will be addressed, and the pure in heart will be fully exonerated before an assembled universe.

Third, it is not the nature of the faith-life to put us beyond the outward reach of our enemies. Abel was not beyond the reach of Cain. Isaac was subjected to the mocking of Ishmael. Jacob had to run from Esau. Joseph was thrown into a pit by his brothers, sold to a band of Ishmaelites, and cast into prison on a false charge. The prophets were persecuted by their peers. John the Baptist was beheaded by the despot Herod. All of the apostles save one were martyred. Precisely what is there about the faith-life that leads anyone to believe they ought to be exempted from opposition or suffering?

The thing that is to be underscored is that no amount of opposition, oppression, or even persecution can bring the work of the King to a grinding halt. The purposes of God are not overthrown, or even delayed, because of the work of His enemies. In their hearts, the apostles and those with them knew this to be true. That is why they immediately resorted to the Lord when they were first threatened. It is also why they returned to the Temple to teach when they were told to do so. They knew who was governing matters – and it was not the high priest, the Sanhedrin, the Sadducees, or the elders of the people. Those opponents were actually nothing more than pawns on the chessboard of Divine purpose. God will use them for His own glory.

The Captain with the Officers

This was no doubt the same captain who first joined the opposition of Peter and John following the healing of the lame man (Acts 4:1). As is characteristic of those who live according to the flesh, and are consequently under the dominion of Satan, this “captain” learns nothing from his past experience. When told to bring the apostles to their critics, he did not remonstrate like Gamaliel would later: “And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought: But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God” (Acts 5:38-39).

THEY BROUGHT THEM WITHOUT VIOLENCE

“Then went the captain with the officers, and brought them without violence . . .” Other versions read, “Then the captain went along with the officers and proceeded to bring them back without violence,” NASB “At that, the captain went with his officers and brought the apostles. They did not use force,” NIV “Then the captain and some of the police went and took them, but not violently,” BBE and “Then the captain went out with his men and fetched them. They dared not use any violence however.” PHILLIPS

Although the precise manner in which they brought the apostles is not specified, the fact that it was “without violence,” or force, confirms that the apostles did not resist their arrest – just as they did not do previously. In them the word of Jesus was fulfilled, “But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil,” or “Do not make use of force against an evil man,” BBE or “offer no resistance to the wicked.” NJB To some, this does not seem like a proper response to those who would subject you to harm. However, in the work of the Lord, He Himself is supervising all occasions, and His servants are to trust that He will do so justly, with a due consideration of His people, and in strict adherence to the heavenly agenda. It is ever true, “They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be moved” (Psa 125:1).

While the Lord was doubtless in this situation, protecting the apostles from untimely danger, this was not known to the men who arrested them. Their motive for using no violence is specified.

To some, this does not seem like a proper response to those who would subject you to harm. However, in the work of the Lord, He Himself is supervising all occasions, and His servants are to trust that He will do so justly, with a due consideration of His people, and in strict adherence to the heavenly agenda.

THEY FEARED THE PEOPLE

“ . . . for they feared the people, lest they should have been stoned.” Other versions read, “because they feared that the people would stone them,” NIV “for they were afraid of being stoned by the people,” NRSV “After all, the officer and his guards were afraid that the people would stone them to death for using force,” GWN “for they were afraid the people would kill them if they roughed up the disciples) and brought them in before the Council,” LIVING and “for they dreaded the people lest they be stoned by them,” AMPLIFIED

This is the means through which the Lord protected the apostles – the favor of the people. Beginning with the day of Pentecost, believers were given “favor with all the people” (Acts 2:47). Shortly before the occasion of our text, “the people magnified” the apostles and those who were joined to them (5:13).

John the Baptist’s enemy, Herod encountered the same obstacle, being afraid to do him harm because of the people. “And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet” (Matt 14:5). When Jesus asked the chief priests and elders concerning the origin of the baptism of John, “they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet” (Matt 21:25-26).

Often the enemies of the Lord Jesus were put at this same disadvantage because of the people, fearing to do harm to the Lord. When they consulted among themselves about how they might kill Him, “But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people” (Matt 26:5). Again it is written, “And the chief priests and the scribes the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the people: for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them” (Luke 20:19). And again, “And the chief priests and scribes sought how they might kill him; for they feared the people” (Luke 22:2).

This kind of favor among the people is not to be sought. It is the result of the grace of God, who gives such favor to His children as He deems best. There are numerous references to this gracious manner of the Lord.

- THE NATION OF ISRAEL. It is also said of Israel, “And the LORD gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians” (Ex 11:3a).

- MOSES. It is also said of Moses, “Moreover the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants, and in the sight of the people” (Ex 11:3).

- JOSEPH. Of Joseph it is written, “But the LORD was with Joseph, and showed him mercy, and gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison” (Gen 39:21). “And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house” (Acts 7:10).

Those who preach and teach must learn to trust God in this area. If they will devote themselves to preaching His truth, and as it is appropriate and in keeping with the will of God, He will give them favor with the people.

DANIEL. It is written of young Daniel, “Now God had brought Daniel into favor and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs” (Dan 1:9).

- PRAYED FOR. When king Solomon prayed for the people at the dedication of the Temple, he asked the Lord to cause Israel's captors to have compassion on them. “And forgive thy people that have sinned against thee, and all their transgressions wherein they have transgressed against thee, and give them compassion before them who carried them captive, that they may have compassion on them” (1 Kgs 8:50). The Psalmist acknowledged that Solomon's prayer was answered. “He made them also to be pitied of all those that carried them captives” (Psa 106:46).

- EZRA. Ezra confessed that God had given him favor with king Artaxerxes: “Blessed be the LORD God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart, to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem: and hath extended mercy unto me before the king, and his counselors, and before all the king's mighty princes” (Ezra 7:27-28).

- NEHEMIAH. When Nehemiah was preparing to go before the king Artaxerxes concerning a trip to Jerusalem to restore its walls, he asked the Lord to give him favor with the king. He knew the extent of Divine power. “O Lord, I beseech thee, let now thine ear be attentive to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, who desire to fear thy name: and prosper, I pray thee, thy servant this day, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man . For I was the king's cupbearer” (Neh 1:11). He was granted that favor (Neh 2:4-8).

• THE REASON STATED. Solomon traced such marvelous favor to a man’s ways pleasing the Lord. “When a man's ways please the LORD, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him ” (Prov 16:7).

This is an aspect of God’s dealings with His people that must be faithfully declared. Too often it is hidden from the people because of an the vaunting of human wisdom. When men alter their conduct with a mind to obtain the approval of men, they abruptly cease to be servants of Christ. Therefore Paul, wrote, “For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ” (Gal 1:10).

As reported in this text, the approval of the people was the result of the apostles and their brethren pleasing God. It was God Himself who caused the people to approve of them and magnify them. He opened their eyes to see comely traits that could not even be seen by the high priest and those aligned with him.

Those who preach and teach must learn to trust God in this area. If they will devote themselves to preaching His truth, and as it is appropriate and in keeping with the will of God, He will give them favor with the people. This will not always be the case, and we ought not to be so naive as to think it is. However, when our ways , or manners, are pleasing to the Lord, and as we are involved in a labor “in the Lord, “ it is often God’s good pleasure to give us “favor with men.” Such times are to be received with thankfulness, and used for the glory of God. They are occasions of peace, when spiritual progress can be made. Of such circumstances it is written, “And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace” (James 3:18). That is all in addition to times when we are protected from Satan’s malice.

CARNAL JUDGES FACE SPIRITUAL MEN

“ 27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them, 28 Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us. ”

I have often pondered the relative absurdity of those who are “kings and priests unto God” (Rev 1:5-6), who have faithfully discharged their stewardship, being brought before the tribunals of men. It is one of the great paradoxes that accompanies our tenure in this present evil world. When the sons of God conduct themselves in this world as those who are “Wise as serpents and harmless as doves” (Matt 10:16), this kind of circumstance confirms the hostility of the world against them. Even though there is “none occasion of stumbling” in them (1 John 2:10), and they have given “none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully” (1 Tim5 :14), yet they may be summoned before the judges of the earth as though they were evil doers. Such is the case in our text.

A word ought to be added about those who do wrong and suffer for it. Solemnly we are told, “But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or as a thief, or as an evildoer, or as a busybody in other men's matters” (1 Pet 4:15). If such an occasion should arise, and the professed Christian bears up under the punishment, that is of no account before God. As it is written, “For what glory is it , if, when ye be buffeted for your faults, ye shall take it patiently? but if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God” (1 Pet 2:20). If a professing Christian has broken the laws, failed to pay his taxes, been slothful on the job, or been guilty of some form of immorality, there is no merit in taking the punishment patiently – as men would say, taking responsibility for their actions. This ought to be done, but there is no value in it.

It is the duty of transgressors to bear up under their punishment. If they do not care for such experiences, then let them “abstain from all appearance of evil,” as they are enjoined to do (1 Thess 5:22).

In our text, men are suffering “for righteousness’ sake” (Matt 5:10). The opposition is the result of the wicked plotting “against the just” (Psa 37:12). The “just” are doing “well,” and yet they are suffering for it (1 Pet 2:20).

All of this is strange to those who seek the approbation of men, and tailor their religion so that it is not abrasive to the flesh. Those who do such things are not serving the Lord, and they are not thinking about serving Him. With them, popularity in the world and the reception of men is all important. However, “newness of life” provides no place for such ambitions.

THEY SET THEM BEFORE THE COUNCIL

Many of God’s people have experienced standing before religious authorities to give an account for the manner in which they faithfully served Christ. Such a circumstance accents the boldness of religious flesh that will openly oppose the work of Christ, even though there has been abundant confirmation of its truth.

“And when they had brought them, they set them before the council: and the high priest asked them . . .” Other versions read, “And when they had brought them, they stood them before the Council . And the high priest questioned them,” NASB “Having brought the apostles, they made them appear before the Sanhedrin to be questioned by the high priest,” NIV “And they took them into the Sanhedrin , and the high priest said to them,” BBE “And when they had brought them, they placed them before the whole council ; and the high priest began to say to them,” MRD “Then they brought the apostles before the high council , where the high priest confronted them,” NLT “The soldiers brought the apostles to the Jewish Council and made them stand before their leaders . The high priest questioned the apostles,” IE “So they brought them and set them before the council (Sanhedrin). And the high priest examined them by questioning ,” AMPLIFIED and “So they brought them in and made them stand before the Sanhedrin. The High Priest called for an explanation .” PHILLIPS

Many of God’s people have experienced standing before religious authorities to give an account for the manner in which they faithfully served Christ. Such a circumstance accents the boldness of religious flesh that will openly oppose the work of Christ, even though there has been abundant confirmation of its truth. Consider the marvelous things that had been wrought in the case before us.

- A man who was lame from his mother’s womb had been healed (3:2).
- The healed man had gone through the Temple, leaping and praising God (3:8).
- Peter and John had preached through Jesus the resurrection of the dead (4:2).
- The crucified, risen, and enthroned Jesus had been preached to the people (3:12-26; 4:8-13).
- 5,000 men had believed (4:4).
- A marvelous display of selflessness was taking place among the believers (4:32).
- A Divine judgment had occurred within the church, and had been made known (5:1-11).
- The people had magnified the believers, with no disruptive display or violence (5:13).
- The apostles had miraculously disappeared from the prison into which the council had thrown them (5:19,23).
- The apostles were found in the Temple teaching the people (5:25).

Although none of these things caused an insurrection among the people, or were directed against the Temple authorities, the apostles were treated as though that was the case. And why was this so? Because truth is abrasive to those who refuse to embrace it. Good and honorable works appear quite differently to the institutions they do not promote. The apostles could say of this occasion what Paul said about one of his experiences: “And they neither found me in the temple disputing with any man, neither raising up the people, neither in the synagogues, nor in the city” (Acts 24:12).

There were probably more people in the Temple than was ordinary, and none of them were causing any trouble. No one was attempting to stir up the people against the authorities. Yet, here the apostles stand before the Jewish council just as though they were violators of the Law of Moses, and had broken one of the commandments of God. This incident fulfills a word spoken by Isaiah: “That make a man an offender for a word, and lay a snare for him that reproveth in the gate, and turn aside the just for a thing of nought” (Isa 29:21).

DID NOT WE COMMAND YOU?

“ 28 Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name?” Other versions read, “saying, “We gave you strict orders not to continue teaching in this name,” NASB “We gave you strict orders not to teach in this name,” NIV “We gave you very clear orders not to give teaching in this name,” BBE “Did we not strictly charge you, to teach no person in this name ?” MRD “Didn’t we tell you never again to preach about this Jesus?,” LIVING “Did we not positively forbid you to teach anymore on this authority,” WILLIAMS “We strictly forbade you, did we not, to teach about this Name,” MONTGOMERY “We definitely commanded and strictly charged you not to teach in or about this Name,” AMPLIFIED and “We gave you the strictest possible orders,” he said to them, “not to give any teaching in this name (of Jesus).” PHILLIPS

This is the manner of the flesh – to absolutely miss the significance of words of truth. This is because the fleshly life is lived out in a low zone – in the dark, where things cannot be comprehended.

Those who have an inordinately high regard for human authority cannot understand why followers of the Lord do not have such a view. Such people attach great weight to their own words, which can be buttressed by nothing more than their position.

Now Caiaphas the high priest puts the all-important question to the apostles: “Saying, Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name?” Their reference is to the first time they arrested Peter and John, yet could find no justifiable reason to retain them in prison. Of that occasion it is written, “And they called them, and commanded them not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus” (4:18). At that time, without being intimidated at all by their word, Peter and John responded to the council, “ Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard” (4:19-20).

Now, the high priest speaks just as though the actions of Peter and the apostles make no sense at all – even though Peter and John had plainly said they were not going to honor the demands of the Temple authorities. This is the manner of the flesh – to absolutely miss the significance of words of truth. This is because the fleshly life is lived out in a low zone – in the dark, where things cannot be comprehended.

Do not be intimidated when the opponents of truth speak as though they have real authority. They do not! A case may have been made for the legitimacy of high priest’s authority, but it would have fallen to the ground. The office of the high priest had to do with “things pertaining to God” (Heb 5:1). That was the purpose for the office, and Caiaphas should have known it. When he heard the words of the apostles, he should have stepped forward and commended them, giving thanks to God for the revelation of the truth. The fact that he did not put the stamp of rejection upon his work.

Those who have sought to preach and teach in the name of Christ may very well face blustering church authorities who refuse to acknowledge the truth of what they are saying. Such men are not to be approached as though they had a single mote of authority. Anyone who opposes the truth is outside the boundary of legitimate authority. No obedience should be rendered to anyone who requires a compromise in, or cessation of, the declaration of the truth. Woe to that man who caves in to such carnal people!

YOU HAVE FILLED JERUSALEM WITH YOUR DOCTRINE

“ . . . and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine . . .” Other versions read, “and now Jerusalem is full of your teaching,” BBE “Yet, you've filled Jerusalem with your teachings ,” GWN “And instead you have filled all Jerusalem with your teaching,” LIVING “yet here you have flooded Jerusalem with your doctrine,” AMPLIFIED “You have been teaching all over Jerusalem,” CEV and “but see what you have done! You have spread your teaching all over Jerusalem.” GNB

The authorities had told the apostles to stop preaching altogether. Instead, after they had prayed and been endued with power, they increased their preaching, doing so in the very place where they were commanded to cease teaching in the name of Jesus.

The record does not say the apostles went throughout the city preaching the Gospel, although I do not doubt that they declared the Good news wherever they went. Up to this point, the focal point of their proclamation was where the disciples were gathered (2:1,46), and in the Temple (Acts 2:46; 3:1-10; 4:1; 5:20).

Among other things, this confirms that the commission of Jesus was being carried out: “And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem” (Luke 24:47).

The spread of the Gospel throughout Jerusalem was probably owing to those who had heard, believed, and obeyed the Gospel. People from all parts of the city had heard the Gospel beginning at Pentecost, and during the days following. It is the nature of the Gospel to inflame the hearts of those who comprehend it, so moving them that they cannot help but speak. If, when David believed, it moved him to speak (:Psa 116:10), and if that same “spirit of faith” moved others to speak (2 Cor 4:13), why would the Gospel not continue to have the same effect upon believers? If the word of prophesy delivered to Jeremiah provoked him to speak (Jer 20:9), what can be said of those in whom the word of Christ is dwelling “richly” (Col 3:16).

The Spreading Nature of the Gospel

Those who embrace the Gospel, believing on the Lord Jesus, are prone to speak about it, and to testify of their deliverance. To put it another way, in the economy of redemption, it is possible for the word of the Gospel to have “free course,” spreading rapidly NASB and being glorified (2 Thess 3:1). This is elsewhere described as the word God being “increased” (Acts 6:7), or growing and being “multiplied” (Acts 12:24). Again, it is written of the preaching of the Gospel in Ephesus, “So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed” (Acts 19:20). In his letter to the Colossians, Paul depicted this growth as the Word producing fruit. “. . . the word of the truth of the gospel; which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit , as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth” (Col 1:5-6).

Isaiah prophesied of the remarkable productivity of God’s Word. “For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth , and maketh it bring forth and bud , that it may give seed to the sower , and bread to the eater : so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it” (Isa 55:11). The accomplishments of the Word of God, particularly the Gospel of Christ, which is its nucleus, were encompassed in the cursory observation of the high priest: “ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine.”

Your Doctrine

Notice that with which Jerusalem, according to Caiaphas, had been filled: “your doctrine,” or “your teaching.” NASB

In some professed Christian circles, “doctrine” is despised. Some even affirm they have no doctrine – which is really not the truth. The word “doctrine” means “teaching” (noun), or the things that are being taught. Lexically, the word used here means “teaching, that which is taught.” THAYER

If you were to ask the average church member what their congregation teaches, you might be surprised at how they would stammer and stutter. I know a number of ministers, some of which are well known, yet I have no idea what they actually teach. They do not speak of their doctrine themselves, and those who sit under them never speak of it either. This was not the case with the apostles. Even their enemies knew their doctrine – what they taught.

“Sound doctrine” has a particular thrust. It is a message from another world that draws men out of this world. Referring to this doctrine as the Gospel, Peter wrote, “Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into” (1 Pet 1:12). The Holy Spirit came down from heaven with a message. When He filled Christ’s people, that is the message, or doctrine, they taught.

The message is of the Lord Jesus Christ, what He did, is doing, and will do. He is the heart and core of the doctrine, and without Him teaching falls dead to the ground. If men make the family, the nation, personal health and wealth, or the ability to do great things, the heart of their message, they are only handling a stinking corpse, and it will breed nothing but death. You cannot emphasize what is passing away and have the blessing of God upon it. Such a message cannot promote life, for life cannot be maintained by something that is itself dying, or passing away.

The true doctrine promotes and sustains faith and hope, both of which are essential to the maintenance of life. If men do not have faith, they cannot please God (Heb 11:6). If they do not have hope, they cannot be part of Christ’s house (Heb 3:6).

True doctrine points toward, and clarifies, God’s “eternal purpose” and “the world to come,” in which that purpose will be fully realized (Eph 3:11; Heb 6:5). Where these things are not becoming clearer and clearer, preaching and teaching is deficient, to say the least. It is quite possible that it could even be called “damnable doctrines” (2 Pet 2:1). Erroneous doctrine cannot clarify what God has determined, what He is doing, of what will occur after the world has passed away. That ought to be so evident that it requires no further explanation. Yet, there is an astounding volume of preaching that has no association with Divine determination or ultimate destiny.

The “apostles’ doctrine” has a center point – a hub upon which every facet of teaching turns. Regarded as a Person, that hub is Jesus Christ in whom “the fulness of the Godhead” dwells “bodily” (Col 1:19; 2:9). Every facet of the truth of God connects directly to Him. In Jesus alone the meaning is unlocked, and only in Him can the appointed benefits be effectively experienced, or realized. A few of the subjects of Divine exposition are included in the chart entitled, “The Pivotal Point.”

- Redemption has to do with the means through which men are brought back to God.

- Justification relates to the removal of guilt and the appropriation of righteousness.
- Sanctification is associated with being made suitable for Divine use.
- Forgiveness deals with the removal of the debt incurred by sin, and the cleansing of the conscience as well.
- Acceptance has to do with God receiving us freely, and doing so justly and to His own glory.
- Access to God relates to appropriating the resources required to come to Him through Christ.

Now, whimpering like little children, they are acting as though they had nothing at all to do with the death of Jesus. But they are completely wrong in their assessment of the apostles. These men were not stirring up the people to take revenge on the high priest and his ungodly court.

Peace with God is required if we are to have any profitable dealings with Him. It involves the removal of the barrier between God and man that was caused by sin, and the awareness of that removal within the renewed heart.

- An inheritance is associated with the things God has prepared for those who love Him. It is what the children of God will receive after the world has passed away, all enemies have been banished, and we are forever with the Lord.
- The role in the body of Christ relates to our ministry to the brethren of Christ now, and what we will be doing in the world to come.
- Eternal hope is what is given to those who are joined to the Lord. It is the stabilizing factor of life, being likened to an anchor. It involves a persuasion of our identity with Christ, a longing to be with Him, and the anticipation of His return.

While the details of all of these matters is not spelled out in our text, they are all resident in the doctrine the apostles preached – the doctrine that had pervaded the whole of Jerusalem.

While this doctrine may sound wonderful to you, this was not the case with the high priest, Temple guard, Sanhedrin, and the elders of the people. The reason for their discontent with what the apostles were teaching is that it did not promote their agenda. In fact, it posed a threat to them, as is evident in their next expression.

YOU INTEND TO BRING THIS MAN'S BLOOD ON OUR HEADS

“ . . . and intend to bring this Man's blood upon us.” Other versions read, “and are determined to make us guilty of this Man's blood,” NIV “and you are attempting to make us responsible for this man's death,” BBE “and purpose to bring upon us the blood of this Man,” DARBY “and you have a mind to bring the blood of this Man upon us,” DOUAY “You want to take revenge on us for putting that man to death,” GWN “and are determined to make us guilty of this Man's blood,” NIB “and seem determined to fix the guilt for this man's death on us,” NJB “and intend to bring the blame for this man's death on us,” LIVING “and now want to bring on us the people's vengeance for this man's death,” WILLIAMS and “and what is more you are determined to fasten the guilt of that man's death upon us !” PHILLIPS

The idea here expressed is that, by stirring up the people, and possibly even the Romans, the high priest and his group would be seen as crucifying the Lord of glory – the One who was presently blessing the people. Already they had feared the people might stone the arresting officers, and so they were cautious about the manner in which the apostles were apprehended and brought to the high priest and his court.

It appears that the guilty conscience of these men cringed at every word of the apostles, for they were pointed in their preaching. Remember the thundering words of Peter: “. . . ye have taken , and by wicked hands have crucified and slain . . . But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life . . . Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified . . . This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders , which is become the head of the corner” (Acts 2:23; 3:14-15; 4:10-11).

At the time of Jesus’ death, they thought nothing of their opposition to Him, and were aggressive to rid themselves of Him. When Jesus confessed to this very high priest that He was “the Christ, the Son of God,” he tore his clothes and said Jesus was guilty of blasphemy. When he asked the court what they had to say about it, they responded, “He is deserving of death” NKJV (Matt 26:64-66). At that time, they thought nothing of spitting in Christ’s face, pummeling him with their fists, and mocking Him (Matt 26:67-68). This is the group that bound Jesus, and delivered Him to Pilate (Matt 27:2). This is the group who persuaded the people to ask for the release of Barabbas and crucify Jesus (Matt 27:20). They cried out multiple times for Jesus to be crucified (Matt 27:22-23). When Pilate remonstrated, saying he could find no fault in the man, these were among those who cried out, “His blood be on us and all our children” (Matt 27:25).

Now, whimpering like little children, they are acting as though they had nothing at all to do with the death of Jesus. But they are completely wrong in their assessment of the apostles. These men were not stirring up the people to take revenge on the high priest and his ungodly court. Rather, they had apprised the people that they knew all of this was done in ignorance (Acts 3:17) . They had held out the scepter of Jesus, and declared that their sins could be “blotted out,” and then “times of refreshing” could come upon them “from the presence of the Lord” (3:19) . Satan, however, had “blinded” the minds of these leaders, “lest the light of the glorious light of the gospel of Christ, who is the Image of God, should shine unto them” (2 Cor 4:4). Therefore their hearts remained hard as adamant stone, and they continued in their opposition to the truth – even though this was “the day of salvation” and the “accepted time” (2 Cor 6:2) and a “new and living way” to God had been “consecrated” (Heb 10:20), by which men could come to God. Jesus had been exalted “to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). However, none of these realities can be seen by those who are deluded by the evil one. So far as they are concerned these things do not even exist, for they are outside of the flesh and the natural man, and thus beyond their reach. They are confined to the realm over which the prince of the power of the air presides.

Whatever men may postulate about the freedom of the human will, and the power of choice, there is no man who is free to choose what he himself cannot Volitional capacities are of no consequence or value when the truth is not known, or cannot be seen. Such a soul is in a bondage of the worst sort. If the gospel is, as Scripture affirms, “hid to them that are lost, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them that believe not,” precisely in what sense is the will free? God “hid” the truth from them, and Satan “blinded” their minds. Exactly what natural capacity is there that can overcome these monumental obstacles?

CONCLUSION

Truth and the lie are inextricably locked in combat, opposing each other. Good and evil, and right and wrong are opposed to each other. What issues forth from Christ cannot be reconciled to things coming from Satan. The temporal and the eternal cannot be merged. No person can set their affection on things above and maintain a primary interest in things on the earth.

In this text we have seen the hostility that is produced by a purely traditional religion. When men embrace a second-hand view of the truth – one that has been filtered through human understanding – it insulates the soul against truth's power. This bondage can only be broken by God commanding the light of the knowledge of the glory of God to shine into the heart (2 Cor 4:6). However, this marvelous command is coupled together with the Gospel, which is the vehicle through which the power is realized (Rom 1:16). If that Gospel is spurned, the Divine bondage-breaking commandment will not be uttered. In that case, the hostility of the unbeliever grows in direct proportion to one's exposure to the Gospel.

If it is countered that God struck down Saul of Tarsus with a blazing light, bringing him to acknowledge the truth of Jesus, it must be remembered that Saul had been wrestling with his own response to the Gospel preached by Stephen, and perhaps other things as well. Jesus plainly said to him, "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks" (Acts 12:4). The Holy Spirit had been working in Saul, in some way convicting him of sin, righteousness, and judgment (John 16:8-11). At the time Jesus encountered him on the road to Damascus, he was not in the same condition as the men of our text – Caiaphas, the Sanhedrin, and the elders of Israel.

Throughout the book of Acts we will see this hostility surfacing again and again – particularly among the Jews. It will also be seen erupting in the idolaters of Ephesus (Acts 19:28-34). Truth and the lie are inextricably locked in combat, opposing each other. Good and evil, and right and wrong are opposed to each other. What issues forth from Christ cannot be reconciled to things coming from Satan. The temporal and the eternal cannot be merged. No person can set their affection on things above and maintain a primary interest in things on the earth.

All of that explains why the truth causes the outbreak of opposition among those who have not received a love for it, yet are devoted to some humanly-devised form of religion. There is a sense of the friction between revealed religion and traditional religion that goes beyond the perimeter of intelligence. It inflames the emotion, and causes those opposed to the truth to speak and act unreasonably. It may move them to cry out against Jesus "Crucify Him! Crucify Him!" It may move them to ignore the fact that they cannot resist the wisdom of Stephen, and attempt to hire men to lie about him. Such hostility can move the Jews to have Paul beaten with forty stripes save one, five times. It can even move them to stone Paul, then drag his body out of the city as though it was a piece of garbage.

We cannot afford to allow ourselves to think that those who do not love the truth will respect us because we are harmless, or that they will listen politely to us because we come to help them. God can cause this to happen, to be sure. But it is also true that He does not always do so, as our text confirms. The record in Acts reflects the real situation.

PETER AND THE APOSTLES ANSWER

INTRODUCTION

Having been commanded by the Jewish council to cease from speaking in the name of Jesus, and not even to mention His name anymore, the Apostles have chosen to obey an angelic messenger from heaven. This confirms where their hearts were tuned, as well as their priorities. The spiritual focus of an individual is made known in the times of stress, when pressure is exerted upon the mind and the soul to adjust life's course.

When men faint in the day of adversity, Solomon wrote, it is because their "strength is small" (Prov 24:10). As stated under the New Covenant, it is because their faith is "little" (Matt 6:30; 8:26; 14:31), or "weak" (Rom 4:19; 14:1). That is, they do not see the things of God clearly, and are therefore lacking in the vital areas of "substance" and "evidence" (Heb 11:1). Their vision is flawed, and therefore they do not know how to negotiate in the straits of difficulty.

During their time with Jesus prior to His ascension, these very same men encountered times when their faith was weak (Matt 8:26). Sometimes the Lord asked them where their faith was, for there was no evidence of it (Lk 8:26). Once they could not conceive of the Lord supplying a multitude of people with five loaves and two little fishes (John 6:9). Another time, when Jesus revealed that He was going to suffer many things from the elders and chief priests and scribes, be killed, and be raised again the third day, Peter responded, "Be it far from Thee,

• CONCLUSION

Lord: this shall not be unto Thee” (Matt 16:21-22). On another occasion, when the city of Samaria refused to receive the Lord, James and John asked Jesus, “Lord, wilt Thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?” (Luke 9:54). When Jesus was arrested, all of the disciples fled (Matt 26:56), and during that awful night, Peter denied Him three times (Matt 26:69-74).

Those were times when the disciples did not yet see clearly. The reason for Christ coming into the world was not yet perceived by them. Therefore, even though their hearts were pointed in the right direction, and they had left everything to follow Jesus, they often spoke and acted out of keeping the agenda within which Jesus was operating.

But these are not the kind of men of which we are now reading. They have been transformed by the exalted Christ, and filled with the Holy Spirit. Their thinking has been cleared, so that they are walking in the light “as He is in the light” (1 John 1:7). When they speak, they are not talking in a trance, uttering things without their hearts and minds being engaged. Having been illuminated by the Holy Spirit, they actually know why Jesus came. They have detailed insight into matters relating to His death. They know what happened after He died, and that he has been exalted to the right hand of God. These are not facts they have learned like men becoming aware of history. These are things they comprehend through the Holy Spirit, and because they do, they are bold beyond the capacities of natural men. Peter, who was once intimidated by a “maid” is not moved one millimeter by the greatest religious men in the Jewish system – men who, according to appearance, had the power of life and death.

In these apostles we are witnessing what happens when the heart of stone is removed and a heart of flesh is given (Ezek 11:19). Here is how men react who have been filled with the Holy Spirit. When individuals have been shown the things of Christ by the Holy Spirit (John 16:13), this is what they do. When they know whom they have believed, and have been persuaded that He is able to keep what they have committed to Him unto the final day (2 Tim 1:12), they respond to adversity in the manner recorded in our text. This is how walking “in newness of life” (Rom 6:4) impacts upon men in the “day of adversity” (Eccl 7:14). When “the whole armor of God” that has been provided to the children of God is actually “put on” (Eph 6:10-18), men respond to trouble as the apostles do in this text.

Earlier they had prayed that God would grant them boldness to preach the Word by stretching forth His hand to heal, and that signs and wonders might be done in the name of His holy child Jesus. What we are witnessing is the answer to that prayer.

We are not reading about super-men, or individuals who have been pumped up in some kind of religious rally. These are men who are on “the way of holiness” (Isa 35:8), and know it. They are men who are doing what is right, and they are keenly aware, and fully persuaded of it.

It is imperative that we see these things because of the times in which we are living – “perilous times” (2 Tim 3:1). It is important that we comprehend that no spiritual supply has diminished in its strength. The same faith – a “like precious faith” (2 Pet 1:1) – that sustained the apostles, is the very same faith that will sustain you! Nothing in the New Covenant economy has changed in the nearly 2,000 intervening years between 2007 and the time of our text. All of the benefits are still in place. The same promises are all in tact. The message is the same, as well as the Intercessor and Comforter. If you are in a time of challenge, you can read this text and personally profit from it. All of the resources that sustained these holy men are still in place, and they will sustain you as well! You can believe that!

Here we have a record of the apostles who are in trouble with the religious authorities because they have continued to preach in the name of Jesus, doing so in the Temple itself. Their message was at a variance with that of the teachers of the day. They have even been charged with trying to rally the people against the Jewish leaders who are opposing their good work. They are significantly outnumbered – at least according to appearance. However, there is more here than appearance. Already a holy angel had come down and released them from heaven, bringing them a message from the Throne: “Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life” (Acts 5:20). Fearlessly, they have resumed teaching in the Temple with boldness and a total lack of fear. Earlier they had prayed that God would grant them boldness to preach the Word by stretching forth His hand to heal, and that signs and wonders might be done in the name of His holy child Jesus (4:29-30). What we are witnessing is the answer to that prayer.

Now, facing the questioning of the high priest, they are reminded they have been threatened and strictly commanded to stop preaching in the name of Jesus. With confidence, power, and insight, “Peter and the other apostles” do not hesitate to answer. Knowing they do not have a long period of time allotted to them, they deliver one of the most masterful summaries of Christ’s death, resurrection, and exaltation that is contained in Scripture. The scope of their answer is remarkable. It is a marvelous condensation of great bodies of reality, and is conducive to much profitable contemplation. Their answer declares the duty of men, Divine intervention, human depravity, Divine power, Divine purpose, the effects of the atonement, and the gift of God. Only the Spirit could move men to speak in such a marvelous manner.

It is important to comprehend the manner of the Holy Spirit here. These men are speaking in harmony with “the mind of the Spirit” (Rom 8:27). While He was yet with them in the body, Jesus told them, “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you” (Matt 10:19-20). In our text, they have been delivered up – brought before the religious authorities after being arrested in the Temple. They will be interrogated, and answers will be expected from them. However, they will not employ the wisdom of men in their answer. They will not reason as mere men, or present their case with their own interests being primary. Their focus will be concentrated on the propagation of the Gospel, and their reasoning for doing so will be clearly articulated.

What we will read does not reflect the manner in which a professional clergyman would answer the charges leveled against the apostles. It is not what you would expect to hear at a Christian convention, where the representative of a movement that had yielded well over 8,000 converts in a few days would be asked to speak. There is not an ounce of institutional fervor in the words of the apostles. There is no effort to promote a religious movement, or to draw attention to some special methodology. The personality and gifts of the apostles will not be mentioned. No school will be promoted. None of the elements of supposedly successful Christian movements will be presented. There will be no appeal for community involvements, or crusades to reach neglected people-groups. No Temple tours will be given, and no classes on successful evangelism will be held. There are also none of the workshops that are so prevalent in our time.

Notwithstanding the absence of such things, we are being faced with the real work of God. Jesus Himself is in this work. The Holy Spirit is illuminating and leading the speakers. The purpose of God is being fulfilled. The truth is being made known effectively. If there is a great difference between what is happening in this text, and the popular religion of our day, it is because our day is darker, and fewer genuine spiritual leaders are present. Jesus has not changed – He is “the same yesterday, and today, and for ever” (Heb 13:8).

WE OUGHT TO OBEY GOD RATHER THAN MEN

“ 5:29 Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men.”

Remember the words of Caiaphas: “Did not we straitly command you that ye should not teach in this name? and, behold, ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and intend to bring this man's blood upon us” (Acts 5:28). Peter’s answer will go straight to the point. He will not resort to oratory, or some distracting form of reasoning. He will not plead like an oppressed man, or call for just treatment or the imposition of human rights.

PETER AND THE OTHER APOSTLES

“Then Peter and the other apostles answered . . .” Other versions read, “Peter and the apostles,” NASB and “But Peter answering, and the apostles,” DARBY

The idea here is that Peter is speaking for the rest of the apostles. They do not all speak at once, but Peter delivers the answer each one of them individually would have delivered. They are united in heart and soul, understanding and commitment. There is no variance among them.

Peter was not the only spiritually knowledgeable man among them, but had been given “the keys of the kingdom of heaven” (Matt 16:19). Paul referred to Peter’s appointed prominence in his letter to the Galatians. “But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter ; (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision , the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles)” (Gal 2:7-8). This did not mean that Peter was like a boss for the rest of the apostles, for that is not the manner of the kingdom of God, being strictly forbidden by Christ (Matt 20:25-26). When writing to the Galatians, Paul also recognized James (the Lord’s brother) and John as leaders. “And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars , perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision” (Gal 2:9).

However, in our text, when the answer was given, Peter spoke – not as the one with superior rank and authority, but as the spokesman for the united apostles. This is precisely what he did on the day of Pentecost as well (Acts 2:14).

Those who have been involved to any measurable degree in religious groups know how exceedingly rare it is to have one person who can speak for all. However, where people “speak the same thing,” and are actually “joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment” (1 Cor 1:10), this can be done. For some churches – like the one in Corinth – such marvelous unity was an objective from which a departure had taken place. However, in our text, that unity was a reality.

WE OUGHT

Other versions read, “We must ,” NASB “We have to ” BBE “God must,” DARBY “ comes before,” NJB “We ought more ,” PNT “it behoveth ,” YLT “It is necessary ,” PHILLIPS “It is our duty ,” ALT and “It is right .” LITV

The word “ought” comes from a small, yet meaningful, Greek word – dei (die). The lexical meaning of the word is, “it is necessary, there is need of, it behooves, is right and proper . . . suggestive of moral obligation, denoting especially that constraint which arises from divine appointment,” THAYER “expressing compulsion, necessity . . . compulsion of duty one ought, one should, one has to, one must,” FRIBERG “That which must necessarily take place,” LOUW-NIDA “it is binding on one to do a thing,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “it is needful to,” LEH and “necessary, one must, or has to,” GINGRICH

If obedience is not found, it is not owing to any deficiency in salvation, or any lack of needed resources. Peter and the apostles had simply tapped in to the rich resources that are made available in Christ Jesus.

Even though these definitions satisfy scholastic requirements, they do not fully convey the meaning of the word as used here. This is not the compulsion of law – obeying a commandment, or fulfilling a duty. Theoretically, that can be done without the involvement of the heart. The compulsion to which Peter refers is an inward one, where conduct is pushed forward by a driving inward obsession. It is the kind of drive to which Jeremiah referred when he said, “But His word was in my heart like a burning fire shut up in my bones ; I was weary of holding it back, And I could not” (Jer 20:9). Elihu expressed the compulsion in these words: “For I am full of matter, the spirit within me constraineth me . Behold, my belly is as wine which hath no vent; it is ready to burst like new bottles. I will speak, that I may be refreshed: I will open my lips and answer” (Job 32:20). David said it this way: “ My heart was hot within me , while I was musing the fire burned : then spake I with my tongue” (Psa 39:3).

These examples had to do with speaking. Our text refers to the same kind of drive in regards to obeying: “We must obey God rather than men!” AMPLIFIED It is true that they were responsible to do so, but that is not the point of the text. They also WANTED to do so, and that desire could not be dampened by the foolish mandate of the Jewish court.

When the laws of God are “put” into the heart and “written” in the mind (Heb 10:16) , they constrain the person from within. There is a hearty agreement with what God has declared and required. However, there is also a burning desire to do those things – a desire that cannot be stifled when it is heeded. That is the kind of thing that is declared in this text.

O for the day when the church of our time will be noted for such obedience – when no governmental mandate or inimical threat can stop them from rendering heartfelt obedience to the Lord. The New Covenant provides for such obedience. The Holy Spirit promotes such obedience. The Lord Jesus strengthens for such obedience. The Gospel contributes to such obedience. The new heart and new spirit are inclined to such obedience. If obedience is not found, it is not owing to any deficiency in salvation, or any lack of needed resources. Peter and the apostles had simply tapped in to the rich resources that are made available in Christ Jesus.

TO OBEY GOD RATHER THAN MEN

Other versions read, “obey God rather than men,” NASB “ do the orders of God , not of man,” BBE “ God must be obeyed rather than men,” DARBY “obey God rather than people ,” GWN “ Obedience to God comes before obedience to men,” NJB “obey God rather than any human authority ,” NLT “to obey God then men,” PNT “To obey God it behoveth , rather than men,” YLT “obey God, not men!” IE “to be obeying God rather than people! “to obey the orders of God rather than the orders of men ,” PHILLIPS ” ALT “ We don't obey people . We obey God,” CEV and “to obey God rather than man ,” LITV

There is, then, a sense in which God and men are at variance, else this statement would make no sense. This does not refer to godly men, or men through whom Jesus is speaking. Jesus Himself said to His disciples, “if they have kept My saying, they will keep yours also” (John 15:20). However, in such a case, the hearers would actually be obeying Christ, for the apostles spoke in his behalf, delivering His mind and purpose to the people.

Peter is saying that any requirement of men that contradicts the word of the King will be ignored by the apostles. They will not obey what men say at the expense of disobeying God. Their ear is pointed toward heaven, not earth. Their hearts desire is to obey the word of Jesus, not that of men.

“Obey”

What does it mean to “obey?” Lexically it means, “to obey a ruler or superior,” THAYER “obey one in authority,” FRIBERG “obey, listen to,” UBS and “to submit to authority or reason by obeying.

“ LOUW-NIDA It means to strictly comply with the requirements of one who rules. It is to conform one’s conduct to the demands of one who is greater. In true obedience, when self-will asserts itself, the one who obeys defers to the Lord, ignoring self-will. If one is asked to satisfy the demands of someone other than the Lord, he chooses to honor the demands of God. If there is some competing interest to be carried out, completed, or fulfilled, the person chooses to fulfill what God has specified. This is because one recognizes the true authority, and is able to distinguish it from feigned dominance.

This is obedience “from the heart” (Rom 6:17) – obedience that is willingly and gladly rendered in recognition of, and agreement with, the One who is over all. This is a way in which we honor the Lord, yielding to His will. When Israel did not obey the Lord, He said to them, “if then I be a Father, where is Mine honor? and if I be a Master, where is My fear? (Mal 1:6).

An example of someone obeying God rather than men is seen in Joseph. This particular example did not take place when he was old and seasoned in the faith, but when he was young, and subject to “youthful lusts” (2 Tim 2:22). When Potiphar’s wife, to whom Joseph was, in a sense, subject, demanded that he lie with her. He responded, “how then can I do this great wickedness, and sin against God?” (Gen 39:9). His heart would not let him do this. He knew he had to obey God rather than Potiphar’s wife, even if he had to suffer for doing so.

There is no substitute for obedience – for doing what the Lord requires. Satan will tempt men to offer God something in the place of obedience – perhaps even a sacrifice, as king Saul did. He refused to destroy the Amalekites and all their possessions as the Lord commanded. He said the people took the best of “what should have been utterly destroyed, to sacrifice to the Lord thy God in Gilgal.” Upon uttering these words, he heard the thundering assessment of Samuel, the man of God. “Hath the LORD as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou hast rejected the word of the LORD, he hath also rejected thee from being king” (1 Sam 15:22-23).

God cannot be pleased with some convenient sacrifice that falls short of what He actually requires. Such a response is nothing less than rebellion, stubbornness, and rejecting the word of the Lord. Informed souls know that this kind of conduct is rampant in the professing church. Men are withholding from the Lord what he has required in deference to lesser requirements of men. It is not acceptable – not one whit of it.

Peter and the apostles refused to dishonor God by disobeying Him, and refused to honor the council by obeying them. Their love for and commitment to the Lord would not allow such deviate conduct. They knew what they “ought” to do, and they did it.

Trends and Fads

In our day, it has become fashionable to follow religious trends and fads. Is it right to do so? Is it really necessary to adapt our manners to a contemporary society? I am not speaking about “using the world” (1 Cor 7:31) taking advantage of amoral things in order to labor for the Lord – i.e., technology, travel, etc. Rather, this concerns compromising the truth in order to appease our critics, lessen the aggression of the enemy, or appeal to carnal minds. Truth is, by its very nature, static. That is, the realities affirmed in the truth, as it “is in Jesus” (Eph 4:21) , do not change. That is why there is saving efficacy in the death and resurrection of Jesus. While men’s perception and experience of the truth may change, the truth itself remains unchanged. That is why the message of the church has never been changed by God. The “record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10-12) has never been updated, nor has any portion of it been rendered obsolete.

If the core message of the modern church differs from the one delivered in the book of Acts and the epistles, then the message is wrong. In that case, religious leaders have chosen to obey men rather than God, for God has never delivered a different message, or one that contradicts the Gospel of Christ.

What I am saying is that a significant portion of the professing church has elected to hearken to men rather than God. Some of those to whom it is hearkening are not even Bible Students. They are students of trends, statistics, psychology, motivational vogues, and sociological principles. If men say the attention-span of the people is twenty minutes, they quickly adapt their messages to accommodate that assessment. If men say more stress needs to be placed on the principles adopted by their denomination, then they alter their message to accomplish that purpose. If some lone voice cries out that we have to reach a particular segment of society, they tailor their message to appeal to that sector, whether it is the youth or the senior citizens.

Try as you may, you never find anything remotely like this in the book of Acts. That is probably why the results that are recorded in this book are not commonly experienced in our day.

All wayward religious trends will end overnight if men conform to this statement of the case: "We ought to obey God rather than men!" In our text, the leaders told the apostles to stop preaching in Jesus' name. They refused to obey that mandate, and based their decision on the fact that no allowance is made in salvation for not obeying God.

THE GOD OF OUR FATHERS

"30a The God of our fathers . . ." Other versions read, "The God of our ancestors," NRSV and "God of our forefathers." NET

This is a significant phrase in Scripture – one with which the saints of God do well to become familiar. It is used over seventy-five times in Scripture, and always applies to the progenitors of the Jewish nation, or to the generation that came out of Egypt. It is used in the book of Acts eighteen times (3:13,25; 5:30; 7:11,12,15,19,38,39,44; 13:17; 15:10; 22:14; 26:6; 28:17,25). Eight of those times, it is particularly associated with the working of God. A brief perusal of those times will confirm their grandness.

- GLORIFICATION OF CHRIST. The "God of our fathers hath glorified His Son Jesus" (3:13).
- THE FIRST COVENANT. ". . . the covenant which God made with our fathers" (3:25).
- THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST. "The God of our fathers raised up Jesus" (5:30).
- CONQUERING CANAAN. "Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus [Joshua NKJV] into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David" (7:45).
- THE EXALTATION AND DELIVERANCE OF ISRAEL. "The God of this people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people when they dwelt as strangers in the land of Egypt, and with an high arm brought He them out of it" (13:17).
- THE COVENANT OF LAW. "Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?" (Acts 15:10).
- THE CALLING OF PAUL. "And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth" (Acts 22:14).

The idea here is that of associating God with a special people – a people of His own choosing. How often this is affirmed in Scripture!

THE PROMISE OF GOD. “And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God unto our fathers ” (Acts 26:6).

The idea here is that of associating God with a special people – a people of His own choosing. How often this is affirmed in Scripture!

• LOVING, CHOOSING, SAVING. “And because He loved thy fathers, therefore He chose their seed after them, and brought thee out in His sight with His mighty power out of Egypt” (Deut 4:37).

• SET HIS LOVE UPON THEM. “The LORD did not set His love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: But because the LORD loved you, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn unto your fathers, hath the LORD brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt” (Deut 7:7-8).

• ABOVE ALL PEOPLE. “Only the LORD had a delight in thy fathers to love them, and He chose their seed after them, even you above all people, as it is this day” (Deu 10:15).

• MADE THEM HIS PEOPLE. “For the LORD will not forsake his people for his great name's sake: because it hath pleased the LORD to make you his people” (1 Sam 12:22).

• FAVORED THEM. “For they got not the land in possession by their own sword, neither did their own arm save them: but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, because thou hadst a favor unto them” (Psa 44:3).

• PRECIOUS AND HONORABLE IN HIS SIGHT. “Since thou wast precious in my sight, thou hast been honorable, and I have loved thee: therefore will I give men for thee, and people for thy life” (Isa 43:4).

In the people of Israel God was making Himself more fully known, and also paving the way for the coming of the Redeemer through their lineage. God does not view all men alike, and He confirmed that in his choice of Israel as well as His work among them. He can set His love on some, while withholding it from others – and He did that with Israel. In Israel He revealed how He can set one body of people above all others. He can make one group of people His own, while rejecting others. He can show favor to some, making them precious and honorable in His right, while withholding such benefits from others.

In spite of His consistent dealings with Israel over a period of 1,500 years, not including 500 years of previously exclusive dealings with Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and their seed, these realities still elude many people. There remain significant numbers of professing Christians that affirm God loves everyone alike, even though He has revealed through writing and human circumstances that nothing could be further from the truth.

When Peter refers to “the God of our fathers,” he is connecting the God of Jesus with the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, as well as the nation that came out of Egypt. This was the very point that moved the council to condemn Jesus, for they totally rejected the fact that He was the Son of God. When Jesus made that affirmation, the very high priest before whom the apostles are now standing responded, “He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy” (Matt 26:65). The remainder of the council, also present at this time, responded, “He is guilty of death!” (Matt 26:66). They could not see any association between Jesus of Nazareth and the “God of the fathers” – even though He was the very reason for the existence of “the fathers.”

Now, Peter will affirm that the very same God they profess to worship, is the One who has reversed their judgment against Jesus – His only begotten Son. Their decision had been rendered null and void by the God of heaven. This is also the same God who raised up their nation, nurtured them through hard times, delivered them from bondage, and made a covenant with them.

Lest any Gentile believer begin to think of himself more highly than he ought to think, let him remember that Abraham is “the father of us all” (Rom 4:16), and “the father of all them that believe” (Rom 4:11). As Gentiles, we have been grafted into Abraham’s tree, and are partakers of the root and fatness of its promises (Rom 11:17). It is his tree that is sustaining us all. As it is written, “Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast, thou bearest not the root, but the root thee” (Rom 11:18). The promise that is being fulfilled in the Gospel is the one that was given to Abraham, to whom the Gospel was “preached before.” Therefore, it is written, “And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed” (Gal 3:8).

At this time, the church may appear to be predominantly Gentile. Some even believe the Jews have been altogether cut off, even though God promised He would never make His commitment to them void, or nullify His promise to renew them (Jer 31:35-37). The loyalty just cited are the words immediately following the commitment to make “a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah” (Jer 31:31-34).

What possible reason can there be for any Gentile believers boasting. They have been made partakers of a promise given to someone else, and have become a part of a tree of lineage that is traced back to Abraham. It is time for the church to honor “the God of the fathers.”

A Dreadful Tendency

There remains in religious men this dreadful tendency of not associating the Lord Jesus with the God of heaven. That is precisely why men refuse to preach the Gospel of Christ, choosing to dabble in social issues and institutional concerns – as though those were the primary matters with which God is conjoined. Through subtlety Satan has persuaded men that Jesus has somehow lessened the demands of God – that He has made it possible for God to receive vacillating men, tolerate inveterate waywardness in them, and casually become involved in their personal desires. His love is seen as so great that He now looks kindly upon the people just because they are His children by nature – even if they are disobedient ones.

Such views flagrantly contradict the very concept of salvation, in which the people are not only delivered from the confinements of nature, but changed as well. It is time for the church to rid itself of such views, and those who perpetrate them. The reason God gives people a new heart is because the old one is not acceptable. The reason we have “the Second Man” and the “Last Adam,” is because “the first man Adam” is no longer the appointed prototype. He and all of his progeny have been rejected, and are in a state of death and alienation (Rom 5:12-19; 1 Cor 15:45,47).

This is why it is sinful to teach followers of Christ as though their lives were strictly the result of some personal discipline or routine that did not involve heart, soul, mind, and strength.

In Christ, God makes individuals a new creation (2 Cor 5:17) because He cannot receive them as they are. A stony and a stubborn heart cannot be overlooked by God, as though they do not exist. If such a Divine response was possible, the Lord would have left us the way we were. In such a case, He would only be required to perfect what already existed within man. Spiritual and bodily resurrections (Rom 6:4; 1 Cor 15:52) would not be required, because only the dead are raised. You cannot extract something living from the domain of corruption. Life – spiritual life – must be created within men, else they will never have it – and only God can create! That is why the true living ones – those who are in Christ Jesus – are said to have been “created in Christ Jesus,” and are “His workmanship” (Eph 2:10). The new nature, or “new man,” that is resident in them has been “created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24).

This is why it is sinful to teach followers of Christ as though their lives were strictly the result of some personal discipline or routine that did not involve heart, soul, mind, and strength. Doling out little tips and routines that are supposedly the secrets to successful living is approaching life as though there were no God or Christ. It should not be surprising that such systems do not move men to affirm “We ought to obey God rather than men.”

DO NOT MAKE GOD TOO PERSONAL

A word ought to be said concerning making God too personal – i.e., of limiting our view of God to matters concerning ourselves, instead of centering our lives in Him. I must take great care here not to be misunderstood. It is true that every true disciple of Jesus can say, “I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved ME, and gave Himself for ME” (Gal 2:20). This, however, does not warrant living life as though we were the only ones so blessed. Paul knew this well, and therefore learned to be content in whatever state he was found – including beatings, imprisonment, shipwrecks, and perils of all sorts.

While Jesus may be said to be a “personal Savior” (although that phrase is not found in Scripture), He is more precisely “the Savior of the body” (Eph 5:23). There is a sense in which Jesus “loved the church and gave Himself for it” (Eph 5:25). It seems to me that it is on the part of wisdom to learn to reason and express ourselves with “the body of Christ” in mind. It will contribute to a more stable frame of mind during the times we are being tested, and make for more alertness during times of peace. Lest this be considered to be unreasonable, remember that Jesus taught us to pray, “Our Father . . . Give us . . . forgive us . . . as we . . . our debtors . . . lead us not into temptation . . . deliver us from evil” (Matt 6:9-13). Self-centered religion is dangerous beyond all comprehension. Learn to detect it quickly and avoid it at all cost.

GOD RAISED UP JESUS

“30b . . . raised up Jesus . . .” Other versions read, “gave Jesus back to life,” BBE “has raised up Jesus,” DARBY “brought Him back to life,” GWN “raised Jesus from the dead,” NLT “did raise up Jesus,” YLT and “raised Jesus to life.” ISV

Thusfar, in every record of Peter speaking, he has made reference to the raising of Jesus from the dead.

- “Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death: because it was not possible that He should be holden of it” (Acts 2:24).
- “This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses” (Acts 2:32).
- “And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:15).
- “Unto you first God, having raised up His Son Jesus, sent Him to bless you, in turning away every one of you from his iniquities” (Acts 3:26).
- “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by Him doth this man stand here before you whole” (Acts 4:10).

- “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus , whom ye slew and hanged on a tree” (Acts 5:30).

Later, Peter will make the same point at the house of Cornelius (10:40). Paul will also preached it in Antioch of Pisida (13:23,30,33,34, 37), and then in Athens as well (17:31). This is a pivotal line of spiritual reasoning.

THE APOSTLES DOCTRINE

The Epistles, written exclusively to the saints, contain repeated references to God raising Jesus from the dead. There are holy associations made with that resurrection.

- RIGHTEOUSNESS. The imputation of righteousness. “But for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead ” (Rom 4:24).

- BAPTISM. Our baptism into Christ. “Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life” (Rom 6:4).

- VICTORY. Dominion over sin. “Knowing that Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over Him” (Rom 6:9).

- OUR ASSOCIATION WITH CHRIST. Being dead to the law and married to Christ. ”Wherefore, my brethren, ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even to Him who is raised from the dead , that we should bring forth fruit unto God” (Rom 7:4).

- HOLINESS. The Spirit dwelling in believers and quickening their mortal body, enabling them to be holy. “But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you” (Rom 8:11).

- SALVATION. Men being saved. “That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead , thou shalt be saved” (Rom 10:9).

- PROCLAMATION. Preaching the Gospel. “Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that He raised up Christ : whom He raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not” (1 Cor 15:15).

- THE RESURRECTION OF THE DEAD. The resurrection of all the dead. “For if the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised ” (1 Cor 15:16).

- APOSTLESHIP. The apostleship of Paul. “Paul, an apostle, (not of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised Him from the dead)” (Gal 1:1).

- EMPOWERMENT. The power that is toward those who are in Christ Jesus. “Which he wrought in Christ, when He raised Him from the dead , and set Him at His own right hand in the heavenly places” (Eph 1:20).

- THE CIRCUMCISION OF CHRIST. Being circumcised by Christ, and raised with Him in baptism through faith. “In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ: buried with Him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with Him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead ” (Col 2:11-12).

- CHRIST’S RETURN. Waiting for Christ to return from heaven. “And to wait for his Son from heaven, whom He raised from the dead , even Jesus, which delivered us from the wrath to come” (1 Thess 1:10).

• THE GOSPEL. The true Gospel. “Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel” (2 Tim 2:8).

BELIEVING IN GOD. Believing in God through Jesus Christ. “Who by Him do believe in God, that raised Him up from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God” (1 Pet 1:21).

You see how the golden thread of the resurrection, together with the scarlet thread of His death, is woven throughout the entirety of redemption. Among other things, the resurrection of Christ is the ordained display of “the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe” (Eph 1:19-20). It is in “the power of His resurrection” (Phil 3:10) that we are enabled to “do all things” that are required of us and commissioned to us. Apart from this power we are spiritually powerless. No work can please God or be effective for His glory without it.

The resurrection of Christ confirmed several things.

- That Jesus was the Son of God, as He claimed (Rom 1:4).
- That Jesus has been given all power in heaven and earth (Rom 1:4).
- That He is the only one through whom men can be saved (Acts 4:12).
- That we will also be raised from the dead (1 Cor 6:14).
- That He is the One who will judge the world (Acts 17:31).
- That He has been exalted and is making intercession for us (Rom 8:34).
- That neither preaching Christ nor faith in Him is in vain (1 Cor 15:14).

How could a doctrine, so obviously emphatic in apostolic preaching and teaching, be so glaringly absent in the modern church scene? How can there be preachers and teachers who know more of the human psyche than they do of the risen Christ? Why did the ones who laid the foundation for the church view the resurrection of Christ with such cruciality, while men today consider it so infrequently, treating it as though it was a spiritual museum piece? Nothing has taken place in modern times what warrants a shift in our emphasis.

The answer is found in the different agenda the modern church has adopted. This has taken place because of its leaders and its professed educators. They are like blind men who, while they are leading, have fallen into the ditch with those who hearken to them. Concerning these leaders Jesus commissioned His disciples, “Leave them!” NIV (Matt 15:14). Because of the danger so described, that word cannot be ignored with impunity.

YOU SLEW HIM AND HANGED HIM ON A TREE

“30c . . . whom ye slew and hanged on a tree.” Other versions read, “whom you murdered by hanging on a tree,” NKJV “whom you had put to death by hanging Him on a cross,” NASB “whom you had killed by hanging Him on a tree,” NIV “who you killed by hanging Him on a tree.” RSV “after you had killed Him by hanging Him on a cross.” LIVING “He is the one you killed, having hung him upon wood.” IE “whom you crucified and put to death.” WEYMOUTH “after you hung him on a tree and killed him.” ISV “after you had hanged Him on a cross and killed Him.” WILLIAMS “Whom you killed by hanging Him on a tree (cross).” AMPLIFIED “whom you murdered by hanging him on a cross of wood.” PHILLIPS “You killed Jesus by nailing him to a cross,” CEV and “You murdered Jesus by hanging him on a cross.” GWN

This is now the fourth time Peter has charged the Jews and their leaders with the responsibility of rejecting and killing Jesus.

- “Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain ” (Acts 2:23).

- “But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you; and killed the Prince of life , whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses” (Acts 3:14-15).

- “Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified , whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole” (Acts 4:10).

- “The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree ” (Acts 5:30).

The carnal mind may reason that the Jews actually did not kill Jesus, but were only instrumental in delivering Him to the Gentiles, who were the ones who actually killed him. The theological mind might reason that the Jews did not kill Jesus because it was something that was appointed to be done. No one really took His life from Him, such a mind thinks, He laid down His life Himself (John 10:17-18).

All such reasoning is nothing more than an exercise in vanity and a display of gross carnality. Peter told the people the death of Jesus was according to “the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God,” yet solemnly added that the people had “crucified and slain Jesus” (Acts 2:23). He told the people they had fulfilled the Scriptures in killing Jesus (Acts 3:18) – yet what they did was not righteous, but sinful, even though it was done in ignorance. They were required to “repent,” in order that their sins might be “blotted out” (Acts 3:19). The early disciples all knew that when the Jews delivered up Jesus they were doing “whatsoever” God’s “hand” and “counsel determined before to be done.” Yet, they also knew the people had themselves “gathered together against the Lord, and against his Christ” (Acts 4:26).

It is not becoming for believers to adopt simplistic views about complex matters. This is particularly true of the death of Christ. Heaven, earth, and hell were involved in this matter – Divinity, humanity, and the power of darkness. Heaven drew up the plan, and God, man, and Satan were involved in its execution. All under the Sovereign rule of God. This death did not come short of its purpose in any way. The will of men was not fulfilled as they intended, nor was Satan’s objectives accomplished. In Christ’s death, only God’s will was thoroughly achieved. Men fulfilled His will, even though that is not what they intended. Satan fulfilled God’s will, although that was not his aim. In laying down His life, Jesus willingly made His will subject to the Father’s will (Lk 22:42). Only God’s will was absolutely free and unhindered.

When men struggle with whether or not the human will is free, let them consider the death of Christ. Precisely who was free in that matter, and who was in bondage? Men were in bondage to Satan and his hosts, and Satan and his hosts were “bound” with chains of darkness (2 Pet 2:4; Jude 1:6).

Here are personalities that did the will of God rather their own will. Yet, Satan is rejected, and men are condemned for doing so. Peter called upon men to repent because of what they did, even though they had “fulfilled” the Scriptures in condemning Jesus (Acts 2:38; 3:18; 13:27). Let us push from us naive and overly-simplistic views of the death of Christ!

Guilty of Christ’s Death

How is it that the Jews were guilty of Christ’s death, even though not one of their hands drove the nails into His body, or raised Him up on the tree? Yet, they had judged Him to be “guilty of death,” or “deserving of death” NKJV (Matt 26:66). It is written, “They all condemned Him to be guilty of death” (Mk 14:64). Again it is written that the chief priests and rulers of the Jews “delivered Him to be condemned to death, and have crucified Him” (Lk 24:20). That decision made them responsible for the death of Christ, for, speaking as a man, the Roman authorities would not have crucified Jesus if the Jews had not insisted that they do so.

But there is something more to be seen here. It is still possible for a person to become personally guilty of Christ’s death. While it is an awesome consideration, we do well to ponder it. This view is stated at least two times in Scripture.

- “Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord ” (1 Cor 11:27). Other versions read, “will be answerable for the body and blood of the Lord,” NRSV “responsible for the body and blood of the Lord,” BBE “held responsible for the body and blood of the Lord,” GWN “will have to answer for the body and blood of the Lord,” NAB and “guilty of [profaning and sinning against] the body and blood of the Lord.” AMPLIFIED

- “If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh , and put him to an open shame” (Heb 6:6). Other versions read , “crucify again for themselves,” NKJV “crucifying the Son of God all over again,” NIV “they are crucifying again the Son of God,” NRSV “crucify on their own account the Son of God,” RSV “put the Son of God on the cross again,” BBE “recrucifying the Son of God,” CSB “a second time crucify and insult the Son of God,” MRD “are nailing him to the cross once again’ NLT “repeatedly crucifying the Son of God afresh,” WEYMOUTH “continue to crucify the Son of God to their detriment,” WILLIAMS and “they nail upon the cross the Son of God afresh [as far as they are concerned].” AMPLIFIED

The same death – Christ’s death – will be either the basis for reconciliation or condemnation. Those who receive the atonement by faith, will enjoy its marvelous benefits (Rom 5:11). Their sins will be forgiven, they will be justified, and they will have peace with God. However, should they choose to refuse to have “faith in His blood,” (Rom 3:25), electing to remain in a state of alienation, the whole responsibility for Christ’s death will be laid upon them. Further, if a professing Christian returns to a life of sin, that person also becomes personally responsible for Christ’s death. Those who continue to wallow in sin cannot be profited by Christ’s death. What is more, it will not become a matter of indifference to them. In the day of judgment, the responsibility for the most unjust, foolish, hateful, and malicious crime of all time – the condemnation and death of Jesus Christ – will be laid to their account. They are “guilty of the body and blood of the Lord.”

The death which was provided for reconciliation will, in such a case, be the means of their condemnation. That is how serious God is about the work of His Son, particularly His death!

This is one reason why Peter speaks with such candidness to the council. He knows they are being weighed in the balances by the King of kings. The message of the apostles is bringing salvation within the reach of those before whom they are standing. This is, in a very real sense, the time of their visitation. Although they have been guilty of crucifying and killing the Prince of life , that death holds within it the means of their own reconciliation, and justification. The same offer is held out to them that was presented on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:38-39), and in Solomon’s porch (3:19-26).

A Challenge for Our Times

In my judgment, the preachers and teachers of our time could do a much more credible job of presenting the death and resurrection of Jesus. These are historical facts, but they are infinitely more than that! Of itself, history has no redeeming value. It cannot change a person, or move from one from a state of alienation to one of reconciliation. But this is not at all the case when it comes to the death and resurrection of Jesus. These are not merely facts to be believed. Men are not required to assent to them so they can be part of an organization. If it is true that “God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses to them,” then there is more substance in these facts than any person dares to imagine. If more of God was in Christ than any other person – for in Him dwelt “the fulness of the Godhead bodily” – then there is nothing about Jesus that can be treated with indifference .

The facts of His death and resurrection must be taken into the heart and pondered, for there is sanctifying power in them. However, I fear that what is being said about Jesus from the average pulpit is not conducive to such cogitation. There is not enough substance to much of the preaching of our time. It is too frothy, even though the human condition is profoundly complex, and requires a marvelous remedy.

May men of spiritual understanding arise to declare the death and resurrection of Christ with insight and power. The salvation of men is at stake – yes, even the salvation of the church itself. If the fundamental message of the church is off-center, it will be sucked into the wicked vortex from which it was once delivered.

GOD EXALTED HIM WITH HIS RIGHT HAND

As you can see, there are two differing thoughts found in the various translations. (1) Jesus was exalted by, or with , the right hand of God. (2) Jesus was exalted to the right hand of God. Doctrinally, both views are true. However, in this text, the emphasis is the exaltation of Christ itself , and not the place to which He was exalted.

This is now the second time Peter has made this point, the first time being on the day of Pentecost. “Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted , and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear” (Acts 2:33). The phrase “by the right hand of God” means by means of God’s right hand. By way of comparison, the Jews “by wicked hands” had crucified and slain Jesus Christ (Acts 2:33). The council had “laid their hands on the apostles” (Acts 5:18). In both cases, their actions were negated and reversed by the right hand of God.

The exaltation of Christ is something worthy of extended consideration. It validates the acceptance of Christ’s sacrificial death, confirms the destruction of the devil, and is the means through which salvation in its entirety is being implemented.

It was the “right hand” of God that exalted Christ. In this case, the expression “right hand” is an anthropomorphism – an interpretation of what is not human or personal in terms of human or personal characteristics. MERRIAM-WEBSTER God’s “right hand” is His working power – what He accomplishes through His power and wisdom. Several Scriptural expressions will suffice to confirm this point.

“And he said, The LORD came from Sinai . . . from His right hand went a fiery law for them” (Deut 33:2).

- “And He brought them to the border of His sanctuary, even to this mountain, which His right hand had purchased” (Psa 78:54).
- “O sing unto the LORD a new song; for He hath done marvellous things: His right hand , and His holy arm, hath gotten him the victory” (Psa 98:1).

- “The LORD hath sworn by His right hand , and by the arm of His strength . . .” (Isa 62:8).

The exaltation of Christ was a Divine accomplishment. It was not the expression of impersonal laws, or raw and detached power. Concerning Christ, God Himself is said to have “highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name” (Phil 2:9). Jesus is “crowned with glory and honor” (Heb 2:9). He is “far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come,” and all things have been “put under His feet.” It is in that capacity that He has been given to the church as “Head over all things” (Eph 1:21-22). It is appropriately said of Him, “And ye are complete in Him, which is the Head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10). In His ascension He “led captivity captive,” or “led captive a host of captives” (Eph 4:8). He has been “made higher than the heavens” (Heb 7:26), being seated at the right hand of God, with “angels and authorities and powers being made subject unto Him” (1 Pet 3:22).

DOMAINS IMPACTED BY HIS EXALTATION

There were at least five domains impacted by the exaltation of Christ. In some way, we are directly involved in all of them.

- HADES. Beginning at the lowest level, the abode of departed spirits – Hades – was affected by Christ’s exaltation. His “soul” was not left there, but He left that area under His own power.

- THE GRAVE. The grave, the abode of dead bodies, was also impacted by Christ’s exaltation, for it could not hold His body. He came forth from it, sealing His triumph over the full scope of death.

- THE WORLD. When Jesus rose from the dead, He walked among His disciples for forty days, teaching them concerning the Kingdom of God. During that time, He was not tempted. When finally a cloud “received Him” out of the sight of His disciples, He left the world taking “captivity itself a captive” NRSV (Eph 4:8).

- THE HEAVENS. These are the celestial heavens that surround the earth, where clouds reside. But that is not the only occupants of that realm. It is also occupied by “the prince of the power of the air,” or “the ruler of the kingdom of the air” NIV (Eph 2:2). Jesus passed through this realm without being detained or challenged for a moment. One time a holy angel fought with a wicked principality for twenty one days in this realm (Dan 10:13), but Jesus met no such challenge.

- HEAVEN. This is the “heaven of heavens” (Deut 10:14), or, more precisely, “heaven itself” (Heb 9:14). This is where the Almighty God is (Psa 115:3; Eccl 5:2; Matt 6:9). This is where the Throne of God is, from which His Kingdom is governed – which Kingdom is over all (Rev 4:2). When Jesus entered heaven with His blood, “the heavenly things themselves” were “purified” – that is, made suitable for redeemed men to handle (Heb 9:23). Those “things” were sanctified for the redeemed.

The salvation of men required that all of these realms be affected. Death had to be absolutely defeated, else the dead could not be raised. The world had to be conquered, else men would not be able to overcome it. The heavenly realms had to be soundly defeated, else Satan would have continued his ruthless rule over all humanity. Heaven itself had to be “prepared” for the reception of men, else they would remain in a state of ostracization.

In my own religious experience, I have not heard much about the exaltation of Christ. In the average church circles, it is largely an undeveloped area of thought – even though the entirety of our salvation hinges upon it. Our faith could neither be authored nor finished without the direct involvement of an exalted Christ. That is where the power of “pure religion” resides (James 1:27).

When men are drawn aside to an application approach to Scripture, they walk away from the power of the truth. Busying themselves with how men act and react, professed leaders cause men to embrace a powerless religion. The approach of such teachers assumes that men are more capable than they really are. They assume their minds are more competent than they really are, and thus they imagine they can process facts with flawless precision. These assumptions, however, are nothing more than vain imaginations. If they were true, we would have no genuine need for the exalted Christ, or the Holy Spirit.

Now, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, Peter will develop the implications of the exaltation of Christ. He will focus on some of the activity of the exalted Christ. This is not novel activity, but is absolutely essential to the salvation of mankind.

EXALTED TO BE A PRINCE AND A SAVIOR

“ 31b . . . to be a Prince and a Savior . . . ”

TO BE

“ . . to be. . . ” Other versions read, “as.” NASB That is, this is the reason why God exalted Christ with His right hand. There was a work to be done following Christ’s death and resurrection – a work that is essential to the salvation of men. A Savior who is not exalted cannot save – that confirms the monumental nature of God’s “so great salvation” (Heb 2:3). It is also why God is receiving, and will receive, unparalleled glory for what is accomplished in that salvation.

What is now before us is not something that Jesus WILL become. It is not a position to which He will be assigned. This is why He was exalted to the right hand of God – not why He died, but why He was exalted.

A PRINCE

“ . . . a Prince . . . ” Other versions read, “Leader,” NRSV “Ruler,” BBE “a Head,” MRD “Chief Leader,” WEYMOUTH and “Prince and Leader.” AMPLIFIED

The word “prince” is translated from a very significant word. It is like a multi-faceted jewel, and has the following meaning, “leading, furnishing the first cause or occasion; the chief leader, prince,” THAYER “one who goes first on a path, hence a leader, prince, pioneer . . . one who causes something to begin, originate, founder, originator,” FRIBERG “leader, pioneer, founder, originator,” UBS “ . . . to be “beginning, originating a thing . . . founder . . . a prince, chief,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “chief, head, ruler, guide, beginning, origin.” LEH

The scope of this word confirms why Jesus, as a glorified Man, was “exalted.” As the “Captain of their salvation,” the saved required an enthroned Savior who possessed universal and unquestioned authority. That is how exceedingly difficult it is to save sinners. Those who depict salvation as simplistic betray their fundamental ignorance of its nature.

Permit me to briefly expound the significance of the term “Prince.” This is an unfolding of the present ministry of Jesus, as well as the present needs of the ones who are being saved.

• PIONEER. This is One who goes before: i.e., goes to the destination that has been appointed for the chosen ones. A twofold purpose is being accomplished by this Pioneer. First, to prepare the way to the destination, sanctifying it for those who follow. In this case, Jesus has consecrated “a new and living way” in going before us (Heb 10:20). He is the One who has raised up a highway in the desert on which wayfaring men will not err (Isa 35:8). This Pioneer is, in fact, our “Forerunner,” which has entered heaven for us (Heb 6:20). His presence there is the guarantee that those who run the race with patience that is set before them, will arrive safely at the goal (Heb 12:1-2).

• ORIGINATOR. As the Divinely appointed and exalted Originator, Jesus is made both “the Author and the Finisher” [Perfecter] “of our faith” (Heb 12:2). In this case, “our faith” is not a body of doctrine, but “the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen” (Heb 11:1). This ‘faith’ comes “from God the Father” according to purpose, and from “the Lord Jesus Christ” as the One who confers it (Eph 6:23). As the Originator, Jesus is also building His church, as He said He would (Matt 16:18).

• LEADER. As the Leader, the enthroned Savior is leading His sheep out of the world (John 10:3), and bringing “many sons to glory” (Heb 2:10). He is the One they are to “follow,” and in salvation, it is His voice that they come to know (John 10:16,27). In fact, Jesus said, “Everyone that is of the truth heareth My voice” (John 18:37). This is how He leads them – with His voice. That is why we are admonished, “See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh . . . from heaven” (Heb 12:25).

• CHIEF. As Chief, Jesus is the highest ranking Man – the “Second Man,” who owns the generation of the godly. He is the “Firstborn among many brethren” (Rom 8:29), and also is “the Firstborn of all creation,” whether of men, angels, cherubim, or seraphim (Col 1:15). The only One who is not subject to Him is God the Father Himself (1 Cor 15:27).

One of the great failings of the church of our time is its minuscule view – if, indeed, it can even qualify as a view – of the salvation of God. When men present this salvation in simplistic terms, and represent being “saved” as something that is very easy, they have not told the truth. They have forgotten the kind of Savior that was required to initiate, maintain, and consummate this salvation.

The “Make Him Your Lord” View

In our time it has become fashionable for men to speak of making Jesus your Lord. I suppose by this they mean that men are to submit to Christ. However, submitting to Jesus hath nothing whatsoever to be with Him being Lord – yours or anyone else! Jesus has been “made” Lord, and there really is no one who is not subject to Him. Often I have heard people testify that they were once Christians, being born again, and saved by the blood, but were just not subject to Jesus. He was, as they put it, “not the Lord of my life.” But that is nothing but foolishness and nonsense. It will only take a revelation of Jesus, whether through the Gospel, or when He comes again, to confirm that they really are subject to Him, whether they know it or not. Those who do not follow Him, obey Him, or hearken to Him, do not belong to Him. He is not their Shepherd, and they are not His sheep – even though He IS their Lord, for He is “Lord of all” (Acts 10:36). We know this is the case, because Jesus said His sheep not only know Him, but follow Him as well (John 10:4,10). He also said they would not follow a stranger (John 10:5). Solemnly He affirmed, “Every one who is of the truth heareth My voice” (John 18:37). Moses prophesied that this was going to be the case with the Messiah: “unto Him shall ye hearken . . . whosoever will not hearken unto My words which he shall speak in My name, I will require it of Him” (Deut 18:15,19). Peter proclaimed this very truth is fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth: “And it shall come to pass, that every soul, which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people” (Acts 3:23).

Those who reject Christ experience Him being Lord in a different way. He is presiding over their condemnation – for it is He that will separate the sheep from the goats (Matt 25:32). He is even choosing their delusions for them, fulfilling the word of Isaiah: “I also will choose their delusions” (Isa 66:4), and also sending “strong delusion” on those who do not “receive the love of the truth” (2 Thess 2:10-11). In the last day, those who stand before Him, who have lived in practical alienation from Him, and withheld their hearts from Him, will hear Him say, “I never knew you: depart from Me, ye that work iniquity” (Matt 7:23). They will find that He was their Lord all along.

TO BE A SAVIOR

“ . . . and a Savior . . . ” Other versions read, “ and Vivifier ,” MRD and “ Savior and Deliverer and Preserver. ” AMPLIFIED

What is “a Savior?” For the elect, the word itself has a most pleasant sound. The root lexical meaning of the word is, “savior, deliverer, preserver,” THAYER “deliverer, rescuer,” FRIBERG “Savior, Redeemer, Deliverer,” UBS “one who rescues or saved,” LOUW-NIDA “savior, deliverer, preserver . . . protecting.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

There are two primary perspectives of a Savior: one who delivers or rescues, and one who preserves . You might think of it as saving and keeping the saved from the condition in which they were found; delivering and keeping delivered from the enemy who held the persons captive, rescuing and keeping free from the environment from which the individuals were rescued. Salvation cannot be effective unless the One who saves us can maintain the salvation He initiated. A Savior, therefore, involves maintaining that “saved” condition.

Saved In a Hostile Realm

Of course none of this makes any sense if once a person is saved they are completely out of danger. Some do teach this, thereby leading the people astray. They conveniently forget that God, by design, has left us in the environment from which Jesus has delivered is – the world. We are “delivered from this present evil world” (Gal 1:4), yet must journey through it as “strangers and pilgrims” (1 Pet 2:11; Heb 11:13). We are given a remarkable treasure, yet must hold it in frail “earthen vessels” (2 Cor 4:7).

There is a reason for this. In the salvation of men, God is making known the marvelous expanse and extent of His wisdom to heavenly personalities. As it is written, “And to make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery, which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God, who created all things by Jesus Christ: to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God ” (Eph 3:9-10). The Amplified Bible reads, “[The purpose is] that through the church the complicated, many-sided wisdom of God in all its infinite variety and innumerable aspects might now be made known to the angelic rulers and authorities (principalities and powers) in the heavenly sphere.” This being the case, salvation must be seen to be effective in a hostile realm, where all kinds of liabilities and foes are experienced.

Because of this situation, it is necessary for us to be “kept” in this world by the One who delivered us in the first place. This is done through our faith, which is the means by which we are saved initially, as well as during our tenure in this world.

Because of this situation, it is necessary for us to be “kept” in this world by the One who delivered us in the first place. This is done through our faith, which is the means by which we are saved initially, as well as during our tenure in this world. It is said of those who are in Christ Jesus, “Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time” (1 Pet 1:5). Again we read, “Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling , and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy” (Jude 1:24). And again, “Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? to his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand ” (Rom 14:4).

This is all the work of the Savior, and it is all realized through our faith. That is precisely why it is essential that we be “strong in faith” (Rom 4:20). If the Savior is maintaining us by his grace “through faith,” then how can one who is lacking in faith survive in this world?

Like Israel's Occupation of Canaan

We are like the Israelites when they came to occupy Canaan. Their enemies remained in the land, and had to be driven out: "Then ye shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you, and destroy all their pictures, and destroy all their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places" (Num 33:52). This was true, even though God had said HE would drive out the wicked inhabitants of the land: ". . . behold, I drive out before thee the Amorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite" (Ex 34:11). And again, "And I will send an angel before thee; and I will drive out the Canaanite, the Amorite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, the Hivite, and the Jebusite" (Ex 33:2).

Israel's continuance in the promised land was contingent upon two things.

- First, they had to drive out the remnants of the enemy that remained in the land (Josh 3:10). Discerning Israelites knew that they needed help in this commission. Therefore, Caleb, standing on the threshold of his inheritance reasoned, "Now therefore give me this mountain, whereof the LORD spake in that day; for thou heardest in that day how the Anakims were there, and that the cities were great and fenced: if so be the LORD will be with me, then I shall be able to drive them out, as the LORD said" (Josh 14:12).

- Second, they had to keep themselves pure before the Lord. Otherwise, God would drive them from the land for committing the same sins the former inhabitants of the land committed. Therefore, Moses warned the people before they entered the land: "Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, and shall not commit any of these abominations; neither any of your own nation, nor any stranger that sojourneth among you: (For all these abominations have the men of the land done, which were before you, and the land is defiled;) That the land spue not you out also, when ye defile it, as it spued out the nations that were before you" (Lev 18:26-28).

These two requirements are connected. If Israel did not drive out the enemy, allowing them rather to cohabit with them, they would learn the way of the heathen. Once that happened, they would also do wickedly, and God would drive them out. Therefore, before they entered the land of Canaan, they were solemnly told, "When the LORD thy God shall cut off the nations from before thee, whither thou goest to possess them, and thou succeedest them, and dwellest in their land; Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou inquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise" (Deut 12:29-30). And again, "When thou art come into the land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, thou shalt not learn to do after the abominations of those nations" (Deut 18:9).

Christ, the Savior

Our Savior relates to both of these situations as foreshadowed in Israel. Initially, he drives out the enemy, freeing us from the clutches of Satan, purging our conscience, and purifying our hearts. However, being "saved" does not end there. That condition must be maintained as we "through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body" (Rom 8:13). Our spiritual life depends upon us doing this, for the text continues that if we actually do this, "ye shall live." Lest we be tempted to think this is really nothing more than an option, we are admonished, "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Rom 8:13). In this whole matter, Jesus works within us in the role of the Savior.

It is unfortunate that great numbers of professing believers are seriously lacking in this area. Hosts of them are living "after the flesh," imagining that, so doing, they will not die – even though God has said "Ye shall die!" They are not being taught of the necessity of the work of mortifying the deeds of the body, and therefore appear to have no heart for it. As a result, they are learning the ways of the world – maybe even with a religious flavor to them. Let there be no mistake about this. There is no room in salvation for continuing in the sin from which we have been delivered! Jesus has been exalted to be a “Savior.” That means full provision has been made for being initially delivered, and remaining delivered. If that is not being experienced, then Jesus has, in fact, been denied, profession notwithstanding. If this is not the case, then Jesus has been recalcitrant in His role as Savior. He has, if such be the case, been exalted to be a Savior, yet is not faithful to do His work, keeping the saved ones clean and pure. Who is the blasphemer who would presume to say such a thing? Where is the individual who would dare to live in a slipshod manner, and yet claim Jesus as their Savior? Who is the one who remains dominated by sin, yet claims to be saved?

TO GIVE REPENTANCE AND FORGIVENESS OF SINS

“ 31c . . . for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins.”

Here is why Jesus was exalted to be a Prince and a Savior. It is axiomatic, or taken for granted, that such an Individual is required for the specified benefits to be experienced – an enthroned and empowered Prince and Savior. These blessings cannot possibly be realized if Jesus Himself does not give, or grant, them. Technically speaking, these are not human achievements, but things to be received.

TO GIVE REPENTANCE

“ . . . for to give repentance. . . ” Other versions read, “to grant repentance,” NASB “to give . . . a change of heart,” BBE “to lead . . . to him, to change the way they think and act,” GWN “so the people . . . would repent of their sins,” NLT “to give reformation,” YLT “so . . . would have an . . . opportunity for repentance,” LIVING that Israel could have the opportunity to change their hearts,” IE “in order to give repentance,” ISV “in order to grant repentance,” AMPLIFIED “to bring repentance,” PHILLIPS “so that the people . . . would turn back to him,” CEV and “to give the people . . . the opportunity to repent.” GNB

Some translations completely misrepresent the thought, reading that Jesus was exalted so that an “opportunity” to repent could occur. LIVING/ IE/GNB This thought can in no way be derived from the language of the text. It is nothing more than the imposition of human understanding upon the text of Scripture.

“For to Give”

The word “give” comes from the Greek word doûnai which means, “of one’s own accord to give something to someone, to his advantage, to bestow, give as a gift, to grant,” THAYER and “to give, grant, allow, permit.” UBS

In this case, what is “given” is not an opportunity. The gift is specified in very particular language: meta,noian (meta-noi-an). There is no question about the meaning of this word. First, it is a noun, not a verb. The root meaning of the word is “a change of mind.” Lexically, as used here, it means “to give the ability to repent, or cause him to repent” THAYER Other lexical meanings include, “a change of mind leading to change of behavior,” FRIBERG “change of heart, turning from one’s sins, change of way,” UBS “to change one’s way of life as the result of a complete change of thought and attitude with regard to sin and righteousness,” LOUW-NIDA and “turning about, lit. ‘change of mind.’” GINGRICH

Repentance involves both an inward and outward change – a change of thought, and a change of conduct. This is not something that is achieved by the employment of natural aptitudes – discipline, diligence, effort, etc. This is associated with having a new heart. Under the Old Covenant the inspired prophet Ezekiel thundered this challenge: “Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit : for why will ye die, O house of Israel?” (Ezek 18:31). This is similar to a word Moses spoke to Israel during his valedictory address: “ Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart , and be no more stiffnecked” (Deut 10:16).

That these requirements could not be achieved in the energy of “the natural man” became evident, as both Moses and Ezekiel declared God would do these things. Moses promised, “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed , to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6). Ezekiel promised, “ A new heart also will I give you , and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh” (Ezek 36:26).

When the enthroned Savior gives repentance, it is the opening of the door for the accomplishing of the promises of both Moses and Ezekiel. Men can no more repent of themselves than they can circumcise their own hearts, or make a new heart for themselves. If men could do such things, this would contradict the word revealed in Job: “Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one” (Job 14:4). David knew this was the case, as evidenced by his penitential prayer: “ Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me” (Psa 51:10).

Men can no more repent of themselves than they can circumcise their own hearts, or make a new heart for themselves. If men could do such things, this would contradict the word revealed in Job: “Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one”

Now, Peter declares that Jesus has been exalted to be a Prince and a Savior in order to “give repentance.” Why could it not be given before? Why was it not enough to command that men repent. The answer ought to be obvious, yet it has been obscured by the vain reasoning of men.

Commands to Repent Were Rare Before Jesus, Even Though the Need to Repent Was Great

Let it be clear that before Jesus, the command to “repent” was given – although there are only few such commands in all of Moses and the Prophets.

- The King James Version contains two: “ Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Repent , and turn yourselves from your idols; and turn away your faces from all your abominations” (Ezek 14:6). “Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. Repent , and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin” (Ezek 18:30).

- The New King James Version, in addition to the ones listed above, contains one more : “They said, ' Repent [‘turn again’ KJV] now everyone of his evil way and his evil doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD has given to you and your fathers forever and ever” (Jer 25:5).

- In addition to the first two mentioned, the New American Standard Bible and NIV adds the following: “‘For I have no pleasure in the death of anyone who dies,’ declares the Lord GOD. ‘Therefore, repent [‘turn’ KJV] and live’” (Ezek 18:32).

These examples are representative of the majority of Versions, both literal and paraphrased.

The Law Contained No Commandment to “Repent”

There was no commandment in the Law of Moses to “Repent” – not so much as one! Moses delivered two words concerning the people turning to the Lord; “When thou art in tribulation, and all these things are come upon thee, even in the latter days, if thou turn to the LORD thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice” (Deut 4:30). “If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the LORD thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law , and if thou turn unto the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul” (Deut 30:10).

Once Moses told the people, “Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no more stiffnecked” (Deut 10:16). That word, in fact, equated to repentance – yet no one fulfilled it. That is why Moses also promised the people God, in view of their inability to do this, would Himself circumcise their hearts. “And the LORD thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live” (Deut 30:6).

A Defiled Heart Cannot Be Changed By the One Possessing It

Repentance fundamentally involves a change of heart and mind. Such a change, however, cannot be accomplished by the one requiring the change, for sin defiles the whole man. The prophet Jeremiah stated the case this way. “Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do evil” (Jer 13:23). The Amplified Bible reads, “Can the Ethiopian change his skin or the leopard his spots? Then also can you do good who are accustomed and taught [even trained] to do evil.” The point is that man cannot change his own nature – and repentance requires such a change!

Doctrinally speaking, if men could have repented on their own, they could have circumcised their own hearts, and made themselves a new heart. The commands to do all three of them were, like the Law itself, intended to confirm man’s total and absolute spiritual impotence. When men sinned and fell into a state wherein they continually “come short of the glory of God,” they entered a condition where it was necessary to be “born again.” Now, they must be enabled from outside themselves to do what is required of them.

If there is any doubt about this 1,500 years of exacting Law under the Old Covenant confirmed that no man could rectify his own situation, redeem himself, or successfully rid himself of sin.

What Was Necessary?

In order for men to change or be changed, the matter of sin had to be satisfactorily addressed. Under the Law, or the Old Covenant, sin was never really addressed – it was only pointed out, but, nothing was ever really done about it. We know this is the case because of the effects of the Law. To name only one of them, consider the highest point of Jewish ceremony – the Day of Atonement. Here was an entire day devoted to the matter of sin. Multiple sacrifices were offered, the high priest was allowed to come into the Holy of Holies – or Most Holy Place – a single time in each year. In addition to the sacrifices, elaborate procedures were put into place. The sixteenth chapter of Leviticus provides us with the details of this day

- The high priest adorned himself with special clothes (v 4).
- The selection of a bullock, two goats, and a ram for sacrifices (vs 3,5).
- The high priest offered the bullock for a sin offering for himself, for an atonement for himself and his house (vs 6,11).
- By the casting of lots, a selection was made between the two goats – one would be presented as a sin offering, and one would be a scape goat, to bear the sins of the people (vs 8-10)
- This ceremony involved the burning of incense (vs 12-13).
- It required sprinkling of blood of the bullock on the mercy seat (v 14).
- There was a sacrifice of the goat selected for the sin offering (v 15a).
- The blood of the goat was sprinkled upon the mercy seat (v 15b).

- An atonement was made for the holy place and the tabernacle (vs 16-17).
- An atonement was made for the brazen altar, sprinkling the blood of the bullock and the goat upon it (v 18-20).
- The high priest confessed the sins over a living goat, then releasing it in a “land not inhabited” (vs 21-22).
- There were various washings (vs 23-24, 28).
- The high priest burned the fat of the sin offering upon the altar (v 25).
- The skins, flesh, and dung of the sacrifices were burned (V 27).
- The person burning the skins, flesh, and dung washed his clothes and bathed his flesh (v 28).
- There was a sanctification of the sanctuary, tabernacle, altar, priests, and people (v 30-33).

Would this elaborate procedure, ordained by God, have an affect upon the people? Would their sins be remitted, or their conscience be purged? The Scriptures leave no doubt about this matter. “For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect. For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins . But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year” (Heb 10:1-3). Rather than removing sin, the day of atonement – Israel’s highest day – actually stirred up the recollection of sin , defiling the conscience: “But [as it is] these sacrifices annually bring a fresh remembrance of sins [to be atoned for].” AMPLIFIED

It was precisely for this reason that God could not, in the sense of the New Covenant provision, “give” men repentance. Sin had not really been dealt with. It had not actually been removed, and therefore the conscience could not be cleansed, or purged.

Sin In Its Entirety Done Away

First, sin in its entirety had to be “put away” (Heb 9:26) in order to make it right for men to be given repentance. God could not forgive what, in fact, still remained. This is why God provided His own Lamb, who would “ taketh away the sin of the world” (John 1:29). In His death Jesus “ put away sin” (Heb 9:26), finishing transgression, and making an end of sin (Dan 9:24). He “destroyed the works of the devil” (1 John 3:5), thereby making it right for God to justify sinners. Therefore it is written, “Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in His blood, to declare His righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God; to declare, I say, at this time His righteousness: that He might be just , and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus” (Rom 3:25-26).

Now, the Exalted Christ Gives Repentance to the People

Now, because sin has been done away, and Jesus has been exalted to be “above all” (Eph 1:21), repentance can be given to men. Furthermore, Jesus Himself is the One who gives it. Peter boldly affirms that this is why Jesus has been exalted – “in order to grant repentance.” AMPLIFIED He declares that this is why Jesus is now “Prince and Savior” – “to grant repentance.” NAS

TO GIVE FORGIVENESS OF SINS

“ . . . and forgiveness of sins.” Other versions read, “ remission of sins,” ASV “and to forgive their sins,” GWN “and be forgiven,” NLT “ to bestow forgiveness and release from sin ,” AMPLIFIED and “and be forgiven .” CEV

The word “forgiveness” comes from a word meaning, “release, as from bondage, forgiveness, pardon,” THAYER “captivity release, liberation, deliverance, debt cancellation, pardon, cancellation of guilt,” FRIBERG “to remove the guilt resulting from wrongdoing” LOUW-NIDA “discharge from a bond,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “cancellation of a punishment, or guilt.” GINGRICH

There is, in my judgement, an enormous amount of folklore these days concerning forgiveness . Perhaps you have heard someone speak of being forgiven by God, but not being able to forgive oneself. This is nothing more than psychological babble, and there is no place for it in the body of Christ – or anywhere else, for that matter.

Forgiveness must be seen against the backdrop of the effects of sin, for it deals directly with those effects. When sin is committed, God is offended, for sin contradicts His nature as well as His law.

- REBELLION. Iniquity is rebellion expressed, and stubbornness personified – and both expressions are hated by God.

- INDEBTEDNESS. Sin also creates a debt to God, for an attempt has been made to rob Him of His glory. The affection of the heart which belonged to Him was devoted to something else, and God was, in a sense robbed – although nothing was taken from His Person or character.

- BONDAGE. The sinner also enters into a state of bondage, from which it is impossible for him to extricate himself.

- THE CONSCIENCE. This also includes the defilement of the conscience of the sinner.

In fact, none of these conditions can be diminished, corrected, or removed by the transgressor.

In forgiveness, God remembers the sin no more (Heb 8:12). From the standpoint of the record, all indebtedness is removed and the bill is cancelled (1 Tim 2:6). The individual is consequently freed from both the guilt and the power of sin (Rom 6:18).

These realities have an impact upon the one who is actually forgiven.

- First, the conscience is purged, and no longer condemns the individual (Heb 9:14; 10:22).

- Second, there is also an access to God granted, which was formerly removed because of transgression (Rom 5:2; Eph 2:18; 3:12).

- Third, a condition is also introduced in which the person is no longer indebted to sin, and is under no irresistible compulsion to continue in it (Rom 6:6-7,12,14; 8:12).

The “remission of sin” (Acts 2:38; Rom 3:25) includes the purging, or cleansing, of the conscience. In fact, our baptism into Christ is referred to as the means through which a “good conscience” is appropriated (1 Pet 3:21). There really is no such thing as knowing you have been forgiven God, yet being unable to forgive yourself. A condemning conscience and the forgiveness of sins cannot be joined together. When Jesus gives “forgiveness of sins” the recipient, unlike those who labored under the Law and its inferior sacrifices, has “no more conscience of sins” (Heb 10:2).

This does not mean the forgiven one no longer recalls that he had sinned. Paul had a vivid memory of his past sin: “I persecuted this way unto the death. . . I persecuted them even unto strange cities . . . I persecuted the church of God . . . I persecuted the church of God and wasted it . . . And when the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him” (Acts 22:4,20; 26:11; 1 Cor 15:9; Gal 1:13). However, this was not the testimony of a defiled conscience, but was rather the expression of a purified heart.

Tie Remission to the Right Thing

There is something flawed in associating forgiveness only with doing something. To be sure, there are things to be done, and they cannot be ignored. After what is to be required is actually done, forgiveness still has to be given.

- Repentance and baptism (Acts 2:38).
- Baptism (Acts 22:16).
- Believing in Jesus (Acts 10:43; 13:39).
- Confessing our sins (1 John 1:9).

Notwithstanding the necessity of this obedience, these things cannot be the focus of our confidence. Our faith is in Jesus Christ, the One who GIVES forgiveness to the people!

Unfortunate Translations

Some Versions read that Jesus was exalted so that men could repent and be forgiven – that is, given the opportunity to do so. Here are some of those Versions.

- “. . . so the people of Israel would repent of their sins and be forgiven.” NLT
- “. . . so that the people of Israel would have an opportunity for repentance, and for their sins to be forgiven.” LIVING
- “. . . so that Israel could have the opportunity to change their hearts. Then God could forgive their sins.” IE
- “. . . so that the people of Israel would turn back to him and be forgiven.” CEV

These are a total misrepresentation of the text and reflect the flawed theology of the compilers of the versions in question.

TO ISRAEL

“. . . to Israel . . .” Other versions read, “the people of Israel,” GWN

For those unacquainted with the New Covenant, it may sound peculiar that Jesus was exalted by God’s right hand to give repentance and forgiveness of sins to Israel . The benefits of Christ’s ministry are not intended to be limited to Israel, as Peter himself proclaimed on the day of Pentecost. “For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off , even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:39). However, the promise of a Savior was given to Israel , and “salvation is of the Jews” (John 4:22). A brief rehearsal of the divine reasoning on this matter will suffice to clarify it.

- The whole world is blessed through the Seed of Abraham (Gen 22:18; Acts 3:25).
- The promise of the Messiah was to come through Abraham , the progenitor of the Jewish race – “the father of circumcision” (Rom 4:9-12).
- Jesus is the “the Son of Abraham ” (Matt 1:1).
- In His incarnation, Jesus took upon Himself “the seed of Abraham ” (Heb 2:16).
- The New Covenant was made “with the house Israel and the house of Judah ” (Jer 31:31; Heb 8:8). It is also said to have been made “with the house of Israel” (Heb 8:10).
- All of the Messianic promises pertained to “the Israelites ” (Rom 9:4).
- The “ fathers ” (Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob), through whom the promise came, were all Israelites (Rom 9:5).

It is to be understood that the Jewish tree is here considered with its subsidiary branches which are, by the grace of God, grafted in among the natural branches.

Salvation is “of the Jews ” (John 4:22).

- Israel is depicted as a natural olive tree into which the Gentiles, who are “wild by nature,” were grafted (Rom 11:24).

- The Israelites lineage is supporting the converted Gentiles, and they are partaking of the root and fatness of their tree , after they were “grafted in among them” (Rom 11:17).

- Prior to their conversion, Gentile believers were described as “aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise ” (Eph 2:12-13). Now, however, these very people are “no more strangers and foreigners, but fellowcitizens with the saints” (Eph 2:19).

- In Christ, however, we have been brought near, and have been joined to the Israelites to make of the two “one new man” (Eph 2:14-17).

- Gentile believers are grafted in “ among them ,” and are partakers “ with them ” (Rom 11:17).

When Peter says that Jesus has been exalted to “give repentance to Israel and the forgiveness of sins,” he is declaring the fulfillment of the promise of the Messiah and the New Covenant – both of which were made to Israel. It is to be understood that the Jewish tree is here considered with its subsidiary branches which are, by the grace of God, grafted in among the natural branches.

Thu boasting is altogether excluded. The Jews cannot boast because they themselves crucified the “Prince of life.” The Gentiles cannot boast, because they have become a part of this marvelous salvation “contrary to nature” (Rom 11:24). Therefore we can say, “For God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all. O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!” (Rom 11:32-33). Jew and Gentile owe it all to Jesus! Neither one was deserving of redemption. Both of them are recipients of mercy.

WE ARE HIS WITNESSES

“ 32a And we are His witnesses of these things . . . ”

Peter now appeals to two witnesses, for this is the Divine manner, for everything that has been revealed. The law established the principle, applying it to the enforcement of the death penalty. We find, however, that it was not limited to that application.

- THE LAW. “ At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses , shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death” (Deut 17:6).

- THE LORD JESUS, #1. “But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established ” (Matt 18:16).

- THE LORD JESUS, #2. “And yet if I judge, My judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent Me. It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true. I am one that bear witness of Myself, and the Father that sent Me beareth witness of Me” (John 8:16-18).

- PAUL, #1. “This is the third time I am coming to you. In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established ” (2 Cor 13:1).

• PAUL, #2. “Against an elder receive not an accusation, but before two or three witnesses ” (1 Tim 5:19).

A Proper Use of Scripture

From the standpoint of revelation, they were having fellowship with both the Father and the Son. The Holy Spirit was also directing them into all truth, recalling to their minds the words of Jesus, and showing them things to come. The great mysteries related to the salvation of God were revealed to them through the Holy Spirit, constituting them true witnesses.

Those who labor in the vineyard of the Lord are required to handle “accurately the word of truth” NASB (2 Tim 2:15). The matter of two or three witnesses is a case in point. The Law applied the rule to the enforcement of capital punishment. Jesus applied it to an approach to resolving a dispute between brethren. Jesus also applied it to the confirmation of His own Sonship. Paul applied it to dealing with a Corinthian situation on different occasion. He also applied it to the matter of receiving an accusation against an elder. In these you have classic examples of handling the Word of God correctly. Such handling requires that the basic intention of divine utterance be comprehended.

Peter now affirms that there are two witnesses to the truth of his word concerning Jesus Christ. First, the apostles themselves are witnesses – eye witnesses. Second, the Holy Spirit is the confirming witness that makes the Gospel irrefutable.

WE ARE HIS WITNESSES

“And we are His witnesses . . .” Other versions read, “we are witnesses,” NASB “we are the witnesses,” MRD “we are records,” PNT “we are His records,” TNT “We saw all of these things happen,” IE and “We are here to tell you about all this.” CEV

A witness is someone with firsthand knowledge of a matter, for so the word means: “as one who declares facts directly known to himself; (a) from firsthand knowledge or (b) from firsthand experience.” FRIBERG The knowledge acquired can be through revelation – i.e., independent of fleshly senses. It can also be something experienced through the senses of sight, touch, and hearing. In the case of the apostles, all of these apply.

From the standpoint of the senses, John confessed, “That which was from the beginning, which we have heard , which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon , and our hands have handled , of the Word of life; (For the life was manifested, and we have seen it , and bear witness, and show unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ” (1 John 1:1-3).

From the standpoint of revelation, they were having fellowship with both the Father and the Son (1 John 1:3). The Holy Spirit was also directing them into all truth (John 16:13a), recalling to their minds the words of Jesus (John 14:26), and showing them things to come (John 16:13b). The great mysteries related to the salvation of God were revealed to them through the Holy Spirit, constituting them true witnesses. As it is written: “Whereby, when ye read, ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ) which in other ages was not made known unto the sons of men, as it is now revealed unto his holy apostles and prophets by the Spirit” (Eph 3:4-5).

“We Are His Witnesses”

Peter had also affirmed this on the day of Pentecost: “This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we all are witnesses” (Acts 2:32). He said it again at the house of Cornelius: “And we are witnesses of all things which he did both in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem; whom they slew and hanged on a tree” (Acts 10:39). He also told the household of Cornelius that the risen Christ appeared “Not to all the people, but unto witnesses chosen before of God, even to us , who did eat and drink with Him after he rose from the dead” (Acts 10:41).

Before He returned to heaven, Jesus told these men they would be His witnesses. “And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things” (Luke 24:46-48). “And ye also shall bear witness , because ye have been with Me from the beginning” (John 15:27). “But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8).

Paul wrote that the message of God’s great salvation was first spoken by the Lord, then confirmed by those who had heard Him: “How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard Him ” (Heb 2:3).

We learn several things about these witnesses from these texts – witnesses that were appointed.

- They were Christ’s witnesses.
- They saw the risen Christ, and heard Him speak.
- They were witnesses of His ministry prior to His death.
- They were witnesses chosen by God.
- They ate and drank with Him after He had risen from the dead.
- They were witnesses because they had been with Jesus from the beginning.
- They were witnesses because the Holy Spirit had come upon them.
- They were confirming witnesses, attesting to the words that Jesus spoke.

These, then, were credible witnesses. They only said what they had seen and heard. They were chosen by God, commissioned by Jesus, and empowered by the Holy Spirit. They could not possibly have any greater credentials than these.

No one else in Christ is a witness in the sense of the apostles. They stand unique among men, having received firsthand knowledge of the things contained in the Gospel. In their understanding of Christ and the Gospel, all other members of Christ’s body must begin with the words of the apostles. No additional or higher view of Christ and redemption will be made known independently of them. That is why they are referred to as “the foundation” upon which the church is built (Eph 2:20).

The Implication of This Fact

If this view of the apostles is true – and it is a revealed view – then it is a transgression of unspeakable magnitude for an extended ignorance of apostolic doctrine to exist within the professed church. How is it possible to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and live unto Him while remaining willingly ignorant of the message of His ambassadors? Jesus Himself spoke of those who would believe on Him “through their word” (John 17:21). Jesus said to His disciples, “He that receiveth you receiveth Me ” (Matt 10:40). And again, “ He that heareth you heareth Me ; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me ; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me” (Luke 10:16). And again, “Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that receiveth whomsoever I send receiveth Me ; and he that receiveth Me receiveth Him that sent Me” (John 13:20).

What can be said of professing Christians who, after many years, are woefully ignorant of the teaching of Paul, Peter, and John? How is it that countless numbers of people within the professing church are unlearned in the epistles (Romans through Jude). Or, is there a person of sound mind who does not know that such ignorance so prevails within the professing church that is it mind boggling!

We are living in a generation that has rejected the witness of the apostles. It is accessible to them, but they have thrust it from them, just as surely as those in Antioch of Pisidia (Acts 13:46). Churches are not demanding that their preachers deliver apostolic doctrine. In so doing, they are classing themselves with the Jewish council of our text, who were forbidding the apostles to bear witness. It is a situation of such magnitude that there are no words to adequately describe it. It is totally inexcusable, because the God of heaven has made a way for the witness to be given, yet men have refused it, and “accumulate for themselves teachers in accordance to their own desires” NASB (2 Tim 4:3)

OF THESE THINGS

“ . . . of these things . . . ” Other versions read, “ to these things,” NKJV “ concerning these things,” GENEVA “of these events ,” NET “to this ,” NJB “ as to these things,” WEYMOUTH “to these matters ,” PHILLIPS “about all this ,” CEV and “of these words .” EMTV

The apostles were not social reformers. They were not dispensers of domestic answers. They were not political reactionists. Whatever they said on such matters was certainly true, but it was always secondary, and they made sure the people knew that was the case. Their accent was not on life in this world, but on things directly related to Jesus Christ – who He is, what he had done, and what He is doing. That was the heart and core of their message. It is what they emphasized, and accounted for the vast majority of their words.

“These things” specifically pertain to Christ’s death, resurrection, and enthronement. At some point, all “sound doctrine” ties into “these things” (1 Tim 1:10; 2 Tim 4:3; Tit 1:9; 2:1). If there are points or issues that do not have an essential and obvious association with Christ’s death, resurrection, or enthronement, then such teachings are, by default, and at the best, incidental. They cannot be allowed to become an emphasis, point of stress, or accent – no matter how critical they may appear. God has placed the theological exclamation mark after Jesus – and Jesus alone. Everything else is, at the very best, secondary, and it is possible that they are even further down the doctrinal ladder than that.

It ought to be noted that it is questionable that there are any valid experts, or skillful teachers, in Christ’s body who are not well acquainted with the implications of Christ’s death, resurrection, and exaltation. I do not know how it is possible to establish that anyone in Christ has in any way excelled if these things are not known. If the catalyst to true excellence is absent, it is not possible for excellence to exist.

We know this is the case because growth – which is the path to real excellence – has directly to do with Jesus Himself. “But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into Him in all things, which is the head, even Christ ” (Eph 4:15). This is also associated with the knowledge of Him, or acquaintance and familiarity with Him. As it is written, “But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ ” (2 Pet 3:18). This “knowledge” has very much to do with the “apostles’ doctrine,” for therein is contained the required elements for spiritual growth. There is nothing – absolutely nothing – that can be known of Jesus independently of “the doctrine of Christ” (Heb 6:1; 2 John 1:9). Properly perceived, “doctrine” is teaching, or the communication of the mind of the Lord in words. Doctrine cannot be perceived by the emotion, or intuition, or feeling. It also integrates with perception or understanding, which is the engine of effective motivation, being directly related to faith – i.e., “by faith we understand” (Heb 11:3). Faith does come “by hearing” – the communication of the truth of God in words (Rom 10:17).

Satisfactory Resolutions

Furthermore, there are no satisfactory resolutions of any issue that do not directly relate to Christ’s death, resurrection, and enthronement – “these things.” Those who, in the name of Christ, are marketing tips, procedural secrets, and various fleshly routines, have no place in the body of Christ. They are spokesmen for the world, not for God, being imposters in the church. We know this is the case because God is speaking to us “by His Son, whom He hath appointed Heir of all things, by whom also He made the worlds” (Heb 1:2). Whoever does not speak in concert with what Jesus said cannot be from Him. He cannot be represented by anyone who speaks differently than He did, or places the accent where He did not place it.

We have a remarkable record of the teachings of Jesus in the Gospels. That revelation contains no word from Jesus that addressed the issues of His day as men are prone to do today. That record, joined together with the personal presence and words of Jesus Himself, comprised “the things” of which the apostles were witnesses. Their teaching was within the perimeter of Jesus.

THE HOLY SPIRIT IS A WITNESS

“32b . . . and so is also the Holy Ghost . . .” Other versions read, “and so also is the Holy Spirit,” NKJV “and so is the Holy Spirit,” NASB “and the Holy Spirit also ,” DARBY “yea, and the Holy Ghost ,” GENEVA “as is the Holy Spirit,” NAB “The Holy Spirit has shown you that we are telling you the truth!” IE “and the Holy Spirit is also,” AMPLIFIED and “we and the Holy Spirit .” GNB

The rule for establishing testimony is “two or three witnesses.” Technically, the apostles themselves, twelve in number, exceeded this requirement. Yet, that was not adequate for the occasion. There needed to be a witness from heaven, as there was in Jesus’ ministry. The Lord said of the attestation of Himself, “But I have greater witness than that of John : for the works which the Father hath given Me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of Me , that the Father hath sent me. And the Father Himself, which hath sent Me, hath borne witness of Me” (John 5:36-37). There were three witnesses: John, Jesus’ his works, and the Father Himself. Jesus narrowed it down even further. “ I am one that bear witness of Myself, and the Father that sent Me beareth witness of Me” (John 8:18).

When we are speaking of the Gospel of Christ, witnesses from both heaven and earth must be found – and they must be in total agreement. If heaven does not support what a man says in Jesus’ name, then it is not to be received. In this day of salvation, this has specific reference to the Word of God, or the Scriptures – in particular “the record God has given of His Son” (1 John 5:10).

Under the Old Covenant, this principle was stated this way: “To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them ” (Isa 8:20). Therefore, those whose message cannot be confirmed by Divine testimony are unilluminated people – “there is no light in them.” They are, by default, walking in darkness. That is why they have a misplaced emphasis. They are not to be heard, but are to be abandoned, or left (Matt 15:14; Rom 16:17; 2 Tim 3:5). So far as the body of Christ is concerned, they are not worthy of a hearing.

The Spirit only bears witness to the truth, for He is “the Spirit of truth” (John 14:17); 15:26), and guides men “into all truth” (John 16:13). It is therefore Him that must validate the message. He will not corroborate a false message. Therefore, if His witness is missing, the message is not to be received.

Let me be clear on this matter. The message that the apostles were preaching, and the message of which the Holy Spirit bore witness, were the same message. There was not a variance between the witness of the apostles and the witness of the Holy Spirit. That itself is a most remarkable circumstance, for, by nature, men and the Spirit are fundamentally disagreed. This is because “the carnal mind is enmity against God” (Rom 8:7). Furthermore, “the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned” (1 Cor 2:14).

Notwithstanding this impossible circumstance, if the Holy Spirit can be found within men, they will no longer be at enmity with God. They will be able to receive the things of the Spirit of God, and discern them. This is precisely what had happened to the apostles. They had been empowered by the Person of the Holy Spirit to speak in strict comportsment with His mind – just as Jesus had promised (Acts 1:8).

The apostles drew the same conclusion that the Spirit did, that men ought to repent and obtain the remission of sins. Knowing that these were absolutely essential, yet totally beyond the reach of the natural man, the apostles declared that Jesus had been exalted to give them both.

From this, we gain some understanding of the witness of the Holy Spirit – what He is testifying, or speaking about. Peter had been speaking about Jesus Christ, particularly of His death (Acts 2:23,36; 3:13-15; 4:10; 5:20), resurrection (Acts 2:24,32; 3:15,26; 4:10; 5:30), and exaltation (Acts 2:30-31,33; 3:13; 4:11-12; 5:31).

Jesus said that when the Holy Spirit came, He would not speak concerning Himself, but would testify of the Christ. “But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, He shall testify of Me” (John 15:26). And again, “Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come, He will guide you into all truth: for He shall not speak of Himself; but whatsoever He shall hear, that shall he speak: and He will show you things to come. He shall glorify Me: for He shall receive of Mine, and shall show it unto you. All things that the Father hath are Mine: therefore said I, that He shall take of Mine, and shall show it unto you” (John 16:13-15).

Those, therefore, who preach a Gospel that emphasizes the Holy Spirit are preaching an erroneous Gospel – “another Gospel” (2 Cor 11:4; Gal 1:6). If the Holy Spirit, according to Christ’s own word, “will not speak on His own,” how could He possibly bless a Gospel that is primarily about Him instead of the One whom the Spirit is expounding? That is not even to mention the more absurd gospels that center in health, wealth, prosperity, successful living, dietary practices, various forms of philanthropy, etc. Such gospels may very well be supported by statistics, the writings of men, social analysts, and experts in human behavior. However, the Holy Spirit will not bear witness to them, confirm them, or persuade men that they are true.

In our text, however, the apostles and the Spirit were witnessing the same thing. The apostles drew the same conclusion that the Spirit did, that men ought to repent and obtain the remission of sins. Knowing that these were absolutely essential, yet totally beyond the reach of the natural man, the apostles declared that Jesus had been exalted to give them both. In this declaration they were fulfilling the word of the Lord Jesus, “that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name” (Luke 24:47).

How is it that repentance and remission of sins can be preached? Ordinarily, men would think of these as things to be exhorted or commanded, not preached, proclaimed, heralded, or published. The answer is found in the preaching referenced in this text: “Him hath God exalted with His right hand to be a Prince and a Savior, for to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins” (Acts 5:31). That is the preaching to which Jesus referred. This does not mean men are not to be commanded to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins (Acts 2:38). It does mean that the fact that Jesus has been exalted to give both of those to men provides the incentive to “call upon the name of the Lord.”

The reality of repentance and the remission of sins is strictly owing to Jesus being exalted for the purpose giving them. Their origin, experience, and effectiveness cannot be ultimately traced to the human will. For those who experiencing repentance and forgiveness, the Spirit will confirm this is true.

THE SPIRIT IS GIVEN TO THOSE WHO OBEY JESUS

“ 32c . . . whom God hath given to them that obey Him.”

While there remains much confusion in our time concerning the gift of the Holy Spirit, those who are taught by the Spirit will not allow such ignorance to either rise or be sustained. In actuality, confusion concerning the Holy Spirit is either owing to His absence, or to Him being quenched or grieved.

Peter will now associate the witness of the Holy Spirit with His indwelling. That is, His testimony is realized from within. His testimony – the one of which Peter now speaks – is not an overt one. It is not one of sensation, sight, or feeling. The effectiveness of Christ’s death, the reality of His exaltation, and His post-exaltation activities be confirmed by neither sight nor touch. There is no fleshly sensation or feeling that can validate these realities. I say these things because Peter is declaring that the Holy Spirit also witnesses to the truth of what He has been affirming about Jesus.

I fear that very much of what is being said in our time about the Holy Spirit has little to do with Christ’s death and exaltation. However, the real ministry of the Spirit has everything to do with them. Now, inspired Peter will identify the Holy Spirit with people, and declare what preceded that identity.

WHOM GOD HATH GIVEN

“ . . . whom God hath given . . .” Other versions read, “whom God has given ,” NKJV “whom God giveth ,” MRD “whom God gave ,” YLT “who is given by God,” LIVING “Whom God has bestowed ,” AMPLIFIED “which God gives ,” PHILLIPS and “who is God's gift . CEV

The words “hath given” come from a single Greek word – e;dwken (ed-ok-ev). Etymologically, this word is defined as a “verb indicative aorist active 3rd person singular.” GINGRICH Broken down, that means the following.

- The giving of the Spirit is something that a Person does – it is not something that occurs automatically, or without some personal intervention (verb).
- It indicates a particular deed or denoted act – that is, this is not a general condition, but a specific one (indicative).
- It refers to something that actually takes place – an experience. This is not speaking of what can be given, but what IS given (aorist).
- It is something characterized by action, as compared to a mere contemplation or speculation. This is not an idea, but the declaration of a very real human experience (active).
- This truth is being spoken by someone other than the One giving the gift, and in reference to those who receive it, not in reference to himself alone (3 rd person).
- This also refers to something that takes place in individuals, as compared with groups (singular).

“Whom”

The word “Whom” further confirms that the Holy Spirit is a Person, not a mere force or form of impersonal power – like gravity, centrifugal force, etc. The Holy Spirit is consistently portrayed in association with Personality and intelligence.;

- The Spirit can be “grieved” (Eph 4:30).
- The “mind of the Spirit” (Rom 8:27).
- He testifies (John 15:26).
- He reveals (Eph 1:17).
- He bears witness with our spirit (Rom 8:16).
- He intercedes for us (Rom 8:26-27).
- He speaks (Acts 13:2).
- He leads (Rom 8:13-14).
- He searches out the deep things of God (1 Cor 2:10).
- He enables the redeemed to know the things God has prepared for those who love Him (1 Cor 2:12).
- He washes, sanctifies, and justifies (1 Cor 6:11).
- He gives the “word of wisdom” and “the word of knowledge” (1 Cor 12:8).
- He is characterized by “ministry” (2 Cor 3:8).
- He causes progressive change in those who are in Christ (2 Cor 3:18).
- He causes intelligent cries in the elect (Gal 4:6).
- He sheds the love of God abroad in our hearts (Rom 5:5).
- His power enables men to abound in hope (Rom 15:13).
- A person can lie to the Holy Spirit (Acts 5:3).
- The Holy Spirit evaluates what is good (Acts 15:28).

These will suffice to confirm the nature of the Spirit’s person, character and work within. They also confirm the matters with which the Spirit is concerned.

“Hath Given”

On the day of Pentecost, Peter spoke of the Holy Spirit as someone to be received: “ye SHALL receive the gift of the Holy Spirit” (2:38). Now, however, he speaks of the Spirit as a gift that has already been given. This narrows down the persons to whom the confirming witness of the Spirit is given. Those who have received the Holy Spirit will know what he is talking about. Others will not.

TO THEM THAT OBEY HIM

“ . . . to them that obey Him.” Other versions read, “ those who obey Him,” NKJV “those who keep His laws,” BBE “them that believe in Him ,” MRD “those obeying Him,” YLT “those who obeyed Him,” IE “those who keep on obeying Him,” ISV “those who practice obedience ,” WILLIAMS “those who obey His commands ,” PHILLIPS “ the ones obeying Him,” ALT “everyone who obeys God ,” CEV and “ all that obey Him.” DOUAY

“Obey” is used here in the sense of the New Covenant – interpreted under grace, not law. Under the Law itself, obedience was not associated with faith, for “the law is not based on faith,” NIV or “the Law does not rest on faith [does not require faith, has nothing to do with faith]” AMPLIFIED (Gal 3:12).

In Christ, obedience has three notable qualities, clearly distinguishing it from the administration of the Law.

- In Christ, obedience proceeds from faith. Therefore it is called referred to as “the obedience to the faith,” or, “the obedience that comes from faith” NIV (Rom 16:26; 1:5). This kind of obedience was first found in Abraham, of who, it is written, “By faith Abraham . . . obeyed” (Heb 11:8).

- The obedience of the saints is traced to the influence of the Holy Spirit Himself. “Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently” (1 Pet 1:22). And again, “Elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father, through sanctification of the Spirit, unto obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace, be multiplied” (1 Pet 1:2).

- Among the saints, obedience is also rendered from the heart, for the people have been made “willing” in the day of Christ’s power (Psa 110:3). As it is written, “But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you” (Rom 6:17).

Here, the word “obey” is very significant. The word itself is translated from the Greek word peiqarcou/sin (pie-tharx-oosin). Lexically, the word means, “to obey a ruler or authority . . . be obedient . . . hearken to one advising something,” THAYER “listen to,” UBS “to submit to authority or reason by obeying,” LOUW-NIDA and “be obedient.” GINGRICH The English word “obey” (which is assumed in the Greek definition) means “to follow commands or guidance; to conform to or comply with . . . to behave obediently.” MERRIAM-WEBSTER

This kind of obedience is not attended with recalcitrance or a hesitancy to do what is commanded. It is not obeying with teeth and fist clinched, desiring to do otherwise. It is not yielding to the will of another simply to avoid pain and sorrow. This is obedience that gladly yields to the Lord. As it is written, “Then they that gladly received his word were baptized” (Acts 2:41).

But there is something else about this word that is noteworthy. From the standpoint of the rules of language, this word is in the following mood: verb participle present active dative. That is, it is:

- Something that is done (verb).
- Obedience that is genuine, combining action with will (participle).
- Obedience that continues (present active).
- Obedience that is intentional and directed toward the Lord (dative).

The particular obedience of which Peter speaks is what attends coming into Christ in the first place – initial obedience. But that obedience does not end there. Rather, it commences when we are baptized into Christ, and continues throughout the life of the saved. Doctrinally it would be stated like this: “As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in Him” (Col 2:6). A description of this kind of obedience is provided in the book of Phillipians. “Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling” (Phil 2:12).

Our text states that God has given the Holy Spirit to those who have obeyed HIM – not the church, but HIM ! This is the kind of obedience produced by faith. It is also the kind that continues on. It is not our business to determine all of the people who possess this kind of obedience – which is the ONLY kind God accepts. The point here is that the Lord knows who is in this category, and never fails to give them His Holy Spirit.

Knowing that this promise was true, Peter spoke to those who were convicted on the day of Pentecost, promising that if they would obey God, they would receive the Holy Spirit. “Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost ” (Acts 2:38). He then testified that this was the same Spirit the disciples had received, which was also promised by Joel. “ For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off , even as many as the Lord our God shall call” (Acts 2:39). The promise, as I have said, was delivered by Joel : “I will pour out My Spirit” (Joel 2:28; Acts 2:16-18).

What shall we say, then, of those who affirm one can be saved and yet not have the Holy Spirit? What of the doctrine that states that receiving the Holy Spirit is apart from salvation itself? Such teaching is simply not true. It is the result of a rather significant theological tapestry that has been woven completely with the reasoning of men.

Ponder how clearly God has spoken about the matter of giving His Holy Spirit to all of His children.

- “And hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us ” (Rom 5:5).

- “Who hath also sealed us, and given the earnest of the Spirit in our hearts ” (2 Cor 1:22).

- “Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit ” (2 Cor 5:5).

- “ And because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts , crying, Abba, Father” (Gal 4:6).

- “He therefore that despiseth, despiseth not man, but God, who hath also given unto us His Holy Spirit ” (1 Thess 4:8).

- “And he that keepeth His commandments dwelleth in Him, and He in him. And hereby we know that He abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us ” (1 John 3:24).

- “Hereby know we that we dwell in Him, and He in us, because He hath given us of his Spirit” (1 John 4:13).

It is this Spirit that confirms what the Gospel declares concerning Christ’s death, resurrection, and exaltation. He powerfully applies the truth to our hearts so that we know our sins are forgiven. He persuades us that we have been raised together with Him, and enjoy “the power of His resurrection.” He convinces our hearts that Jesus is the head over all things, and that there is no need to fear man, whose breath is in his nostrils.

It is tragic beyond description that many believers have been robbed of this witness because they have heard and embraced “another gospel.” The real Gospel is the truth which, when known, makes men free.

THEY WERE CUT TO THE HEART

“ 33 When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them. ”

Surely the wonderful thoughts expressed by Peter will melt the stony hearts of the Jewish council. He had spoken similarly to those on the day of Pentecost, and 3,000 “gladly received” the word. Earlier, in the Temple, he had again spoken such words, and 5,000 men believed. Surely the Gospel will also do a work on these men.

CUT TO THE HEART

“When they heard that, they were cut to the heart . . .” Other versions read, “When they heard this, they were furious ,” NKJV “But when they heard this, they were cut to the quick ,” NASB “When they heard this, they were enraged ,” NRSV “And when they heard these things, they burned with indignation ,” MRD “they became infuriated ,” NAB “And when they heard that, they clave asunder ,” PNT “they became very angry ,” IE “ Infuriated at getting this answer ,” WEYMOUTH “Now when they heard this, they were cut to the heart and infuriated ,” AMPLIFIED and “But hearing, they were cut through [fig., infuriated].” ALT

The same word that brings consolation to humble and contrite hearts – the very same word – is “like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?” to hard-hearted people (Jer 23:29). Jesus is the Stone upon which men can fall and be broken, in order that God might recreate them. This same Jesus, however, is the Stone that will “grind. . . to powder” those who refuse to receive Him (Matt 21:44). True Gospel preachers are “a sweet savor of Christ in them that are saved AND in them that perish.” In one they promote life, and in the other they promote death. As it is written, “To the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life. And who is sufficient for these things?” (2 Cor 2:16).

For some, this is too difficult to assimilate. After all, they reason, God “is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance” (2 Pet 3:9). Of course, they pass over the fact that Peter is speaking about God’s longsuffering toward His own people, for, says he, “the Lord is not slack concerning His promise . . . but is longsuffering to usward, not willing . . .” It is quite true that elsewhere it is written that God “will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth” (1 Tim 2:4). This is the motivation for the saints praying earnestly “for all that are in authority; that we might lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty” (verse 2).

The point to be seen here is that while we desire the salvation of all men, we are naive about the matter. There are those who are perishing, whose situation is actually worsened when they hear the Gospel. In such cases, they go from “death unto death.” That is the kind of people that Peter is facing. Yet, he does not diminish the powerful Gospel he is preaching, or tailor it so it will not be offensive to these men. Instead, he lets the Gospel do its work, preaching it without compromise, while holding out the Gospel scepter to those with honest and good hearts.

It is this uncompromising approach that causes these wicked men to reveal their real character. Their response is pushed out of them by the words Peter has delivered.

Notice the difference between these men and those who gladly received the word on the day of Pentecost. These men were “cut to the heart.” On Pentecost, the people are “pricked in their heart” (2:37).

- The word “pricked” comes from a word meaning, “To prick, pierce; metaphorically, to pain the mind sharply, agitate it vehemently: used especially of the emotion of sorrow.” THAYER In this case, the meaning is that what the people heard produced great sorrow, regret, and grief over what they had done. Therefore, they aggressively sought a remedy: “What shall we do?”

- The word “cut,” as used in this text, comes from a word meaning, “to saw asunder or in twain, to divide by a saw,” THAYER and “strictly divide with a saw; hence cut to the quick, infuriate; only passive in the NT be infuriated, be enraged.” FRIBERG

Those who were “pricked in their hearts” became sorrowful over their transgression, called upon the name of the Lord, and experienced recovery and a new heart. The council heard of the same Jesus, were “cut to the heart,” became spiritually disoriented, and sought to kill the ones delivering the message. Like a two edged sword, the Word pierced into their inner most being, dividing asunder (Heb 4:12), or sawing in two their hearts, so that their corrupt thoughts spilled out to their own condemnation.

It is ever true that the same Gospel brings out the honesty and goodness of tender hearts, while it also brings out the corruption and depravity of wicked hearts. There is not a special Gospel to be delivered to those who love darkness rather than light. It is the same Gospel that is delivered to them, causing their depravity to surface.

How wicked and malicious can men get who do not receive the Gospel? What kind of capacity is there in men to try and rid themselves of those who deliver a message that condemns sin, yet offers salvation in the name of Jesus?

In view of this circumstance, you can see the seriousness of toning down the Gospel, or ignoring it altogether, in order to avoid offending men. Such approaches deliberately avoid the divinely appointed means of distinguishing those with honest and good hearts from those who lack them.

Jesus taught that the means of distinguishing the conditions of the heart was the sowing of the Word – particularly the Gospel. The response of men to that Gospel tells what they really are, all appearance notwithstanding.

TOOK COUNSEL TO SLAY THEM

“ . . . and took counsel to slay them.” Other versions read, “and plotted to kill them,” NKJV “and were intending to slay them,” NASB “and wanted to put them to death,” NIV “and wanted to kill them,” NRSV “and minded to slay them,” ASV “and had a mind to put them to death,” BBE “and they thought to put them to death,” DOUAY “and thought of putting them to death,” MRD “and decided to kill them,” NLT “and sought means to slay them,” PNT “and were taking counsel to slay them,” YLT “They started to make plans to kill the apostles,” IE “they were disposed to kill the Apostles,” WEYMOUTH and “and began plotting to execute them.” ALT

How wicked and malicious can men get who do not receive the Gospel? What kind of capacity is there in men to try and rid themselves of those who deliver a message that condemns sin, yet offers salvation in the name of Jesus? Some might be disposed to think that a cultured people with good laws and a strong religious persuasion would be exempt from such malicious conduct toward the righteous.

There is no need to speculate about this matter, for we have an inspired historical record before us. Some of these very people had plotted and carried out the death of the Lord Jesus Christ, who was truth incarnate, and in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily. Now they conspire to kill the apostles, seeking means to carry out that wicked desire.

These were not barbaric Romans, accustomed to the blood baths of the gladiators, beholding men being killed as a form of entertainment. They were not idolaters like the worshipers of the idol Molech (Lev 18:21). Instead, these were the people who had been chosen and cultured by God Himself. They had received a superior Law, yet had not learned from it. Of that law Moses said, “And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?” (Deut 4:8). Yet, at the announcement of the “wonderful works of God” – the very God who had given them their Law – their hearts had boiled over with anger, and they sought to put the messengers to death.

Jesus once told that generation of leaders, “Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets” (Matt 23:31). Later, Stephen would say of them, “Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? and they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers” (Acts 7:52). Still later, Paul also said of them, “Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men” (1 Thess 2:15).

Let no man question what sin does to the hearts of people, or the depths to which they can sink when under the control of the wicked one. Jesus said to the leaders of His day, “Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it” (John 8:44). In that word we have a revelation of the “bottomless pit” of human nature. That is reason enough to crucify the flesh, with its affections and lusts, and put on the whole armor of God.

CONCLUSION

When the Holy Child Jesus was brought to the Temple, to be dedicated according to the Law, aged Simeon pronounced a prophesy over Him. It was a word that is not often heard to day, but it still holds true, for Simeon was moved by the Holy Spirit to speak it. “Behold, this Child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel ; and for a sign which shall be spoken against . . . that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed” (Luke 2:34-35). Other versions read, “ appointed for the fall and rise of many in Israel, and for a sign to be opposed . . . that thoughts from many hearts may be revealed” NASB “This child is destined to cause the falling and rising of many in Israel, so that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed” NIV and “this child will be the cause of the downfall and the lifting up of great numbers of people in Israel, and he will be a sign against which hard words will be said . . . so that the secret thoughts of men may come to light” BBE

This passage is a sterling example of the fulfillment of this prophesy. To be sure, the Lord Jesus Christ is “the Savior of the world” (John 4:42; 1 John 4:14). However, in the process of being the Savior, another ministry was also fulfilled. He is the Point at which the destiny of men is determined. It is through Him that hearts are revealed and intentions are made known. Hard hearts are revealed through Him as well as tender ones. This is not something that simply occurred – it is an appointed ministry, and we should not be surprised to see it taking place. Jesus has been “set,” KJV “appointed,” NASB and “destined” BBE for both the rising and falling of many!

In our text, Caiaphas, the Sanhedrin, and the elders of Israel were made known through the preaching of Jesus. In order to find the contents of their hearts, Peter and the apostles did not interrogate these men. They did not research their writings, if they had any, or survey the people concerning their thoughts about them. Rather, they preached Jesus, and the people who heard were made known. Those who believed were raised up. Those who did not were thrown down, falling as they were appointed to do (1 Pet 2:8).

Those who pretend to have professional understanding of men, woman, children, etc., are only guessing. They are attempting to diagnose life with tools that are themselves lifeless. Whatever seeming good they may appear to do is, at the best, short-lived, and has no relation whatsoever to the life that is in Christ Jesus.

The objection of the Jewish leaders to the preaching of Jesus was not merely the expression of a doctrinal preference. It was a revelation of corrupt and defiled hearts, and of minds that were hostile against the God of heaven.

When Jesus is not preached, the means by which the hearts of men are made known is withdrawn. What men really are cannot be deciphered by means of human wisdom. There are no worldly experts in human behavior, notwithstanding the claims of students of the human psyche. We know this is the case because of what has been confirmed on the subject: “what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him” (1 Cor 2:11). That text is not a probe of the human race to see if any experts in “the things of a man” are out there! It is a rhetorical question that confirms “the things of a man” cannot be known independently of God Himself. Therefore the reasoning continues, “even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God” (1 Cor 2:11). If it is possible for one man to know the thoughts of another man, then it is also possible for men to know “the things of God” without them being revealed.

Those who pretend to have professional understanding of men, woman, children, etc., are only guessing. They are attempting to diagnose life with tools that are themselves lifeless. Whatever seeming good they may appear to do is, at the best, short-lived, and has no relation whatsoever to the life that is in Christ Jesus.

As we go through this marvelous book, you should pick up on the attitude of holy people toward the wisdom of this world. They never appeal to it, or draw from it in their proclamation of the truth of Christ. They are never depicted as trusting in it, nor do they ever recommend it to the people of God. Their reasoning never reflects worldly patterns of thought, nor do they ever attach significant value to the temporal things around which worldly wisdom revolves. The thrust of their message is clear, and its effects are evident.

Lesson #25

GAMALIEL GIVES HIS COUNSEL

INTRODUCTION

Because the work of the apostles had not yet been completed in Jerusalem, God will not allow it to be thwarted by their enemies. The Lord Jesus has been given the reins to the Kingdom, together will all power in heaven and earth. He is engaged in the building of His church, and will not allow that work to be thwarted by the devil, whom He soundly defeated in His death (Heb 2:14). The work is under way as His ambassadors are sounding forth the message, in which the power given to Him has been invested. While the council was moved with envy, and could not reason in a sound manner, God will use a man with a greater degree of judgment than the high priest to bring some order to the trial. This will be a man who is acquainted with Scripture, and is an expert in the Law. He will also be a man of discernment, who has taken note of extraordinary events, and been able to correlate them with his knowledge of the ways of God.

Even though the high priest and Sadducees were wicked men, they will yield to the wisdom of the man who speaks to them. This is the working of the Lord, and must be perceived as such. This was not a matter of the council simply yielding to greater wisdom. It was rather the Lord overturning their intentions in His own inscrutable wisdom. Yet, it has every appearance of being the triumph of sound reasoning. There is much to be seen here that will encourage our hearts to trust the Lord in all kinds of circumstance.

THE PRECEDENT APPROACH

There are a number of things being revealed in the book of Acts. It is not a mere history book, or the establishment of a pattern to be emulated or followed. There are, to be sure, precedents in this record of events. A precedent is a certain order, arrangement, or significance that took place in previous times. However, it is essential to know the type, or kind, of those precedents. They are not to be viewed as primarily organizational or procedural. That is, the book of Acts is not fundamentally about the pattern or organization of the church. Neither is it intended to establish a single body of words through which men are told how to be saved. For example, there are a number of statements made concerning the appropriation of salvation and the remission of sins. All of them are harmonious, yet no single one of them is intended to be the official approach or nomenclature of the church. Here are some examples of what was said.

- “Whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved” (Acts 2:21)
- “Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost” (Acts 2:38).
- “Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord” (Acts 3:19).

What we have in these statements is a record of a living approach to salvation. Each of them addressed men in a certain state, and dealt with circumstances as they were. The speaker had to discern where the people stood – whether or not they had actually believed, or been convicted of sin, or repented.

“And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God” (Acts 8:36-37).

- “To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins” (Acts 10:43).
- “And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses” (Acts 13:39).
- “And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house” (Acts 16:31).
- “And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord” (Acts 22:16).

None of these statements was intended to be an all-inclusive formula for salvation. Nor, indeed, are men to merge them all together and come up with a general statement that includes them all. What we have in these statements is a record of a living approach to salvation. Each of them addressed men in a certain state, and dealt with circumstances as they were. The speaker had to discern where the people stood – whether or not they had actually believed, or been convicted of sin, or repented. Words that were delivered had to be “fitly spoken,” or appropriate for the occasion. Having said this, no man has been authorized to develop his own approach to appropriating salvation, disregarding the words that have been revealed about it. The mythical “sinner’s prayer,” or various “repeat after me” prayers, are cases in point. All of them conveniently ignore an assessment of where the people are, and how they ought to be directed.

If there is no discernment, it is quite possible for any of us accept as saved people who have not really Rom 10:16). Perhaps they have never “turned” from sin, or been “baptized into Christ,” or “called upon the name of the Lord.”

So far as the involvement of men is concerned, the Kingdom of God is driven by understanding – spiritual understanding. This includes some measure of comprehension concerning God, Christ, salvation itself, and mankind. Without this understanding men are trying to build a house without the Lord – and it is written, “Except the LORD build the house, they labor in vain that build it” (Psa 127:1).

WHAT IS CONTAINED IN ACTS

Having said this, we ought to note some of the things that are being revealed in this volume. There is more being made known than what took place among men.

- JESUS IS BUILDING HIS CHURCH. If we have eyes to see it, we can behold in this book Jesus building His church. He is at work in activities that are recorded, not only putting members into his body, but excluding others. It is His administration that we are seeing as He governs the affairs of men in the interest of bringing many sons to glory.

- THE MINISTRY OF THE HOLY SPIRIT. The manner in which the Holy Spirit is now working is also revealed. He is the liaison of Jesus, revealing the truth to the preachers, convicting the sinners, and comforting the saints. He is the power behind the Truth, producing results that glorify both God and Christ.

- GOD HIMSELF IS MADE KNOWN. The God of Scripture is being made known. We are beholding the meaning of Him being intolerant of iniquity, and merciful to the broken-hearted. His reaction to liars in the church is made known, as well as His care for the faithful. What the Prophets said of Him is being displayed in the affairs of men.

- FALLEN MAN. The nature of fallen men is also being manifested. The extent to which a sinner will go to suppress the truth is seen. The callousness of an unbelieving heart, and the brashness with which it moves men against believers are also made known.

- REGENERATED MEN. The nature of those who are a “new creation” is chronicled. How “newness of life” reacts under stress, threats, and when favor is granted are displayed. We behold what the saints do when they are threatened, and how they answer when they are interrogated by those who reject their message. Their response to heavenly direction is also seen.

- THE TRUE CHURCH. The manner of the collective church is also put into words. Their unity in heart and soul is revealed. Their consistency is seen in their steadfastness, recourse to prayer, and fellowship with one another.

WE MUST BE ALERT

Because of the remarkable nature of many of the recorded incidents, the significance of these lofty revelations can be easily overlooked. Should this occur, we will view much of what is written as related solely to the beginning of the church. We will tend to marvel that such things ever took place, rather than perceive them as confirming expressions of Divine life.

Indeed, there are things in this book that are unique – like Pentecost and the conversion of the household of Cornelius, to name two. These were spiritual epoches that will never be precisely duplicated again, even though much of what took place is characteristic of the continued work of the Lord. The latter – characteristic things – must be discerned, else we will, at the best, lapse into lifeless traditionalism. For example, rather than seeing the detailed manner in which the prayer of the early church was answered (chapter 4) as a standard procedure, it is to be perceived as confirmation that the Lord does, in fact, empower His church for what they have been given to do. When they resort to Him in the hour of need, they will obtain mercy and find grace to help.

WHAT WE WILL SEE IN THIS TEXT

There are several kingdom principles that will be seen in this text. A listing of a few of them will assist us to be spiritually alert and able to perceive them.

- Those who have an understanding of Scripture are more qualified to give advice (verse 34).
- It is good to consider what we propose should be done (verse 35).
- A spiritual perception of current events can assist us in making sound judgment (verses 36-37).
- What men originate will come to an end (verse 38).
- What God initiates cannot be overthrown (verse 39a).
- Those who oppose God are actually fighting against Him (verse 39b).
- Suffering for Christ is associated with worthiness (verse 41).
- Joyful insight enables men to do the work God has assigned to them (verse 42).

THEN GAMALIEL STOOD UP

“ 5:34 Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in reputation among all the people, and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space.”

Care must be taken not to view this text as a mere record of history – i.e., the activities of men. God is present in the affairs of men, orchestrating things for His own glory. The Scriptures have considerable to say about this matter, and it is particularly relevant when it comes to issues relating to His salvation. We must never allow an academic approach to Scripture to rob us of this perspective.

- THE LORD IS GOVERNOR. “For the kingdom is the LORD'S: and He is the governor among the nations” (Psa 22:28).
- HE IS WORKING IN THE EARTH. “For God is my King of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth” (Psa 74:12).
- THE EARTH IS FILLED WITH HIS GLORY. “And one cried unto another, and said, Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory” (Isa 6:3).
- HE RAISES UP AND DEPOSES RULERS. “. . . Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his: and he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding” (Dan 2:20-21).

In bringing many sons to glory, it is essential that He be in absolute control of every circumstance. At no point does His salvation depend upon the whims of men, nor is it threatened by the most fierce of all adversaries.

HE GIVES AUTHORITY TO WHOMEVER HE WILLS. “This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men” (Dan 4:17).

- EVERYTHING IN THE EARTH IS HIS. “Thine, O LORD, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and in the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O LORD, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honour come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might; and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all” (1 Chron 29:11-12).
- EVERYTHING ALIVE HAS BEEN PRESERVED BY HIM. “Thou, even thou, art LORD alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou preservest them all; and the host of heaven worshippeth thee” (Neh 9:6).

• HE RULES BY HIS POWER WHILE BEHOLDING THE NATIONS. “He ruleth by his power for ever; his eyes behold the nations: let not the rebellious exalt themselves. Selah” (Psa 66:7).

• EVERYTHING IS NAKED AND OPEN BEFORE HIM. “Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do ” (Heb 4:13).

All of these matters are particularly involved in the finishing of the work of salvation by the Lord Jesus Christ. In bringing many sons to glory, it is essential that He be in absolute control of every circumstance. At no point does His salvation depend upon the whims of men, nor is it threatened by the most fierce of all adversaries. Whatever freedom men may be imagined to possess, they are not free to overturn the purpose of God, thwart the work of His servants, or obscure His great salvation. The only power they have is what God has given them – and God can withdraw that whenever He wills.

In the case before us, the Lord will use a respected man to bring a halt to the present harassment of the apostles. God did not use this method to protect Jesus when He was delivered up, for the purpose He was working forbade such an action.

A PHARISEE NAMED GAMALIEL

“Then stood there up one in the council, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law . . .” Other versions read, “The one of the council stood up, a Pharisee named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law .,” NKJV “But a Pharisee in the council named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law,” NRSV “But one of the Sanhedrin , a Pharisee named Gamaliel, a man of learning in the law ,” BBE “A Pharisee named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law . . . stood up in the Sanhedrin ,” CSV “But a certain man, a Pharisee, named Gamaliel, a teacher of the law . . . rose up in the council ,” DARBY “But a Pharisee named Gamaliel stood up . . . expert in Moses' Teachings ,” GWN “But one member, a Pharisee named Gamaliel, who was an expert in religious law ,” NLT “But one of their members , a Pharisee named Gamaliel (an expert on religious law),” LIVING and “But someone in the High Council having gotten up, a Pharisee, by name Gamaliel, a teacher of the Law.” ALT Gamaliel was not a visitor in this gathering, but was himself a member of the council, or Sanhedrin. He was also a Pharisee. Yet, he had not thoroughly adopted the views of this council, nor of the Pharisees . He was, in a sense, among the council, yet separate from it. He saw and understood more than the others.

His field of expertise was not human behavior, politics, or social trends. He was “a doctor of the law,” or “expert in the law of Moses.” The expression “doctor of the Law” comes from a compound Greek word – nomodida,skaloj (nom-o-did-ask-olos). The word means “teacher and interpreter of the law,” THAYER and “teacher of the law, interpreter of (the Mosaic system of) law,” FRIBERG

INTERPRETING THE LAW

A facet of one being an expert in the Law is its interpretation. That word, however, requires some further explanation. It does not refer to attaching a private meaning to the Scripture. In the words of Nehemiah, interpreting the Law is giving its “sense,” or “meaning” NIV (Neh 8:8). Strictly speaking, there is only one valid interpretation, or meaning, of Scripture. That meaning, when handled with wisdom, can be applied to a variety of circumstances. That was what was involved in Moses and other chosen men judging the people. It is said of them, “And they judged the people at all seasons: the hard causes they brought unto Moses, but every small matter they judged themselves” (Ex 18:26). Difficult matters were issues in which the proper answer was not obvious to the people. Such occasions required the judgment of someone who had a working knowledge of the Law, and knew how to associate it properly with the situation.

The Nature of Scripture

Scripture has a certain nature that must be discerned. It is not primarily a handbook of conduct. God has not given it to men only to tell them how to conduct their lives. Both the Person and purpose of God are inherent in Scripture. That is, it reflects who He is and what He is doing. Like certain traits of a master painter are found in all of his paintings, so the character of God is found in all of His works and words. He never speaks or works independently of His own character, nor expresses Himself in a manner that is not perfectly harmonious with who He is. His “eternal purpose” (Eph 3:11) is also reflected in all of His ways, words, and works. All of His expressions are in strict concert with the purpose. In some way they are always related to what God has purposed in Christ Jesus, even though it may not be apparent to finite minds.

Scripture contains a record of Divine expressions, particularly as taking place in this world, among men.

There are a few references to Divine activities that took place outside of the creation itself and worldly history.

- The status of Christ’s Person prior to Him coming into the world (John 1:1-2).
- A conflict between holy angels and the “prince of Persia” (Dan 10:13-20).
- Satan and His angels being cast out of heaven (2 Pet 2:4; Jude 1:6; Rev 12:7-9).
- A council between the Father and the Word regarding Him coming into the world (Psa 40:6-8; Heb 10:5-9).
- The reception of Jesus into heaven following His ascension (Dan 7:13-14; Mk 16:19).
- The enthronement of Jesus at the right hand of God (Heb 1:3; 10:12).

Even in these cases, however, they are all related to God’s working among men. In fact, their relevance is seen in that association.

One of the great weaknesses of our time is the general approach that is being taken by Christianity as a whole. Man himself has become the focal point in nearly all religion. His problems are perceived as the ultimate arena in which God is determined to be made known. The Bible is seen as a textbook for human conduct, and the church is perceived as something like a hospital for debilitated humanity.

Permit me to say it again: God’s Person and purpose are reflected in all of Scripture. Where some perception of this is not seen, it is not possible to handle the Scriptures correctly.

The Liability of Our Times

One of the great weaknesses of our time is the general approach that is being taken by Christianity as a whole. Man himself has become the focal point in nearly all religion. His problems are perceived as the ultimate arena in which God is determined to be made known. The Bible is seen as a textbook for human conduct, and the church is perceived as something like a hospital for debilitated humanity. But not one of these is true. The Bible is primarily a revelation of God, and the church has been established to be His dwelling place – the “house of God” (1 Tim 3:15) “the Temple of God” (1 Cor 3:16-17), and the “habitation of God” through the Spirit (Eph 2:22). If we approach religion with any other emphasis, we will be carried by the tides of distraction into a place where Satan is more free to work.

No person can handle the Word of God correctly whose vision is dominated by human considerations – whether it is in the area of needs or solutions. This observation will become more evident as we consider the counsel of Gamaliel. He did not see in Scripture a solution to an aggravating problem, but the presence of a Sovereign God and the invincibility of His purpose.

Doctor of the Law

This word translated “doctor of the law,” or “teacher of the Law,” NKJV is found three times in Scripture.

- SOME OPPONENTS OF JESUS. “Doctors of the Law.” It is first applied to some officials who, together with the Pharisees, came to see Jesus. The occasion was when Jesus healed the impotent man lowered from the roof to His feet. At that time, these experts in the Law challenged Jesus’ ability to forgive sins (Luke 5:17-21).

- A PERCEPTIBLE MAN. “A doctor of the Law.” In the text we are considering, it is applied to a single individual who excelled his peers in his understanding of the law (Acts 5:39).

- PRETENTIOUS TEACHERS. “Desiring to be teachers of the Law.” It is also used by Paul to describe those who had usurped the position of teacher – who possessed no real understanding of the Law at all (1 Tim 1:7).

Gamaliel was an expert in the Law of Moses. As will be seen in this text, his expertise was not merely that of knowing what the text said, but of being able to correlate it with both history and circumstance. In modern vernacular, he was able to read between the lines, seeing the significance of the Scriptural record. He could take statements concerning God, and relate them to events that were recorded in Scripture. Then, having made this correlation, he could reason upon a contemporary event with greater precision than others.

Other Experts

There are other Scriptural experts mentioned in Scripture. Those who could handle the Word of God with precision and power.

- SAMUEL. Samuel had an understanding of the ways of God, and could explain to the people “the manner of the kingdom,” even writing it down in a book (1 Sam 10:25).

- LEVITES. Certain Levites of Nehemiah’s day were able to give “the sense” of Scripture, and cause the people “to understand the reading” (Neh 8:8).

- LUKE. Luke received a “perfect understanding” of the Gospel “from the very first,” and was able to correlate it with Moses and the Prophets (Luke 1:3).

- APOLLOS. Apollos was a man described as “mighty in the Scriptures,” being “instructed in the way of the Lord” (Acts 18:24).

- THE TWELVE APOSTLES. The twelve Apostles were guided into all truth, having “the mystery of Christ” revealed to them (John 16:14; Eph 3:5).

- PAUL. Paul received unparalleled knowledge of “the mystery of Christ,” being able to expound it from the Scriptures (Eph 3:2-5).

- ELDERS. The Scriptures refer to diligent elders who “labor in the Word and in the doctrine” (teaching) (1 Tim 5:17).

- PREACHERS AND TEACHERS. Those who speak to others in the name of the Lord are admonished to give diligence to be men who handle the word of God correctly (2 Tim 2:15).

It appears that such men, though sorely needed, have never been very plentiful. In our text, among the Sanhedrin, a true expert in the Scriptures narrowed down to one person – Gamaliel. As will be seen, this expertness was not limited to familiarity with the text of Scripture itself. That quality was, indeed, resident, for no person can be an expert in something with which he is not acquainted.

The Contemporary Rarity of This Quality

I have observed over the years how exceedingly rare it is to find a preacher or teacher who is expert in Scripture. For the most part, this is the weakness of many Christian leaders. They often have more understanding in human sciences than in the Word of God. I have personally spoken with many preachers and teachers who readily acknowledged their weakness in Scriptural knowledge. If you have ever attended a preachers meeting, or a gathering of Christian leaders, you have no doubt also found this to be the case.

Well known Christian conventions rarely feature speakers who are expert in Scripture, and can handle the Word of God to the profit of the hearers. Modern views of religious experts are those who can present a compendium of the comments men have made about Scripture. However, few of them have a personal understanding to present.

If someone was to ask you who in our time was an expert in Scripture, who would come to your mind? If you have trafficked among truly godly people, you may be able to identify a few. The point I am making, is that such men are not plentiful – and most people know that. That circumstance might be somewhat acceptable during the infant-days of the church. Even then, however, its leaders could not be spiritual toddlers, unable to handle the Word of God. The apostles were not “unskillful in the word of righteousness” (Heb 5:13). That is because they had been with Jesus, and were filled with the Holy Spirit. What would lead anyone to imagine that as the church advanced through time it was God’s will for its leaders to be ignorant and unlearned in His ways and Word? Such a condition is completely unacceptable in any time. If the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation (Rom 1:16), and the Scriptures are the means through which men are made “thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17), exactly where can a place made for a leader who cannot handle Scripture? If “patience and comfort” are administered through the Scriptures (Rom 15:4), how can a person who lacks expertise in them be propelled into a position of leadership? If what God has revealed is made known “by the Scriptures” (Rom 16:26), and if the church has been put upon “the foundation of the apostles and prophets” (Eph 2:20), what kind of religious system produces leaders who are not experts in the Scriptures?

What Is Known of Gamaliel?

If the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation (Rom 1:16), and the Scriptures are the means through which men are made “thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17), exactly where can a place made for a leader who cannot handle Scripture?

We know very little of this man. The Scriptures do not have much to say about him, and even history is largely silent about him. What is here said of him is all we need to know. What we know from Scripture is as follows – taken from only two verses.

- He was a member of the Jewish council, or Sanhedrin (Acts 5:34).
- He was a Pharisee (Acts 5:34).
- He was an expert in the Law (Acts 5:34).
- He was held in high regard by the people (Acts 5:34).
- He tutored Paul in “the perfect manner of the Law” (Acts 22:3).

One historical commentator says of him, “The Jews celebrated him as ‘the glory of the law,’ the first designated Rabban ‘our master.’ Son of rabbi Simeon, and grandson of Hillel; president of the Sanhedrin under Tiberius, Caligula, and Claudius; he died 18 years before the fall of Jerusalem.” LIGHTFOOT COMMENTARY, FAUSSET, EASTON, AND SMITH BIBLE DICTIONARIES It is also said of him, “Ecclesiastical tradition makes him become a Christian, and be baptized by Peter and Paul (Phot. Cod. 171, page 199), together with his son Gamaliel, and with Nicodemus; and the Clementine Recognitions (1:65) state that he was secretly a Christian at this time.” MCCLINTOK & STRONG’S All commentators concede that these statements are exceedingly difficult to confirm, and therefore give no weight to them. They should not be merged with what the Spirit has said about Gamaliel.

HAD IN REPUTATION

“ . . . had in reputation among all the people, . . .” Other versions read, “ held in respect ,” NKJB “respected,” NIV “who was honored ,” NIV “of whom all people had a high opinion ,” BBE “ highly respected ,” GWN “had in auctorite,” TNT “ very popular ,” LIVING “highly esteemed ,” AMPLIFIED “held in great respect ,” AMPLIFIED and “ honorable .” ALT

Notice the caliber of man that was held in reputation – “a teacher of the law.” NKJV This was not a view of him that was held only by the Sanhedrin, but was how “all the people” considered him. The words “had in reputation” mean that Gamaliel was perceived as “valuable, precious, costly, of great value, held in high honor, and respected.” GINGRICH Notwithstanding, a man like Gamaliel would certainly not be featured at any of the Christian conventions with which I am familiar. Imagine, if you can, a man being held in high regard within the church because of his expertise in Scripture. Such a view is hardly apparent at all, if, indeed, it can be proved to even exist. “The people” of our time have vaulted the organizers, entertainers, church builders, and motivators to places of prominence.

In the first part of 2007, a godly man in this area went to be with the Lord. For over sixty years he had been prominent among those who had an appetite for the Word of God. At his funeral, the school in which he had played a prominent place for several decades spoke kindly of him. Yet, even though he had a prodigious mind, and was very articulate and robust when he was over ninety years old, he was retired from the scholastic community over twenty years earlier. The newer students did not hold him in high regard, and did not want to take his classes. Their teachers, whoever they were, had not taught them to place a high value on such people. The student and faculty administration did not hold him in high regard, for they did not insist that those coming to a Christian college sit under his teaching. Local churches rarely asked him to preach. For the most part, he was not asked to speak at the brotherhood conventions, or featured at key gatherings. In other words, he was not “had in reputation.”

He did not speak as a mere scholar, or one that had an academic familiarity with the Law. Rather, he spoke as one who knew the intent of the Law, having some understanding of its reflection of a holy God.

My own father, also now with the Lord, was also in that category. Even though he was an astute teacher of teachers, he was consistently asked to take a back seat behind the promoters, motivators, and scholastic dupes.

Of course, there have been numerous experts in Scripture who have also been pushed to the side in preference for the worldly-wise. This is not at all strange in the current church scene.

The point to be seen here is that, with all of their wretchedness, Israel was still, on this particular point, in better shape than the church of our day. It was not a mere nucleus of scholars that held Gamaliel in high regard, but “all of the people.”

COMMANDED TO PUT THE APOSTLES FORTH

“ . . . and commanded to put the apostles forth a little space.” Other versions read, “commanded them to put the apostles outside for a little while,” NKJV “gave orders to put the men outside for a short time ,” NASB “ ordered that the men should be put outside for a little while,” NIV “ made a suggestion for the men to be put outside for a little time,” BBE “ he directed them to put the legates aside for a short time,” MRD “and asked to have the men taken outside for a time ,” NJB “and ordered that the men be sent outside the council chamber for a while,” NLT “requested that the apostles be sent outside the Council chamber while he talked ,” LIVING “ordered that the apostles be taken outside for a little while,” AMPLIFIED and “ gave orders for the apostles to be taken outside for a few minutes.” PHILLIPS

The word “commanded” is translated from a Greek word meaning, “to command, order,” THAYER “direct,” FRIBERG “to state with force and/or authority what others must do - 'to order, to command,” LOUW-NIDA “to state with force and/or authority what others must do - 'to order, to command,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “urge.” GINGRICH

Being wise, Gamaliel spoke with recognizable authority: i.e., he directed the people what they ought to do, commanding them with all the force of moral authority. As they proceeded with the hearing, he deemed it best to have the apostles removed from the place of judgment. It appears to me that there was a certain degree of shame associated with what they were doing, and Gamaliel knew it. He did not speak as a mere scholar, or one that had an academic familiarity with the Law. Rather, he spoke as one who knew the intent of the Law, having some understanding of its reflection of a holy God. He was no doubt aware of the many times God had upbraided Israel for lacking justice in their social affairs.

Once the prophet Isaiah thundered, “ None calleth for justice , nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity . . . And judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off : for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey: and the LORD saw it, and it displeased Him that there was no judgment” (Isa 59:4, 14-15). Jeremiah also addressed the matter of the lack of justice: “They are waxen fat, they shine: yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked: they judge not the cause , the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge” (Jer 5:28). Micah cried out as well: “Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity ” (Micah 3:9). Habakkuk also lifted up his voice, “Therefore the law is slacked, and judgment doth never go forth : for the wicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore wrong judgment proceedeth” (Hab 1:4).

Gamaliel knew well that the haste with which this council was proceeding was not good, and therefore he speaks out.

Some might wonder why he did not speak up at the trial of Christ. Speaking from the standpoint of legal adjudication, the council had proceeded in a strictly illegal manner. However, in the death of Jesus, the “determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God” was being carried out (Acts 2:23). Therefore Gamaliel, by Divine intent, was not permitted to speak at that time. Prior to this, when Jesus began to enter into the final phase of His ministry, Nicodemus, himself a Pharisee, had raised a question about the way in which the leaders were judging Him. His efforts were summarily ignored. “Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he

The wicked may prove to be a formidable challenge to us, but they are no challenge at all to the exalted Christ. He can use them, change them, or remove them according to His own will. He has that power. He can “make” a righteous man’s enemies be at peace with him.

doeth? They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet. And every man went unto his own house” (John 7:53).

Now, however, we have a different case before us. The apostles’ work has not yet been completed, and therefore God has devised means for them to continue. As it is written, “For we must needs die, and are as water spilled on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; neither doth God respect any person: yet doth He devise means, that His banished be not expelled from Him ” (2 Sam 14:14). We are beholding the enthroned Savior, turning the hearts of men, and governing their affairs in the interest of His church. There is no circumstance or personality over which Jesus does not have absolute power. Personalities that are ultimately subject to Him include holy angels, evil angels, Satan, demons, wicked spirits, rulers, common people, evil men, and godly men. So far as men are concerned, they all fall into one of two categories: vessels that are “to honor,” and vessels that are “to dishonor.” From the higher vantage point of view, all of them are in Christ’s house – His “great house” (2 Tim 2:20). They are like “good” and “bad” fish in the net of His Kingdom (Matt 13:47-48) – like “wheat” and “tares” in “ His field” (Matt 13:24-25).

The wicked may prove to be a formidable challenge to us, but they are no challenge at all to the exalted Christ. He can use them, change them, or remove them according to His own will. He has that power. He can “make” a righteous man’s enemies be at peace with him (Prov 16:7). He can stir up an adversary against a king He Himself has put in place and endued with unparalleled wisdom (1 Kgs 11:14,23).

Thus, the exalted Christ will work in this situation, confirming that it is in His control. Ultimately, it is His purpose that will be served.

Private, Yet Known

Take note that this is private council, and yet it is recorded in Scripture! This fulfils a word written by Solomon. “Curse not the king, no not in thy thought; and curse not the rich in thy bedchamber: for a bird of the air shall carry the voice, and that which hath wings shall tell the matter ” (Eccl 10:20).

Jesus once said, “Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness shall be heard in the light; and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets shall be proclaimed upon the housetops” (Luke 12:3). He was teaching men to live in view of the imminence of the day of judgement, when all will be known.

All of this is a picture of that coming day of judgment when not only the words and deeds of all men will be made known, but “the counsels of the heart” as well (1 Cor 4:5). Men must conduct their lives with these things in mind. There are no secrets (Heb 4:13).

TAKE HEED WHAT YOU INTEND TO DO

“ 35 And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.”

We will now see why Gamaliel was held in such high regard. His words will be “fitly spoken” (Prov 25:11) and spoken in “due season” (Prov 15:23). That is a facet of wisdom that cannot be learned by rote. Men may be taught the answer to various questions, but they cannot be taught to answer in proper words and at appropriate times. That kind of answer is the result of discernment, not instruction.

TAKE HEED TO YOURSELVES

“And said unto them, Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves . . .” Other versions read, “ take care,” NASB “ consider carefully ,” NIV “ be careful ,” CSB “pay close attention to,” NET “be very careful ,” PHILLIPS and “be watching yourselves .” ALT

The word translated “take heed” is very precise. Its lexical meaning is “to bring to, bring near – like bringing a ship to land.” In its application it is used to denote “turning the mind to, attending to, be attentive . . . to attend to oneself; i.e. to give heed to oneself,” THAYER “to hold one’s mind to someone or something, give heed to, pay attention to,” FRIBERG “To be alert to, to be on guard against,” LOUW-NIDA “to bring a ship near a place, bring it to port . . . to turn one’s mind to a thing,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “to be concerned about, care for, pay attention to.” GINGRICH

The need to “take heed to yourselves” is like getting a boat back where it belongs after it has been set adrift. Such a boat is not anchored, and is at the behest of the stormy sea. Being tossed about, it is in danger of being dashed to pieces.

So it is when men are pushed out upon the treacherous sea of life without being solidly anchored. Their corrupt emotions thrash them about like stormy waves toss a ship that is drifting.

Gamaliel is calling the Sanhedrin back to the shore of sobriety – summoning them to be anchored in the port of sound thought instead of being carried among by their soulish nature.

It ought to be noted that sin dulls the powers of perception and reason, causing men to move forward without proper consideration or honest assessment. Sin compels men to focus on the wrong thing, and forget about the main thing. At the time sin is dominating them, there is no thought of God, His manners, or the brevity of life. At such a time men are, in a very real sense, insane – without thoughtful moorings. In such a case, men are moved to act in flagrant contradiction of the Divine imagery they bear.

In the kind of society in which we find ourselves, there is every conceivable disadvantage. Basically, it is a hedonistic society, absorbed with all manner of pleasure and enjoyment. Leisure is exalted as a time when men can enjoy themselves, while work and productivity are seen as burdensome. We are not surprised to see the world taking hold of this concept. However, when it creeps into the church, we have a most serious circumstance on our hands. When the affairs of the church are tailored to make them enjoyable to the flesh, men have caved in to the times.

The Jewish council had vigorously opposed the apostles because they did not like what they were doing. Their manner and their message chafed against their flesh. Their religion was one of self-satisfaction, with little or no regard at all for the pleasure of the Lord.

There comes a time when men must stop thinking about pleasure and begin thinking about what is right: a time when self must be dethroned, and the Lord must be seen as the preeminent One to please. How do ones deeds fit into the truth – into the way things really are? That is what Gamaliel is calling upon the council to ponder – to consider themselves in view of what is good and right in the sight of God. To think in terms of who God is and what he has determined.

WHAT YE INTEND TO DO

“ . . . what ye intend to do as touching these men.” Other versions read, “what you propose to do with these men,” NASB “What you intend to do to these men,” NIV “what you do with these men,” RSV “as touching these men, what ye are about to do,” ASV “what ye do about these men,” BBE “what you are about to do with these men,” ESV “what you are planning to do to these men,” NLT “in regard to what you propose to do concerning these men,” AMPLIFIED and “what action you intend to take against these,” PHILLIPS

In order for man’s intentions to be valid, they must integrate with God’s Person and purpose. If they are pointed in any other direction, they are vain.

It is imperative that men be encouraged to consider what they “intend” – that is, what they have in their minds, and what they are thinking about. What a person intends is what they are working to cause to come to pass. It is an objective they are intent upon fulfilling, a goal they are determined to reach. In the text before us, the intention of the Sanhedrin was to kill the apostles. They had no fleshly reason to question their ability to do this. After all, they had delivered Jesus to death – and He was the one of whom the apostles were preaching. Surely they would not prove to be more formidable than their Master! – at least that is how they were thinking. When the apostles had said they were a witness to the facts concerning Jesus, as well as the Holy Spirit whom God gives to those who obey Him, this group of men “took counsel to slay them” (verse 33). In fact, that was the reason for convening the very gathering Gamaliel is now addressing.

He calls upon them to ponder what they have purposed for these men – to kill them. They obviously felt they were thoroughly capable of doing this, thereby ridding themselves of their aggravating presence. However, they had not brought God and His purposes into their thinking. Nor, indeed, had they pondered the inability of men to, of themselves, carry out their own purposes.

Because truth can always be lived out in human experience, Gamaliel will draw their attention to some things that had recently taken place – things they had apparently passed over.

THINK ABOUT WHAT HAS HAPPENED RECENTLY

“ 36 For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought. 37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.”

The Lord has made clear how pride in created beings touches Him. He is said to “hate” a “proud look.” Those dominated by pride “will not seek after God.” In a definition of “the fear of the Lord,” Solomon says that it includes the hatred of pride. When pride comes, “then cometh shame.”

When men are fundamentally self-centered, they can learn nothing from the things that are taking place in their presence. This is a decided disadvantage, for if God is working salvation in the midst of the earth (Psa 74:12), and is the Governor among the nations (Psa 22:28), then there is something to be learned from what is taking place in this realm. This circumstance is also buttressed by several other considerations. Here are a few of them.

- Promotion comes from the Lord. He is the Judge who puts down one and raises up another (Psa 75:6-7).
- Kingdoms are assigned leaders according to God’s will (Dan 4:17).
- There is no such thing as a calamity that is not brought by God (Amos 3:6).
- In natural calamities, God has His own way (Nah 1:3).

Fundamental to a sound theology is the fact that God Himself is imminent in all of creation, including the machinations and activities of all humanity. He is not an absent God, but beholds all men, intervening in their affairs at will, and maintaining ultimate control over them. Gamaliel will cite two examples of Divine management.

THEUDAS

“For before these days rose up Theudas, boasting himself to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought.”

Very little is known of this man. Even history is largely silent concerning him. However, we need nothing more than the testimony of Gamaliel to confirm the reality of Theudas – particularly since his testimony is confirmed by the Holy Spirit including it in the Scriptures. The lessons to be learned from this individual do not require a lengthy dissertation about his life. The point that is being made only requires the words that are provided concerning him.

Theudas Boasted

Other versions read, “ claiming to be somebody,” NKJV “ giving himself out to be somebody,” RSV “who said he was someone important,” BBE “ alleging himself to be somebody,” DARBY “ affirming himself to be somebody,” DOUAY “ He claimed that he was important,” GWN “and said of himself, that he was some great one,” MRD “who pretended to be someone great,” NLT “ professing to be a person of importance,” WEYMOUTH “ asserting himself to be a person of importance,” AMPLIFIED and “ made himself conspicuous by claiming to be someone or other.” PHILLIPS

Boasting of this sort is evidence of the presence of the tempter. It was Satan himself who first said, “ I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the most High” (Isa 14:14). He pushed himself forward – even aspiring to be “like the most High.” Pride was Satan’s besetting sin, even though he once occupied a lofty position. It is said of him, “Thine heart was lifted up because of thy beauty, thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness: I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee” (Ezek 28:17). Although he occupied a high position and was given much glory, he was not satisfied, but aspired to exalt himself to the highest position. This is Satan’s nature, and he promotes this attitude among the sons of men.

The Lord has made clear how pride in created beings touches Him. He is said to “hate” a “proud look” (Prov 6:16). Those dominated by pride “will not seek after God” (Psa 10:4). In a definition of “the fear of the Lord,” Solomon says that it includes the hatred of pride (Prov 8:13). When pride comes, “then cometh shame” (Prov 11:2). Solemnly the Scriptures affirm, “Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall” (Prov 16:18), and “a man’s pride shall bring him low” (Prov 29:23). Pride is the characteristic that causes a person to be “lifted up” in his own estimation, and thus “fall into the condemnation of the devil” who is the author of that trait (1 Tim 3:6).

Theudas “boasted himself to be somebody.” In this regard, he was like Simon the sorcery, a man from Samaria who is described as “giving out that he himself was some great one” (Acts 8:9). These are, in a way, like “false Christs” (Matt 24:24), professing to have the answers to the human dilemma. Peter identified this kind of person as those who promise men “liberty,” yet are themselves “servants of corruption” (2 Pet 2:18-19). In order to do this, they must speak much about themselves and what they have professedly discovered, or been given to see. This, of course, in stark contradiction of the manner in which the servants of God conduct themselves.

Four Hundred Men Joined Themselves to Him

Other versions read, “ joined up with him,” NASB “ rallied to him,” NIV “ gave their support,” BBE “to whom resorted,” GENEVA “ went after him,” MRD “ collected,” NJB “to whom resorted,” PNT “espoused his cause,” WILLIAMS “ allied themselves,” AMPLIFIED and “a following.” PHILLIPS

As men who have not received the love of the truth are prone to do, a number of men were convinced of the validity of Theudas’ cause, and joined up with him. They were deceived by his boasting, being devoid of the wisdom that can distinguish between truth and the lie. By nature, men do not possess the ability to properly evaluate self-professed leaders.

There is no historical writings that provide further information about this imposter. Such information is not required, for both himself and his cause failed. This is the precise point that Gamaliel is making – the failure of ill-advised messengers and causes.

He Was Slain, and They Were Scattered

Other versions read, “He was slain, and all who obeyed him were scattered and came to nothing,” NKJV “And he was slain; and all who followed him were dispersed and came to nothing,” NASB “He was killed, all his followers were dispersed, and it all came to nothing,” NIV “but he was killed, and all who followed him were dispersed and disappeared,” NRSV “he was put to death, and his band was broken up and came to nothing,” BBE “He was killed, and all his followers were scattered. The whole movement was a failure,” GWN “but he was killed, and all those who were loyal to him were disbanded and came to nothing,” NAB “but when he was killed, all his followers scattered and that was the end of them,” NJB “but he was killed, and his followers were harmlessly dispersed,” LIVING “but he was killed. And all of the men who followed him were scattered. They were never able to do anything,” IE He was killed, and all his followers were dispersed and annihilated,” WEYMOUTH “but he was slain and all his followers were dispersed and as a party annihilated,” WILLIAMS and “but he was killed and all who had listened to and adhered to him were scattered and brought to nothing.” AMPLIFIED

The validity of something can be partially determined by its longevity – its ability to remain in place for some time. That this is true is confirmed by the Word of the Lord, which announces the appointed frustration of all merely human objectives.

- “He disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise” (Job 5:12).
- “The LORD bringeth the counsel of the heathen to nought: He maketh the devices of the people of none effect” (Psa 33:10).
- “For the arms of the wicked shall be broken: but the LORD upholdeth the righteous” (Psa 37:17).
- “There is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD” (Prov 21:30).

I say this is incidental information, for it really adds nothing to the text. The point that is being made is not that Judas appeared, but that he, together with his cause and followers disappeared. That makes their objectives and the history of them meaningless.

“That frustrateth the tokens of the liars, and maketh diviners mad; that turneth wise men backward, and maketh their knowledge foolish” (Isa 44:25).

It should not surprise us, therefore, that the cause of Theudas was dashed upon the rocks of futility.

JUDAS OF GALILEE

“ 37 After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the taxing, and drew away much people after him: he also perished; and all, even as many as obeyed him, were dispersed.”

Judas of Galilee

Other versions read, “After this man, Judas of Galilee rose up in the days of the census,” NKJV “After him, Judas the Galilean appeared in the days of the census,” NIV “After this man, there was Judas of Galilee, at the time of the numbering,” BBE “After this man, rose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the enrolling,” DOUAY “After this man, arose up Judas of Galilee, in the days of the tribute,” GENEVA “After him, at the time of the taxation, there was Judas of Galilee,” LIVING and “And after this one rose up Judas the Galilean, [who led an uprising] during the time of the census.” AMPLIFIED

You may recall that Jesus was also born during a time of taxation, or census (Luke 2:1-5).

The Jewish historian Josephus provides some incidental information about this man. "A person surnamed " the Galiloean " (Acts 5:37), so called also by Josephus (Ant . 18, 1, 6; 20, 5, 2; War , 2, 8, 1), and likewise " the Gaulonite " (Ant. 18, 1, 1). He was born at Gamala, a fortified city on the Sea of Galilee, in Lower Gaulonitis; and after the deposition of Archelaus, during the thirty-seventh year after the battle of Actium (Josephus, Ant. 18, 2, 1), i.e. A.D. 6, he excited a violent insurrection among the Jews, in concert with a well known Pharisee named Sadok, against the Roman government exercised by the procurator Coponius, on occasion of a census levied by the emperor Augustus, asserting the popular doctrine that the Jews ought to acknowledge no dominion but that of God. He was destroyed, and his followers scattered by Cyrenius, then proconsul of Syria and Judaea. We also learn from Josephus that the scattered remnant of the party of Judas continued after his destruction to work on still in secret, and labored to maintain his free spirit and reckless principles among the people (Josephus, War, 2 , 17, 7-19)."

I say this is incidental information, for it really adds nothing to the text. The point that is being made is not that Judas appeared, but that he, together with his cause and followers disappeared. That makes their objectives and the history of them meaningless.

Drew Away Much People

Other versions read, "drew away many people after him," NKJV "led a band of people in revolt ." NIV "got people to follow him," NRSV "some of the people went after him ," BBE "attracted a following ," CSB "seduced much people after him," MRD "incited people to follow him," NET "attracted crowds of supporters," NJB "drew away some people as disciples ," LIVING "He also led a group of followers away ," IE "influenced people to desert and follow him," WILLIAMS "drew away a popular following after him," AMPLIFIED and "enticed many of the people to follow him." PHILLIPS

Rather, this is a statement of the real case, and whether or not men acknowledge it or yield to it has nothing whatever to do with it. How many Pharaohs, Nebuchadnezzars Belchazzars, Herod's, Pilates, etc. does it take to convince men of this?

Like all false leaders and prophets, this man beguiled "unstable souls" (2 Pet 2:14). He led them to believe that the affairs of this world are really governed by people, and that if they band together they can change the direction of history. Our society is also plagued by such leaders, and they continue to seduce the people into thinking they can, of themselves, change the landscape of history.

That whole approach, even though it may have a pleasant sound to it, it fraught with error. It assumes the world and its governments are actually controlled by men. However, we are categorically told this is not the case. "The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein" (Psa 24:1). This is not merely a technical statement, to be followed by some thought like this: "And all men should acknowledge this and bow the knee to the Lord!" Rather, this is a statement of the real case, and whether or not men acknowledge it or yield to it has nothing whatever to do with it. How many Pharaohs, Nebuchadnezzars Belchazzars, Herod's, Pilates, etc. does it take to convince men of this?

He Also Perished

Other versions read, "he too perished, and all those who followed him were scattered," NASB "He too was killed, and all his followers were scattered," NIV "he was put to death, and all his supporters were put to flight ," BBE "he also perished; and all, even as many as consented to him, were dispersed ," DOUAY "He also perished: and all even as many as harkened to him are scattered a brood,” TNT “and that one perished, and all, as many as were obeying him , were scattered,” YLT “but he was destroyed and all his followers were scattered,” IE “he also perished and all his adherents were scattered,” AMPLIFIED and “But he too died and his whole following melted away .” PHILLIPS

The labors of this Judas and his followers were also total vanity. Like the world around which they were centered, they “passed away,” leaving nothing but an unpleasant memory.

During the last century there have been some notable examples of human efforts that were vain. These include nations like Nazi Germany and Communist Russia. There have been religious movements that have been crushed openly: David Koresh and the Davidians, and Jim Jones and the People’s Temple. Other movements slated for ultimate demise include Joseph Smith and the Mormons, Reverend Moon and the Unification Church, and Ron Hubbard and his Scientology.

Many others could be named, but this will suffice to confirm that the same diversions are occurring in our time that did during the time of our text. They will be no more successful than the causes of Theudas and Judas the Galilean! That is because of nature everything that is driven by human initiative alone. Even Gamaliel saw that fact.

LET THESE MEN ALONE

“ 38 And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.”

Now Gamaliel draws some conclusions concerning the facts he has just related. He will filter those facts through the word of God, which has made known the character of both the works of man and of God. This ability presumes a working knowledge of God’s word.

REFRAIN FROM THESE MEN

“And now I say unto you, Refrain from these men, and let them alone . . .” Other versions read, “ keep away from these men and let them alone,” NKJV “in this present case, stay away from these men and let them alone,” NIV “Leave these men alone! Let them go!” NIV “ Do nothing to these men, but let them be,” BBE “ Withdraw from these men and let them alone,” DARBY “We should keep away from these men for now,” GWN “ Desist from these men, and let them lone,” MRD “have nothing to do with these men, and let them go ,” NAB “ hold aloof from these men and leave them alone,” WEYMOUTH “ stand off (withdraw) from these men and let them alone,” AMPLIFIED “let these men alone; leave them to themselves .” PHILLIPS and “draw away from these men and permit them .” LITV

The counsel bears a faint resemblance to the word of Pilate’s wife to him concerning Jesus: “Have thou nothing to do with that just Man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of Him” (Matt 27:19). With Pilate’s wife, the counsel was driven by the disconcerting effects of a dream. With Gamaliel, it was his perception of the working of God among men. In both cases, however, it was clear that it is dangerous to be aggressive against a person sent by God.

Now, Gamaliel will reason with them concerning this counsel, placing before them two incontrovertible facts. Both of them are based upon the revelations of both God and man that were given through the Law and the prophets. This is not a mere historical analysis, and must not be viewed in that manner. The fact that the statements are made by Gamaliel confirms that they were driven by an understanding of the Law of God rather than expertise in the manners of men. The second part of his counsel also confirms this is the case.

IF THIS COUNSEL OR WORK BE OF MEN

“ . . . for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to nought.” Other versions read, “for if this plan or this work is of men, it will come to nothing,” NKJV “if this plan or action should be of men, it will be overthrown,” NASB “if their purpose or activity is of human origin , it will fail,” NIV “for if this teaching or this work is of men , it will come to nothing,” BBE “for if this counsel or this work have its origin from men, it will be destroyed ,” DARBY “if this plan or this undertaking is of man, it will fail,” ESV “I can guarantee that if the plan they put into action is of human origin, it will fail,” GWN “For if this device and this work originate from men , they will dissolve and come to nothing,” MRD “For if this endeavor or this activity is of human origin, it will destroy itself ,” NAB “if this plan or this undertaking originates with people , it will come to nothing,” NET “If this enterprise, this movement of theirs , is of human origin it will break up of its own accord ,” NJB “If they are planning and doing these things merely on their own , it will soon be overthrown,” NLT “If what they teach and do is merely on their own, it will soon be overthrown,” LIVING “for if this scheme or work is of human origin, it will come to nothing,” WEYMOUTH “if this program or movement has its origin in men, it will go to pieces ,” WILLIAMS “if this doctrine or purpose or undertaking or movement is of human origin, it will fail (be overthrown and come to nothing),” AMPLIFIED and “if this teaching or movement is merely human it will collapse of its own accord .” PHILLIPS

“This Counsel”

Gamaliel perceives a kind of design in what the apostles are saying and doing. They are not merely engaging in emotional outbursts or acting irrationally. He refers to a “counsel,” KJV “plan,” NASB “purpose,” NIV “undertaking,” ESV “endeavor,” NAB “movement,” NJB “planning,” NLT “scheme,” WEYMOUTH and “program.” WILLIAMS

The Greek words translated “this counsel” are h` boulh. (ay bou-lay). The first word is a definite article: that is, it points to something specific; i.e. “THIS counsel,” or a specific and particular counsel. The word “counsel” comes from the next word which means, “purpose,” THAYER “a decision, deliberation . . . resolve, decision, purpose, plan,” FRIBERG “intention,” UBS “that which has been purposed and planned,” LOUW-NIDA “will, determination . . . advice, plan, design,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “resolution, decision.” GINGRICH

It was apparent to Gamaliel that there was a motive in what the apostles were doing. They were being driven by a purpose, or a cause – like Theudas and Judas had causes they had espoused, and purposes they intended to fulfill. Their plans called for obedience from the people in order that their objectives might be met. Now he perceives an intelligent design in what the apostles are doing – some kind of purpose that is being executed. He does not have a clear indication of its source, but he knows it is there.

Much of what parades itself under the banner of Christianity cannot be traced to a clear and intelligent objective . One often wonders precisely what the religious merchants are trying to do. They affirm they are trying to help the people, but that is not clear enough. I suppose that Theudas and Judas also represented themselves as doing something that would advantage the people. Otherwise, they could not have garnered a following.

There are certain causes that are being espoused by Christian leaders. They cover a range of things. Happy marriages, financial success, good health, making the world a better place to live, reaching the youth, relieving the poor, and a host of other things. First, let it be clear that no such objectives are ever one time stated in the Word of God. Nothing of this gender is ever held out as the aim for Christ coming into the world. In fact He once said, “Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword” (Matt 10:34). And again, “Suppose ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division” (Luke 12:51). As noble as making the world a better place to live may sound, whether on an individual or collective level, that is not why Jesus came. God can give a nation peace, cause their enemies to be at peace with them, and cause them to prosper – and do so without Jesus Christ, redemption, or the hope of glory. The people do not require the Holy Spirit for these things to happen, nor do they need to have their names written in heaven. We know this is the case, because all of them happened to certain people before Jesus came into the world. No person of sound mind is against such things, or will declare them to be wrong. But those who associate them with the “eternal purpose” of God could not possibly be more wrong.

The Source Is the Issue

Being an expert in the Law, Gamaliel knows that the source of the objective is the critical issue. He will narrow it down to two sources: man or God; human or Divine.

His statement concerning the purposes of men – all of them – is startling to the spiritually lethargic soul. If it is “of men, it WILL come to nought,” or “be overthrown.” NASB There is not the slightest chance that this will not happen! In his record, Luke does not give an explanation for the statement, or make some modification to it. This further confirms that the statement was correct. With care, when required, the Spirit alerts us to why and what men said. For example, when Caiaphas said, “Nor consider that it is expedient for us, that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.” the Spirit added, “And this spake he not of himself: but being high priest that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation” (John 11:50-51). On the mount of transfiguration, when Peter said, “And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias,” the Spirit added, “For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid ”” (Mark 9:5-6).

However, no such editorial remark is here provided by the Spirit. The statement is true, and can be fully supported by the Scripture.

The point is that if something is of human origin, the seeds of corruption are within it. This is why preaching cannot be flavored with human wisdom. It will cause the message to fail. It is precisely why Jesus said, “the flesh profiteth nothing” (John 6:63). As soon as the thoughts and purposes of men make their way into their doctrine, it at once is determined that it will collapse. It cannot stand. The seeming nobility of the purpose is not the point, but its origin.

The Example of the early Church

The early church was keenly aware of these things. On one occasion, in their aggressiveness to preach the Gospel, they had saturated the area of “throughout Phygia and the region of Galatia” with the Gospel. They then were “forbidden by the Holy Spirit to preach the word in Asia.” After they had come to Mysia, they determined to “go into Bythynia: but the Spirit suffered them not,” or “did not permit them” NKJV to do so (Acts 16:6-7).

Being sensitive to the Lord, and having some understanding of His ways, these brethren did not attempt to work around these imposed restraints. They were responsive enough to the Spirit that they did not press the issue beyond the point where they discerned His inhibition. While they were waiting, Paul had a vision in the night in which he saw a man of Macedonia standing and crying out, “Come over into Macedonia and help us!” As the brethren “immediately” considered the vision, they “endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering [‘concluding’ NKJV] that the Lord had called us for to preach the gospel unto them” (Acts 16:10). Their conduct confirms that they also knew the truth Gamaliel had articulated: “if this counsel or this work be of men, it WILL come to nought” (Acts 5:38).

It WILL Come to Nothing!

This is a failure that is imposed by God, and that imposition can in no way be neutralized. If the plans are being made by Saul of Tarsus, the Lord will bring them to an instant and grinding halt by appearing to Him and changing him. If it is wicked Herod, plotting to kill the servants of God because it pleased Christ's enemies, he will simply be struck dead.

Because the intelligence and aptitude of men are currently overstated, it is necessary to confirm this statement. The affirmation has been made that if the source of a cause is men, the cause will fail , and there is no way to avoid that failure. It is not simply that the men do not have enough strength to bring it to pass – although that is true. This is a failure that is imposed by God, and that imposition can in no way be neutralized. If the plans are being made by Saul of Tarsus, the Lord will bring them to an instant and grinding halt by appearing to Him and changing him (Acts 9:3-6). If it is wicked Herod, plotting to kill the servants of God because it pleased Christ's enemies, he will simply be struck dead (Acts 12:23).

• DAVID. On one occasion, when Absalom, David's wayward son, was seeking to kill him and usurp the kingdom, some excellent counsel was given to him by Ahithophel, who had aligned himself with Absalom. Strategically Ahithophel's counsel was superb. We are told that all of his counseling was of a most excellent order. It was described as counsel that was "as if a man had inquired at the oracle of God" (2 Sam 16:23). When word of this counsel reached the ears of David, He prayed, "O LORD, I pray thee, turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness" (2 Sam 15:31). Although Ahithophel's counsel was excellent, a certain man named Hushai, told Absalom, "The counsel that Ahithophel hath given thee is not good at this time" (2 Sam 17:7). Absalom chose to believe him, and reject Ahithophel's counsel. The explanation for his unreasonable response is described in these words: "For the LORD had appointed to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel , to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom" (2 Sam 17:14).

• NEHEMIAH. In Nehemiah's day, the enemies outnumbered the Jewish builders. Their "counsel" was to overthrow the work. According to appearance, it looked like they were well able to do it. However, as time progressed, God Himself threw their counsel down to the ground. It is written, "And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God had brought their counsel to nought , that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work" (Neh 4:15).

• SOLOMON. Solomon stated the impossibility of human counsel offsetting Divine counsel. "There is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD " (Prov 21:30). And again, "Except the LORD build the house, they labor in vain that build it : except the LORD keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain" (Psa 127:1).

When it comes to the work of the Lord, whatever they put their hand to, must have its beginning with God. If it does not, it will fail, be destroyed, and thrown down.

ISAIAH. When certain enemies rose against Judah, and they were sorely outnumbered, The Lord spoke to the remnant of His people through Isaiah. "Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal: thus saith the Lord GOD, It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people" (Isa 7:5-8).

• JESUS. "But He answered and said, Every plant, which My heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up " (Matt 15:13).

• PAUL. "For it is written, I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent" (1 Cor 1:19). And again, "For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God . For it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness" (1 Cor 3:19).

These, and other, reasons are why whatever has its genesis with men will come short of its objective. In the end, the only thing that will be finished is what God has started – and there will be no exceptions to that rule. There is no way to contradict this fact. To be even more precise, the government in its totality has been placed upon the shoulders of Jesus. ONLY what He Himself begins will be finished. That is precisely why He is called “ the Author and Finisher ,” “Alpha and Omega ,” “the First and the Last ,” and “the Beginning and the End ” (Heb 12:2; Rev 1:11; 22:13). Jesus does not finish what men conceive and initiate! Nor, indeed, do men finish what the Lord begins. What men begin, regardless of what it is, will come to an appointed end.

Now, the issue becomes whether or not men can see this, and submit themselves to it. When it comes to the work of the Lord, whatever they put their hand to, must have its beginning with God. If it does not, it will fail, be destroyed, and thrown down.

This, of course, has some arresting ramifications. Perhaps you have wondered why so many professed Christian enterprises are always begging for funds, marketing their goods, and urging people to assist them in getting out of debt. The reason can, in many cases, be traced to the truth that was uttered by Gamaliel. Whatever plans have their genesis in men alone will come to an end, and therefore they tend to deteriorate.

I am not naive about these matters. I realize that it is out of order to make laws about these things and impose them upon others. Every conscientious person must take this knowledge and learn to work with it – just like the apostles did.

The Complicating Factor

The complicating factor in all of these things is this: when the church has not developed a sensitivity to the Lord Himself, they are in a position where they cannot be profitably directed by Him. They are, in a sense, shut up to their own resources and imaginations – and that is a state of total vanity. Such may be described as having hope “ in this life only” (1 Cor 15:19).

YOU CANNOT FIGHT AGAINST GOD

“ 39 But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it; lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.”“ 40a And to him they agreed . . .”

Having stated that what is originated by men will, of necessity, fail, Gamaliel now establishes that what God initiates cannot fail. Once again, this is something that is fundamental to sound theology. This kind of thinking must be dominant in the minds of men to avoid errors in judgment.

IF IT BE OF GOD

“But if it be of God, ye cannot overthrow it . . .” Other versions read, “if it is from God,” NIV “if it does in fact come from God,” NJB “if it is really from God,,” WEYMOUTH “if it has its origin in God,” WILLIAMS and “if it should be from God .” PHILLIPS

Integral to this perception is the fact that God is at work in the earth, fulfilling His own purpose. There are causes that come from Him. There are men raised up to do His will, and fulfill His objectives. When it comes to delivering a message, there is such a thing as doing the will of God. There is a word that is coming from God, and there are a chosen people who are delivering it. The men themselves are not the point, but the mission on which they have been sent, and the message they are delivering. Therefore it is written, “Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man?” (1 Cor 3:5).

How serious is it to oppose one of these ministers? Does a religious body of any kind have a right to do so? What if they are the Sanhedrin? Or the high priest? Of the elders of the people? Does their position give them a right to attempt to stop men who are bringing a message from God?

What of our day? Is there a group of men – any men – who can actually attempt to impede the delivering of a word from God? Can they establish preaching or teaching priorities that have not been sanctioned by the Almighty? Are they free to adopt a new agenda, in hopes of building a more impressive organization? Gamaliel will not philosophize about this matter. His acquaintance with Scripture has already established his thoughts on the subject. He will go strait to the bottom line, and draw his conclusion after that.

YOU CANNOT OVERTHROW IT

“ . . . ye cannot overthrow it . . .” Other versions read, “you will not be able to overthrow it,” NASB “you will not be able to stop these men ,” NIV “you will not be able to overthrow them ,” NRSV “ ye will not be able to put them down ,” DARBY “ ye cannot destroy it,” GENEVA “you won't be able to stop them ,” GWN “it is not in your power to frustrate it ,” MRD “you will be powerless to put them down,” WEYMOUTH “You can never stop it,” WILLIAMS “you will not be able to stop or overthrow or destroy them ,” AMPLIFIED and “you cannot defeat them.” PHILLIPS

There is no ambiguity in what this expert in the Law says. A cause that comes from God CANNOT be deterred or nullified! Once again, the inclusion of his words by the Holy Spirit, without any editorial remark, confirms that they are true.

No one can restrain the work of God! Thus the prophet declares, “Indeed before the day was, I am He; And there is no one who can deliver out of My hand; I work, and who will reverse it? ” NKJV (Isa 43:13). And again, “Declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure” (Isa 46:10). And again, “And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou ?” (Dan 4:35). And again, “Because the foolishness of God is wiser than men ; and the weakness of God is stronger than men ” (1 Cor 1:25).

born – and he was given 4,000 years to do so. He could not remove Jesus when He was a helpless infant. He could not stop Him from growing in wisdom, and stature, and in favor with God and man. He could not stop Him from rising from the dead.

If Satan himself cannot delay or abort the purposes of God, who is foolish enough to think there is any man or group of men that can do so – particularly when they are controlled by the wicked one? Satan could not stop Jesus from being born – and he was given 4,000 years to do so. He could not remove Jesus when He was a helpless infant. He could not stop Him from growing in wisdom, and stature, and in favor with God and man. He could not stop Him from rising from the dead. He could not stop Him from ascending into heaven. He could not stop Him from pouring forth His Spirit. And, He cannot stop Him building His church (Matt 16:18), or coming again (Acts 1:11). All of those things have to do with Divine purpose.

As depicted in the Revelation, the only time the world has any power over the servants of God is when they have “finished their testimony” (Rev 11:7). This was confirmed in the life of Jesus (John 17:4), Paul (2 Tim 4:7), and Peter (1 Pet 1:13-14).

They are also confirmed in the inspired history of the chosen people of God.

- When Israel entered into Canaan, Joshua reminded the people, “There failed not ought of any good thing which the LORD had spoken unto the house of Israel; all came to pass ” (Josh 21:45).
- When he was getting ready to die, Joshua said to the people, “And, behold, this day

I am going the way of all the earth: and ye know in all your hearts and in all your souls, that not one thing hath failed of all the good things which the LORD your God spake concerning you; all are come to pass unto you, and not one thing hath failed thereof ” (Josh 23:14).

- In Mary’s marvelous response to the announcement that she would bear the Son of God, she said , “He hath holpen His servant Israel, in remembrance of His mercy; as He spake to our fathers , to Abraham, and to his seed for ever” (Luke 1:54-55).

- In Zechariah’s praise following the birth of John the Baptist, he confessed, “ To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; The oath which He sware to our father Abraham , that He would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies might serve Him without fear” (Luke 1:74).

- At the dedication of the Temple, Solomon told the people, “Blessed be the LORD, that hath given rest unto His people Israel, according to all that He promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promise, which He promised by the hand of Moses his servant ” (1 Kgs 8:56).

None of God’s intentions could be overthrown. No cause that has been initiated by Him has ever failed. This is involved in His faithfulness – doing what He has promised, and carrying forward every cause to completion. If any Divine objective falls short of fulfillment, then He will be proved unfaithful. In such a case, He will have encountered someone more powerful than Himself.

Some May Object

Some may object, saying this is too simplistic – even though God has emphatically declared this is the case. He has even challenged someone to interfere with what He purposes, or cause it to come short of fulfillment. He thunders from heaven, “The LORD of hosts hath sworn, saying, Surely as I have thought, so shall it come to pass; and as I have purposed, so shall it stand” (Isa 14:24). And again, “I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it ” (Isa 46:11). And again, “There are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the LORD, that shall stand” (Prov 19:21). And again, “There is no wisdom nor understanding nor counsel against the LORD” (Prov 21:30). And again, “Who is he that saith, and it cometh to pass, when the Lord commandeth it not?” (Lam 3:37).

Notwithstanding the strength of these affirmations, the simple think they see a hole in the reasoning. They point out that all of God’s purposes are not being fulfilled, for God “will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth” (1 Tim 2:4). Thus, they reason, if all men are not saved, His purpose has been thwarted.

The reasoning of such men, however, is flawed. First, God provided for the salvation of all men, but is nowhere said to have purposed to save all men. He has promised salvation only to those who are in Christ Jesus, for “Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved” (Acts 4:12).

In his inspired synopsis of God’s great salvation, Paul outlines the purpose of God. “For whom he did foreknow, He also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of His Son, that He might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom He did predestinate, them He also called: and whom He called, them He also justified: and whom He justified, them He also glorified” (Rom 8:30).

This should not be difficult for men to perceive. Salvation involves the deliverance of people from this present evil world (Gal 1:4). It requires there separation from other people (Acts 15:14; 2 Cor 6:17-18). He has purposed to save no one else. He has never said He intends to save the ungodly, the worldly, the slothful, and the unfaithful. He is not committed to the salvation of those who do iniquity, and draw back from Him.

Adopting the Divine Agenda

All of this highlights the importance of adopting the Divine agenda, and delivering the ordained message. If men adopt some purpose that has not been revealed by God – for the Lord does nothing without revealing it to His servants the prophets (Amos 3:7) – they have entered into a futile work.

Because of the spiritual obtuseness of our times, it is necessary to elaborate on these words. Let us say that a person adopts the fundamental purpose of causing boys to be strong moral men. Another makes his purpose to make strong families. Still another chooses to emphasize being financially successful. Yet another makes his emphasis the health of the body. No one of sound mind is willing to affirm that any of these things is wrong. Yet, if they are adopted as an emphasis, or primary purpose, they are wrong.

All such emphases insinuate that there is some deficiency in Christ – that believers are not, in fact, “complete in Him, which is the Head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10). When it comes to matters of character, morality, satisfaction, and personal identity with God, other things are imagined to be required. That is precisely why men create special procedures, routines, and life-styles that are declared to assist in actually shaping and maturing the believer. You must buy their books or attend their seminars to obtain them, for there is not any revealed association of them with the Lord Jesus. They are an addendum, or supplement, to Him.

It is one thing when men teach methods and techniques related to life in this world alone. Never, however, can such things become the emphasis of ones’ life. Should that ever happen, the individual is no longer seeking “first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness.” However, when they tie such things to life in Christ, and suggest that those skills or procedures improve one’s character and relationship to God, they are operating in the domain of the lie and are under Satan’s control.

Anything that is not authored by Jesus cannot possibly have anything whatsoever to do with pleasing God, serving God, or being more pleasing to Him. Men do not provoke God’s favorable attention by being involved in such things. We are specifically told that “the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him ” (2 Chron 16:9). It is also written that God said, “I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before Me for the land , that I should not destroy it: but I found none” (Ezek 22:30). Of the same type of quest Isaiah wrote, “And He saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor : therefore His arm brought salvation unto Him; and His righteousness, it sustained Him” (Isa 59:16). The Psalmist wrote, “The LORD looked down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there were any that did understand, and seek God ” (Psa 14:2).

Nowhere is the Lord ever represented as seeking for someone who is healthy, wealthy, or successful in business or some other earthly activity. Noah did not found grace in the eyes of the Lord because he was a disciplined and excellent ship builder. Moses did not find favor because he had several skills he learned in Egypt. Paul was not chosen because he was an expert in the Law of Moses. Those are not the kind of things God is looking for.

How, then, can it be possible for any emphasis on man-made routines to have the slightest bearing on a person’s standing with God. Are exceptionally healthy people more apt to take hold of the truth of God? Do people who live their lives by strict regimen have the advantage when it comes to being godly and discerning?

How, then, can it be possible for any emphasis on man-made routines to have the slightest bearing on a person’s standing with God. Are exceptionally healthy people more apt to take hold of the truth of God? Do people who live their lives by strict regimen have the advantage when it comes to being godly and discerning?

A Religion of the Body

For some people, the body, not the heart, is the core of religion. It is the secret to everything else. Their religion consists of external routines and disciplines, and have no real substance to them. Scripture refers to such an approach to religion as “bodily exercise.” It is written, “For bodily exercise profiteth little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come” (1 Tim 4:8). He is not speaking of exercise as it is related to bodily health. It is not the manner of the Spirit to relate such things to life that is in Christ Jesus. This does not mean that such activities are wrong, or are to be shunned. It is rather that revelation does not deal with such things. They are in the area in which we have been given freedom, and are not to judge one another.

The text of reference has to with “bodily discipline” NASB that is related to religion. Some of the more liberal translations are wholly misleading at this point: i.e. “physical training,” NIV “training of the body,” CSV “training the body,” GWN “physical exercise,” NJB and “physical exercise.” ISV The “bodily exercise” to which the text refers relates to the subduing of the fleshly lusts by abstinence and disciplined routines. It also relates to penance, as practiced in some segments of Christendom. It can even include fasting, particularly if it is not accompanied by prayer. These routines parallel the various ceremonies under the Law, referred to as “carnal ordinances,” or “regulations for the body” NASB (Heb 9:10).

It is stated that external routine “is only of little profit” NASB – that is, as it relates to life in Christ Jesus. Even that profit is largely confined to those who are in a state of spiritual infancy.

My point here is that the religious creations of men all have to do with such things. None of them are really associated with spiritual improvement, growth into Christ, Christ being formed in them, or conformity to His image. All of the things they emphasize have to do with life in this earth alone. As such, they do not require Jesus and His present ministry. Hence, they are destined to fail.

This will suffice, as this subject tends to consume more time than can be justified. What I have said relates to anything and everything that originates with men coming to an abrupt halt.

FOUND TO FIGHT AGAINST GOD

“ . . . lest haply ye be found even to fight against God.” Other versions read, “lest you even be found to fight against God,” NKJV “or else you may even be found fighting against God,” NASB “you will only find yourselves fighting against God,” NIV “ in that case you may even be found fighting against God!” NRSV “you might even be found opposing God,” RSV “you are in danger of fighting against God,” BBE “lest ye be found also fighters against God,” DARBY “You may even discover that you're fighting against God,” GWN “that ye may not be found placing yourselves in opposition to God,” MRD “ Take care not to find yourselves fighting against God,” NJB “lest haply ye be found to strive against God,” PNT “You might even be fighting against God Himself !” IE “ It is to be feared that you may find yourselves fighting God,” WILLIAMS and “you might actually find yourselves to be fighting against God!” PHILLIPS

That is, if the cause being put forward by the apostles was initiated by God. In such a case, those who oppose the cause are, in fact, fighting against God Himself, for whoever in any way resists what God is doing has launched a war against Him. There is no question about the outcome of such an initiative.

Mark it well, this is an inspired interpretation of human conduct. Those who are actually fighting against God do not know that is what they are doing. The high priest, Sanhedrin, and elders of Israel thought they were opposing the apostles. They did not have it in their minds to attack God. Yet, what they were actually doing was waging a war against Jesus, in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily. It was really Jesus that they were not receiving, as well as the Father who sent Him. As the Lord Himself said, “He that heareth you heareth Me; and he that despiseth you despiseth Me ; and he that despiseth Me despiseth Him that sent Me ” (Luke 10:16).

Fighting against God is described in several different ways in Scripture, and all of them sobering.

- RESISTING THE HOLY SPIRIT. “Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost : as your fathers did, so do ye” (Acts 7:51).

- PERSECUTING JESUS. “And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest : it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks” (Acts 9:5).

- RESISTING THE WORDS OF AN INSPIRED MAN. “And there arose a great cry: and the scribes that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God ” (Acts 23:9).

- EXALTING THE HUMAN VOICE AGAINST GOD. “Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice , and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against the Holy One of Israel” (2 Kgs 19:22).

- STRIVING WITH THE MASTER. “Woe unto him that striveth with his Maker ! Let the potsherd strive with the potsherds of the earth. Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? or thy work, He hath no hands?” (Isa 45:9).

- PROVOKING THE LORD. “Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? are we stronger than He?” (1 Cor 10:22).

It took a Gamaliel, skilled in Scripture, to draw the conclusion for them. If, perchance, God was the one behind the work of the apostles, they would be fighting against Him if they sought to stop their efforts.

In all of their hatred and insolence, even the Egyptians knew it was pointless to fight against God. When they were pressing forward through the dried bed of the Red Sea in pursuit of Israel, God took off their chariot wheels. The Egyptians saw what was happening and cried out, “Let us flee from the face of Israel; for the LORD fighteth for them against the Egyptians ” (Ex 14:25). Notwithstanding, sin can so stupify the people that they cannot associate what has taken place with the hand of the Lord. Our text is a case in point. God has delivered the apostles from prison miraculously, so that there was no human explanation for it. Yet, these wicked Jewish leaders were so blinded by sin that they could not see it. It took a Gamaliel, skilled in Scripture, to draw the conclusion for them. If, perchance, God was the one behind the work of the apostles, they would be fighting against Him if they sought to stop their efforts.

Actually, the matter was more clear than even Gamaliel could see. It really was no perchance matter at all. These men were opposing God, fighting against Him, and guaranteeing their own downfall. The work of the apostles originated with God Himself. The work of the Jewish council originated with men. That, and that alone, would determine the ultimate outcome of these events.

ASSUMING IS OUT OF ORDER

Later in time, when Paul was converted and preaching the Gospel, he encountered a people described as “more noble.” Their nobility surfaced when they did not assume that the words spoken by Paul were true. Being able to handle the Scriptures, they checked to see if they said what Paul was saying. The account is given by Luke. “These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so” (Acts 17:11). Their search confirmed that Paul was speaking the truth, and therefore “many of them believed” (Acts 17:12). He was declaring a Messiah that fulfilled what the Scriptures had said of the Messiah whom God would send.

Today there are gospels being preached that cannot be supported by the Scripture. Some resort to Moses to justify what they are saying believers should do – like the health and diet proclaimers. Others take us to Moses to confirm that God wants us to be healthy and wealthy, and to be leaders in business and government. However, they cannot show us where God said He was going to send a Messiah who would do such things. They cannot confirm from the Word of God that this is why Jesus died, rose again, ascended into heaven, and was seated at the right hand of God. If they use the Scriptures at all, they must create a sort of patchwork theology that allows them to blend Moses and Solomon with the worldly-wise men of the day.

However, there is no room in their systems for the words of Jesus, the Head of the church, and His apostles, who laid the appointed foundation. Such systems are all built upon the sand.

TO HIM THEY AGREED

“ 40a And to him they agreed . . .” Other versions read, “they agreed with him,” NKJV “they took his advice,” NASB “His speech persuaded them,” NIV “they were convinced by him,” NRSV “it seemed to them to be right,” BBE “they listened to his advice,” DARBY “they consented to him,” DOUAY “they assented to him,” MRD “his advice was accepted,” NJB “The Jewish leaders then agreed with what Gamaliel said,” IE “His advice carried conviction,” WEYMOUTH and “they gave in to him,” MONTGOMERY

How could this band of

What we are seeing in the book of Acts is the working of the Christ, not the working of men. In this text we have some vessels that were “to dishonor.” They are God’s enemies, and have taken upon themselves to shut down the preaching of the Gospel. Jesus, however, simply will not allow them to do so.

unreasonable men agree with sound counsel? Did their hearts suddenly become tender? Did they change their minds about the apostles? This was not a demonstration of the power of reason. Rather, this was the Lord intervening in the affairs of men. He overturned the intentions of the council like He overturned the counsel of Ahithophel. In the case of Absalom and David, the Lord overthrew good counsel that He “might bring evil upon Absalom” (2 Sam 17:14). In this case, He overthrew the wicked counsel of the Sanhedrin in order that the apostles might go on preaching. As it is written, “He disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise . He taketh the wise in their own craftiness: and the counsel of the froward is carried headlong ” (Job 5:12-13). Heaven had directed the apostles to preach. The council had directed them to cease from preaching. Indeed, as it is written, “There are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the LORD, that shall stand ” (Prov 19:21).

If men are given leave to do their will, over and above that will, they will, as in the case of killing Jesus, do “whatsoever” His “hand” and “counsel determined before to be done” (Acts 4:28). Our great God can “put it” into men’s hearts “to agree” with someone else, as

- He did with the kings of the earth who agreed with spiritual Babylon. As it is written, “For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil His will, and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled” (Rev 17:17).

- When they are wayward, He can turn the hearts of people against His own people. Again it is written, “He turned their heart to hate His people, to deal subtly with His servants” (Psa 105:25).

- He can put His fear into men’s hearts. As it is written, “I will put my fear in their hearts , that they shall not depart from me” (Jer 32:40).

- God put “His wisdom” into the heart of Solomon (1 Kgs 10:24).

- He “put” it into the heart of Artaxerses – a Persian king – to “ beautify the house of the Lord which is in Jerusalem” (Ezra 7:27).
- He “put” into Nehemiah’s heart to repair the walls of Jerusalem (Neh 2:12).
- He is a God described as one who “hath put wisdom in the inward parts ? or who hath given understanding to the heart?” (Job 38:36).
- He can “ put gladness ” into the heart (Psa 4:7), “give” people a “new heart” (Ezek 36:26), and put an “earnest care” for His people in the heart of His servants (2 Cor 8:16).
- The New Covenant itself involves God putting His law “in their inward parts,” and writing “it in their hearts” (Jer 31:33; Heb 8:10; 10:16).

This is the true God, and it is how He works among the sons of men. If you, like myself, have come from a background that emphasized man’s free will , all of this may sound strange. However, if your mind has been shaped by the Word of God, an emphasis upon man’s imagined free will sounds strange. If this whole subject is confusing, you owe it to yourself to search the Scriptures and see whether what I have said is true. See if God ever uses the expression “freewill” KJV or “free will,” in reference changing the direction of anything – particularly in regards to salvation. Find if men outside of Christ are in any sense said to be “free.” Perceive if the Gospel is preached as though they were, what men call, free moral agents . And, if they are, why is the convicting power of the Holy Spirit necessary, or being born of God, or being illuminated, or delivered, and having Christ “formed” within.

What we are seeing in the book of Acts is the working of the Christ, not the working of men. In this text we have some vessels that were “to dishonor” (Rom 9:21). They are God’s enemies, and have taken upon themselves to shut down the preaching of the Gospel. Jesus, however, simply will not allow them to do so. He raises up a man they do respect, and bends their wills toward his counsel.

The action that follows will confirm that they did not do this with all of their hearts. While they did consent to let the apostles go for the time being, they did not consent to their continued preaching of the Gospel. Our text says “they agreed.” The Greek word from which “agreed” is translated is Vepei,sqhsan (e-pies-thas-an). The root meaning of the word is “persuasion, persuasive power,” THAYER “to convince someone to believe something, and to act on the basis of what is recommended,” LOUW-NIDA “To prevail upon, to win over,” LIDDELL-SCOTT “with persuasive words of wisdom . . . convince, persuade,” GINGRICH This is not a word that emphasizes the insight or understanding of the hearers – as though they responded, “Now we see the error of our ways.” Rather, the word emphasizes the skill of the persuader, who so skillfully presented his case that there was no immediate way of negating what he said. Solomon had this kind of thing in mind when he wrote, “he that winneth souls is wise” (Prov 11:30). This does not emphasize the wisdom of the hearer, but of the speaker. In our text, the idea is that the council could not think of a way to negate what Gamaliel said, and thus deferred to his judgment. That, of course, is not the most noble moral action. Far better to be able to perceive the wisdom of what is said, and understand the words that are spoken.

By way of illustration, Stephen also spoke words of unparalleled wisdom to the Jewish council. We are told, “they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.” However, rather than releasing Stephen, the council “secretly induced men to say, ‘We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses and God.’” The people were thereby stirred up, and the outcome of it all was that Stephen was stoned to death (Acts 6:10-7:59). What was the difference in the account we are reading and that of Stephen? Was Gamaliel wiser than Stephen, and thus more capable of moving the people? Who could imagine such nonsense? God was at work in both instances. In the case with Stephen, his work was completed, and a young witness names Saul was there, who would be impacted by his God-glorifying death. In our text, the work of the apostles was not completed, and God would be more greatly glorified by them continuing to preach the Word, converting sinners and establishing believers.

THEY BEAT THEM AND LET THEM GO

“40b . . . and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.”

Here the wickedness of men will be confirmed. This is primarily evidenced in their enmity against God Himself, secondarily, in the absence of a love of the truth, and third in their unjustified hatred of the apostles.

THEY CALLED AND BEAT THEM

“ . . . and when they had called the apostles, and beaten them . . .” Other versions read, “And they took his advice; and after calling the apostles in, they flogged them,” NASB “They called the apostles in and had them flogged ,” NIV “and they sent for the Apostles, and, after having them whipped ,” BBE “And calling in the apostles, after they had scourged them ,” DOUAY and “and they had the apostles called in, gave orders for them to be flogged .” NJB

Flogging was no minor punishment. The word itself means, “to flay, skin . . .to beat, throb, smite . . . beat with many stripes,” THAYER “remove the skin, flay, bear, strike repeatedly, whip,” FRIBERG “to strike or beat repeatedly,” LOUW-NIDA and “to have one’s skin flayed off.” LIDDELL-SCOTT This is not merely the administering of severe bruises, but an act in which the skin is separated from the flesh, and often the flesh from the bone. It created deep lacerations, and was a prolonged activity. This was done with rods or sticks, and is also referred to as scourging. Under the Law of Moses, this manner of punishment was administered to those who broke the Law (Lev 19:20; Deut 22:18). It was generally administered to the back, as stated in Proverbs 10:13: “a rod is for the back of him who is void of understanding.” To this present day this remains a manner of punishment in the East. In China, the rod is applied to the soles of the feet in such punishment. In fact, historians have said that China was “governed by the stick” McCLINTOK & STRONG’S Egypt and Persia (now Iran/Iraq) also still practice this form of punishment.

The picture of Egyptian flogging is taken from some Egyptian art which depicted the use of rods for punishment on children, men, and women. Under the Law of Moses, this form of punishment, although not limited to rods, was administered while a man was lying down before the judge (Deut 25:3), as depicted in the graphic of Egyptian flogging. You may remember that Paul said he was beaten with rods on three separate occasions (2 Cor 11:25).

You can see that the Sanhedrin, while deferring to the counsel of Gamaliel, were by no means moved to be compassionate toward the apostles. Rather, they subjected them to a very severe form of punishment, even though they could find nothing worthy of punishment in them (Acts 4:21). They also proceed with this beating, even though they have been counseled by Gamaliel to leave them along.

This is the first time the apostles have endured bodily oppression. Their first opposition was incarceration and being threatened. Now, however, the opposition is increasing, and they are subjected to a harsh form of punishment. During His ministry, Jesus told them, “But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues” (Matt 10:17). While this scourging was not in a synagogue, it was done in the name of religion – particularly the activities of the Temple.

Thus we catch a glimpse of one of Satan’s main attacks against the servants of God. He launches an initiative against the body of Christ from a religious environment. The most serious of these environments is the one that comes in the name of God Himself. In our text, it is the God of Abraham and of Israel. Later, persecution will be experienced from those who actually wear the name of Jesus.

THEY COMMANDED THEM THAT THEY SHOULD NOT SPEAK

“ . . . they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go.” Other versions read, “ordered them to speak no more in the name of Jesus, and then released them,” NASB “giving them orders to give no teaching in the name of Jesus, they let them go,” BBE “ enjoined them not to speak in the name of Jesus, and dismissed them,” DARBY “ordered them not to speak about the one named Jesus , and let them go,” GWN “Then they ordered them never again to speak in the name of Jesus, and they let them go,” NLT “commanded them not to talk to the people ever again about the name of Jesus . After that they let them go free,” IE “charged them to stop speaking on the authority of Jesus , and then turned them loose,” WILLIAMS “released them, with instructions not to speak about the name of Jesus,” MONTGOMERY and “ sternly forbade them to speak in or about the name of Jesus, and allowed them to go.” AMPLIFIED

At once you see that these men completely missed the point of Gamaliel’s words, even though he had convinced them. Of what, then, did this expert in the Law convince them? It was that they should let the men go. They saw no correlation at all with letting them go and their cause being of the Lord. Gamaliel had told them not to oppose these men, lest they be found fighting against God. However, they are not only opposing the work of the apostles, but strictly charging them never again to speak in the name of Jesus, or say anything about Him. Their hearts were so hard they could not see that such an edict was really fighting against God.

The Tendency Remains Today

I fear that if the unvarnished truth of Christ was clearly declared in the average church, we would find the divisions among professing worshipers of God still as sharp as those that are revealed in our text.

There remains among religious men this inveterate tendency to look only on the surface of things, judging according to appearance, and in harmony with the flesh. There is now, however, a complicating factor. In our text, a pure message was being preached that gave little or no regard to the desires of men. It was the desire of the Lord that was fundamental, and the work of Jesus was the primary work. In our day, however, there is a strong appeal to the desires of the people – people who do not look deeply at things, or perceive the real “issues of life” (Prov 4:23). We are in a generation that is dominated by hedonism, or the quest for pleasure.

Thus, the people are already at a decided disadvantage, for God has no consoling word for such a people. There is no good message from heaven for those who are content with this world, and who seek primarily their own temporal interests. Those who deliver a Gospel that is tailored for casual and disinterested people have brought reproach upon the Savior. They have not accentuated the right things, and thus moved the Holy Spirit out of the picture, for He does not use convenient and false gospels to convince men of sin, righteousness, and judgment. Now, the truth is not generally opposed by the ungodly simply because it is not being declared.

I fear that if the unvarnished truth of Christ was clearly declared in the average church, we would find the divisions among professing worshipers of God still as sharp as those that are revealed in our text.

After beating them, the council releases the apostles, delivering a sort of ultimatum to them. What will the apostles do? Will they stop preaching as they were commanded to do? How will they react to unjust treatment? Will they give up, or leave the area, choosing to preaching somewhere else? We will see.

THEY LEFT REJOICING

“ 41 And they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for His name.”

It is important to perceive that we are witnessing the expression of “newness of life.”

- We are beholding how it responds in times of popularity (Acts 2:47; 5:13).
- We are shown how true life responds when it is threatened (4:24-30).
- When it confronts hypocrisy in the church, life also has a response (5:3-11).
- Its response to the commands of the Lord is made known (2:41; 5:20-21).
- When standing before critics, we have also seen the expression of genuine life (4:20; 5:29).

Now, we will see how spiritual life responds to suffering.

- This is not the triumph of the human will, but the people being caused to triumph in Christ Jesus (2 Cor 2:14).
- This is reigning in life by Christ Jesus (Rom 5:17).
- It is having dominion over sin because men are “under grace” (Rom 6:14).
- We are witnessing an example of taking the kingdom by force (Matt 11:12; Lk 16:16).
- This is the victory that comes from believing Jesus Christ is the Son of God (1 John 5:4-5).
- We are given to see what it means to press toward the mark (Phil 3:14).
- This is not being weary in well doing (2 Thess 3:13).
- It is believing to the saving of the soul (Heb 10:38).
- Here we behold disciples denying themselves, taking up their cross, and following Jesus (Matt 16:24).

This is something we must press to comprehend: the doctrine of the epistles is lived out in the book of Acts.

THEY DEPARTED FROM THE PRESENCE OF THE COUNCIL

“ 41 And they departed from the presence of the council . . . ” Other versions read, “So they went on their way from the presence of the Council,” NASB “ the apostles left the Sanhedrin,” NIV “So they went away from the Sanhedrin,” BBE “and they indeed went from the presence of the council,” DOUAY and “The apostles left the council room .” GWN

After being beaten, the apostles were not carried from the council chambers. They left under their own power. They further “went their own way.” They did not rush to a physician to treat their wounds. They did not seek legal counsel in order to press charges against their oppressors. They did not return to warn the other disciples of impending danger. They did not perceive what happened to them as being a contradiction to the prayer for God to behold the threatening of their enemies. They did not ask God why all of this was happening when they were trying to serve Him. Those kind of responses are the whimpers of the weak. The faith of these men had been strong.

When they left the council, they departed to resume their labors, knowing they would be required to ignore the mandate that was given to them.

REJOICED THAT THEY WERE COUNTED WORTHY

“ . . . rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name.” Other versions read, “rejoicing that they had been considered worthy to suffer shame for His name,” NASB “rejoicing because they had been counted worthy of suffering disgrace for the Name,” NIV “they rejoiced that they were considered worthy to suffer dishonor for the sake of the name,” NRSV “happy to undergo shame for the Name,” BBE “rejoicing that they were counted worthy to be dishonored on behalf of the name,” CSB “rejoicing that they were accounted worthy to suffer reproach for the name of Jesus,” DOUAY “rejoicing, that they were counted worthy to suffer rebuke for his Name,” GENEVA “They were happy to have been considered worthy to suffer dishonor for speaking about Jesus ,” GWN “rejoicing that God had counted them worthy to suffer disgrace for the name of Jesus,” NLT “but they were happy, because they were given the honor of suffering dishonor for the name,” IE “rejoicing that they had been deemed worthy to suffer disgrace on behalf of the NAME ,” WEYMOUTH “rejoicing that they were being counted worthy [dignified by the indignity] to suffer shame and be exposed to disgrace for [the sake of] His name,” AMPLIFIED and “full of joy that they had been considered worthy to bear humiliation for the sake of the name.” PHILLIPS

How can the adversary ever hope to overcome holy men when they consider suffering for the name of Jesus an honor and a privilege? They did not delight in the suffering itself, but in the confirmation that it delivered to their hearts. Suffering feels no better to the body of a child of God than it does to anyone else. However, saints live according to a power that is greater than that of the flesh. They are able to reach higher, see further, and be aware of more than the limited senses of the body. Faith is in God and can therefore draw on resources that are external to the “natural man.”

In our life with Christ, this world is not the main place, and therefore the things that are experienced in it are not the primary things. Ultimately, all believers are being called out of the world in order to dwell with the Lord forever. Seen in its very best sense, life in this world is a time of preparation and orientation for glory. It is what we are , where we go , and what we do AFTER the present heavens and earth pass away that is of the most critical importance. No person who is cast into hell will think that his life on earth was in any sense worth the living. However, everyone in the glory will be thankful for every minute they lived for Jesus and without regard for their personal pleasure and comfort.

Suffering for the name of Jesus is the path that leads to glorification. That being the case, when men suffer for Jesus’ sake, they ought to contemplate the glory that is ahead. Then they will not only be tested with all suffering, but will thereby be inducted into the reign to which they were appointed, and for which they were duly prepared.

Scripture indicates that our role in heaven is an assignment. The saved will be told, “Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world ” (Mat 25:34). When James and John asked that they might be seated on Christ’s right and left hand, He replied, “ But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared ” (Mark 10:40). While this is not the only view of our inheritance, it is an essential one. It is in view of this arrangement that great suffering can be perceived as indicative of a significant role in glory. It appears to me that this is how the apostles were viewing things.

When they said “counted worthy to suffer,” they were not speaking of the suffering itself, but concerning the cause that drove that suffering. In it, a certain worthiness was being cultured. Paul spoke more specifically of this line of thought to the Thessalonians. “So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God , for which ye also suffer” (2 Thess 1:5).

Suffering for the name of Jesus is the path that leads to glorification. That being the case, when men suffer for Jesus' sake, they ought to contemplate the glory that is ahead. Then they will not only be tested with all suffering, but will thereby be inducted into the reign to which they were appointed, and for which they were duly prepared.

Suffering for the name of Christ cannot be done accidentally or inadvertently. Such suffering can only be experienced when the life of Christ is manifested through those who are walking by faith. That manifested life chafes against those who are of this world, and even threatens them. Those who see in this revelation a threat instead of an opportunity lash out against the vessels through whom Christ's life is being made known. While the opposition can take different forms, it always accomplishes a number of things in the one who is unwilling to walk in contradiction of Jesus.

- It confirms that the believer is not of this world.
- It ratifies his identity with Christ.
- It makes a further separation between the believer and the world.
- It brings a greater clarity to the nature of Christ Himself.
- It brightens the hope of glory.
- It drives the trusting to draw closer to the Lord.
- It provokes holy contemplation.

In all of this, the disciples are in fellowship with Jesus, who, “for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross, despising the shame” (Heb 12:2). This is the same kind of rejoicing that Paul and Silas did when they were beaten and placed in prison, with their feet “fast in the stocks.” It was at that time that they “prayed and sang praises unto God” (Acts 16:23-25). They were fulfilling the word that Jesus gave to them early in His ministry: “Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you” (Matt 5:10-12).

This kind of rejoicing is the result of spiritual discernment. A person cannot rejoice to be counted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Jesus out of a sense of obligation, or in obedience to a commandment. It is their insight and understanding that prompts such marvelous rejoicing.

By the same token, where the real cause of suffering is not known, or if the hope of glory is not present, it will become the point at which the soul will begin to draw back – as Peter did on the night of Christ's betrayal (Lk 22:57). In our text, Peter is facing a greater degree of suffering than He did on that night in the palace of the high priest. Yet, he does not draw back so much as a millimeter. The difference is that both his present ministry his eternal destiny were now clear to him. The “full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22) and “the full assurance of hope” (Heb 6:11) belonged to him. Unlike those early days, His perception of Jesus was now accompanied with “the full assurance of understanding” (Col 2:2). Those who are in possession of such benefits cannot be shaken by the opposition of mere mortals. Their faith makes them superior to circumstance, as well as their enemies.

THEY CONTINUED TO TEACH AND PREACH

“ 42 And daily in the temple, and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ. ”

Confirming the invincibility of faith, the apostles resume their heavenly-appointed mission. They have nurtured their faith, refusing to abandon it during times of difficulty. As a result, they have been “kept by the power of God through faith” (1 Pet 1:5). That is the factor that makes faith unvanquishable! It is, after all, “the victory that overcometh the world” (1 John 5:4-5). Where men are overcome by the world, whether by threats or lures, it is always because of a fundamental deficiency in their faith.

DAILY IN THE TEMPLE, AND IN EVERY HOUSE

“And daily in the temple, and in every house . . .” Other versions read, “And every day , in the temple and from house to house,” NASB “ Day after day , in the temple courts and from house to house,” NIV “And every day in the temple and at home ,” NRSV “And every day, in the Temple and privately ,” BBE “Every day in the temple complex, and in various homes ,” CSB “And they ceased . . . daily, in the temple and at home,” MRD “and all day long , both at the temple and in the homes,” NAB “ Day after day , in the temple courts and from house to house,” NIB “And every day, in the Temple and in their home Bible classes ,” LIVING “every day, in the Temple or in private houses ,” WEYMOUTH “they never ceased for a single day , both in the temple area and at home,” AMPLIFIED and “Then day after day in the Temple and in people's houses .” PHILLIPS

Even as it was with their blessed Lord, the religion of the apostles was not seasonal. In “a great falling away,” when people find it difficult to devote two or three uninterrupted communal hours a week to their “Father’s business,” this kind of report sounds most strange.

There are precious few structures devoted to the Lord Jesus that are used daily for the preaching and teaching of the Word of God. They may be opened for exercise, public education, sundry community services, etc. Some may even provide some kind of counseling services every day in which they attempt to meet the needs of people with special problems. But who has heard of daily preaching and teaching?

Yet, God had cultured a people to whom this concept was not strange. Jesus Himself taught in the Temple every day (Matt 26:55; Mk 14:49; Lk 19:47; 22:53). Even the lame man who was healed by Peter and John was “laid daily at the gate of the Temple” where people were regularly moving in and out (Acts 3:2). There was even a daily “hour of prayer” (Acts 3:1). Even the First Covenant was, in a manner of speaking, one that included daily teaching and prayer.

This kind of conduct blends well with the nature of spiritual life, which must be sustained on a daily basis. It is exceedingly difficult to conceive of a modern preacher delivering the Word of God every day. Or, for that matter, where would he do so if he so desired? The point is that a sanctified place and form was in place that allowed for daily teaching in the things of God.

It is not surprising, therefore, that after the day of Pentecost, the early church “continued daily with one accord in the Temple” (Acts 2:46). And now, after they have been beaten, the apostles return to the Temple every day to teach and preach.

This kind of conduct blends well with the nature of spiritual life, which must be sustained on a daily basis. It is exceedingly difficult to conceive of a modern preacher delivering the Word of God every day. Or, for that matter, where would he do so if he so desired? The point is that a sanctified place and form was in place that allowed for daily teaching in the things of God. The apostles, therefore, capitalized on the opportunity.

Remember, the angel of the Lord had told the apostles , “Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life” (Acts 5:20). He did not say to do so every day. In the modern church scene, that word might have been interpreted to mean every Sunday . But that is not how the apostles viewed the word of the angel. Their hearts were not tuned to a weekly frequency. Even when they were severely beaten and strictly charged to stop preaching, they went back to the Temple every day and taught.

Even that was not the end of the matter. They also engaged in the same activity “in every house.”

When they were not in the Temple, they were in private dwellings. What a marvelous picture of their commitment to and love for the Lord Jesus, as well as their consistent interest in the people.

THEY CEASED NOT TO TEACH AND PREACH JESUS CHRIST

“ . . . they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.” Other versions read, “they kept right on teaching and preaching Jesus as the Christ,” NASB “they never stopped teaching and proclaiming the good news that Jesus is the Christ,” NIV “they did not cease to teach and proclaim Jesus as the Messiah,” NRSV “they went on teaching and preaching Jesus as the Christ,” BBE “they ceased not teaching and announcing the glad tidings that Jesus was the Christ,” DARBY “they refused to stop teaching and telling the Good News that Jesus is the Messiah,” GWN “they went on ceaselessly teaching and proclaiming the good news of Christ Jesus,” NJB “they continued to teach and preach this message : ‘Jesus is the Messiah.’” NLT “they were not ceasing teaching and proclaiming good news -- Jesus the Christ,” YLT “They kept on telling the people the Good News that Jesus is the Messiah,” IE “to teach and to proclaim the good news (Gospel) of Jesus [as] the Christ (the Messiah),” AMPLIFIED and “they continued to teach unceasingly and to proclaim the good news of Jesus Christ.” PHILLIPS

And what were the apostles doing in the Temple and from house to house? Were they listening to the problems of the people? Or simply engaging in some neutral kind of social activities? Or just, as some are wont to say, “hanging out?” Their activity was focused. They were “teaching and preaching.” That is, expounding and declaring, or opening and alleging, or announcing and elaborating, or making known and enlarging upon. The theme of these activities was “Jesus Christ.” That is, they declared and expounded His Person and His work; who He is, what He said, what He did, and what He is doing. He was presented as God’s solitary remedy for the human condition caused by sin. He was shown to be the only means of coming into the favor of God, or being accepted by Him. Only through Him could men be brought back and kept, or converted and sustained.

This is another way of expounding the fact that men are “complete” in Christ (Col 2:10). The Jewish leaders had convinced the people that Jesus was the problem, and therefore they crucified Him. By exalting Him and giving Him all power in heaven and earth, God had affirmed that He was the total answer – not just initially, but for all of life. Only Jesus can give eternal life (John 10:26; 17:2). He is the only one who can give us an understanding of God, which is essential to the maintenance of eternal life (1 John 5:20). He is the only One who can lead us, or feed us, or keep us. He is the only One to whom God ultimately listens, and therefore He is the Intercessor. No one else can bring us to God (1 Pet 3:18). He is the only One by whom we “do believe in God” (1 Pet 1:21). He is the “Head of the body” (Col 1:18). There is no authority or profitable power part from Him, for He has been given “all power in heaven and earth” (Matt 28:28). He is the One in whom we made a new creation (2 Cor 5:17; Eph 2:10). He alone can keep us “from falling” (Jude 1:24). All of “the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” are hidden in Him (Col 2:3). He is the only One in whom we can “rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory” (1 Pet 1:8). In Him alone do men “have boldness and access with confidence” (Eph 3:12). The love of God is realized only through Him (Rom 8:39).

How is it possible that other Gospels have arisen that move men to trust in other things? Why has Jesus been upstaged in modern preaching with a man-centered message? How can these things have happened within the church? A change of emphasis has occurred because, at some point, Jesus Christ Himself ceased to be the Subject of preaching and teaching. About this, there can be no question!

The preaching of Christ results in a certain non-worldly emphasis, for Jesus is in heaven, where our affections are to be placed (Col 3:1-2). Such preaching always yields good results in those who believe. Likewise, it stirs up those who have not received the love of the truth that they might be saved. All of these things are being lived out in the book of Acts.

CONCLUSION

Our text reveals the triumph of faith. The apostles had faith in Christ, knowing that He was the Son of God. This faith compelled them to do what the Lord had commanded them before He left the world – preach repentance and the remission of sins in Jesus’ name, “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47). When they encountered threats from the very people who had crucified the Son of God, they immediately prayed the Lord would behold the threatenings of their enemies, and grant them that with all boldness they might speak the word (Acts 4:29). Now, after being arrested and beaten, then commanded to speak no more in Jesus’ name, they return to the Temple every day preaching Jesus Christ, and doing so from house to house as well. How is it that they were able to be so consistent in their obedience and faithfulness – particularly when it involved suffering?

Many professing Christians compromise their faith under some mere social pressure from their peers. Some do so in order to be more popular, not wanting to be different from the crowd. Others buy into a compromising religion – a system of Christian thought that allows the individual to remain close to the world, and even maintain worldly preferences. What is the difference between the apostles and such people? Is it that the apostles were a kind of spiritual supermen who did things the rest of the body of Christ cannot do. Admittedly, there was such a thing as “the signs of an apostle” (2 Cor 12:12), and the “many signs and wonders” that were done by them (Acts 2:43; 5:12). Did they not pray for God to grant them boldness to speak His word by stretching forth His hand “to heal; and that sighs and wonders may be done by the name of Thy holy child Jesus” (Acts 4:30)? Do those things account for their faithfulness? Indeed not!

First, they did not ask for signs and wonders to be done so they would keep the faith, or be consistent, or love God with all of their heart and soul. Rather, they had asked for these things in order that they might confidently preach in the face of adversity. The question is, what made them want to do this? Why were their hearts so insistent that they continue, and not relent?

The answer is found in the very nature of newness of life. The “new man,” we are told, “is created in righteousness and true holiness” (Eph 4:24). He is “renewed in knowledge after the image of Him who created him” (Col 3:10). This creation takes place when a person is born again – in fact, this is the result of the new birth. There is, however, one complicating factor. There can come a time when each child of God must “put on the new man,” as the Ephesians were admonished to do (Eph 4:24). This is true even though, in another sense, “the new man” was put on when they were baptized into Christ (Col 3:10; Gal 3:27).

When a person is really living by faith, the new man remains in dominance, the “old man” is “put off” (Col 3:9) and the flesh is “mortified,” or “crucified” (Rom 8:13; Gal 5:24). However, if men begin to “draw back” (Heb 10:39), and allow the entrance of “an evil heart of unbelief” (Heb 3:12), the “old man” rises to prominence, and “the flesh” begins to dictate the manner of life. Faith will not allow such things to happen, but unbelief will cause them to take place.

What, then, is the distinction of the apostles, and of the record we are reading? It is that they were living by faith, and thus were able to fulfill their calling. Those who lack spiritual consistency, and are in a backward motion, are not living by faith, but are in the grip of unbelief.

Lesson #26

DISSENSION RISES, BUT IS OVERCOME

“ 6:1 And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. 2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables. 3 Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. 4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word. 5 And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch: 6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. 7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith. ” (Acts 6:1-7)

INTRODUCTION

Having been caught off guard, Satan has now regrouped, so to speak, and is assaulting the church as depicted in the twelfth chapter of the Revelation. “And the serpent cast out of his mouth water as a flood after the woman, that he might cause her to be carried away of the flood . . . And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ” (Rev 12:15,17). The people of God cannot afford to be naive about Satan’s aggression. When approaching life, we are solemnly admonished, “ Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour” (1 Pet 5:8). The only way to effectively negate his initiative is by means of our faith. If our faith is small, or we have none at all, it is not possible to defeat this foe. Thus, Peter continues, “Whom resist steadfast in the faith . . .” (1 Pet 5:9). This being true, what we are witnessing in the book of Acts is the outworking of faith.

First Satan attacked the church without, through the Temple authorities and the Sanhedrin. That effort failed miserably, and the church increased . Then he attacked it from within, through Ananas and Sapphira, who had been living too close to his domain. Again, the effort failed abysmally, and the church kept on increasing. Then he attacked it once again from outside, through the Sanhedrin and elders of Israel. This time, he was given leave to inflict pain on the apostles. However, the effort again failed, and the number of disciples still continued to increase. Jesus was building His church, and no Satanic effort could thwart it or impede it. As long as the people kept the faith, their cause was invincible. Because Satan is unable to learn, he now attacks the church again from within. This time he will attempt to corrupt it with murmuring, as he did with Israel.

IMPORTANT THINGS TO BE SEEN

There are some important Kingdom principles to be seen throughout the book of Acts. Some of them have a particular bearing upon our text.

“Apostles”

First, there are repeated references to the “apostles” who are at the heart of our text. There are thirty references to the “apostles” in the book of Acts. Most all of them refer to the “apostles of Christ” (1 Thess 2:6) – men sent forth personally by Jesus Christ (1:2,26; 2:37,42,43; 4:33,35,36,37; 5:2,12, 18,29,34, 40; 6:6; 8:1,14,18; 9:27; 11:1; 14:4; 15:33). Commencing with the fifteenth chapter, there are numerous references to these “apostles and elders” (15:2,4, 6,22,23,33; 16:4). There is one reference to the apostles sent forth by the Holy Spirit for a special work – “Barnabas and Paul” (14:4). With the exception of Barnabas, the “apostles” of reference are the “foundation” upon which the church is built (Eph 2:20). That is, they are the ones who put the Foundation, which is Christ, in place among men (Isa 28:16). They did this through the insightful preaching of the Gospel, as opened to them by the Holy Spirit.

In all of their recorded activities, they were functioning as the appointed representatives of the Lord Jesus Christ. Their power and authority was not in their position, but in their living association with the Head of all things. In other words, Christ was working through them to build His church. The apostles in no way represented a hierarchical system of authority, as is practiced by the Gentiles (Matt 20:25-27). Their mission was not to establish a certain pattern of organization. Rather, working through them, Jesus was building His church. If we lose sight of this, we will find ourselves drifting toward lifeless religion – form without power.

“Disciples”

Second, commencing with this text, the word “disciples” will be used throughout the book of Acts – at least twenty-eight times (6:1,2,7; 9:1,10,19,25, 26,36,38; 11:26,29; 13:52; 14:20,22,28; 15:10; 16:1; 18:23,27; 19:1,9,30; 20:1,7; 21:4,16). The other prominent reference to these disciples is “believers,” or those who “believed.” Both of these terms (disciples and believers) are rather unique. Neither of them promote purely sectarian interests. Both of them convey the idea of personal involvement as opposed to a mere formal identity – like a member of a roster, or belonging to a particular group.

The word “disciple” means, “a learner, pupil . . . one who follows one’s teaching,” THAYER “one who directs his mind to something . . . apprentice . . . one who attached himself to a spiritual leader,” FRIBERG “follower,” UBS “a person who is a disciple or follower of someone,” LOUW-NIDA and “adherent.” GINGRICH

The word “disciple” does not represent a particular system of thought that has been embraced. It is not descriptive of membership in an organization, or confirmation of inclusion on a roster or listing. It rather speaks of a certain life-posture. Primarily, a “disciple” is a pupil, or learner. This does not speak of a self-taught person. A pupil learns from someone else. Thus, a “disciple” is someone who IS learning from someone else. In the sense in which our text is speaking, the Teacher is the Lord Jesus Christ. He uses means to accomplish this teaching. Inwardly, the Holy Spirit is the One who brings home the teaching to the individual. Outwardly, and in our text, He is employing the apostles, who were delivering the message through which life is realized. However, in both cases, it is still the Lord Jesus who is doing the teaching.

Jesus spoke directly to this matter of being a disciple, giving us a most vivid picture of its involvements.

- “Take My yoke upon you, and learn of [from] Me ; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls” (Matt 11:29).
- “My sheep hear My voice , and I know them, and they follow Me” (John 10:27).
- “Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love me, he will keep My words : and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him” (John 14:23).

Paul also described the posture of a believer by saying they listened to, and learned from, Christ

Jesus. “But ye have not so learned Christ ; if so be that ye have heard him, and have been taught by Him , as the truth is in Jesus” (Eph 4:20-21). This, of course, is in keeping with the mandate that was issued from the Throne of God: “Hear ye Him!” (Matt 17:5).

The word “disciple” also carries the idea of a follower – one who adheres to a specific Person, and refuses to depart from Him. Their interests lie in another – their Teacher. In this case, the Teacher, and the One who is eagerly pursued, is the Lord Jesus.

The word “disciple” also carries the idea of a follower – one who adheres to a specific Person, and refuses to depart from Him. Their interests lie in another – their Teacher. In this case, the Teacher, and the One who is eagerly pursued, is the Lord Jesus.

Right here there is something important to note. There are restrictions on who is allowed to follow Jesus – particularly if they are to learn from Him. Jesus did not shroud these requirements with obscurity, but placed them squarely before the people.

- DENY SELF. “Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me ” (Mark 8:34). Those who deny themselves refuse to allow personal fleshly and worldly interests to draw them away from Christ. This is an absolute requirement for following Jesus and gaining spiritual advantage from Him.

- TAKE UP HIS CROSS DAILY. “And He said to them all , If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me ” (Luke 9:23). This speaks of determination – taking up the cross, and being ready to accept the consequences of following Jesus in this represent evil world. Again, this is required to follow Jesus and learn from Him. It is not an option, or a status achieved after considerable tenure with the Savior. It is not a higher level of discipleship, but is found in every part of spiritual life.

- NO COMPETITIVE ALLEGIANCE. “If any man come to Me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also , he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:26). At the point there is competition between one’s family and Jesus, the disciple must choose to follow Jesus. If this choice is not made, it is not possible to either follow or learn from Jesus.

- BEARING THE CROSS. “And whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me , cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:27) – bearing up under the consequences of following Jesus. This is the life that follows taking up the cross of self-crucifixion. There will be repercussions to an individual insisting on following Jesus regardless of what it costs. If the person balks at this, and chooses a course of life that lessens the sufferings, he at once ceases to be a disciple. He can no longer follow or be taught by the Lord Jesus.

- FORSAKING ALL. “So likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath , he cannot be My disciple” (Luke 14:33). Everything that a person possesses must be held lightly, knowing that it may be lost in a moment. To forsake all that one has is to acknowledge that it is temporal, and will not be allowed to dominate one’s thinking.

Jesus will receive no one who does not meet this criterion. In such a case, the person is disqualified from being taught or led by Jesus. That also means that no one who fails on these points can receive Christ, for it is not possible to receive Him, yet not be His disciple.

Applying This to Our Text

When our text refers to “the disciples,” it is speaking about this kind of people. They had forsaken all, and were following Jesus. They were taking up their cross daily, and were being taught by Jesus.

Our Present Circumstance

If you read the book of Acts with the church of today in your mind, it will look like a book of ideas. Or, perhaps, it will be perceived only as the record of beginnings. But you may be sure of one thing, it will bear absolutely no resemblance to the nominal church.

In our time, it is thought that there are two classes Christians: ordinary ones and committed ones. It is imagined that there are two kinds of saved people: those who only have accepted Jesus as their Savior, and others, more advanced, who have gone on to receive Him as Lord. It is also generally accepted that there are two kinds of Christians: spiritual Christians, and carnal Christians. These are commonly held views, and anyone who objects to them is considered to be too judgmental.

Every person who comes into Christ is freed from the law of sin and death (Rom 8:2). That is how they all got started. If they come under the dominion of sin again, it is because they have drawn back (Heb 10:38-39). That is not the way they were “created in Christ Jesus” (Eph 2:10). Everyone who is baptized into Christ puts on Christ (Gal 3:27). If they come to a point where they must be admonished to put Him on again (Rom 13:14), it is because they have put Him off in deference to the flesh. That is not the way they got started. All of the children of God began newness of life with their old man crucified (Rom 6:6). If they must admonished to “put off the old man” again (Eph 4:22), it is because they left him off the cross. That is not the way they got started.

We really do not need preachers and teachers giving us a palatable explanation why there is sin in the church. It is because those who are so described have ceased to Christ’s disciples – if they ever were in the first place. They have not resisted the devil, and thus have been overcome by him. They have not crucified the flesh, and are therefore dominated by it. To further complicate their situation, Jesus neither leads or teaches such people. If they are ever to recover from their plight, they must again become a disciple – a real one who forsakes everything to follow Jesus, and sits at His feet to learn from Him. That simply is what Jesus requires, and no honest person will balk at it.

IN THOSE DAYS

“ 6:1a And in those days when the number of the disciples was multiplied.”

The book of Acts is not a chronological journal in which every event is recorded. As was the manner with inspired men, they did not give a prolonged record of times in which a certain consistency existed – whether evil or good. The period of Adam to the flood (approximately 1,655 years) is covered by six chapters in the Scriptures (Gen 1-6). Three of those chapters are devoted to creation and the account of the fall of man. The events that are recorded include:

- The creation, including the naming of the animals and the creation of Eve (1:1-2:25 – 56 verses).
- The fall of man (3:1-24– 24 verses).
- The birth of Cain (4:1 – 1 verse).
- The birth of Abel (4:2 – 1 verse).
- The first offerings to God (4:3-4 – 2 verses).
- The murder of Abel ().
- Cain building a city (4:17).
- Lamech taking two wives (4:19).
- Lamech commits murder (4:23-24).
- Men beginning to call on the name of the Lord (4:26).
- The translation of Enoch (5:24).

- God’s revelation to Noah of the coming flood (6:8-7:5).

The point is that history can be measured by epochs – by things that occurred in a given period time. This is generally the way in which history is approached in Scripture. Our text is a sterling example of this.

IN THOSE DAYS

That Kingdom was set up in a hostile realm, and its constituents were surrounded by enemies. All manner of seeming disadvantage was found among those who had been joined to the King, but it presented no insurmountable difficulty.

“And in those days . . .” Other versions read, “Now at this time,” NASB “Now during those days,” NRSV “Now in these days,” RSV “But in those days,” DARBY “At that time,” GWN “About this time,” NJB and “during this same time.” IE

The time covered in this text was one in which the powers of darkness were doing their best to subvert the purpose of God. They were not in any way successful. In spite of the opposition the church encountered, it continued rolling forward like the stone in Nebuchadnezzar’s dream (Dan 2:34-35, 44-45). Having been seated at the right hand of God, Jesus had inaugurated the Kingdom that Daniel said God would “set up” (Dan 2:44-45). That Kingdom was set up in a hostile realm, and its constituents were surrounded by enemies. All manner of seeming disadvantage was found among those who had been joined to the King, but it presented no insurmountable difficulty. Ponder the marvelous things that had taken place from the day of Pentecost to this point.

- DIVINE INTERVENTION. The place where the disciples were seating was shaken, a rushing mighty wind was heard, and they were all filled with the Holy spirit (2:1-3).
- MIRACULOUS SPEAKING. The disciples declared “the wonderful works of God” in other languages (2:4,11).
- PREACHING THE GOSPEL. Peter delivers an insightful account of the death, burial, resurrection, and exaltation of Christ (2:14-37).
- GLAD OBEDIENCE. Three thousand receive His word gladly, and are baptized (2:38-41).
- STEADFASTNESS. The disciples continued steadfastly in the apostles doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers (2:42).
- SELFLESSNESS. In a display of total selflessness, the disciples had all things common (2:43-45).
- CONTINUANCE. They continued daily in the Temple and breaking bread from house to house (2:46).
- DAILY INCREASE. The Lord added daily to the church such as were being saved (2:47).
- HEALING. A man who was lame from birth is healed by Peter and John (3:1-8).
- PREACHING THE GOSPEL. As the people rush to behold what had happened, Peter delivered another insightful proclamation of the exalted Christ (3:12-26).
- LARGE NUMBERS BELIEVE. Five thousand men believed the word Peter delivered (4:4).
- PREACHING THE GOSPEL. Peter and John are arrested, and deliver a Word concerning the death, resurrection, and exaltation of Jesus (4:1-3, 5-22).

• FERVENT PRAYER. Upon hearing of the threatenings of the Temple authorities, the disciples pray with one accord for boldness to speak the Word, and it is granted (4:24-33).

• SHARING. The disciples again had all things common, and no one among them lacked. Brethren began selling lands and houses in order to meet everyone's need (4:34-37).

• PURGING. The church is purged of moral pollution, as Ananas and Sapphira are struck dead by God (5:1-10).

• SIGNS AND WONDERS. Many signs and wonders were done by the apostles, and multitudes of believers were added to the Lord (5:11-14).

• HEALING. Multitudes came out of the surrounding cities, bringing their sick to be healed, and "every one of them" was healed (5:15-16).

• DELIVERANCE. The apostles are arrested, put into prison, and released by an angel during the night. The angel tells them to return to the Temple and declare all the words of this life (5:17-19).

• PREACHING THE GOSPEL. Upon returning to the Temple and resuming their preaching, the apostles are arrested and questioned. During that time, Peter again delivers a stirring declaration of the death, resurrection, exaltation, and present work of Jesus (5:26-32).

• DELIVERANCE. The council, being cut to the heart, determine to kill the apostles. However, providentially, Gamaliel is used by God to turn their hearts. After beating the apostles and charging them to preach no more in the name of Jesus, they are released (5:33-40).

• PREACHING AND TEACHING. The apostles return to their preaching and teaching, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Jesus (5:40-42).

This is the context for the phrase "those days." As you can see, this was not an environment produced by human strategies or plans. It was not the result of an apostolic conference. This was the working of the Lord, and was wrought within the framework of faith and discipleship.

Some have affirmed that this is the way things were at the first, but is not the way things were intended to remain. The official position is that the miraculous was terminated with the death of the apostles. Then the church entered into a period of, what is viewed as, normalcy. By default, that gives a prominent place to natural aptitudes and the wisdom of men, even though that is not always acknowledged. Of course, this position is taken because of the vast chasm of difference that exists between the early church and the church of our time.

However, it is more likely that this difference can be accounted for by a departure from the faith, than a change in the Divine manner. Christ's Kingdom is an increasing one, not a diminishing one. In fact, it was prophesied there would be "no end" to its increase (Isa 9:7), and that before it is finished it will fill "the whole earth" (Dan 2:35,45).

It seems to me that a very limited purpose is served by confining events, such as those mentioned, with the beginning of an era. I suppose it could be affirmed that this establishes the legitimacy of the church. However, that is a very weak view, both intellectually and spiritually. It would be like saying the miraculous order revealed in the nation of Israel ended when they left Egypt, or when Moses died, or when Joshua died, or when David died . . . etc. None but a fool would be willing to confirm such a position.

Our text speaks of something that occurred "in those days." The point was not to limit the possibility of what follows to those days, and I do not believe anyone is willing to affirm such a postulate. This will rather confirm to our hearts that when the Lord is working, that does not mean the devil ceases to work – at least while the world remains. It does not mean that when the disciples are of one heart and soul that disruptions will not occur. When there is peace, we are not to imagine that an encroachment cannot be made among the brethren.

The truth is that disruption, encroachment, and similar things, provide an occasion to prove the superiority of the wisdom that comes down from above. If the people are walking by faith, and if they and their teachers are abiding in Christ, imaginations will be cast down, and every thought taken captive to the obedience of Christ (2 Cor 10:5).

THE NUMBER OF DISCIPLES WAS MULTIPLIED

“ . . . when the number of the disciples was multiplied . . . ” Other versions read, “when the number of disciples was multiplying ,” NKJV “the number of disciples was increasing ,” NIV “the disciples were increasing in number ,” NRSV “the number of disciples grew ,” GENEVA “the disciples had become numerous ,” MRD “the number of disciples continued to grow ,” NAB “as the believers rapidly multiplied ,” NLT “with the believers multiplying rapidly ,” LIVING “more and more people were becoming followers,” IE “the number of disciples was growing larger and larger ,” ISV “the number of disciples was greatly increasing ,” AMPLIFIED “the number of disciples was continually increasing ,” PHILLIPS “a lot of people were now becoming followers of the Lord,” CEV and “the number of disciples kept growing .” GNB

The teaching that was being done produced these kind of people – people who left all to take up their cross every day and follow Jesus, adhering to His teaching. In your judgment, is this the kind of people that are the products of modern evangelism?

We must not lose sight of what is being said here. This was not an increase in membership, as commonly conceived. There are numberless churches whose membership far exceeds their active people. A church with 1,000 members will probably have only about 500-600 active people – and that is a high estimate. It was the number of DISCIPLES that was increasing – people who were forsaking all, taking up their cross, and following Jesus. These were people who were sitting at the feet of Jesus and learning from Him as Mary did (Lk 10:39).

It was what was being preached that drew these disciples, for “faith cometh by hearing” (Rom 10:17). That preaching was absolutely Christ-centered. “Disciples” are not the result of a soul-winning campaign, as ordinarily conceived. Jesus had commanded His disciples, “Go ye therefore and teach all nations, , baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.” As they went forward with that work, He promised, “and lo, I am with you, alway even unto the end of the world” (Matt 28:18-20). Mark gives the same perspective: “And He said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned” (Mark 16:15-16). That is the proper framework for the making of “disciples,” or learners, or pupils– between “teaching” and “teaching.” In the place of “teaching all nations,” more recent versions read “make disciples.” NKJV/NASB/ NIV/NRSV The Greek word from which “teaching” (in both verses nineteen and twenty of Matthew twenty-eight) is translated is maqhteusate (math-ayt-yoo-say-tay). The lexical meaning of this word, in this tense, is, “to make a disciple, to teach, instruct,” THAYER “make a disciple of someone, instruct, cause someone to become a follower,” FRIBERG and to make “make a disciple of someone, instruct, cause someone to become a follower.” LOUW-NIDA

The teaching that was being done produced these kind of people – people who left all to take up their cross every day and follow Jesus, adhering to His teaching. In your judgment, is this the kind of people that are the products of modern evangelism? Is this what is being produced on the average mission field? Is this the description of the average Bible College or Seminary student? Few people will have the courage to say it is. Such people are an aberration in the average church. In fact, proportionately few Christians have any significant perception of what Jesus taught – particularly about being His disciple .

Over the past fifty-five years, I have preached in hundreds of churches. The relative rarity of real disciples has been a consistent perception that registered upon my spirit. The same has been true of my travels abroad, with the single difference that people in those countries were generally more eager to become disciples . There are countless multitudes who say they are Christians who have no appetite for the Word of God – even though it is the means of sustaining newness of life (Lk 4:4). They are not following Jesus wherever He goes, abiding in Him, or cleaving to Him with purpose of heart. They entertain only a casual interest in Him, and are not seeking first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. Such people are not disciples! Either they have not heard the kind of preaching and teaching that makes disciples , or they have heard it and lingered on in the church with their fingers in their ears.

If this is a proper assessment of the conditions among professed believers, why does it exist? One of the reasons is that too much emphasis is put on recruitment for the institution. There is also the uncomely aggressiveness to baptize people who have not yet given any indication they want to be a disciple of Jesus. This is one reason why Paul affirmed, “For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: not with wisdom of words, lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect” (1 Cor 1:17). This does not minimize the importance of baptism. It does, however, suggest that we had better be sure our teaching has produced genuine disciples – the kind of disciples that will be of “one accord,” “one heart and soul,” and steadfast continuance in the “apostles doctrine, fellowship, the breaking of bread, and prayers.” If that is not the kind of people who are being produced, they have not been added to Christ’s church, and remain “dead in trespasses and sins.” If this is not true, then the New Covenant is no better than the Old Covenant, which left men unchanged.

From a practical point of view, the TEACHING is what makes the difference. That is what produces good disciples, for a disciple is a learner.

This is clearly what Jesus had said to his disciples: “preach the Gospel . . . teach all nations . . . teaching them.” That is what will yield real disciples – disciples who will not balk at any commandment delivered to them by the Master.

THERE AROSE A MURMURING

“ 1b . . . there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.”

This is the sixth attack of the body of believers.

- From without, the Temple authorities confronted and incarcerated Peter and John (4:1-3).
- From without, Peter and John and examined by the council and threatened (4:5-21).
- From within, Ananias and Sapphira lie to the Holy Spirit (5:1-10).
- From without, The council arrests the apostles, putting them in the common prison (5:17-18).
- After an angel released them, the apostles are again arrested, beaten, and released with the command to speak no more in the name of Jesus (5:26-40).
- From within, murmuring arises among the disciples (6:1-7).

After these attacks there was an significant increase in the number of disciples.

- Five thousand men believe (4:4).
- Multitudes of men and women were added to the Lord (5:14).
- The disciples were multiplied (6:1).

Now, amidst the swelling multitudes of disciples, a potentially dreadful thing occurs.

A MURMURING OF THE GRECIANS

“ . . . there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews . . .” Other versions read, “there arose a complaint against the Hebrews by the Hellenists,” NKJV “a complaint arose on the part of the Hellenistic Jews against the native Hebrews,” NASB “the Grecian Jews among them complained against the Hebraic Jews,” NIV “the Hellenists complained against the Hebrews,” NRSV “there arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews,” ASV “protest s were made by the Greek Jews against the Hebrews,” BBE “Greek-speaking Jews complained about the Hebrew-speaking Jews,” GWN “the Grecian disciples murmured against the Hebrew,” MRD “there were rumblings of discontent . Those who spoke Greek complained against those who spoke Hebrew,” NLT “there arose a grudge among the Greeks against the Hebrews,” PNT “Those who spoke only Greek complained,” LIVING “the Greek-speaking Jewish followers had an argument with the Aramaic-speaking followers,” IE and “complaint was made by the Hellenists (the Greek-speaking Jews) against the [native] Hebrews.” AMPLIFIED

Murmuring was the downfall of over half-a-million Israelites. The occasion of record was when the ten spies brought back a false report of the land of Canaan, and the people believed them. That was a sad day for Israel, for their sin had escalated out of control. At that time the Lord said, “Your carcasses shall fall in this wilderness; and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against me. “ (Num 14:29). At the time of the evil report, Moses told Israel, “ye murmured in your tents” (Deut 1:27). Hundreds of years later, David also made reference to the occasion: “Yea, they despised the pleasant land, they believed not his word: but murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD” (Psa 106:24-25). Now, murmuring has arisen among the disciples of Christ. Will that murmuring spread as it did in Israel, or within the framework of the New Covenant, will there be a more God-honoring response? In this case, we will see the superiority of the New Covenant lived out in a very dangerous circumstance.

The Grecians

These were not Gentile Grecians, but Jews who were there from other parts of the world. Prior to the dominion of Rome, and in strict accord with the prophecy of Daniel concerning the succession of world empires (Dan 2:31-35), the Greeks had conquered the world under the leadership of Alexander the Great, which had previously been conquered by the Persians. Alexander was the “rough goat” of Daniel’s prophecy (Dan 8:21). He headed up the empire depicted as a “kingdom of brass,” and was third in the succession of world empires that began with Babylon (Dan 2:39). The Grecian kingdom was also depicted as a swift leopard which had dominion given to it by God (Dan 7:6). Because he ruled over all the world, Alexander the Great launched into a campaign to bring all the world to speak the Greek language. In history, the period of time during which the Greek language dominated the world is referred to as the Hellenistic Age. It spanned a period of over six hundred years. It is for that reason that the Gentile world is often referred to as “Greeks” (Acts 19:10,17; 20:21; 21:28; Rom 1:14,16; 10:12; 1 Cor 1:22,23,24; Gal 3:26; Col 3:11).

At the tower of Babel, the language of the people was confounded, and they were dispersed throughout the world. A little over three hundred and fifty years before Pentecost, although driven by ignoble motives, an effort was launched to unite the language of the world. Providentially, this was in order that all the world would be able to receive the Word of God, and hear and read the Gospel of Christ.

In all of this the peculiar Jewish language – Hebrew – was still spoken in the “land of the Jews” (Acts 10:39). Yet, at the time of our text, there were “devout Jews” from other nations visiting the city for the Passover Feast. While there, many of them – perhaps thousands – heard the Gospel, believed, and had become disciples of Jesus. Now, in an effort to disrupt and even remove the body of Christ, Satan foments a set of circumstances that causes murmuring to erupt. Within the church, the Greek speaking Jews complained against “the native Hebrews.”

THEIR WIDOWS WERE NEGLECTED

“ . . . because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations.” Other versions read, “because their widows were neglected in the daily distribution ,” NKJV “because their widows were being overlooked in the daily servicing of food ,” NASB “because their widows were not taken care of in the distribution of food every day ,” BBE “claimed that the widows among them were neglected every day when food and other assistance was distributed ,” GWN “saying that their widows were being discriminated against in the daily

However, in due time, the flesh was allowed to enter by means of some form of indiscretion. Whether it was owing to something intentional, as the complaint affirmed, or simply unintentionally because of a lack of wisdom, we do not know.

Here we have a glimpse of what was involved in the sharing of goods among the disciples. Previously, there have been at least three references to this practice.

- “And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need ” (Acts 2:44-45).
- “And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul: neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common ” (Acts 4:32).
- “Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need ” (Acts 4:34-35).

Here it is apparent that distribution was not made on a crisis basis. There was a “daily ministrations,” or “distribution.” NKJV Food and other necessities were distributed in the same manner as God gave Israel manna during their wilderness journeying – “daily” (Ex 16:5). In this way the hoarding of food, or the temptation to have more than others, was neutralized.

Keep in mind that until this time, apart from the twelve apostles, there was no manager of this daily distribution. It was done within a context of unity and accord, because the people “were of one heart and of one soul” (Acts 4:32). The storehouse of resources was managed by the apostles, for the money obtained from the sale of properties and goods was brought to them (4:35,37; 5:2).

However, in due time, the flesh was allowed to enter by means of some form of indiscretion. Whether it was owing to something intentional, as the complaint affirmed, or simply unintentionally because of a lack of wisdom, we do not know.

Historians position the events commencing with the apostles imprisonment and beating as much as two years after the day of Pentecost. A considerable amount of time had elapsed without any significant disruption among the disciples themselves. However, alas, now there is a small breach, and it can become potentially large, threatening to spread and hinder the propagation of the Gospel. How did such a thing occur?

Apart from the complaint registered by the Greek-speaking Jews, we are not told the specific weakness that allowed for potentially contaminating influences. However, we do know from Scripture that someone had made a place for the devil, whether on purpose or because of ignorance. This is why we are warned to be “sober” and “vigilant,” for the devil is prowling about, “seeking whom he may devour” (1 Pet 5:8). It is not without reason that believers are admonished, “Neither give place to the devil,” or “do not give the devil an opportunity” NASB (Eph 4:27). If we are ignorant of Satan’s devices, he will gain “get an advantage over us” (2 Cor 2:11).

The people of God must not be overly simplistic in their relationships with one another. It is, for example, possible for believers to develop a carnal familiarity with one another so that they fail to “put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil” (Eph 6:11). He is looking for an entrance point, and the people of God must take care not to provide him with one. An “occasion to the flesh,” or “opportunity for the flesh” NASB (Gal 5:13), is not necessarily equivalent to the indulgence of the flesh. It is rather a circumstance that leads to the indulgence of the flesh. Perhaps it is an unguarded moment, a lack of wisdom, a thoughtless word, or some naive deed that has not taken results into consideration.

The manner in which the apostles address this situation confirms that it did not result from some deliberate sin – like the pride and covetousness of Ananias and Sapphira. They will therefore labor to avoid it leading to a sin which requires repentance. A congregation is blessed that can foresee evil and hide themselves from its encroachment (Prov 22:3; 27:12).

THEY CALLED THE MULTITUDE OF THE DISCIPLES

“ 2 Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.”

At this time, there is an obvious submission to the apostles, whom Jesus placed “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). With gracious authority, they summoned the whole body of believers together. This is itself a staggering thing to consider. In fact, if “the unity of the Spirit” was not present, it could not have been done.

THE TWELVE CALLED THE DISCIPLES

“Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said . . .” Other versions read, “ summoned the multitude of disciples,” NKJV “summoned the congregation of disciples,” NASB “ gathered all the disciples together,” NIV “called together the whole community of the disciples ,” NRSV “summoned the body of disciples ,” RSV “ sent for all the disciples,” BBE “summoned the full number of the disciples,” ESV “ convoked the whole company of the disciples,” MRD “gathered all the disciples together ,” NIB “called a full meeting of the disciples,” NJB “having called near the multitude of the disciples,” YLT “called the whole group of followers together,” LIVING “called together the general body of the disciples,” WEYMOUTH and “ convened the multitude of the disciples.” AMPLIFIED

At this time, there is an obvious submission to the apostles, whom Jesus placed “first” in the church (1 Cor 12:28). With gracious authority, they summoned the whole body of believers together. This is itself a staggering thing to consider. In fact, if “the unity of the Spirit” was not present, it could not have been done. We do not know the number involved in this gathering, but it would be large, even in today’s mega-church environment. In general terms, we can get some idea of the magnitude of this group. First, things began with a least one hundred and twenty (1:15). Then, three thousand were added, bringing the minimum number to three thousand, one hundred, and twenty. After that, “the Lord added daily to the church such as should be saved” (2:47). Then five thousand men believed (4:4), bringing the number to well over eight thousand, one hundred and twenty. As long as two years later, “multitude of both men and women” were added to the group (5:14), besides the multitudes added between the healing of the lame man and then. It seems to me that an ultra-conservative number can be estimated to be at ten thousand minimum, and as high as fifteen or twenty thousand. There were a lot of people, and the records confirm that to have been the case.

Can you imagine convening a multitude of that size? Better yet, can you fathom such a mass of people being managed by twelve men? I know of congregations with barely over 1,500 members who have a paid staff of fifteen or twenty, with scores of other leaders and committees. However, there is no indication in the record that gathering this multitude together was attended by any great difficulty. This is the effect of regeneration upon the individuals, and the unity of the Spirit collectively.

SOMETHING UNREASONABLE

“ . . . It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.” Other versions read, “ It is not desirable that we should leave the word of God and serve tables,” NKJV “It is not desirable for us to neglect the word of God in order to serve tables,” NASB “It would not be right for us to neglect the ministry of the word of God in order to wait on tables,” NIV “It is not right that we should give up preaching the word of God to serve tables ,” RSV “ It is not fit that we should f orsake the word of God, and serve tables,” ASV “It would not be right for us to give up preaching about God to wait on tables,” CSV “It's not right for us to give up God's word in order to distribute food ,” GWN “We apostles should spend our time teaching the word of God, not running a food program,” NLT “ It is wrong for us to quit teaching God's message to serve tables instead,” IE “It is not seemly or desirable or right that we should have to give up or neglect [preaching] the Word of God in order to attend to serving at tables and superintending the distribution of food,” AMPLIFIED and “It is not right that we should have to neglect preaching the Word of God in order to look after the accounts .” PHILLIPS

Although popular modern preachers are known for their administration, this was not the way of the apostles of Christ. Here was something that had to be done, but it was out of order for the apostles to do it. Jesus had not called them to be business managers, or to superintend special programs of the early church. It is not that such things did not need to be done. Rather, it is that the apostles were not the ones to do it.

When men are asked to leave laboring in the Word and the doctrine to administer food programs, it is wrong, for it is against sound reasoning. However one may choose to view ministries pertaining to our bodies, they come “AFTER” the teaching gifts (1 Cor 12:28). That is the order in which God placed them in the church, and they must not be allowed to be given the chief place, or require the extensive involvement of those who are teachers of the Word of God. I once knew a very gifted man who had a fair grasp of the Word of God and the ability to communicate it. Because his brethren did not prefer that kind of labor, he ended his life handing out food and clothing at a rescue center. It is not that assisting the poor was wrong, it was that it was wrong for him to be required to do it. It was not sound reasoning on his part to leave teaching the Word to engage in that work, and it was wrong for anyone to expect him to do so.

The fact that the work about to be addressed was important is confirmed in the qualifications for those who would be chosen to do it. Spiritual Babylon is widely noted for its faulty allocation of Kingdom people. It is not unusual to find them assigning a genuine teacher to janitorial work, or some other service duty. It is equally as normal to find those who ought to be serving tables occupying the role of a teacher.

The apostles knew where Jesus had placed them, had a hearty appetite for the Word of God, and refused to be moved from giving themselves to it.

It is always wrong to expect someone to do something for which they have not been duly gifted by the Lord. It is also wrong to not ignore the ministry for which one has been suited by the Holy Spirit. Jesus is the Head of the body (Col 1:18), and the Holy Spirit is Administrator of spiritual gifts (1 Cor 12:4,7-11). When men refuse to honor the choice of Jesus and the governance of the Holy Spirit, it is a serious matter.

The Priority of the Word of God

The words of the apostles confirm the absolute priority of the understanding and preaching of the Word of God. At this point, the burden of the preaching was directed to the disciples themselves, who were continuing steadfastly in “apostles doctrine” (2:42). They were living out what Paul would articulate with unusual clarity some years later. “But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ: from whom the whole body fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love” (Eph 4:15-16). The development of maturity among the brethren, resulting from the preaching of the Word, will be confirmed in this very text.

- The ability of the congregated disciples to select spiritually qualified men.
- The presence of several competent men into whose hands an essential ministry could be placed.

When a person has spiritual insights, and the ability to communicate them, it is not right for them spend their time in servile functions of the body of Christ. That involves unfaithfulness to the stewardship of the truth. Notwithstanding this circumstance, the modern church is intent upon hiring professional clergyman who carry out the religious requirements of congregational leaders who frequently present no evidence of spiritual maturity. The actual grasp and preaching of the Word of God is not very high on their religious agenda. Further, congregations as a whole provide very little time for hearing the Word of the Lord. The result of this distorted sense of values is so evident that only the disinterested fail to see it.

The apostles knew where Jesus had placed them, had a hearty appetite for the Word of God, and refused to be moved from giving themselves to it. God hasten the day when preachers and teachers within the professed church will see the need for such commitment, and refuse to submit to the stunted desires of those who have no understanding of these things. It simply is neither right nor reasonable to submit to people who have no understanding of this.

The Matter of Missions

A word needs to be said about the matter of missions. In recent decades, an immature church has produced missionaries and missionary programs that are largely given over to relief work.

Although I have not traveled extensively throughout the world, I have noted with remarkable consistency the absence of spiritual maturity and knowledge in foreign missions. Rarely will you find a gathering of believers among whom the people are being changed from glory unto glory.

There remains a remnant of faithful workers who see the priority of preaching the Word of God. However, they are in a decided minority. Although I have not traveled extensively throughout the world, I have noted with remarkable consistency the absence of spiritual maturity and knowledge in foreign missions. Rarely will you find a gathering of believers among whom the people are being changed from glory unto glory. It is true that many have left idolatry and reprehensible personal and social practices. However, they are often not adept at handling the Word of God, comprehending the mysteries of the Kingdom, or being able to admonish and edify one another. This is not an acceptable situation – particularly when it has continued for many years. It exists because someone has left the Word of God to serve tables, and it is not right. God does not have a separate standard for third world countries.

The Priority of Prayer

Lest the uniformed imagine that the apostles are speaking about the development of spiritual bookworms, there is also the consideration of prayer – of leaders giving themselves to prayer. This is not a morning or evening prayer, but a manner of life in which there is total dependence upon the Lord of glory. The apostles were men who were keenly aware of the necessity of Divine leadership.

Jesus Himself is the example of being given to prayer. Throughout His prodigious ministry, He would withdraw for prayer (Matt 14:23; Mk 6:46; Lk 6:12; 9:18,18; 11:1; John 17). We know that these occasions were not infrequent, for it is said that he “oftimes resorted” to prayer in Gethsemane “with His disciples” (John 18:2). Since “the servant is not greater than his master” (John 13:16), the apostles would not be turned aside from prayer in order to meet the temporal needs of the people. However, this did not mean they were willing to ignore them. They would, in godly wisdom, provide for that ministry to continue to the glory of God.

The Serving of Tables

What does it mean to “serve tables?” The word “serve” means to “minister to one . . . supply the necessities of life, relieve one’s necessities, provide care for, distribute, etc ” STRONG’S ” As it is used here, the word “tables” means “a table on which food is placed, an eating table,” THAYER “a place for spreading out meals,” FRIBERG “a dining table,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and “a meal, food.” GINGRICH Here, then, the apostles are referring to the distribution of food to those who were lacking. Widows were the particular focus of the complaints, but others might very well have been included who were remaining in Jerusalem, although they were from other countries.

A WORK THAT REQUIRED INSIGHT AND SPIRITUALITY

“ 3 Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.”

What kind of men are required to administer the procurement and distribution of food among believers? Remember, this was not a food program for the poor people of Jerusalem and the surrounding cities. It was not a program to which the multitudes of beggars might repair, finding their daily needs. No man of sound mind will frown on such a work, but that is not the focus of this text. Here we are speaking about providing the needs of the brethren.

CHOSEN FROM AMONG YOURSELVES

“Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men . . .” Other versions read, “seek out from among you seven men,” NKJV “choose seven men from among you ,” NIV “ select from among yourselves,” NRSV “ pick out from among you seven men,” RSV “ Take then from among you seven men,” BBE “ search out, and elect from among you, seven men,” MRD “ Now look around among yourselves , dear brothers, and select seven men,” LIVING “find from among your own number seven men,” MONTGOMERY “ select out from among yourselves , brethren, seven men,” AMPLIFIED and “You, our brothers, must look round and pick out from your number seven men.” PHILLIPS

At this time, and in keeping with the nature of the Kingdom, there was not an organization that specialized in the training of special servants. There was not religious school to which they could appeal, or any training institute. They were not to import someone from another place who had success in this type of work. The resource pool was the congregation itself. Being a healthy body, they could find the needed people “among” themselves. There are countless congregations that would disappear from society if they were limited to their own number for people to administer valid works – particularly if they had to meet the qualifications laid down by the apostles, who had the mind of Christ on the matter.

Seven Men

There is no indication of the magnitude of this work. However, the total number of this congregation could well have been between fifteen and twenty thousand. If only one percent of them required aid, that would be between 150-200. Five percent would be 750-1000. Without indulging in distracting speculation, it is evident that this was a sizeable work. How many men will be required? Some rather small churches have 6-8 deacons, whose only job is to pass the communion and collection trays. Surely this work will require a fairly good number of men.

Endued with the wisdom that comes down from above, the apostles specify “seven men.” Proportionately, this would be similar to the “seventy” men provided to Moses for judging of Israel – dealing with their complaints (Num 11:16). That was a situation involving a traveling city of, conservatively speaking, two to five million people.

As you can see, in the cases of both Moses and the apostles, the number of administrating men differed significantly from the thinking of the church of our day. After Moses, and prior to the Kings, Judges were given to Israel one at a time. When Jesus chose men to reach the entire world, He selected twelve, who gave particular attention to the Jews (Gal 2:7-8). When He chose a man to reach the entire Gentile world, He chose one single man – Paul. This conflicts with the world’s notion about organization, responsibility, and management. You would be hard pressed to find any local congregation who operates with this kind of wisdom.

Something About the Early Church

The church to which we are now being exposed had not yet been corrupted. Therefore, things can be seen in it that attest to the nature of spiritual life. Here was a significantly large body of people who were decidedly familiar with one another. Although they numbered in the thousands, they would be asked to select seven of their number who met particular qualifications. There are still those who insist that believers can get “lost in the crowd,” and so they prefer small congregations, where everyone knows each other. If that is really sound reasoning, how do we account for this text? How was it possible for them to have the kind of familiarity that will be necessary for this assignment?

Remember, this was a church that was continuing “steadfastly in the apostles’ doctrine, in fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayers” (Acts 2:42). They met together “daily” in the temple, and from house to house (Acts 2:46,47; 5:42). They were “of one accord” (2:46; 5:12), and “were of one heart and of one soul” (4:32).

It is within the context of frequent gatherings and singleness of heart that they became familiar with those among them who were unusual or gifted. They came to know each other as brethren within the framework of consistent devotion and expression. This was also the environment in which spiritual gifts were cultured, so that those possessing them could confirm their reality through insightful expression. This will be apparent in the words of instructions that follow.

CHOOSE A CERTAIN KIND OF MEN

“ . . . of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom . . .” Other versions read, “of good reputation, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom,” NKJV “ who are known to be full of the Spirit and wisdom,” NIV “ of good standing , full of the Spirit and of wisdom,” NRSV “ of good repute , full of the Spirit and of wisdom,” RSV “ of good name , full of the Spirit and of wisdom,” BBE “ well reported of , full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom,” DARBY “whom the people know are spiritually wise ,” GWN “of whom there is good testimony , men full of the Spirit of the Lord, and of wisdom,” MRD “who are well-attested , full of the Spirit and of wisdom,” NET “who are well respected and are full of the Spirit and wisdom,” NLT “who are well testified of , full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom,” YLT “wise and full of the Holy Spirit, who are well thought of by everyone ,” LIVING “of good and attested character and repute , full of the [Holy] Spirit and wisdom,” AMPLIFIED and “of good reputation who are both practical and spiritually-minded .” PHILLIPS

The seven men to be chosen had to meet a certain standard. Three qualifications were specified. Remember, the distribution of food was the responsibility, together with the various details associated with it.

Men of Honest Report

These had to be men who were highly regarded by the Christian community. The words “honest report” have to do with spiritual qualities – things related to faith and one’s association with the Lord and His people. Cornelius had a “good report” among the Jews (Acts 10:22). Ananias, called of God to set Saul of Tarsus aside for the apostleship had “a good report of all the Jews” who knew him (Acts 22:12). Through faith, “the elders” among Israel “obtained a good report” (Heb 11:2). All of the saints of past ages, because they lived by faith, “obtained a good report” (Heb 11:39). John the beloved spoke of one Demetrius, who “had good report of all men and of the truth itself” (3 John 1:12). Young Timothy was “well reported of by the brethren that were at Lystra and Iconium” (Acts 16:2). A widow who was being supported by the local congregation was required to be “well reported of for good works” (1 Tim 5:10).

This would be a godly person whose commitment to the Lord was beyond all question. When the brethren gathered together, this is a man who would be there, not forsaking the assembling of himself with the saints (Heb 10:25). He was active in holy expressions, with “good and attested character and repute.” AMPLIFIED

How many men do you know like this? If you do know of any, it is because of the acquaintance you developed with them in the work of the Lord. This qualification does not have to do with mere human kindness and domestic integrity. Such qualities, while not to be despised, can be obtained independently of faith and commitment to Christ.

There are vast numbers of churches who never meet often enough for a person to obtain a good report. Even when they do meet, the structure of their gatherings does not allow for the surfacing of godly qualities. Holy assemblies, when brethren dwell together in unity, are times when each individual becomes like a city “that is set on a hill” (Matt 5:14) – like a candle that is put on a stand shedding light throughout the whole house (Matt 5:15). I do not know if it would be possible to obtain the “honest report” required by these instructions independently of meeting with the saints.

“Full of the Holy Spirit”

Once again, keep in mind that we are speaking of distributing supplies to those with need. Those selected for this work were required to be full of the Holy Spirit.

This is not a wisdom that is acquired through schooling, but has more to do with discernment, which enables the individual to use knowledge in such a manner as will glorify God and assist His people. The area of distribution had already become a troublesome one, and the early church could ill afford for that condition to continue.

The language here is precise, and must be grasped – particularly in view of much contemporary teaching about the Holy Spirit. The qualification does not say, “one who was filled with the Holy Spirit” – pointing a particular time in the past. Warped sectarian theology has taught people to view being filled with the Spirit as a particular point in time, so that it is seen as a solitary, or perhaps infrequent, experience. But that is not the kind of thing referenced here.

The word “full” refers to a present condition. It is one in which the whole person – heart, soul, mind, and strength – is being influenced by the Holy Spirit. This describes a person who is not a surface Christian – a member of the Sunday-morning-only crowd. It is a person who has a love for the truth and is culturing it. This is the person described by Jesus: “He that hath My commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him . . . If a man love me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him” (John 14:21,23).

This is a person who neither grieves nor quenches the Holy Spirit (Eph 4:30; 1 Thess 5:19). He is walking in the Spirit (Gal 5:16,25), and being “led by the Spirit” (Rom 8:14). Through the Spirit he is mortifying “the deeds of the body” (Rom 8:13), and is abounding in hope “through the power of the Holy Spirit” NKJV (Rom 5:13). The “fruit of the Spirit” is evident in him (Eph 5:9), and he is waiting for “the hope of righteousness” through the Spirit (Gal 5:5). To be “full of the Holy Spirit” is to be filled with the things He does.

“Full of Wisdom”

It ought to be readily apparent why those responsible for distributing food were required to be filled with wisdom. Again, this is a present condition: “full of wisdom.” Wisdom involves “broad and full intelligence,” and here means “skill in the management of affairs.” THAYER Other lexical meanings are, “the ability to use knowledge for correct behavior, insight, understanding,” FRIBERG “to act wisely – to be prudent,” LOUW-NIDA and “sound judgment, intelligence, practical wisdom.” LIDDELL-SCOTT Wisdom would be required to make an equitable division of supplies among the people receiving support – particularly the widows, so that none would be neglected.

This is not a wisdom that is acquired through schooling, but has more to do with discernment, which enables the individual to use knowledge in such a manner as will glorify God and assist His people. The area of distribution had already become a troublesome one, and the early church could ill afford for that condition to continue.

A Question

How do you suppose the average American church would respond to a directive like this? Would they know what it meant? Keep in mind that the church was under two years old at this time. Many of the believers had been added well after the day of Pentecost. The apostles, who had the edge over the others in experience as well as giftedness, had just been subjected to an additional three years with the Lord Jesus Himself. Yet, behold what things are being done by these believers!

Some might object, saying they had access to supernatural insight and wisdom, and therefore cannot be compared with our time. Is this a proper assessment of the case? Is the era of the New Covenant stronger at its beginning, having benefits that were not provided to later generations? Is there anything foretold about the New Covenant, or any exposition of it after its inauguration that suggests this kind of thing? Did the early church have spiritual resources that were unique to them – things not included in “all spiritual blessings” (Eph 1:3), and “all things that pertain to life and godliness” (2 Pet 1:3)? Is such a view ever prophesied or proclaimed?

If such a view cannot be substantiated, then the early church had nothing more to work with than we do. Their faith could not access more Divine resources than the faith that is obtained today. Of course, that is the precise point that Peter makes in his Second Epistle. “Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:1). Other versions read, “a faith of the same kind as ours,” NASB “a faith as precious as ours,” NIV “a faith of equal standing with ours,” RSV and “(obtained an equal privilege of) like precious faith with ourselves” AMPLIFIED There is, after all, only “one faith” (Eph 4:5), and it is “the faith of God’s elect,” not the faith of the apostles (Tit 1:1).

This is why the apostles could charge the whole congregation of disciples as they did. As the children of God, they had access to all of the resources required to select men who were filled with the Holy Spirit and with wisdom. That condition – being filled with the Holy Spirit and wisdom – was not unique to the first century. Nor, indeed, were men of this caliber only available at that time.

Let it be clear, this was not the operation of a democratic process, where people voted their preferences. Rather, this involve the exercise of discernment. It was a process through which God’s own choice was implemented. In a sense, their responsibility was to concur with Divine judgment by recognizing the qualities that were necessary for the work – a daily work.

APPOINTED OVER THE BUSINESS

“ . . . whom we may appoint over this business.” Other versions read, “ put in charge of this task,” NASB “We will turn this responsibility over to them,” NIV “appoint to this duty,” RSV “ give control of this business,” BBE “ establish over this business,” DARBY “put them in charge of this problem,” GWN “ place them over this business,” MRD “appoint to this needful business,” TNT “set over this necessity,” YLT “confirm them to be over the work,” IE “appoint them to undertake this duty,” WEYMOUTH “assign to look after this business and duty,” AMPLIFIED and “put them in charge of this matter.” PHILLIPS

The teaching, therefore, is that believers are to learn to engage in honest and honorable employment in order that they might obtain the necessities of their life in this world, and assist in meeting the needs of their brethren as well. In this way, they will not be drawn aside into vain and worldly living that stops the bearing of fruit unto God.

Here is an exercise that involved the use of “the keys of the kingdom of heaven” (Matt 16:19). The apostles knew what had to be done, informed the disciples what was required, and prepared to ordain the men to the work.

There is no responsibility within the body of Christ that does not require a good and godly reputation, wisdom, and being filled with the Spirit – even food distribution! This would, if known, revolutionize the choice of leaders and servants within modern churches. It would also emphasize the necessity of spiritual maturity – growing up into Christ in all things (Eph 4:15) – as well as inducting massive changes.

“This Business”

The average American associates the word “business” with making money. But that is not how the word is used here. This term is translated from the Greek word crei,aj (cry-as), which means

“necessity, need . . . necessary uses,” THAYER “necessity . . . needful,” FRIBERG “that which is lacking, and is particularly needed,” LOUW-NIDA and “use, advantage, service.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

In this sense, therefore, “business” is an orderly and godly approach to meeting some necessity. We know from the creation itself that God does things in an orderly manner. Experience will tell you that randomness cannot yield consistent profit, because it has no arrangement to it. The human body is another example of orderliness. As soon as something becomes random, it does not function correctly. The door is then opened to weakness and infirmity. In the necessity being addressed in this text, a daily distribution could not be properly accomplished by sporadic and undisciplined means.

The teaching of Scripture also accents this aspect of necessity, as compared with luxury, and a quest for things that are really not needed. In Paul’s letter to Titus, he spoke to this issue. “And let ours also learn to maintain good works for necessary uses , that they be not unfruitful” (Titus 3:14). The word “ours” means “our people,” NKJV or we Christians . The “good works” of reference are “honest labor and honorable employment.” AMPLIFIED “Necessary uses” refers to the necessities of life, as compared with its luxuries. It can also refer to the rising of critical needs among those around us, as in this text. The word “unfruitful” refers to a state of non-productivity, where life becomes vain and pointless – bearing no fruit unto God. The teaching, therefore, is that believers are to learn to engage in honest and honorable employment in order that they might obtain the necessities of their life in this world, and assist in meeting the needs of their brethren as well. In this way, they will not be drawn aside into vain and worldly living that stops the bearing of fruit unto God. It ought to be apparent that laboring for this world’s luxuries has an inhibiting effect upon spiritual life.

This must not be interpreted as making a law concerning why we are employed or how others are to spend their money. However, in each believer’s thinking, the priority must be given to a quest for the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. We must maintain a tenacious grasp on the fact that “the fashion of this world passeth away” (1 Cor 7:31), and “all that is in the world... is not of the Father, but is of the world” (1 John 2:15). That perspective will enable us to make a proper assessment of what is “necessary.”

GIVING THEMSELVES TO PRAYER AND MINISTERING THE WORD

“ 4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.”

At this point we are confronted with the priorities of the apostles – and spiritual leaders must have the proper priorities. It is further apparent that men cannot establish what takes the precedence in matters pertaining to the work of the Lord. If this was not the case, the murmurers would have moved the apostles from prayer and the word to waiting on tables. I fear that this is exactly what has happened in a significant portion of Christendom.

GIVE OURSELVES CONTINUALLY

“But we will give ourselves continually . . .” Other versions read, “devote ourselves.” NASB “give our attention to,” NIV “continue steadfastly in,” ASV “give ourselves up to,” DARBY “spend our time in,” NLT “use all of time to,” IE “continue to devote ourselves steadfastly to,” AMPLIFIED and “devote ourselves whole-heartedly to.” PHILLIPS

One of the strategies of the devil is to get believers to fritter away their time by doing much and only accomplishing a little. In our text, this would happen if the apostles spent their time distributing food rather than in the task for which Jesus had chosen them. Let it be clear that God is not glorified by primarily serving people. As simplistic as it may sound, the Lord is served directly , not indirectly, by doing His will, pleasing Him, and accomplishing what He has sent men to do. Jesus, for example, did not spend all of His time washing the disciples feet. We know this was not a constant activity of

His, because when He did do it, it was a surprise to them. In fact, Peter responded, “Thou shalt never wash my feet” (John 13:8). On another occasion, when the people were pressing Jesus to such an extent that He could not leave them, he responded, “I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also: for therefore am I sent ” (Luke 4:43).

Men cannot serve God in any meaningful capacity without becoming expert in His Word, by which they live. I do not believe there is any spiritual gift, or aptitude, that can be effectively ministered independently of the Word of God and prayer. Notwithstanding that perception, spiritual Babylon has carved out a number of professions and areas of service in which a person can remain miserably ignorant and unacquainted with God’s word. Unless God has changed His manner, such activity is really a waste of time. I seriously doubt that the blessing of God can even be upon it. If men “live by every word of God” (Lk 4:4), how is it possible for them to ignore it and still serve God? If the Scriptures have been given “That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works” (2 Tim 3:17), what work is there within the body of Christ that can be done to God’s glory while a person remains unlearned in Scripture?

When servants of God are required to devote their attention to doing the will of men, they are being asked to leave the path of discipleship. This will be clear in what the apostles here affirm.

Those who labor for the Lord must give themselves to it. That is, they must invest of themselves in their work, pouring their hearts, souls, minds, and strength into it. Peter referred to this when he wrote, “If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth: that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ , to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen” (1 Pet 4:11).

The circumference of our activity within the body of Christ is determined by the ministry in which God has placed us. It is written, “But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased Him” (1 Cor 12:18). This is the area in which special grace will be ministered to each person, and is the domain in which individual labors are to be expended.

A Word Concerning Discovering Your Place Within the Body of Christ

First of all, it is important to note that the nominal church suppresses the very idea of members being in a “body.” Members are rather viewed as being part of an institution, whose purpose they are expected to serve. Within that context, the various spiritual gifts that are mentioned in Scripture have little meaning. These gifts include the following.

- Apostles (Eph 4:11; 1 Cor 12:28)
- Prophets (Eph 4:11; Rom 12:6; 1 Cor 12:10,28)
- Evangelists (Eph 4:11)
- Pastor/Teachers (Eph 4:11)
- Ministry, or service (Rom 12:7; 1 Pet 4:11)
- Teaching (Rom 12:7; 1 Cor 12:28)
- Exhorting (Rom 12:8)
- Giving (Rom 12:9)
- Ruling (Rom 12:8)
- Showing mercy (Rom 12:8)
- Word of wisdom (1 Cor 12:8)
- Word of knowledge (1 Cor 12:8)

- Faith (1 Cor 12:9)
- Gifts of healing (1 Cor 12:9,28)
- Discerning of spirits (1 Cor 12:10)
- Speaking differing languages (1 Cor 12:10,28)
- Interpreting different languages (1 Cor 12:10)
- Working of miracles (1 Cor 12:10,28)
- Helps (1 Cor 12:28)
- Governments (1 Cor 12:28)
- General speaking gifts (1 Pet 4:11)

The question here is not whether or not all of these gifts are still valid. They are Divinely placed in the church – the real church – and men have no power at all over their placement. Further, their role is to fulfill the will of God. The variety of gifts will perfectly accord with the work God has laid out for the congregation and the area in which they reside. We should not expect the gifts that were found in the Jerusalem church to be found in every church. That is why the gifts mentioned in Ephesians differ from those mentioned in Romans and Corinthians.

As with every facet of spiritual life, the individual finds their role within the framework of the life of the body. Further, the purpose of the teaching and leadership gifts is to mature the body, so that each individual part can effectively function. This is the perspective that is developed in both Ephesians and Colossians.

Ephesians outlines the purpose of the four proclamation and teaching ministries (Eph 4:11-16): apostles, prophets, evangelists, and pastor/teachers. The latter gift emphasizes the leadership and care (pastor), and is the means through which it is accomplished (teacher).

- These gifts are designed for the “perfecting,” or maturing, “of the saints” (v 12a).
- That maturity has to do with fulfilling their role in the body: “the work of the ministry” (v 12b).
- The aim of that work is “the edifying of the body” (v 12c).
- Edification is intended to bring the brethren into the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God (v 13a).
- The unity of reference targets spiritual maturity, with each member fulfilling their role in the body, functioning in that role as Jesus Himself (v 13b).
- The intent of maturity is that the people no longer be tossed to and fro by the winds of false doctrine (v 14).
- That stability enables them to speak the truth in love (v 15a).
- Speaking the truth in love enables the members to grow up into Christ in all things (v 15b).
- Growing up into Christ brings the people to a point where Jesus can minister to His body through the individual (v 16a).
- That mutual ministry causes the body to increase in the image of Christ (v 16b).
- That increase brings the body to a point where it can edify, or build up, itself in love (4:16c).

The point of this rather lengthy section is to confirm that you will find your role in the body of Christ in the valid activities of that body – just as surely as the seven men mentioned in this text found theirs. They did not find it on a mountain, in isolation from the rest of the body, but in the steadfast involvements of that body.

It is apparent that this objective is like a lost jewel in the modern church. Yet, this is precisely what we see being lived out in the book of Acts. The apostles knew the Lord's objective, as well as their role in it. Their awareness of these things was cultured in the presence of Jesus, and with their fellow disciples. That is the spiritual environment in which they were nurtured. This is all involved in the apostles refusal to leave their role to serve tables. They will so direct the brethren as to enable both their maturity and their increased involvement, which is the result of their maturity.

Much of the history of the church, and even the world, will depend on the stability and mutual ministry of the church in Jerusalem. It must be strong, with all of the members growing up into Christ, and thus becoming equipped to fulfill the role in which God had placed them.

PRAYER AND THE MINISTRY OF THE WORD

“ . . . to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.” Other versions read, “prayer and servicing the word,” NRSV “prayer and the teaching of the word ,” BBE “praying and to servicing in ways that are related to the word ,” GWN “spend our time in prayer, preaching, and teaching ,” LIVING “pray and to teach the message of God ,” IE ‘prayer and to the delivery of the Message ,” WEYMOUTH “prayer and the word of God ,” WILLIAMS and “ whole-heartedly to prayer and the ministry of the Word.” PHILLIPS

As was taught under the Law, the priority of their activity related first to God, then to men: prayer (God), and the ministry of the Word (men). This priority is reflected throughout Scripture. Here are a few examples.

- “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself” (Matt 22:37-39).
- “But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness ; and all these things shall be added unto you” (Mat 6:33).
- “For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. For he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men ” (Rom 14:17-18).
- “And this commandment have we from Him, That he who loveth God love his brother also ” (1 John 4:21).
- “Submit yourselves therefore to God . Resist the devil, and he will flee from you” (James 4:7).

Men must grow accustomed to the presence of the Lord before they can profitably engage in His work. There is no valid ministry that does not require an acute consciousness of God and His will. No person can properly expound the Word of God who is not in active fellowship with Him through Christ Jesus.

The Reasoning

The reasoning here is this: if it is God to whom we are reconciled in Christ, there is no legitimate activity that requires Him to take second place. If Jesus is bringing us to God (1 Pet 3:18), then anything that draws our primary attention from Him cannot possibly be right. There is no way to justify involvement in anything that tends to lessen the importance of the One who saved us and our relationship to Him. Although this represents rudimentary Kingdom thinking, we are living in a time when the message and activities of the professed church have obscured this truth. Those who teach distorted religious emphases in the name of Christ are much like the Philistines who filled the wells dug by Abraham with “earth” (Gen 26:15,18). This is a very serious infraction, and the results it has yielded confirm it.

Prayer

The apostles affirm that they will continue to give themselves to prayer. That is, they will yield themselves to this priority. The point here is not the nature or subject of their prayers. Prayer can take many forms: Thanksgiving, praise, supplication, intercession, etc. The point here is that prayer was a means of withdrawing from the world and culturing the soul in the presence of the Lord – as Jesus did (Matt 14:23; Mk 1:35; 6:46; Lk 5:16; 6:12; John 6:15).

Even David, living in the time of lesser revelation, knew the significant role prayer plays in the life of faith. “For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness” (Psa 84:10). Men must grow accustomed to the presence of the Lord before they can profitably engage in His work. There is no valid ministry that does not require an acute consciousness of God and His will. No person can properly expound the Word of God who is not in active fellowship with Him through Christ Jesus.

Therefore, the apostles will give themselves to prayer, wherein their spirits will be cultured, and through which Divine direction will be realized. This is in keeping with the nature of salvation and the spiritual fabric of the New Covenant. In prayer, a certain awareness of God and His will is developed that is essential to life.

The Ministry of the Word

The apostles declared that the selection of seven spiritually competent men to oversee the daily distribution was in order that they might give themselves to “the ministry of the Word.” What does this mean? As used here, the expression “ministry” means “service, ministering, especially of those who execute the commands of others,” THAYER “arrangement for provision, serving, preparation,” FRIBERG “contribution, support, help,” UBS and “distribution.” GINGRICH

The person who ministers the Word brings the Word of God to the table of thought. He has an understanding of the objective of Scripture, and is able to correlate it with circumstance. Those who receive the ministry of the Word become more God-conscious, and advance in their understanding of Christ’s Person and work, and the Divine intent behind God’s “so great salvation” (Heb 2:3).

The effective minister of the Word is approved of God, and is able to correctly handle that Word (2 Tim 2:15). He is acutely aware of the fact that he will give an account to God for the manner in which he handles Scripture. Because this kind of minister plows in the field of Scripture, and not in the nettle-strewn fields of human wisdom, he can preach the Word, being instant, or ready, in season and out of season (2 Tim 4:2). That is involved in ministering the word of God.

In our time, the ministry of the Word does not rank very high in the church world. Preaching and teaching the Word of God is given very little time, and during very few occasions. Under the leadership of low-ranking novices, men are being taught that praising God takes the precedence, and therefore more time is given to it in the contemporary churches. That is, people are actually being taught that what they say to God is more important than what He says to them. We now have youth groups that emphasize games, videos, music, and the likes, with little or no subjection to the Word. It is not unusual to have senior citizen groups in the church that go on pleasure outings regularly, yet remain fundamentally ignorant of the word.

It all may sound innocent, but it is not. Somewhere along the line, the Word of the living God is not being given the priority, and the results tell the story. The apostles refused to adjust to such a posture and perspective, and we must refuse to do so also.

THE SAYING PLEASED THE MULTITUDE

“ 5a And the saying pleased the whole multitude.” Other versions read, “the statement found approval with the whole congregation,” NASB “This proposal pleased the whole group,” NIV “what they said pleased the whole community,” NRSV “his saying was pleasing to all of them,” BBE “what they said pleased the whole gathering,” ESV “The suggestion pleased the whole group,” GWN “this proposal was acceptable before all the people,” MRD “Everyone liked this idea,” NLT “the thing was pleasing before all the multitude,” YLT “This sounded reasonable to the whole assembly,” LIVING “The suggestion met with general approval,” WEYMOUTH “This plan commended itself to the whole body,” MONTGOMERY and “This brief speech met with unanimous approval.” PHILLIPS

You can see from some of the versions of Scripture that the translators (if they can be so called) had their sectarian glasses on when they put the text into English. “The twelve” did not deliver a “suggestion” GWN to the people. Their words were not a “proposal,” MRD nor were they the expression of an “idea” NLT – something they had conceived.

THE SAYING

“And the saying . . .” The word “saying” comes from the Greek word ὁ λόγος (the log-os). That is, this was a succinct and cogent thought, delivered through the power of the Holy Spirit from Jesus Himself. In one sense, it was an answer delivered from heaven. In another sense it was a directive to take proper action. It was wisdom from above compressed into a message. The article “the” is in both the Greek and the English. That indicates it was not a general word, but a specific word, pointed and complete in all aspects.

This was a word spoken from the Head through the key members of His body. That is how the Lord ministers to the church. Therefore it is written, “And not holding the Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God” (Col 2:19). The point of this word is that some men came to the church with “beguiling words” – words that were nothing more than their own carnal perceptions. In their case, handling the Scriptures was nothing more than them “intruding into those things which” they “had not seen, vainly puffed up with” their “fleshly mind” (Col 2:18). They were trying to direct the church independently of the Head of the church! The church, therefore, was to pay no attention to them. They were only cluttering the landscape of life with foolish notions.

This is not a display of successful salesmanship, or even of powerful persuasion. The word was brief, yet all of the people – “the whole multitude” were in thorough agreement with it. They saw the sense of it, and were therefore not opposed to it. In fact, they immediately embraced the word and set out to obey it.

It is Jesus who nourishes the church (Eph 5:29). It is the “Great Shepherd of the sheep” who directs them (Heb 13:20). In this text, He is doing it through the twelve apostles.

PLEASED THE WHOLE MULTITUDE

“ . . . pleased the whole multitude.” Even though murmuring had arisen among the believers, men had not yet become divided. They were still able to take hold of the truth, and recognize wisdom when they heard it. In other words, the Holy Spirit so orchestrated these sensitive brethren that Satan’s objective was thwarted. When men are “slow of heart to believe” (Lk 24:25), the devil can more readily gain a foothold, causing division in the church. If this same circumstance had taken place today, leaders would probably have pioneered a Greek-speaking church and a Hebrew-speaking church, separating the disciples to avoid contention. In contradiction of an expression of worldly wisdom, the apostles deliver a word that will allow for the correction of the problem that has arisen. Their word also provides for the ongoing of their work, which will result in the establishment of the church as well as the spread of the Gospel and the conversion of sinners.

There is no record of a single dissenting word. Rather, the whole multitude of people are “pleased” with the word delivered by the apostles. The word translated “pleased” does not indicate a mere emotion. It rather means the people adjusted their thinking, coming into agreement with the apostles. The word from which “pleased” is translated means, “to accommodate oneself to the opinions, desires, and interests of others,” THAYER to be “won over” to the thinking of another,” FRIBERG to “accept” what is said, UBS “to feel good about,” LOUW-NIDA “to satisfy,” LIDDELL-SCOTT and for something to be seen as “good.” LEH

This is not a display of successful salesmanship, or even of powerful persuasion. The word was brief, yet all of the people – “the whole multitude” were in thorough agreement with it. They saw the sense of it, and were therefore not opposed to it. In fact, they immediately embraced the word and set out to obey it.

This would be considered a kind of epoch if all that was involved was the average church board or group of elders. Few people would consider this possible for any size congregation. Normally churchmen operate on the majority rules. But here everyone agreed and was pleased – everyone . Let us not forget that we are not considering a small group of people. Prior to Jesus’ exaltation, there were times when the apostles were not agreed among themselves (Matt 20:24). Here, by way of comparison, we are speaking of thousands of people – as many as 15,000-20,000! How is it that such a marvelous unity could be found among them?

This is owing to several key circumstances.

- These were real converts, having believed, obeyed, and become disciples of Jesus.
- They had been taught properly , following “the apostles’ doctrine.”
- They had brother love , continuing in fellowship and prayer with one accord.
- They had a proper sense of values , continuing daily in the Temple and from house to house in their quest for the things of God.
- They had been in a deeply spiritual environment, where the Word and work of God were prominent.

Here is an example of “the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace” (Eph 4:1). There was no more murmuring, for the issue that caused it was brought to an abrupt conclusion. This is also an example of “the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God ” (Eph 4:13), for the brethren all saw the issue alike, and were pleased with what they now saw. It is possible to have a view of unity that is nothing more than patiently putting up with one another, or not condemning one another over lesser matters. In some circles – particularly the one from which I came – this was considered to be a gigantic stride forward. However, how do such achievements appear next to this text? Is it really a giant leap forward when we can talk without fighting, or meet together without condemning one another? Is that really spiritual growth?

It seems to me to be on the part of wisdom to cease from holding forth baby-steps as through they were broad-jumps. Better to set forth noble examples of real unity, like that of our text – where one word is received from one source, and everyone sees the sense of it, are pleased with it, and instantly obey it.

THEY CHOSE THE MEN

These people were the fruit of apostolic preaching and teaching. They had continued steadfastly “in the apostles’ doctrine,” and this is some of the fruit realized from it – the ability to comprehend the truth, Take hold of, and do it.

“ 5b . . . and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch.” Other versions read, “they made selection,” BBE “they elected,” MRD and “they selected.”

WEYMOUTH

THEY CHOSE

“ . . . and they chose . . . ” The method of choosing is not specified. Considering the vastness of the multitude, it may not have been by means of casting lots. It appears to me that there is a reason for not spelling out the details of the choosing, Men would have cast it in religious stone and made it a law for choosing servants.

Here, the point is not the procedure but the accomplishment. These were people who had the same life, purpose, and perspective. They had been instructed to choose men who were “full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom” (verse 3). The people did not ask what that meant, but simply proceeded to do it. Ponder what a state of confusion would be caused if that qualification were declared in a straightforward manner today. Each denomination would have their own idea of what being “full of the Holy spirit” meant. A significant percentage of Christendom would have no idea what it meant. Imagine selecting five different professing Christians and asking what was meant by “full of the Spirit.” Presume you asked a Baptist, a Presyterian, a Pentecostal, a Methodist, and a member of the Christian Church. Can you even imagine all of them giving the same answer – and there are literally hundreds of additional sects in Christendom! The people in our text, however, all agreed, having the same understanding and making the same choices.

How do you suppose the various church bodies would interpret “full of wisdom?” Some would consider it to be equal to a college education, others to seminary training, and still others to having experience in social work. Again, these believers knew what to do, which is a revelation of their perception and commitment.

These people were the fruit of apostolic preaching and teaching. They had continued steadfastly “in the apostles’ doctrine,” and this is some of the fruit realized from it – the ability to comprehend the truth, Take hold of, and do it.

STEPHEN

“ . . . Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost . . . ” Other versions read, “a man unusually full of faith and the Holy Spirit,” LIVING “a man of great faith and full of the Holy Spirit,” IE “a man full of faith (a strong and welcome belief that Jesus is the Messiah) and full of and controlled by the Holy Spirit,” AMPLIFIED and “He had great faith and was filled with the Holy Spirit.” CEV

Here is a most unique man. He is the subject of the next seventy verses (6:5-8:2). Several things are said of him.

- He was full of faith and of the Holy Spirit (6:5).
- He was full of faith and power (6:8).
- His presence in the synagogue was so significant that certain from the synagogue of the Libertines, together with others outside of Judea, disputed with him (6:9).
- He spoke with a wisdom and power that could not be resisted (6:10).
- He was full of the Holy Spirit (7:55).

- He was the first one of record who saw Christ after He was enthroned (7:55).
- He was the first Christian martyr (7:59-60).

The record of the message he delivered covers fifty-one verses comprised of 1,268 words (7:2-53). So far as the record is concerned, that is exceeded in length only by the sermon on the Mount (Matt 5-7). By way of comparison, the record of other messages and teachings after Jesus' exaltation are as follows.

- Peter on the day of Pentecost – twenty-four verses (Acts 2:14-37).
- Peter in Solomon's porch – fifteen verses (Acts 3:12-26).
- Peter at the Jerusalem conference concerning the acceptance of the Gentiles – five verses (Acts 15:7-11).
- James at the Jerusalem conference – nine verses (Acts 15:13-21).
- Paul in Antioch of Pisida – thirty-two verses comprised of 782 words (Acts 13:16-47).
- Paul in Athens – ten verses (Acts 17:22-31).
- Paul's defense – twenty-one verses (Acts 22:1-21)
- Paul's defense before king Agrippa – twenty-seven verses comprised of 660 words (Acts 26:2-23, 25-27,29).

Of course, this does not mean Stephen was more prominent than Peter and Paul. It does, however, substantiate that much faith does much. The eighth verse of this same chapter affirms that Stephen was “ full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.” So far as the Scriptural record is concerned, this is first mentioning of any person who was not an apostle being so distinguished.

Full of Faith

What a marvelous description of a man! In all, of the Bible, the only two men said to have been “full of faith” are Stephen and Barnabas. Stephen is twice said to have been “full of faith” (Acts 6:5,8). Barnabas is said to have been “full of the Holy Ghost and faith” (Acts 11:24).

Elsewhere the Scriptures affirm that Abraham was “ strong in faith, giving glory to God” (Rom 4:20). Those who were commended to God prior to Jesus “ obtained a good report through faith” (Heb 11:39). The apostolic doctrine also speaks of us drawing near to God “in full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22). Paul commended the Thessalonians because their faith “ grows exceedingly ” NKJV (2 Thess 1:3). The faith of the saints in Rome was being “ spoken of throughout the world” (Rom 1:8).

Throughout the years, I have been impressed with the seeming unimportance of faith in the professed Christian community. There is little talk of it, and even less evidence of it. I do not hear people being commended for their faith, and there is little being said that is calculated to strength or increase faith. Yet, where faith is “little” (Matt 6:30), “weak” (Rom 14:1) or not at all apparent (Mk 4:40), spiritual growth is, at the very best, very slow. Those in Christ are admonished, “But ye, beloved, building up yourselves on YOUR most holy faith , praying in the Holy Ghost” (Jude 1:20). Some versions read, “IN your most holy faith.” NASB/NIV Faith is the practical foundation upon which spiritual lives are built. Those lives can extend no further than the foundation upon which they are built. Little faith – little life. Small faith – small life.

Technically, being “full of faith” was not a qualification for the servants that were to be chosen. The precise specifications were:

- Of honest report.

- Full of the Holy Spirit.
- Full of wisdom.

However, all three of the specified requirements are based upon faith, which is the engine of spiritual life. We are children of God “by faith” (Gal 3:26). We live “by faith” (Rom 1:17). We stand “by faith” (2 Cor 1:24). We walk by faith (2 Cor 5:7). We receive the promised Spirit “through faith” (Gal 3:14). We wait for the hope of righteousness “by faith” (Gal 5:5). Christ dwells in our hearts “by faith” (Eph 3:17). The righteousness of God is obtained by faith (Phil 3:9). We obtain the promises of God “through faith” (Heb 6:12). We are kept by the power of God “through faith” (1 Pet 1:5).

In the matter of salvation, everything we obtain from God is held by faith.

It is not possible to be “full of faith,” and yet not be full of the Holy Spirit. Nor, indeed, can one be “full of faith” and be dominated by ignorance, or not filled with wisdom. Faith is the cognitive principle of the Kingdom of God. It is what enables the individual to traffic in heavenly realms. It neutralizes the attractiveness of this present evil world, and causes one to “taste of the powers of the world to come” (Heb 6:5).

An Important Thing to See

Thus, he did not have the advantages of the twelve, the seventy, or many other disciples who followed Jesus closely – like Mary, Martha, Lazarus, and others. Yet, he excelled to a remarkable degree.

Stephen is an example of what a member of the body of Christ can be. He was not an apostle, and was apparently not from Jerusalem. The name Stephen indicates that he was one of the Hellenistic Jews – perhaps among those classed as “devout men, out of every nation under heaven” (Acts 2:5). This is further confirmed by the fact that he was teaching in the “synagogue of the Libertines,” or “Freedmen, as it was called” NIV (6:9). The narrative states that the people meeting in this synagogue were “Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia” (Acts 6:9). That means they were from North Africa, Alexandria, and Asia Minor. History confirms that Jews coming to Jerusalem from other countries had synagogues in which their own language was spoken.

If, as it appears, Stephen was one of these people, he had probably been converted on the day of Pentecost, or perhaps later in Solomon’s porch. He had likely not have been a follower of Jesus during our Lord’s ministry, unless he had come to one of the feasts where Jesus taught. In my judgment, he could not have been among “the seventy,” whom Jesus chose and sent out to preach midway through His ministry. Thus, he did not have the advantages of the twelve, the seventy, or many other disciples who followed Jesus closely – like Mary, Martha, Lazarus, and others. Yet, he excelled to a remarkable degree.

- He excelled the others who were chosen.
- He excelled other Hellenistic Jews.
- His labors excelled the office for which he was chosen.

It is the nature of salvation to promote spiritual growth and excellence. Once a person commences living by faith and walking in the Spirit, there is no known limit of what that person can do. The only true boundary is determined by the will of God as reflected in “the measure of faith” given to the individual (Rom 12:3). That “measure” is what determines the role of the individual in the body of Christ (Rom 12:4). In no way, however, is it to be thought of as a limitation.

Take, for example, the office of a deacon, or servant. This is the kind of role we are seeing in our text. A person can be faithful in this office and use it as a means to obtaining an even more extensive ministry. Thus it is written, “And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless . . . For they that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 3:10,13). Stephen is a perfect example. First, he was “proved,” or tested, being found full of faith, the Spirit, and wisdom. Second. He used the office well moving on to a “good degree,” or higher standing. NASB

These principles, as well as a host of others, are being lived out in the book of Acts. Let them be an encouragement to your heart.

PHILIP

“ . . . and Philip . . .” Philip is also a distinguished man in this group. Having used the office of a deacon well, he later went down to Samaria “and preached Christ unto them” (8:5). He was also a prodigious miracle worker, for it is written, “And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed. And there was great joy in that city” (Acts 8:6-8). Philip’s ministry in Samaria was of such magnitude that a well known sorcerer in that city, Simon by name, “believed also, and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip” (8:13). Philip was not an apostle, and thus these converts eventually required the key men to come and minister to them. When the church in Jerusalem “heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they had come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost” (8:14-15).

Following the conversion of Samaria “the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert” (Acts 8:26). Upon arriving at the designated place, “behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship” (Acts 8:27). The angel told Philip to go near and make contact with the man. He did, and the result was that this man from the African quadrant of the world believed, was baptized into Christ, and went on his way rejoicing to Ethiopia (8:28-39). Philip was then “found at Azotus, and passing through he preached in all the cities, till he came to Caesarea” (Acts 8:40).

Much later in this book, Paul and his companions stayed Philip’s home. It is written of that occasion, “And the next day we that were of Paul's company departed, and came unto Caesarea: and we entered into the house of Philip the evangelist, which was one of the seven; and abode with him. And the same man had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy” (Acts 21:8-9).

Thus, we have another marvelous example of how a person can excel in the body of Christ.

THE OTHERS

“ . . . and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch ..”

This is the only time these five brethren are mentioned in Scripture. The only things we know about these particular men are as follows.

- They were men of honest report.

The very mention of such men brings an honor and dignity to them that cannot be otherwise be realized in this world. We have here a sort of miniature picture of the day of judgment, when those who have excelled in Christ Jesus will be praised by God Himself.

They were full of the Holy Spirit.

- They were full of wisdom.

- They were chosen and set before the apostles.
- The apostles laid their hands on them,” appointing them over the business of food distribution.

One of them, Nicolas , was a convert to Judaism from the Gentiles – “a proselyte of Antioch.” A “proselyte” was “one who has come over from a Gentile religion to Judaism,” THAYER “one who has come over into Judaism from another religion, becoming a full Jew by being circumcised and by accepting the obligation of observing Jewish laws,” FRIBERG and “a convert to Judaism.” UBS Here, then, was a man who had rapidly advanced in the faith. Originally from a heathen background, this man had embraced Judaism, and obviously moved forward in the ranks. He heard the Gospel, perhaps on the day of Pentecost, believed on the Lord Jesus, and grew quickly to a man of note among the disciples.

If you wonder how significant it is for an individual to be mentioned only briefly in Scripture, consider how you would feel if it was your name in the text. The very mention of such men brings an honor and dignity to them that cannot be otherwise be realized in this world. We have here a sort of miniature picture of the day of judgment, when those who have excelled in Christ Jesus will be praised by God Himself. If we are not drawing much attention in this world, let us seek to obtain the spirit of these seven men.

Then, with determination, and putting your hand to the plow, recall the marvelous words of First Corinthians 4:5: “Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God ” (1 Cor 4:5). God be praised for the rich heritage of those who put their trust in God!

THEY SET THEM BEFORE THE APOSTLES

“ 6 Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.”

In our day, there is considerable confusion about who are premier people in the church. Today is a time when motivators, life-coaches, counselors, organizers, administrators, and the like, are being given the preeminence. However, this was not the manner of the early disciples. They did not put a value on those who were expert in the ways of the world, or were especially trained in special schools to do religious work. The early church listened to the apostles, continuing in their doctrine, even though they were totally lacking in worldly credentials. Their total upbringing was within the context of Jewish life. The same was true of the apostle Paul, who obtained his learning at the feet of an esteemed Jewish leader who was an expert in the law of Moses.

Ancient philosophy had been in vogue for over six hundred years, beginning in the Grecian culture around 585 B.C. Socrates, credited with laying the foundation for Western philosophy, was born in 470 B.C., and died in 399 B.C. His greatest student was the Greek philosopher Plato. He lived from 428 B.C. to 348 B.C. Great Jewish leaders, members of God’s chosen race, who lived during the time of Socrates and Plato include the following: Malachi, Ezra, Joel, and Nehemiah. Most of the time of the philosopher’s influence fell in the inter-testamental time between Malachi and John the Baptist.

Yet, with all of that ancient prominence, their wisdom did not creep into either Judaism or the early church. The believers during the time of our text gave no indication whatsoever of any reliance on, or high regard for, worldly wisdom. They rather relied on holy men who had been with Jesus, who Himself totally rejected the wisdom of this world. This is confirmed in the record before us.

Something to Note

These servants were only chosen when there was a work for them to do. They were not filling an office, but a function in which it was necessary to be filled with the Holy Spirit and wisdom. When the organization of the local assembly includes the creation of offices that are not dictated by need, the church has started to drift on vanity's ocean. No office should be appointed and filled unless there is a genuine need for it. Furthermore, no one should be appointed to a formal function in the body of Christ who does not have a good report, and is not full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom.

Therefore, having selected suitable men for a necessary function, the men are placed before the apostles.

THEY SET THEM BEFORE THE APOSTLES

“Whom they set before the apostles . . .” Other versions read, “brought them before the apostles,” NASB “presented these men to the apostles,” NIV “had these men stand before the apostles,” NIV “they took to the apostles,” BBE and “they put these men before the apostles.” IE

I understand this to have been a committing of the men to the work to which they were appointed, calling upon the Lord to sustain them with appropriate gifts and abilities. It is always a solemn occasion when someone is set apart for the work of the Lord.

These were the primary people in the body of Christ, placed there “first” by God Himself (1 Cor 12:28). However, it brought great glory to Christ when the people recognized this and submitted their choice to the apostles for validation and dedication.

The choice of the people was subject to the assessment of those who were skillful “in the word of righteousness” (Heb 5:13). This confirms that the church is not a democracy.

WHEN THEY HAD PRAYED

“ . . . and when they had prayed.” Other versions read, “after praying,” NASB “who prayed,” NIV “they praying ,” DOUAY and “prayed for them .” NLT

It is appropriate that the men who gave themselves to prayer would do so as certain men were set apart for the work of the Lord. I understand this to have been a committing of the men to the work to which they were appointed, calling upon the Lord to sustain them with appropriate gifts and abilities. It is always a solemn occasion when someone is set apart for the work of the Lord.

THEY LAID THEIR HANDS ON THEM

“ . . . they laid their hands on them.” Other versions read, “they imposed hands upon them,” DOUAY “and placed their hands upon these ,” GWN and “as they laid their hands on them .” NLT

Throughout the history of God's people, the laying on of hands has been a formality that has been honored. It is even listed as part of the elemental principles of the doctrine of Christ: “. . . the principles of the doctrine of Christ . . . of laying on of hands . . .” (Heb 6:1-2).

- Early, before the giving of the Law, Jacob blessed the sons of Joseph, laying his hands upon them (Gen 48:14).
- In the tabernacle sacrificial service, the high priest laid his hands upon the sacrifices (Ex 29:10,15,19; Lev 1:4; 3:2,9,13).
- If the whole congregation of Israel sinned a sin through ignorance, not knowing what they really did, the elders were to lay their hands upon a bullock before the Lord, then sacrifice it (Lev 4:15).
- When the Levites were set apart for the Lord, the children of Israel were directed to lay their hands upon them (Num 8:10).

- When Moses set Joshua apart to take his place, God told him to lay his hand upon Joshua, set him before the priest, and “give him a charge in their sight” (Num 27:18). Moses did so, laying his hands upon Joshua (Num 27:23).

- Later Joshua is said to have been “full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him” (Deut 34:9).

- When Saul of Tarsus was set apart to the apostleship, Ananias “laid his hands upon him” (Acts 9:17).

- When Barnabas and Saul were set apart for a particular work, according to the direction of the Holy Spirit, the leaders in Antioch “fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands on them, and sent them away” (Acts 13:3).

- Timothy was set apart for the work of the Lord by means of a gift given to him “by prophecy with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery,” or “body of elders” NIV (1 Tim 4:14). Again Paul wrote of his own involvement in Timothy being set apart. “Wherefore I put thee in remembrance that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my hands” (2 Tim 1:6).

This is the act of a mature believer who validates the qualification of the person being blessed. It is a symbolic way of conferring the blessing of the Lord upon the individual for a God-sanctioned work. In the act, a certain consciousness of the gravity of the work to which the people are dedicated is created in them, as well as those who witness it. It is also a means of calling the Lord to bless the work and empower the workers in order that His name might be glorified. It is an occasion attended by great sobriety.

THE RESULTS OF SOUND JUDGMENT

“7 And the word of God increased; and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly; and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.”

Now that the murmuring has been addressed, has the solution been a sound one, and will it yield good fruit. That is the acid test of any decision made in the name of the Lord. As stated before, looking behind the scenes, this was an attempt of the devil to penetrate the church and introduce corruption, as he did with Israel. We will find that the New Covenant is superior to the Old one in every way. It has a greater glory, and it will be seen, in part, by the effects of the decisions of godly men among a godly assembly.

THE WORD OF GOD INCREASED

“And the word of God increased . . .” Other versions read, “the word of God spread,” NKJV “the word of God kept on spreading,” NASB “the word of God was increasing in power,” BBE “the preaching about God flourished,” CSB “the word of God kept on spreading,” NAS “God's message was preached in ever-widening circles,” LIVING “God's message was influencing more and more people,” IE “And the message of God kept on spreading,” AMPLIFIED “So the Word of God gained more and more ground,” PHILLIPS and “the word of God was growing.” EMTV

This is a most marvelous expression, and is totally foreign to modern concepts of church growth. It is an locution inspired by the Holy Spirit, who searches the deep things of God (1 Cor 2:10). It is therefore stated most precisely, reflecting exactly what took place.

The word of God did not increase in its volume, but in its effectiveness. It filled and satisfied more and more hearts, and more of it was being fulfilled. In its wake unbelief was conquered and imaginations were cast down. Satan had thrown up obstacles, and not only had they been cast down, there was an increase in the effectiveness of the Word.

There are other expressions of this kind of growth.

- “But the word of God grew and multiplied ” (Acts 12:24).
- “So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed ” (Acts 19:20).
- “For the hope which is laid up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel; which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit , as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth” (Col 1:5-6).
- “Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified , even as it is with you” (2 Thess 3:1).
- “Wherein I suffer trouble, as an evil doer, even unto bonds; but the word of God is not bound ” (2 Tim 2:9).

In this text we have a fulfillment of something God said of His word through the prophet Isaiah. “So shall My word be that goeth forth out of My mouth: it shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it ” (Isa 55:11).

A QUESTION

Is this how men would describe a growing church today? Is there a church growth program in all the world that yields results like this? People think of the number of people growing, but what of the Word of God multiplying and increasing? Can it be said of our time that the Word of Christ is dwelling in men richly? Or that it is producing fruit? Or that it is not bound? Do we not have men and circumstances that “suppress the truth by their wickedness” NIV (Rom 1:16). Is this not a time like that of Isaiah, when it was said, “. . . for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter. Yea, truth faileth” (Isa 59:14-15).

This circumstance is not owing to any reduction in the power of the truth itself. Whenever truth is known, regardless of the circumstances, it makes men free (John 8:32). Truth is “fallen” and “fails” when it is not proclaimed . It will not stand independently of proclamation. If men do not take the Word into their mouths and speak it from their hearts, it will not do its work. Faith always comes by hearing – but if the Word, particularly the Gospel, is not heard, faith will not come, and the Word will not increase.

What we have in our text is the effect of Gospel preaching and believing, coupled with pure hearts and the power of the Holy Spirit. There was no strategy developed by men in order to produce these results. It requires committed and insightful men to proclaim the truth, and tender hearts to take it in. Those are the kind of circumstances in which the Holy Spirit convicts sinners, and comforts and strengthens saints. That is the framework within which the Word of God will be increased.

When the Word is increased it is dominant in the hearts and minds of the people. Every other form of speaking or thinking takes a back seat, if, indeed, it is given any seat at all. Methods, techniques, humanly conceived programs and strategies all appear for what they really are in the light of Divine glory. It is then that they will properly be assigned to the dung heap, to be carried out with the rest of the trash.

DISCIPLES MULTIPLIED IN JERUSALEM

“ . . . and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly . . . ” Other versions read, “and the number of the disciples continued to increase greatly in Jerusalem,” NKJV “The number of disciples in Jerusalem increased rapidly ,” NIV “and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem exceedingly ,” ASV “and the number of the disciples in Jerusalem became very great ,” BBE “and the number of the disciples in Jerusalem was very greatly multiplied ,” DARBY “and the number of disciples in Jerusalem grew very large ,” GWN “The number of believers greatly increased in Jerusalem,” NLT “and the number of disciples increased vastly in Jerusalem,” LIVING “The group of followers in Jerusalem became larger and larger ,” IE “and the number of the disciples in Jerusalem was increasing exceedingly ,” MONTGOMERY and “and many more people in Jerusalem became followers.” CEV

Carefully note how the Holy Spirit states this case. He does not say the number of church members was multiplied. He does not say the number of Christians was increased. He does not say the congregation in Jerusalem grew larger. All of those descriptions could include people whom the Lord Himself had not received. Such descriptions are too generic, and in the current Christian climate do not mean much.

The kind of people that were being multiplied were “disciples.” These were people who were learning from Christ (Matt 11:28), for Jesus came to give men “an understanding” (1 John 5:20). They had forsaken all to follow Jesus (Lk 14:33). They had refused to allow any other relationships to get between them and Christ (Lk 14:26). They were taking up their cross every day and following Jesus, for that is what a person must do to be a disciple (Lk 9:23). Does anyone imagine that Jesus was not serious when He defined the requirements of a disciple? Is there a person among us who imagines that those qualifications can be ignored, and yet the person maintain an identity with Jesus and profit from His presence?

Prior to this, when the council had arrested the apostles, they said, “ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine” (5:28). They did not fill Jerusalem with their praises, but with their doctrine! The city was not filled with their programs, but with the doctrine – their teaching! Do you know of a city or a town anywhere or of any size that is being filled with the apostles doctrine? That is what the council called “your doctrine.” It was “the apostles’ doctrine” – the same doctrine in which the whole church was continuing steadfastly (2:42). If they thought the teaching of the apostles had pervaded Jerusalem before this, one can only imagine what they thought now.

The Head of the church plainly said, “Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen” (Mat 28:19-20). The words are clear, and there is no ambiguity about them. Yet teaching is the weak point of the modern church. Its constituents are not learned in the ways of God. They do not know what Jesus and apostles taught. It is for this reason that the results of Acts are not witnessed in our day. You cannot have the right results without the right means.

A GREAT NUMBER OF PRIESTS WERE OBEDIENT TO THE FAITH

“ . . . and a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith.” Other versions read, “and a great many of the priests were obedient to the faith,” NKJV “and a great many of the priests were becoming obedient to the faith ,” NASB “and a great many of the priests became obedient to the faith ,” NRSV “and a great number of priests were in agreement with the faith ,” BBE “and a great crowd of the priests obeyed the faith ,” DARBY “large number of priests accepted the faith ,” GWN “and a large group of priests made their submission to the faith ,” NJB “and many of the Jewish priests were converted , too,” NLT “a large number, even of priests, continued to surrender to the faith ,” WILLIAMS “and [besides] a large number of the priests were obedient to the faith [in Jesus as the Messiah, through Whom is obtained eternal salvation in the kingdom of God] ,” AMPLIFIED “Even a large number of priests put their faith in the Lord ,” CEV “Even a great crowd of the priests were attending to the faith ,” LITV and “while a considerable proportion of the priesthood accepted the faith .” PHILLIPS

As you can see, the various translators had a difficult time with the expression “obedient to the faith.” This phrase speaks of a response to the faith that God gives. Keep in mind that the qualities and aptitude of faith require that its Source be outside of ourselves. Those who have faith can see “Him who is invisible” (Heb 11:27). By means of that faith, the individual has “access with confidence” to God (Eph 3:12). Precisely what is there in the human constitution that can produce these results? Further, if fallen man cannot produce this kind of sight and access, then how is it that faith can be found in them? What did Adam give us that enables us to see Him who is invisible? What resource came from him that moves us to have access to God with confidence? These are just two of the marvelous qualities of faith that transcend all human aptitude.

Of course, it is foolish to engage in argument about this subject, for God has spoken directly to it. It is written that faith is “from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 6:23). I do not believe there is a single translation that does not clearly say this. A few of the versions read that God will “give” or “grant” faith, instead of saying it is “from God” – but the meaning is the same. Of the forty-four versions I have, there is no exception to this observation. Among other things, that means that the language is so absolutely clear that no one could miss it. It is also stated that it has been “given” to us “to believe” (Phil 1:29).

On the human side of things the faith that is given by God, or comes from God, is “obtained” by men. Thus it is written, “Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our

It is a sad day when men who profess to be from God fail to preach a Gospel that has a strong appeal to devout people. When Jesus chose His apostles, they were all in this category. When God chose the prophets, they also were all in this category. The mother and father of John the Baptist were also devout, as well as Mary the ,mother of our Lord.

Savior Jesus Christ” (2 Pet 1:1). In our text, obedience to the faith is another way of saying it was “obtained,” or “received.” NASB Some of the versions convey this idea more precisely: “were in agreement with the faith,” BBE “accepted the faith,” GWN/PHILLIPS “made their submission to the faith,” NJB “surrender to the faith,” WILLIAMS

These priests, therefore, did not “resist the Spirit,” as the council had done, and will do when they put Stephen on trial (Acts 7:51). They did not “quench” or “grieve” the Spirit of God. From another point of view, the Lord opened their hearts so they could attend, or “respond to the things that were spoken” NASB (Acts 16:14). Behold what marvelous workings were taking place as the Word of God “increased,” and “kept on spreading.” NASB

One More Thing

Observe the kind of people that are identified as being “obedient to the faith.” It was not a group of publicans or harlots, although I do not doubt that many such people were also being obedient. However, the Spirit takes the time to specify another kind of people. He does not say it was a large number of young people or old people. Rather, he specifies a “great company of priests.” This is not the first time we have read something like this. On the day of Pentecost the kind of people who responded were identified as “devout men” (2:5). Cornelius is also described as a “devout man” prior to his new birth (10:2). In Thessalonica a great multitude of “devout Greeks, and of the chief women not a few” believed and “consorted with Paul and Silas” (Acts 17:4). When Paul was in Athens, the Spirit makes a point of him disputing “with the devout persons in the market place daily” (Acts 17:17). Of course, nearly every time Paul went into a city, he went to the synagogues, where such people were more apt to be found (9:20; 13:5,14-15; 14:1; 17:1,10,17; 18:4,19; 19:8).

It is a sad day when men who profess to be from God fail to preach a Gospel that has a strong appeal to devout people. When Jesus chose His apostles, they were all in this category. When God chose the prophets, they also were all in this category. The mother and father of John the Baptist were also devout, as well as Mary the ,mother of our Lord. What is the source of the teaching that represents Jesus spending the majority of his time with the more unseemly segment of society? Why did the apostles preach in the Temple and in the houses of the disciples? What is more,. How can people be familiar with the Word of God and miss this aspect of preaching.

The Gospel is certainly intended for all men, even those with extremely uncomely backgrounds. But they were never intended to be the sole focus of the Gospel.

The real Gospel can have a strong appeal to “devout” people – those who take life seriously, and have a respect for more noble things. It is time to stop filling up the churches with disinterested people who need to be entertained, and bring in some people who delight in sober and holy thoughts.

I seriously question that a fun and games approach can be called a ministry. There certainly is not anything like this in Scripture. If someone imagines there are such approaches in the word of God, they need to ferret them out and share it with us. If it such cannot be found, then they owe the church an explanation for their preference of such an approach. Until they give a satisfactory one, they ought to be relieved of all of their duties.

CONCLUSION

It is important to again emphasize that we are reading the account of Jesus building His church. It is also an account of the administration of the Holy Spirit, dispensing gifts within the body. This is also an account of what was involved preaching the Gospel, and how it was appropriately received. There are no hirelings, no schools of high learning, and no self-help manuals. There are no youth ministries, recovery ministries, or organized efforts to reach society. At the time of our text there was no orchestrated efforts to change the laws in the land, put new people in the senate, or teach people how to be good financial managers. All of that comes much later – and it came when the church was dead.

Only when we have a rooted and grounded church will we really know the power of the Gospel, and the effectiveness of faith. Until that time, anyone, except those who are living by faith and walking in the Spirit, are only speculating about religion, or needs, or priorities. People are prone to speak about what the world needs. One of the things that can be put on the list is a strong church that is being kept from evil. How sorely that witness is needed in our world. It is doubtful that much will be accomplished until that happens.

When Jesus prayed in Gethsemane, before He prayed for those who would believe on Him through the apostles’ word, He said to God, “I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which Thou hast given Me; for they are Thine. And all Mine are Thine, and Thine are Mine; and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come to Thee. Holy Father, keep through Thine own name those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may be one, as We are . . . I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil” (John 17:9-11,15). What we are seeing in the book of Acts is the answer to our Lord’s prayer. We do well to join Him in it.

Lesson #27

STEPHEN IS OPPOSED

“ 6:8 And Stephen, full of faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people. 9 Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen. 10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake. 11 Then they suborned men, which said, We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God. 12 And they stirred up the people, and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council, 13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law: 14 For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us. 15 And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel. ” (Acts 6:8-15)

INTRODUCTION

Satan now picks up the pace of his aggression against the church. He is depicted as walking about, stalking, as it were, and “seeking whom he may devour” (1 Pet 5:8). He is not merely attempting to pull men into the quagmire of immorality. That has never been his focus. His very first effort to seduce mankind was on an intellectual level, not a sensual one. His efforts are directed toward driving a wedge between God and man – to cause men to loosen their hold on eternal life. Even the devil knows that those who are not devoted to the Lord will be available to him for all manner of diabolical deeds.

WHEN MEN CORRUPT RELIGION, IT LEADS TO DEEP MORAL CORRUPTION

Men have often marveled that prominent religious figures have fallen into deep immorality. Some have adopted a spurious theology that allows them to easily explain these moral plummets. They tell us that we are all weak, and thus such occurrences are readily understandable. I suggest to you that this is not a spiritually rational assessment. In such cases, the religion that a person has embraced is largely responsible for moral failure. Perhaps it would be better said, the manner in which the religion has been embraced has been fundamentally flawed.

In the case of “pure religion and undefiled before the Father” (James 12:27), faith is the compelling factor in life, for “the just shall live by faith” (Rom 1:17; Heb 10:38). Where that faith is not found, there is a certain distance that forms between the individual and the God of heaven. This is because “without faith, it is impossible to please Him” (Heb 11:6). In fact, the absence of faith is what causes one to “draw back,” increasing the distance between him and God. In such a case, God has no pleasure in that person. As it is written, “but if any man draw back, My soul shall have no pleasure in him” (Heb 10:38). God once said to wayward Israel, “I have no pleasure in you” (Mal 1:10). The insightful Psalmist wrote, “For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee” (Psa 5:4).

It is possible for the sophist to present all manner of explanation about how God loves the individual, desires the best for them, and will patiently endure their folly. However, they will find it exceedingly difficult to establish that persuasion with the Word of God – particularly when it concerns someone professing the name of Christ..

THE CASE WITH THE GENTILES

Deep immorality is more a sign of Divine abandonment than it is of Satanic ensnarement. This is how the Spirit accounts for the deep moral degradation that pervaded the Gentile world. When men became corrupt in their religion, God gave them over to uncleanness, or moral corruption. Here is how it is stated in Scripture. “Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and fourfooted beasts, and creeping things. Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves” (Rom 1:22-24). To clarify the matter, He continues, “Who changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen” (Rom 1:25).

Where that faith is not found, there is a certain distance that forms between the individual and the God of heaven. This is because “without faith, it is impossible to please Him”

This, then, became the justification for Divine abandonment, so that men lost their power to avoid the expressions of profound corruption. Therefore it is written, “ For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: and likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet. and even as they did not like to retain God in their knowledge, God gave them over to a reprobate mind , to do those things which are not convenient; being filled with all unrighteousness, fornication, wickedness, covetousness, maliciousness; full of envy, murder, debate, deceit, malignity; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God, despiteful, proud, boasters, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents, without understanding, covenantbreakers, without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful” (Rom 1:26-31).

The eruption of especially reprehensible conduct among the Gentiles is therefore traced back to the Lord’s attitude toward them. He removed restraining influences, like pulling the moral floor out from under them. When He did this, they plummeted into the bottomless pit of moral corruption.

THE CASE OF THE JEWS

God did the same thing after He had revealed certain aspects of Himself in the Law, making a covenant with Israel. When they corrupted an even more extensive revelation than nature, He also gave them over to do things they would not ordinarily have done. The Psalmist refers to this Divine abandonment. “But my people would not hearken to my voice; and Israel would none of me. So I gave them up unto their own hearts' lust : and they walked in their own counsels” (Psa 81:11-12). Stephen also covers this in his convicting testimony to the Jewish counsel, accounting for the historical propensity of Israel to idolatry. “And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven ; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?” (Acts 7:42).

In the book of Acts, to this point, all of opposition has been directed toward those who have spoken – who have declared the Gospel and expounded it with power. No one has come against the church because of its manner of life.

Lest men be driven to erroneous conclusions, the magnitude of this circumstance is succinctly expressed in Scripture. “Therefore was the wrath of the LORD kindled against His people, insomuch that He abhorred His own inheritance ” (Psa 106:40). Early in their history, God warned them that it was entirely possible for Him to view them as He did the heathen who occupied the land of Canaan before them. “And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nation, which I cast out before you: for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them” (Lev 20:23).

In his valedictory address to Israel, Moses rehearsed the affect that their iniquity had upon their God. “Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee. And when the LORD saw it, He abhorred them , because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters” (Deut 32:18-19). That abhorrence aggravated their fallen condition.

When men persist in not taking their relationship to God seriously, and when they consistently ignore His Word, all the while choosing to still retain His name, God will deliver them over to reprehensible conduct which they cannot imagine themselves doing. In the case of the Jews, Paul said, they “both killed the Lord Jesus, and their own prophets, and have persecuted us; and they please not God, and are contrary to all men” (1 Thess 2:15).

WHY SAY THESE THINGS

It is necessary to say these things because of the nature of our text. In it we find religious men of high rank increasing their opposition to Christ and His spokesmen. They have a growing hostility toward the church – the body of Christ. This is especially true of those who speak publicly. There is no end to which the religiously corrupt will not go to suppress the preaching of the Gospel. The only restraint upon them will be civil law, and they will do everything in their power to work around that.

This is a direct result of God’s withdrawal from them. While that situation can be remedied by repentance and conversion (Acts 3:19), it cannot be done as long as they continue their moral plummet. Because God is not in it, their religion has allowed them to think more highly of themselves than they ought to think – a condition against which the saints are solemnly warned (Rom 12:3).

SATAN CONTINUES TO WORK IN THIS MANNER

Satan continues to work through established and dead religion. Where men have only a form of godliness, they become tools through which Satan can oppose Christ, the truth, and those who speak it.

TO THIS POINT

In the book of Acts, to this point, all of opposition has been directed toward those who have spoken – who have declared the Gospel and expounded it with power. No one has come against the church because of its manner of life.

Now, those who can declare the Gospel with competency and power begin to increase. A relatively new believer surfaces who has an excellent grasp of the Scriptures, and is able to correlate them with the salvation of God wrought in Christ. This circumstance propels him into the limelight, for he cannot keep silent. His influence is so significant that it strikes into the hearts of those who only have the letter of the Law. The result is that they also cannot keep quiet. They must oppose what is being said, for it contradicts what they have embraced.

FULL OF FAITH AND POWER

“ 6:8a And Stephen, full of faith and power . . .” Other versions read, “full of grace and power,” NASB “full of God’s grace and power,” NIV “filled with God’s favor and power,” GWN “the man so full of faith and the Holy Spirit’s power,” LIVING “ full of grace (divine blessing and favor) and power (strength and ability),” AMPLIFIED “full of grace and spiritual power,” PHILLIPS “full of grace and fortitude,” DARBY and “a man richly blessed by God and full of power.” GNB

The different translations are based on differing manuscripts. Those that read “faith and power” include the following: KJV, NKJV, GENEVA, PNT, RWB, TNT, WEB, YLT, LIVING, ALT, BISHOPS, EMTV, KJVR, LITV, MKJV .

Those that read “grace and power” include the following: ASV, NASB, NIV, NRSV, RSV, BBE, CSB, DARBY, ERV, ESV, MRD, NAB, NAS, NAU, NET, NJB, NLT, WEYMOUTH, ISV, MONTGOMERY, AMPLIFIED, PHILLIPS.

Actually, both statements are correct, and in no way contradict each other. One emphasizes the BASIS – grace. The other accents the MEANS – faith. In my judgment, the expression “faith and power” most precisely conforms to the revealed manner of speaking of Kingdom realities. It emphasizes the means through which Stephen appropriated the grace that accompanied his power, or ability. In all of its various involvements, salvation is always “by grace through faith” (Eph 2:8). Grace accents God as the Source, and faith punctuates the experiential quality that takes hold of grace.

There is no need to further address this matter as it is not really an issue. I will proceed with a preference for the reading “faith and power.”

FULL OF FAITH

What does it mean to be “full of faith?” It is certainly an intriguing expression. As I have mentioned before, only Stephen and Barnabas are expressly said to have been “full of faith” (Acts 6:5,8; 11:24).

As used here, the word “full” means “filled up, as opposed to empty . . . covered in every part . . . thoroughly permeated with . . . complete, lacking nothing,” THAYER “space fully occupied . . . rich or abounding in,” FRIBERG “complete, full grown,” UBS and “abundant.” LEH

There are a number of perspectives seen in this word, and all of them provide us with some very challenging concepts.

- “Full” in the sense of a glass of water being filled to the top. In this perspective, the flesh is crucified, self is denied, and the devil is being resisted.
- “Full” in the sense of maturity – being fully grown. Here faith would be accompanied by mature understanding and insight.
- “Full” in the sense of covering every aspect of life, like a roof covers a house. In this case, the person would be wholly devoted to Lord, living unto Him and reckoning himself to be dead indeed unto sin, and alive unto God.
- “Full” in the sense of occupying every facet of life, or thoroughly permeating every aspect of life. Here, whatsoever if done in word or in deed is deliberately and consciously done for the glory of God.
- “Full” in the sense of abundant, like a full harvest. In this view, the realities that are obtained by faith would be found in abundance in the individual.

There is more to being “full of faith” than this, but this will suffice to confirm the nature of such a condition. To be “full of faith” means that the things that are appropriated by faith were found in abundance in Stephen. The following, though not a thorough listing, are included in the things faith brings to the individual.

- A purified heart (Acts 15:9).
- The living of new life (Rom 1:17).
- The righteousness of God (Rom 3:22).
- Access to the grace of God (Rom 5:2).
- Standing firm (Rom 11:20).
- Waiting for the hope of righteousness (Gal 5:5).
- Christ dwelling in the heart (Eph 3:17).
- Understanding (Heb 11:3).
- Being kept by God.

When one is “full of faith,” these qualities are flourishing within him . Such a person is “rich in faith” (James 2:5), and “strong in faith” (Rom 4:20). This is an individual that trusts in the Lord with all of his heart, and does not lean to his own understanding (Prov 3:5). Such people are doing what others are admonished to do. They are walking where others are exhorted to walk. They are spiritually intelligent, and can handle the Word aright, for “faith cometh by hearing,” and they have leaned their ear toward the Word of God.

Stephen was such a man – even though he was a relatively new Christian – two years of at the most. He had made rapid progress because he had availed himself of the “treasures of wisdom and knowledge” that are hidden in Christ, and are available to all believers (Col 2:3). He had seen in the Gospel something of the magnitude of salvation, and, like Joshua and Caleb, had eagerly possessed the land. That, of course, is one of the distinct advantages of hearing a clear and undiluted proclamation of the Gospel of Christ.

FULL OF POWER

The word “power” comes from a word meaning, “strength, power, ability,” THAYER “able to produce a strong effect,” FRIBERG “supernatural power,” UBS “the ability to perform a particular activity or to undergo some experience - 'ability, capability' ,” LOUW-NIDA and “authority.” LEH

In a nutshell, “power,” as used in this text, is the ability to do something that cannot be achieved through natural aptitude. This kind of power cannot be learned in the schools of men. It is not the result of personal discipline. It is not an ability that is the result of a disciplined approach to development. No person is born of a woman with this kind of power. Furthermore, it has to do wholly with the work of the Kingdom, and matters pertaining to life and godliness.

There is a lower form of “power” that comes from God, yet is limited to the affairs of life in this world. That power brings no eternal advantage. Thus Samson could defeat a thousand Philistines, yet fall prey to the subtlety of a dishonest woman (Judges 15:16; 16:20). Solomon was expert in all manner of earthly wisdom, yet was led astray into idolatry by his wives (1 Kgs 4:29-30; 11:7-9). God can give people “power to get wealth,” yet a quest for that wealth can lead them astray so that they “fall into

The cause of such growth is directly owing to the Gospel that is being declared. It is the truth that, when known, brings men such marvelous liberty (John 8:32). It is the truth that sanctifies the people, equipping them to do the work of the Lord (John 17:17). It is the Gospel that is the assigned domain in which men “stand” temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts” (Deut 8:18; 1 Tim 6:9). The kind of power that is realized “in the flesh” – even though it comes from God – gives a person no Kingdom advantage. God gave Nehuchadnezzar a kingdom (Dan 5:18-19), yet he was judged for his pride (Dan 4:30-32; 5:20).

Stephen was not “full” of that kind of power. This was power of a higher order, that is directly related to the “great salvation” being implemented by the exalted Christ. The exploits that are accomplished through this power cannot be replicated by those who are not reconciled to God. In fact, we have an example in Scripture of a man who sought to purchase the ability to confer the gift of the Spirit on other people. It is written, “And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost” (Acts 8:18-19). The nature of his person and request are seen in the answer of Peter: “But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God ” (Acts 8:20-21). He was a vessel into which the power of reference could be placed.

There are certain moral and spiritual boundaries within which Divine power is given. Those who are outside of those boundaries are wrong in seeking such power. Their attention must rather be given to the appropriation of grace and truth.

All of this means that Stephen’s heart was right. His thoughts were acceptable. He was, in fact, “a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

A Word About Unusual Response

In the modern church scene, those with an usually good response to preaching are very unusual. Stephen stood out among a group of fervent and consistent disciples – even among seven of them who were publicly noted for being “full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom” (Acts 6:3). How is it that such a response is possible? For some, this is possible only when there are a set of strictly enforced rules, together with a rigorous form of accountability. The leader of the people is perceived as a demanding one, who imposes his own will upon the people. This, in fact, is how our own fellowship is perceived by many. Seeing that we have a core of young men and women who are able to express themselves intelligently and engage in many Kingdom activities, some have imagined that it is owing to my own demanding and imposing nature.

However, such a fleshly trait is not capable of sustaining steady growth up into Christ in all things. The cause of such growth is directly owing to the Gospel that is being declared. It is the truth that, when known, brings men such marvelous liberty (John 8:32). It is the truth that sanctifies the people, equipping them to do the work of the Lord (John 17:17). It is the Gospel that is the assigned domain in which men “stand” (1 Cor 15:1). There are no exceptions to these things.

Stephen’s excellence can be traced back to the message he had embraced – the preaching of insightful and spirit-filled men. That preaching, coupled with his faith, is what discovered the particular gifts that He was given, enabling him to fulfill a specific role in the body of Christ.

HE DID GREAT SIGNS AND WONDERS

GREAT SIGNS AND WONDERS

The power with which Stephen was endued was made known in “great signs and wonders.” He was able to extend his works beyond the circumference of nature.

“ : 8b . . . did great wonders and miracles . . . ” Other versions read, “ performing great wonders and signs,” NASB “did great wonders and miraculous signs ,” NIV “ wrought great wonders and signs,” ASV “ was doing great wonders and signs,” ESV “He did amazing things and performed miracles,” GWN “ as working great wonders and signs,” NAB “ began to work miracles and great signs,” NJB “did spectacular miracles,” LIVING “he was working miracles,” IE “performed great marvels and signs,” WEYMOUTH “ went on performing great signs and wonders,” WILLIAMS and “ continued to perform miracles and remarkable signs” PHILLIPS

Prior to this, on the day of Pentecost, Peter had associated the working of miracles, signs, and wonders, with the approval of God – particularly as related to Jesus Christ. “Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs , which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know” (Acts 2:22). He had also declared that when the Spirit was poured forth “upon all flesh,” there would be “signs in the earth” (Acts 2:19). In other words, these would be wrought in Divine discretion, and not indiscriminately.

Up to this point in the book of Acts, only the apostles are said to have worked signs, wonders, and miracles.

- “And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles” (Acts 2:43).
- “Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength . . . For the man was above forty years old, on whom this miracle of healing was showed” (Acts 3:6-7; 4:22).
- “And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people; (and they were all with one accord in Solomon's porch" (Acts 5:12).

Now, for the first time since Jesus ascended into heaven, someone other than an Apostle is working "great signs and wonders." Immediately following the first opposition faced by Peter and John, the church had asked God to grant "that with all boldness" they might speak His word, by stretching forth His hand "to heal; and that signs and wonders" would be "done by the name" of His "Holy Child Jesus" (Acts 4:30). That did, in fact happen, as recorded in Acts 5:12. Now, the answer to that prayer is extended beyond the apostles to another member of the body of Christ.

In Stephen we see the word fulfilled that was later given by Paul concerning the gifts God places in the body: "To another . . . the gifts of healing by the same Spirit; to another the working of miracles . . ." (1 Cor 12:9-10). The church in Galatia is also reported to have had miracle workers among them. "He therefore that ministereth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doeth he it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?" (Gal 3:5).

These gifts, of course, were given at the discretion of the Lord Himself, and are driven by Divine purpose. That discretion was confirmed in the aptitude, ability, and appropriateness of the one receiving a gift, as well as the particular work the Lord was doing among the people. That is, what Stephen did was a revelation of the ability God had given to him through the Spirit. It was an example of "the manifestation of the Spirit," which "is given to every man to profit withal" (1 Cor 12:7). As is made known in Scripture, the Spirit is "distributing to each individual as He wills" (1 Cor 12:11). In strict accord with the nature of the Kingdom of God, this involves the recipient having faith, which is the means of appropriation. It also requires pureness of heart in the individual, and a humble and contrite spirit. If a person is going to be used by God, he must have separated from defiling influences, thus being made "meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work" (2 Tim 2:19-21).

An Illustration of Appropriate Gifts

Men often dispute about whether or not gifts of this sort are even intended for our day. All of this is like beating the air, for it involves nothing more than human speculation. It is more wise for men to devote themselves to being ready to be used by God, instead of hypothecating about the manner in which they can be used, or what gifts may be available to them. The Head of the church will see to it that the gifts are in strict accord with His own purpose, and what is needed at that particular time. When, for example, a man was sent to prepare the way of the Lord, it proved to be a man of great holiness and sobriety. In fact, he was a ascetic man who received the word of the Lord while He was "in the wilderness" (Lk 3:2). His parents were strictly charged by a holy angel to raise him in the strictest manner: "For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb" (Luke 1:15). When his ministry began, it is written that he came "neither eating bread nor drinking wine" (Lk 7:33). This was John the Baptist, and indicates that he was a Nazarite, raised in the strictest fashion. The law provided more details concerning how such a man was to spend his life. "Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, When either man or woman shall separate themselves to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the LORD: he shall separate himself from wine and strong drink, and shall drink no vinegar of wine, or vinegar of strong drink, neither shall he drink any liquor of grapes, nor eat moist grapes, or dried. All the days of his separation shall he eat nothing that is made of the vine tree, from the kernels even to the husk. All the days of the vow of his separation there shall no razor come upon his head: until the days be fulfilled, in the which he separateth himself unto the LORD, he shall be holy, and shall let the locks of the hair of his head grow. All the days that he separateth himself unto the LORD he shall come at no dead body. He shall not make himself unclean for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his sister, when they die: because the consecration of his God is upon his head. All the days of his separation he is holy unto the LORD" (Num 6:2-8).

Yet, of John the Baptist it is written, “John did no miracle” (John 10:41). This was certainly not owing to any lack of qualification on John’s part, for Jesus said of him, “Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he” (Mat 11:11).

John the Baptists’ gifts were adapted to his ministry, and were appropriate for the times during which he ministered. They had nothing to do with what was possible, but rather dealt with what God willed. It was not that the time of the miraculous had ceased, for his own birth was of a miraculous order, his parents being “well stricken in years,” and the woman who bore him being “barren” prior to conceiving John (Lk 1:7). His ministry did not require working miracles.

At this position in time, and in strict accord with the purpose of God, Stephen was granted to be “full of power.” In him we have an example of the fulfillment of a statement made by Hanai the seer. “For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show Himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward Him ” (2 Chron 16:9). God found such a man in Stephen, who had also “used the office of a deacon well,” and therefore obtained “a good standing and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus” NKJV (1 Tim 3:13).

AMONG THE PEOPLE

However, no preaching of Scriptural reference began or concentrated on those who were in total darkness. However noble such an approach may appear to be, one will have a difficult time supporting it with the Word of God.

“ . . . among the people.” Every version reads the same, except the God’s Word Translation, GWN which omits the phrase.

A Principle to be Seen

When we read the words “among the people,” we must understand that they are not equivalent to “among society in general.” As used in this text, this phrase is often equated with speaking to those with no acquaintance of God, those who had plummeted into deep sin, or are generally unacquainted with the Bible. This is such a common perception that people often refer to Jesus Himself as always being around sinners – publicans, harlots, and the more degraded members of society. “That,” they ignorantly affirm, “is where you would find the Lord today.” This stems from a completely erroneous view of the manner in which truth is disseminated.

To be sure, our Lord commanded that the Gospel is to be “preached to every creature,” as the disciples were sent “into all the world” (Mk 16:15). However, no preaching of Scriptural reference began or concentrated on those who were in total darkness. However noble such an approach may appear to be, one will have a difficult time supporting it with the Word of God.

First, we are categorically told that “the Gospel of Christ” is “the power of God unto salvation to the Jew first ” (Rom 1:16). That does not mean first in time alone, but first in order as well. When instructing His disciples to preach the Gospel throughout the world, He said, “beginning at Jerusalem” (Lk 24:47) – which is the location of activity in our text. Just before He ascended into heaven Jesus said to His disciples, “ye shall be witnesses unto Me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth” (Acts 1:8).

In the record of the spread of the Gospel, Christ’s ambassadors were most particular in following this approach, and it is duly noted in the book of Acts.

- After being converted, Paul began preaching “in the synagogues” (Acts 9:20).
- Following the Holy Spirit’s call of Barnabas and Saul, they “preached the word of God in the synagogues” (Acts 13:5).

- When they went into Antioch of Pisidia in Asia Minor, they “went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day” (Acts 13:14-15).

- The Gentiles that were reached in that area were also in the synagogue (Acts 13:42).

- When they went into Iconium, they “went into the synagogue of the Jews,” and there “a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed” (Acts 14:1).

- When Paul was called by the Lord into Macedonia, the first thing he did was go out on the Sabbath day to a river side, where certain devout women met for prayer. It was there that he confronted Lydia (Acts 16:13-14). In that area, when Paul and Silas had been released from prison, they first went to Lydia’s house, and met with the brethren there (Acts 16:40).

- When entering into Thessalonica, Paul first “reasoned” with the Jews in the synagogue for three Sabbath days (Acts 17:1).

- When they came into Berea, they “went into the synagogue of the Jews” (Acts 17:10).

- When Paul came into Athens, he “disputed in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him ” (Acts 17:17).

- After coming to Corinth, he “reasoned in the synagogue every Sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and Greeks” (Acts 18:4).

- When he entered Macedonia, Paul first “testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ” (Acts 18:5).

- After being rejected by the Jews there, he went into the home of devout Jew named Justus, who lived next door to the synagogue. There “Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue believed on the Lord with all his house; and many of the Corinthians hearing believed, and were baptized” (Acts 18:7-8).

- When Paul came to Ephesus, he “entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews” (Acts 18:19).

- When Apollos came into Ephesus, he also “began to speak boldly in the synagogue.” Although he “knew only the baptism of John,” it was there in the synagogue that he met Aquila and Priscilla, who “expounded unto him the way of God more perfectly” (Acts 18:24-26).

- Paul remained for three months in Ephesus, “disputing and persuading the things concerning the Kingdom” in the synagogue, also ministering to the Gentiles there (Acts 19:8).

- When the door of faith was opened to the Gentiles at the house of Cornelius, the Spirit makes note of the fact that he was “a devout man, and one that feared God with his house” (Acts 10:2).

- In Thessalonica, certain “devout Greeks” and some “chief” women were the recipients of Paul’s ministry (Acts 17:4).

- In Athens Paul reasoned disputed with “devout persons” (Acts 17:17).

There should be no need to recount these instances, for they are a matter of Scriptural record – and they are not at all ambiguous. However amidst a staggering ignorance of the word of God, erroneous conceptions and emphases are being pawned off on the people of God. Statements are regularly made concerning Christ and the obligations of believers that have their genesis in the minds of men who are unlearned in the things of God. Furthermore, men are being judged, evaluated, and commended or condemned upon the basis of these erroneous suppositions.

With remarkable consistency, the Scriptures confirm that the spreading of the Gospel consistently started among those with some knowledge of God, yet who were not cognizant of the truth of Christ. Truth was first anchored in the minds of devout and stable people, and it spread from there. This was also true of the ministry of the Prophets, John the Baptist, and our Lord Jesus Christ Himself. If a people will simply subject their minds to the Scriptures, it will not be possible to miss this emphasis.

The strategy of the modern church is partly responsible for its deplorable condition. It has majored preeminently on reaching what it calls “the lost,” giving little or no heed to devout people who have an imperfect knowledge of the Lord. As a result, the church is filled with novices who have no working knowledge of Scripture.

The strategy of the modern church is partly responsible for its deplorable condition. It has majored preeminently on reaching what it calls “the lost,” giving little or no heed to devout people who have an imperfect knowledge of the Lord. As a result, the church is filled with novices who have no working knowledge of Scripture. Consequently, owing to their supposed sincerity, certain things have crept into the church that are fundamentally of this world. This is because the larger part of the professing church is enveloped with spiritual ignorance. There are few converts of the caliber of Cornelius, or Lydia, or other Jews and devout people. In other words, the nucleus of the church is weak, and that is a near-hopeless condition. The fact that the professed leaders have allowed this to happen reveals the unacceptable level of their understanding.

The Gospel is called “glad tidings of good things” (Rom 10:15). But why is this so? Do not imagine that this suggests the message of the Gospel is primarily good news to the immoral, those enslaved by drugs, strong drink, and the likes. This is not “good news” to those whose marriages are falling apart, or whose children have gone astray, or who have lost all of their financial resources. That is not the emphasis of the words “good news,” and men do are wrong in suggesting that it is. Paul said it most precisely when he announced in Antioch, “And we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second psalm, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten Thee” (Acts 13:31-32). The “good news” is not that you can be saved – although, for the humble and contrite soul, that is a refreshing announcement!

The good news is what God has done, not what you can be! That is precisely what Paul said. This presumes some familiarity with what God has promised, as well as a longing for its fulfillment. In the case of devout people, it presumes they have come to see their need of the Lord, and long to be accepted by Him. I do not believe you can establish that the Gospel can possibly be “glad tidings of good things” to anyone else. This is why Paul preached as He did in Athens (Acts 17:22-31). He brought the people to a point where they saw their need of the Lord by reminding them they were made by God, were responsible to Him, and were going to be judged by his Son.

When the fundamental objective of men is to rescue others from bad life-styles, and to correct their behavior, they must, of necessity, turn their attention from Christ Jesus. This is because Christ’s primary work was to do the will of God. It is within the framework of that will that true human need is addressed.

Why Say These Things?

It may appear on the surface as though all of this is nothing more than a distraction from the text. However, this is not the case at all. Our text is a sterling example of the very thing I have just sought to establish. When it is written that Stephen “did great wonders and miracles among the people,” the Jews are the people of reference. These were the people who had been cultured by Moses to have some acquaintance with the God of might. They had been cultures for the day of salvation, with ALL

Divine benefits being given to them (Rom 9:4-5). Their history had been filled with examples of the signs and wonders that had been wrought in their behalf. No heathen God had ever worked in such a manner, or been represented as working in such a way.

This was not a way Stephen had of simply getting the attention of the people. Rather it was attesting that he was a man sent by God. These “great wonders and miracles” were not mere displays of raw power. They doubtless brought some kind of benefit to the people, like the healing of the lame man (3:1-6), and the many healings that had been wrought by the apostles (5:16). He was not like a magician, performing feats of wonder before the people. That is not the nature of salvation, nor is it the manner of those who bring the good news of that salvation.

You see also in this that Stephen’s ministry was of a public nature, confirming that he was not ashamed of the Gospel, and that the ability he had been given was genuine. What now follows confirms that what Stephen said was the primary thing, not what he did. The “great wonders and miracles” that he “did among the people” confirmed that what he was saying was the truth – and that was the critical factor. In the Divine economy, there is no point to a wonder-worker who does not have a unique and beneficial message. Stephen was not simply ministering to the people, he was primarily representing the living God.

THE FIRST CASE OF DISPUTATION

“ 9 Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia, disputing with Stephen.”

In the Jewish economy, and by Divine design, their religion was the heart of their culture. Family life, as fundamental as it was, was not the heart of their acculturation. The very existence of the synagogue was confirmation of this fact. The synagogue largely represented the religious life of the people.

Following Christ’s ascension, and up to this point, no one speaking for the Lord had encountered an argument against the truth. A debate had never ensued that sought to disprove the truth of the Gospel. Peter and John faced opposition, but not disputation (4:1-2). Later, the apostles were incarcerated, threatened, and beaten – but no one argued with them. Now, quite possibly as long as two years after Pentecost, a man full the Holy Spirit, wisdom, faith, and power, faces disputation. This is the first instance. In fact, this is the first time the word “dispute” in any of its varied forms, occurs in the book of Acts. Among other things, this confirms the powerful reasoning that is contained in the Gospel. When it is preached in purity and power, it is most difficult for those who do not receive it to contend with it.

THE SYNAGOGUE – THE PLACE OF DISPUTATION

“Then there arose certain of the synagogue, which is called the synagogue of the Libertines . . .” Other versions read, “synagogue of the Freedmen ,” NKJV “Synagogue of the Freedmen (as it was called) ,” NIV “the Synagogue named that of the Libertines ,” BBE “called the Freedmen's Synagogue ,” DARBY “a synagogue called Freedmen's Synagogue ,” GWN “the Synagogue of Freed Slaves ,” NLT “the Jewish cult of ‘The Freedmen ,” LIVING “the synagogue of the Freedmen (freed Jewish slaves), as it was called,” AMPLIFIED and “the synagogue, the ones being called Freed Slaves . ALT

Once again, behold the locus, or locale, of Stephen’s ministry – the synagogue , where devout men were gathered. This was a particular synagogue within Jerusalem – “the synagogue of the Libertines.”

In the Jewish economy, and by Divine design, their religion was the heart of their culture. Family life, as fundamental as it was, was not the heart of their acculturation. The very existence of the synagogue was confirmation of this fact. The synagogue largely represented the religious life of the people. It was not a family center, entertainment center, or place of leisurely activity. Much of Christ's ministry, as well of many of His great miracles, were performed in the synagogues (Matt 12:9; Mk 1:23; Lk 13:11). Some of his most marvelous words, concerning eating His flesh and drinking His blood, were spoken in the synagogue (John 6:44-59). This is where early believers frequently met, as confirmed by Saul of Tarsus seeking Christians there (Acts 9:2; 22:19; 26:11).

The origin of the Synagogue

The word "synagogue" means "a bringing together, gathering . . . an assembling together." THAYER It is a parallel of the Greek word ekklēsia, which is translated "church." Although Jewish tradition states that synagogues were among the Jews from of old, there are no direct references of them in the writings of Moses and the Prophets. Jewish tradition affirms that when Nebuchadnezzar burned "all the houses of Jerusalem," the reference was to 480 synagogues that existed in the city. Jerusalem Megillah, 3, 1 This cannot be satisfactorily proved, but it does confirm how the synagogue came to be central in Jewish life.

It is generally understood that the synagogues arose during the exile, when the mass of Jews were no longer located in their own land. The Assyrians had captured the Israelites (2 Kgs 18:9-11), and the Babylonians had enslaved Judah (2 Kgs 14:11-16). Both captivities removed the people from their Temple and homeland. However, it did not remove their Temple and homeland from their hearts. We know that during the time of Ezra and Nehemiah there were solemn gatherings of the Jews (Ezra 8:15; Neh 8:2; 9:1; Zech 7:5). Furthermore, these became the occasion for instructing the people concerning the Law of God, and exhorting them to keep the laws of the Lord (Ezra 10:1-9; Neh 8:1; 9:1-3; 13:1-3). Jewish history affirms that these circumstances formed the beginning of the concept of a synagogue – a gathering place where the people of God were subjected to the scriptures and taught.

Thus the nature of true religion is unveiled by the people who were cultured by exposure to God's law and will. They saw a need to come together and expose their hearts and minds to what was available to them from God. This was before the coming of Christ. It was, however, a frame of mind that must be possessed if any advantage from Christ is to be realized. At some point, men must regard the company of the godly and the word of God to be worthy of extended effort, regardless of whether of not it is convenient. The men who pioneered this effort were consistently godly men – generally prophets or priests. They were men who had seen the implication of God speaking to and directing men. Those experiences imply that the emphasis of life lies outside of mere human experience. Oh, that men were more able to see this in our time!

The Synagogue Firmly Established

One further observation: the synagogue was not something God commanded, yet it was something He received and honored. His Son honored it, and so did the apostles and the early church. Those who "forsake the assembling" of themselves together have fallen beneath the level of the ancient Jews, to say nothing of their Lord and Savior.

By the time of Jesus' birth, the synagogue was established as an integral part of Jewish life. Jesus Himself regularly attended the synagogue (Luke 4:16). It was wholly related to religious life, reflecting the nature of God's dealings with them. Among serious Jews, there was no thought of religious life being in subordination to social life. It was central. If they had a special "hour," it was for prayer, not for lunch or extracurricular activities (Acts 3:1). Now, in our time, under the domination of the Gentile church, this concept has all but been destroyed. It is no wonder that their predominance in this age of grace has an appointed conclusion, being called "the times of the Gentiles" (Lk 21:24). Under their regime, religious buildings are largely devoted to secular purposes, entertainment, etc.

One further observation: the synagogue was not something God commanded, yet it was something He received and honored. His Son honored it, and so did the apostles and the early church. Those who “forsake the assembling” of themselves together have fallen beneath the level of the ancient Jews, to say nothing of their Lord and Savior. Such a miserable practice is indefensible. It contradicts both reason and revelation.

Stephen Speaks in the Synagogue

Here is a man filled with faith, wisdom, the Spirit, and power. Where will a man like this go? What kind of people will he address? Believe it or not, he took his message inside the four walls – where devout religious people were gathered! The account that follows took place in the synagogue.

Godly men must have contact with devout people in order to maintain their spiritual advancement, whether in defense of the truth, or in the matter of edification. The newness of life, as experienced in this world, is calculated to develop in the midst of competing influences. In this way it is confirmed to the hearts of those possessing the life that God is “greater than all” (John 10:29). Until a person experiences the victory that comes from faith (1 John 5:4-5), his religion is largely philosophical. Faith, by its very nature, compels the individual to express that faith, even in a hostile arena. This is what we see taking place in this text.

The Libertines

The word “libertine” means “one who has been liberated from slavery, a freedman.” THAYER “a designation for a Jew who had gained freedom from slavery.” FRIBERG

These were people who had been slaves, but were freed. It is quite possible that they spoke in different languages because of their circumstance. However, they had not lost their interest in the Lord, and upon their freedom had either formed a synagogue, or one was formed for them while they were in Jerusalem.

This also confirms the centrality of religious life to the Jews. That centrality was not the result of their own emphasis, but was rather traced to the manner in which God Himself had cultured them. It is a national example of the domestic circumstance of raising a child “in the nurture and admonition of the Lord” (Eph 6:4). It is inconceivable that the highest expression of the involvement of Deity with humanity – the New Covenant – would relegate spiritual activity to a lesser role than was inculcated under the Old Covenant.

THE PARTICIPANTS IN THE DISPUTATION

“ . . . and Cyrenians, and Alexandrians, and of them of Cilicia and of Asia . . .” Other translations read, “including both Cyrenians and Alexandrians, and some from Cilicia and Asia,” NASB “Jews of Cyrene and Alexandria as well as the provinces of Cilicia and Asia,” NIV “Jews from Cyrene, Alexandria in Egypt, and the Turkish provinces of Cilicia, and Asia Minor ,” LIVING “(This synagogue was also for Jews from the cities of Cyrene and Alexandria.) Jews from Cilicia and Asia were with them .” IE “Cyrenaeans, Alexandrians, Cilicians and men from Roman Asia ,” WEYMOUTH and “ Cyrenians and of the Alexandrians and of those from Cilicia and [the province of] Asia,” AMPLIFIED

These people were all Jews, but were from other countries, and spoke different languages because of that circumstance.

It ought to be noted that at this time, even though a considerable number of Jews were living in the promised land, most of them remained in a state of dispersion. From an historical point of view, that dispersion was the result of the Assyrians and Chaldeans conquering them. As it is written, "Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him ; and last this Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones " (Jer 50:17). However, from the higher and more precise viewpoint, God Himself had scattered them because of their waywardness. There are a number of references made to this scattering in the Prophets.

- "For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee: but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished" (Jer 30:11).

ON LIBERTINES

The earliest explanation of the word (Chrysostom) is also that which has been adopted by the most recent authorities. The Libertini are Jews who, having been taken prisoners by Pompey and other Roman generals in the Syrian wars, had been reduced to slavery, and had afterwards been emancipated, and returned, permanently or for a time, to the country of their fathers. Of the existence of a large body of Jews in this position at Rome we have abundant evidence. Under Tiberius, the Senatus-Consultum for the suppression of Egyptian and Jewish mysteries led to the banishment of 4000 "libertini generis" to Sardinia, under the pretense of military or police duty, but really in the hope that the malaria of the island might be fatal to them. Others were to leave Italy unless they abandoned their religion (Tacitus, Anal. 2:85; comp. Sueton. Tiber. c. 36). Josephus (Ant. 18:3, 5), narrating the same fact, speaks of the 4000 who were sent to Sardinia as Jews, and thus identifies them with the "libertinum genus" of Tacitus. Philo (Legat. ad Caium, page 1014, C) in like manner says that the greater part of the Jews of Rome were in the position of freedmen and had been allowed by Augustus to settle in the Trans-Tiberine part of the city, and to follow their own religious customs unmolested (comp. Horace, Sat. 1:4, 143; 1:9, 70).

- "Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock" (Jer 31:10).
- "Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come" (Ezek 11:16).
- "And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them" (Ezek 36:19).
- "But I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid the pleasant land desolate" (Zech 7:14).

Now we are provided with a prelude to what God promised the whole of the people He would do – gather them again. As it is written, "Hear the word of the LORD, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock:" (Jer 31:10). And again, "And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched out arm, and with fury poured out" (Ezek 20:34).

To this very day, Israel remains scattered, with only a remnant dwelling in the promised land. The nation never did recover from the scattering facilitated by the king of Assyria and Nebuchadnezzar of the Chaldeans. If anyone doubts that they can be gathered, the book of Acts begins with a first fruit offering of this very nation to the Lord.

We are also reading of the Lord saving people while they are in a scattered state. He has drawn a number of them to Jerusalem in order to enlighten their eyes and confirm His promises to them. This ought to be of special comfort to those who are aware of the present scattered state of the church. While it is not a pleasant circumstance, it is not a hopeless one.

The Kind of People Before Us

In our text we are provided a picture of how seriously a people cultured by God can take their religion – something provided them for understanding. It is important to note how vastly different that culture is from the present culture of the America church in particular, and the whole country in general. There are proportionately few of this kind of people in our quadrant of the world. However, this IS how people who have been exposed to the real God, and have taken it seriously, react. Even though these were not ideal people, they were a zealous people.

They Came From various Areas

These freed slaves had come from various areas, but had gravitated back to Jerusalem, no doubt to attend the feasts that were at hand. They may well have been in that number of “devout Jews out of every nation under heaven,” that are mentioned in Acts 2:5. The number included the following.

- CYRENIANS. These were freed Jewish slaves from Cyrene, which was the chief city in North Africa .

- ALEXANDRIANS. These were freed Jewish slaves from Alexandria in Egypt .

CILICIA. These were freed Jewish slaves from Cilicia, a province in Asia Minor , that was on the seacoast north of Cyprus.

- ASIA. These were freed Jewish slaves from Asia Minor, an area that embraced Mysia (Acts 16:7-8), Aeolis, Ionia, Caria, and Lydia (Ezek 30:5). This was also the area in which the seven churches of Revelation were located (Rev 1:4).

We are told in the book of Acts that during Paul’s two year stay in Ephesus, “all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks” (Acts 19:10). Much of this was accomplished by Paul himself, as his enemies confirmed: “Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands” (Acts 19:26). That section of the world was noted for the worship of “Diana of the Ephesians” (Acts 19:27). Later Paul wrote to Timothy about the time he was in Asia, confessing that at that time “all they which are of Asia turned away from me” (2 Tim 1:15).

Now, in our text, a number of former Jewish slaves from that region will engage Paul in disputation. How will these former slaves react to the preaching of Stephen. Will we find them to be basically untaught because they were slaves?

THE DISPUTATION

“ . . . disputing with Stephen.” Other versions read, “rose up and argued with Stephen,” NASB “These began to argue with Stephen,” NIV “had arguments with Stephen,” BBE “ came forward and disputed with Stephen,” CSB “started an argument with Stephen,” GWN “came forward and debated with Stephen,” NAB “ They all came and argued with Stephen,” IE “ were roused to encounter Stephen in debate,” WEYMOUTH “ got to debating with Stephen,” WILLIAMS “arose [and undertook] to debate and dispute with Stephen,” AMPLIFIED and “ tried debating with Stephen.” PHILLIPS

We know from other Scriptures that it was the custom of Jewish people to have others speak in their synagogues – particularly if they were obviously devout people. Thus, without personally knowing Paul, the rulers of a synagogue in Antioch of Pisida “after the reading of the law and the prophets . . . sent unto them, saying, Ye men and brethren, if ye have any word of exhortation for the people, say on” (Acts 13:15). In some way, this had occurred in the synagogue of the Libertines, and Stephen, conducting himself in decency and order, had been speaking. We are not told of his specific words, but they were doubtless in strict harmony with the words through which he himself had been converted since the day of Pentecost. They obviously centered in the Lord Jesus Christ, whom the Jews had crucified, and whom God had raised from the dead and exalted to His right hand. I do not doubt that his words were parallel with those that Peter and the apostles had been speaking (Acts 2:14-27; 3:12-26; 4:8-12; 5:29-32).

Disputing

Our text says these men “arose.” That is, the “rose up,” NASB “stood up,” NRSV or “came forward.” CSB It was the manner for the persons speaking to come forward and stand before the people to speak. That is what Jesus did (Lk 4:16). It is also what Paul did in Antioch (Acts 13:16). Now, being no longer able to endure what Stephen was saying, these men come forward to began disputing with him, attempting to disprove what he was saying.

At once you see that the synagogue was not only a place for formal teaching, but for examining an issue more closely that was not seen alike by all of the people. This practice would frighten many would-be preachers from the pulpit. However, it did not have that effect upon Stephen.

To “dispute” means “to seek to examine together . . .to discuss, dispute, or question,” THAYER “debate, argue with,” FRIBERG “to express forceful differences of opinion without necessarily having a presumed goal of seeking a solution.” LOUW-NIDA In other words, in such a discussion, the aim of the ones initiating the dispute is not to arrive at the truth. It is rather an attempt to justify a view that is already held, yet contradicts what the speaker has been saying.

These were religious men, and they took their religion seriously – a religion that had been revealed by God himself. Their presence in Jerusalem at this time confirms this to be true Yet, they were not like the devout men on the day of Pentecost who cried out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37). Instead they begin to argue with Stephen, disputing what he has said, seeking to undermine it, and establish their own way of thinking. How will this two-yea-old disciple of Jesus be able to handle their disputation? Or will he shrink back from it, avoiding all controversy, as some are wont to do?

In a sense, these are Stephen’s Jewish fellows, coming from the same background as himself. It is assumed that because he was in this synagogue for freed slaves, that he himself was in that category. If this assumption is true, what marvelous progress this man had made. A foreign-born slave, or son of a slave, who held on to “the Jew’s religion” (Gal 1:13,14), taking the time to travel to Jerusalem for the Passover. During that time he must have heard and believed the Gospel, and heartily embraced the truth. He rose above his peers, being recognized as an unusual man in both knowledge and commitment. Now he is in the synagogue of the Libertines so powerfully proclaiming the Gospel of Christ that some have stood up and began to oppose him, disputing with him. Apparently, he was speaking extensively.

How will this young man fare among these zealous Jewish brethren? Will his boldness wither, or will it increase?

THEY WERE NOT ABLE TO RESIST

“ 10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.”

Stephen does not back down from these men. He does not extend the scepter of peace and give them some time to catch up to him in their understanding. He does not tell them he is willing to consider their view of whatever they were disputing. He had been where they were, and already knew the ins and outs of their position. He had, like all believers, been “illuminated” (Heb 10:32). Like Caleb of old, he had “another spirit” (Num 14:24), and, for all practical purposes, that set him apart..

It appears from the text that Stephen waxed even more bold, and accelerated in his proclamation of the truth of Christ. In fact, as this account progresses it becomes very evident that this is precisely what happened. Some time later Paul will write to Timothy that those who “use the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves . . . great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 3:13). This is precisely what is being seen in Stephen. He began as a deacon, serving tables. Now we find him boldly declaring the word of the Lord in the face of contradiction and disputation.

The Sacred Art of Holy Disputation

There is a sense in which the servants of God are in the marketplace of ideas. There comes a time when it is not enough to simply say, “Well, that is what I believe, and that is all there is to it.” At some point, the professing church must come to grips with erroneous ideas, dismantle them, and hold forth the truth of God as superior in every way.

There is a place for proper disputation in the Kingdom of God. There are strong arguments that must be “cast down” (2 Cor 10:5), and mouths of gainsayers that are to be “stopped” (Tit 1:11). One of the requirements of an elder is that he “may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers” (Titus 1:9). It was said of Apollos that he “mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ” (Acts 18:28). In a church world that is grasping after fame and records, this is certainly not the fashionable thing to do. But it is the godly thing to do!

When Paul was first converted, “he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians: but they went about to slay him” (Acts 9:29). Over ten years after the day of Pentecost, when the apostles and elders met to consider the acceptance of the Gentiles, there was “much disputing.” Because of the hearts of the people, and the strong arguments that were presented, they concluded in perfect accord (Acts 15:7-7-22). In Athens, Paul “disputed . . . in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons, and in the market daily with them that met with him” (Acts 17:17). In Ephesus Paul “went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God” (Acts 19:8). When some of the people were hardened “he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus” (Acts 19:9).

There is a sense in which the servants of God are in the marketplace of ideas. There comes a time when it is not enough to simply say, “Well, that is what I believe, and that is all there is to it.” At some point, the professing church must come to grips with erroneous ideas, dismantle them, and hold forth the truth of God as superior in every way. It is to be understood that everyone cannot do this with the same effectiveness. However, there is a place for being ready to give an answer to every man that asks a reason for the hope that is in you (1 Pet 3:15).

Let it be clear, God is not honored by human stupidity, flawed words, and simplistic speech. Those who speak for the Lord are to be men in understanding, and not speak as a child. Even though men try to dignify childish talk, they cannot be successful in their attempts.

In my judgment there are too many incapable and unlearned men in religious leadership. They have not gained “excellent standing and great assurance in their faith in Christ Jesus” NIV (1 Tim 3:13). This is one of the reasons for the proliferation of error within the Christian community. It lacks competent men who can effectively dispute with these charlatans. This is something that cannot be taught. It is learned in the crucible of service in which one keeps the faith and presses toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

It is good to keep in mind that Stephen was not an apostle, yet here he is, himself doing some of the things that the apostles also did. Some might conjecture that this was possible because the apostles had laid hands on him (Acts 6;16). I prefer to trace his effectiveness to his own faithfulness in serving tables, through which he obtained “great boldness in the faith,” just as Paul said.

THEY WERE NOT ABLE TO RESIST

”And they were not able to resist . . .” Other versions read, “they were unable to cope,” NASB “they could not stand up against,” NIV “they could not withstand,” NRSV “they were not able to get the better of him,” BBE “they couldn’t argue,” GWN “the Jews could not argue with him,” IE “found themselves quite unable to stand up against,” PHILLIPS “they were no match for Stephen,” CEV “they could not refute him,” GNB and “they had no strength to stand against.” LITV

Stephen was not simply an overpowering personality. He was a man “full of faith and power,” and the Holy spirit and wisdom as well. The point here is that these men could not answer Stephen’s arguments. He left them speechless. Peter would say he put them “to silence” (1 Pet 2:15). Paul would say he “stopped” their mouths (Tit 1:11). As Gamaliel would say, they “could not overthrow it” (Acts 5:39). As Isaiah said, every tongue that rose up against Stephen was “condemned” (Isa 54:17).

In Stephen the promise of Jesus was fulfilled, “For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist” (Luke 21:15). Although that word was spoken to only four men during the Olivet discourse, yet it was fulfilled in a man who was not even there – Stephen.

God Is To Be Honored in Our Presentations

Our God is to be honored by what we say in His name. Our presentations should solicit the attention of holy angels as well as men of humble and hungry hearts, and inquisitive spirits. Let it be clear, God is not honored by human stupidity, flawed words, and simplistic speech. Those who speak for the Lord are to be men in understanding, and not speak as a child (1 Cor 13:11; 14:20). Even though men try to dignify childish talk, they cannot be successful in their attempts. Those who say that public speaking and writing should be delivered so six year-olds can understand, betray a level of ignorance that is inexcusable. Christian writers are regularly told to dumb down their writings to a sixth-to-eighth grade level. What will they do if they encounter someone like the Libertines, the Pharisees, the scribes, or the lawyers? How would they speak if they stood before Athenian philosophers who had imbibed the high-sounding teaching of Socrates and Plato? What will they present to the aggressive atheists and evolutionists? It is time to get childishness out of the pulpit, libraries, and bookstores. Men of God are to be able to silence those who oppose the truth, not simply turn and walk away, leaving them to confuse other people.

The truth of God is the highest and most stable substance of communication. It challenges the mind more than any other message – although you would never know from many of the messages that are being delivered in Jesus’ name. When men heard the Lord Jesus speak, they said “Never man spake like this man.” Many of the men we hear today remind us of the way the world speaks. They use the jargon of the world, and use words and concepts that the world employs. They say they are trying to reach the world, but they are lying. They are trying to impress men, not reach them, for God has given us the message that will reach into the recesses of the heart. Stephen employed Divine reasoning, and put it into inspired language. He spoke of incontestable realities, and delivered the message in words that drove the point home to the heart. He did this wisely, not accommodatingly.

THE WISDOM AND SPIRIT BY WHICH HE SPAKE

“ . . . the wisdom and the spirit by which he spake.” Other versions read, “his wisdom or the Spirit by which he spoke,” NIV “the wisdom and the Spirit with which he spoke,” NRSV “for his words were full of wisdom and of the Spirit,” BBE “because he spoke with the wisdom that the Spirit had given him ,” GWN “because of his wisdom, and the Spirit that prompted what he said ,” NJB “but the Spirit was helping Stephen speak with wisdom,” IE “the wisdom and the Spirit by which he kept speaking ,” ISV “with his good practical sense and the spiritual power with which he usually spoke,” WILLIAMS “the intelligence and the wisdom and [the inspiration of] the Spirit with which and by Whom he spoke ,” AMPLIFIED “either his practical wisdom or the spiritual force with which he spoke,” PHILLIPS and “who spoke with the great wisdom that the Spirit gave him .” CEV

Two things are noted concerning Stephen. They are things that were revealed in his speaking. This is important to note. His dominant traits were not made known in his deeds, but in his speech. Although he was a faithful man, full of faith and power, together wisdom and the Holy Spirit, it was what he said that became the ultimate attestation of the presence of those qualities. This is in sharp conflict with the manner in which religious men are assessed in our time. Generally, with several exceptions, leading figures in the contemporary Christian community are not noted for what they actually teach or preach. Some are renowned for the institution they have built, or the organization they have spawned. Some may even be known for the acts of mercy in which they are involved. It is not that any of these things are wrong of themselves. Rather, it is important to know that foundational figures within the body of Christ are to be noted for what they teach and preach. This is because God placed “first” in the body of Christ apostles, prophets, and teachers. It is only “after that” that other ministries become valid and effective (1 Cor 12:28).

“Wisdom”

Stephen “spoke” with wisdom. That is, he was able to handle the truth in such a manner as to bring it to bear upon the conscience of the people. Wisdom is the ability to handle words like David handled a sling, and Samson handled the jawbone of an ass. It is the ability to speak the truth in a constructive manner, so that the purpose of God is implemented.

In Christ, when men speak “with wisdom,” their teaching is impregnable, and cannot be torn down. It is the sort of teaching that is buttressed by the Holy Spirit, and through which He works upon the hearts of men, convincing them of sin, righteousness and judgment (John 16:8-11). This is a different order of wisdom, and is a higher kind of wisdom than that which was given to Solomon. This is a wisdom that has more to do with eternal matters than temporal circumstances. It is a wisdom flowing from Christ, who is “great than Solomon” (Matt 12:42). This kind of wisdom is described as “the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). In other words, it has to do with insight into the “eternal purpose” of God, and the ability to expound the Scriptures in view of that immutable purpose.

Those who are recognized as especially wise men in matters pertaining to marriage, finance, motivation, organization, problem resolution, and the likes, possess a wisdom that is more of the Solomonic order than of Christ. Those with the higher order of wisdom are not ignorant in these areas. They do, however, approach them at a more foundational level, having a more thorough perception of earthly circumstances.

Stephen, of course, was not discoursing concerning the various nuances of synagogue life. He was not addressing the matter of having more stable finances, integrating with society, or other such matters. He certainly was not delivering teaching on how to have better health and obtain much wealth. Such teaching would probably have been tolerated by the people of this synagogue. It ought to be obvious that a man “full of faith and power,” who is doing “great wonders and miracles among the people,” would not be inclined to speak at length about such matters.

The wisdom with which Stephen spoke did not convince the people of the truth of what he said, as the sequence of events that followed confirm. However, the people could not tear his arguments apart. They could not effectively contend with him, or present arguments that neutralized even the smallest part of what he was proclaiming.

“The Spirit”

Here, the reference is not to Stephen’s spirit, but to the Holy Spirit. This is seen in the very words of the text: “the Spirit BY which he spake” – not , in which he spake. Stephen’s spirit was indeed strong, and it was projected in both the content of what he said, as well as the fervency and force of it. However, it was the Holy Spirit who strengthened his inner man, thereby fortifying both his reasoning and his words. Rather than the disputers putting Stephen to silence with their rebuttals, he silenced them. It ought to be obvious that this was not primarily the accomplishment of his human spirit. This is an explanation of the “power” with which Stephen had been filled, and therefore cannot possibly refer to any natural aptitude or fervency within him.

Stephen’s wisdom was the result of His faith. He was walking in the Spirit and in the light, and was thus illuminated. His mind attained to a state that was not possible through any man-conceived means. He saw things flesh cannot see. Therefore, his words were like festering arrows that frustrated those who sought to contend with him.

What a difference there is between “spiritually minded” (Rom 8:6) and “the carnal mind” (Rom 8:7); between natural aptitude (Matt 10:28) and spiritual aptitude (1 Pet 4:11); between “spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9) and worldly understanding (1 Tim 1:7); between the “wisdom that is from above” (James 3:17) and the “wisdom of this world” (James 3:15). Those who reason in the Spirit soar beyond the capabilities of the flesh, or natural aptitude. They can see things that cannot be accessed by the human eye, and sense things that cannot be ascertained by the natural senses. Faith can mount up with the wings of the eagle, while flesh must burrow in the ground of sense and time.

The truth itself is impervious to error. When men attempt to distort it, their efforts fail. Although it may appear men have thrust the truth out of sight, as it appeared to be during The Dark Ages, yet all it takes is a an honest and good heart mingled with faith, and it can be seen so clearly it seems inconceivable that it was ever hidden.

Although it has become fashionable for men to attempt to join the wisdom of the world with the wisdom that comes down from above, their efforts have not yielded satisfactory results. For example, in the area of logic, men attempt to prove the Scripture by human reasoning, or certain laws of hermeneutics. Yet, all they do is throw the veil of obscurity over the truth, both for themselves and those who hear them. The linguists make a hearty effort to support the Scripture with Greek and Hebrew expertise. Yet, all they manage to do is create variant ways of thinking, and throw doubt upon the Scriptures that are in the hands of the people. The scientist tries to open up the truth by paralleling it with nature, yet finds that nature’s bag is too small to contain the truth of God. What can be “understood by the things that are made” (Rom 1:20) is not enough to justify a man, or enable him to stand acceptably before the Lord of the creation. The archaeologist makes an earnest effort to prove the Scripture by various historical finds, unearthing ancient cities and artifacts. Yet, there is not a grain of faith that can be produced by all of their accumulative efforts, for faith comes by hearing what the Lord has said, not what they have found. The apologists imagine they can send the skeptics scurrying to the holes of despair by their ontological arguments for the existence of God, but the Holy Spirit does not work through their arguments to convince the world of sin, righteousness, and judgment.

Stephen’s wisdom was the result of His faith. He was walking in the Spirit and in the light, and was thus illuminated. His mind attained to a state that was not possible through any man-conceived means. He saw things flesh cannot see. Therefore, his words were like festering arrows that frustrated those who sought to contend with him. They simply could not stand against the wisdom with which he spoke. The gale of his words was too strong for them. Thus they fell backward, so to speak, like those who came to arrest Jesus in the Garden (John 18:6).

There is no justifiable reason for such men to be so glaringly absent from the church of our time.

THEY SUBORNED MEN

“ 11a Then they suborned men which said. . .” Other versions read, “They secretly induced men to say,” NKJV “they secretly persuaded some men to say,” NIV “they secretly instigated some men to say,” NRSV “The they got men to say,” BBE “Then they bribed some men to lie,” GWN “Then they sent men, and instructed them to say,” MRD “So they procured some men to say,” NJB “Then they privily prepared men, which said,” PNT “So they brought in some men to lie about him,” LIVING “So they secretly paid some men to say,” IE “So they [secretly] instigated and instructed men to say,” AMPLIFIED “ In desperation they bribed men to allege,” PHILLIPS and “So they talked some men into saying,” CEV

What will these religious men do when they are faced with words they cannot overthrow. Will they be like those on the day of Pentecost who cried out, “Men and brethren, what shall we do?” (Acts 2:37). Will they be like the five thousand men who believed after hearing Peter preach on the same Jesus Stephen proclaimed? (Acts 4:4). Stricken with a sense of their folly, will they cry out like the Philippian jailor, “What must I do to be saved?” (Acts 16:31).

Indeed, they will not! Even though they have heard a reasonable message, and have not been able to find a single flaw in it, yet their hearts are so corrupt, they cannot accept it. They were like certain Jews who heard Jesus, of whom it is written, “Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them” (John 12:39-40). They will not yield to the truth, but will accelerate their efforts to oppose it.

THE REASON FOR SPIRITUAL DECLINE

There are two primary reasons for their response, and they are joined with one another. First, their hearts were “stony” (Ezek 11:19), and thus their “mind and conscience” were defiled (Tit 1:15). Second, God had blinded their eyes so they could not believe (Isaiah 29:10).

The Way Delineated

There is a certain sequence that led those disputing with Stephen into this condition, and it is revealed in God’s dealings with wayward Israel. The Lord speaks quite candidly on this matter. The twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah plots the downward path of Israel, and Jesus uses the passage to explain why the Jews He confronted could not believe.

- The people had lapsed into a state where they honored God with the lips, while their hearts were far from Him. Their fear of Him was taught by the precept of man, and there was neither heart nor conscience in it (Isa 29:13). This took place even though God had sent them holy prophets, commissioning them “early,” in order to turn the hearts of the people back to Him. Yet, they did not hear (Jer 7:13,25; 26:5,19; 32:33; 35:15).

- Therefore, the Lord “poured out” upon them “the spirit of deep sleep,” closing their eyes, and covering the eyes of the prophets so they could not prophesy (Isa 29:10). John said He “blinded their eyes and hardened their hearts” (John 12:39a).

- The result of this was that the Scriptures became a sealed book, and none of the people could understand them (Isa 29:11). John said that the consequence was they “could not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted” (John 12:40). John provides this scenario as the reason “they could not believe” (John 12:39).

- As a result of this inability to believe, Satan gains the absolute dominance over such individuals, “who are taken captive by him at his will” (1 Tim 2:26). They now enter into a totally irrational life in which the truth is stifled at any cost, as they become nothing more than vassals in the hands of the devil.

This is why the Jews killed their prophets who came to rescue them from the ravages of sin. This is why Judas betrayed Jesus, and it is also why their leaders promoted and facilitated the death of Christ, even though He had gone about “doing good, and healing all who were oppressed of the devil” (Acts 10:39).

Now, this same process of degradation moves the men in the synagogue of the Libertines to take matters into their own hands. They cannot resist what Stephen has said, so they will engage in an effort to misrepresent him before the people. The “chief priests and elders” engaged in the same activity as they plotted the death of Jesus. They “sought false witnesses against Jesus, to put Him to death” (Matt 26:59).

SUBORNING FALSE WITNESSES

In this effort, not being able to find fault with Stephen, or to overthrow his words, they will “suborn” men. The word “suborn” means “to instruct privately, instigate, to bribe or induce (someone) unlawfully or secretly to perform some misdeed or commit a crime; to induce (a person) to give false testimony,” THAYER and “hiring someone to do something illegal.” FRIBERG

The truth is so invasive to the mind of the flesh, that it will go to any length to escape the Word’s hammering blows. Like Judas, they are now in the grip of Satan. Their disdain for the truth as it is in Jesus has compelled God to give them over to the arch-foe, and he goes to work in them immediately, seeking to stop the spread of the truth.

PSALMIC REPRESENTATIONS

This manner of the wicked is frequently mentioned in the Psalms. We find there most vivid representations of the aggression of those who hate the truth and those who speak it. These texts are being lived out in the opposition that is now being fomented against Stephen.

- “The wicked . . . He sitteth in the lurking places of the villages: in the secret places doth he murder the innocent: his eyes are privily set against the poor ” (Psa 10:8).

- “For, lo, the wicked bend their bow, they make ready their arrow upon the string, that they may privily shoot at the upright in heart ” (Psa 11:2).

- “Pull me out of the net that they have laid privily for me : for thou art my strength” (Psa 31:4).

- “The wicked plotteth against the just , and gnasheth upon him with his teeth” (Psa 37:12).

- “They only consult to cast him down from his excellency: they delight in lies : they bless with their mouth, but they curse inwardly. Selah” (Psa 62:4).

- “They encourage themselves in an evil matter: they commune of laying snares privily ; they say, Who shall see them?” (Psa 64:5).

- “When my spirit was overwhelmed within me, then thou knewest my path. In the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a snare for me ” (Psa 142:3).

This is the extent to which one will go who has consistently resisted the truth, and is finally faced with a deluge of it that he cannot bear. Under the domination of Satan he will resort of fabrication and deceit in order to bring down the righteous.

The godly should not be surprised when men resort to lying to misrepresent them. In so doing, they are nothing more than vassals of the devil, who “abode not in the truth,” and vigorously promotes the lie (John 8:44).

WE HEARD HIM SPEAK

“ 11b . . . We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses, and against God.” Other versions read, “He has said evil against Moses and against God, in our hearing,” BBE “We heard him slander Moses and God ,” GWN “We heard him using blasphemous language against Moses and against God ,” NJB “We have heard him speaking evil sayings in regard to Moses and God ,” YLT “claiming they had heard Stephen curse Moses, and even God ,” LIVING “We have heard him speaking abusive words against Moses and God ,” WILLIAMS “We have heard this man speak, using slanderous and abusive and blasphemous language against Moses and God ,” AMPLIFIED and “We have heard this man making blasphemous statements against Moses and against God .” PHILLIPS

What they said they heard is not what came out of Stephen’s mouth, but were the conclusions that they reached about what he said. At the very best it was an erroneous interpretation, and yet it was every whit a lie. And, like the soldiers who kept the vigil at Jesus’ tomb, they were paid to deliver their lying words. Thus it is written, “And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day” (Matt 28:12-15). The witnesses against Stephen also took their place with those who bore false witness against Jesus saying, “We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands” (Mark 14:58).

Later, Paul experienced the same kind of slanderous report. “And not rather, (as we be slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say,) Let us do evil, that good may come? whose damnation is just” (Rom 3:8). Jude also spoke of those who misrepresented the Gospel, making it a justification for further involvement in sin: “For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness , and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ” (Jude 1:4).

It should not surprise us that those under the domination of the devil would resort to lies to justify their opposition to the truth. Jesus said to certain hard-hearted Jews, “Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it ” (John 8:44).

Suffice it to say, those who are overcome by the devil assume his attributes, and conduct themselves after his despicable manner.

THEY STIRRED UP THE PEOPLE

“ 12a And they stirred up the people . . . ” Other versions read, “and the people . . . were moved against him,” BBE “And they roused the people,” DARBY “Thus they moved the people ,” GENEVA “The liars stirred up trouble among the people,” GWN “And they excited the people,” MRD “They incited the people,” NET “Having turned the people against him ,” NJB “This accusation roused the crowds to fury against Stephen,” LIVING and “At the same time they worked upon the feelings of the people.” PHILLIPS

The “they” refers to the men who had been secretly bribed and instructed to bare false witness against Stephen. Now, armed with false report, they began circulating among the people and stirring them up – agitating them with their lies about the man of God. This is the same thing the leaders of the people did when they delivered Jesus to be crucified. Those being stirred up were the ordinary people, who could be easily swayed and provoked when they thought someone was tampering with their religious customs. When Jesus was before Pilate, “chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus” (Matt 27:20). Mark says “the chief priests moved the people, that he should rather release Barabbas unto them” (Mark 15:11).

This tactic was also used by the Jews against Paul in Antioch. “But the Jews stirred up the devout and honorable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts” (Acts 13:50). The same thing happened in Iconium: “But the unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles, and made their minds evil affected against the brethren” (Acts 14:2). Even in Thessalonica, the Jews were forward to stir up the people against Paul: “But the Jews which believed not, moved with envy, took unto them certain lewd fellows of the baser sort, and gathered a company, and set all the city on an uproar, and assaulted the house of Jason, and sought to bring them out to the people” (Acts 17:5). Again it is written, “But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the people” (Acts 17:13). Jews from Asia even pursued Paul to Jerusalem and stirred up the people against him. “And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands on him” (Acts 21:27). Concerning Stephen, this whole matter was instigated by Satan who is ‘the accuser of the brethren’ (Rev 12:10). He consistently seeks to stir up trouble in the area where the truth of God is being effectively proclaimed.

Korah aroused two hundred and fifty men against Moses (Num 16:1-3). The ten spies fomented a rebellion among the people that resulted in well over half-a-million people being excluded from the promised land (Num 32:9-11).

The Lord leaves no doubt concerning the state of a person who sows seeds of discord – particularly when they are against those who are speaking the truth. Among the “seven things” that the Lord “hates,” Solomon lists “A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren” (Prov 6:19). So far as men were concerned, this opposition was caused by a party spirit in which the organization is valued above the truth itself. Those possessing this spirit are more readily used by Satan.

THEY CAME, CAUGHT, AND BROUGHT

“12b . . . and the elders, and the scribes, and came upon him, and caught him, and brought him to the council.” Other versions read, “came upon him and seized him,” NKJV “came upon him and dragged him away,” NASB “they seized Stephen,” NIV “then they suddenly confronted him , seized him, and brought him,” NRSV “the Jewish leaders arrested him and brought him,.” LIVING “They became so angry that they came and grabbed Stephen. Then they took him to the Jewish council,” IE “At length they came upon him, seized him with violence , and took him,” WEYMOUTH “Then they rushed at him , grabbed him, and brought him” ISV and “Then they suddenly confronted Stephen, seized him and marched him off before the Sanhedrin .” PHILLIPS

It had not been long since the Jewish authorities had arrested the apostles “without violence, for they feared the people” (5:26). Things had escalated since then, and such a fear is not present among these Libertines. There is no reservation within them. Therefore, being unable to resist the wisdom and Spirit by whom Stephen spoke, they rush upon him, and seizing him with violence, “brought him to the council.” They are doing this to put him on trial.

This is now the fifth time “the council” and Jewish authorities have been found involved in opposition to the truth of Christ (Acts 4:6,15,23; 5:21-41). Although they have already been exposed to a considerable amount of Gospel from Peter and the apostles, it has not lessened their spiritual obtuseness. As evil men and seducers are wont to do, they are growing “worse and worse” (2 Tim 3:13).

Things were so corrupt among the Jewish leaders that the word of Issiah was being fulfilled among them. “Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey : and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment” (Isa 59:15). Let it be clear that when men begin to reject the truth, there is no way of knowing how low they will stoop to get their own way. There is no known limit to the wickedness they are capable of doing.

THEY SET UP THE FALSE WITNESSES

“ 13 And set up false witnesses, which said, This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against this holy place, and the law . . . ” Other versions read, “This man incessantly speaks against this holy place, and the Law,” NASB “fellow never stops speaking against this holy place and against the law,” NIV “This man never ceases to speak words against this holy place and the law,” RSV “This man never stops saying bad things about the holy place and Moses' Teachings,” GWN “This man ceaseth not to utter words contrary to the law , and against this holy place,” MRD “This man is always speaking against the holy Temple and against the law of Moses,” NLT “This one doth not cease to speak evil sayings against this holy place and the law,” YLT “Stephen was constantly speaking against the Temple and against the laws of Moses,” LIVING “This man never stops making statements against this sacred place and the Law [of Moses],” AMPLIFIED and “This man's speeches are one long attack against this holy place and the Law.” PHILLIPS

The words “this holy place” refer to the Temple itself. “The law” refers more to the customs and ceremonial law than to the Ten Commandments.

These words are calculated to stir up people who take pride in their nation, and tend to think of themselves as being singularly blessed by having the Temple and a moral and ceremonial code. They do not rejoice in the Lord, or take delight in the truth. It is tradition and empty ceremonialism that satisfies these men. They have not received the love of the truth, but are quite willing to coast along in the frail vessel of man’s tradition.

Religious persecutors are the most serious of all, for they have associated their opposition to men and women of God with their own imagined devotion to the Lord. When there is any suggestion, whether by express statement or by insinuation, that there is something more to be seen than what is embraced by their institution, they at once oppose it. That is the nature of sectarianism

In this case, they had been disputing with Stephen. Even though they could not refute what he was saying, they proceeded as though he was wrong and they were right. Since they could not punch holes in what he said, they concocted false charges against him, saying that he was opposed to Moses and the customs of the law. They make no accurate reference to the words he spoke about Jesus, but represented him as merely disrupting their customs and degrading Moses – neither of which was true. They were, in every sense of the word, “false witnesses.” That is how hard and insensitive false religion can make a person! It stops the ears, blinds the eyes, callouses the heart, and dulls the conscience.

By making these charges, they were fulfilling their own Scriptures. “Deliver me not over unto the will of mine enemies: for false witnesses are risen up against me, and such as breathe out cruelty” (Psa 27:12). “False witnesses did rise up; they laid to my charge things that I knew not” (Psa 35:11) . “Every day they wrest my words: all their thoughts are against me for evil” (Psa 56:5).

THE WITNESS AGAINST STEPHEN

“ 14 For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs which Moses delivered us.” Other versions read, “for we have heard him say that this Nazarene, Jesus, will destroy this place and alter the customs which Moses handed down to us .” NASB “For he has said in our hearing that this Jesus of Nazareth will put this place to destruction and make changes in the rules which were handed down to us by Moses ,” BBE “For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the traditions which Moses delivered unto us,” DARBY “For we have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the ordinances , which Moses gave us,” GENEVA “For we have heard him say, that this Jesus the Nazarean will destroy this place, and will change the rites which Moses delivered to you,” MRD “We have heard him say that this fellow Jesus of Nazareth will destroy the Temple, and throw out all of Moses' laws ,” LIVING and “For we have heard him say that this Jesus the Nazarene will tear down and destroy this place, and will alter the institutions and usages which Moses transmitted to us .” AMPLIFIED

Because of the hardness of the heart of the people, Jesus spoke in such a manner as to bring out their wickedness. He so veiled the truth that it would sound foolish to the carnally minded, and they would lash out against it – even scoffing at it.

The false witnesses that testified at the trial of Jesus said they had heard Him say, “I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days” (Matt 26:61). When Jesus was hanging on the cross, the people hurled this same accusation at Him. “And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, And saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross” (Matt 27:39-40). What Jesus had actually said, as well as its meaning, is recorded in John 2:18-21. “Then answered the Jews and said unto Him, What sign showest Thou unto us, seeing that Thou doest these things? Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up. Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days? But he spake of the temple of his body” (John 2:18-21).

One might wonder why Jesus did not clarify this to the people. There is a reason for Him not doing this. Because of the hardness of the heart of the people, Jesus spoke in such a manner as to bring out their wickedness. He so veiled the truth that it would sound foolish to the carnally minded, and they would lash out against it – even scoffing at it. This Divine manner was revealed through Isaiah the prophet. “But the word of the LORD was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little; that they might go, and fall backward, and be broken, and snared, and taken ” (Isa 28:13). This is another reason why “it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God” (Heb 10:31).

There is a certain hostility that exists between the people of God and those who have adopted false and sterile religion. It is our business not to be naive about these things.

Now these false witnesses say that Stephen is preaching the very same thing they said Jesus affirmed. This saying did occur early in His ministry, and the people never got over it. Three years after He said it, speaking of His own resurrection from the dead, they hurled it in His teeth as he hung upon the cross, suspended between heaven and earth. Now, they falsely accuse Stephen of declaring the same message.

SOMETHING TO BE LEARNED

Here is a case where a false accusation is raised against a man of God, and it appears as though the accusers will win. We should learn from this not to be naive about the opposition we face from the world. It is not wise to represent Scripture as saying all of our enemies will obviously fail in their opposition to us, and we will always apparently defeat them. When the Scriptures declare, “No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the LORD, and their righteousness is of me, saith the LORD” (Isa 54:17) , it is referring to ultimate outcomes. Cain killed righteous Abel (Gen 4:25). Zachariah the prophet was slain between the Temple and the altar (2 Chron 24:20-22; Matt 23:35). Jezebel killed the prophets of the Lord (1 Kgs 18:13). Herod killed James the brother of John with the sword (Acts 12:2). A whole host of saints “were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword: they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented” (Heb 11:37). One of the members of the church in Pergamos is described by Jesus as “Antipas . . . my faithful martyr” (Rev 2:13). Jesus candidly told His disciples, “And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death” (Luke 21:16). Paul spoke for the apostles when he wrote, “For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men ” (1 Cor 4:9). Quoting from Psa 44:22, Paul also said, “As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter” (Rom 8:36).

There is a certain hostility that exists between the people of God and those who have adopted false and sterile religion. It is our business not to be naive about these things.

Those who handle the Word of God must not leave the people with the impression that their enemies will never give them trouble, or that they will openly triumph over every foe while they remain in this world. This is emphatically not true.

THEY SAW HIS FACE

“ 15 And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.” Other versions read, “his face looked like the face of an angel,” BBE “his face appeared to them like the face of an angel,” NJB “his face became as bright as an angel's,” NLT “saw Stephen's face become as radiant as an angel's ,” LIVING “they saw his face looking just like the face of an angel ,” WEYMOUTH and “his face had the appearance of the face of an angel,” AMPLIFIED

LOOKING STEADFASTLY ON HIM

“And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly on him . . .” Other versions read, “fixing their gaze upon him,” NASB “looked intently at Stephen,” NIV “gazing at him,,” RSV “fastening their eyes upon him,” ASV “stared at him,” GWN and “glared at him.” ISV As Stephen stood before this wicked council, they fixed their eyes upon him. Their gaze was not one of inquiry, but of hatred and malice. They saw him as a threat to their religious system, and did not have the slightest regard for him personally, or the Jesus that he preached. They were not looking with sympathy upon him, or with a mind to consider what he might say. This was the look of contempt. In his own measure, Stephen was experiencing what prophesied of, and endured by, the Lord Jesus: “they look and stare upon me” (Psa 22:17).

AS THE FACE OF AN ANGEL

“ . . . saw his face as it had been the face of an angel.” Other versions read, “his face looked like the face of an angel,” BBE “his face appeared to them like the face of an angel,” NJB “his face became as bright as an angel's ,” NLT “saw Stephen's face become as radiant as an angel's ,” LIVING “they saw his face looking just like the face of an angel ,” WEYMOUTH and “his face had the appearance of the face of an angel,” AMPLIFIED

As they stared at Stephen they saw a physical token of his innocence. There was no look of guilt upon him, as there was upon Peter the night he denied Jesus three times. Stephen’s face was a testimony that the council would have done well to heed.

And how does an angel's face appear? We have some examples in Scripture. Once, when an angel appeared to Daniel, it is written "his face" was "as the appearance of lightning" (Dan 10:6). When a holy angel came down to the tomb from which Jesus had risen, he rolled away the stone and sat upon it. It is said of that angel, "his countenance was like lightning" (Matt 28:3). When John received the vision of the Revelation on the Isle of Patmos, he saw an angel, "and his face was as it were the sun" (Rev 10:1). This denoted both the purity and the glory of the holy angels. I gather that the face of Stephen being as that of an angel also spoke of his purity and glory, of his holiness, and power.

This was an evidence that the council was witnessing a man who was full of the Holy Spirit. The witness of his face was evidence that they were wrong and Stephen as right. They should have called an abrupt conclusion to their wicked assembly. However, they could not do so, for they were "in the bond of iniquity" (Acts 8:23).

At this point, Stephen was like a city set on a hill, and a candle placed on a candlestick so all could see (Matt 5:14-15). Now, the examination of Stephen will begin. However, we will find that Stephen himself will examine them.

CONCLUSION

We have been exposed to the aggressiveness of the flesh, and the unbridled hostility of lifeless religion. When people think they are of God, yet really are not, they become a weapon in the hand of the devil. There is no way to adequately portray the seriousness of a "form of godliness" that "denies the power thereof." It is what moved Cain to kill Abel, and the Jews to kill their prophets, murder Jesus, and oppose the twelve apostles and Paul. Let every person who confesses Christ declare war on any approach to religion that causes people to reject the truth and oppose those who declare it. Too, let no follower of Christ stand in amazement that they are opposed by religious peers.

Lesson #28

STEPHEN'S DEFENSE, #1

“ 7:1 Then said the high priest, Are these things so? 2 And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken; The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran, 3 and said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee. 4 Then came he out of the land of the Chaldaeans, and dwelt in Charran: and from thence, when his father was dead, he removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell. 5 And he gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on: yet he promised that he would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child. 6 And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years. 7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place. 8 And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs. ” (Acts 7:1-8)

INTRODUCTION

Stephen has been falsely charged, and now appears before the Jewish council to be tried. He has been arraigned as one who has spoken against both God and Moses, thus disrupting the religious life of the community, and blaspheming God in the process. Blasphemy was a capital offence, as defined by the law of Moses. “And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death ” (Lev 24:16). This was based on one of the Ten Commandments: “Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain” (Ex 20:7). An actual example of the sentence being carried out by Divine direction is provided in Leviticus 24:11-24. There, the son of an Israelitish woman, whose husband was an Egyptian, fought with a man of Israel. In the process, the son “blasphemed the name of the Lord and cursed.” They incarcerated the boy, as Moses waited for a word from the Lord. God spoke to Moses, “Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him. And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin. And he that blasphemeth the name of the LORD, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the LORD, shall be put to death” (Lev 24:14-16). Moses delivered the word to the people, “And the children of Israel did as the LORD commanded Moses” (Lev 24:23).

Furthermore, offenses worthy of death required more than one witness. One witness was not enough. As it is written, “At the mouth of two witnesses, or three witnesses, shall he that is worthy of death be put to death; but at the mouth of one witness he shall not be put to death” (Deut 17:6).

CAPITAL OFFENSES

It might be profitable to briefly mention capital crimes, or crimes that were punishable by death. The Law was “the ministration of death” (2 Cor 3:7), as is confirmed in these laws. Deeds that incurred the death penalty included:

- Murder (Num 35:16-21; Lev 24:17).
- Adultery (Lev 20:10).
- Incest (Lev 20:11,12,14).
- Bestiality (Ex 22:19; Lev 20:15-16).
- Sodomy (Lev 20:13).
- Incontinence (Deut 22:21-24).
- Rape (Deut 22:25).
- Kidnapping (Ex 21:16; Deut 24:7).

- A priest's daughter committing fornication (Lev 21:9).
- Witchcraft (Ex 22:18).
- Offering human sacrifice (Lev 20:2-5),
- Striking or cursing mother or father (Ex 21:15).

It ought to be noted that those who are in Christ Jesus have undergone a fundamental change. They are no longer what they once were. Their character has been so impacted that their loves and hates have been transformed, as well as their desires and ambitions.

Disobedience to parents (Deut 21:18-21).

- Blasphemy (Lev 24:11-23).
- Sabbath desecration (Ex 31:14-15; 35:2).
- Prophesying falsely, or propagating false doctrines (Deut 13:1-10).
- Anyone offering their children to the false God Molech (Lev 20:2)
- A man or woman with a familiar spirit, or who was a wizard (Lev 20:27).
- Sacrificing to false gods (Ex 22:20).
- Refusing to abide by the decision of the court (Deut 17:12).

AN OBSERVATION

Here are twenty offenses that were capital crimes, resulting in the death of the individual. Remember, that blasphemy was the same charge that was leveled against the Lord Jesus Himself (Mk 14:64), and that under the Law of Moses, this death was the punishment for the offense. This meant that two or three witnesses were required to validate the charges against Stephen.

In order to ensure that this requirement is met, some “men” – more than one – are bribed to bear false witness against Stephen. Before Stephen is brought before the council, these witnesses have stirred up the people with their lies, thereby stacking things in their favor.

The point to be seen is that none of the other capital offenses were charged against Stephen – even by false witnesses. His life was so exemplary that even his enemies knew charges of immorality could not be substantiated against him – not even by lying.

It ought to be noted that those who are in Christ Jesus have undergone a fundamental change. They are no longer what they once were. Their character has been so impacted that their loves and hates have been transformed, as well as their desires and ambitions. Some of the affirmations of this change are as follows.

- “Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new” (2 Cor 5:17).
- “For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them” (Eph 2:10).
- “And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness ” (Eph 4:24).
- “For ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord : walk as children of light” (Eph 5:8).
- “And have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him ” (Col 3:10).

- “ Being born again , not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever” (1 Pet 1:23).

It is inconceivable that such language could be applied to a people who did not undergo a fundamental change. It is equally unimaginable that those who experienced such a change would show no evidence of it. The evidence of the change is the confirmation that it has, in fact, taken place. The lack of evidence throws the whole matter of identity with Christ into question. Thus those lacking satisfactory evidence of the work of God within are admonished, “Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?” (2 Cor 13:5).

Actually, no one lacking the evidence of real change should be in a place of prominence or responsibility within the church. That, of course, is precisely why the apostles told the early church to choose men who were “full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom” (Acts 6:3). The only possible way to substantiate the existence of those traits is by means of outward expression that can be perceived by others.

CONFIRMED IN STEPHEN

All of this is confirmed in the approach of the council to Stephen. It is obvious they knew gross immorality could be neither found nor successfully fabricated against this man of God. He was “blameless” – a quality that must be found in those holding prominent places in the body of Christ (1 Tim 3:2,10; Tit 1:6-7). In fact, this is the state in which all believers are to be found (1 Cor 1:8; Phil 2:15; 1 Thess 5:23; 2 Pet 3:14). Nothing is to be found in the people of God that promotes suspicion, or suggests they are no different than unregenerate men.

THE TRIAL PROCEEDS

Now, that the charges have been officially made, an opportunity will be given to Stephen to defend himself. His defense will testify to his character. It will also reveal how he thought about the workings of the Lord. His wisdom will glow brightly as he is able to correlate the history of the Jews with the present circumstance, and draw a telling conclusion. In this, we are witnessing a sanctified mind and mouth that bring glory to the Lord.

Remember, Stephen has been charged with speaking against both Moses and the Lord. His defense will be a magnificent refutation of those charges.

A KINGDOM MANNER

Scriptural accounts such as this reveal the manner in which God works among men. They confirm how He reveals Himself, and carries out His purpose. This is because the manner of His Kingdom permeates all of God’s dealings with men. That is why the Scriptures – all of them – are relevant to us. Men often fasten upon the experiences of men in Scriptural accounts, without giving due regard to what is made known of God and His Kingdom in those records. One of the chief reasons seeking first the Kingdom of God is so pertinent is that so much of its manner is revealed in inspired history. Some of the more evident things include the following.

- God’s hatred of sin (the world of Noah’s day, Sodom and Gomorrah,. Israel).
- The Divine manner of judging sin (Israel, Belshazzar, Herod. Ananias and Sapphira).
- The Lord’s inclination to those who have humble and contrite hearts (David, John).
- His longsuffering (David).
- God’s preference for mercy (Israel).

- How He allows sin to go on for a seemingly long time, then breaks forth against it when there is no repentance (The world of Noah’s day).
- How He can be turned against those with whom he has worked extensively (Israel).
- How the Lord honors faith (Abraham).
- How He can shape circumstances to favor those who trust in Him (Joseph).
- How He raises up wicked men through whom He obtains glory (Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar).
- His propensity to bless people upon the basis of another (Abraham, David, and now Jesus).

In addition to these, we are given to see several things regarding men. Here is a small sampling.

- The unimaginable capacity of men without faith to do wickedness.
- The invincibility of faith.
- The blinding effect of unbelief.
- The impact of the Gospel upon the hearts of men – both the believing and the unbelieving.
- How men speak who are filled with the Holy Spirit.

Scriptural history is not a series of accounts related to, and reflecting the impact of human culture. Rather, its purpose is for us to become familiar with the outworking of Divine purpose . You may be sure Scriptural records are not given to buttress the movements of men, but rather to instruct us more perfectly in the ways of the Lord. If we fail to see this, historical books like Genesis through Second Chronicles, Job, Esther, Nehemiah, Jonah, the Gospels, and the book of Acts, will soon become monotonous to us.

This is because they will not appear to have much to do with us. Because they are relating to us the experience of other people, the carnal mind soon tires of them, and comes to view them as relatively worthless. At the very best, the static religious mind will see them as something like spiritual museum pieces – epitaphs to those of the past.

The people of God must zealously avoid this tawdry view of things. Such a view is the result of the proliferation of the wisdom of the world within the professed church. It has now carved out rooms of considerable size for psychiatrists, dieticians, motivators, statisticians, and cunning administrators. In all of Divine history, God has never replied on the world’s wisdom to do His work – never!

The incident before us is a case in point. God will use a man full of the Holy Spirit, wisdom, faith, and spiritual power, to deliver His message to the religious leaders. Stephen will further make no attempt to covert them, but rather to convict them. Much will be revealed through all of this.

ARE THESE THINGS SO?

“ 7:1 Then said the high priest, Are these things so?” Other versions read, “Are these charges true?” NIV “Is this so?” RSV “Are these accusations true?” CJB “Is this true?” GWN “Is it even so?” TNT “Are these statements true?” WEYMOUTH “Do you so hold these [things]?” ALT “Are they telling the truth about you?” CEV “Tell me then if you thus hold these things?” LITV “Then do you so hold these things?” MKJV and “Is this statement true?” PHILLIPS

THE ORDAINED MINISTRY OF THE HIGH PRIEST

Like Jesus was, Stephen is now in court, and the high priest is presiding over it. In this we see that a marked deterioration had occurred in the office of the high priest. As ordained by God, this office had to do with the things relating to God and offerings for sin. Thus it is written, “For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins: who can have compassion on the ignorant, and on them that are out of the way; for that he himself also is compassed with infirmity. And by reason hereof he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins” (Heb 5:1-3).

When this office was put into place, the Lord told Moses the purpose of the high priest was “that he may minister unto Me in the priest’s office” (Ex 28:3). This statement is made no less than eight times in the instructions concerning the priests (Ex 28:1,3,4,41; 29:1; 30:30; 40:13,15).

Our situation is very similar to that of our text. Religious leaders have managed to carve out little empires for themselves. Like Caiaphas, they have palaces and large staffs, all of which are devoted to things other than the Kingdom of God.

The high priests were never intended to become involved in all the affairs of the people. Special judges were chosen for that purpose (Ex 21:6,22; 22:8,9; Num 25:5; Deut 1:15; 16:18; 19:18; 21:2; 15:1). When settling the differences among the people became too burdensome for Moses, the Lord instructed him to select seventy men who were “elders of the people” and bring them to the tabernacle. God then took “of the Spirit” which was upon Moses, and put it upon these men so they could “bear the burden of the people” with Moses (Num 11:16-17, 24-25). These men were not priests, for God never intended the priests to become involved in such matters, even though they were necessary. When offenders stood before priests and judges, it was the judges that inquired of the circumstances, not the priests (Deut 19:17-18).

We have no examples of a God-ordained high priest holding a court, or engaging in the judgment of the people. That was not included in the scope of his responsibility. His role was to represent the people before the Lord as he ministered unto the Lord.

THE DETERIORATION OF THE OFFICE

Now, however, the high priest has left off ministering unto the Lord, and is holding a court like the judges were to do. In fact, during this time the high priest, and the “chief priests” even had an army. The soldiers – “a great multitude” – that came to arrest Jesus in the garden were “from the chief priests and elders of the people” (Matt 26:17). The high priest, Caiaphas, also was dwelling in a “palace,” or mansion (for so the word “palace” means (Matt 26:3,57). It was also the high priest that examined Jesus (Matt 26:63-65). Already, the high priest has opposed Peter and John in a legal setting (Acts 4:6), did the same with the apostles, even incarcerating them (Acts 5:17,21,24,27). Now the high priest initiates an examination of Stephen, after he has been forcefully taken and brought before him.

THE DAYS ARE EVIL

Believers are solemnly admonished, “See then that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is” (Eph 5:15-17). A major contribution to the wickedness of the days is that “evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived” (2 Tim 3:13). Our situation is very similar to that of our text. Religious leaders have managed to carve out little empires for themselves. Like Caiaphas, they have palaces and large staffs, all of which are devoted to things other than the Kingdom of God.

It should not be difficult to see that when men do not live by faith, their religion inevitably deteriorates. By “religion,” I mean one’s piety, or the expression of one’s spiritual persuasion. The word “religion” is used in this manner in Scripture (Acts 13:43; 26:5; Gal 1:13-14; James 1:26-27).

In our text, the high priest, occupying an office that was devoted to things “pertaining to God,” is now judging a man because he is contradicting their traditions, and adhering to Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom they had summarily rejected.

ARE THESE THINGS SO?

Now, in an open court, the high priest asks Stephen if what the witnesses have testified against him is true. The events that follow will confirm that this was not an inquiry into the truth of the matter. It was a formal question, but not an honest one. Yet, even though ignoble motives drove this request, Stephen seizes the opportunity, taking the kingdom by violence.

Being filled with the Spirit, faith, wisdom, and power he turns the occasion to his advantage. He will so preach as to make known the counsels of the hearts of his listeners.

MEN, BRETHREN, AND FATHERS, HEARKEN

“ 2a And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers, hearken . . . ”

In his answer, Stephen will confirm that he is not an opponent of the Jews, set out to destroy the customs delivered to them by Moses – something with which he has been charged. He will also confirm that he was not preaching a Jesus that had been noted for doing these things (Acts 6:14). He will speak with respect, candidness, and an insight that was more characteristic of someone who was a caring father among them.

MEN, BRETHREN, AND FATHERS

“And he said, Men, brethren, and fathers . . .” Other versions read, “Brethren and fathers” NKJV “Hear me,” NASB “Brothers and fathers ,” NIV “My brothers and fathers ,” BBE “Ye men , brethren, and fathers ,” DOUAY “Men, brethren, and our fathers ,” MRD “My brothers, my fathers ,” NJB “This was Stephen’s lengthy reply ,” LIVING “Sirs - brethren and fathers,” WEYMOUTH “ and “Men, brothers and fathers.” ALT

One of the principles of sound interpretation is that none of the words spoken or written by Spirit-filled men are useless, or redundant, and mere space-fillers. Those are characteristics of rhetoric and oratory, but not of inspiration.

Although several translations do not use the three terms – “men, brethren, and fathers” – they are in all of the accepted Greek manuscripts, and thus ought to have been duly translated. One of the principles of sound interpretation is that none of the words spoken or written by Spirit-filled men are useless, or redundant, and mere space-fillers. Those are characteristics of rhetoric and oratory, but not of inspiration. It is necessary to make this observation because of what Jesus promised concerning speaking in His name. “But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you” (Matt 10:20).

Being filled with the Spirit, the words that now proceed out of Stephens mouth have been given to him from heaven. The Holy Spirit is speaking through him. As his words will confirm, however, he was not speaking as a mere robot, or channel. His understanding was woven into the fabric of his words. In other words, he was truly “a vessel unto honor, sanctified, and meet for the master's use, and prepared unto every good work” (2 Tim 2:21).

Men

Stephen addresses the council as “men” – taken from the Greek word Andrej . The word means “men” in general, particularly as the offspring of Adam. This distinguishes them from angels and higher orders of created personalities. In the flesh, Stephen is speaking to them as his peers, not his superiors. In saying this, Stephen is also drawing attention away from his person to his words. It is something like Peter saying to Cornelius, “I myself also am a man” (Acts 10:36).

Brethren

He also speaks to them as fellow Israelites – offspring of Abraham, and of the nation to whom God has revealed Himself. In this he is confirming that he has not renounced his natural lineage, just as Paul did not renounce his when he said, “I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham” (Rom 11:1). While he had “no confidence in the flesh” (Phil 3:3), he did acknowledge that the uniqueness of the Jewish people was owing to God’s deliberate choice of, and involvement with, them.

Fathers

Here Stephen spoke with respect for the “elders” among the council, who had a better understanding of the Scriptures, being more familiar with them. In doing this, he is summoning them to give the more attention to what he is saying. As he speaks, they should be able to see that the charges leveled against him are totally false.

In using these three terms, Stephen is handling the people gently. It is equivalent to “a soft answer” that is designed to “turn away wrath” (Prov 15:1). As he progresses through this speech, their hardheartedness will become more evident, and he will speak more sternly. However, he does not begin that way, but employs wisdom, so as to give every advantage to his hearers to perceive the truth of his words.

HEARKEN

“ . . . hearken . . . ” Other versions read, “ listen ,” NKJV “ Hear me ,” NASB “ listen to me ,” NIV “ give hearing ,” BBE “ hear ye ,” MRD “ listen to what I have to say ,” listen to me,” WEYMOUTH and “pay attention !” ALT

The word “hearken” is a strong one. First, it implies the ability to understand, and second, the necessity of doing so. The word used here has a lexical meaning of, “to attend to, consider what is being said . . . to understand, perceive the sense of what is being said,” THAYER “to pay attention to,” FRIBERG “to give a judicial hearing” (as in drawing a valid conclusion from what is said).” UBS

Thus Stephen summons his hearers to employ their hearts and minds and understand what he is saying. He is not speaking as an entertainer, or as one who displaying oratorical skills. There is a message in his words – they are not simply an historical review.

A Particularly Relevant Word

In a hedonistic society such as ours, this kind of exhortation is particularly in order. Whole generations have been cultured to be entertained by what they hear instead of gain an understanding – particularly when it comes to the “things of the Spirit of God” (Rom 8:5; 1 Cor 2:14). When the words appear to be too challenging for them, they simply dismiss them by saying they are too deep, or are not relevant , or that they are not yet ready to receive them. The number of church people who dismiss truth because it is not easily discerned is staggering. It has come to the point where the status quo in the professing church marvels that the Bible is discerned by anyone. Rather than being challenged to apprehend the truth, they assume that only a few especially gifted and wise people can do so.

But all of this is so much nonsense. Man has been created in the image of God, and consequently possesses a capacity to understand. Even though the Divine image has been marred, men are still responsible to employ the capability of understanding – to “hearken” – just as surely as the council in our text was obligated to do so. Salvation is an economy of knowledge, for within the New Covenant, which is the context of salvation, God says, “they shall all know Me.” In fact, that “knowledge” is the means through which we receive all things pertaining to life and godliness (2 Pet 1:3). Grace and peace, so sorely required by those en route to heaven, are also acquired “ through the knowledge of God, and of Jesus our Lord” (2 Pet 1:2).

Stephen will therefore speak in such a way as to promote spiritual understanding and insight. Therefore he tells his listeners to “hearken,” listening carefully to what he says. He is not entertaining them but instructing them.

An Observation

Over the years, I have noticed a marked tendency in Christian preachers and teachers to avoid speaking to be understood. There is a very evident inclination toward entertaining the people and offering juvenile solutions to cursory difficulties. One senses that often such men really have nothing to say, and thus they preach to please and speak to entertain. This climate has invited everyone from economists and motivators, to psychologists and organizers into the Christian community.

Every person who speaks in the behalf of the Lord should make it an aim to advance the understanding of the people – to enable them to obtain a better grasp of the things of God, and to see the spiritual sense of it all. Sometimes, as in the case of Stephen, this involves calling upon the people to “hearken” – to listen intently to understand.

THE GOD OF GLORY APPEARED TO ABRAHAM

“ 2a The God of glory appeared unto our father Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran . . . ”

A review of the various speeches of Scriptural record will confirm the remarkable absence of elaborate introductions, or the employment of attention-getting verbal mechanisms. That is a tactic that is being taught to speakers today. It is an attempt to reach a distracted society, whose weakest point is their thought-life. I am not sure that such attempts are actually fruitful. The people to whom Stephen was speaking were, in a sense, distracted by hatred, prejudice, and an acute sense that Stephen was disrupting their whole manner of thought. Yet, Stephen employs three terms of identity – “Men, brethren, and fathers” – and one word of challenge – “hearken” – to commence his defense.

THE GOD OF GLORY

“The God of glory . . . ” Other versions read, “The God who reveals his glory,” GWN “ That God of glory,” GENEVA “Our glorious God ,” NLT “ The glorious God,” LIVING “ Our glorious God,” IE and “God Most Glorious .” WEYMOUTH

The employment of the article “the” is important: “ the God.” This is the true God, totally unlike “the gods of Egypt” (Ex 12:12) , “gods of silver . . . and of gold” (Ex 20:23), “the gods of these nations” (Deut 29:18), “the gods of the Amorites” (Josh 24:15), and “the gods of Syria” (Judges 10:6). There were “the gods of Edom” (2 Chron 25:20), “the gods of Damascus” (2 Chron 28:23), and “the gods of the earth” (Zeph 2:11). These were all “no gods” (2 Kgs 19:18; 2 Chron 13:9), “but were the works of men’s hands” (Isa 37:19). It can be said of them all, “They have mouths, but they speak not: eyes have they, but they see not: they have ears, but they hear not: noses have they, but they smell not; they have hands, but they handle not: feet have they, but they walk not: neither speak they through their throat” (Psa 115:7).

By way of contrast, the true God is “the God of glory” – that is, the God of self-expression, revelation, and of manifestation. False gods are the creation of men, and thus have nothing to communicate. The true God is known because – and only because – He has made Himself known. He is “the God of glory.”

What Is Glory?

The glory of a thing is what can be seen, or perceived, of it. It is what makes the thing unique or discernible – what can be seen of it. Therefore, we read of “terrestrial” bodies having a differing “glory” from “celestial” bodies. As it is written, “There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory” (1 Cor 15:40-41). All of these bodies look different because they are different. They have unique properties that are made evident when they are seen.

Something that is itself glorious has qualities of its own that can be displayed, and thus perceived by others. These qualities can be observed when they are displayed, and lend themselves to a better understanding of the thing possessing the glory. In nature, something glorious is a sunrise, or a sunset. They have a nature of their own, and therefore can be studied, analyzed, and discerned.

With God, “glory” obtains a whole new dimension. With Him, the only “glory” that can be beheld is what He Himself makes known. If He does not reveal an aspect of Himself, it can never be known. Therefore, when we speak of the glory of God, we are speaking of something He has done – some aspect of His Person or purpose that He has deliberately made known. It is only when God in some way makes Himself known that an individual is aware of His presence. Thus, after he had dreamed of a ladder set up upon earth, whose top reached into heaven, Jacob awoke and confessed, “Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not” (Gen 28:16). That dream, together with the words spoken by the Lord to Him during it, was a portion of Divine glory. It provided some insight to Jacob concerning God’s Person and purpose.

The expression “the God of glory” emphasizes that it is God’s nature to make Himself known. For example, even in the creation of the worlds He revealed some of His glory – “His eternal power and Godhead” (Rom 1:20). When He speaks, God is showing His glory. As it is written, “The voice of the LORD is upon the waters: the God of glory thundereth: the LORD is upon many waters. The voice of the LORD is powerful; the voice of the LORD is full of majesty” (Psa 29:3-4). In such things, He is making Himself known in what He accomplishes.

To put it another way, “glory” is not associated with mystery, but with revelation. It deals with what can be known of God, not what cannot be known. An approach to the Lord that mystifies what He does, and fails to promote profitable understanding, cannot possibly glorify God. Furthermore, the word “manifestation” has to do with understanding – when something is “made known” (Mk 4:22). A manifestation is not a mere appearance. For example, when Jesus turned water into wine, it is said that He “manifested forth His glory” (John 2:11). He was the better understood. Throughout the Gospels, Acts, and the epistles, the concept of manifestation always has to do with understanding (John 1:31; 3:21; 9:3; 14:21-22; 17:6; Acts 4:16; Rom 1:19; 3:21; 8:19; 10:20; 16:26; 1 Cor 3:13; 4:5; 11:19; 12:7; 14:25; 15:27; 2 Cor 2:14; 4:2,10-11; 5:11; 11:6; Gal 5:19; Eph 5:13; Phil 1:13; Col 1:26; 4:4; 2 Thess 1:5; 1 Tim 3:16; 5:25; 2 Tim 1:10; 3:9; Tit 1:3; Heb 4:13; Heb 9:8; 1 Pet 1:20; 1 John 1:2; 2:19; 3:5,8,10; 4:9; Rev 15:4).

The point here is that it is God’s nature to manifest Himself, or make Himself known. That manifestation is what constitutes His glory.

No other purported gods are on the initiative to make themselves known. They are always surrounded by secrecy, whereas “the God of glory” dwells in the light (1 Tim 6:16), so that the more men are exposed to Him, the more they know of Him. In fact, “God is light” – the epitome of revelation. Not only does He reveal Himself, but in His presence everything else is illuminated for what it really is.

Jewish history contains many revelations of Divine glory. Here are a few of them, well known to Stephen's audience.

- “And in the morning, then ye shall see the glory of the LORD ; for that he heareth your murmurings against the LORD: and what are we, that ye murmur against us?” (Ex 16:7).

- “And it came to pass, as Aaron spake unto the whole congregation of the children of Israel, that they looked toward the wilderness, and, behold, the glory of the LORD appeared in the cloud ” (Ex 16:10).

- “And Moses and Aaron went into the tabernacle of the congregation, and came out, and blessed the people: and the glory of the LORD appeared unto all the people ” (Lev 9:23).

- “But all the congregation bade stone them with stones. And the glory of the LORD appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel” (Num 14:10).

- “And ye said, Behold, the LORD our God hath showed us his glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth” (Deut 5:24).

Now, after mentioning “the God of glory,” Stephen will recount what God revealed to Abraham, and how He was on the initiative to do so.

APPEARED TO OUR FATHER ABRAHAM

“ . . . appeared unto our father Abraham . . . ” Other versions read, “appeared to our ancestor Abraham,” NRSV “ came to our father Abraham,” BBE and “appeared to our forefather Abraham,” PHILLIPS

Notice how the God of glory “appeared,” or was made apparent. Remember, we are speaking of a God who is “invisible,” or cannot be perceived with any natural sense or aptitude (Col 1:15; 1 Tim 1:17; Heb 11:27). In fact, all of His qualities are “invisible” (Rom 1:20). That is, they are of a transcendent nature, so that men cannot behold them unless they are unveiled by the Lord Himself.

By saying God “appeared” unto Abraham, Stephen means that the patriarch, owing strictly to Divine initiative, became aware of the presence of the Lord . This was not the result of Abraham searching after God, God cannot be found “by searching” (Job 11:7). This inaccessible and indiscernible aspect of God is declared by the Psalmist: “Thy way is in the sea, and thy path in the great waters, and thy footsteps are not known” (Psa 77:19). Even when God is within the proximity of men, they must still “seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him, though He be not far from every one of us” (Acts 17:27). Here the word “haply” does not mean that, perchance, the seeker may stumble upon God through His research. It rather means God may very well make Himself known to the earnest seeker. In fact, it is God's nature to do such a thing, for He is “the God of glory.”

The phrase “the Lord appeared” occurs nineteen times in the Old Covenant Scriptures. Those vouchsafed such Divine accommodations include Abraham, Isaac, Israel, Moses and Aaron, Samuel, Solomon, and David (Gen 12:7; 17:1; 18:1; 26:2,24; Ex 3:2; 16:10; Lev 9:23; Num 14:10; 16:19,42; 20:6; Deut 31:15; 1 Sam 3:21; 1 Kgs 3:5; 9:2; 2 Chron 3:1; 7:12).

In all of these cases, and especially with Abraham, God initiated the contact. None of the revelations were the result of human inquiry – unless it be time the time when Moses asked, “Show me thy glory” (Ex 33:18). Even then, however, the request was driven by the revelation of Himself that God had already given (Ex 24-32). Comprehending something of the nature of God in that revelation, Moses concluded there was more to be known of Him. Therefore, knowing he could not determine such things through human analysis, He asked God to show him his “glory.” When God did reveal His glory to Moses, He actually defined His character more fully to Him (Ex 34:6-7).

When “the God of glory” appeared to Abraham, He made certain Divine determinations known to him. He did not offer prognostications like a diviner, but revealed what He Himself had determined, and would cause to come to pass.

What Stephen Is Doing

Stephen is providing an assessment of the children of Israel. In this he is confirming why they should have received the Messiah, and embraced the Gospel that proclaimed Him. He knew that the way of assessing a people is by tracing them back to their source. The human race, for example, can be traced back to Adam. That is reason enough to know their propensity is to sin, and that they require a Savior. The church is traceable back to Christ Jesus. That is reason enough to expect it to be holy, walking in the light and living by faith. Now Stephen will set the progenitor of the Jewish people before them, showing that they should have followed him and reflected his manners. The fact that they did not will confirm they have resisted the Holy Spirit.

WHEN HE WAS IN MESOPOTAMIA

“ . . . when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charran . . . ” Other versions read, “And he said, “when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Haran ,” NKJV “And he said, “he was in Mesopotamia, before he lived in Haran,” NASB “while he was still in Mesopotamia , before he lived in Haran,” NIV “when he was between the rivers , before he came to reside in Charran,” MRD “while he was in Mesopotamia, before he had settled in Haran ,” NAB “ while he was yet in Mesopotamia before he dwelt in Charran,” TNT “ in Iraq before he moved to Syria ,” LIVING and “in Mesopotamia. This happened before Abraham lived in Haran .” GW

Mesopotamia was designated as the land “between the rivers” – the rivers being the Tigris and Euphrates. The Euphrates river is mentioned twenty-one times in Scripture, and was the fourth branch, or tributary, of the “river that went out of Eden to water the garden” (Gen 2:14). This river formed one of the boundaries of the land God promised to Abraham and his descendants, the other boundary being “the river of Egypt,” which is the Nile river (Gen 15:18). “Tigris” is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew “Hiddekel,” which was the third river branching off from the river flowing through Eden. It flowed “toward the east of Assyria” (Gen 2:14). Later versions read “Tigris.” NASB/NIV/NRSV The area between the rivers was unusually fertile.

The strange prophet Balaam was also from Mesopotamia (Deut 23:4). On one occasion, when God was angered with Israel, “He sold them into the hand of Chushanrishathaim king of Mesopotamia: and the children of Israel served Chushanrishathaim eight years” (Judges 3:8). On the day of Pentecost, there were devout Jews from Mesopotamia present when Peter preached (Acts 2:9).

Stephen says that God “appeared” to Abraham when he was in Mesopotamia. The Genesis record says Abraham was in “Ur of the Chaldees” (Gen 11:31). That period of time was prior to the area being called “Mesopotamia” (Gen 24:10). Stephen is pointing out what they already knew, that Abraham was in the place that was later called Mesopotamia. Ur of the Chaldees was a place within the larger region of Mesopotamia. The Chaldeans were the people with whom Nebuchadnezzar was identified (2 Kings 25:10-11). Today, Mesopotamia is called Iraq.

Before He Dwelt In Charran

The appearance of God to the patriarch Abraham took place “before he dwelt in Charran.” which is a form of the word Haran, as used in Genesis 11:12-32. Abraham moved there upon leaving Mesopotamia.

A Picture of Our Own Calling

The calling of Abraham was similar to our own calling. He was called out of one place to go to another. He was summoned from a foreign land to the land of promise, to be reached by Divine direction. He was made conscious of God and his will before he was blessed by him. Thus we see the Divine manner in dealing with humanity. He prepares men for involvement with himself.

GET THEE OUT OF THY COUNTRY, AND COME INTO THE LAND!

“ 3 . . . and said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I shall show thee.”

The call of God involves two things – leaving and entering; going from one place to another. This will be lived out in the experience of Abraham. We will also learn from this that the appearing of the Lord is the prelude to change. The Lord makes Himself known in order to bring something about that is of His own origin.

A Technicality

Stephen states that the Lord appeared to Abraham while he was in Mesopotamia, and before he came into Haran. The language of Genesis is very precise at this point. The text from which Stephen now quotes is found in Genesis 12:1-3. Following that record, the text says Abram departed out of Haran (Gen 12:4), which may seem as though he was in Haran when the Lord appeared to him, thus contradicting what Stephen says. However, Genesis 12:1 speaks in the past tense: “Now the Lord HAD said to Abram . . .” That is, He had spoken to Abram prior to the time when he actually left Haran. Stephen therefore speaks with clarity and understanding, pinpointing that the time of the appearance was before he left Mesopotamia.

The Genesis record provides some additional details about Abraham while he was in Mesopotamia.

- Terah, in the lineage of Shem (Gen 11:11), begat three sons after he was seventy years of age: Abram, Nahor, and Haran (Gen 11:26).
- Abraham’s original name was “Abram,” which means “high father.” Later, after he had received the promise that he would be the father of many nations (Gen 17:5-6), his name was changed by God to “Abraham,” (which means “father of a multitude”): “Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee” (Gen 17:5).
- Abraham’s brother Haran died before his father while the clan remained in Mesopotamia, or Ur of the Chaldees (Gen 11:28).
- Abram took “Sarai” (which means “my princess”) as his wife while in their native land, and she was found to be barren, and therefore could have no child (Gen 11:29-30). Later, after the promise made to Abraham, God also changed her name to “Sarah” (which means “princess of the multitude”): “And God said unto Abraham, As for Sarai thy wife, thou shalt not call her name Sarai, but Sarah shall her name be. And I will bless her, and give thee a son also of her: yea, I will bless her, and she shall be a mother of nations; kings of people shall be of her” (Gen 17:15-16).
- We then read that Terah took Abram and his wife, and Lot, and left Ur to go to Canaan. Upon arriving in Haran, they settled there. “And Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there" (Gen 11:31).

- We learn from Scripture that Terah was an idolater. This was revealed through Joshua. "And Joshua said unto all the people, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah, the father of Abraham, and the father of Nachor: and they served other gods " (Josh 24:2).

When the call of God came to Abraham, it appears that was the incentive for Terah gathering the clan and heading for Canaan. The details of why Terah took Abram and Lot, with Sarai, and did not take Nahor Abram's brother, are not provided. Later, we know that Isaac's wife, Rebecca, was the daughter of Nahor (Gen 24:24), and was found in Mesopotamia (Gen 24:10). Furthermore, Rachel, who would be married to Jacob, was the daughter Laban, who was one of Nahor's sons, and Rebecca's brother (Gen 24:29; 29:29-30). She also was found in Haran (Gen 29:4).

Thus we see the providence of God at work in this whole matter, setting the stage for events that would take place years later.

GET THEE OUT

" . . . and said unto him, Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred . . ." Other versions read, "get out of your country and from your relatives ," NKJV " Depart from your country and your relatives," NASB "Leave your country and your people ," NIV "Depart from your land and from your kindred ," RSV "Go out of your land, and away from your family ," BBE " Leave your land and your family," CJB " Come out of thy country, and from thy kindred," GENEVA " Go forth from your land and (from) your kinsfolk," NAB "Leave your country, your kindred and your father's house ," NJB "Leave your native land and your relatives," NLT and "leave his native land, to say good-bye to hisrelatives ." LIVING

Here was a two-fold command. Abraham was to leave the land in which he was living, and his kindred, or relatives, as well. He was to leave the environment and its associations.

Here was a two-fold command. Abraham was to leave the land in which he was living, and his kindred, or relatives, as well. He was to leave the environment and its associations. Some have speculated as to why Abraham's relatives came with him. Why did he not leave them as he was told. First, the ones intended to be left – Nahor and his family – were left behind. Secondly, He did get out of the country, and eventually did leave all of his kindred. The fact that he did not leave them instantly does not mean he would not eventually move a way from them – which the record confirms he did.

Before men stand in criticism of Abraham, it is well to see how God viewed the situation. Later in Abraham's life, God refers to the time he left Ur of the Chaldees, or Mesopotamia. After He had reaffirmed His promise to Abram, it is written, "And He said unto him, I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees , to give thee this land to inherit it" (Gen 15:7). God, therefore, considered Abram's coming out to be His own doing, and not an act characterized by some form of disobedience. That is also how Stephen will view it, and it is comely that we do so as well.

The point of emphasis is that his kindred would not inherit the land of promise. The promise would be through Isaac and Jacob his own sons, and not his father or brothers. As a matter of fact, the Moabites and Ammonites, consistent enemies of Israel, were the descendants of the sons of Lot through his daughters (Gen 19:36-38) – and Lot was the son of Haran, Abraham's brother. Of the whole family of Terah, therefore, only Abraham was intended to inherit the promised land. That is why he had to leave them.

INTO A LAND

“ . . . and come into the land which I shall show thee.” Other versions read, “and go to the land I will show you,” NIV “and come into the land to which I will be your guide,” BBE “to start out for a country that God would direct him to,” LIVING “Go to another country. I will show you where to go,” IE “and go into whatever land I point out to you,” WEYMOUTH “and come to Whatever country I may show you,” WILLIAMS and “and come into the land (region) that I will point out to you.” AMPLIFIED

The Significance of the Land

This “land” will become an important consideration throughout the Scriptures. Names ascribed to it are as follows.

- “The land of Canaan” (Gen 11:31; 17:8; 23:2).
- “The sanctuary” (Ex 15:17)
- “The land of Israel” (1 Sam 13:19).
- “The land of the Hebrews” (Gen 40:15).
- “The land of the Jews” (Acts 10:39).
- “The land of promise” (Heb 11:9).
- “The holy land” (Zech 2:12).
- “The Lord’s land” (Hos 9:3).
- “Immanuel’s” land (Isa 8:8).
- “Beulah” (Isa 62:4).
- God referred to it as “My land” (2 Chron 7:20; Isa 14:25; Jer 2:7; 16:18; Ezek 36:5; 38:16; Joel 1:6; 3:2).
- Referring to the Lord, it is called “His land” (Deut 32:43; Job 37:13; Psa 10:16; Ezek 36:20; Joel 2:18; Zech 9:16).

This land was not merely a personal possession of Abraham. Rather, it was the place in which God would localize His works. Here is where He would culture a people to bring forth the Messiah. It is where the Messiah would be born, raised, minister, die, be raised from the dead, and from which He would ascend into heaven. It would also be a land for which His people would be accountable. They were not to pollute the land by learning the way of the heathen, lapsing into idolatry, or living in a state of moral and spiritual defilement. If they defiled the land, God said He would judge them for doing so (Lev 18:25,28; Num 35:33; Deut 21:23; 24:4; Jer 2:7; 3:9; Jer 16:18; Ezek 36:17). The heathen were to be driven out of this land (Ex 23:30,31; Num 22:6; 33:52; Deut 4:38; 9:4-5; Josh 17:12; ; 23:5). If the heathen were not driven out of the land, the Lord said they would become a source of vexation and stumbling (Num 33:55; Josh 23:13).

Abraham Had to Leave His homeland

Abraham, then, was required to leave his homeland and sever his ties with his family, yet had no idea where he was going. God simply told him “I will show thee” the land. The book of Hebrews makes a point of this: “By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went ” (Heb 11:8).

Keep in mind that Abraham had come from an idolatrous background, and had extremely limited exposure to the true God. Many years later, it appears that Nahor was still worshiping another God, as we read of “the God of Nahor,” as well as “the God of their father,” Terah (Gen 31:53). These were the words of Laban to Jacob, but Jacob did not honor such a description of God, but rather “swear by the fear of his father Isaac” (Gen 31:54), thereby rejecting Laban’s oath, which represented the natural heritage of Abraham.

Yet, with only a single word from God, and that very limited, it was sufficient to move Abraham out of his homeland and away from his family to an unseen and unknown land.

It is apparent that a person does not require an abundance of revelation to believe and trust in the Lord. An extensive understanding is not required when there has been limited revelation, and yet there is enough understanding to compel thorough submission to the word of the Lord.

Among other things, we see in this that the Kingdom of God is not driven by an academic approach to the word of the Lord. Such an approach was not possible in this case. The carnal mind would reason adequate preparation could not be made if Abraham did not know where he was going, or how long it would take to get there. The flesh would respond that this was an unreasonable request, and that more needed to be understood concerning the whole matter. The carnal mind, however, is enmity against God, and is always wrong. Even during the spiritually primitive times of Abraham, he knew enough to subordinate any doubts that may have come to his mind. What possible excuse can be offered for men hesitating to obey the Lord during this time when the Sun of righteousness has risen, and we are standing in the greater glory of the New Covenant?

The Principle of Divine Guidance

The words “I will show thee” indicate the manner in which Divine guidance is realized. God did not provide Abraham with a map and a precisely designated place on the map. That is not the manner in which the Lord directs the steps of a man – by giving all of the answers up front, so to speak. To be sure, the Lord does direct His people. It is written, “He shall direct thy paths” (Psa 3:6). Again it is written, “the Lord directeth his steps” (Prov 16:9). And again, “as for the upright, He directeth his way” (Prov 21:29). The prophets also spoke of this direction: “I will direct all of his ways” (Isa 45:13), “I will direct their work in truth” (Isa 61:8), and “it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps” (Jer 10:23). The Lord is said to “lead” people (Isa 48:17), and to “order” their steps (Psa 37:23). But how does the Lord direct or lead the individual? What is the manner of that leading?

It was in the process of Abraham’s journey that he was directed. When he left his homeland, the direction began. It is after we trust in the Lord and lean not to our own understanding that he directs our paths (Prov 3:5-6). It is the “upright” that are directed by God (Prov 21:29), and the “steps of a good man” that are “ordered” by Him (Psa 37:23). It is within the context of “righteousness” that heavenly guidance is realized (Isa 45:13). Those whose lives are directed in truth are those who are not displeasing Him in their conduct or manners (Isa 61:8).

It is necessary that the appointed journey be commenced before the direction will be given. Those who refuse to walk in the ways of the Lord forfeit the privilege of being directed by God. Oh, men may philosophize about this matter, and say that God in love has a plan for every life, and earnestly wants to lead them into it. But the truth of the matter is that all people, like Abraham, must cut loose from the domain in which they cannot remain! If God is going to direct a person’s path to heaven, it is imperative that they be on their way there – obviously disconnected from a world that is perishing.

Those who attempt to cling to their old ways, yet thinking they are on the way to the promised land, are only deceived. That would be like Abraham staying with his brother Nahor, who chose to live in Mesopotamia, all the while thinking God was going to give him an inheritance there. Today, people who glibly preach a health and wealth gospel are asking people to stay in Mesopotamia, promising that God is going to give them the inheritance there. There is no possible way to overstate the seriousness of such a perverted gospel. It causes people to never start out on the journey, entering the strait gate, and choosing the narrow way. That very circumstance means that Divine direction is shut off, for such leading only occurs when men have left the world and are walking on the “highway” that has been raised up for sojourners (Isa 35:8).

If Abraham, so far removed from the day of salvation, saw the necessity of moving toward the promised land instead of settling down in the present land, what possible justification can there be for neglecting to see that truth today? More light demands a greater and more extensive response!

ABRAHAM CAME OUT

“ 4a Then came he out of the land of the Chaldaeans, and dwelt in Charran . . . ” Other versions read, “Then he came out of the land of the Chaldeans and dwelt in Haran.” NKJV “Then he departed from the land of the Chaldeans, and settled in Haran,” NASB “ So he left the land of the Chaldeans and settled in Haran,” NIV “So he left the land of the Chaldeans and lived in Haran, in Syria ,” LIVING “ Thereupon he left Chaldaeia and settled in Haran,” WEYMOUTH “So he left the country of the Chaldeans and for a time made his home in Haran ,” WILLIAMS and “ That was how he came to leave the land of the Chaldeans and settle in Haran.” PHILLIPS

Here Stephen is given some additional insight concerning the exodus of Abraham from Mesopotamia. The Genesis record states that “Terah took Abram his son, and Lot the son of Haran his son's son, and Sarai his daughter in law, his son Abram's wife; and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan; and they came unto Haran, and dwelt there” (Gen 11:31). For whatever reason Terah may have appeared to make this move, Stephen says it was really Abraham who “came out.” It is possible that Terah had some other motive. However, the promise was given to Abraham, not to Terah, and thus the whole matter is credited to him. If Terah did have some other motive, Abraham would have seen it as an open door to do what God had required of him.

We know that the move described in Genesis 11:31 is the one to which Stephen refers, for both records say the move resulted in the pilgrims settling down in Haran.

Some have the audacity to say that Abraham was disobedient at this point – that God had not told him to settle in Haran, but to go to the land to which God would direct him. In such a statement they betray their own carnality. They imagine that God had directed Abraham to move forward, but instead he settled down. As the text progresses, we will find how false such a view is, and how it reproaches both God and Abraham.

AN INTERESTING POINT

In leaving Ur of the Chaldees, Abraham was leaving the land in which Nebuchadnezzar would be raised up to chasten his own disobedient offspring. The twenty-fifth chapter of Second Kings records the plundering of Judah and the city of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, referring to “the Chaldees” seven times (2 Kgs 25:4,5,10, 13,24,25,26). Isaiah refers to the city of Babylon as the “beauty of the Chaldees” (Isa 13:19). He also states the land of the Chaldees was “founded” by an Assyrian (Isa 23:13). Long before that history, Abraham dwelt in that land.

WHEN HIS FATHER DIED, HE CAME INTO THIS LAND

“ 4a . . . and from thence, when his father was dead, He removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.”

Stephen is tracing the working of the Lord through Abraham, confirming that he is an Israelite indeed, and is not seeking to disrupt the people. He has stated that Abraham has left Ur of the Chaldees as commanded, and is now residing in Haran. Terah, his father, is with him and Sarai, as well as Lot, his nephew.

WHEN HIS FATHER WAS DEAD

“ . . . and from thence, when his father was dead . . . ” Other versions read, “and from there, when his father was dead ,” NKJV “and from there, after his father died,” NASB “and from thence, after the death of his father ,” YLT “until his father died,” LIVING and “After Abraham's father died.” IE

The record in Genesis reads, “And the days of Terah were two hundred and five years: and Terah died in Haran” (Gen 11:32). We do not know how old Terah was when the clan left Ur. We do know that his three sons, Abram, Nahor, and Haran were born after he was seventy years old. We also know that Abram was seventy-five years old when he left Haran. That means that 135 years passed between the birth of Terah’s three sons and the departure of Abraham from Haran. Although the details are not specified, this should confirm that we are speaking of a significant period of time the clan spent in Haran. According to Divine purpose, they were awaiting the death of Terah, who himself had no part in the promise. The rest of the verse will confirm that this was all by God’s intent.

HE REMOVED HIM INTO THIS LAND

“ . . . He removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell.” Other versions read, “ He moved him to this land in which you now dwell,” NKJV “ God removed him into this country in which you are now living,” NASB “ God sent him to this land where you are now living,” NIV “ God had him move from there to this country in which you are now living,” NRSV “he was guided by God into this land, where you are living now,” BBE “ God made him move to this land where you are living now,” CJB “ God removed him into this land, wherein ye now dwell,” ERV “God brought him from thence into this land, wherein ye now dwell,” GENEVA “ He made him migrate to this land where you now dwell,” NAB “Then God brought him here to the land where you now live ,” NLT “Then God brought him here to the land of Israel ,” LIVING “ God caused him to remove into this country where you now live,” WEYMOUTH “[God] transferred him to this country in which you are now dwelling.” AMPLIFIED and “God moved him into this very land where you are living today.” PHILLIPS

God promised He would show Abram the land, directing him to it, and that is precisely what He is doing. In all of this, there is also the matter of timeliness, for all of this must allow for God’s predetermined timetable. Coming into the land of Canaan must be synchronized with the following events that will take place by Divine appointment.

It is apparent that a person does not require an abundance of revelation to believe and trust in the Lord. An extensive understanding is not required when there has been limited revelation, and yet there is enough understanding to compel thorough submission to the word of the Lord.

- The selling of Joseph as a slave, which would bring him into Egypt at the proper time.
- Joseph arriving in Egypt at the time of Potiphar who would make him the head of his house.
- Joseph must be in Potiphar’s house while his wife was there, who would be the occasion of him going into prison, from which he would be exalted.
- Joseph had to be in prison at the same time as Pharaoh’s butler and baker, who would inform Pharaoh of Joseph’s ability to interpret dreams.
- The coming of seven years of plenty, and seven years of famine, that would pave the way for Joseph’s exaltation.

- Consideration must be given to the time Israel would be oppressed by the Egyptians, after a Pharaoh arose who had no regard for Joseph.

- There was also the deliverance of Israel from Egypt that would take place on the fourteenth day of the month of Abib, around B.C. 1500.

It is apparent that a person does not require an abundance of revelation to believe and trust in the Lord. An extensive understanding is not required when there has been limited revelation, and yet there is enough understanding to compel thorough submission to the word of the Lord.

ABRAHAM CAME INTO THE LAND

Stephen affirms that God moved Abraham “into the land,” thus confirming that he finally arrived there. The exact distance to the land is not known, nor whether the route was straight there. Judging from the map, it was several hundred miles – probably a minimum of three hundred. Genesis 12:5 gives the account of their arrival: “And Abram took Sarai his wife, and Lot his brother's son, and all their substance that they had gathered, and the souls that they had gotten in Haran ; and they went forth to go into the land of Canaan; and into the land of Canaan they came” (Gen 12:5).

At that time, Abraham passed through the land, as though surveying it. We are told that “the Canaanite was in the land” (Gen 12:6). We are also told “there was a famine in the land” at that time (Ex 12:10). Years later, when Isaac was in the land, there was also a famine there (Gen 26:1). Years after that, when Jacob was in the land, there was yet another famine (Gen 42:1-5). For a long time, the land did not seem to be a good place to live.

GOD DID NOT GIVE ABRAHAM ANY INHERITANCE IN THE LAND

“ 5a And He gave him none inheritance in it, no, not so much as to set his foot on . . . ”

Here again we are exposed to the ways of the Lord. They are not like the ways of men, and do not at all conform to human standards. Those who view the Scriptures with a carnal mind will be in a constant state of confusion.

Here again we are exposed to the ways of the Lord. They are not like the ways of men, and do not at all conform to human standards. Those who view the Scriptures with a carnal mind will be in a constant state of confusion.

In the original promise given to Abram, there was no mention of God giving Abram the land to which he was journeying. At that time, the Lord promised, “And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee, and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed” (Gen 12:2-3). At that time, the Lord promised Abram the following.

- God would make a great nation of Abram.
- He would make his name great.
- Abram would be a blessing.
- Those who blessed Abram would be blessed, and those who cursed him would be cursed.
- In him, all nations of the earth would be blessed.

However, there was no promise at that time of inheriting the land, or of it becoming his own.

After arriving in the land, the Lord appeared unto Abram again and said, “And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land ” (Gen 12:7). Shortly after that, Abram and Lot separated, with Lot choosing the area near Sodom, and Abram choosing to dwell “in the land of Canaan” (Gen 13:12). At that time, the Lord again spoke to Abram, “after that Lot was separated from him” (Gen 13:14a). “Lift up now thine eyes, and look from the place where thou art northward, and southward, and eastward, and westward: For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it , and to thy seed for ever. And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth: so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it; for I will give it unto thee ” (Gen 14b:15-17)

Some years later, “the word of the Lord came to Abram in a vision.” In that word God said, “I am the LORD that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it ” (Gen 15:7). It was at this time that God revealed several things to Abraham.

- His seed would “be a stranger in a land that is not theirs” (Gen 15:13a).
- That nation would afflict them for four hundred years (Gen 15:13b).
- God would judge the nation that afflicted them (Gen 15:14a).
- Abram’s seed would come out of the nation that afflicted them “with great substance” (Gen 15:14b).
- Abram would die in peace, and be buried in a “good old age” (Gen 15:15).
- In the fourth generation, Abram’s seed would enter the promised land again, ‘for the iniquity of the Amorities’ was “not yet full” (Gen 15:16).
- That same day, the Lord made a covenant with Abram, saying, “In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land , from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates: the Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites” (Gen 15:18-21). As you can see, the land would be occupied by ten different nations, seven of which were greater and mightier than Israel (Deut 7:1).
- Still without any offspring from Sarah, who remained barren, Abram, following the advice of Sarah, had a son through Hagar, Sarai’s handmaid. That son, Ishmael, was born when Abraham was eighty-six years old (Gen 16:16).
- When Abraham was ninety-nine years old, God again appeared to him and said, “I will establish My covenant between Me and thee and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee, and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan , for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God” (Gen 17:7-8).

NONE INHERITANCE

“And He gave him none inheritance in it, no . . .” Other versions read, “gave him no inheritance here,” NIV “did not give him any of it as a heritage,” NRSV “God didn't give Abraham anything in this land to call his own,” GWN “God did not give him any property in this land,” NJB “God did not give Abraham any of this land,” IE “He gave him no inheritable property in it,” AMPLIFIED and “God gave him no part of it as an inheritance.” PHILLIPS

Even though God gave Abram promise after promise that this land would be given to him, while he was in the world, Abraham did not receive any portion of it. Here again, we are being introduced to a Divine manner that is reflected in the salvation that is in Christ Jesus.

NOT SO MUCH AS TO SET HIS FOOT ON

“ . . . not so much as to set his foot on . . . ” Other versions read, “not even enough to set his foot one,” NKJV “not even a foot of ground ,” NASB “not even a foot’s length ,” NRSV “not even enough to put his foot on ,” BBE “not even space for one foot ,” CSV “not even what his foot could stand on ,” DARBY “not the breadth of a foot ,” GENEVA “not even a place to rest his feet ,” GWN “or even a foothold ,” NJB “not even one square foot of land ,” NLT “not even a footstep,” YLT “not one little tract of land ,” LIVING “not a single square yard of ground,” WEYMOUTH and “not a foot that he could call his own .” PHILLIPS

The land given to Abraham was extensive. That is why this verse is of such importance. The extent and borders of the land are specified several times.

The extent and boundaries of Canaan are given with tolerable exactness in the Bible. On the west the sea was its border from Sidon to Gaza (Genesis 10:19). On the south it was bounded by a line running from Gaza to the southern end of the Dead Sea, including the Judaeen hills, but excluding the country of the Amalekites (Genesis 10:19; Numbers 13:29). The Jordan was the eastern boundary; no part of Canaan lay beyond that river (Numbers 33:51; Exodus 16:35, with Reland, Palest. p. 3 sq.). On the north, Canaan extended as far as Hamath, which was also the utmost boundary of the “land of promise” (Genesis 17:8; Numbers 34:8). The coast from Sidon northward to Arvad, and’ the ridge of Lebanon, were inhabited by Canaanites, though they do not appear to have been included in Canaan proper (Genesis 10:15-19). McCLINTOK STRONG

- Genesis 15:18-21: “In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land, from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates : the Kenites, and the Kenizzites, and the Kadmonites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephaims, And the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Girgashites, and the Jebusites.”

- Exodus 23:31: “And I will set thy bounds from the Red sea even unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the desert unto the river : for I will deliver the inhabitants of the land into your hand; and thou shalt drive them out before thee.”

- Deuteronomy 11:24: “Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea shall your coast be.”

- Joshua 1:2-4: “Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel. Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses. From the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast .”

When Israel entered the land, this territory was divided by Lot to them by their tribes. The allotment is specified in the fifteenth through seventeenth chapters of Joshua.

The Scriptures make a point of the fact that Abraham, together with Isaac and Jacob, were actually strangers in the land that was promised to them. “By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country , dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise” (Heb 11:9).

When Abraham arrived in the land, God told him he was a “stranger” in it, yet would it would be given to him as an “everlasting possession” : “And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger , all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God” (Gen 17:8).

When Sarah died at 127 years of age in Hebron, which was in the land of Canaan (Gen 23:2), Abraham stood up “from before the dead” and confessed, “ I am a stranger and a sojourner with you:

give me a possession of a burying place with you, that I may bury my dead out of my sight” (Gen 23:4). He did not even own a plot of land large enough to bury his wife. It was at that time that he refused to take the land for nothing, but insisted before Ephron the Hittite, “I will give thee money for the field” (Gen 23:13). He then gave the amount of money the land was worth – “four hundred shekels of silver, current money with the merchant” (Gen 23:16). In so doing, he confessed he was a “stranger and pilgrim in the earth” (Heb 11:13), and even in the land that was promised to Him by the Creator. Scripture goes on to say that Abraham was actually looking “for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God” (Heb 11:10).

Thus, even though he did not receive any land, not even a square foot, so to speak, he sojourned in it “by faith,” seeking the fulfillment of the promise, which he sensed, involved much more than the real estate in which was walking.

It was Abraham’s exposure to God, even though that exposure was limited, that compelled him to live in such a manner. He did not seek more of this world, because He had been with the Lord who had made the world. I conclude, therefore, that those who attach the New Covenant to health and wealth have not actually seen the Lord or had extensive dealings with him. I know this is the case, because Abraham is “the father of all them that believe” (Rom 4:11). It is not possible that any of his true progeny possesses a faith that is opposed to his own.

THE PARALLEL WITH BELIEVERS

Because Abraham is “the father of us all” (Rom 4:16), there is a parallel between his experience and our own. Jesus said of those who partook of His own nature – the meek – “Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth ” (Matt 5:5). The Psalmist also prophesied, “But the meek shall inherit the earth ; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace” (Psa 37:11). He also said of the seed of the man who is taught by God, “his seed shall inherit the earth ” (Psa 25:12). Again, he said of those who wait upon the Lord, “they shall inherit the earth ” (Psa 37:9). And again he said, “For such as be blessed of Him shall inherit the earth ” (Psa 37:22). Isaiah prophesied, “Thy people also shall be all righteous: they shall inherit the land for ever , the branch of my planting, the work of My hands, that I may be glorified” (Isa 60:21). When speaking of the promise made to Abraham, Paul said, “For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world , was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith” (Rom 4:13).

We also know that “the world to come,” involving “a new heavens and a new earth” (2 Pet 3:13), will be put into the charge of redeemed men. In some extensive reasoning about this matter, the Spirit establishes that the co-regents of the world to come will not be angels, but men. “For it was not to angels that God subjected the habitable world of the future, of which we are speaking. It has been solemnly and earnestly said in a certain place, What is man that You are mindful of him, or the son of man that You graciously and helpfully care for and visit and look after him? For some little time You have ranked him lower than and inferior to the angels; You have crowned him with glory and honor and set him over the works of Your hands, For You have put everything in subjection under his feet. Now in putting everything in subjection to man, He left nothing outside [of man’s] control. But at present we do not yet see all things subjected to him [man]. But we are able to see Jesus, Who was ranked lower than the angels for a little while, crowned with glory and honor because of His having suffered death, in order that by the grace (unmerited favor) of God [to us sinners] He might experience death for every individual person. For it was an act worthy [of God] and fitting [to the Divine nature] that He, for Whose sake and by Whom all things have their existence, in bringing many sons into glory, should make the Pioneer of their salvation perfect [should bring to maturity the human experience necessary to be perfectly equipped for His office as High Priest] through suffering” AMPLIFIED (Heb 2:5-10).

In this text, several considerations are articulated.

- The angels will not be in charge of the world to come – the “new earth .”
- The subject of apostolic proclamation, from this point of view, was the world that is coming, not the world that now is.
- It is man that was created to have the dominion of “the world to come.”
- For a while, redeemed humanity remains in a state that is “a little lower than the angels” – a state in which, rather than ruling, they require continual care and sustenance.
- It has been determined that everything will be in redeemed man’s control.
- In this world, however, that control is not yet being realized. That is why it is not yet seen.

Those who preach that the inheritance of the saints of God has to do with worldly possessions and status are not only in error, they are at a fundamental variance with the Scriptures in general, and the salvation of God in particular. It is not possible for them to be more wrong.

- There is, however, a key Man, who also, for a time, was made a little lower than the angels. Unlike the rest of humanity, who were made a little lower because of sin, He was made a little lower for the suffering of death – a death that was in the behalf of the appointed joint-heirs.

- As the Representative of redeemed humanity, everything is presently under the control of the Man Christ Jesus. This is a confirmation that the world to come will also be in the control of the heirs of the promise.

An inheritance, as used in this reasoning, is something that will be kept, and will never be forfeited. Thus God promised Abraham, “For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever ” (Gen 13:15). Therefore, while he was increasing in age and decreasing in the span of life, Abraham knew the inheritance could not be worldly real estate. He knew that the inheritance would only be realized after he died, and not before.

It is the same with us, who are his children. God does not give Abraham’s children a different kind of faith and a different kind of inheritance than He promised him. We know this is the case, for it is written, “And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise ” (Gal 3:29).

THIS EXPOSES A MODERN ERROR

Those who preach that the inheritance of the saints of God has to do with worldly possessions and status are not only in error, they are at a fundamental variance with the Scriptures in general, and the salvation of God in particular. It is not possible for them to be more wrong. When they set before us their resources and possessions, they must at the same time confess they will have to give them up. They cannot be transported to the other side of death. In fact, such possessions cannot even exist in the presence of the Lord, from before whose face “the earth and the heaven fled away; and there was found no place for them” (Rev 20:11).

What these lying prophets have actually acknowledged is that they are driven by lust – the lust that will pass away with its object. As it is written, “And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever” (1 John 2:17). It simply is not possible to integrate worldly possessions and health with “for ever.” These men – false prophets – are drawing people into their lucrative empires with covetousness, just as the Scriptures affirm. Like it or not, the word of God says they are appointed to damnation. “But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not” (2 Pet 2:3).

There is no room for the slightest bit of tolerance of an emphasis of life in this present evil world. The justified ones live in prospect of the coming world, in which all things will be made new. Like Abraham, they are looking for something that will survive the fiery conclusion of this world, and everything that is in it.

YET HE PROMISED THE LAND TO ABRAHAM AND HIS SEED, WHEN HE HAD NO CHILD

“ 5b . . . yet He promised that He would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him, when as yet he had no child.”

The Holy Spirit makes a point of the fact that the promise was given to Abraham before he had any offspring. Scripture confirms that at that time Abram’s wife, Sarai, through whom the offspring would come, was barren. “But Sarai was barren; she had no child”

Stephen now accents the time in which the promise was made, accenting that Abraham’s seed, or offspring, would also inherit the land. Again, the promise was that God would give the land to Abraham and his offspring “for a possession” – a land that he would occupy as its owner.

YET HE PROMISED

“ . . . yet he promised that He would give it to him for a possession, and to his seed after him . . .” Other versions read, “and to his descendants after him,” NKJV “and to his offspring after him,” NASB “ he and his descendants after him would possess the land,” NIV “and to his posterity after him,” RSV “ but He gave him an undertaking that he would give it to him and to his children after him,” BBE “He promised that He would give it him, as an inheritance to him and to his seed ,” MRD “God did promise, however, that eventually the whole land would belong to Abraham and his descendants,” NLT “God promised that eventually the whole country would belong to him and his descendants,” LIVING “He promised to bestow the land as a permanent possession on him and his posterity after him,” WEYMOUTH and “promised that it should eventually belong to him and his descendants.” PHILLIPS

The promise to which Stephen refers was stated several times.

- WHEN NAMED ABRAM – “And the LORD appeared unto Abram, and said, Unto thy seed will I give this land. . .” (Gen 12:7).
- WHEN NAMED ABRAM – “For all the land which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed for ever” (Gen 13:15).
- WHEN NAMED ABRAM – “In the same day the LORD made a covenant with Abram, saying, Unto thy seed have I given this land . . .” (Gen 15:18).
- AFTER NAMED ABRAHAM – “And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God” (Gen 17:8).

• TO ISAAC – “Sojourn in this land, and I will be with thee, and will bless thee; for unto thee, and unto thy seed, I will give all these countries , and I will perform the oath which I swore unto Abraham thy father” (Gen 26:3).

• TO JACOB – “And, behold, the LORD stood above it, and said, I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac: the land whereon thou liest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed ” (Gen 28:13).

Notice that the promise was that the land would be given to Abraham AND his seed, or offspring. The promise was renewed to the other part of this sanctified trio: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. This is why God is frequently referred to as “the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Ex. 3:6,15,16; 4:5; Matt 22:32; Mk 12:26; Lk 20:37; Acts 3:13; 7:32). It was with them that this covenant was made. Israel was, therefore, blessed because of their association with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. It was God’s covenant with them, and their faith in Him that often proved to be the cause for Israel being blessed (Gen 26:5; Lev 26:42; 2 Kgs 13:23; Mic 7:20; Lk 1:54-55,72-73).

WHEN AS YET HE HAD NO CHILD

“ . . . when as yet he had no child.” Other versions read, “when Abraham had no child,” NKJV “though at the time Abraham had no child,” NIV “even though he was childless,” CSB “when as yet he had no son,” MRD “ childless though he was,” NJB “even though he had no children yet,” NLT “This was before Abraham had any children,” IE and “even though at the time he had no descendant at all.” PHILLIPS

The Holy Spirit makes a point of the fact that the promise was given to Abraham before he had any offspring. Scripture confirms that at that time Abram’s wife, Sarai, through whom the offspring would come, was barren. “But Sarai was barren; she had no child” (Gen 11:30). At the time of the original promise, Abraham was seventy-five years old, and Sarah was sixty-six. Twenty-four years later, God appeared to Abram when he was ninety-nine years old (Gen 17:1). It was at that time that he changed Abram’s name to Abraham, and Sarai’s name to Sarah (Gen 17:5,15-16). At that time, not only was Sarah still barren, but Abraham was past the age of getting children. He therefore, “said in his heart, Shall a child be born unto him that is an hundred years old? and shall Sarah, that is ninety years old, bear?” (Gen 17:17). He then asked the Lord for Ishmael to qualify to be the promised seed (Gen 17:18). At that time, the Lord confirmed, “ Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son indeed ; and thou shalt call his name Isaac: and I will establish My covenant with him for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him” (Gen 17:19).

Reasoning on the birth of Isaac, the book of Hebrews says, “Through faith also Sara herself received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child when she was past age , because she judged him faithful who had promised. Therefore sprang there even of one, and him as good as dead , so many as the stars of the sky in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea shore innumerable” (Heb 11:11-12). Also, commenting on the occasion when God announced the “seed” would come through Sarah, Paul writes, “And being not weak in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb : he staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God ” (Rom 4:20).

Thus the triumph of faith is demonstrated in both Abraham and Sarah. We conclude, therefore, that the promises of God are to be believed, even when they contradict the full scope of human knowledge.

HIS SEED WOULD SOJOURN IN A STRANGE LAND

“ 6 And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years.”

God divulged to Abraham that the possession of the promised land would be preceded by a period of sorrow and hardship. In Christ we are enabled to see with even greater clarity that suffering precedes the fulfillment of the promise, and that obtaining the inheritance follows the testing of one's faith. While the fulness of this circumstance was not revealed to Abraham, the kernel of it was given to him, and was substantiated by his own experience.

GOD SPAKE ON THIS WISE

“And God spake on this wise . . .” Other versions read, “God spoke in this way,” NKJV “God spoke to this effect,” NASB “God spoke in these terms ,” NRSV “God spoke thus ,” DARBY “ God conversed with Him,” MRD “God spoke as follows ,” NET “The actual words God used when He spoke to him,” NJB “God also told him ,” NLT “God verily spake on this wise,” TNT “This is what God said to him,” IE “God declared ,” WEYMOUTH “This is what God promised ,” WILLIAMS “ this is [in effect] what God told him,” AMPLIFIED and “this is the way in which God spoke to him .” PHILLIPS

Those who choose to make their personal lives the center of their existence must pay close heed to this text. The Lord speaks to Abraham about something that does not concern him personally – at least, not as an occupant of this world. Rather than divulging what was going to happen to Abraham, God reveals what will happen to His progeny. He even speaks of something that will take place several generations in the future. That is the way, or manner, in which He communicated with the patriarch.

An Application

Fellowship with the Father does not focus on the human designs and objectives, but on Divine objectives. While this may appear something very obvious, men have a great deal of difficulty accepting it. Sin has made men self-centered, for sin is always about self. Temptation has to do with self. Unlawful lusts center in the one possessing them. However, if a person desires companionship with God, it must be recognized that the person will not be the focus of the fellowship. If this is too difficult to bear, there simply will be no fellowship, for God does not conduct business with men upon the basis of their agenda. He rather moves and speaks to bring men into involvement in what He is doing. This is seen in Abraham, through whom an intentional example is being set before us.

HIS SEED SHOULD SOJOURN IN A STRANGE LAND

“ . . . That his seed should sojourn in a strange land . . .” Other versions read, “that his descendants would dwell in a foreign land,” NKJV “his offspring would be aliens in a foreign land,” NASB “his descendants would be strangers in a country no their own ,” NIV “residents aliens in a country belonging to others ,” NRSV “his seed would be living in a strange land ,” BBE “his descendants would be foreigners living in another country ,” GWN “his descendants would be exiles in a land not their own ,” NJB “descendants of his would leave the land and live in a foreign country .” LIVING and “his descendants would be aliens (strangers) in a land belonging to other people .” AMPLIFIED

To the carnal mind, this makes no sense. First, God promises Abraham he and his offspring would inherit a land. Then He tells them his offspring would leave the land of promise, and dwell in a foreign land that belonged to others, and not to themselves. However, we are witnessing the ways of the Lord here, and we do well to exercise ourselves to discern what He is doing.

To the carnal mind, this makes no sense. First, God promises Abraham he and his offspring would inherit a land. Then He tells them his offspring would leave the land of promise, and dwell in a foreign land that belonged to others, and not to themselves.

First, God is stripping away anything and everything that would suggest this was going to be a human achievement. We know from later revelations that it is God's nature to "destroy the wisdom of the wise, and [He] will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent" (1 Cor 1:19). By Divine intent, He has "made foolish the wisdom of this world" (1 Cor 1:20). He chooses rather to use "the foolish things to confound the wise," and "the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised," and "things which are not, to bring to nought things that are" (1 Cor 1:27-28). He does this so that "no flesh should glory in His presence" (1 Cor 1:29).

God begins to build this race, through whom the Deliverer will come – the race that will give us the Scriptures, and all of the prophets, and all of the apostles – with a man that is incapable of begetting a child, and a woman who is old and barren. He then gives a land to this man and his offspring that is occupied by other inhabitants who are greater in number and power than the people whom God has chosen to drive them out. As if that was not enough, He leads Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob to sojourn in the land He has given them, and do so as strangers and pilgrims. Then he takes the chosen race, and causes them, through a famine, to go into a foreign land that belongs to others, and will never belong to them. It is in that land that God will prepare the people to inhabit the land He has promised them.

Now, that is the manner in which God works! He does not take those who are apparently significant and unusually gifted, and employ them for His purposes. Rather, he takes those who are old, barren, few, and without a land of their own, and with them cultures a people for Himself.

The land in which Abraham's offspring would sojourn is Egypt. When they went into the land their entire nation was only seventy in number. Sixty-six came with Jacob into the land, and three (Joseph and his two sons) were already there. That made seventy altogether (Gen 46:26-27).

THEY SHOULD BRING THEM INTO BONDAGE

" . . . and that they should bring them into bondage . . ." Other versions read, "they would be enslaved ," NASB "they will be enslaved ," NIV "who would enslave them," NRSV "they would make them servants ," BBE "they will be in slavery ," CJB "the people there would make them slaves," GWN "they will reduce them to servitude ," MRD and "they would be oppressed as slaves ." NLT

When the small company first went into Egypt, they did so because there was a famine in the land. Joseph had been placed in charge of the land, and therefore the Israelites were treated kindly. They were given their own section of the land – Goshen – and they fared well. This proved to be "the best of the land." Pharaoh even told Joseph "if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle" (Gen 47:1-6). They certainly got off to a good start. However, it did not stay that way.

Eventually, Moses records, "there arose a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph" (Ex 1:8). The outcome of it all was that Israel entered into a period of oppression and bondage. During the time that followed harsh taskmasters were set over them, "to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses" (Ex 1:11).

AND ENTREAT THEM EVIL

" . . . and entreat them evil four hundred years." Other versions read, "oppress ," NKJV "mistreated ," NASB "ill-treat them," RSV "be cruel to them," BBE "oppressed," CJB "afflict them," ESV "do it evil ," YLT and "do evil things to them." IE

The accent of the oppression is on the state of the Israelites when they came out of Egypt. From the very first, they were not liked by the Egyptians because they were shepherds (Gen 46:32; 47:3), and “every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians” (Gen46:34). However, as time progressed they were afflicted more and more, with their lives “being made bitter with hard bondage” (Ex 1:14). The circumstance was so grievous that the children of Israel “cried, and their cry came up unto God by reason of the bondage” (Ex 2:23).

God told Abraham his seed would be afflicted for “four hundred years” in this strange land (Gen 15:13). Moses says they sojourned in the land for “four hundred and thirty years” (Ex 12:40-41). Paul says that the time from the covenant made with Abraham to the giving of the Law was “four hundred and thirty years” (Gal 3:17). Some have struggled with this seeming disparity, but there is no need to do so.

First, they were afflicted for four hundred years – but they were not afflicted for all of the time they were in the land. The four hundred and thirty years are calculated from the time the covenant was made with Abraham, as Paul affirms in Galatians 3:17. Exodus also cites this number, stating that the “sojourning of the children of Israel” was “four hundred and thirty years.” The point being made there is that from the promise to the Jews becoming a people and headed for the promised land, was four hundred and thirty years. The “four hundred years” are from the perspective of their suffering. The “four hundred and thirty years” are from the perspective of the promise.

During their stay in Egypt they were never truly received. As time progressed, things got worse and worse, until they could bear it no longer. In all of this they were being weaned, as it were, from Egypt. Their souls were being cultured to long for the land that had been promised to Abraham four centuries before. Such are the ways of the Lord, to make the foreign land intolerable in order that the home land be appreciated. As is apparent, the Lord is still doing this. Through life’s experiences. He is teaching us this world is not our home. It is to us what the wilderness was to Israel. We are, in fact, sojourners.

GOD WOULD JUDGE THEIR OPPRESSORS

“ 7 And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge, said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place.”

Four centuries of suffering, with the least being at the beginning, and the worst being at the conclusion! Someone from the twentieth century might have concluded God had “forgotten to be gracious” (Psa 77:9). It certainly appeared that way. Imagine people coming to America like Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, living all their lives here without possessing any part of it, yet claiming it had been given to them and their offspring by God. Then their offspring spend 400 years in another country as abject slaves. Would it not appear as though they were mistaken about being led to the land? How could such a people claim that God was their God.

Now that religious charlatans have become popular (2007), it is being preached through the media that prosperity is a sign of being the real people of God. It is, they say, the evidence of the blessing. What shall we say of our text, where the real people of God are being oppressed for four hundred years, with no apparent intervention by God. Their oppressors dominate them, and make lives miserable for them. Further, there is no particular sin registered against them, unless it be that during the latter time, when they were ignorant of the fact that God was going to deliver them through Moses (Acts 7:25).

Behind the scenes, the oppression of His people had been duly noted by the Lord, and He will not let Egypt continue their oppressiveness. They will pay the penalty for the maltreatment of the offspring of Abraham.

A genuine fellowship with the Lord involves Him divulging what He was going to do, thereby establishing that He is a God who cannot lie, and is thoroughly capable of fulfilling His promises to the most exacting degree. No one can stop Him from doing this.

THIS NATION I WILL JUDGE

“And the nation to whom they shall be in bondage will I judge . . .” Other versions read, “I Myself will judge,” NASB “I will punish,” NIV “I will bring judgment on,” NAB and “I will pass sentence on.” WILLIAMS

God revealed Himself to Moses, declaring some of His attributes. One of them is that He will “by no means clear the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children, and upon the children’s children, unto the third and fourth generation” (Ex 34:7). Thus God told Abraham He was going to judge Egypt for what they would do after Abraham himself had died in a good old age.

The judgment took place as a prelude to the deliverance of Israel, and when they crossed the Red Sea to commence their journey to the promised land. Not only did God judge the Egyptians themselves, but he executed judgment “against all the gods of Egypt” (Ex 12:12). Those false gods were unable to protect the Egyptians as the Lord judged them with ten grievous plagues.

- Their water was turned to blood (Ex 7:14-25).
- Frogs filled the land (Ex 8:1-15).
- The dust was turned into lice that plagued all the land (Ex 8:16-19).
- Flies filled the land (Ex 8:20-22).
- A grievous plague came on all of their cattle (Ex 9:1-7).
- The people were stricken with festering and spreading boils (Ex 9:8-12).
- A plague of hail came, pounding down all of their crops (Ex 9:18-34).
- A horde of locusts invaded the land, consuming every bit of vegetation that had not been destroyed by the hail (Ex 10:1-20).
- Gross darkness fell upon the land, being so thick that it could be “felt” (Ex 10:21-23).
- The first born every house, including both man and beast, were stricken dead (Ex 11:4-7; 12:29-30).
- Pharaoh and his armies were uttering destroyed, being drowned in the Red Sea (Ex 15:4).

Suffice it to say, “It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God” (Heb 10:31).

THEY SHALL COME FORTH AND SERVE ME

“ . . . said God: and after that shall they come forth, and serve me in this place .” Other versions read, “worship Me in this place,” NIV “worship Me in this land,” MRD “do me service in this place,” YLT and “worship Me on this very spot .” WILLIAMS

God revealed to Abraham that his offspring would come out of Egypt – but they would do so to serve Him , not merely to get away from their oppressors. When God revealed Himself to Moses at the burning bush, telling him he was being called to deliver Israel, this is what He told him. “When thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain” (Ex 3:12).

God told Moses he was to appear before Pharaoh, giving him this message: “Thus saith the LORD, Israel is My son, even My firstborn: And I say unto thee, Let My son go, that he may serve Me : and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will slay thy son, even thy firstborn” (Ex 4:23). When Moses prepared to turn the water into blood, God told him to say: “The LORD God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, saying, Let my people go, that they may serve Me in the wilderness” (Ex 7:16). Six more times, Moses told Pharaoh God said to let His people go, “that they may serve Me” (Ex 8:1,20; 9:1,13; 10:3,7). When the hour of deliverance arrived, “He called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Rise up, and get you forth from among my people, both ye and the children of Israel; and go, serve the LORD , as ye have said” (Ex 12:31).

Thus Israel was released from serving the Egyptians in order that they might serve the Lord. That was the reason for their deliverance. That was the reason for God choosing them – “to be a peculiar people unto Himself , above all the nations that are upon the earth” (Deut 14:2). Once again, it is made clear that the Lord is not working to simply make human conditions more pleasant.

These insights were delivered to Abraham in order to fuel his faith, and cause his hope to flourish. It also served the purpose of confirming to later generations that God is faithful to His word, and cannot lie.

A genuine fellowship with the Lord involves Him divulging what He was going to do, thereby establishing that He is a God who cannot lie, and is thoroughly capable of fulfilling His promises to the most exacting degree. No one can stop Him from doing this.

HE GAVE ABRAHAM THE COVENANT OF CIRCUMCISION

“ 8a And He gave him the covenant of circumcision . . .” Other versions read, “ agreement of which circumcision was the sign,” BBE “circumcision to confirm his promise,” GWN “ the ceremony of circumcision at that time, as evidence of the covenant between God and the people of Abraham,” LIVING “an agreement with Abraham ; was circumcision,” IE “the sacred compact of circumcision,” WILLIAMS “a covenant of circumcision, and under this covenant ,” MONTGOMERY and “a covenant (an agreement to be religiously observed) 24of which circumcision was the seal.” AMPLIFIED

Here again is a working of the Lord that reveals something of His nature. First, He does not forget His covenant, because He “cannot deny Himself” (2 Tim 2:13) – and His covenants are an expression of His Person.

The account of the giving of this covenant is found in Genesis 17:9-14. “And God said unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep My covenant therefore, thou, and thy seed after thee in their generations. This is My covenant , which ye shall keep, between Me and you and thy seed after thee; Every man child among you shall be circumcised. And ye shall circumcise the flesh of your foreskin; and it shall be a token of the covenant betwixt Me and you. And he that is eight days old shall be circumcised among you, every man child in your generations, he that is born in the house, or bought with money of any stranger, which is not of thy seed. He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised : and My covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant. And the uncircumcised man child whose flesh of his foreskin is not circumcised, that soul shall be cut off from his people; he hath broken My covenant .”

This, Stephen declares, was “the covenant of circumcision.” Paul declares that this was a sign of the righteousness Abraham had prior to his circumcision: “And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the righteousness of the faith which he had yet being uncircumcised : that he might be the father of all them that believe, though they be not circumcised; that righteousness might be imputed unto them also” (Rom 4:11).

Thus we have three perspectives of the circumcision of which Stephen spoke.

- It was a “token of the covenant” that God made between Abraham and Himself (Gen 17:11).

- Because it is a “token of the covenant,” it is, in a sense, equated with the covenant itself. It therefore becomes the evidence of the covenant, and a means of assuring the heart that it will be fulfilled (Acts 7:8).

- Because Abraham had believed God, the covenant was also a pledge that he had been made righteous, for God cannot make a covenant with unrighteous people (Rom 4:11).

The covenant itself, of which circumcision was the token, is spelled out in Genesis 17:2-8. Remember, this covenant was made before Abraham had any offspring. The following promises are made in the covenant.

- He would multiply Abraham “exceedingly” (verse 2),
- Abraham would be the “father of many nations” (verse 4-5).
- God would make him “exceedingly fruitful” (verse 6a).
- He would make nations of him (verse 6b).
- Kings would come out of him (verse 6c).
- He would establish His covenant with Abraham’s offspring after him (verse 7a).
- It would be an “everlasting covenant,” that is, it would not fail of fulfillment (verse 7b).
- He would give the land of Canaan to Abraham and his seed (verse 8a).

And what proof does Abraham carry with him confirming that this remarkable covenant is valid, and will surely come to pass? Perhaps it will be some miraculous sign he works, as Moses did with he put his hand in his bosom, pulled it out, and it was leprous – then put his hand again into his bosom and removed it, and it was “turned again as the other flesh”

- The land would be for an “everlasting possession,” that is, it would never cease to be identified with them (verse 8b).

- God would be the God of Abraham’s seed (verse 8c).

Those words were spoken to Abraham when he was ninety-nine years old (Gen 17:1), was impotent because of his age (Heb 11:12), and was “childless” (Gen 15:2). To further complicate things, his wife was ninety years old (Gen 17:17), had always been barren (Gen 11:30), and it had ceased to be with her after the manner of women – that is, giving birth was a biological impossibility (Gen 18:11).

And what proof does Abraham carry with him confirming that this remarkable covenant is valid, and will surely come to pass? Perhaps it will be some miraculous sign he works, as Moses did with he put his hand in his bosom, pulled it out, and it was leprous – then put his hand again into his bosom and removed it, and it was “turned again as the other flesh” (Ex 4:6). Surely something like that would be a great confidence-booster! But, alas, in this matter, the “token” must be more personal than that.

The token was Abraham’s circumcision – something that was done when he was “ninety years old and nine” (Gen 17:24). How do you boast about something like that? Who would believe you if you said that was the token, or confirmation of a covenant God had made with you. You are ninety-nine years old, and you say a lot of nations are going to come from you – that even kings will come from your loins. Your offspring will become a great multitude, and they will be given a special land by God himself. Furthermore, your circumcision is the proof of it all - but it is proof to Abraham, not to the world. He is the one who needed the confidence, not those who were living around him.

There are several things that can be noted about circumcision, and they all have some significance to those who are in Christ Jesus.

- There is some discomfort associated with it (Gen 34:24-25).
- It involves the removal of something (Ex 4:25).
- It produces sensitivity.
- It is something that is permanent.
- It is something that is personal and private.
- It is not something in which men can boast.
- It has a humbling effect upon the individual.
- It is something that is always with the individual.

THE PARALLEL

Thus you have a picture of the circumcision of Christ (Col 2:11), in which the foreskin of the heart is removed (Deut 10:16). There is a part of humanity that cannot remain if Christ is to be embraced. This speaks of the removal of “body of the sins of the flesh” (Col 2:11). That is, the totality of what made us unacceptable to God, and fully justified our condemnation, has been completely disassociated from “the new man” (Eph 4:24), or the “new creature” (2 Cor 5:17). It is said of the new man, “which was created according to God, in true righteousness and holiness” (Eph 4:24). He is “renewed in knowledge after the image of Him that created him” (Col 3:10). The “flesh” has no part whatsoever with him. It has been “circumcised with the circumcision of Christ.”

Allow me to translate this glorious circumstance into something that makes for confidence and assurance. The incompatibility of the old with the new is your token of the covenant, as affirmed in Romans seven. The fact that the flesh is an offense to you, and cannot blend with your renewed heart, is your proof that you have been born of God. Do not doubt this for a moment. This is the exact point that Paul makes in the seventh and eighth chapters of Romans. In Romans seven, he establishes the conflict between the flesh and the spirit, confirming the circumcision of Christ has, in fact, taken place. He affirms that sinful inclinations are temptations, not the expressions of the real child of God. “It is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me . . . I find then a law, that when I would do good, evil is present with me . . . I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind . . . who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” (Rom 7:14-25).

That is the painfulness of “the circumcision of Christ.” However, that is not the end of the matter. That very condition is the token that we have, in fact, been justified. It is the confirmation that, in Christ Jesus, we are not condemned. We have been liberated from condemnation, as well as the defilement that caused it.

That is why Paul draws a grand conclusion from this experience. “There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:1). No one but a child of God can appreciate such a marvelous token – and it is all pictured in Abraham.

AND THUS THE NATION WAS BORN

“ 8a . . . and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.”

AND SO

“ . . . and so . . .” That is, according to the promise of God, and in justification of the faith of Abraham, God began building a nation using a man and a woman who were naturally impotent. Neither of them could bring anything to the table – no ability, no wisdom, no input whatsoever. Their inability, however, had nothing to do with the fulfillment of God’s promise. It was His covenant. He made it, and He is the One who caused it to come to pass.

ABRAHAM BEGAT ISAAC

“ . . . Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day . . .” Abraham begat Isaac when he was one hundred years old. The lad was born at the exact time God had specified – at “the set time in the next year” (Gen 17:21). God had told Abraham to circumcise every male child when it was “eight days old” (Gen 17:12). Abraham did precisely what the Lord commanded, at the specified time. As it is written, “And Abraham circumcised his son Isaac being eight days old, as God had commanded him. And Abraham was an hundred years old, when his son Isaac was born unto him” (Gen 21:4-5).

ISAAC BEGAT JACOB

“ . . . Isaac begat Jacob . . .” The lineage continues, as Isaac begets Jacob, being sixty years old when he was Jacob with his twin, Esau (Gen 25:26). Isaac’s birth was also miraculous, as his mother Rebekah was also barren. As it is written, “And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padanaram, the sister to Laban the Syrian. And Isaac entreated the LORD for his wife, because she was barren: and the LORD was entreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived” (Gen 25:21).

JACOB BEGAT THE TWELVE PATRIARCHS

“ . . . and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs.” With Jacob, the offspring begins to spread exponentially. Abraham had one son through whom the nation came, and Isaac had one as well. Jacob, however, had twelve sons. Coincidentally, his favored wife, Rachel, was also barren (Gen 29:31). Jacob’s sons are called “the twelve patriarchs” because they were the heads of “the twelve tribes of Israel” (Gen 49:26). The sons through whom the tribes came were Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Zebulun, Issachar, Dan, Gad, Asher, Naphtali, Joseph, and Benjamin.

When it came to an inheritance, Levi was omitted because that tribe belonged to the Lord Himself (Num 3:12,45; 8:14; 18:13,24). To fill his place, Joseph received a double portion, which was divided between his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen 48:20,22).

Thus the stage has been set for the multiplication of many people from an impossible circumstance, with absolutely no fleshly advantages. This is the people from whom the promised Messiah will come. The very nation is like a sign and a wonder, the result of Divine initiative and power. Truly their presence is the working of the Lord!

CONCLUSION

In his defense, Stephen will show the prevalence of God throughout the history of Israel. A valid people must have a valid beginning – and Israel is confirmation of that. There is no way to account for their origin or presence upon the basis of human wisdom or aptitude. We also see that valid beginnings are brought about through faith, not human works. There is no basis for worldly boasting in any work of Divine origin. All such boasting “is excluded” (Rom 3:27).

We will find through Stephen’s defense a marvelous example of handling the Word of God aright (2 Tim 2:15). Of course, such a use of the Word can be expected when one is filled with the Spirit, wisdom, power, and faith.

STEPHEN'S DEFENSE, #2

“ 7:9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt: but God was with him, 10 And delivered him out of all his afflictions, and gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house. 11 Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance. 12 But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first. 13 And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren; and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh. 14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls. 15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers, 16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem. ” (Acts 7:9-16)

INTRODUCTION

Our text begins with the sons of Jacob being moved with envy against their younger brother Joseph, and selling him into Egypt. Genesis 37:28 pinpoints the time when Joseph was sold into Egypt: “Then there passed by Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt.” Genesis 37:29-41:44 covers the time from Joseph’s beginning in Egypt until his exaltation – thirteen years later. Genesis 41:45 through the conclusion of Genesis covers the time from Joseph’s exaltation through his death. Within that section, 42:1-47:27 covers the events associated with Jacob and his clan coming into Egypt. The next seventeen years, until the time of Jacob’s death, are covered in 47:28-48:22. The record of Jacob blessing his sons is found in 49:1-33. The burial of Jacob, and the events attending it, is covered from 50:1-50:15. The rest of the book of Genesis (50:16-26) covers the remainder of Joseph’s life and the interment of his body.

That means that we have hardly any information at all concerning the experience of the Israelites during the vast majority of the 430 years they sojourned in Egypt – and precious little concerning their oppression for four hundred years.

If men were writing the book, the burden of emphasis would have been placed upon the time of Israel's oppression. Instead of doing this, the Spirit moves Moses to emphasize their providential beginning, and the purpose for which they went down into Egypt. The reason for this unique emphasis is that the Scriptures were not written merely to provide us with historical accounts. Rather, the working of God himself is embedded in the record. In this we are being exposed to HOW all things are worked together for the good of those who love the Lord and are called according to His purpose.

Think, for example, of the circumstances that seemed to forbid the rising of a nation from whom the Messiah would be manifested.

- The family from which Abraham was chosen was idolaters.
- The call of God came to a man who was thoroughly unacquainted with the Lord.
- Abraham's participation in the purpose of God involved separating from his kindred and homeland.
- Abraham had no idea where he was going – only that God would show him the land to which he was being called.
- From the beginning of their marriage, Abraham's wife was barren.
- After twenty-four years, Abraham still had no offspring.
- When it was confirmed to Abraham that the promised offspring would come from Sarah, he was ninety-nine, and she was ninety – still barren.
- At the time scheduled for the birth, it was biologically impossible for Abraham and Sarah to have a son.
- When Abraham arrived in the promised land, it was being ravaged by a famine.
- When Isaac married Rebekah, she was barren.
- When Isaac came to the promised land, there was a famine in the land.

- When Jacob married Rachel, she was barren.
- Jacob’s favored son, Joseph, through whom the fledgling nation would be sustained, was hated by his brothers, and sold into Egypt as a slave.
- When Jacob was in the promised land, there was a famine, and he had to go down into Egypt.
- All three of the fathers of the Jewish nation – Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob – were not given any of the promised land, but sojourned in it as strangers and pilgrims.
- Jacob and all of his sons – the fathers of the twelve tribes – died in Egypt, never inheriting the promised land.
- The only piece of real estate that was owned by any Israelite up to the time of its occupation by Joshua, was purchased by Abraham – even though God said He would give him and his seed the land as an inheritance.

These are the circumstances Stephen is declaring in his defense. They provide a sort of context in which the Lord is working out his purpose – a context filled with impossible circumstances. One can only imagine how modern-day counselors would have spoken to the fathers concerning their experiences.

What we have here is a historical dialog that confirms the manner in which God works. That manner is declared by Paul, and must be seen by all who possess faith. “But God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; And base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence” (1 Cor 1:27-29).

In every bonafide work of God, the door is shut to any human boasting. As Paul would say, “It is excluded” (Rom 3:27) – i.e. there is no place made for it. There is nothing about the work of God – absolutely nothing – that allows for the exaltation of flesh, or for boasting in its accomplishments. It is not that a legitimate work of God can take place, and yet men can boast in it. This is an impossibility, for God works in such a manner as excludes the very possibility of boasting. It is not that such glorying ought not to be done – it cannot be done! What God is doing does not make any provision for it. If, therefore, there is a purported Christian work that allows for the flesh to boast, it cannot be from God. Such works have their genesis in the mind of man, not “the mind of the Lord” (1 Cor 2:16).

THE PATRIARCH’S MOVED WITH ENVY

“ 7:9a And the patriarchs, moved with envy . . .”

“The lot,” as Solomon put it, was “cast into” their “lap,” creating a circumstance where they appeared to be able to do whatever they wanted. However, the outworking of the whole affair was strictly in the hands of the Lord. As Solomon elaborated on the lot being cast into the lap, he added, “but the

Stephen now accounts for Joseph getting down into Egypt. Men were involved in the matter, but their will was not what drove the incidents that followed. “The lot,” as Solomon put it, was “cast into” their “lap,” creating a circumstance where they appeared to be able to do whatever they wanted. However, the outworking of the whole affair was strictly in the hands of the Lord. As Solomon elaborated on the lot being cast into the lap, he added, “but the whole disposing thereof is of the LORD” (Prov 16:33). That is the unwavering manner of the Kingdom. It is also one of the reasons why we are not to “judge according to the appearance” (John 7:24). Appearance lends itself to an overestimation of the power and influence of men. Those who are unduly drawn to appearance will always end up being deceived concerning the real situation.

THE PATRIARCHS

“And the patriarchs . . .” Other versions read, “the brothers,” BBE “Jacob’s sons,” GWN “our fathers,” MRD “these men,” LIVING “these fathers,” IE “the patriarchs [Jacob’s sons],” AMPLIFIED and “these men were our ancestors.” CEV

I have observed that there is a marked tendency in modern translators to ignore the reality of a Divine vocabulary. In their supposed eagerness to make the text plain, they often remove key words that aid us in comprehending the working of the Lord. The word “patriarch” is a case in point. It is a good word, and ought to be added to the vocabulary of the people of God. In the text before us, some versions use other words in the place of “patriarch.” Among them are “brothers,” BBE “men,” LIVING “sons” AMPLIFIED and “ancestors.” CEV

The word “patriarch” comes from the Greek word patria,rcai (pat-ri-arx-ai). It is a transliteration of the word, translating the letters instead of the word. This is because there is no English word that precisely parallels the original word – which is the whole reason for transliteration. The word means, “founder of a tribe, progenitor,” THAYER “Chief father . . . father of a tribe or nation, progenitor, chief of a family,” FRIBERG and “the father, or chief of a race,” LIDDELL-SCOTT That meaning, as you can see, is a far cry from the translations I have cited.

There are fourteen men to whom the term “patriarch” is applied: Abraham, the twelve sons of Jacob, and David.

- ABRAHAM. “Now consider how great this man was, unto whom even the patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils” (Heb 7:4). Abraham is viewed as “father,” or progenitor, in three senses. He is the one from whom the Jews themselves came. He is also the father of many nations, including Israel, but not limited to them (Gen 17:4). He is also the father of all who believe in Christ (Rom 4:11).

- JACOB’S TWELVE SONS. “And he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so Abraham begat Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day; and Isaac begat Jacob; and Jacob begat the twelve patriarchs” (Acts 7:8). Jacobs twelve sons are the progenitors of the twelve tribes of Israel.

- DAVID. “Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day” (Acts 2:29). David is of the tribe of Judah, and is the progenitor of Christ as the King. It is David’s throne upon which Jesus presently sits (Acts 2:30-36).

Each of these individuals are also referred to as fathers.

- ABRAHAM. “Neither shall thy name any more be called Abram, but thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee” (Gen 17:5). “Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham; who is the father of us all ” (Rom 4:16).

- JACOB’S TWELVE SONS. “But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first” (Acts 7:12). “So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers ” (Acts 7:15).

- DAVID. “Blessed be the kingdom of our father David , that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest” (Mark 11:10).

In our society, lineage is not considered to be of any major importance. This is because our nation is actually a conglomeration of peoples from various heritages. However, this was not the case with Israel. First, the chief purpose of the nation was to bring forth the Messiah. For this reason, the lineage had to be kept pure. Mingling with other nations and/or learning their ways was strictly forbidden (Ex 34:12-16; Deut 7:1-6), and whenever Israel violated this command, they always got into trouble (1 Kgs 11:4; Ezra 10:2-3,10-19; Neh 13:23-27).

The term “patriarchs,” therefore, is important to the understanding of the Jewish race. This is particularly true in the account that Stephen is giving, for in it all manner of difficulties existed for this small and fledgling group. Even though eleven of the twelve patriarchs were themselves very flawed, yet because of the God of heaven, the race was protected, and the Messiah was born of pure lineage at the appointed time – “made of a woman, made under the Law” (Gal 4:4). This is one of the points that is accentuated in the two genealogies of Jesus (Matt 1:1-16; Lk 3:23-38). Jesus, for example, had to be from the tribe of Judah (Gen 49:10; Micah 5:2; Heb 7:14; Rev 5:5). He also had to be from the lineage of David, who was himself from the tribe of Judah (Matt 1:1). That means that Mary also had to be from the tribe of Judah and the house of David (Lk 1:27). While Joseph was not the father of Jesus, because he was charged the responsibility of raising Him, and because Mary married him, he also had to be from the lineage of Judah and the house of David (Matt 1:20).

Ponder also, that the priesthood, both the Aaronic and Levitical, had to be from the lineage of Levi (Num 3:6; 8:19; 17:8; 18:2; Josh 21:10).

In a fleshly covenant, pedigree was all-important. During Nehemiah’s day, the people had departed from this, and the priesthood had become defiled. Nehemiah re-established the priesthood after the proper lineage (Neh 7:64).

The Reason for the Rule

All of this prepared the way for the New Covenant. In Jesus, a new genealogy is reckoned, for the fleshly line ended with Him. That is why Isaiah cried, “who shall declare His generation? for He was cut off out of the land of the living” (Isa 53:8). Now, although He had no fleshly offspring, His name is still “the Everlasting Father” (Isa 9:6). He has been given “children” (Heb 2:13), and they are numerous beyond number. In Him the promise is fulfilled, “for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the LORD” (Isa 54:1).

The genealogy of Jesus is even more precise than that of the Israelites. There must be a paternal connection with Jesus before any individual will be accepted by God. His Seed must be in the person (1 John 3:9), and he must be a partaker of His nature (2 Pet 1:4). The absence of these things absolutely negates any profession of identity with the Lord. Under the Old Covenant, institutional connection was basic. Under the New Covenant, it carries no weight at all. This is absolutely decimating to the sectarian approach to truth, and the vaunting of denominations. Lifeless religion was common under the Old Covenant. It is unlawful under the New.

MOVED WITH ENVY

Other versions read, “becoming envious,” NKJV “became jealous,” NASB “having indignation,” TNT and “boiling with envy and hatred and anger.” AMPLIFIED

Scriptural Reports of Men

The Scriptures do not varnish or gloss the human condition. God respects no man’s person – that is He never interacts with men in disassociation from what they really are. This is not commonly perceived. Some see God’s grace as having a loving and beneficial association with men regardless of what they really are. This is not a God-glorifying view, and approaches the subject of Divine favor as though Jesus did not even exist, and the new birth was not a reality. The truth of the matter is that in Christ men are changed, or transformed, in order that they might have fellowship with the Father, and remain in his favor.

The Account of the Patriarchs

With these things in mind, we return to Stephen's account of Joseph's brothers rising up against him without cause. They thought nothing of the fact that Joseph was their own brother, in the lineage of Abraham, and among the chosen people. They dishonored their father Jacob, by viewing his preference of Joseph as uncomely, and even wrong. They would have preferred that Jacob honor them above Joseph. Therefore, envy entered their hearts. Here, the word

“envy” connotes “to be heated or to boil with envy, hatred, and anger.” THAYER “hostile emotion based on resentment.” FRIBERG

Envy eats at the vitals of soul, and is described as causing rottenness to the bones: “envy the rottenness of the bones” (Prov 14:30). That is, it causes the basic human constitution to break down. It breaks down all barriers to doing evil, so that Solomon declared, “who is able to stand before envy?” (Prov 27:4). This is also the sin that drove the Jews and their leaders to deliver Jesus to Pilate for the sentencing of death (Matt 27:18). When God gave the Gentiles “over to a reprobate mind to do those things which are not convenient,” envy was one of the transgressions that broke out (Rom 1:29).

Thus, this uncomely trait broke out among the eleven brothers of Joseph. Envy will prove to be the kind of trait that compels them to do something. It will powerfully constrain them to go to whatever lengths they think is necessary to rid themselves of the influence of Joseph. We will find that envy has no moral boundaries. It is limitless in its capacity to remove what is conceived to be a threat.

Years later, among their progeny, the trait of envy would erupt against Moses. The insurrection was led by Korah, and is described in Psalm 106:16; “They envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the LORD. The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram. And a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked” (Psa 106:16-18). Thus we see what folly envy provokes in men. We also see how the God of heaven reacts to envy.

The Absence of Such A Trait Among New Covenant Leaders

It ought to be noted that, following the ascension of Jesus into heaven, this trait was never found among the twelve apostles. None of them envied Peter for being given the keys to the Kingdom of heaven (Matt 16:19). They did not envy Peter, James, and John, for being the inner circle (Matt 17:1), or John for being the disciple whom Jesus loved (John 21:20). Following Christ's enthronement there was never any manifestation of envy among “the apostles” (Rev 21:14), who are the New Covenant parallel of the “twelve patriarchs” (Acts 7:8). Even before His enthronement, envy was not found among them.

The absence of this sort of reaction among the twelve apostles confirms the superiority of the New Covenant, in which the nature of the constituents of the covenant is changed by means of transformation. It is not that they had mastered inappropriate human emotions through discipline. Rather, they had become partakers of the Divine nature, and were in the process of being conformed to the image of God's dear Son. Because the New Covenant is “a better covenant established upon better promises” (Heb 8:6), it produces better qualities within its constituents. This, coupled with their deliverance from the power of darkness, accounts for the superior character of those who are truly in Christ Jesus. Rather than “the works of the flesh” being prominent within them, through their faith it is “the fruit of the Spirit” that now characterizes their lives (Gal 5:19-25).

THEY SOLD JOSEPH INTO EGYPT

“ 9b . . . sold Joseph into Egypt . . .” Other versions read, “sold him as a slave into Egypt,” NIV “gave him to the Egyptians for money,” BBE “sold him away into Egypt,” DARBY “sold him into slavery, and he was taken into Egypt,” GWN and “sold him to be a slave in Egypt.” NLT

This is one of the sad accounts of pre-Messianic history. This is only the fourth generation from the call of God, and already there has been a significant decline in the chosen race. This confirms the absolute necessity of the new birth. The creation of a “new man” (Eph 4:24) is not a mere luxury, but is necessary for the conformity of men to the image of Christ. Men can be given every possible advantage, and surrounded with Divine intervention and miracles, and yet fail miserably because they are driven by selfish ambition, which is inherent in the human constitution. At the time of the account being given by Stephen, the envious ones are the best of the human race – not the dregs of it.

Further, the conduct we are

These observations do not make what the brothers did either right or acceptable. It only shows why a Savior was needed to take away sin, in order that man’s nature could be changed. That change had to be done by God in all righteousness.

witnessing did not occur in Egypt, but in the promised land, while the patriarchs were sojourning there. Additionally, it did not occur during the famine that would come upon the land, but in a time of plenty, when their flocks could be fed, and food was in apparent abundance. Thus, their envy was not driven by dire circumstances, or some unusual external situation. It revealed a fundamental flaw within the human nature.

These observations do not make what the brothers did either right or acceptable. It only shows why a Savior was needed to take away sin, in order that man’s nature could be changed. That change had to be done by God in all righteousness. However, as long as sin remained, that could not be done. Again, let me emphasize that this does not lessen the wrongness of what the twelve patriarchs did. The fact that men were under the domination of a fallen nature did not make sin less reprehensible. Neither, indeed, did it allow for the excusing of it.

There were at least two reasons why God was longsuffering with such conduct. First, it was because He was working through it to create circumstances by which the race appointed to bring forth the Messiah would be sustained. This was being done in a manner that could only yield glory to Himself. He did not take what men did and convert it to His advantage. Rather, He created the circumstances, down to the finest detail, to confirm the whole of the matter was dictated by Him. Second, his longsuffering was specifically in prospect of the coming Savior, who would bear both the substance and the penalty of all sin. It is necessary to see these things if we are going to give God due glory.

Stephen gives an abbreviated statement concerning a rather drawn out affair. In the process of teaching, that is the nature Divine summation. Of course, it assumes that the details of the affair are already known. If that is not true, the summation carries no weight.

THEY SOLD JOSEPH INTO EGYPT

Stephen gives an abbreviated statement concerning a rather drawn out affair. In the process of teaching, that is the nature Divine summation. Of course, it assumes that the details of the affair are already known. If that is not true, the summation carries no weight. It will therefore be of profit to briefly outline what led to the sale of Joseph.

- The patriarchs has been provoked to hate their younger brother Joseph because of their father’s preference of him (Gen 27:3-4).
- Joseph related his first dream to his brothers, in which he saw all twelve of them binding sheaves of grain. His sheaf stood upright, and their sheaves of grain “made obedience,” or bowed down, to his sheaf (Gen 37:5-7).

- His brothers “hated him the more for his words” (Gen 37:8).
- Joseph related a second dream to his father and his brothers in which the sun and moon and the eleven stars “made obeisance to him” (Gen 37:9-10).
- His brothers envied him, but his father Jacob “observed the saying,” or “kept the matter in mind” NKJV (Gen 37:11).
- While his brothers were feeding Jacob’s flocks in Shechem, he sent Joseph to check on them to see if it was well with them and the flocks (Gen 37:12-14).
- After finding Joseph wandering about unable to find his brothers, a man asked him what he was seeking. Upon telling the man he was seeking his brothers, Joseph asked him if he might know where they were. The man said he seen them, and heard them say they were going to Dothan. Joseph headed there immediately to find his brothers (Gen 37:15-17).
- While he was yet “afar off,” his brothers saw him coming. Conspiring to slay him, they said, “ Behold, this dreamer cometh. Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams” (Gen 37:18-20).
- The older brother, Reuben, heard the plot and delivered Joseph out of their hands, saying “Let us not kill him” (Gen 37:21).
- Reuben then suggested, “Shed no blood, but cast him into this pit that is in the wilderness, and lay no hand upon him; that he might rid him out of their hands, to deliver him to his father again” (Gen 37:22). At this point, Joseph had not come to them
- When Joseph finally arrived, they stripped him of his coat of many colors – a sign of his father’s favor – and threw him into an empty pit where there was no water (Gen 37:23-24).
- The scheming brothers then calmly sat down to eat (Gen 37:25).
- While eating, the brothers looked up and saw “a company of Ishmeelites came from Gilead with their camels bearing spicery and balm and myrrh, going to carry it down to Egypt” (Gen 37:25).
- Judah tells the other brothers, “Come, and let us sell him to the Ishmeelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother and our flesh” (Gen 37:27a).
- His brothers are content with the suggestion (Gen 37:27b).
- At that time, “there passed by Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver” (Gen 37:28a).
- Shortly after this, Reuben returns, and finds Joseph missing from the pit. Because he had intended to deliver him back to Jacob, he cries out, “The child is not; and I, whither shall I go?” (Gen 37:30).
- The brothers then “took Joseph's coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood; And they sent the coat of many colors, and they brought it to their father; and said, This have we found: know now whether it be thy son's coat or no” (Gen 37:32).
- Having received the coat, Jacob recognized it and said, “It is my son's coat; an evil beast hath devoured him; Joseph is without doubt rent in pieces” (Gen 37:33).
- The Midianite merchantmen then brought Joseph into Egypt, and “sold him into Egypt unto Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh's, and captain of the guard” (Gen 37:28b, 36).

All of those remarkable details are summed up in Stephen's words, "And the patriarchs, moved with envy, sold Joseph into Egypt" (Acts 7:9). Stephen, speaking through the Spirit of God, will develop the thought that God was in all of this, giving Joseph protection and favor, and using him to deliver his people. He will speak with understanding, as well as with power. It was previously stated that he was filled with wisdom. Now he will evidence that wisdom in his summation of the Jewish people, and their development as a nation.

Thus far, with two hundred and twenty-nine words he has covered more than 250 years of Divine involvements with men. He has included the accomplishment of impossible things, unveiled the impotence of nature, and exposed the hardness of the human heart. The power of faith has also been declared, as well as the reality of Divine direction. Such wonderful things could not possibly be drawn from the wellspring of nature. They deal with matters that are outside of the perimeter of human assessment and wisdom.

WHAT WE ARE BEHOLDING

It is imperative that we have some understanding of the magnitude of the things Stephen is declaring. He is confirming that God was actually the One who was in control of situation the brothers thought they were orchestrating. The world belongs to Him, as well as everything and everyone within it. As it is written, "The earth is the LORD'S, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein" (Psa 24:1). This is most precisely stated under the New Covenant, where men are granted a broader perspective of the Lord and the things that he is working in the midst of the earth. Here is how Paul said it: "For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen" (Rom 11:36).

Now we are told this, and it is our responsibility to receive it and conduct our lives accordingly. In the end, when the distracting elements of the present heavens and earth have passed away, it will all be made plain – crystal clear. Until that time, we are to live with the revelation of these things in mind. By so doing, we will be able to maintain our lives "in all godliness and honesty" (1 Tim 2:2), thereby bringing glory to God through the Lord Jesus Christ.

BUT GOD WAS WITH HIM

"9c . . . but God was with him." Other versions read, "yet God was with him," NASB and "But God was with Joseph." GWN

At this point, it appeared as though everything was against Joseph. He was powerless to stop his brothers from despising him. He was unable to restrain them from throwing him into a pit. He was helpless to thwart them selling him to a band of Midianite slave-traders. It appeared as though Joseph could have said the same thing his father affirmed: "all these things are against me" (Gen 42:36). According to appearance, he could have cried out in the words of the Psalmist, "Many bulls have compassed me: strong bulls of Bashan have beset me round" (Psa 22:12). So far as experience in the body was concerned, Joseph could have said with Paul that he was, "pressed out of measure, above strength, insomuch that we despaired even of life" (2 Cor 1:8).

At this point, his real circumstance – the one that had to do with his identity with God, was hidden from view. Scripture apprizes us that Joseph was "seventeen" at this time (Gen 37:2), and already it appears as though his world has fallen apart. He was the favored son of his father, and yet upon being sent on a mission to his brethren, he had fallen on hard times, becoming subject to the venomous hatred of his own brothers. He had been raised among a covenanted people, and now he is in the midst of heathens, and headed for a heathen country. The whole affair would have been greatly compounded if he had been taught some of the doctrines that have been loosed during our time.

However, here is a fact that was not so apparent – nevertheless, it was absolutely true: "God was with Him.” He was with him when Joseph was hated by his brothers. He was with him when they threw Him into the waterless pit. He was with him when they sold him to the Midianite merchants. And, He was with Him when he entered into Egypt – a foreign land where the people spoke in a language he did not understand (Psa 81:5). God was with Joseph when he was away from his homeland. He was with him in all of His power, thoughtfully monitoring all of his affairs and controlling his circumstances – grievous though they were. True to His nature, the Lord would not allow Joseph to be tested above what he was able to bear, but would always provide a way of escape, that he might be able to bear it (1 Cor 10:13). Sometimes that door would be one out of which he would have to run, knowing that false charges would be leveled against him. Other times, it would be a door of special favor during adverse circumstances. However you choose to view it, “God was with him.”

In the narrative of the historical events - from the time he was thrown into the pit until he was imprisoned in Egypt (Gen 37:4-39:21) – there are a few references to the Lord being with him. All of them are Divine explanations, and none of them are observations made by Joseph – although I do not doubt that he was aware to a significant degree of their reality.

- IN POTIPHAR’S HOUSE. “And the LORD was with Joseph , and he was a prosperous man ; and he was in the house of his master the Egyptian” (Gen 39:2). Keep in mind that Joseph may very well have still been a teenager. He was seventeen when he came into Egypt, and we have no idea how long he was in Potiphar’s house, or how long it was before Potiphar had him imprisoned.

- POTIPHAR SAW IT. “And his master saw that the LORD was with him , and that the LORD made all that he did to prosper in his hand ” (Gen 39:3).

- POTIPHAR BLESSED FOR JOSEPH’S SAKE. “And it came to pass from the time that he had made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had, that the LORD blessed the Egyptian's house for Joseph's sake ; and the blessing of the LORD was upon all that he had in the house, and in the field” (Gen 39:5).

- IN PRISON. “But the LORD was with Joseph , and showed him mercy, and gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison” (Gen 39:21).

None of these texts had to do with a contemporary verbal articulation of the facts. All of them were after-the-fact, and had to do with assessment. They were more of a Divine commentary on the circumstances. Potiphar, for example, knew that Joseph prospered in everything he did, but could not trace it back to Jehovah – the God of the Hebrews. If he could have done this he never would have believed his wife’s allegation against Joseph, or had him incarcerated. It was the same with the prison-keeper. His assessment of Joseph was driven by God giving Joseph favor in his sight – not by insight.

In the case of Joseph, God being “with him” translated into the following:

- His enemies could not fully implement their will against him (his brothers, Potiphar’s wife, and Potiphar himself).

- He was given favor in the eyes of certain key people, when it was sorely needed (Potiphar during the beginning of his stay in Egypt).

- He was given favor in the eyes of the keeper of the prison. This was not traced to any extensive assessment of the prison keeper, but to the fact that God was showing Joseph mercy.

These represent at least the majority of the texts that affirmed Divine accompaniment. Of course, all of them were actually written long after the time of Joseph. At the very best, they were known because those who had the experience spoke of them to their peers. The point to be seen is that the experience of God’s presence was very rare, and the knowledge of such times were even more unusual.

All of this confirms that Divine consideration cannot always be deduced from circumstance. It is something that becomes cognitive through the peculiar prerogative of faith.

OUR TIME

The present time is far superior to the times during which Joseph lived. He had no Scripture – we do. So far as the Scriptural record of the times prior to Joseph, there had never been an uttered commitment stating that God would be with any individual. In his communication with Noah God said, “with thee will I establish My covenant” (Gen 6:18). God had told Abraham, “Behold, My covenant is with thee” (Gen 17:4). As Esau was growing up, it is written, “And God was with the lad” (Gen 21:20). At one point in Isaac’s life, Abimelech confessed, “We saw certainly that the Lord was with thee” (Gen 26:28). Earlier, Jacob had said of his life, “God, who answered me in the day of my distress, was with me in the way that I went” (Gen 35:3). These represent at least the majority of the texts that affirmed Divine accompaniment. Of course, all of them were actually written long after the time of Joseph. At the very best, they were known because those who had the experience spoke of them to their peers. The point to be seen is that the experience of God’s presence was very rare, and the knowledge of such times were even more unusual.

Now, however, in the day of the open heavens, and access to God, we have certain promises of the presence of the Lord that, in number and nature, have no parallel in antiquity.

- “He that hath My commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of My Father, and I will love him, and will manifest Myself to him ” (John 14:21).
- “Jesus answered and said unto him, If a man love Me, he will keep My words: and My Father will love him, and We will come unto him, and make Our abode with him ” (John 14:23).
- “ I am with you alway , even unto the end of the world” (Matt 28:20).
- “ Abide in Me, and I in you . As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in Me ” (John 15:4).
- “For I am with thee , and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city” (Acts 18:10).
- “But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His” (Rom 8:9).
- “But if the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you , He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His Spirit that dwelleth in you ” (Rom 8:11).
- “God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of His Son Jesus Christ our Lord ” (1 Cor 1:9).
- “And thus are the secrets of his heart made manifest; and so falling down on his face he will worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth ” (1 Cor 14:25).
- “And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them ; and I will be their God, and they shall be My people” (2 Cor 6:16).
- “Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you , except ye be reprobates?” (2 Cor 13:5).
- “My little children, of whom I travail in birth again until Christ be formed in you ”

(Gal 4:19).

- “One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all ” (Eph 4:6).

- “Being confident of this very thing, that He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ” (Phil 1:6).

- “For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of His good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

- “To whom God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you , the hope of glory” (Col 1:27).

- “Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for He hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee ” (Heb 13:5).

- “Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do His will, working in you that which is wellpleasing in His sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen” (Heb 13:20-21).

- “Ye are of God, little children, and have overcome them: because greater is He that is in you , than he that is in the world” (1 John 4:4).

The point to be seen is that a much higher level of confidence is expected from those who are in Christ Jesus than all of the godly who went before them. It is said of the most noble of all the ancients, “And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise: God having provided some better thing for us , that they without us should not be made perfect” (Heb 11:39-40). It is unconscionable for those to whom superior benefits have been vouchsafed to display results vastly inferior to those to whom less was given.

These are things that do need to be spoken to those who are engaged in “the good fight of faith” (1 Tim 6:12). The fierceness of the battle in which we are engaged requires that good soldiers (2 Tim 2:3) be apprised of the presence of their Lord. To deprive them of this witness is to make them vulnerable to the foe, and thus cause them to fight uncertainly. God will not excuse such behavior! Divine commitments are to be declared to each generation.

GOD DELIVERED HIM OUT OF ALL HIS AFFLICTIONS

“ 10a And delivered him out of all his afflictions . . .” Other versions read, “delivered him out of all his troubles ,” NKJV “ rescued him from all his afflictions,” NASB “rescued him from all of his troubles,” NIV “delivered him out of all of his anguish ” LIVING “Joseph had many troubles there, but God rescued him from them all ,” IE “delivered him from all his distressing afflictions ,” AMPLIFIED “ saved him from all his troubles,” PHILLIPS “delivered him out of all his adversities ,” BISHOPS “delivered him out of all his tribulations ,” DARBY and “rescued him from all of his suffering .” GWN

Here the language is very definitive. The King James Version reads precisely correct – “out of.” Some versions read “from,” but this is not exact enough. The words “out of” are translated from the Greek word evk (ek). Lexically, the word denotes the area from which the specified action takes place. In this case, Joseph’s “afflictions” were the locus out of which God delivered him. The word “from” could mean God delivered from the circumstance itself, so that Joseph would not have experienced the affliction at all. That God can, and sometimes does, in fact, do this, cannot be denied. But that is certainly not the point Stephen is emphasizing here. Here, the point is that Joseph was in the affliction , and God extracted him from it, so that he was not overcome. In this way, the purpose of God could not be overthrown, but was actually worked out in the midst of adversity. This, of course, accrued to the glory of God, which is the dominant trait in everything that He does.

THE NATURE OF DELIVERANCE

It is the manner of God to deliver out from an adverse condition. Take, for example, the deliverance of the entire natural order that has been scheduled on the Divine calendar. Of the creation Paul writes that it will be “delivered from the bondage of corruption” (Rom 8:21). Already, for at least 6,000 years, creation has been dominated by corruption, and is enslaved to it. Yet, that domination is scheduled to terminate at the word of the Lord, and creation will make a complete exit from corruption and degeneration.

Paul spoke of deliverance as occurring in three dimensions – past, present, and future. “Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver: in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us” (2 Cor 1:10). All of this postulates that the circumstances from which deliverance takes place cannot be broken by the wisdom of men, or any form of human initiative. The rescue has to come from God, and it has to come in His own time. Until that deliverance comes, the Lord will so sustain the individual that he will not be overcome by the circumstances, and the foe will not be able to rejoice in triumph.

Deliverance is like this in order that God might receive the glory.

JOSEPH’S DELIVERANCE

The nature of Joseph’s “afflictions” is spelled out in several places.

- HIS BROTHERS INTENT TO KILL HIM. “Come now therefore, and let us slay him, and cast him into some pit, and we will say, Some evil beast hath devoured him: and we shall see what will become of his dreams” (Gen 37:20).

- FILLED WITH ANGUISH. Prior to being thrown into a pit, Joseph suffered anguish and pled for his brothers not to do this. “We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us” (Gen 42:21).

- THROWN INTO A PIT. “And they took him, and cast him into a pit: and the pit was empty, there was no water in it” (Gen 37:24).

- SOLD TO MERCHANTS. “Then there passed by Midianites merchantmen; and they drew and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, and sold Joseph to the Ishmeelites for twenty pieces of silver: and they brought Joseph into Egypt” (Gen 37:28).

- A LANGUAGE HE DID NOT UNDERSTAND. “This he ordained in Joseph for a testimony, when he went out through the land of Egypt: where I heard a language that I understood not” (Psa 81:5).

- IMPRISONED. “And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in the prison” (Gen 39:20).

- FORGOTTEN. “Yet did not the chief butler remember Joseph, but forgot him” (Gen 40:23).

- IN PRISON TWO MORE YEARS. “And it came to pass at the end of two full years, that Pharaoh dreamed: and, behold, he stood by the river” (Gen 41:1).

- FEET HURT WITH FETTERS. “He sent a man before them, even Joseph, who was sold for a servant: Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron: Until the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him. The king sent and loosed him; even the ruler of the people, and let him go free” (Psa 105:17-20).

Although all of these circumstances were grievous, the perpetrators never realized their objectives.

God delivered Joseph “out of all his afflictions.” He did not deliver him from the initial experience of the afflictions, but from their dominancy and duration. From the devil’s point of view, the purpose of affliction is to make an end of the afflicted one. From God’s point of view, it is to test and prepare the suffering one, and to bring glory to Himself. Because God is, in fact, “above all,” it is His will that is ultimately realized. All other intentions finally fall to the ground in absolute defeat.

There is a lesson to be learned here concerning Kingdom manners. It at once becomes evident that well being in this world does not equate to the Lord being with the individual. If that was the case, it might be argued that God was with Joseph’s brothers, for they managed to rid themselves of his influence – at least for a season. It might also be supposed that the Lord was with Potiphar’s wife, for she had her will – at least for a season.

Joseph himself, speaking from an illuminated point of view, assessed the difficulties from which he had been delivered. “. . . God did send me before you to preserve life . . . God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth , and to save your lives by a great deliverance . So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God : and He hath made me a father to Pharaoh , and lord of all his house , and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt ” (Gen 45:8). Again he said, “But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good , to bring to pass, as it is this day, to save much people alive ” (Gen 50:20).

Behold what marvelous things God accomplished.

- He sent Joseph into Egypt to preserve life.
- He sent Joseph into Egypt to preserve a posterity in the earth – the lineage though which the Messiah would come.
- He sent Joseph into Egypt to accomplish a great deliverance – when a great host of people would be delivered at the time of the exodus.
- God made Joseph an advising father to Pharaoh.
- God made Joseph the lord over all of Pharaoh’s house.
- God made Joseph a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt.
- Through Joseph God saved much people alive.

And how were all of these things accomplished? It was by means of hatred, envy, enslavement, false accusation, imprisonment, and being forgotten. This by no means sanctified the malicious treatment of Joseph. However, it did confirm that the work was wholly wrought by God. It was not the result of human strategizing.

A LESSON TO BE LEARNED

There is a lesson to be learned here concerning Kingdom manners. It at once becomes evident that well being in this world does not equate to the Lord being with the individual. If that was the case, it might be argued that God was with Joseph’s brothers, for they managed to rid themselves of his influence – at least for a season. It might also be supposed that the Lord was with Potiphar’s wife, for she had her will – at least for a season. Of course, all of that is obviously foolish, because we have been given the record of the outcome of the events. However, God has not changed, and His Kingdom still functions in this way. The people of God are still experiencing oppression, and doing so unjustly, Yet, in it all the Lord is working out His purpose, preparing His people to rein with Christ, and publicly showing the ultimate futility of opposing those upon whom the favor of God rests.

Those who equate outward well being with the care of the Lord are not thinking properly. Their thinking has been skewed by covetousness. Sometimes well being and prosperity are nothing more than confirmations that the people have been set in “slippery places” (Psa 73:18), and will soon come tumbling down.

GOD GAVE JOSEPH FAVOR AND WISDOM IN PHARAOH'S SIGHT

“ 10b . . . and gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt; and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.”

Stephen is careful to point out that it was God who was at work behind the scenes. He was, in fact, working all things together for His own glory, for the good of Joseph, and the preservation Abraham's seed. However, deliverance is not the only thing that was accomplished. With God, deliverance is not an end of itself, but is a means to a higher end, or purpose.

GAVE HIM FAVOR AND WISDOM

“ . . . and gave him favor and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh king of Egypt . . .” Other versions read, “gave him wisdom and favor in the presence of Pharaoh,” NKJV “gave Joseph wisdom and enabled him to gain the goodwill of Pharaoh king of Egypt,” NIV “gave him wisdom and the approval of Pharaoh , king of Egypt,” BBE “When Joseph stood in the presence of Pharaoh (the king of Egypt), God gave Joseph Divine favor and wisdom,” GWN “ granted him favor and wisdom before Pharaoh, the king of Egypt,” NAB “ making him so wise that he won the favor of Pharaoh king of Egypt,” NJB “God gave him favor before Pharaoh, king of Egypt. God also gave Joseph unusual wisdom ,” NLT “Pharaoh, the king of Egypt, liked Joseph and respected him , because of the wisdom which God gave Joseph,” IE “ He allowed him to win favor and show wisdom before Pharaoh,” ISV “gave him grace and wisdom, when he stood before Pharaoh , king of Egypt,” MONTGOMERY “and won him goodwill and favor and wisdom and understanding in the sight of Pharaoh, king of Egypt,” AMPLIFIED “God made him so wise that the Egyptian king Pharaoh thought highly of him ,” CEV and “When Joseph appeared before the king of Egypt, God gave him a pleasing manner and wisdom .” GNB

The idea here is that God determined how Pharaoh thought of Joseph. The relationship between Pharaoh and Joseph was dictated by the Lord Himself. This was because the outcome of that association would save alive a people, preserve a godly posterity, and lead to a great deliverance – all of which would accrue to the long-lasting glory of the God of heaven. In this word from Stephen, a statement will be confirmed that would be made hundreds of years later: i.e. “the heavens do rule” (Dan 4:26). As Nebuchadnezzar can confirm, there is no question about the earth being in ultimate subjection to the heavens. The government of all things is located in the dwelling place of God, not man. The history of Joseph confirms this,

Centuries after the statement in Daniel, another affirmation would be made that is confirmed by Stephen's words: “For of Him, and through Him, and to Him, are all things : to whom be glory for ever. Amen” (Rom 11:36). This is a more extensive view of the heavens ruling, and is spoken in view of the removal of sin and the enthronement of the Lord Jesus. The ultimate Source or Cause of all things is declared to be God. He is also the means through which all things are being done. That is, His hand is involved in the affairs of men, thereby ensuring that everything will accrue to His glory. That too is confirmed in Joseph's impressive life.

Whatever people may think of the volitional capacities of man, their thoughts must take into consideration that God can cause one man to be favored by another. He can cause wisdom to so abound in one man, that another man can marvel, and be inclined to submit to that wisdom. It is wholly improper to maintain any view of man that rejects or modifies the clear declaration that the Source, Means, and Objective of all things is God Himself .

It is not possible that Stephen is speaking the truth if these things are not so. I hardly see how there is allowance for a theological millimeter, or for even the slightest departure from this truth.

“Favor”

By “favor,” the text means that Pharaoh was glad to see Joseph, and was very pleased with his presence. He was inclined toward Joseph, and saw no threat of competition in him. There was a wholesome attractiveness in Joseph that was perceived to a measurable extent by Pharaoh. It brought to the king the comfortableness with Joseph that would ordinarily have been developed over a period of time in which the virtues of Joseph would have been established through extended association with him. Although he was brought straight from the prison, Joseph was received without hesitation by Pharaoh, just as though he was the king’s own well beloved son – and all upon the basis of the testimony of another former prisoner. Speaking as a man, this is a most remarkable circumstance. Speaking as one who believes on Christ, knowing that the heavens do rule, it is what we should expect.

This favor was not the result of any solicitation of consideration by Joseph. It was a gift from God. This postulates that the Lord has control over the hearts of men, and can, at will, turn them as the rivers of water (Prov 21:1). Already, the Lord had given Joseph “favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison” (Gen 39:21). You may recall that, many years later, when Israel would come out of Egyptian bondage, the Lord “gave the people favor in the sight of the Egyptians” (Ex 11:3; 12:36). Solomon once said, “When a man’s ways please the LORD, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him” (Prov 16:7). I have found this to be an elixir of comfort in circumstances that could prove to be disconcerting.

“Wisdom”

By “wisdom,” the text means Pharaoh was very impressed with Joseph’s understanding – the broad range of his knowledge in various subjects. This particularly included the interpretation of Pharaoh’s dreams (Gen 41:1-7; 15-32), and Joseph’s word on addressing the dilemma that would be created by a prolonged famine that would be preceded by seven years of extraordinary harvest (Gen 41:33-37). It is equally plain that Joseph must have spoken with obvious confidence and without hesitating or flawed speech. His words must have appeared as though they had been well studied and organized, even though they were spoken with apparent immediacy. It appears to me that discernment and aptitude were mingled effectively on an almost instant basis – as Joseph spoke. Jesus indicated that such a thing was the manner of inspiration: “it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak” (Matt 10:19). Thus a grasp of the situation, discernment of the circumstantial details, and a thorough understanding of what to do, were given to Joseph all at once – probably as Pharaoh related his dreams to Joseph.

The interpretation of the dream, then, was a display of immediate wisdom. God gave him the ability to interpret the dream, versus an angel telling him the meaning, as with Daniel (Dan 8:15-27), and Zechariah (Zech 1:9-21; 4:5-14). I gather this means the meaning of the dream became very clear to Joseph, as well as how to respond to it. His directions to Pharaoh flowed from understanding. That is, he actually comprehended what he was saying. We know this is the case, else he could not have been the administrator of the affairs in Egypt.

The Details of Joseph’s Understanding

Pharaoh made known the two dreams that he had.

- First, Pharaoh dreamed that as he stood by the river, seven fine looking and fat cows came up out of the river and fed in a meadow. Then seven ugly and gaunt cows came out of the river and ate up the seven fine looking and fat cows.
- Second, he dreamed that seven heads of grain came up on one stalk, being plump and good. Then seven thin heads, blighted by the east wind sprang up after them. The seven thin heads devoured the seven plump and full heads.

Speaking as a man, this is what Joseph had to work with. Here is the expression of the wisdom that was given to him.

- The two dreams had one meaning (41:25a).
- The dreams informed Pharaoh of what God was going to do (41:25b).
- The seven good cows and the seven full ears were seven years of plenty, and meant the same thing (41:26).
- The seven thin cows and seven empty ears were seven years of famine (41:27).
- Again, Joseph emphasized that this spoke of “What God was about to do” (41:28).
- Seven years of plenty would come throughout all the land of Egypt (41:29).
- After those plenteous years, seven years of famine would come in which “all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt, and the famine shall consume the land” (41:30).
- The plenty would not be known in the land by reason of the famine, for it would be very grievous (41:31).
- The dream had been doubled, Joseph said, “because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass” (Gen 41:32a).
- The dream would “shortly come to pass” (41:32b).
- Joseph told Pharaoh to find a man “discreet and wise, and set him over all the land of Egypt” (41:33).
- Officers were to be appointed over the land, and charged with gathering 20% of the harvest during the seven plenteous years (41:34).
- The food that was gathered was to be laid up in store under Pharaoh and kept in the cities (41:35).
- The food that was stored would be used to sustain the land through the famine (41:36).

Behold the nature of the wisdom that was given to Joseph.

- He defined the source of the dream.
- He interpreted why Pharaoh was given two dreams.
- He identified the dreams had to do with what God was going to do.
- He defined the time in which the commencement of the dreams would take place.
- He defined what to do during the time of plenty.
- He defined how to go about the activities during the years of plenty.
- He defined how to sustain the people during the famine.

It is remarkable to consider the details of the wisdom given to Joseph. His answer concerning Pharaoh’s dreams was a thorough answer, with no part of the dream remaining mysterious. The appropriate reaction to the dream was also specified.

In all of this we see the nature of “wisdom and spiritual understanding” (Col 1:9). It is not a mere routine, nor is it a kind of quick-fix. Rather, true wisdom leads a person into harmony with what the Lord is doing, so that even the grievous circumstances do not cause ultimate harm to the wise one.

MADE HIM GOVERNOR OVER EGYPT

“ . . .and he made him governor over Egypt and all his house.” Other versions read, “governor over Egypt and all his household,” NASB “ ruler over Egypt and all his palace ,” NIV “ chief administrator over Egypt and over all his household,” CJB “governor over all of Egypt and put him in charge of the palace,” NLT “governor over all Egypt, as well as putting him in charge of all the affairs of the palace,” LIVING “the job of being governor of Egypt. He even allowed Joseph to rule over all the people in Pharaoh's house ,” IE “Governor over Egypt, and over all the royal household ,” MONTGOMERY and “governor of Egypt and put him in charge of his own entire household .” PHILLIPS

The sequence of the times and events that brought Joseph to this point accent Divine preparation.

- His first responsibility at around the age of seventeen – to find his brothers and report to his father as to the well being of them and the flocks they were feeding (Gen 37:13-14).
- At a young age, probably within proximity of his seventeenth year, he was made responsible for the affairs of the household of Potiphar, the captain of the king’s guard (Gen 37:36; 39:1-4) .
- When imprisoned with the king’s prisoners, all of the prisoners were committed into his hand so that whatever they did became the execution of his will (Gen 39:20-23).
- He becomes the governor over all the land of Egypt, with only the Pharaoh himself not being subject to him (Gen 41:40-44; 42:6).

It becomes apparent that in all of his experiences, Joseph was being groomed for the ultimate position to which he was assigned – the governor of Egypt. In fact, Scripture affirms that he was “sent” by God into the land of Egypt to preserve the life of Abraham’s seed (Gen 45:5,7,8; 50:20; Psa 105:17).

A Good Steward

As we might expect, Joseph proved to be a faithful steward, thus confirming that he was, in fact, chosen by God and placed in the positions that he occupied. He was intended to fulfill the work that he accomplished, and was gifted and strengthened to that end.

The extent of Joseph’s faithfulness in this stewardship is most arresting to consider. He handled what was given to him to the glory of God, and never sought to exploit his stewardship for personal advantage. Here are a few of the things he handled so well.

- His father’s love and favor.
- His father’s will, faithfully obeying him in his commissions.
- His brother’s rejection.
- The responsibility of Potiphar’s household and affairs.
- The responsibility to remain morally pure.
- Extraordinary suffering that extended over a considerable period of time.
- Being away from home, and being answerable to no member of his father’s household.

- The care and commission of the prisoners over whom he was made a steward,
- Opportunities that were vouchsafed to him, such as befriending the baker and the butler and interpreting their dreams.
- The wisdom that was given to him – employing it at the appropriate times, before the proper people, and by giving appropriate directions.
- The handling of special favor, namely that of Potiphar, the prison keeper, and Pharaoh.
- Being prosperous.
- The gathering of provisions at the appointed time.
- The distribution of required resources at the proper time, to the proper people, and in the appropriate manner.

In all of these things, Joseph proved to be a most excellent and detailed type of the Lord Jesus Himself. His exemplary life also confirms that being given a work from God involves infinitely more than an exalted position and personal advantage. It also involves faithfulness, giving the proper glory to the one making the assignment, maintaining moral and spiritual integrity, and being quick to recognize the appropriate response, and then execute it. All of these varied responsibilities are accentuated and made possible by faith.

However, when religion becomes codified and institutionalized, these things are all blurred, and “sinful flesh” is given the advantage. You might say that it is always wrong to institutionalize what God has personalized. It is equally never appropriate to seek to gain personal advantage from something that has been expressly designed to bring glory to God and sustain His initiatives. Over the years, I have witnessed a near-total obscuring of these things. That, among many other things, is what makes spiritual Babylon so damning. It robs God of His glory, gives the advantage to the devil, and corrupts the minds of men. Those are ultimate disadvantages!

THERE CAME A DEARTH

“ 11 Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan, and great affliction: and our fathers found no sustenance.”

Confirming that a word purporting to be from God is of no value if it does not come to pass, a time of famine came, just as Joseph said. He was a true prophet.

THERE CAME A GREAT DEARTH

“Now there came a dearth over all the land of Egypt and Chanaan . . .” Other versions read, “Now a famine came,” NASB “a famine struck ,” NIV “there came a famine throughout ,” “there was no food to be had ,” BBE “a famine developed ,” LIVING “the whole land of Egypt and the land of Canaan became dry, so that crops couldn’t grow there ” IE and “a famine spread all over .” WILLIAMS

The word “dearth” means “deprivation of food, hunger, the failure of grain harvests, famine,” FRIBERG and “a widespread lack of food over a considerable period of time, resulting in hunger for many people.” LIDDELL-SCOTT

Genesis refers to this period as “seven years of dearth” (Gen 41:54). It is also written that it was “in all lands” (Gen 41:56), that “all the land was famished” (Gen 41:55), and that “the famine was over all the face of the earth ” (Gen 41:56). As the famine extended itself, it “was sore” [severe] “in all the land ” (Gen 43:1). During the famine there was “neither earing nor harvest,” or plowing or harvesting. That is, the fields were not planted, cultivated, or reaped (Gen 45:6). The famine is said to have affected “all counties” (Gen 41:57).

The Psalmist accounts for this very famine: “Moreover HE called for a famine upon the land: HE brake the whole staff of bread” (Psa 105:16). When Joseph prophesied of the famine he told Pharaoh that God was showing him “what HE is about to do” (Gen 41:25,28). This was not a singular incident of such a work from God. In the days of the prophet Elisha God also “called for a famine” – and it was also for “seven years” (2 Kgs 8:1).

Simplistic Theology

It is not good for men to adopt overly simplistic and intellectually inferior views of God. For some, God is seen as never generating harm, affliction, or other such things. Such views are entertained even though a clear record has been given of God sending a world-destroying flood (2 Pet 2:5), and burning up multiple cities that were densely populated (Gen 13:10; Lk 17:29). This is not to mention the Lord plaguing Pharaoh and his house in the days of Abraham (Gen 12:17), making plagues and sicknesses come upon wayward Israel (Deut 28:59; 29:22), sending poisonous snakes among the people (Num 21:6), and sending pestilences upon Israel (1 Chron 21:14).

Those, therefore, who affirm that nothing grievous comes from the Lord, are wholly wrong. They are also intellectually and spiritually dishonest, for the Lord has revealed too much on this matter to warrant any ignorance concerning it. God Himself challenges such sophists: “shall there be evil in a city, and the LORD hath not done it?” (Amos 3:6). Again the Lord declares, “I form the light and create darkness, I make peace and create calamity ; I, the LORD, do all these things” NKJV (Isa 45:7). Rather than such things never coming from God, they are never generated independently of Him. Satan cannot will calamity, trouble, and sorrow into existence. As wicked and diabolical as he is, he cannot operate independently of God. Technically speaking, he is not engaged in a struggle with God, for God cannot be challenged, by any created personalities. The very concept of God requires this postulate. When, for example, Satan was expelled from heaven, it was accomplished by angels, though mandated by Deity (Rev 12:7-9). When he is depicted as being thrown into the bottomless pit, or being locked up, it is an angel that does it (Rev 20:1-3).

Distorted views of God are lethal to the soul, for they constrain people to speak and live foolishly – without being conscious of facts of the matter.

AND GREAT AFFLICTION

There really is no such thing as a pleasant and convenient famine, or one in which men do not suffer. This is because a famine – particularly in this case – becomes the context in which the Lord Himself works for His own glory.

“ . . . and great affliction . . . ” Other versions read, “great trouble ,” NKJV “great affliction with it ,” NASB “bring great suffering ,” NIV “and great distress ,” DARBY “There was great misery ,” NLT “great tribulation ,” YLT and “This made people suffer miserably .” IE

There really is no such thing as a pleasant and convenient famine, or one in which men do not suffer. This is because a famine – particularly in this case – becomes the context in which the Lord Himself works for His own glory.

Words describing the affliction experienced during this famine include the following:

- “And when all the land of Egypt was famished, the people cried to Pharaoh for bread” (Gen 41:55).

- “And all countries came into Egypt to Joseph for to buy corn; because that the famine was so sore in all lands” (Gen 41:57).

- “Now when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another? And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die ” (Gen 42:1-2).

- “. . . all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth” (Gen 47:15).

- “Wherefore shall we die before thine eyes, both we and our land? buy us and our land for bread, and we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh: and give us seed, that we may live, and not die, that the land be not desolate ” (Gen 47:19).

- “Moreover He called for a famine upon the land: he brake the whole staff of bread” (Psa 105:16).

We are apparently spared many of the details of the suffering attending this famine. From other accounts, we do know that famines can be so grievous that people resort to cannibalism, even eating their own children (Deut 28:53; 2 Kgs 6:28).

When, therefore, the text states, “and great affliction,” we may be sure that this was not an overstatement of the situation, or an exaggeration.

OUR FATHERS FOUND NO SUSTENANCE

“. . . and our fathers found no sustenance.” Other versions read, “our fathers could find no food,” NASB “our fathers were not able to get food,” BBE “our fathers lacked food,” MRD “our ancestors could find nothing to eat,” NJB “our ancestors ran out of food,” NLT their food was gone,” LIVING “our fathers could not find the simplest food,” WILLIAMS and “our forefathers could find no fodder [for the cattle] or vegetable sustenance [for their households].” AMPLIFIED

In this a Kingdom principle is seen. Men will not seek “the true riches” until they see the poverty of what the world has to offer. As long as the world is perceived as a valid resource, Divine benefits will not be sought with any fervency or consistency.

Although “all lands” were impacted by the famine, the Scriptures focus on Egypt and Canaan.

- “And there was no bread in all the land; for the famine was very sore, so that the land of Egypt and all the land of Canaan fainted by reason of the famine” (Gen 47:13).

- “And Joseph gathered up all the money that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan , for the corn which they bought: and Joseph brought the money into Pharaoh's house” (Gen 47:14)

- “And when money failed in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan , all the Egyptians came unto Joseph, and said, Give us bread: for why should we die in thy presence? for the money faileth” (Gen 47:15).

The reason for this focus ought to be plain. These were the two countries in which Abraham’s seed were found at the time. Jacob and sixty-six of his family were in Canaan (Gen 46:26), and Joseph and his sons were in Egypt (Gen 46:27). All other nations, regardless of the grief experienced in them because of the famine, were incidental. The whole world was being governed by God in view of Abraham’s seed. That, of course, is why all things are worked together for the good of those who love God and are the called according to His purpose (Rom 8:28). Such purposeful working would not be possible if God was not governing the affairs of men.

The real issue here was the purposed expansion of Abraham's seed. That would require them multiplying in another land until they were of sufficient size to occupy the land of promise. In fact, even when they had grown to a significant size, and entered the promised land, God enabled them to take the land a little at a time, lest it be overrun with wild beasts because of the relative fewness of Israel. Therefore, before they entered into the land, Moses told them, "And the LORD thy God will put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee" (Deut 7:22). Seven of the nations that were occupying the land were larger than Israel (Deut 7:1). Yet, Israel was to drive them out and occupy their place. They would therefore have to grow in number to fully occupy the land. These conditions are precisely why all of the things mentioned in our text took place – the selling of Joseph into Egypt, his exaltation, and the famine. It was a set of Divinely orchestrated circumstances to get the fledgling band of Israelites – seventy in number from the standpoint of Joseph, and seventy-five from the viewpoint of the division of the land – where they would multiply until there were sufficient Israelites to manage the land of promise.

THE FOOD RAN OUT

During the famine, all of the food resources ran out – in both Egypt and Canaan. They ran out in Egypt in order to prepare the way for the exaltation of Joseph, who would give preference to the Hebrews. They ran out in Canaan in order that they might eventually migrate into Egypt where their appointed multiplication would take place.

Even though the people in both Egypt and Canaan still had some money with which they could buy grain, the money of those in Canaan meant nothing in their own land, for money cannot create resources. Now, they must use their money to buy corn, even until their money runs out. The money of the Egyptians ran out in order that they might become Pharaoh's servants, and thus be congenial toward Israel while they were multiplying. The money ran out in for the Israelites in order that they might be sustained in Egypt by Joseph while they were multiplying.

Here we note that purchasing corn in Egypt never entered the minds of Abraham's seed UNTIL all of their corn was consumed. In this a Kingdom principle is seen. Men will not seek "the true riches" until they see the poverty of what the world has to offer. As long as the world is perceived as a valid resource, Divine benefits will not be sought with any fervency or consistency.

JACOB HEARD THERE WAS CORN IN EGYPT

" 12 But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first."

Here we will see how the Lord gives supplies to His people. He brings them within their reach, or makes them aware of the supplies. Then, they must gather them in. This is how the Lord provides for the animal kingdom. Thus the Psalmist wrote, "So is this great and wide sea, wherein are things creeping innumerable, both small and great beasts . There go the ships: there is that leviathan, whom thou hast made to play therein. These wait all upon thee; that thou mayest give them their meat in due season. That thou givest them they gather: thou openest thine hand, they are filled with good" (Psa 104:25-28). Thus from the small to the great of the animal kingdom, all are dependent upon the Lord for their sustenance, and they wait for His provisions. God faithfully delivers the supplies, but they must gather them, and often with considerable effort.

This principle was lived out as Israel journeyed through the wilderness. They were wholly dependent upon the Lord for their sustenance, and He delivered it to them every day in the form of manna. However, they had to go out and gather it, bringing it into their home where it could be prepared (Ex 16:15-18).

The parallel in spiritual life is obvious. Divine provisions for the heart, and soul, and mind are provided. But they must be gathered with deliberation and intention. The person who does not extend himself to appropriate what God has provided will eventually succumb.

WHEN JACOB HEARD

“But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt . . .” Other versions read, “heard that there was grain in Egypt,” NKJV “hearing that there was grain in Egypt,” BBE “having heard of there being corn in Egypt,” DARBY “heard that Egypt had food,” GWN “heard that there were supplies in Egypt,” NJB “heard that there was still grain in Egypt,” LIVING “heard that there was wheat in Egypt,” IE and “heard that there was wheat to be had.” WEYMOUTH

Jacob was alert. Although there was a grievous famine all around him, and supplies were dwindling, he did not despair. He was listening for some good word, and finally he heard it: “there was corn in Egypt.” The text does not mean that he merely heard the Egyptians had food, but that there was food in Egypt that he could appropriate for his family – there was available food.

In this a Kingdom principle is seen. Men will not seek “the true riches” until they see the poverty of what the world has to offer. As long as the world is perceived as a valid resource, Divine benefits will not be sought with any fervency or consistency.

The historical account to which Stephen refers is found in Genesis. “Now when Jacob saw that there was corn in Egypt, Jacob said unto his sons, Why do ye look one upon another? And he said, Behold, I have heard that there is corn in Egypt: get you down thither, and buy for us from thence; that we may live, and not die ” (Gen 42:1-2).

We see in this how faith keeps hope alive, so that the heart remains alert and able to detect any door opened by the Sovereign God. It is one thing for the body to grow faint, but it is quite another thing for the human spirit to do so. Thus Solomon wrote, “The spirit of a man will sustain his infirmity; but a wounded spirit who can bear?” (Prov 18:14). Faith gives the individual the advantage during such occasions, so that a word of hope can be heard and appropriate action taken.

God’s Way Not Man’s Way

God’s ways and thoughts are not like those of mere men. Thus God said to wayward Israel, “For My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways My ways, saith the LORD” (Isa 55:8). When considering the natural man, so far as the heavens are concerned, “The way of man is froward and strange” (Prov 21:8). Further, Jeremiah well said, “O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps” (Jer 10:23).

All of this is confirmed in the text before us. The manner in which God provided for Jacob and his family does not conform to man’s way of doing things. This is not how worldly wisdom would have done it. Mere men would have had the corn in Canaan – perhaps caused a bumper crop there, so corn could have been stored there as it was in Egypt. However, heaven’s purpose was not merely to sustain the people, but to prepare them for their inheritance. That is still the revealed heavenly agenda.

Hearing Before the Need Arises

In this a Kingdom principle is seen. Men will not seek “the true riches” until they see the poverty of what the world has to offer. As long as the world is perceived as a valid resource, Divine benefits will not be sought with any fervency or consistency.

The Individual Is Not The Main Thing

We can also see in this record that God did not cater to the individual needs. He rather harmonized His works with His purpose. Because of this, those who were involved in that purpose received the primary advantage.

The Supply Was Located Elsewhere

It also ought to be noted that the supply of food was positioned away from where Jacob and his progeny found themselves. The food was in Egypt, and they were in Canaan.

My Own Experience

I have seen some of these principles played out in my own experience. I had identified myself with a people whose vision and scope of spiritual understanding was very limited. My early ministry was among a people who spoke more about the great commission than about Jesus. The autonomy of the local congregation and the authority of the elders ranked higher than the gift of the Holy Spirit and everlasting consolation and good hope. Our literature rarely contained any information about an eternal inheritance, being conformed to the image of God's Son, or the nature of the New Covenant. A virtual theological desert was created in which the nourishing fruit of justification, sanctification, a living hope, and a robust faith were rarely, if ever, pointed out. There were vast segments of Scripture that were regularly neglected. Such things as God's eternal purpose, election, and His government over all were not the subjects of exposition. Every serious believer within this group was aware of the inward struggle of the flesh and Spirit, but I knew of no one who talked about it or understood it. Few people had any idea concerning the purging of the conscience, the strengthening of the inner man, or Christ dwelling in our hearts by faith. These were simply not things that were subjects of preaching or exposition. Such things as Divine guidance, enablement, and sustenance were also neglected.

There was very little for the heart. Few things were said that could be pondered. As a result, things became rather monotonous. I was slowly starving to death, but did not recognize the symptoms of it. All of this was happening while I was ranked among the more zealous and informed of the group.

In the midst these experiences, I heard that there was, so to speak, corn in the Egypt of my religious world. There were certain religious persuasions that we had been told to avoid, for they were denominational in nature, and could very well overthrow our faith. And, indeed, much of this was true. However, it was not the whole truth. Devoting myself to the reading of spiritual men of the past, I found things that were nourishing to my soul. My faith was strengthened when I read expositions of God's absolute control over the affairs of men. My heart leaped for joy when I was made aware of the cleansing of the conscience, freedom from condemnation even though I was experiencing inward struggle, and the ministry of the Holy Spirit in the subduing of the flesh. When I saw that the work of the Lord is driven by the will of the Lord, and that the Lord finished what He started, hope was awakened, and comfort came to stay.

I had found corn in Egypt – in the very place I had avoided. Oh, I knew I could not stay in Egypt – just as surely as Jacob and his family could not remain there. But God had arranged for a food supply for His people that transcended their circumstances. I know it was exceedingly difficult to survive the assaults of the devil while limiting my spiritual diet to the great commission, the plan of salvation, baptism, the Lord's Supper, and church government. That was surely corn, but it was not the whole supply. So, when I heard of more food, I did like Jacob, and determined to obtain some of it. I had the same reasons Jacob had – “that we may live and not die.”

Like Jacob, I was not limited to Egypt. My life would not be continually sustained by that means. I planted some of the corn I obtained, and eventually received a crop of my own. The seed I had received in the institution did not grow plenteous or nourishing crops. How I thank God that He got the word through to me that there was more food than what existed in my religious homeland!

HE SENT OUR FATHERS FIRST

“ . . . he sent out our fathers first.” Other versions read, “he sent out fathers there the first time,” NASB “he sent our fathers on their first visit,” NIV “he sent our ancestors there on their first visit,” NRSV “so he sent his sons – our ancestors– to buy some ,” NLT “So he sent our ancestors there. (This was their first trip to Egypt,” IE “he sent our forefathers into Egypt; that was the first time,” WEYMOUTH “sent our forefathers on their first visit down there,” WILLIAMS “he sent forth our forefathers [to go there on their] first trip ,” AMPLIFIED and “Egypt he sent our forefathers out of their own country for the first time .” PHILLIPS

By saying Jacob sent the fathers [his sons], “first,” the text means he sent them for the first time . It does not mean he sent them first, planning to go there later himself. In fact, he had no plans of moving there, or even going there. His sole purpose was to obtain food so they would not die. However, God was at work in all of this, fulfilling the dreams that had been given to Joseph when he was seventeen (Gen 37:5-10), providing for the small but elect nation of Israel (Gen 45:5), and orchestrating history so that a great body of people would be delivered by His high hand from Egypt (Gen 45:7). Of course, none of these things would be known if they had not been revealed by the Lord. Providence cannot be detected, analyzed, or diagnosed by human wisdom or logic.

The account of this first trip is recorded in Genesis 42:3-38. It proved to be a very eventful journey, as we might expect. The following events took place at that time.

- Ten brothers went down to Egypt, leaving Benjamin, the youngest brother, at home (Gen 42:3-4).
- When the brothers came to buy corn in Egypt, Joseph was the governor over the land, although they did not know it. Fulfilling the dreams of Joseph, they bowed down before him (Gen 42:6).
- Upon seeing them, Joseph recognized them, but concealed his identity from them, and spoke harshly to them, asking why they had come. The brothers did not recognize him (Gen 42:7-8).

In this, we see something of the Divine manner of reviewing history. Purposes and objectives are expounded, and are not mere human experience. If the purpose of God was not being revealed in this entire scenario, it would not have been mentioned.

Joseph, now about twenty-two years later, recalled the dreams he had. Testing them, he then charged them with being spies. When they remonstrated, saying that they had come to buy corn, and were all one man’s sons, he again charged them with being spies, saying they had come to see if the land was unprotected (Gen 42:9-14).

- Joseph then told them the only way they could preserve their lives was to bring their younger brother, Benjamin, back to Egypt. He then put them together in prison to think about all of this (Gen 42:15-17).

The Egyptian steward replied, “Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: I had your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them.” He then brought them into Joseph’s house, gave them water, washed their feet, and fed their animals

On the third day, Joseph came to them and confessed he feared God. Yet, if they did not bring their younger brother to him, they would all die (Gen 42:18-20).

- The brothers then discussed among themselves how that this had come upon them because of their treatment of Joseph when they sold him. They saw the anguish of his soul, and heard him plead with them, yet they hardened their hearts against him. Reuben then reminded them that at that time he had told them not to sin against Joseph, yet they would not listen to him. At this time, they did not recognize Joseph, and were unaware that he was understanding everything they said. Previously, he had spoken to them through an interpreter (Gen 42:21-23).

- Joseph turned away from them and wept. He then returned to them and took Simeon and bound him before their eyes, setting him forth as a hostage until they returned with Benjamin (Gen 42:24).

- Joseph then commanded his servants to fill their sacks with corn, to restore to every man the money paid for the corn, and to give them extra provisions for the trip home. The remaining brothers then returned home (Gen 42:25-26).

- When they stopped along the way home, one of them opened his sack to give his donkey some food. When he did so, he saw his money in the mouth of the sack. When he told his brothers, they all were afraid and said, “What is this that God hath done unto us?” (Gen 42:27-28).

- When they arrived home, they told their father Jacob everything that had happened to them, and how the ruler had charged them with being spies, and told them to return the next time with their younger brother. They then emptied their sacks, and discovered that “every man’s bundle of money was in his sack.” They were all afraid (Gen 42:29-35).

- Jacob then erupted in a lament: “Me have ye bereaved of my children: Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and ye will take Benjamin away: all these things are against me .” Reuben stepped forward and said Jacob could kill his two sons if he did not bring back Benjamin. Jacob said he would not consent to the matter for fear that Benjamin would be harmed along the way (Gen 42:36).

Stephen’s Summation

Stephen summarized all of those things with the words, “But when Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent out our fathers first” (Acts 7:12) – sixteen words! In this, we see something of the Divine manner of reviewing history. Purposes and objectives are expounded, and are not mere human experience. If the purpose of God was not being revealed in this entire scenario, it would not have been mentioned.

In other words, if God cannot be seen in a thing, there really is no purpose for talking about it. Such talk is like men expecting to fly by flapping their arms. If men can see this, it will revolutionize the giving of personal testimonies and reports of religious activity.

THE SECOND TRIP TO EGYPT

“ 13a And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren . . .” Other versions read, “On the second visit Joseph made himself known to his brothers,” NASB “On their second visit Joseph told his brothers who he was,” NIV “And the second time his brothers had a meeting with Joseph,” BBE “The second time, Yosef revealed his identity to his brothers,” CJB “The second time, Joseph was revealed to his brothers,” CSB “And at the second time, Joseph was known by his brethren,” DARBY “And at the second time , Joseph was known by his brethren,” DOUAY and “Then they went there a second time. On this visit, Joseph told his brothers who he was .” IE

As Stephen continues, he is very precise, revealing that he had a firm grasp of the facts in the case. We learn from this that it is essential that when we speak about Scriptural records we should have our facts straight. Truth is never carried in bags that are filled with the holes of ignorance.

The record of this “second” visit is found in Genesis 43:1-45:18. The following took place at that time.

- As the famine increased, Jacob finally consumed all of the corn they had purchased in Egypt. He then told his sons to return to Egypt and “buy us a little food” (Gen 43:1-2).

- Judah then reminded Jacob that the ruler of the land of Egypt had told them to return with their younger brother. He then said if Jacob sent Benjamin with them, they would go. But if he refused to send him, they would not go. After some extended reasoning, Judah told Jacob to send Benjamin with them, and he would be surety for him. He also said they should hurry and obtain supplies so they and their little ones could live (Gen 43:3-10).

- Jacob consents to the arrangement, saying, “If it must be so now, do this; take of the best fruits in the land in your vessels, and carry down the man a present, a little balm, and a little honey, spices, and myrrh, nuts, and almonds: and take double money in your hand; and the money that was brought again in the mouth of your sacks, carry it again in your hand; peradventure it was an oversight: Take also your brother, and arise, go again unto the man: and God Almighty give you mercy before the man, that he may send away your other brother, and Benjamin. If I be bereaved of my children, I am bereaved” (Gen 43:11-14).

A spiritual environment in which advancement in the faith is not likely is one in which spiritual resources continue to be diminished until at last a spiritual famine takes place, and no food can be found.

When the brothers arrived in Egypt and stood before Joseph, he saw Benjamin with them. He commanded the ruler of his house to bring the men to his own house, and prepare a special meal for them all. The man did so, bringing the brothers to Joseph’s house (Gen 43:15-17).

- When they all arrived, the men were all afraid, reasoning that they were being brought there because of the money that was in their sacks. They reasoned that the ruler was going to make slaves of them. They then approached the steward of Joseph’s house, speaking with him at the door. They told him they had discovered their money in their sacks on the first trip, and had brought it back, together with additional money for more food. The Egyptian steward replied, “Peace be to you, fear not: your God, and the God of your father, hath given you treasure in your sacks: I had your money. And he brought Simeon out unto them.” He then brought them into Joseph’s house, gave them water, washed their feet, and fed their animals (Gen 43:23-24).

- The brothers then prepared the gifts they had brought for presentation to Joseph, “for they heard that they should eat bread there.” When Joseph came home, they brought their gifts to him and “bowed themselves to him to the earth.” Joseph then asked them concerning their welfare inquiring if their father was still alive. The brothers replied that he was still alive and in good health, and then bowed down their heads and prostrated themselves before Joseph (Gen 43:26).

- Joseph then saw his younger brother Benjamin and said to him, “God be gracious unto thee, my son.” No longer able to contain himself, Joseph sought a place where he could weep privately. After entering his chamber and weeping, he washed his face and went out to his brothers, controlling his emotions. He then commanded them to put the food on the table. Joseph ate by himself, and his brothers ate by themselves. As well, the Egyptians ate by themselves because it was considered an abomination for the Egyptians to eat “with the Hebrews” (Gen 43:27-32)

- The brothers all sat in order, the firstborn being first, and the younger being last, with the men all looking at one another in astonishment. Special portions of food were then sent to the brothers, with Benjamin receiving five times more than anyone else. So they feasted and drank freely with Joseph (Gen 43:33-34).

- Joseph then commanded the steward of the house to fill the men’s sacks with food, “as much as the could carry,” putting “every man’s money in his sack’s mouth.” Additionally, Joseph told the steward to put his own “silver cup in the sack’s mouth of the youngest,” together with his “corn money.” The men were then sent away early the next morning, as soon as it was light (Gen 44:1-3).

- As soon as the men had left, Joseph called his steward and told him to follow the men. When he caught up with them, he was to say to them, “Wherefore have ye rewarded evil for good? Is not this it in which my lord drinketh, and whereby indeed he divineth? ye have done evil in so doing” (Gen 44:5). The steward caught up with the brothers, did as he was told, and found the cup in Benjamin’s sack. The brothers tore their clothes in grief, got on their donkeys, and returned to the city (Gen 44:4-12).

- Upon return to Joseph’s house, they found him there and fell down before him. Joseph asked, “What deed is this that ye have done? wot ye not that such a man as I can certainly divine?” Judah quickly responded, asking Joseph what they could do to clear themselves. Then he confessed, “God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants; behold, we are my lord’s servants, both we and he also with whom the cup is found.” (Gen 44:15). Joseph said he could not receive them all as servants, declaring that only the one who had the cup – Benjamin – would be his servant. (Gen 44:16-17).

- Judah then came close and told Joseph of how their father was an old man, and Benjamin was the child of his old age, was the last child of his mother, and that his father loved him dearly. If the lad left his father, Judah said, the father would die. He then told of Jacob’s consent to let Benjamin go, asking that he be sent back to his father, and Judah become servant to Joseph (Gen 44:18-34). He pled earnestly and effectively.

- It was at this point that Joseph could no longer restrain himself. He said everyone was to be removed from the room except he and his brothers. It was then that he wept aloud, so that the Egyptians heard him. He then told his brothers, “I am Joseph, doth my father yet live?” His brothers could not answer him, for they were afraid. Joseph then asked them to come close, and he said, “I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt . Now therefore be not grieved, nor angry with yourselves, that ye sold me hither: for God did send me before you to preserve life . . . And God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth, and to save your lives by a great deliverance . So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God: and He hath made me a father to Pharaoh, and lord of all his house, and a ruler throughout all the land of Egypt ” (Gen 45:4-8).

Stephen summed up all of those remarkable details with these words: “And at the second time Joseph was made known to his brethren . . .” – twelve words! Joseph “was made known” in such a manner as to remind the brothers of what they had done. The revelation also glorified God because Joseph knew what had actually happened. This was all the Lord’s doing, and it was marvelous in Joseph’s eyes.

He rather used a young man who would maintain his integrity in the foreign land, and give God the glory for what was done. This is how God chose to sustain His people – not by giving them everything, but by taking it from them, in order that He might sustain them.

It also ought to be noted that God used Joseph, not Reuben the firstborn. He did not use Judah, although he had more wisdom than most of the others. He rather used a young man who would maintain his integrity in the foreign land, and give God the glory for what was done. This is how God chose to sustain His people – not by giving them everything, but by taking it from them, in order that He might sustain them.

A PRINCIPLE REVEALED

There is a Kingdom principle revealed in this text. It might be called “the principle of the second time.” Joseph was made known to his brethren “the second time” – the second time they were exposed to him. This principle was enunciated by the Psalmist: “God hath spoken once; twice have I heard this; that power belongeth unto God” (Psa 62:11). The second time is the truth of the saying he had heard registering upon his spirit.

- Referring to this principle Peter wrote, “We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts ” (2 Pet 1:19). The dawning of the day and the rising of the Day Star in the heart is “the second time” in spiritual experience. It is the time when the magnitude of the Gospel dawns upon the soul, and confidence grows into maturity.

- This might also be viewed as the time when one becomes conscious of “the witness in himself” (1 John 5:10),

- This is also when the Spirit is said to bear witness with our Spirit “that we are the children of God” (Rom 8:16).

- From yet another perspective, this is the time when the “eyes of our understanding” are enlightened to “know what is the hope of His calling, and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints, and what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power” (Eph 1:18-19).

- It is when we are enabled to “comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God” (Eph 3:18-19).

- This is also described as being “filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; that ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God; strengthened with all might, according to His glorious power, unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness” (Col 1:9-11).

One of the great penalties for not growing in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (2 Pet 3:18), is that “the second time” never occurs. Confidence never blooms in the heart, which makes retrogression inevitable. The necessity of the confidence that comes with spiritual maturity is confirmed by a most arresting word that is delivered in the book of Hebrews. “But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end ” (Heb 3:6).

It is possible for a person to never be hungry and thirsty enough for the day to dawn. Such people expend all of their energies on things that bring no spiritual advantage. When “the evil day” comes, and the devil assaults them with all manner of temptation, they simply collapse, because they have no spiritual power. They have not been able to put on the whole armor of God, because they have lived without realizing there is such a provision. Such a state is like Jacob living in a famine without knowing there was corn in Egypt. A spiritual environment in which advancement in the faith is not likely is one in which spiritual resources continue to be diminished until at last a spiritual famine takes place, and no food can be found. That would be like Jacob depleting his supply of corn, and never finding out there was a supply in Egypt that could be obtained. The frequency of such a spiritual condition is mind-boggling.

It is possible for a person to never be hungry and thirsty enough for the day to dawn. Such people expend all of their energies on things that bring no spiritual advantage. When “the evil day” comes, and the devil assaults them with all manner of temptation, they simply collapse, because they have no spiritual power.

JOSEPH’S KINDRED WERE MADE KNOWN TO PHARAOH

“ 13b . . . and Joseph's kindred was made known unto Pharaoh.” Other versions read, “ Joseph's family became known to the Pharaoh,” NKJV “Joseph's family was disclosed to Pharaoh,” NASB “ Pharaoh learned about Joseph's family,” NIV “ Joseph's race became manifest to Pharaoh,” ASV “ Pharaoh had knowledge of Joseph's family,” BBE “Pharaoh came to know his origin ,” NJB “and they [his brothers] were introduced to Pharaoh,” NLT “Pharaoh was informed of Joseph's parentage ,” WEYMOUTH “thus Joseph's race was revealed to Pharaoh ,” WILLIAMS “the family of Joseph became known to Pharaoh and his origin and race ,” AMPLIFIED and “and his ancestry became plain to Pharaoh.” PHILLIPS

In order for the Israelites to be sustained in Egypt, where their appointed multiplication would take place, it was necessary that Pharaoh be favorably inclined to them. The account of Pharaoh's introduction to Joseph's brethren is recorded in Genesis.

• “And the fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come: and it pleased Pharaoh well , and his servants. And Pharaoh said unto Joseph , Say unto thy brethren, This do ye; lade your beasts, and go, get you unto the land of Canaan; and take your father and your households, and come unto me : and I will give you the good of the land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land . Now thou art commanded, this do ye; take you wagons out of the land of Egypt for your little ones, and for your wives, and bring your father, and come. Also regard not your stuff; for the good of all the land of Egypt is yours ” (Gen 45:16-20).

In this case, the key association was being made with Joseph, not Abraham. Ordinarily, that was not the manner in which Jacob's progeny were considered. However, at this time, a man who was respected by Pharaoh was required. According to God's purpose, he sent Joseph into Egypt to be the one Pharaoh would favor. The purpose for this was not to establish a career for Joseph, but to provide for the sustenance of the race through whom the Messiah would come.

We are catching a glimpse of the Divine manner here, and how God brings glory to himself. Self-centered men see God as supplying everything they want, making life comfortable for them , and fulfilling all of their desires. In this case, the comfort of Joseph was not the point. Rather, the maintenance of the chosen race under impossible circumstances was the point. God would raise up a nation among a people who considered them an abomination – so much so, they would not even eat with them (Gen 43:32; 46:34).

This people would bring their flocks into Egypt, and they would be given the very best of the land – during a time of famine. The sophist would prefer that a blessing be poured out upon Canaan, and it become the best of the world. However, that did not happen until the people of God were occupying the land.

It is important to note that there is such a thing as associations that are blessed by God in order to the maintenance of His people. It is the principle of the earth helping the woman, that is declared in Revelation 12:16.

ANOTHER PRINCIPLE

In this text we see another precious principle – namely that of Jesus bringing us to the Father in order that we might obtain favor in his sight. Believers are to Jesus what Joseph's brethren were to him. They are brought to God for acceptance (1 Pet 3:18), like Joseph brought his brothers to Pharaoh for his acceptance. Because of Jesus, they receive the best of the spiritual land, like Joseph's brethren were given the best of the land of Egypt. They are also sustained by Him, and brought into the favor of God by Him.

JOSEPH CALLED FOR HIS FATHER AND ALL HIS KINDRED

“ 14 Then sent Joseph, and called his father Jacob to him, and all his kindred, threescore and fifteen souls.” Other versions read, “Then Joseph sent and called his father Jacob and all his relatives to him, seventy-five people,” NKJV “And Joseph sent word and invited Jacob his father and all his relatives to come to him, seventy-five persons in all,” NASB “After this, Joseph sent for his father Jacob and his whole family, seventy-five in all,” NIV “Then Joseph sent for Jacob his father and all his family, seventy-five persons,” BBE “and Joseph having sent, did call for his father Jacob, and all his kindred -- with seventy and five souls,” YLT “Then Joseph sent for his father Jacob and all his brothers' families to come to Egypt, seventy-five persons in all,” LIVING “Then Joseph sent some men to invite Jacob, his father, to come to Egypt. He also invited all of his relatives (75 persons altogether),” IE “Then Joseph sent and invited his father Jacob and all his family, numbering seventy-five persons, to come to him,” WEYMOUTH “and Joseph sent an invitation calling to himself Jacob his father and all his kindred, seventy-five persons in all,” AMPLIFIED and “Then Joseph sent and invited to come and live with him his father and all his kinsmen, seventy-five people in all.” PHILLIPS

The account of Joseph sending for his father and all his kindred is found Genesis 45:9-13. “Haste ye, and go up to my father, and say unto him, Thus saith thy son Joseph, God hath made me lord of all Egypt: come down unto me, tarry not: and thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, and thou shalt be near unto me, thou, and thy children, and thy children's children, and thy flocks, and thy herds, and all that thou hast: and there will I nourish thee; for yet there are five years of famine; lest thou, and thy household, and all that thou hast, come to poverty. And, behold, your eyes see, and the eyes of my brother Benjamin, that it is my mouth that speaketh unto you. And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen; and ye shall haste and bring down my father hither.”

At this point, Joseph speaks with the utmost confidence, even though the land of Goshen had not yet been assigned to Israel. It will not be until Jacob and his kindred arrive that the official assignment of the land will be made. However, as stated in Genesis 45:17-20, Pharaoh himself issued a personal invitation to the Israelites, underwriting the entire trip from Canaan to Egypt.

SEVENTY-FIVE SOULS

Stephen states that seventy-five souls came into Egypt. This appears to be a discrepancy to the sophist, for elsewhere the Scriptures clearly say there were seventy souls.

- “And the sons of Joseph, which were born him in Egypt, were two souls: all the souls of the house of Jacob, which came into Egypt, were threescore and ten ” (Gen 46:27).
- “And all the souls that came out of the loins of Jacob were seventy souls : for Joseph was in Egypt already” (Ex 1:5).
- “ Thy fathers went down into Egypt with threescore and ten persons ; and now the LORD thy God hath made thee as the stars of heaven for multitude” (Deut 10:22).

Stephen is quoting from the Septuagint version (Gen 46:27 and Exodus 1:5), which reads “seventy-five” instead of “seventy.” The Septuagint Version is the Hebrew Scriptures translated into Greek. “And the sons of Joseph, who were born to him in the land of Egypt, were nine souls; all the souls of the house of Jacob who came with Joseph into Egypt, were seventy-five souls ” (Gen 46:27, LXX, SEPTUAGINT). “But Joseph was in Egypt. And all the souls born of Jacob were seventy-five ” (Ex 1:5, LXX SEPTUAGINT). However, in the Septuagint version, the Deuteronomy text does read ”seventy.” “With seventy souls your fathers went down into Egypt; but the Lord thy God has made thee as the stars of heaven in multitude” (Deut 10:22, LXX SEPTUAGINT). How do we account for this difference – or is it even important that we do account for it?

There is a precise reason for the difference, and, from the perspective of Scripture, there is no contradiction in the differing numbers. Stephen is quoting a figure that reflects the number of people for whom the distribution of Canaan was determined. While it is a technical point, it is helpful to know the reasoning reflected in the Septuagint. The number “seventy” reflects the genealogy with Joseph in mind. The number “seventy-five” reflects it from the standpoint of Joseph’s sons, Ephraim and Manasseh.

The “names” of the sons of Ephraim and Manasseh are recorded in 1Chronicles 7:14-21. Their names were Ashriel, Machir, Zelophehad, Peresh, sons of Manasseh; and Shuthelah, son of Ephraim. In the First Chronicles text, the inheritance was reckoned upon the basis of Joseph’s inheritance being doubled, and divided between the sons born to him in Egypt – Ephraim and Manasseh. Thus, when coming to Joseph, the inheritance was reckoned from the sons begotten by his sons, rather than the ones begotten by Jacob. The extensive genealogy of this section (2 Chron 2:1-12:15) explains who inherited the land of Canaan. When recounting the offspring of Reuben, the firstborn son of Jacob, a special explanation was given. “Now the sons of Reuben the firstborn of Israel, (for he was the firstborn; but, forasmuch as he defiled his father’s bed, his birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph the son of Israel : and the genealogy is not to be reckoned after the birthright. For Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler; but the birthright was Joseph’s)” (1 Chron 5:1-2). The genealogy, reckoned by the strongest, commenced with Judah (1 Chron 2:3). Joseph is not mentioned as the progenitor of sons, but his two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, are listed instead (7:14-21). Their sons totaled five, and are added to the seventy, accounting for Stephen’s record of the people entering into the land of Canaan. All of them dwelt in Egypt, but none of them came out of it.

Because Stephen is emphasizing the land of Israel itself, he mentions the Septuagint which gives a number reflecting the inheritance of the land rather than the direct offspring of Jacob. While this is not a point that merits contention and extended debate, it is important to see that sound reasoning is behind it all. Skeptics are never right in questioning the integrity of Scripture, or causing men to doubt its accuracy. We owe such men absolutely no respect.

JACOB AND OUR FATHERS WENT DOWN INTO EGYPT AND DIED

“ 15 So Jacob went down into Egypt, and died, he, and our fathers.” Other versions read, “And Jacob went down to Egypt and there passed away , he and our fathers,” NASB “Then Jacob went down to Egypt, where he and our fathers died ,” NIV “so Jacob went down to Egypt. He himself died there as well as our ancestors ,” NRSV “And Jacob went down to Egypt, and came to his end there , and so did our fathers,” BBE “Jacob went down to Egypt. He and our forefathers died there,” CSB “So Jacob came to Egypt, where he died, and all his sons ,” LIVING “And Jacob went down into Egypt, where he himself died, as did [also] our forefathers ,” AMPLIFIED and “So Jacob came down to Egypt and both he and our fathers ended their days there .” PHILLIPS

It was a glad day for Jacob, to know his son was alive and calling for him. He was skeptical at first, doubtful that he had really been told the truth. However, when he heard the report of Joseph’s words and saw the evidence of blessing, his heart was refreshed.

The Scriptures record Jacob and his clan going down into Egypt, taking advantage of the wagons that Pharaoh sent for their transport. “And Jacob rose up from Beersheba: and the sons of Israel carried Jacob their father, and their little ones, and their wives, in the wagons which Pharaoh had sent to carry him ” (Gen 46:5). However, before Jacob went down into Egypt, God spoke to him in visions of the night. The record of the visitation is in Genesis 46:2-4, and is a wonderful report of Divine commitment. “And God spake unto Israel in the visions of the night, and said, Jacob, Jacob . And he said, Here am I. And He said, I am God , the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation : I will go down with thee into Egypt ; and I will also surely bring thee up again: and Joseph shall put his hand upon thine eyes ” (Gen 46:2-4).

It was a glad day for Jacob, to know his son was alive and calling for him. He was skeptical at first, doubtful that he had really been told the truth. However, when he heard the report of Joseph’s words and saw the evidence of blessing, his heart was refreshed. Here is how the Scriptures state the case. “And they told him all the words of Joseph, which he had said unto them: and when he saw the wagons which Joseph had sent to carry him , the spirit of Jacob their father revived” (Gen 45:27).

Once they arrived in Egypt, Joseph prompted them on what to say when Pharaoh asked about their occupation. He had already promised them the land of Goshen, now he would take measures to ensure that is where they would live. “And Joseph said unto his brethren, and unto his father's house, I will go up, and show Pharaoh , and say unto him, My brethren, and my father's house, which were in the land of Canaan, are come unto me; and the men are shepherds, for their trade hath been to feed cattle; and they have brought their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have. And it shall come to pass, when Pharaoh shall call you, and shall say, What is your occupation? That ye shall say, Thy servants' trade hath been about cattle from our youth even until now, both we, and also our fathers: that ye may dwell in the land of Goshen ; for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians” (Gen 46:31-34).

Having duly instructed his father and brethren, Joseph now told Pharaoh of their presence, and prepared to carry out the plan he had outlined. “Then Joseph came and told Pharaoh , and said, My father and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, are come out of the land of Canaan; and, behold, they are in the land of Goshen. And he took some of his brethren, even five men, and presented them unto Pharaoh . And Pharaoh said unto his brethren, What is your occupation? And they said unto Pharaoh, Thy servants are shepherds, both we, and also our fathers. They said moreover unto Pharaoh, For to sojourn in the land are we come; for thy servants have no pasture for their flocks; for the famine is sore in the land of Canaan: now therefore, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the land of Goshen . And Pharaoh spake unto Joseph, saying, Thy father and thy brethren are come unto thee: The land of Egypt is before thee; in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell; in the land of Goshen let them dwell : and if thou knowest any men of activity among them, then make them rulers over my cattle . And Joseph brought in Jacob his father, and set him before Pharaoh: and Jacob blessed Pharaoh . And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, How old art thou? And Jacob said unto Pharaoh, The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years: few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and have not attained unto the days of the years of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage. And Jacob blessed Pharaoh , and went out from before Pharaoh. And Joseph placed his father and his brethren, and gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, in the best of the land , in the land of Rameses, as Pharaoh had commanded ” (Gen 47:1-11).

How marvelously it all concluded, for the hand of the Lord was with them, causing Pharaoh's heart to be turned toward them, and inclining him to give His people the very best of the land of Egypt. Even though God had promised Abraham, then Isaac, then Jacob, that they would inherit the land of Canaan, none of them ever did. They all sojourned in the land of promise as though it was a strange land. It is written that they dwelt in tabernacles, though they were heirs of the land (Heb 11:9). It was their progeny who would actually possess the land, and they would do so because of the promise of God to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their belief of that promise.

All of the people who came down into Egypt from Canaan died there. None of them ever returned to Canaan to dwell. Jacob died when he was 147 years old, having spent seventeen years in Egypt (Gen 47:26). Joseph commanded his physicians to embalm the body of Jacob, a process that required forty days (Gen 50:3). The Egyptians “mourned for him” seventy-five days (Gen 50:3). All of the “fathers” – his sons – died there also – outside of the promised land, without receiving any of it for their own.

THEY WERE BURIED IN THE PLOT OF LAND ABRAHAM PURCHASED

“ 16 And were carried over into Sychem, and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.”

Neither the bodies of Jacob nor his sons were left in Egypt. Joseph was buried there, but his bones were dug up and carried out with Israel when they left Egypt to go to Canaan. This was done according to his own commandment, as he held on to the promise of God (Gen 50:24-25). He was 110 years old when he died (Gen 50:26), having spent 93 years in Egypt (from 17 to 110). An exceedingly long time away from home!

AND WERE CARRIED OVER INTO SYCHEM

“And were carried over into Sychem . . .” Other versions read, “And they were carried back to Shechem,” NKJV “And from there they were removed to Shechem,” NASB “Their bodies were brought back to Shechem,” NIV “and they were carried over unto Shechem,” ASV “and their bones were later moved to Shechem,” NIB “All of them were taken to Shechem,” LIVING and “And their 25bodies [Jacob’s and Joseph’s] were taken back to Shechem.” AMPLIFIED

We have some details about the burial of Jacob, and it is representative of all of the fathers of the Israelites. After the days of mourning for Jacob were completed, Joseph went to Pharaoh and told him Jacob had left a commandment that he be buried in the land of Canaan in a grave he himself had dug. He asked for permission to bury him, and then return again to Egypt. Pharaoh consented to this, telling Joseph, “Go up and bury thy father as he made thee swear” (Gen 50:4-6).. Once again, we see the Lord turning the king’s heart.

When he went to bury his father, the Scriptures record that “with him went up all the servants of Pharaoh, the elders of his house, and all the elders of the land of Egypt, and all the house of Joseph, and his brethren, and his father's house: only their little ones, and their flocks, and their herds, they left in the land of Goshen. And there went up with him both chariots and horsemen: and it was a very great company ” (Gen 50:7-9).

AND LAID IN THE SEPULCHER THAT ABRAHAM BOUGHT

“ . . . and laid in the sepulchre that Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Emmor the father of Sychem.” Other versions read, “and laid in the tomb that Abraham bought for a sum of money from the sons of Hamor, the father of Shechem,” NKJV “and laid in the tomb which Abraham had purchased for a sum of money from the sons of Hamor in Shechem,” NASB “and laid in the tomb that Abraham had bought for a sum of silver from the sons of Hamor in Shechem,” NRSV “and put to rest in the place which Abraham got for a price in silver from the sons of Hamor in Shechem,” BBE “for burial in the tomb that Abraham purchased in Shechem from Hamor's sons,” GWN and “They were placed in a grave there. (It was the same grave in Shechem that Abraham had bought from the sons of Hamor . He paid them with silver).” IE

After arriving in Canaan, the multitude came to “the threshing floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan.” There they mourned for Jacob for seven more days “with a great and a very sore lamentation.” The mourning was so profound that when the Canaanites, the inhabitants of the land, heard it, they said, “This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians: wherefore the name of it was called Abelmizraim, which is beyond Jordan” (Gen 50:11).

From that point, Jacob’s sons “carried him into the land of Canaan, and buried him in the cave of the field of Machpelah, which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a buryingplace of Ephron the Hittite, before Mamre” (Gen 50:13). The record of the purchase of the land is in Genesis 23:16-20. It was procured originally for the burial of Sarah (Gen 24:19) – the only part of Canaan that he owned, and he had to buy it. Abraham was buried there later (Gen 25:9-10). It is assumed that Isaac was also buried there, for he spent his final days in Mamre, which was close at hand (Gen 25:9). Now, Jacob’s sons bury him there as well.

Thus the lives of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob ended in the prospect of inhabiting the promised land. Egypt was not their home, and that is why they insisted on their bodies not remaining there. They lived and died with the promised land in view, thereby providing us an example of the posture that is to be maintained by all who have faith. Faith roots us in another land – another world – for which we groan as long as we are remain in this vile body.

CONCLUSION

This masterful presentation of the past is intended to confirm Stephen was not guilty of the charges brought against him. No man could speak with such heart who hated the Israelites, or was intent upon disrupting their lives. In this word we find a sterling example of someone who had a grasp of the truth, and was able to handle aright the Word of God. The glory of God is wrapped up in Stephen's words, and His purpose is revealed in them. The history he expounds confirms what is involved in God causing all things to work together for the good of those who love Him. The effect of faith upon those who possess it is declared, as well as the power of God who gives people favor, and exalts them even while they are in a foreign land. God is greatly to be praised for the productive qualities of this passage!

Lesson #30

STEPHEN'S DEFENSE, #3

“ 7:17 But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham, the people grew and multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph. 19 The same dealt subtly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live. 20 In which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months: 21 And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son. 22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds. 23 And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel. 24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian: 25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not. 26 And the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another? 27 But he that did his neighbor wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday? 29 Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons. ” (Acts 7:17-29)

INTRODUCTION

Just as Moses did, Stephen leaps over a significant period of history, and focuses on the approach of God's appointed time – the time of Israel's exodus from Egypt. This was the time “which God had sworn to Abraham.” This is the manner of true exposition – to focus on the objective rather than a mere chronology of the details. True teaching, edification, and exhortation consists of making a point, not merely relating the facts.

Details assist our thinking only when they are associated with a purpose.

This is one of the unique properties of Scripture – it is always related to Divine purpose. That is the reason it has been written. It is also the reason for its profitability for “doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness” (2 Tim 3:16). God’s dealings with men are always objective , and that objective has to do with His eternal purpose.

DIVINE INVOLVEMENTS

Divine involvements never center in, or are driven by, worldly circumstances. If that was the manner of the working of the Lord, Joseph would never have been thrown in a pit, sold as a slave, and finally placed in shackles. Nor, indeed, would Israel ever have experienced hard bondage at the very threshold of their history. There are more important matters than what is happening to men and women – even holy men and women. If this was not true, how would men account for hardship, persecution, and the likes? If God’s primary aim is the comfort, prosperity, and success of humanity, life will yield little more than perplexity for the majority of our race. Furthermore, it is highly unlikely, if not altogether impossible, that God will work for good within a person or an environment where a fundamental love for this world exists. If Jesus gave Himself for our sins in order that “He might deliver us from this present evil world according to the will of God and our Father” (Gal 1:4), how likely is it that He will justify, sanctify, and glorify those who remain firmly attached to it?

ISRAEL COMES INTO EGYPT

The people had been brought down into Egypt, which became the incubator in which the nation grew numerically, and wherein they developed a longing for the land of promise. That preparation accelerated as the time for their removal drew near. Their numerical growth developed without severe opposition. However, when another king arose “which knew not Joseph,” a hostile environment was developed. There was a concerted effort to stop the nation from growing, and make their lives most bitter with hard and difficult bondage.

It was during this time of adversity that Moses was born – the one who was elected to lead Israel out of Egypt. According to appearance, all of the advantages belonged to Egypt, and yet that was not really the case at all. God was going to work in such a manner as to leave no doubt about the Source of Israel’s deliverance. That is God’s way of working – so that no flesh can glory in His presence (1 Cor 1:29,31; Jer 9:23-24; Rom 3:27; 4:2; Eph 2:9). If, therefore, a work can be found in which men can boast, that condition confirms the work was not from God. If men represent it as coming from God, or being wrought in His power, they are simply wrong, for such a thing is not even possible, much less probable.

MOSES IS NOT RECEIVED

In keeping with the principle that no flesh can boast in God's presence, Moses will fall on hard times. He will not be received by his brethren. This confirms that his distinction from the rest of the people was, in a sense, not discerned by the people. Although he was one of them, there was a very real separation between Moses and the people, and it was detected.

A CONSISTENT PRINCIPLE

The separation of God's people from the world, and their rejection by the world, is a consistent principle throughout God's dealings with men. Although he was a brother to Cain, Abel was distinct from him, and was hated by him. Enoch walked with God, and was so different from the world that he was translated out of it. Noah was uniquely separated from the world by a Divine call, and was noticeably different from it. Abraham was called by God into a state of separateness. The same was true of Isaac and Jacob. They were so distinct from the world that they were even strangers in the land that was given to them by the Creator himself. The nation of Israel was called apart to God from all other peoples, being separated from the world and reserved unto God.

This has always been God's manner. Those he drew to Himself were, by that very act, separated from the world. This was because the world is already cursed – designated for destruction. Through the Holy Spirit, Peter said it this way: "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men" (2 Pet 3:7). Those who "are of the world" are wedded to the cursed order, and therefore partake of its curse. They are at home in the world, and consider life in that domain to be the primary life.

It is that circumstance – the passing order of this world and those who are married to it – that causes hostility to rise against the chosen ones. Their distinction is a very real one, so that their identity with the Living God causes friction to rise between them and other people. They have been joined to an eternal order – a Kingdom that has no end. In Christ, and by virtue of their knowledge of, and involvement with, the Living God, they have eternal life.

A vast gulf exists between heaven and earth – even though the Lord rules over both domains. One is temporal, and one is eternal. The devil exercises prominence in one realm, yet has been expelled from the other. Enslavement exists in one of these realms, while liberty is found in the other. Death rules one while life rules the other. One is blessed, and the other is cursed.

For this reason, in every sense it is true, "that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God" (Acts 14:22). That is, in order to profitably participate in the outworking of Divine purpose, we must experience the abrasiveness of this present evil world. We cannot benefit from the Sovereign rule of God if the world and the flesh, which are at enmity with God, loves and receives us. Jesus plainly said, "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you" (John 15:19).

OUR TEXT

In our text, these things are presented in type, or shadow. The enmity that is recorded was very real. Yet, it was not to the measure that would be realized in Jesus Himself, and in all who embrace Him by faith. As Moses advanced, he was not received by his own brethren, and eventually had to leave Egypt because of this condition. It is this point that Stephen now develops, confirming the manner in which the Lord worked, and how the people responded to that work.

THE TIME OF THE PROMISE DREW NIGH

“ 7:17a But when the time of the promise drew nigh, which God had sworn to Abraham. . .”

God’s Kingdom cannot be the dominant one if He does not control the times. Neither, indeed, can prophecies be reliable if the times cannot be appointed, controlled, and caused to come to pass. This necessarily requires the ultimate control of humanity.

Like all who were acquainted with God, Stephen knew that times and seasons are strictly in the hands of the Lord. This is why, when His disciples asked Jesus concerning certain times, He replied, “It is not for you to know the times or the seasons, which the Father hath put in his own power” (Acts 1:7). God’s Kingdom cannot be the dominant one if He does not control the times. Neither, indeed, can prophecies be reliable if the times cannot be appointed, controlled, and caused to come to pass. This necessarily requires the ultimate control of humanity. Whatever freedom men may be supposed to possess, it is not possible for it to encroach upon Divine appointments, causing them to be delayed or aborted. Neither, indeed, are men capable of stopping the prophetic clock so that Divine determinations are put on hold. Such views border on blasphemy, and are neither intellectually nor spiritually honest. Those who affirm Jesus cannot come until men do this or that, or that God cannot work unless men ask Him to do so, cannot possibly be more wrong. Our text will explode their mythological reasoning, confirming that Divine appointments are always precisely on time. If this is not the case, then it is not possible for anyone to possess “the full assurance of faith” (Heb 10:22).

THE TIME OF THE PROMISE

But when the time of the promise drew nigh . . .” Other versions read, “as the time of the promise was approaching,” NASB “As the time drew near for God to fulfill His promise,” NIV “as the time drew near for the fulfillment of the promise,” NRSV “But when the time was near for putting into effect the undertaking,” BBE “when the time arrived for that which God had promised ,” MRD and “As the time approached for realizing the promise ,” WILLIAMS

As used in this text, Divine promises are associated certain times. This, of course, is one of the marks of Deity, and is frequently so proclaimed.

- “The counsel of the LORD standeth for ever , the thoughts of His heart to all generations” (Psa 33:11).
- “Whatsoever the LORD pleased, that did He in heaven, and in earth, in the seas, and all deep places ” (Psa 135:6).
- “For I will at this time send all My plagues upon thine heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people; that thou mayest know that there is none like Me in all the earth . For now I will stretch out My hand, that I may smite thee and thy people with pestilence; and thou shalt be cut off from the earth” (Ex 9:14-15).
- “Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like Me, declaring the end from the beginning , and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure : calling a ravenous bird from the east, the man that executeth my counsel from a far country: yea, I have spoken it, I will also bring it to pass; I have purposed it, I will also do it ” (Isa 46:9-11).
- “ To whom will ye liken Me, and make Me equal , and compare Me, that we may be like?” (Isa 46:5).
- “Yea, before the day was I am He; and there is none that can deliver out of My hand: I will work, and who shall let [reverse NKJV] it ?” (Isa 43:13).

• “And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth : and none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, What doest thou?” (Dan 4:35).

WHICH GOD SWORE TO ABRAHAM

“ . . .which God had sworn to Abraham. . .” Other versions read, “which God had assured to Abraham,” NASB “His promise to Abraham,” NIV “which God had granted to Abraham,” RSV “which God vouchsafed unto Abraham,” ASV “He had declared to Abraham,” NET and “He had solemnly made to Abraham. NJB

The particular promise of which Stephen speaks is the one declaring that Israel would come out of Egypt. It is stated in Genesis 15:14: “And also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance .” Before he died, Joseph put the people in remembrance of this promise: “And Joseph took an oath of the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you , and ye shall carry up my bones from hence” (Gen 50:25). Joseph’s father, Jacob, had also commanded his sons to bury him in Canaan, and not in Egypt: “bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt: But I will lie with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their buryingplace” (Gen 47:29-30). When God appeared to Moses in the bush, He announced that the time had come for the deliverance of Israel from Egypt (Ex 3:8).

As this appointed time approached, activities related to the preparation of Israel for that deliverance began to accelerate. This was not only according to Divine purpose, God was in the matter, bringing everything to pass. None of this was apparent to the people, as Stephen will confirm. Yet, the Sovereign God was at work, bringing His own purpose to its culmination in the midst of adversity, and enemies who grew more and more hostile.

THE NUMBER OF YEARS

As this appointed time approached, activities related to the preparation of Israel for that deliverance began to accelerate. This was not only according to Divine purpose, God was in the matter, bringing everything to pass. None of this was apparent to the people, as Stephen will confirm.

There are some difficulties associated with the number of years that Israel was in Egypt. All of them are on the surface, yet, cannot be resolved without considerable effort. Because much has been said on the subject, I will take the time to share my own persuasion on the matter. While I do not wish to be contentious about this issue, I have a certain eagerness to see that God is seen correctly, and that the Scriptures themselves are not seen as being in any way deficient, or misrepresenting the situation.

There are six texts of Scripture that specifically refer to this period.

• AFFLICTED 400 YEARS. “And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years ” (Gen 15:13). Notice, the affliction is said to be four hundred years, not Israel’s sojourn. The land in which they sojourned is said to be “not theirs,” confirming it was Egypt, not Canaan.

• FOUR GENERATIONS. “But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again: for the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full” (Gen 15:16). After four generations, they would come out of Egypt, for the iniquity of the Amorites did not yet justify purging them from the land. It is assumed here that a generation is one hundred years, as people lived longer during that time. I understand this to be four generations after Jacob’s entry into Egypt – or approximately four hundred years. Caleb was the fourth generation from Judah, and Moses was the fourth generation from Levi.

• SOJOURNING IN EGYPT. “Now the sojourning of the children of Israel , who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years ” (Ex 12:40). The sojourning, not the affliction, was said to be 430 years. The place of the sojourning was Egypt, not Canaan. Thus other versions read, “Now the time that the sons of Israel lived in Egypt was four hundred and thirty years” (Ex 12:40). “Now the length of time the Israelite people lived in Egypt was 430 years” (Ex 12:40).

• DELIVERED AFTER 430 YEARS. “And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years , even the selfsame day it came to pass, that all the hosts of the LORD went out from the land of Egypt” (Ex 12:41).

• TREATED IN AN EVIL MANNER FOR FOUR HUNDRED YEARS. “And God spake on this wise, That his seed should sojourn in a strange land; and that they should bring them into bondage, and entreat them evil four hundred years” (Acts 7:6).

• THE LAW GIVEN 430 YEARS LATER. “And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after , cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect” (Gal 3:17).

Two of the texts refer to four hundred years, both of them identifying the period with the affliction of the Israelites. Three of the texts mention four hundred and thirty years. They have to do with the duration of the time the children of Israel were in Egypt. It is understood that their initial time in Egypt was not a time of affliction, this being for Joseph’s sake, who had found favor with Pharaoh.

There would be no difficulty with the time period if we were not confronted with Paul’s statement. On the surface, it appears that he pinpoints the giving of the Law (which occurred only briefly after the exodus) as taking place four hundred and thirty years after the covenant was promised to Abraham. The calculation of the four hundred and thirty years is somewhat strained. The chart below shows how it has been calculated by certain commentators, most of whom are held in high regard.

The difficulty with the calculation lies in the time period from Joseph’s death until Moses. That is an arbitrary figure, and cannot be supported by any clear statement or genealogy in Scripture. It also has the children of Israel being in Egypt for only two hundred and fifteen years. This period began with Jacob’s entry into Egypt at the age of one hundred and thirty. He spent seventeen years in Egypt. Add to that the number of years until the death of Joseph (53), the time until the birth of Moses (65), and the eighty years of Moses life prior to the exodus (80), and you arrive at two hundred and fifteen. All of this may appear quite satisfactory to the casual student. However, it casts a bad light on the statements made concerning those four hundred, and four hundred and thirty, years.

- Israel was afflicted four hundred years.
- The children of Israel (Jacob, not Abraham) sojourned in Egypt for four hundred and thirty years.

There are some time periods of which we are certain, and they are reflected in the following graphic.

We can identify the beginning eighty-eight years of the period (Jacob’s seventeen years, and Joseph’s seventy-one years). We can also identify the concluding eighty-three years (Aaron’s birth three years prior to Moses’ birth, and Moses first eighty years). It is the two hundred and fifty-nine years between Joseph’s death and the births of Aaron and Moses that are uncertain.

I am going to proceed on the assumption that the children of Israel were actually afflicted in Egypt for four hundred years, and that they sojourned in Egypt for four hundred and thirty years. I am also going to assume that Paul is not identifying that period as beginning when God made the original promise to Abraham. He states it was when the covenant was confirmed by God in Christ. I will identify when I see that taking place.

FACTS TO WORK WITH

There are some general facts with which we have to work. They are as follows. I am including the incidents that are used by others to substantiate a two hundred and fifteen year period of sojourning Egypt – which position I reject.

- Abraham departs from Haran at 75 (Gen 12:4).
- Abraham was 86 when Ishmael was Born (Gen 16:16).
- Abraham was 99 when God confirmed the covenant with him, changing his name, and giving him the covenant of circumcision (Gen 17:14).
- Abraham was 100 when Isaac was born (Gen 21:5).
- At the birth of Jacob, Isaac was 60 (Gen 26:26).
- Joseph was 17 when entering Egypt (Gen 37:2).
- Joseph was 30 when elevated to the throne of Egypt (Gen 41:46).
- Jacob was 130 when entered Egypt (Gen 47:9).
- Jacob was in Egypt 17 years (Gen 47:9,28),
- Joseph died at 110 in Egypt, being there for 93 years (Gen 50:26).
- Moses was 80, and Aaron was 83 at the time of the Exodus (Ex 7:7).

There is also the matter of generations that were present in Egypt. Reckoning from the standpoint of Christ's genealogy, as recorded in both Matthew and Luke, there were six generations after Jacob that were in the land of Egypt during the time of their sojourning. These included the following progenitors and their offspring: Jacob, Judah, Pharez, Hezron, Ram, Amminadab, and Nahshon.

Keep in mind that this is reckoning the generations from the standpoint of Jesus' genealogy. That reckons Jacob's offspring only from his fourth-born son, Judah. This does not include Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, and Asher. The point is that a significant number of their generations were born while Israel was in Egypt. When they entered into Egypt, there were seventy of them. When they came out, there were millions of them. Among those coming out of Egypt, the number of footmen, not counting women and children was "about six hundred thousand" (Ex 12:37). In Exodus 38:26, the number of these men was 603,550. The total number of Israelites that came out of Egypt is not specified in Scripture. Conservative estimates range from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000. The point here is that it stretches the imagination to establish that kind of exponential growth during a time span of two hundred and fifteen years. It is not that it is impossible. However, considering that our text states the multiplication increased as the time of the promise grew near, we are under no logical or knowledgeable obligation to accept the shorter period of two hundred and fifteen years in Egypt.

THE MATTER OF GENEALOGIES

Scriptural genealogies are not always thorough from a human point of view. They are intended to include only those relevant to the purposes of God. However, in the case of the lineage of Joshua, descended from Ephraim, Joseph's son, we have a key ingredient. Ten generations are said to have been born after Ephraim. Using the standard of forty years per generation at that time (Num 32:13), that would account for 400 years of Israel being in Egypt.

Paul's Comment (Gal 3:17)

“And this I say, that the covenant, that was confirmed before of God in Christ, the law, which was four hundred and thirty years after, cannot disannul, that it should make the promise of none effect” (Gal 3:17).

Paul states the four hundred and thirty years begins with the ratified or confirmed covenant. The account of the first reference to a covenant with Abraham is found in Genesis 15:18. This is also the time when Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness (Gen 15:6), and consequently is a pivotal point. This is also the general time when, at the suggestion of Sarah, Abraham took Hagar to raise up seed, not knowing yet that the promised “seed” would be conceived by and born to Sarah.

I am not sure that Paul is referencing the time of Genesis 15:16. His language suggests a broader context of thought: “the covenant confirmed before of God in Christ” – not “before of God to Abraham,” but “before of God in Christ.” This has eternal ramifications, and could well refer to God’s “eternal purpose” rather than the time when He confirmed the covenant to Abraham. Also, rather than the phrase “four hundred and thirty years after” referring to the number of years that followed the confirming of the covenant, it could very well mean “the four hundred and thirty years” that were mentioned in Exodus 12:40 – a period that occurred after the covenant relating to the coming was Christ had been determined. It was after that period that God actually made the first covenant with Israel. Paul’s point is that the covenant made with Israel, after their deliverance from Egypt, could in no way nullify the determination that had been made before in Christ Jesus. I do not believe his point was the actual duration of time between the promise to Abraham and the giving of the Law. Rather, he was pointing out that the Law was not given until after Israel’s deliverance from Egypt – when the people had been multiplied. The covenant of blessing, however, had nothing to do with the number of the people, or whether they were delivered or not, or whether they agreed to the covenant or not. In that context, it seems to me to bend and twist the Scripture around Paul’s statement, as though he was interpreting the precise time when the Law was given, is a flawed approach, to say the least. God spoke with clarity about the four hundred and thirty years – that it related to the Israelite sojourn in Egypt. We should be content to let those more precise statements define the duration of their stay.

THE TIME DREW NIGH

“But when the time of the promise drew nigh.” That is, as the appointed time approached, or was coming near. The expression “drew nigh” is in the imperfect active tense. That is, the appointed time had not yet arrived, but was getting closer and closer. From the Scriptural standpoint, everything was advancing toward the fulfillment of the Divine counsel. In other words, what God had decreed was driving history, as it moved steadily toward an event decreed in heaven.

The point here is that certain preparations had also been decreed relating to the appointed event. Up to this time, circumstances might not have justified hope in the promise. Now, however, the circumstances would be adjusted to adapt to the appointed event.

In Daniel’s time, a similar event took place. God had decreed the duration of the Babylonian captivity – seventy years (2 Chron 36:21; Jer 25:11,12; 29:10). As the conclusion of that period approached, Daniel became quite aware of it. This was owing to his familiarity with the prophecies of Jeremiah. Thus it is written, “In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem . And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes: and I prayed unto the LORD my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments ” (Dan 9:2-4). Daniel knew that appointed epochs are preceded by times of preparation. That is the Divine manner. Godly men do not simply sit and wait for the fulfillment of the promises. When they are made more aware of them approaching, they more earnestly prepare themselves, as did Daniel.

When the time for the showing of the Messiah to Israel came, it was preceded by a time of appointed preparation. God sent John the Baptist to prepare “the way of the Lord, and make His paths straight” (Matt 3:3). That is in keeping with the manner of the Kingdom of God.

Now, in our text, Stephen will confirm this to be in strict conformity with the way in which the Lord works. As His appointment drew closer, a time of preparation was put into place. God would intervene in the affairs of men in order to more precisely fulfil His own determination. His promise will be fulfilled in a most precise manner, confirming His absolute faithfulness.

THE PEOPLE GREW AND MULTIPLIED

“17b . . . the people grew and multiplied in Egypt.” Other versions read, “the people increased and multiplies in Egypt,” NASB “the number of the people in Egypt greatly increased,” NIV “our people in Egypt increased and multiplied,” NRSV “the people were increasing in Egypt,” BBE “the people flourished and multiplied in Egypt,” CSB “the number of our people in Egypt had grown very large,” GWN “the people had multiplied and become strong , in Egypt,” MRD “the people increased greatly in number in Egypt,” NIB “our nation in Egypt became very powerful and numerous ,” NJB “There were more and more of our people in Egypt,” IE “the people became many times more numerous in Egypt,” WEYMOUTH “the people multiplied and grew more numerous in Egypt,” WILLIAMS and “the [Hebrew] people increased and multiplied in Egypt,” AMPLIFIED

The record of Israel’s growth is found in Exodus 1:7 “And the children of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed exceeding mighty; and the land was filled with them.” This, we are apprised, followed the death of Joseph and “all that generation” (Ex 1:6). Even when they were oppressed, “the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty” (Ex 1:20). Of this period, the Psalmist wrote, “And He increased His people greatly ; and made them stronger than their enemies” (Psa 105:24). This was the increase of God, not of human ingenuity or productivity. Under the circumstances, the multiplication of the people was like the birth of Isaac to Abraham and Sarah – it was of a miraculous nature. God Himself “increased His people!”

In his valedictory address, Moses referred to this miraculous increase. “And thou shalt speak and say before the LORD thy God, A Syrian ready to perish was my father, and he went down into Egypt, and sojourned there with a few, and became there a nation, great, mighty, and populous ” (Deut 26:5).

This multiplication was necessary for the fulfillment of the promise. First, God had promised Abraham He would make of him “a great nation” (Gen 12:2). Again He promised Abraham. “And I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth : so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered” (Gen 13:16). And again He promised, “And He brought him forth abroad, and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them: and He said unto him, So shall thy seed be ” (Gen 15:5). God said of Abraham, “Seeing that Abraham shall surely become a great and mighty nation ,” (Gen 18:18). Again, he promised the patriarch, “That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore” (Gen 22:17).

This promise was also extended to Jacob. “And God said unto him, I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply; a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee , and kings shall come out of thy loins” (Gen 35:11). Just before Jacob went down into Egypt, God appeared to him. He made the same commitment to Jacob that He had made to Abraham. This time, however, He specified where the multiplication would take place. “I am God, the God of thy father: fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will THERE make of thee a great nation ” (Gen 46:3).

THE PLACE OF GROWTH

The realm in which the people would increase would not be a peaceful one, but one of ultimate oppression. The time during which they would increase would not be a peaceful one, but one in which great duress would be experienced. Therefore, in order to the fulfillment of these promises, the people began to increase exponentially. They were going to be brought out of Egypt to inherit a great land, and there must be a sufficient number of them to possess the land, and dispossess it of its inhabitants. Their numerical growth, however, would take place in a way that would glorify God. Apart from His working, there will be no way to account for such an increase.

AN OBVIOUS PARALLEL

The parallel between Abraham's fleshly offspring, and those who are his children through faith, ought to be obvious. Even as with the children of Israel, those who are in Christ Jesus experience oppression in the land of the enemy. The world "cannot receive" the Spirit they possess (John 14:17), or bring itself to love them (John 15:19). Yet, in a hostile world, they are being changed into the image of Jesus individually (2 Cor 3:18), and being made a habitation for God collectively (Eph 2:22). Like Israel, we are being readied for our inheritance in a most unlikely place. Indeed, often it does not even appear this is what is really happening – but it is!

TILL ANOTHER KING AROSE

“ 18 Till another king arose, which knew not Joseph.” Other versions read, “until there arose another king over Egypt who knew nothing about Joseph ” NASB “until another king who had not known Joseph ruled over Egypt,” NRSV “Till another king came to power, who had no knowledge of Joseph,” BBE “there came to power in Egypt a new king who had never heard of Joseph,” NJB and “Until [the time when] there arose over Egypt another and a different king who did not know Joseph [neither knowing his history and services nor recognizing his merits] .” AMPLIFIED

When that appointed time had been fulfilled, Joseph faded from the memory of the people in order that the purpose of God might be brought to its culmination. If the purpose of God was to bring the people into Canaan, He will not allow circumstances to develop that would make those

This is all necessary to the fulfillment of the purpose of God. God had told Abraham, “Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years” (Gen 15:13). When they first entered, this was not the case, for Pharaoh was inclined to the Israelites (Gen 45:16), because of his respect for Joseph – which respect was also the result of Divine working (Acts 7:10).

As with the Pharaoh with whom Joseph found favor, the identity of this ruler is not provided in Scripture. It is apparent that a very long time had elapsed since the death of Joseph, for his acts had been forgotten – and that by Divine providence. Also, the Israelites, although they had been in Egypt for a time longer than the United States has been a political entity, were still considered foreigners. They had not been assimilated into the culture, thereby losing their identity. This also was of the Lord, who had made them distinct from all other people. This is the real reason why an Israelite like Joseph, who had gained unparalleled fame, soon was forgotten. His favor was intended for a certain period of time. When that appointed time had been fulfilled, Joseph faded from the memory of the people in order that the purpose of God might be brought to its culmination. If the purpose of God was to bring the people into Canaan, He will not allow circumstances to develop that would make those people perpetually welcomed in Egypt.

The record of the rise of this king is found in Exodus 1:8. Regarding how he came into power, his ancestry, and the likes, the record is without any kind of explanation. “Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph” (Ex 1:8). Some suggest that this was probably Rameses Miamum, or possibly his son Amenophis. ADAM CLARKE The language used here (“another king arose”) suggests this king was not in an ordinary line of succession. It probably speaks of a change of dynasty, where one group overpowered another. If this is the case, it would appear this was Amosis I, the head of the 18 th dynasty. ALBERT BARNES This would account for him not knowing of Joseph. However, this matter is unworthy of any further attention, for we are shut up to speculation, and that must not be permitted a place in our thinking. Suffice it to say, in strict accordance with the purpose of God, Israel’s tenure in Egypt will now become uncomfortable, so that they will no longer feel comfortable there. It will become apparent that they do not belong there.

THE REASONING OF THE NEW KING

Upon taking the rule, and because of the dramatic increase of the Israelites, the new king gathered his subordinates together. He said to them, “Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we.” the New International version conveys the idea even more precisely: “the Israelites have become much too numerous for us.” The idea is not that the Hebrews were a militia that had greater military strength than Egypt, for at this point they were not a fighting people. This is why, after they left Egypt, God did not immediately lead them into military conflicts. Therefore it is written that “God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt” (Ex 13:17-18). Therefore, the new king was not speaking of Israel fomenting an insurrection at this time. Rather, he meant the people were so significant in number that they could not be controlled.

With the control of the people in mind, the new king put a new policy into force. The Israelites would not be given any preferential treatment. His counsel was this: “Come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land” (Ex 1:10). At this point, and in strict accord with the purpose of God, the Pharaoh had no intention of expelling the people from the land. He rather sought to keep them there and exploit them for the advantage of Egypt.

Because God is controlling the situation, the strategy of Pharaoh does not work. Instead of stopping the multiplication of the Israelites, it appeared to cause it to increase even more.

The plan was put into force. As it is written, “Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens . And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses” (Ex 1:11). The Egyptians thus afflicted the Israelites with forced and difficult work. Life now became a burden for them in the land of plenty! Surely this will bring their growth to an end. After all, this would not be a good time to be having children!

THE STRATEGY DOES NOT WORK

Because God is controlling the situation, the strategy of Pharaoh does not work. Instead of stopping the multiplication of the Israelites, it appeared to cause it to increase even more. Thus it is written, “But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew . And they were grieved because of the children of Israel” (Ex 1:12). This increased growth brought great grief upon the Egyptians, even accenting their fears: “so the Egyptians came to dread the Israelites.” NIV

THE AFFLICTION IS INCREASED

As a result of the continued increase in the number of Israelites, the Egyptians made their lives even more bitter. “And the Egyptians made the children of Israel to serve with rigor: and they made their lives bitter with hard bondage, in mortar, and in brick, and in all manner of service in the field: all their service, wherein they made them serve, was with rigor” (Ex 1:13-14).

Now the Egyptians increase the burden in every aspect of their work: in “all their service,” or work, to “serve with rigor,” or severity and cruelty, thereby making “their lives bitter,” or grievous and miserable. There was no aspect of their daily activity that was pleasant or rewarding.

- Bitter and grievous in making mortar, which became difficult and tedious to produce.
- Bitter and grievous in making and laying brick, which became demanding and arduous to put in place.
- Bitter and grievous in laboring in the fields, with nothing being able to be done easily or perfunctorily.

Surely this will slow down the continual growth in the number of Israelites. Perhaps they will be so beat down they will give up all hopes of surviving. That is the aim of the Pharaoh. However, he is not dealing with ordinary people. The Israelites have been selected by God for a glorious destiny, and many of them know this to be the case. They will cry out, but they will not give in!

THE PEOPLE WERE OPPRESSED EVEN MORE

“ 19 The same dealt subtly with our kindred, and evil entreated our fathers, so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.”

Those who oppose the people of God are not easily discouraged. Often they are more intent on suppressing the truth than those who possess it are in making it known. Keep in mind, these people had once enjoyed the favor of another Pharaoh. They had been given the best of the land, and treated with dignity. But those days are now gone. A generation was now in place that never had experienced such favor. Their only recollection was the growing hostility of the Egyptians. Joseph had died a long time ago. Jacob and all of the fathers had passed on. There is no evidence that any significant number of people existed among them who could recall the glorious past – when they survived a famine, and were given the best of the land of Egypt. But those days really did exist, and I do not doubt that a remnant of people remained who could speak intelligently about those times. That is why the people continued to survive. It is why they thought in terms of future generations, not falling into a state of hopelessness.

THEY DEALT SUBTLY

“The same dealt subtly with our kindred . . .” Other versions read, “dealt treacherously,” NKJV “took shrewd advantage,” NASB “dealt craftily,” NIV “having evil designs,” BBE “with cruel cunning,” CJB “dealt deceitfully,” CSB “exploited,” NET “took precautions,” NJB “plotted against,” LIVING “cheated,” IE “adopted a crafty policy,” WEYMOUTH “by shrewdly scheming,” ISV “dealt treacherously with and defrauded,” AMPLIFIED “Taking cunning advantage,” ISV “tricked,” CEV “dealing slyly,” LITV and “cleverly victimized.” PHILLIPS

Those who imagine that being favored by God means you are on the top of every circumstance, and always in a favorable stance need to consider the children of Israel at this time.

This was certainly not a time when the chosen people were “the head.” In every apparent way, they were “the tail,” being the brunt of all manner of cruelty from the Egyptian taskmasters. Those who imagine that being favored by God means you are on the top of every circumstance, and always in a favorable stance need to consider the children of Israel at this time. There is no evidence that they had adopted the idolatrous manners of the Egyptians, or that they had, as a nation, grown calloused toward the Lord. Even though there had been a considerable amount of time during which they had received no immediate word from the Lord, nothing in Scripture suggests that they stopped trusting in what they did know about Him.

Notwithstanding, there they were, being taken advantage of by a heathen culture, who served other gods. The entirety of their lives had become so bitter they could not escape from it. It was difficult to do their work, hard to mix mortar, and painful to lay bricks. If they were sent into the fields, it was most difficult to do their labors – painstakingly grueling and backbreaking.

In addition to these grievous circumstances, the Egyptian taskmasters became creative in their hostility. They exploited the Israelites getting the most out of them with the least possible investment by the Egyptians. They became shrewd and calculating in their harsh and inconsiderate demands. They cheated, defrauded, victimized, and tricked the Israelites, having not the slightest bit of sympathy for them. Will this inconsideration wear down the Israelites? Or, will they be sustained by the God of promise?

EVIL ENTREATED OUR FATHERS

“ . . . and evil entreated our fathers . . . ” Other versions read, “ oppressed ,” NKJV “ mistreated ,” NASB “forced,” NRSV “ill-treated,” ASV “was cruel,” BBE “ afflicted ,” DOUAY “ did evil ,” YLT “ persecuted ,” IE “ abused and oppressed,” AMPLIFIED and “treated . . . abominably .” PHILLIPS

The evil treatment of the children of Israel continued to accelerate. Heartless cruelty abounded. In speaking of this circumstance, the Psalmist reveals a most interesting fact. He says of Israel during the time covered by our text, “And He increased His people greatly; and made them stronger than their enemies. He turned their heart to hate His people, to deal subtly with His servants ” (Psa 105:25). Now, there is a God with whom many professing believers have no acquaintance!

Keep in mind that all of this occurs over a significant period of time. We are not speaking about a brief tribulation, or a time of oppression that passed quickly. This is an extended period, and it is traced back to a judgment of God Himself. It is not a judgment provoked by God’s displeasure with Israel. Rather it is one that will make it right for God to judge Egypt harshly. It is also one in which the true temperament of the Egyptians is brought out, for they were purposeful and creative in their antagonism against God’s people.

All of this is causing Israel to have a growing distaste for Egypt. When the appointed time for their deliverance comes, they will certainly be ready to go!

We may conclude from this that it is the manner of the Kingdom to bring those who belong to the Lord to a state where they experience a growing discontent with their earthly environment. If God has called them to another place, then the place they presently occupy cannot remain fundamental to them – not as long as they are contemplating where God is bringing them.

CAST OUT THEIR YOUNG CHILDREN

“ . . .so that they cast out their young children . . . ” Other versions read, “making them expose their babies,” NKJV “forcing them to throw out their newborn babies,” NIV “forced . . . to abandon their infants,” NRSV “to put their newborn babies outside their homes ,” CJB “making them leave their infants outside ,” CSB “forcing parents to abandon their children in the fields,” LIVING and “he forced them to put their babies outdoors .” IE

The assault against the infants came in two separate initiatives – both of them intended to be aggressive.

Initiative #1

The first initiative is recorded in Exodus 1:15-21. At this point, Pharaoh charged the Hebrew midwives as follows: “When ye do the office of a midwife to the Hebrew women, and see them upon the stools; if it be a son, then ye shall kill him: but if it be a daughter, then she shall live” (Ex 1:16). Midwives attended mothers at childbirth. Rachel had a midwife “when she was in hard labor.” The midwife comforted Rachel, who died during the birth, saying, “Fear not; thou shalt have this son also” (Gen 35:17-18). When Tamar gave birth to twins, she was also attended by a midwife. Seeing that she was giving birth to twins, the midwife tied a scarlet thread around the hand of the infant that put its hand out first, thus providing a means for identifying the firstborn son. The infant pulled his hand back, and the other twin came out first. When the second twin came forth, it had the scarlet thread on its hand, establishing that it was the firstborn (Gen 38:28). From these incidents we can see the ministry of midwives extended beyond the technicalities and practicalities of the birth itself.

It is not certain if these women were Egyptians or Hebrews. Some allege that the names are Semitic, and thus indicate they were probably Egyptian, while others say they are Hebrew. We know from later texts that a number of Egyptians were attracted to the Hebrews, and actually left with them in the exodus (Ex 12:38) – even though they particularly grew discontent when all they had to eat was manna. They eventually corrupted the Hebrews themselves (Num 11:4-15).

I am inclined to think these were Hebrew women. First, the Hebrews dwelt in a special part of Egypt – the land of Goshen. That favors the women being Hebrew, as they were more readily available to the expectant mothers. Also, it is later said that these women “feared God,” which also lends itself to the view that they were Hebrews. Additionally, they spoke of the Hebrew women being different than the Egyptian women, which appears to be more the language of Hebrew women than of women from Egypt. The matter of the origin of these women, however, is not worthy of further pursuit.

Two of the women are named in Exodus – Shiprah and Puah (Ex 1:15). It is thought they are not identified as the only midwives, but as leaders in this area. It is possible that they were Egyptians who had charge of a great number of Hebrew midwives. This is reasonable to assume, considering the vastness of the number of Israelites, and that this was a period of time in which they were rapidly multiplying.

The Response of the Midwives

It ought to be noted that God’s people are admonished to conduct themselves wisely before the world (Col 4:5). It is not comely for them to be naive like little children, divulging unnecessary details about their lives. While this is an intensely personal matter, we should be challenged by these midwives to learn to be discreet in the manner in which we speak before those who are without.

Even though the Pharaoh himself had given these women orders, it is written, “But the midwives feared God, and did not as the king of Egypt commanded them, but saved the men children alive” (Ex 1:17). Stephen says that the people were commanded to abandon their newborn children, leaving them unattended: i.e. “so that they cast out their young children, to the end they might not live.” That is, the edict was not to murder them, but to simply leave them unattended so they would die. If this is true (and the meaning of the words used do indicate this to be the case), the Egyptians were less ruthless in getting rid of newborns than those who practice partial-birth abortion. Such hardened souls do not advocate abandoning the infants so they will die. Rather, they take aggressive measures, to murder the infants. In so doing, they stoop beneath the idolaters of Egypt.

When it became apparent that the birth of male infants was growing rapidly, and that his edict was not being carried out, Pharaoh called for the midwives. He asked, “Why have ye done this thing, and have saved the men children alive?” (Ex 1:18). These midwives had apparently anticipated being called before Pharaoh, and were ready with an answer. “Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women; for they are lively, and are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them” (Ex 1:19). The word “lively” means “vigorous,” NASB “strong,” BBE and “robust.” NAB Their strong constitution was no doubt accentuated by the fact that they were slaves in Egypt, often working under harsh taskmasters. The women no doubt worked “in the field,” while the men built the treasure cities for Pharaoh (Ex 1:11-14).

Some have suggested that this was nothing more than a lie, and a deliberate misrepresentation. That there is some truth to this seems apparent. Yet, their response must be considered more on the part of wisdom. It does not mean that the Jewish women were not robust, or did not give birth more rapidly than the Egyptian women. It could also mean that the midwives deliberately tarried, giving the mothers opportunity to hide their children.

Thus, the midwives told the truth, but not all of it. It is similar to the time when Samuel was commanded by God to anoint David king – and to do so while Saul was still on the throne. When Samuel responded that Saul would kill him if he heard of what he was doing, the Lord told him, “Take an heifer with thee, and say, I am come to sacrifice to the LORD” (1 Sam 16:2). The whole truth was that Samuel was going to anoint David. But Samuel did not lie when he said he had come to sacrifice to the Lord.

It ought to be noted that God’s people are admonished to conduct themselves wisely before the world (Col 4:5). It is not comely for them to be naive like little children, divulging unnecessary details about their lives. While this is an intensely personal matter, we should be challenged by these midwives to learn to be discreet in the manner in which we speak before those who are without.

Behold the aggressiveness of Pharaoh. His effort to make life miserable for the Israelites did not work. His mandate to not allow the male children to live also fell to the ground. Yet, he is undaunted, and now turns to his own people to aggressively seek out any male children, and throw them into the river – no doubt the Nile River, which was one of their gods.

It is apparent that the response of the midwives was an honorable one, for heaven responded to it. It is written, “Therefore God dealt well with the midwives: and the people multiplied, and waxed very mighty. And it came to pass, because the midwives feared God, that He made them houses” (Exodus 1:20-21). Thus the exponential growth of God’s people continued. In addition, the midwives were given households, which would impact on the distribution of the promised land at the appointed time.

Initiative #2

The second initiative is recorded in Exodus 1:22. To this point, all of the efforts of Egypt had failed. They first sought to diminish the multiplication of the people by making all of their work burdensome. They then sought to thwart the increase by forcing the mothers to abandon their children. Now, another edict is issued by Pharaoh.

This time, Pharaoh will not speak to the midwives. That had proved to be a futile effort. This time he will give the orders to his own people – probably the armed forces. “And Pharaoh charged all his people, saying, Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river, and every daughter ye shall save alive” (Ex 1:22).

Behold the aggressiveness of Pharaoh. His effort to make life miserable for the Israelites did not work. His mandate to not allow the male children to live also fell to the ground. Yet, he is undaunted, and now turns to his own people to aggressively seek out any male children, and throw them into the river – no doubt the Nile River, which was one of their gods.

The people of God would do well to consider the lengths to which the world goes to realize its corrupted objectives. They are not easily discouraged, but are creative in their wicked intentions. Let no person professing faith lapse into as condition that is inferior, even by worldly standards.

TO THEY END THEY MIGHT NOT LIVE

“ . . .to the end they might not live.” Other versions read, “so that they would not survive,” NASB “so that they would die,” NIV “might not be kept alive,” RSV “might not go on living,” BBE “might not be permitted to live,” WEYMOUTH and “so that the race should die out .” PHILLIPS

The aim of Pharaoh was not merely to rid the country of the male children, but to cause the race itself to fade out of existence. If there were no progenitors – or at least not many of them – the number of Hebrews could only diminish.

However, it is God that is the Governor among the nations, and not Pharaoh (Psa 22:28)! Although the circumstances were very grievous for the Israelites, they were in no way a challenge for the God of the Israelites. These are the kind of circumstances in which His power is made known. He is disposed to bring His good pleasure to pass under such circumstances, confirming that his arm is not short, and He is in no way hindered by the will and machinations of men.

Everything is actually being worked together for the good of those who love Him, and are called according to His purpose (Rom 8:28).

IN WHICH TIME MOSES WAS BORN

“ 20 In which time Moses was born, and was exceeding fair, and nourished up in his father's house three months.”

As men view things, this was not the time for a deliverer to be born. The very target of the foe is the population of infants, so that this time is the ultimate disadvantage for the flesh. It is the time when the baby is actually more apt to be discovered. It is the time when the deliverer is most vulnerable. It is the time when fleshly affection is most vulnerable, and godly thought and creativity is at its lowest point. Of course, none of this is of any consequence to the Lord. It is ever true, “there is no restraint with the Lord” – not so much as an infinitesimal particle (1 Sam 14:6)! As was revealed to Nebuchadnezzar, “none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?” (Dan 4:35).

IN WHICH TIME MOSES WAS BORN

“In which time Moses was born . . .” Other versions read, “ At this time Moses was born,” NKJV “At which season Moses was born,” ASV “ It was then that Moses was born,” CJB “ The same times Moses was born,” GENEVA “ About that time Moses was born,” LIVING “ During this time, Moses was born,” IE “At this juncture Moses was born,” AMPLIFIED and “It was at this very time that Moses was born.” PHILLIPS

This was not happenstance. God Himself caused Moses to be born at this time – when the enemy appeared to be at his strongest point, and the chosen people seemed to be at their weakest. Of all times, that is when Moses was born!

The account of Moses’ birth is found in the second chapter of Exodus. A certain man of the tribe of Levi took a daughter of Levi to wife (Ex 2:1). We know that his name was Amram, and his wife’s name was Jochebed (Ex 6:20). The record in the second chapter of Exodus leaps right to the birth of Moses. But he was the second son born to this couple, and not the first. We know from the sixth chapter that Aaron was born first (Ex 6:20). We also know that there were three years between the birth of the boys, for when Israel came out of Egypt, Moses was eighty, and Aaron was eighty-three (Ex 7:7). We also know that Miriam, Moses’ sister, had already been born, for she would have charge of the baby Moses.

All of this means that Amram and Jochebed were not frightened because of the tumultuous and treacherous times. They did not put their family on hold because of the circumstances.

The point of the record in the second chapter of Exodus is that Moses was born about the time Pharaoh had commissioned that male babies be thrown into the river. This means that Aaron had probably been born at the time the midwives were supposed to see to it that the male babies were abandoned. It also means that Aaron was three years old at this time, and could very well have been subject to Pharaoh's mandate that "Every son that is born ye shall cast into the river."

The record in Exodus states that when Moses' mother gave birth to Moses, she "saw that he was a goodly child" (Ex 2:2). Other versions read, "a beautiful child," NKJV and "a fine child." NIV

The point is that Moses' parents made an association of the baby Moses with the work of the Lord. They perceived he was not an ordinary child, but one with the blessing of God upon him. I do not doubt that they were also aware of the times – that the conclusion of the four hundred years of affliction, mentioned to Abraham, was rapidly approaching.

Stephen uses a most interesting expression to describe the infant Moses. The Authorized Version reads "exceeding fair." The Greek words employed here are pregnant with meaning. For those who are interested, the Greek expression is h=n avstei/oj tw/l qew/l . Literally translated, the phrase reads "in whom existed a comeliness like unto Deity." A number of literal translations reflect this meaning. "He was beautiful to God," ALT/LITV/MKJV "was acceptable unto God," BISHOPS "well pleasing to God." EMTV

The eleventh chapter of Hebrews also refers to this appraisal: "By faith Moses, when he was born, was hid three months of his parents, because they saw he was a proper child ; and they were not afraid of the king's commandment" (Heb 11:23). Other versions read, "no ordinary child, and were not afraid of the king's edict," NIV and "they saw ho comely the child was, and they were not overawed and terrified by the king's decree." The point is that Moses' parents made an association of the baby Moses with the work of the Lord. They perceived he was not an ordinary child, but one with the blessing of God upon him. I do not doubt that they were also aware of the times – that the conclusion of the four hundred years of affliction, mentioned to Abraham (Gen 15:13), was rapidly approaching. If Daniel understood by books that the Babylonian captivity was coming to an end (Dan 9:2), why could not Amram and Jochebed have known of the approaching consummation of the time promised to the father of their nation?

Something is to be said for the recognition of comely traits in babies – particularly when they are born in very difficult times. These are traits that a person can associate with the Lord. Believers must not allow a worldly way of thinking to determine how they view their children. Nor, indeed, should they go about planning for their future only so they will have economic advantages that may not have been enjoyed by themselves. Our times call for more godly assessments and direction of the children. There simply is too much flesh extant in the church of our time. To say it another way, unusually beautiful and talented children are for the Lord, and ought to be so regarded.

Also, keep in mind that at this time, Amram and Jochebed already had Aaron and Miriam, who were no ordinary children themselves. I know of no other parents of Scriptural record who had more impressive children. It is said of them:

- “And the name of Amram's wife was Jochebed, the daughter of Levi, whom her mother bare to Levi in Egypt: and she bare unto Amram Aaron and Moses, and Miriam their sister ” (Num 26:59).
- “And the children of Amram; Aaron, and Moses, and Miriam ” (1 Chron 6:3).
- “For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam ” (Micah 6:4).

All three of them were prophets (Deut 34:10 MOSES ; Ex 7:1 AARON ; 15:20 MIRIAM). How remarkable that Moses was even unique among that holy circle – and it was detected by his parents, and his mother in particular! Later, the Scriptures will affirm that Moses was, indeed, unusually precious to God. The Lord declared Moses to have been “faithful in all Mine house” (Num 12:7). A point is also made of this in the book of Hebrews (Heb 3:2). God also said He spoke with Moses “mouth to mouth, even apparently, and not in dark speeches.” He also declared Moses would behold “the similitude of the Lord” (Num 12:8).

In some way, Amram and Jochebed detected some of these things, and therefore took special measures to protect this child.

NOURISHED FOR THREE MONTHS

“ . . . and nourished up in his father's house three months.” Other versions read, “ brought up ,” NKJV “nurtured,” NASB “ cared for ,” NIV “ kept ,” BBE “ reared ,” CJB “ nursed ,” CSB “ took care of ,” GWN “ looked after ,” NJB and “ hid him.” LIVING

There are three Scriptural references to this three-month period. Exodus says of his mother, “she hid him three months” (Ex 2:2). The Epistle to the Hebrews reads, “when he was born, he was hid three months” (Heb 11:23). Stephen said Moses “was nourished up in his father’s house three months.”

This hiding was done when a kingly edict was in place: “Every son that is born ye shall cast into the rover!” But this did not deter holy couple. The book of Hebrews tells us “they were not afraid of the king’s commandment” (Heb 11:23). They would take pains to spare the child Pharaoh said to destroy. Jochebed would keep Moses safe during the day, while Amram was toiling, and the soldiers were looking. There may also have been fellow Israelites who had lost their children, and would disclose the presence of little Moses. However, faith will overcome Egypt, just as surely as it overcomes the world today (1 John 5:4). It makes the one who possesses it equal to any of the challenges of life in this world – particularly in Jesus Christ.

WHEN HE WAS CAST OUT

“ 21 And when he was cast out, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.”

However, as long as there was a way to hide him, she did. Although it must have been difficult, she found a way to do it. Her faith enabled her to overcome the circumstance. If anyone suspected the presence of this infant, they were not able to find him. She hid him, and did so very well.

The time came when the child could no longer be hid. The book of Exodus reads, “and when she could not longer hide him” (Ex 2:3). However, as long as there was a way to hide him, she did. Although it must have been difficult, she found a way to do it. Her faith enabled her to overcome the circumstance. If anyone suspected the presence of this infant, they were not able to find him. She hid him, and did so very well. She was not afraid of the king's commandment, even though, according to appearance, the power of life and death was in his hand. Keep in mind, her action was prompted by insight : she saw Moses "was exceeding fair."

There certainly is something to be learned in this marvelous account. Our society has produced parents that are too afraid of king's edicts, and who have too little faith in God. They have not done well in protecting their children from the ravages of those who buy and sell the souls of men (Rev 18:13). Many professed Christian parents wait too long to have a godly interest in their children. They make them available too quickly to the ways of the world. May God raise up parents like Amram and Jochebed, who are not afraid of the commandments, requirements, and pressures of men – parents who are bold to hide their children as long as they can, keeping them out of reach of the devil's crowd.

WHEN HE WAS CAST OUT

"And when he was cast out . . ." Other versions read, "set out," NKJV "exposed," NASB "placed outside," NIV "abandoned," NRSV "put out," BBE "put out of his home," CJB "left outside," CSB "abandoned outdoors," GWN "set outside," NAU "and had to abandon him," LIVING and "when the time came for him to be abandoned." PHILLIPS

Pharaoh had commanded that the children be "cast out," abandoned, and even thrown into the river. We do not know if there was some kind of time limit for this to be accomplished. However, there did come a time when it was apparent to the parents of Moses that they would have to, so to speak, cast their bread upon the waters. They had to believe that the God who enabled them to successfully hide him for three months, would provide for him to be sustained away from them.

So, they will put Moses outside – out of the house, and away from their protection. But this will be done with godly discretion. There will be an element of hope in this, as faith is put into action.

Exodus provides some of the details, as Moses, moved by the Spirit of God, writes of his own history. Behold the creativity of Jochebed! She is not helpless, but is like the virtuous woman who provides for her household (Prov 31:15,21,27). She works with her hands, taking some bulrushes from the riverside – papyrus reeds about six feet in length. "She made a little boat from papyrus reeds, waterproofed it with tar." LIVING Then, taking three-month-old Moses, she put him in the little ark, "and set it among the reeds by the bank of the Nile" NASB (Ex 2:3). She then dispatched her daughter Miriam, obviously older than Aaron, who, at the time, was only three. His sister "stood afar off, to see what would happen to him" NIV (Ex 2:4).

Those who desire easy solutions for everything need to peruse this text with genuine interest. There are times when you have to do the best you can, then wait and see how things will turn out. It is the peculiar prerogative of faith to be able to do this. Here is an example of the lot being cast into the lap, but the whole disposing of the matter being of the Lord (Prov 16:33).

If you imagine that God will always make things clear to you before you act, you will face the heartache of continual frustration. It is God's manner to call people to a land that He will define later (Heb 11:8). He will call men to leave their fishing trade to follow Him, even though He had no place to lay his head (Matt 4:19-20; 8:20). He may send an Apostle and co-laborer to Macedonia without telling him that he will be beaten and imprisoned there (Acts 16:9,23-24). It may not be until the middle of a life-threatening storm that He tells His servant no life will be lost (Acts 27:23-31). Walking by faith involves not having all of the answers – often having to put the ark containing a proper child in the water, not knowing how it will all end.

PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER TOOK HIM UP

The hand of the Lord was in all of this, orchestrating the events in order to prepare for the deliverance of His people. It was the Lord who was working things together for the good of Moses – and for the good of Israel as well.

Knowing the gravity of what was ahead, the Lord moves Pharaoh’s daughter to have the baby returned to be nursed among the Hebrews. Even a brief time in that environment will play a role in shaping the understanding and inclinations of this babe

The book of Exodus provides some of the details of this summation. It came to pass that Pharaoh’s daughter came to the precise place on the river where the baby Moses had been placed. She came down, we are told, “to wash herself at the river.” As she walked along the river, with her maidens walking “by the river’s side,” she caught a glimpse of the strategically placed ark in the waters. Just as surely as God opened Hagar’s eyes to see a well of water (Gen 21:19), so he opened the eyes of Pharaoh’s daughter to see that little ark. She sent her personal maid to bring the ark to her.

Upon opening the ark, “behold, the babe wept.” At once the sight gripped the heart of this young lady. Remember, this was a lovely child, comely to look upon, and that comeliness will prove to be a blessing at this time. At once she recognizes the nationality of the child: “This is one of the Hebrews’ children.” This could certainly be a liability, for in Egypt they considered it an abomination to even eat with a Hebrew (Gen 43:32), and they held their occupation in disdain also (Gen 46:34). Add to this that her father had decreed the destruction of all Hebrew sons. Had this been a soldier, or Pharaoh himself, Moses would have been thrown into the river right there. Perhaps many other Egyptians, anxious to please their Pharaoh, would have done the same.

Jochebed knew this child was special – a “proper child” – and the daughter of Pharaoh seemed to sense it as well. Her heart goes out to the infant.

Standing afar off, Miriam beholds all of this. She does not shake in fear for being in the presence of royalty, but immediately acts upon what she sees. I do not doubt that she had been duely instructed by her mother. Seizing the moment, she said to Pharaoh’s daughter, “Shall I go and call to thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?” (Ex 2:7). Pharaoh’s daughter said, “Go,” and Miriam went and brought back Moses’ mother. Obviously pleased with the arrangement, for God was turning her heart, the daughter told Moses’ mother, “Take this child away, and nurse it for me, and I will give thee thy wages” (Exodus 2:9). Moses mother took her own son, returning to nurse him.

Knowing the gravity of what was ahead, the Lord moves Pharaoh’s daughter to have the baby returned to be nursed among the Hebrews. Even a brief time in that environment will play a role in shaping the understanding and inclinations of this babe.

Scripture apprises us that “the child grew.” We do not know how long this was. Some have surmised it to be around two years, or until the child was weaned. Others say this would have been around three years old. However you view it, it was long enough to grow deeply attached to the babe.

And now, Jochebed must return the young child to Pharaoh’s daughter, for that was the arrangement, and in faith she acquiesces to it. This does not mean that the task was easy. The Scripture tells us, “she brought him unto Pharaoh's daughter, and he became her son. And she called his name Moses: and she said, Because I drew him out of the water” (Ex 2:10).

AND NOURISHED HIM

“ . . . and nourished him for her own son.” Other versions read, “brought him up as her own son,” NKJV “nurtured him,” NASB “kept him,” BBE “brought him up for herself,” DARBY “raised him,” GWN and “did rear him to herself.” YLT

Pharaoh’s daughter did not raise Moses as an Israelite, but as an Egyptian. She had no idea she was raising the one appointed by heaven to deliver Israel from the oppression of her own countrymen. However, during his formative years, she was the one assigned by God to protect Moses until he came to the time when he must leave Egypt for a season.

MOSES WAS LEARNED IN ALL THE WISDOM OF EGYPT

“ 22 And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and in deeds.”

Egypt was the premier nation of that age. Much of the wisdom of its time is still a marvel to students of culture. This is the place where Moses was reared, and it is quite arresting to consider.

MOSES WAS LEARNED

“And Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians . . .” Other versions read, “educated in all the learning,” NASB “educated in all the wisdom,” NIV “instructed,” NRSV “t rained,” BBE “taught,” NLT “The Egyptians taught Moses everything they knew,” LIVING “educated in all the culture of the Egyptians,” WILLIAMS and “educated in all the wisdom and culture of the Egyptians.” AMPLIFIED

This is quite an expression: “all the wisdom of the Egyptians.” This was no doubt reserved for the elite of the nation, or for those who were identified as especially expert in learning, as were Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah (Dan 1:17-20). It is generally understood by historians that the scope of Egyptian wisdom was remarkably broad. A good education is said to have included orthography (the art of precise writing), grammar, history, theology, medicine, arithmetic, geometry, astronomy, and engineering. Most of these areas of knowledge, apart from the Egyptian concept of theology, were bodies of exact or precise knowledge. I do not doubt that these honed the mental capabilities of Moses to a fine edge, so that sound analysis, good logic, and the likes were part of his thoughtful manner. All of this was no doubt sanctified by his faith, which he kept in tact.

It ought to be noted that there is no wrong in learning or education itself. However, throughout God’s dealings with men, there have openly been a few souls who could use knowledge properly, tending to be original in their thinking, rather than becoming mere clones of predigested thoughts.

It ought to be noted that there is no wrong in learning or education itself. However, throughout God’s dealings with men, there have openly been a few souls who could use knowledge properly, tending to be original in their thinking, rather than becoming mere clones of predigested thoughts.

Moses would be a man who trafficked in thoughts. He would be required to resolve disputes, reason through thorny issues, and at last even reason with Almighty God. While there is a certain danger in taking this matter too far, it seems to me that the period of time Moses spent in Egypt was a sort of protection to him, keeping him busy with things that were not morally depraved.

MIGHT IN WORDS AND IN DEEDS

“ . . . and was mighty in words and in deeds.” Other versions read, “a man of power in words and deeds,” NASB “powerful in speech and action,” NIV “great in words and works,” BBE “a powerful speaker and a man of action,” CJB “a great man in what he said and did,” GWN “a mighty prince and orator,” LIVING “possessed great influence through his eloquence and his achievements,”

WEYMOUTH and “became not only an excellent speaker but a man of action as well.” PHILLIPS

Those who imagine that Moses was a stuttering speaker will need to rethink their position after reading these words. It is true that, when called by God, Moses replied, “O my Lord, I am not eloquent, neither heretofore, nor since thou hast spoken unto thy servant: but I am slow of speech, and of a slow tongue” (Ex 4:10). However, it must be remembered that, at that time, Moses had been on the back side of the desert for forty years, keeping sheep (Eph 3:1). As I have said, his training was a form of protection for him during his first forty years, so that he was not vigorously opposed, or put to any distracting disadvantage.

None of this is covered in the book of Exodus. I gather than these details were revealed to Stephen through the Spirit. Moses did spend his time in Egypt productively, not being as the sloth, who, by his conduct, locks the door of wisdom and understanding.

The fact that his time in Egypt did not corrupt his mind is seen in the faithfulness for which Moses is noted. He endured as seeing Him who is invisible (Heb 11:27). This confirms that while Moses was in Egypt, he lived by faith, like Daniel did in Babylon. The relative rarity of such a person is confirmed by Paul’s arresting words: “not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called” (1 Cor 1:26). He does not say “not any,” but “not many.” This is owing to the fact that few men can handle a wide scope of knowledge without being distracted by it. Such abilities are also attended by a tendency to boast. Moses was among the very few individuals in that number.

WHEN MOSES WAS FORTY YEARS OLD

“ 23 And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren the children of Israel.”

We know very little concerning Moses from the time of his birth until the time he was forty years of age.

- He was born during dangerous times.
- He was an unusual child, and his parents recognized it.
- He was hidden for the first three months of his life.

The world teaches people to think in terms of an event-driven life. That is, exhilarating experiences and outstanding achievements are sought with great energy. These also become the means by which success is largely determined. Recognition by one’s peers is given too much attention, and little thought is given to faithfulness, stewardship, the culturing of faith, and the posture of readiness.

He was providentially found by Pharaoh’s daughter after being strategically placed in a small ark.

- His mother nursed him until he was weaned.
- Pharaoh’s daughter raised him as her own son.
- He was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians.
- He was an eloquent man, and noted for his deeds.

As you can see, all of this is very general in nature. The reason for this is the manner in which Divine history is recorded. The Lord does not provide human curiosity with a lot of details that are not obviously related to His purpose. His history is not a chronological listing of all the details of life. Through doctrine, the Lord informs us that He is in the details of life, manipulating both men and circumstances in order to the fulfillment of His purpose. However, he only puts into writing the matters that are obviously associated with His glory and the fulfillment of His purpose. Thus he passes over the first forty years of Moses' life with fewer details than were related to a single day of Jesus' life.

A FULL FORTY

“And when he was full forty years old . . .” Other versions read, “approaching the age of forty,” NASB “well-nigh forty years old,” ASV “almost forty years old,” BBE “when a period of forty years was fulfilled to him,” DARBY “at the age of forty,” NJB “nearing his fortieth birthday,” LIVING “just forty years old,” WEYMOUTH “rounding out his fortieth year,” WILLIAMS “in his fortieth year,” AMPLIFIED and “when he was turned forty.” PHILLIPS

One third of Moses' life was spent in Egypt – apparently away from his kindred, yet not without the awareness of them. The reason for this circumstance is not declared, but it ought to be obvious. His time had not yet come!

In the Kingdom of God, times and seasons are in the hand of God. They are established in strict accord with the established purpose of the Almighty. There is a fixed agenda that drives time itself, as well as the events that occur within its borders. Thus it is written, “But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men” (2 Pet 3:7).

Until these times and seasons arrive, everything else is really incidental. That is not to say they are unimportant. However, they are preparatory, and not formative. That is, from the highest point of view, men are not shaping history, but participating in it. This is precisely why the Spirit moved Stephen to pass over forty years of Moses' outwardly significant life and say, “And when he was fully forty years old.” What is going to take place at this time has something to do with the purpose for which Moses was born. The event is therefore mentioned. It will be followed by another forty-year period of relative silence.

A Principle to Be Seen

The world teaches people to think in terms of an event-driven life. That is, exhilarating experiences and outstanding achievements are sought with great energy. These also become the means by which success is largely determined. Recognition by one's peers is given too much attention, and little thought is given to faithfulness, stewardship, the culturing of faith, and the posture of readiness. It is disastrous to get caught up in this kind of mentality, for it is predominantly artificial. Such things require neither morality nor spirituality.

Sensing the true nature of things, David assessed that time with God outweighed every kind of worldly advantage and experience. He said, “Blessed is the man whom Thou chooseth, and causeth to approach unto Thee, that he may dwell in Thy courts : we shall be satisfied with the goodness of Thy house, even of Thy holy temple” (Psa 65:4). And again, “For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness” (Psa 84:10). Forty days on the mountain with God more than compensates for forty long years in the wilderness with a wicked and gainsaying people.

Stephen now covers an event in Moses' life that confirms the first forty years of his life were not spent apart from the knowledge of his origin. Although, according to appearance, he had been immersed in the Egyptian culture, becoming learned in all of their multifaceted wisdom, he had not forgotten who he really was, and why he was in Egypt.

IT CAME INTO HIS HEART

“ . . . it came into his heart . . .” Other versions read, “it entered his mind ,” NASB “he decided ,”

NIV “the thought came to him ,” CJB “he thought it would be good ,” IE “it occurred to him,” WEYMOUTH and “the thought came into his mind .” PHILLIPS

In the ordinary course of his life, a thought suddenly occurred to Moses. What was the origin of this thought? If it “came into his heart,” from whence did it come? Was it nothing more than a casual recollection of his relatives by blood? Had he seen or heard something that moved him to recall the Israelites, offspring of Abraham through Isaac and Jacob? Joseph had died a long time before this, so there was nothing in the government structure that would provoke such a thought.

Those who are familiar with the working of the Lord know that He puts thoughts into the minds of those He employs. Having access to their hearts, he can stir them up by means of thoughts to do this or that. There are many statements

Those who are familiar with the working of the Lord know that He puts thoughts into the minds of those He employs. Having access to their hearts, he can stir them up by means of thoughts to do this or that. There are many statements in Scripture that confirm this to be true.

- GOD’S REVELATION TO JOB. “ Who hath put wisdom in the inward parts? or who hath given understanding to the heart?” (Job 38:36)

- IN BUILDING THE TABERNACLE. “ And Moses called Bezaleel and Aholiab, and every wise hearted man, in whose heart the LORD had put wisdom , even every one whose heart stirred him up to come unto the work to do it” (Ex 36:2).

- DAVID’S EXPERIENCE. “ Thou hast put gladness in my heart , more than in the time that their corn and their wine increased” (Psa 4:7).

- PREPARING FOR THE TEMPLE. “O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people , and prepare their heart unto thee” (1 Chron 29:18).

- THE CASE OF SOLOMON . “And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon, to hear his wisdom, that God had put in his heart ” (2 Chron 9:23).

- THE REVIVAL OF JUDAH. “ Also in Judah the hand of God was to give them one heart to do the commandment of the king and of the princes, by the word of the LORD” (2 Chron 30:12).

- CYRUS THE PERSIAN. “Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia , that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying” (Ezra 1:1).

- EZRA, AFTER THE BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY. “Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit God had raised , to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem” (Ezra 1:5).

- EZRA’S INSIGHT. “Blessed be the LORD God of our fathers, which hath put such a thing as this in the king's heart , to beautify the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem” (Ezra 7:27).

- NEHEMIAH GOES TO JERUSALEM. “And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me; neither told I any man what my God had put in my heart to do at Jerusalem : neither was there any beast with me, save the beast that I rode upon” (Neh 2:12).

- NEHEMIAH’S GENEALOGY. “And my God put into mine heart to gather together the nobles, and the rulers, and the people, that they might be reckoned by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of them which came up at the first, and found written therein” (Neh 7:5).

• A DIVINE MANNER. “The king's heart is in the hand of the LORD, as the rivers of water: He turneth it whithersoever He will ” (Prov 21:1).

• AFTER CHRIST’S EXALTATION. “And a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened , that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul” (Acts 16:14).

• THE CASE OF TITUS. “But thanks be to God, which put the same earnest care into the heart of Titus for you” (2 Cor 8:16).

• THE DOCTRINE OF PAUL. “For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure” (Phil 2:13).

• THE MANNER OF THE NEW COVENANT. “For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts : and I will be to them a God, and they shall be to me a people” (Heb 8:10).

Having said these things, I must also acknowledge that during the early years of my consideration of the things of God, I rarely heard anyone speak of such things. The subject of Divine access to the minds of men was certainly never a prominent consideration.

THE PROPHECY OF THE REVELATION. “For God hath put in their hearts to fulfil His will , and to agree, and give their kingdom unto the beast, until the words of God shall be fulfilled” (Rev 17:17).

In order to confirm that this is God’s manner, I have given examples of God accessing the hearts and minds of men that span well over 2,000 years – from the time of Job through John’s exile on Patmos. On this matter there are examples, insightful testimonies, doctrinal statements, and pointed prophecies. There can be no doubt about this facet of God’s dealings with men.

Having said these things, I must also acknowledge that during the early years of my consideration of the things of God, I rarely heard anyone speak of such things. The subject of Divine access to the minds of men was certainly never a prominent consideration. Often there was even an aversion to such teaching, which was brushed aside with statements concerning the reality of man’s free will. Notwithstanding, I give thanks to God that, working through the naked statements of Scripture, He caused me to behold what is now glaringly obvious to my mind and spirit.

TO VISIT HIS BRETHREN

“ . . . to visit his brethren the children of Israel.” Other versions read, “to visit his brethren, the sons of Israel,” NASB “to visit his fellow Israelites ,” NIV “to visit his relatives , the Israelites,” NRSV “to go and see his brothers, the children of Israel,” BBE “to look upon his brethren , the sons of Israel,” DARBY “to visit his own people , the Israelites,” MRD “to visit his fellow countrymen the Israelites,” NET “to visit his brethren the descendants of Israel ,” WEYMOUTH “to visit his kinsmen the children of Israel [to help them and to care for them],” AMPLIFIED and “visit his own brothers , the sons of Israel.” PHILLIPS

The word “visit” is here used much in the same manner as is employed in the book of James: “Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction , and to keep himself unspotted from the world” (James 1:27). That is, he went to see if he could do something that would assist their condition. He knew they were an oppressed people, and it came to him to see what he could do about their circumstance. God put it in his mind to do this, and he promptly acted upon the thought. This also confirms that all the while Moses had been living in Egypt, acquiring the various facets of their wisdom, he had really been living by faith. We know this is the case because after he left Egypt He “endured, as seeing Him who is invisible” (Heb 11:27). That spiritual vision did not commence in the desert of Midian!

The account in Exodus reads, “And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren ” (Ex 2:11). He possessed a lively sense of his relation to these people, even though he had been separated from them since he was weaned from his mother.

He partook of the same spirit owned by his predecessor Joseph, who also maintained a lively sense of his heritage while he was away from his kindred. When he renewed association with his people, it was also a period in the vicinity of forty years. Joseph was seventeen when he entered Egypt (Gen 37:2).” He was thirty when elevated to the throne (Gen 41:46). When he first saw his brethren there had been seven years of plenty, and two years of famine (Gen 45:6). Yet, those years had not erased the recollection of the rock from whence he had been hewn.

This was also the experience of Daniel, who after seventy years vividly recalled his heritage, and reasoned with God concerning the conclusion of the Babylonian captivity (Dan 9:2-4).

Faith sustains the soul with holy recollections. In the times of Joseph and Moses, it did so without Scripture, for none had been given as yet. In the time of Daniel, it did so through the Scriptures that had been recorded by the inspiration and providence of God. Ponder how the believer is sustained today, when such an abundance of Scripture has been given. God has divulged His eternal purpose in remarkable detail, expounding it and reasoning upon it in the apostolic doctrine. It is appalling that in times such as these, so rich with spiritual resources, that many have departed from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of demons (1 Tim 4:1).

MOSES DEFENDS ONE OF HIS PEOPLE

“ 24 And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged him that was oppressed, and smote the Egyptian.” Other versions read, “And seeing one of them suffer wrong, he defended and avenged him who was oppressed, and struck down the Egyptian,” NKJV “And when he saw one of them being treated unjustly, he defended him and took vengeance for the oppressed by striking down the Egyptian,” NASB “He saw one of them being mistreated by an Egyptian , so he went to his defense and avenged him by killing the Egyptian,” NIV “And seeing one of them being attacked , he went to his help and gave the Egyptian a death-blow,” BBE “When he saw one of them being mistreated, he came to his rescue and avenged the oppressed man by striking down the Egyptian,” CSB “And when he saw one of them suffer wrong, he defended him, and avenged his quarrel that had the harm done to him , and smote the Egyptian,” GENEVA “And he saw one of the race of his kindred treated with violence; and he avenged him, and did him justice, and killed the Egyptian who had abused him,” MRD “and having seen a certain one suffering injustice, he did defend, and did justice to the oppressed, having smitten the Egyptian,” YLT “During this visit he saw an Egyptian mistreating a man of Israel. So Moses killed the Egyptian ,” LIVING “Moses saw an Egyptian man doing wrong to a Hebrew brother . So, he defended him. Moses punished the Egyptian for hurting that brother. Moses hit the Egyptian so hard that the man died.” IE “Seeing one of them wrongfully treated he took his part, and secured justice for the ill-treated man by striking down the Egyptian,” WEYMOUTH and “He saw one of them being unjustly treated, went to the rescue and paid rough justice for the man who had been ill-treated by striking down the Egyptian.” PHILLIPS

The account of this is found in Exodus 2:11-12. It is written that Moses “looked on” the “burdens” of his people. That is, he gave particular attention to their hard labors, and how they were being abused. One versions says, “he watched them at their hard labor.” NIV As he beheld them, working with brick and building, he spied an Egyptian “beating a Hebrew.” NKJV We are not told why this was being done, but it was obviously without warrant, for, Stephen says, “he defended him, and avenged him.”

The Exodus record provides the details, with which those listening to Stephen were very familiar. “And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand” (Ex 2:12). Moses took care not to compound the problem by drawing the attention of other Egyptian taskmasters. Then he buried the dead Egyptian out of sight.

So far as the record in Exodus is concerned, there are no further details of the incident itself.

AN EXAMPLE OF LOVING THE BRETHREN

Here is an excellent example of what is involved in loving the brethren. There is the matter of coming to their aid, defending them, and taking up their cause whenever it is possible. Thus Barnabas took up the cause of Saul, when the disciples were suspicious that he had not really been converted (Acts 9:27). Paul also gave diligence to gather offerings for the poor saints of Jerusalem, who were suffering in the aftermath of a grievous famine (Rom 15:26-27). This is not to mention his tireless labors in correcting the churches when they had been assaulted with false teaches, who were diverting them from the strait and narrow way that leads to life.

A person with no care for the people of God has no part with them , for “He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love” (1 John 4:8). There is no possibility that this is not precisely the way things are.

HE THOUGHT THEY WOULD KNOW

“ 25 For he supposed his brethren would have understood how that God by his hand would deliver them: but they understood not.” Other versions read, “And he supposed that his brethren understood that God was granting them deliverance through him ; but they did not understand,” NASB “Moses thought that his own people would realize that God was using him to rescue them , but they did not,” NIV “He supposed that his kinsfolk would understand that God through him was rescuing them , but they did not understand,” NRSV “And he was hoping that his brothers would see that God had sent him to be their savior ; but they did not see,” BBE “And he thought that his brethren understood that God by his hand would save them ; but they understood it not,” DOUAY “Moses thought his own people would understand that God was going to use him to give them freedom . But they didn't understand,” GWN “He thought his brothers would realize that through him God would liberate them , but they did not,” NJB “and he was supposing his brethren to understand that God through his hand doth give salvation; and they did not understand,” YLT “Moses supposed his brothers would realize that God had sent him to help them , but they didn't,” LIVING “He supposed that his brothers would understand that God through his instrumentality was going to deliver them , but they did not,” WILLIAMS “He expected his brethren to understand that God was granting them deliverance by his hand [taking it for granted that they would accept him]; but they did not understand,” AMPLIFIED and “He fully imagined that his brothers would understand that God was using him to rescue them. But they did not understand .” PHILLIPS

Being full of the Holy Spirit, Stephen provides a critical fact that would not otherwise be known. Moses was motivated by a certain consideration – that his brethren would comprehend that God was using him to deliver them.

While the details of this matter are very sparse, there are some things that are apparent. First, Moses had an understanding of the promise that had been given to Abraham. That promise was very precise in its details.

- That the Israelites would spend four hundred years experiencing affliction in a strange land (Gen 15:13).
- That God would judge that nation for their abuse of His people (Gen 15:14a).
- That Israel would come out of Egypt with great substance (Gen 15:14b).
- That in the fourth generation, the children of Israel would return to the land of promise (Gen 15:16).

True to God’s assessment of Abraham, he passed these promises along to the next generation. The Lord had said of him, “For I have known him, in order that he may command his children and his household after him, that they keep the way of the LORD, to do righteousness and justice, that the LORD may bring to Abraham what He has spoken to him ” NKJV (Gen 18:19).

We know that Jacob also passed this information along, as confirmed in the words of Joseph: “God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence” (Gen 50:25).

Now, Moses takes up the cause of his brethren, thinking that they will know he is being moved to do so by the Lord. The deliverance of which he spoke was the one wrought when he avenged the Israelite who was being wronged. He thought his kindred would see that as a pledge of a greater deliverance, and that they would receive him, even though he had been long separated from them.

Apart from a revelation from God, we are not sure how Moses arrived at this knowledge. However, in my opinion, Amram and Jochebed had sensed this in some way when Moses was born. That is inherent in the words, “they saw he was a proper child” (Heb 11:23). This is also why Stephen said Moses was “exceeding fair” (Acts 7:20), and the historical account of his birth reads, “he was a goodly child” (Ex 2:2). More was involved here than the mere appearance of Moses. His parents did not go to such measures to spare him simply because of his physical features. They had apparently seen him in view of the promised deliverance of Israel. If that assumption is true, they no doubt communicated that in some way to Moses.

If all of this is true, then Moses went out to look upon his people with more in mind than simply assessing their situation, or casually perusing their circumstance. He had a heart for them that pondered the promise. Stephen’s words fully justify this conclusion.

THE REACTION OF THE PEOPLE TO MOSES

“ 26 And the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another? 27 But he that did his neighbor wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?”

Intent upon his mission, Moses returns to his people the very next day. This time, he will confront dissension in the ranks, and will set out to reason with the offenders about it. Remember, he is acting while persuaded his people will see that God Himself is in the matter.

HE SHOWED HIMSELF UNTO THEM

“And the next day he showed himself unto them as they strove, and would have set them at one again, saying, Sirs, ye are brethren; why do ye wrong one to another?” Other versions read, “ And the next day he appeared to two of them as they were fighting, and tried to reconcile them , saying, 'Men, you are brethren; why do you wrong one another?'” NKJV ““And on the following day he appeared to them as they were fighting together, and he tried to reconcile them in peace , saying, 'Men, you are brethren, why do you injure one another?’” NASB “The next day Moses came upon two Israelites who were fighting. He tried to reconcile them by saying, 'Men, you are brothers; why do you want to hurt each other ?’” NIV “The next day he came to some of them as they were quarreling and tried to reconcile them, saying, 'Men, you are brothers; why do you wrong each other?’” NRSV “When he appeared the next day, as they were fighting, and tried to make peace between them by saying, 'Men, you are brothers! Why do you want to hurt each other?’” CJB “And on another day, he appeared to them, as they were quarrelling one with another. And he exhorted them to become reconciled , saying: Men, ye are brethren; why do ye seek to harm each other?’” MRD “The next day he visited them again and saw two men of Israel fighting. He tried to be a peacemaker . 'Men,' he said, 'you are brothers. Why are you fighting each other?’” NLT “On the succeeding day, also, he shewed himself to them as they are striving, and urged them to peace, saying, Men, brethren are ye, wherefore do ye injustice to one another ?” YLT and “The next day he visited them again and saw two men of Israel fighting. He tried to be a peacemaker. `Gentlemen,' he said, `you are brothers and shouldn't be fighting like this! It is wrong !’” LIVING

The account of this altercation is found in Exodus 2:13-14. There we are told that Moses went out “the second day” – that is, the second consecutive day. He came upon two Hebrews who were striving with one another. They had even come to blows, with one person clearly being in the wrong. “And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow?” or, “why are you hitting your fellow Hebrew?” NIV (Ex 2:13).

There are Cain’s, Ishmael’s, and brothers like those of Joseph who will press their issue, refusing to back away from peaceful souls like Abel, Isaac, and Joseph. Men should discipline themselves to avoid overly-simplistic sayings that tend to cloud sound reasoning.

It is obvious that not all people see that “it is wrong” for brethren to quarrel. However, Moses saw it, and therefore sought to right this wrong, appealing to the hearts and minds of the men who were quarreling. His reasoning was certainly flawless. They were related to one another, and therefore should be assisting one another, not compounding their situation by striving with one another. Moses addressed his remarks to the one committing the offense: “him that did the wrong.” He did not say “It takes two to argue.” That is a trite saying that cannot be supported by either fact or reasoning. There are Cain’s, Ishmael’s, and brothers like those of Joseph who will press their issue, refusing to back away from peaceful souls like Abel, Isaac, and Joseph. Men should discipline themselves to avoid overly-simplistic sayings that tend to cloud sound reasoning. They really have no place among “the elect of God” (Col 3:12).

An Example of a Peacemaker

Moses is an excellent example of a peacemaker. In fact some of the more liberal translations say that is what he was doing in our text (New Living Translation and Living Bible). Jesus said, “Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God” (Matt 5:9).

A “peacemaker,” like Moses, makes an attempt to reconcile brethren, doing so with sound reasoning. There is no way to force brethren who are against each other to be reconciled, for that is a matter of the heart. For Moses the reasoning consisted of a reminder that they were brethren – of the same origin, and belonging to the same unique and chosen people. Behind that morsel of reasoning is the fact that those of common origin ought not to be divided among themselves. Paul reasoned “That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another” (1 Cor 12:25). That is something that is abundantly clear to those who are living by faith and walking in the Spirit. However, for those in the flesh, it is as impossible to see as it was for the offending Hebrew who heard the precisely true statement made by Moses.

Speaking to the New Man

Flesh will not yield to reason – particularly spiritual reasoning – and the person who imagines that it will, is sure to be utterly frustrated with people. For this reason, Apostolic reasoning is always addressed to the “new man,” and never to the “old man” – to “the spirit,” and not to “the flesh.” Thus we read statements like the following.

- “Neither yield ye your members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin: but yield yourselves unto God, as those that are alive from the dead, and your members as instruments of righteousness unto God” (Rom 6:13).
- “Not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart” (Eph 6:6).
- “Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul” (1 Pet 2:11).
- “Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering” (Col 3:12).
- “As free, and not using your liberty for a cloak of maliciousness, but as the servants of God” (1 Pet 2:16).

I account that God was in this matter in order to get Moses out of Egypt, and begin his focused preparation for leading the children out of Egypt at the appointed time. The time had come for him to leave the hostile land.

This kind of appeal is made because of the very nature of the New Covenant. Inherent in this covenant is knowledge that has a constraining element in it. Once the reality of our situation in Christ is clearly seen, righteousness becomes perfectly reasonable, being preferred and earnestly desired. Of course, if appeals are made only upon the basis of law and obligation, much of this will be hidden to the hearers. In such a case, the advantage is actually given to the flesh.

THE RESPONSE TO MOSES

“ 27 But he that did his neighbor wrong thrust him away, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? 28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou diddest the Egyptian yesterday?” Other versions read, “But he who did his neighbor wrong pushed him away, saying, 'Who made you a ruler and a judge over us? 'Do you want to kill me as you did the Egyptian yesterday'” NKJV

This account is found in Exodus 2:13-14. Behold the obstinance of the natural man. This abrasive remark was said by the person who “did his neighbor wrong.” It was not said out of any interest in the truth, or a desire to do what was right. It was spoken out of a total interest in self. That is the manner of the natural man, or the flesh. Sin draws the attention of its victim inward, with no regard for the will of God and what is right.

Moses had hoped the people would see the hand of God in his activity. However, rather than seeing God in it all, this man challenged Moses by asking who had appointed him over them. In other words, he rejected both the words and the actions of Moses. He saw Moses as being out of order intruding into his affairs, even though he had done “wrong” to his brother. Therefore he violently pushed Moses away, seeking to rid himself of the influence of the one who was calling for righteousness, and showing the unreasonableness of unrighteousness.

It is not certain how this man knew that Moses had killed the offending Egyptian on the previous day. The account in Exodus indicates that he had slain the man secretly, and privately hid him in the sand. "So he looked this way and that, and when he saw there was no one around, he struck down the Egyptian and hid him in the sand" NASB (Ex 2:12). We also know from the historical account that Moses was surprised that the matter was known.

I account that God was in this matter in order to get Moses out of Egypt, and begin his focused preparation for leading the children out of Egypt at the appointed time. The time had come for him to leave the hostile land. He must now be more precisely readied for the time and work for which he was born.

MOSES GOES INTO THE LAND OF MIDIAN

"29 Then fled Moses at this saying, and was a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons." Other versions read, "Then, at this saying, Moses fled and became a dweller in the land of Midian, where he had two sons," NKJV "And at this remark Moses fled, and became an alien in the land of Midian, where he became the father of two sons," NASB "When Moses heard this, he fled to Midian, where he settled as a foreigner and had two sons," NIV "When he heard this, Moses fled and became a resident alien in the land of Midian. There he became the father of two sons," NRSV "And at these words, Moses went in flight to the land of Midian, and was living there for a time, and had two sons," BBE "When Moses heard him say this, he ran away from Egypt. He went to live in the land of Midian where he was a stranger. While he lived there he had two sons," IE "At that reply Moses sought safety by flight and he was an exile and an alien in the country of Midian, where he became the father of two sons," AMPLIFIED and "At that retort Moses fled and lived as an exile in the land of Midian, where he became the father of two sons." PHILLIPS

In speaking of the flight of Moses from Egypt, the book of Hebrews said, "By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible" (Heb 11:27). The account in Exodus seems to indicate that Moses did fear the wrath of the king. "Now when Pharaoh heard this thing, he sought to slay Moses. But Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh, and dwelt in the land of Midian: and he sat down by a well" (Ex 2:15). The answer is found in Stephen's account of the matter. Moses did not leave Egypt because of Pharaoh's anger, but because of the saying of the Jewish man he had admonished. The account in Exodus says that Moses reasoned, "Surely this thing is known." Stephen now elaborates on this by saying this was the reason for him leaving Egypt – the fact that his deed was known among the Israelites. To him, they were a greater threat than Pharaoh. He was not indifferent to the threat of Pharaoh, but that is not what caused him to leave Egypt. From his point of view, Israel was not yet ready for him. From heaven's point of view, he must now enter into the last phase of his training, which would have to do with desert survival and managing a flock in that environ.

In this new and desert, even as Joseph in Egypt, Moses beget two sons. These were born to him by Zipporah, daughter of Jethro, the priest of Midian. The record of their birth and the naming of them is found in Exodus 18:3-4. "And her two sons; of which the name of the one was Gershom; for he said, I have been an alien in a strange land: and the name of the other was Eliezer; for the God of my father, said he, was mine help, and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh."

In this we behold the wonderful character of this man! In these two expressions we have a revelation of what it meant to endure "as seeing Him who is invisible."

A TENDENCY TO BE AVOIDED

Because the church has been invaded with sophistry, there is a marked tendency among professing Christians to assign ignoble motives to great men of the faith. Thus unthinking men are quick to refer to men like Abraham and Isaac as liars, Jacob as a deceiver, David as an adulterer, Peter for speaking rashly , and Paul as murderer . However, these are not wise ascriptions. The fact that these men sinned cannot be denied. In fact, their offenses are recorded. However, the record does not call them by these degenerative terms, and neither should we. They became known for their faith, and men do not do well by seeking to make them known for their deficiencies. Whatever may be said of the flaws recorded against them, they were not repetitive in nature, and men are out of order in representing them as though they were.

I deplore this increasingly popular way of referring to men who were clearly favored and commended by God. It is nothing less than a dishonest effort to justify the absence of virtue in those who profess the name of Christ. This they imagine to do by dragging down the most noble of our race to the obtuse level of contemporary Christendom. In thus doing, the seriousness of the condition of the modern church is veiled, and it is not seen as a serious one. This is a practice that is nowhere set forth in the Word of God. Its origins are found in the vanity of sinful men.

CONCLUSION

In our text, Stephen is confirming Israel's consistent rejection of the good word of the Lord. It was seen early on in the brothers of Joseph rejecting his word, and treating him with contempt. It was also seen later on in the failure of the Hebrews to see in Moses something more than one of their peers. He is also unveiling the presence and work of God throughout their history – something culminating in the coming of Jesus.

Stephen's expert defense confirms the need of the new birth and justification by faith. The deficiencies that the man of God is chronicling were found in the premier race of all time. Yet, after enjoying the focused attention of the God of heaven for fifteen hundred years, the world still needed a Savior. That confirmed the extent of the fall of man.

STEPHEN'S DEFENSE, #4

“ 7:30 And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush. 31 When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it, the voice of the Lord came unto him, 32 Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold. 33 Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground. 34 I have seen, I have seen the affliction of my people which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, I will send thee into Egypt .” (Acts 7:30-34)

INTRODUCTION

For forty long years Moses had been in a wilderness – in “the backside of the desert” in the land of Midian. It was certainly a far cry from being in the house of Pharaoh’s daughter, and being called her son. Now, he is in the land of the Midianites, the progeny of the fourth son of Abraham through Keturah (Gen 25:2; 1 Chron 1:32). This was not the promised land, and it was not noted for the richness that characterized Egypt. According to appearance, it looked as though Moses had taken a step backward. Actually, however, he was moving forward – into a deeper involvement in the purpose of God.

Now, he is in the land occupied by the people to whom Joseph was sold by his brothers. That was the means through which Joseph was sent by God into Egypt (Gen 37:28; Psa 105:17). After spending his first forty years within Pharaoh’s household and all of the opulence of Egypt, and being cultured in all of their wisdom, Moses now finds himself in a totally different environment, looking after the sheep of his father-in-law (Ex 3:1). This was an occupation for which the Egyptians had a total disdain. It is written, “for every shepherd is an abomination unto the Egyptians” (Gen 46:34). However, after having spent forty years among the Egyptians, Moses had still not become one of them. He was an Israelite in heart, and had “endured as seeing Him who is invisible” (Heb 11:27). The occupation the Egyptians considered to be abominable was no abomination to Moses. Although, from the standpoint of appearance, he had been one of the Egyptians, educated and cultured by them, yet he remained separate from them, being an Israelite in heart, and not an Egyptian.

The affirmation of Moses’ endurance by means of seeing Him who is invisible, is a commentary on Moses’ life from his tenure in Egypt until he was sent back to lead the people out of bondage. It is written that he forsook, Egypt by faith, and that he endured by means of his perception of God. This is how he survived in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Midian as well.

In this regard, Moses is much like Joseph, who preceded him in the land of Egypt.

- Both of them were removed from their families.
- Both of them were located in Egypt while young.
- Both of them found favor with Pharaoh.
- Both of them were aware of their heritage.
- Both of them maintained their faith.
- Both of them were rejected by their brethren.
- Both of them were persuaded of the truth of God’s promise to deliver Israel.
- Both of them preferred the association with the children of Israel to their connection with Pharaoh.
- Both of them experienced exile.
- Both of them kept the faith during their exile.

Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah had much the same experience in Babylon. They too were removed from their families when they were young, brought into a strange country, achieved status in that county, and were subjected to suffering while there. Yet, they also kept the faith, and chose identity with the people of God over identity with the Babylonians.

A PRINCIPLE TO BE SEEN

It is apparent that we are being exposed to the way the people of God approach life in this world.

When the Living God interfaces with a person or persons, they at once assume a different posture in this world. They may be in the world, but they are not of the world – just as Joseph and Moses were in Egypt, but was not of Egypt, and Daniel and his associates were in Babylon, yet were not of Babylon. This is why Jesus said to His disciples, “ye are not of the world” (John 15:19). It is why Peter addressed the saints “as strangers and pilgrims” (1 Pet 2:11). It is why the believers prior to Christ “confessed they were strangers and pilgrims in the earth” (Heb 11:13).

This principle, while consistent throughout Scripture, has been so obscured by institutional religion that is scarcely known. The modern church has settled down in this world, and feels at home in it, oblivious of the fact that such a posture constitutes one to be “the enemy of God” (James 4:4). No individual or group of individuals can immerse themselves in the affairs of this world, being joined to it in their hearts, without forfeiting Divine acceptance. It is not possible to be “the enemy of God,” and be blessed by Him while so characterized. Nor, indeed, is it possible, to have a carnal mind, or worldly mindset, and profit from the Word of God, or maintain any association with God that is beneficial. Enmity and reconciliation are opposites, and cannot be joined together. Where there is hostility against God, prayer is pointless, and blessing becomes impossible. There can be no understanding of the Word of God in such a case, and there is no promise of blessing to such an individual.

Just as surely as Moses could not be an integral part of the Egyptian culture and still be used by God for blessing, so the person who is a part of the world system, thinking and acting in harmony with the world, cannot be instrumental in the body of Christ. As soon as a person becomes one with the world, they are severed from the Lord. This is not a matter for speculation. If salvation is extrication from the world, then being one with the world cannot possibly be allowed in Christ Jesus. If, when we were a part of the world, we were the enemies of God, how is it possible to once again be joined to the world without again becoming God’s enemy?

Salvation separates people from the world, like Moses was separated from Egypt. He was separate in his perceptions, his desires, and his focus. He saw what the Egyptians could not see, and longed for what they did not understand. This is why he was able to endure as seeing Him who is invisible. An endurance of this sort is not possible when one is at home in the world. Had Moses been at home in Egypt, he would have had no interest in a God who could not be seen. It was his lack of at-homeness in Egypt, as well as in the desert, that required him to live by faith. There is no need for faith when what is satisfied with what can be seen.

This is precisely why believers are admonished, “Wherefore, come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord” (2 Cor 6:17). It is only then that the promise will be realized: “and I will receive you.” It is not possible that God would conduct Himself toward person in violation of this statement. A person who is not “separate” in the sense of this text cannot, in that state, experience Divine acceptance. If such poor souls imagine God has received them, they have only been deceived by the devil. God would not call upon people to separate in order that He might receive them, if He had received them already. It seems to me that it does not require any extraordinary insight to perceive this. Yet, if we look at professing Christendom, and weigh its general teachings, it actually appears as though God has lied in this statement, and has thoroughly misrepresented Himself. What, pray tell, will be the lot of a person who imagines that this is the case? Is it not written, “For what if some did not believe? Will their unbelief make the faithfulness of God without effect? Certainly not! Indeed, let God be true but every man a liar. As it is written: ‘That You may be justified in Your words, And may overcome when You are judged’ ” NKJV (Rom 3:3-4).

Rest assured, God will be justified in ALL of His sayings – and “Be ye separate and I will receive you,” is one of His sayings. He will overcome all who have conducted their lives as though this was not true. Before an assembled universe, and before the angels of God, they will be shown to be liars.

MOSES INVOLVED IN PURPOSE

In our text, God is preparing Moses for a forty-year-long circuitous journey through the wilderness. It is one in which Moses would manage the wayward house of Israel, which was God's own household. As our text opens, Moses has already spent forty years in this area. You might call it a period of wilderness training.

There is no evidence that he received any word from God during that time. Yet, his faith was kept in tact, even though it was not supported by an abundance of Divine communication. In fact, we have no example of God ever speaking directly to Moses until the event chronicled in our text – when he was eighty years old! However, he had kept the faith that he had, and now God will call upon Moses to focus on a work of gargantuan proportions. This confirms that faith can be kept under the most severe testing, and over a long period of time. Failing is always wrong.

WHEN FORTY YEARS WERE EXPIRED

“ 7:30a And when forty years were expired . . . ” Other versions read, “when forty years had passed,” NKJV “ after forty years had passed,” NASB “when forty years were fulfilled,” ASV “At the end of forty years,” BBE “forty years having been fulfilled,” YLT and “when forty years had gone by.” AMPLIFIED

Often it is a long time before God speaks to His chosen ones. There have been times when He dealt with His people at a very young age. Joseph was seventeen when he began having dreams from God, and went down into Egypt (Gen 37:2). Samuel was a very young boy when God began using him (1 Sam 3:7-8). David was still a young boy when the Lord called him (1 Sam 16:12-13). Josiah was eight years old when he became king (1 Kgs 22:1). Jehoiachin was also eight years old when he began to reign (2 Chron 36:9). Jehoash was seven years old when he began to reign (2 Kgs 11:121). Jehoahaz became king when he was sixteen years old (2 Kgs 13:10). Azariah was also made king when he was sixteen (2 Kgs 14:21). Uzziah was twenty-five years old when he became king (2 Kgs 15:33). Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah were also very young when carried into Babylon (Dan 1:3-6). John the Baptist was filled with the Holy Spirit from his mother's womb (Lk 1:15,41), and began his ministry at thirty (Lk 1:13 & 3:23). However, not every great man was called in his youth!

Noah was nearly five hundred old when he started building the ark, entering into it when he was six hundred years old (Gen 5:32; 7:6). Abraham was seventy-five years old when he left Haran and started for the promised land (Gen 12:4). Now, Moses is eighty when he is called by God. As is apparent, age is no factor when it comes to Divine workings – whether old or young.

The language here is very precise: “when forty years were expired.” The word “expired” is translated from the Greek word plhrwqe,ntwn (play-roth-en-ton). The root meaning of the word is “to make full, to fill, to fill up,” THAYER “to make full, fill completely,” FRIBERG “fulfill, make come true, bring about . . . accomplish,” UBS “to cause something to become full,” LOUW-NIDA “to fulfill, to perform . . . to complete a period of time” LEH and “complete, reach its end . . . bring to completion, finish something already begun.” GINGRICH

As the above word is used in scripture, it accents purpose rather than mere duration. That is why its definitions include fulfilling, making come true, and bringing to completion. This kind of term is not used to merely denote living out life without due regard to an established purpose. Here is a sampling of the use of this word, found ninety-two times in Matthew through Revelation. The words translated from this Greek word are in bold type.

- “Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying” (Matt 1:22).
- “He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled ” (John 3:29).

- “But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled ” (Acts 3:18).

- “And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ministry, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark” (Acts 12:25).

- “And as John fulfilled his course, he said, Whom think ye that I am? I am not he. But, behold, there cometh one after me, whose shoes of his feet I am not worthy to loose” (Acts 13:25).

- “That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit” (Rom 8:4).

- “Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law” (Rom 13:8).

- “And having in a readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience is fulfilled ” (2 Cor 10:6).

- “Which is His body, the fulness of Him that filleth all in all” (Eph 1:23).

- “And to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God” (Eph 3:19).

- “He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things” (Eph 4:10).

- “And ye are complete in Him, which is the head of all principality and power” (Col 2:10).

- “Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always laboring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God” (Col 4:12).

- “And say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it” (Col 4:17).

- “Be watchful, and strengthen the things which remain, that are ready to die: for I have not found thy works perfect before God” (Rev 3:2).

- “And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellowservants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled ” (Rev 6:11).

Our text is dealing with Divine purpose, not mere happenstance. Stephen has traced the working of God through Abraham, Joseph, and now Moses.

THE INVOLVEMENT OF GOD IN THE AFFAIRS OF HUMANITY

David once confessed, “My times are in Thy hand ” (Psa 31:15). He also said, “The steps of a good man are ordered by the LORD : and he delighteth in His way” (Psa 37:23). Solomon observed, “Man's goings are of the LORD ; how can a man then understand his own way?” (Prov 20:24). Jeremiah acknowledged, “O LORD, I know that the way of man is not in himself: it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps” (Jer 10:23). Daniel reminded wicked Belshazzar, “But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven . . . and the God in whose hand thy breath is , and whose are all thy ways , hast thou not glorified” (Dan 5:23). All of this is involved in something Paul told the Athenian philosophers: “And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation . . . For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said, For we are also his offspring” (Acts 17:26,28).

There are affirmations of Scripture that confirm that no man lives independently of God – free will not withstanding. We already know that the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord. However, that does not mean that the Lord has nothing to do with other people. Paul declared that God had strategically placed all men in both time and location. This was done to give them the advantage in seeking the Lord. “God did this so that men would seek Him and perhaps reach out for Him and find Him, though He is not far from each one of us” NIV (Acts 17:27).

The fact that men do not choose to have any dealings with God does not mean that He has no dealings with them. They are not favorable dealings, but He still impacts upon their lives. Once, when Israel was unresponsive to God, He spoke to them through Isaiah, saying what He would impose, upon them. “ I also will choose their delusions , and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not” (Isa 66:4). To the church, He speaks of this kind of judgment, confirming how disastrous it is to not hearken to the Lord: “And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie” (2 Thess 2:11). Not only would delusion be imposed upon the people, but the Lord would also choose the kind of delusion – so strong that the people would believe a lie. Add to this the fact that God can render people incapable of understanding His Word (Isa 6:9). He sometimes chooses to actually deceive certain false prophets in order that He might justly destroy them: “And if the prophet be deceived when he hath spoken a thing, I the LORD have deceived that prophet , and I will stretch out my hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of my people Israel” (Ezek 14:9).

The point to be seen is that God is involved in the affairs of men, whether for blessing or cursing. Ultimately, it is God Himself “with whom we have to do” (Heb 4:13). Lives commence by His power, are sustained according to His purpose, and are terminated at his will. Even if it is Joseph being hated, sold, enslaved, and imprisoned in a foreign land, from the higher vantage point it can be said to the perpetrators of the crime, “So now it was not you that sent me hither, but God” (Gen 45:8). Further, Joseph was kept in chains for a specified amount of time: “Until the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him” (Psa 105:19).

SO IT WAS WITH MOSES

So it was with Moses. The purpose of God was being served by his tenure in the wilderness of Midian.

- The time of his birth was precisely timed (Ex 2:2; Acts 7:20).
- The duration of. His protection by his parents was precise (Ex 2:2; Acts 7:20).
- His placement in the river in a basket, and his discovery by Pharaoh’s daughter was orchestrated from heaven (Ex 2:3-10; Acts 7:21).
- Moses visited his people at the age of forty, when it was the right time to heighten his readiness for the appointed work (Ex 2:11; 7:23).
- He left Egypt at the right time, when his brethren did not yet realize his Divine placement (Ex 2:14-15; Acts 7:25-29).

Stephen is showing the insolence of humanity in resisting God. The hardness of the unregenerate heart is seen in its rebellion against the will of a Sovereign God – the Creator and Sustainer of the people themselves.

He went to the right geographical area at the right time, to meet the right people, stay with the right family, and culture the right relationships (Ex 2:16-22; Acts 7:29).

Thus Moses' birth, his time in Egypt, and his time in the desert were all under Divine control, and were fulfilled according to God's appointment. His time in the desert was sufficient to acquaint him with desert life – in a sense it might be called desert survival training . When the time of the appointed deliverance came, Moses would not be unfamiliar with the kind of terrain through which he would lead the children of Israel.

His time in the desert allowed for a Pharaoh to be raised up by God who would occasion great glory being brought to God (Ex 9:16; Rom 9:17). It lasted long enough for the Israelites to be fully ready to leave the land of Egypt.

Also, during this time Moses' brother Aaron and his sister Miriam were sustained in Egypt, their faith being kept in tact. They would be brought along side Moses to effect God's deliverance of the people from Egypt. As it is written in Micah, "For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam " (Micah 6:4). The Lord "sent" Moses from Midian, and Aaron and Miriam from within the confines of Egypt itself – and all at the appointed time for the appointed work.

Thus it is again confirmed that preparations belong to the Lord: "The preparations of the heart in man, and the answer of the tongue, is from the LORD " (Prov 16:1). The "times" of men are in the hand of the Lord (Psa 31:15). All things are "of Him, and through Him, and to Him" (Rom 11:36). This is why insightful men can give "thanks always for all things" (Eph 5:20) – something that would not be possible if God was not involved in "all things." This is why enlightened people can "bless the Lord at all times" (Psa 34:1). Although the Lord does not always provide us with the details, we can live believing that He is, in fact, working all things together for our good (Rom 8:27). That kind of working would not be possible if there were circumstances or seasons that were not under His control.

The Point Being Made

Stephen is building a case that will confirm the continued obstinance of Israel. By establishing the purpose of God, and confirming His orchestration of the events associated with His development of a nation from which the Messiah would come, Stephen is showing the insolence of humanity in resisting God. The hardness of the unregenerate heart is seen in its rebellion against the will of a Sovereign God – the Creator and Sustainer of the people themselves. There is no greater revelation of the stupidity into which sin has cast our race than to resist the wisdom and revealed purpose of God. The ultimate foolishness is for the created ones to choose their own will over the manifested will of their Creator. This is what Paul refers to as not liking to "retain God in their knowledge" (Rom 1:28).

Although men have found convenient ways of explaining this glaring human trait, there is no way to dignify it. If not corrected, it is a manner that will eventually lead men into "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power" (2 Thess 1:9). God will not accept those who are fundamentally unlike Himself. His nature will not allow Him to do so. Hence, the necessity of redemption and a new creation.

The dreadful impact of erroneous theology upon the hearts and minds of people is confirmed by the length of time that has consistently been required for even devoted people to comprehend these facts. Under the dominance of a fundamentally flawed way of thinking, men have tended to reason more in terms of duty and requirements than of grace and truth.

The dreadful impact of erroneous theology upon the hearts and minds of people is confirmed by the length of time that has consistently been required for even devoted people to comprehend these facts. Under the dominance of a fundamentally flawed way of thinking, men have tended to reason more in terms of duty and requirements than of grace and truth. The religious mind gravitates to Law, imagining that this is the appointed means of governing and correcting wayward humanity. But this is not the case. The Law was never designed to correct the human condition, but rather identify it. In this way, the necessity of Jesus and the value of faith would become more readily apparent.

The Law mentality is a more difficult mindset to overcome than appears evident. The Colossian church was being pulled aside to this way of thinking (Col 2:20-23). This was also true of the church of the Galatians (Gal 1:6-9; 3:16-25). The epistle to Hebrew believers also addressed this way of thinking, because it had obscured the essentiality, ministry, and effectiveness of Jesus Himself (Heb 8:1-10:39). Although somewhat advanced, the church in Rome also required extensive instruction on this matter of inherent human weakness and the nature of justification by faith (Rom 2:17-5:9).

Even though, once the completeness of human corruption and the necessity of Jesus are seen, they are perfectly clear and reasonable, many of us had to wade through some very murky waters before we saw their wonderful necessity. In fact, one might say these are really elementary matters – matters related to the necessity of salvation, and the requirement for a new birth, or regeneration. One might imagine that their glory will cause them to shine forth, instantly removing the darkness created by aberrant religious thinking. However, this is not the case. The persuasion of these things requires an aggressive posture. It is one in which the Kingdom is seized with violence, and taken by force “as a precious prize” AMPLIFIED (Matt 11:12).

The continued veneration of the wisdom of men within the professed Christian community, and the exaltation of human wisdom, confirms these two things have not been discerned (the necessity of salvation, and the requirement of the new birth). The successful hawking of religious routine, the commandments and ordinances of men, and various systems of law and tradition, unveils that men remain fundamentally ignorant of the revealed rationale behind salvation. In spite of the fact that faith is plainly declared to be the means of acquiring both Divine favor and a proper understanding, men continue to peddle other means through which discernment may be obtained. Some say the secret is a working knowledge of the Greek and the Hebrew. Others postulate that a certain hermeneutic, or science of interpretation, is required. Still others write their own summation of imagined liberating secrets, encapsulating them in a creed that becomes the key to comprehending the truth. However, none of these approaches properly account for sin and all of its dreadful effects. Those who develop them are unable to see the degenerate state of Adam’s entire race, else they would not hold human wisdom in such high regard. Such men continue to imagine that if men can only be given enough information, they will be able to work through their problems, make themselves acceptable to God, and control the outbreak of sin.

This mindset, flawed to the core, is the mother of all multi-step plans that are purported to control human behavior. It is what gives birth to human strategies designed to accomplish what God is perceived to have commanded or commissioned – whether it is spiritual growth, church planting, church growth, or mission outreach. This is the way of thinking that spawned the concept of accountability to our peers as a means to spiritual stability. It has produced all manner of self-help programs that profess to produce stable families, good husbands, good wives, and commendable young people. It is not that it is wrong to desire stability within the Christian community. Rather, it is wrong to seek such a thing independently of grace and faith – neither of which give any weight to the wisdom of men.

Getting to the Point

Permit me to get more to the point behind these observations. Stephen is addressing a people who have been cultured by God. Their origin was traced back to God himself, being a miraculous one. Their growth into a nation could not be accounted for independently of God Himself. Their concept of God was a revealed one. The Law which formed a covenant between them and God was given by the Lord – every syllable of it, with every jot and tittle. They had been recovered and delivered from impossible circumstances. They were provided with faithful prophets who delivered to them the Divine assessment of their condition, and offered specific remedies for it. The Lord delivered to them special customs and observances that were designed to highlight their God-blessed condition. There was a Divine commitment given to them of blessing – thorough blessing – if they would keep and do everything required of them.

These people could not possibly have been given greater promises pertaining to life in this world. Nor, indeed, could there have been curses relative to life in the flesh that were any stronger. So far as life in this world is concerned, no people were ever given any great advantages or incentives. No people had ever been so blessed. This is why Moses reminded them, “For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the LORD our God is in all things that we call upon him for? And what nation is there so great, that hath statutes and judgments so righteous as all this law, which I set before you this day?” (Deut 4:7-8). God Himself challenged these people to consider their advantages: “What could have been done more to My vineyard, that I have not done in it?” (Isa 5:4). He assessed their wayward condition with startling words: “Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint” (Isa 1:5). Hear Him lament through Jeremiah: “In vain have I smitten your children; they received no correction” (Jer 2:30).

These people – the Israelites – confirmed that men cannot correct their wayward condition, even when they are given all of the information and tools to do so. If ever a people should have known their need of a Savior, it should have been this people. Yet, the only people who rose above their peers were those who lived by faith.

Why were these things said? If men can be altered by advantage, why did that not happen to these people? If reformation is possible by routine, and correction can be made by information and rules, then why were these people not reformed? They had an excellent beginning. Their circumstances were Divinely created, altered, and maintained. Right and wrong were clearly delineated and expounded to them. Required information was delivered to them in a timely manner. They had the best land, the best law, and the best promises. They were provided with details required to approach to the Lord in such a way as would keep them from being destroyed.

Why were they not changed by these things? Is it because they were the worst of all people? Indeed not! They were the most favored of all people. They were a cultured people – and over an extended period of time.

These people – the Israelites – confirmed that men cannot correct their wayward condition, even when they are given all of the information and tools to do so. If ever a people should have known their need of a Savior, it should have been this people. Yet, the only people who rose above their peers were those who lived by faith. Because they believed, those people loved the Law, and sought to fulfill it. Yet, even they found they could not do so on their own – even though they had the promises, faith, and a profound desire to please God.

Of such people it is written, “These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth” (Heb 11:13). It is therefore a reproach for those living in the blazing glory of the New Covenant to have less faith and less persuasion than those who did not receive the promises. That is a completely intolerable condition.

Do men imagine that they can reform people with their routines, when such a reformation did not take place under Divine administration. Satan has deceived men into thinking this is possible. All of the “_____ anonymous” programs, however good they may appear, assume that this can be done – that men can be changed by procedure. Yet, these rules cannot go far enough, and the persons who develop them know it. They cannot get a person beyond the point of acknowledging that he is still the same as he has always been. Only now, they allege, he is able to control the condition.

But this is not satisfactory before God. It is not enough to control our downward bent. There must be something in men that glories in the presence and blessing of the Lord, and seeks it so zealously that all competing interests are discarded in life's garbage can. Only the salvation of God can accomplish this. In view of this circumstance, woe to that person who seeks a resolution to the human circumstance from mere men, who themselves must be saved.

In his expert defense, Stephen is confirming Israel's need of a Savior. He is showing how unreasonable they have been in their consistent rejection of those who were sent by God. This will confirm their fundamental corruption – something they held in common with all men. However, he himself is a sterling example of how that condition is corrected in Christ Jesus. This is his conduct under extreme duress, and it brings glory to the Lord.

AN ANGEL APPEARED TO MOSES

“30b . . . there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.”

The book of Exodus provides a few details concerning the forty years Moses spent in Egypt. They are enough to reveal the nature of Moses, and how he was a man of faith during that time.

From one perspective, grievous experiences and isolation are really incidental. That is, they are really not the focus of life, but are the means through which the people of God are prepared for Divine appointments. That is why Paul could speak so matter-of-factly concerning his staggering sufferings, which were both numerous and severe.

Sometime after Moses arrived in Midian, he sat down by a well. The timing was precise, when the seven daughters of the priest of Midian came to draw water for their father's flocks (Ex 2:15-16).

- At that precise time, certain shepherds came and drove the daughters away from the well (Ex 2:17a).
- Moses, being providentially at the well at that time, arose, helping the daughters, and watering their flocks (Ex 2:17b).
- When the daughters returned to their father, upon being asked why they returned so early, they told him how an Egyptian, Moses, had helped them and drew water “enough” for them, and “watered the flock” (Ex 2:18-19).
- Their father asked why they had left the man, and told them to call him to their home to “eat bread” with them (Ex 2:10).
- The man and his daughters were so gracious, that Moses “was content to dwell with the man” (Ex 2:21a).
- The man “gave Moses Zipporah his daughter” as his wife (Ex 2:21a).
- Zipporah gave birth to Moses' first son, Gershom (Ex 2:21b). Some time latter, she also gave birth to another son, Eliezer, not mentioned until after she returned to her father's house from Egypt, where she had gone with Moses (Ex 18:4; 4:24-26).
- From there, the record in Exodus leaps forward to the time when the Pharaoh died who was reigning when Moses fled from Egypt. It was at that time that Israel's bondage was nearly unbearable, and their cries came up into the ears of Almighty God (Ex 2:23-25).

A Certain Perspective

There is a certain perspective of life that is seen in this text. From one perspective, grievous experiences and isolation are really incidental. That is, they are really not the focus of life, but are the means through which the people of God are prepared for Divine appointments. That is why Paul could speak so matter-of-factly concerning his staggering sufferings, which were both numerous and severe (1 Cor 4:10-13; 2 Cor 4:7-12; 6:4-5,8-10; 11:23-27). He knew that the true measure of life is not in the area of suffering and hardship, but in Divine employment and blessing.

This is why it is wrong to probe life's difficulties, attempting to find their source, and arrive at satisfactory explanations for them. When things are not clear, pondering why difficult experiences happen is not wise. It is enough to know and believe that all of our trials are managed, and that they will not exceed the strength of those who trust in the Lord (1 Cor 10:13). It is also a sweet elixir for the soul to consider how God is, in fact, working all things together for our good – whether we are able to see it or not.

The church of our day has not done well with its stewardship of the truth. Its slothfulness in this regard has given occasion for opportunists to rise within the professing church who exploit the people, pretending that they are experts in human behavior and problem resolution. These pretenders trace difficulty to heredity, genetic makeup, social environment, family curses, and the likes. They do not explain to the people why they have survived – even though it may have been in a desert like Moses, a prison like Joseph, or a dungeon like Paul. All of this is a very serious matter because it has produced a religious environment in which self-seeking charlatans can flourish, while the people remain oppressed by ignorance.

Stephen's review of the life of Moses is not a mere recap of history. It is not an attempt to show the glory of national heritage. Stephen is declaring the presence of God in the affairs of men, and the manner in which He works out His purpose in hostile environs. He is also showing the effects of a strong faith, as well as spiritual obtuseness.

THERE APPEARED TO HIM IN THE WILDERNESS OF SINAI

“ . . . there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai . . .” Other versions read, “in the desert near Mount Sinai,” NIV “in the waste land of Sinai,” BBE and “ in the wilderness (desert) of Mount Sinai” AMPLIFIED

After forty years in Midian, we now find Moses in the desert that was near to Mount Sinai. The record of this event is found in the third chapter of Exodus. There we are told that Moses was keeping the flock of his father in law, Jethro. At that time, he had spent as much time in Midian as he had in Egypt – forty years. We are also told that he was on the “backside of the desert,” and that he had “led the flock” there. Other versions say this was on the “west side of the wilderness,” NASB or “the far side of the desert.” NIV The precise point, according to the record in Exodus, was “to the mountain of God, even Horeb” (Ex 3:1). Stephen identifies this mountain as “Mount Sinai,” from which the Law was given.

Thus, we have these four designations of the mountain from which the Law was given, and a covenant made with Israel: “the mountain of God,” or “the mount of God,” “Horeb,” and “Mount Sinai.”

The frequent references to this place, and what is said about it, are worthy of notation.

- “The mountain of God.” This is where Moses received his calling to lead Israel out of Egypt to the promised land (Ex 3:1).
- “Mount of God.” This is where God told Aaron to go, out of Egypt to meet with Moses (Ex 4:27). It is where Jethro brought Zipporah and Moses' sons to him after the exodus (Ex 18:5). It is where Moses spent time with God following the giving of the Law (Ex 24:13). It is where Elijah journeyed for forty days to meet with the Lord (1 Kgs 19:8).

- “Horeb.” This is where Moses brought water out of a rock (Ex 17:6). It is where Israel “stripped themselves of their ornaments” (Ex 33:6). Deuteronomy refers to this mount as the place where God spoke to Israel and revealed the Law (1:2,6,19; 4:10,15; 5:2; 9:8; 18;16; 29:1). It is where God made the covenant with Israel (1 Kgs 8:9; 2 Chron 5:10). It is also identified as the place where Elijah met with God (1 Kgs 19:8). It is where Israel worshiped a golden calf (Psa 105:19). It is where God commanded the Law “with its statutes and judgments” (Mal 4:4).

- “Sinai.” This was located in the wilderness through which God led Israel out of Egypt (Ex 19:1-2). God came down in the sight of the people in this place (Ex 19:11). Sinai was enveloped with fire and smoke, and quaked greatly when God descended upon it (Ex 19:18). God called Moses to the top of this mount, to give him the Law (Ex 19:20). God forbade the people to go up into this mount (Ex 19:23). The glory of God remained upon this mount for over forty days (Ex 24:16-18). This is where Moses received the tables of the covenant (Ex 31:18). It is where Moses received the second set of tables after he had broken the first in his anger toward the people (Ex 34:2-4). It is where Moses delivered the law verbally to the people (Ex 34:32). The details of keeping the Law were revealed from Sinai (Lev 7:38; 25:1; 26:46; 27:34; Num 28:6). Thousands of angels came to this mount at the giving of the Law (Deut 33:2). Mount Sinai is an allegory of the First Covenant (Gal 4:24-25).

Here is a geographical location identified with God Himself – and the Holy Spirit makes the association. God has made such associations frequently in Scripture, and we cannot afford to ignore them. They confirm the effect of Divine influences.

- Abraham returned to a place where he had built an altar, and there “called upon the name of the Lord” (Gen 13:4).
- Jacob referred to a specific plot of land as “the house of God” (Gen 28:17).
- During the times of the Judges, the children of Israel went to a specific place to seek Divine counsel – “the house of God” (Judges 20:18).
- God hallowed the Temple, and declared He had “put” His name there (1 Kgs 9:3).
- God chose Jerusalem as a place to “put” His name, associating it with himself (1 Kgs 11:36).
- The place in which the Levites served is referred to as “the tabernacle of the house of God” (1 Chron 6:45).
- Jesus referred to the Temple as “My Father’s house” (John 2:16).
- God referred to the land of Canaan as “My land” (Isa 14:25; Jer 2:7).
- Jesus frequently “resorted” to a specific garden for prayer with His disciples (John 18:2).

The point here is not the inordinate veneration of buildings and places. However, wherever men are vouchsafed extraordinary visitations and spiritual insights, holy men have maintained a special view of such places.

AN ANGEL OF THE LORD IN FLAME OF FIRE IN A BUSH

“ . . . an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush.” Other versions read, “an angel . . . in the flame of a burning thorn bush,” NASB “a messenger . . . in the flames of a burning bush,” GWN “the angel of the Lord . . . in a fire that burned in a bush,” MRD “an angel . . . in a flame blazing from a bush that was on fire,” NJB “an angel in the middle of a flame of fire in a bush,” WEYMOUTH and

“an angel, in the flame of a burning bramblebush .” AMPLIFIED

This account is record in Exodus 3:2: “And the angel of the LORD appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of a bush: and he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed” (Ex 3:2). The Exodus account reveals that the fire was not a consuming fire. It did not diminish the properties of the bush, or cause it to change its appearance. Remember, this was in a desert, which makes the phenomenon all the more remarkable.

When referring to this incident, Jesus said that “in the bush God spake unto him” (Mk 12:26).

Angelic Involvements

In Christ, we are told that angels are “all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?” (Heb 1:14). In this case, an angel will bring a message from God to Moses. There are frequent references to messages delivered by holy angels. Several of them spoke for God in the first person.

- “The angel of the Lord” gave extensive instruction to Hagar, Sarai’s handmaid declaring, “I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, that it shall not be numbered for multitude” (Gen 16:7-12).
- “The angel of the Lord” appeared to Abraham saying, “By Myself I have sworn saith the Lord . . . I will bless thee . . . I will multiply the seed . . . thou hast obeyed My voice” (Gen 22:15-18).
- When Jacob was with Laban, “the angel of God” appeared to him in a dream, instructing him to return to the land of his kindred. In his message the angel said, “I am the God of Bethel” (Gen 31:11-13).
- “The angel of the Lord” appeared to Gideon, calling him to be a deliverer. In the dialog of the angel it is written, “And the Lord said unto him” (Judges 6:12-23).

There are numerous incidents like this, but these will suffice to establish a certain facet of Divine workings. Some have read such texts and concluded that “the angel of the Lord” was a pre-

The answer to this seeming dilemma is really quite simple. These messengers spoke the word of God. They delivered the precise message that God sent them to deliver. They did not have to precede their message by saying, “The Lord told me to say,” or something similar. Real messengers are not required to speak in such a manner.

incarnate appearance of the Lord Jesus. This is a prominent view among several conservative theologians. However, it is a view that is seriously flawed. It represents the pre-incarnate Word as a Messenger prior to His humiliation – for an angel is a messenger, and even has the “form” of a servant, although it is a form superior to that of man. However, Jesus is pointedly declared to have taken upon Himself “the form of a servant” when He entered into the world in a body that had been prepared for Him (Phil 2:7; Heb 10:5-9). It is also stated that, in redemption, Jesus “took not on Him the nature of angels” (Heb 2:17). Further, there is not the slightest doctrinal hint that he took upon Himself such a nature prior to coming into the world. The first, and only, time that Jesus is said to have laid aside Divine prerogatives is when He was sent by the Father “to be the Savior of the world” (1 John 4:14). Then, and only then, did He make Himself “of no reputation,” or is said to have “emptied Himself” (Phil 2:7).

In order for “the Word, who was with God and was God” (John 1:1) , to come into the world in any form, would have required some form of condescension. We know this is the case because God is said to humble Himself “to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth” (Psa 113:6).

Why Did These Angels Speak in the First Person?

If these angelic appearances were not really the Lord Jesus Himself, prior to the Word becoming flesh, why did they speak as though they were God Himself? This is the very point over which some students of Scripture have stumbled, thereby concluding that “the angel of the Lord” was really the Lord Himself – which appears to me to be a glaring paradox.

The answer to this seeming dilemma is really quite simple. These messengers spoke the word of God. They delivered the precise message that God sent them to deliver. They did not have to precede their message by saying, “The Lord told me to say,” or something similar. Real messengers are not required to speak in such a manner. A “thus saith the Lord” is precisely that – what the Lord has said. The fact that the word was delivered by a heavenly messenger does not diminish in the slightest the fact that God had said it.

An Example in the Giving of the Law

We have a sterling example of this in the giving of the Law from Sinai. In the account of the giving of the Law, the people are said to have heard “the voice of God” (Deut 4:33). In recounting how they received the covenant, Moses said, “And the LORD spake unto you out of the midst of the fire: ye heard the voice of the words, but saw no similitude; only ye heard a voice. And He declared unto you His covenant, which He commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and He wrote them upon two tables of stone” (Deut 4:13). Repeatedly this experience is referred to as hearing “the voice of the Lord” (Deut 5:25; 8:20; 13:18; 15:5; 18:16; 27:10; 28:1).

Yet, in the apostolic exposition of the giving of the Law, the law is said to have been spoken by angels. “For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward” (Heb 2:2). In this very passage, Stephen says the Law was received “by the disposition of angels,” or “by the direction of angels” (Acts 7:53). Paul says the Law, or the First Covenant, was “ordained by angels” (Gal 3:19). Yet, even though it was spoken by angels, it carried all of the force of a direct word from God, as though spoken without a mediator.

We have yet another example of a word delivered by an angel who also spoke in the first person. It was the angel who delivered the Revelation to John on the Isle of Patmos. John begins the Revelation with these words: “The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to show unto His servants things which must shortly come to pass; and He sent and signified it by His angel unto His servant John” (Rev 1:1). The message was then delivered by John to the messengers of the churches, who were, in turn, to deliver it to the churches (Rev 1:11; 2:1,8,12,18; 3:1,7,14).

The message originated with God, and was ultimately delivered to “the churches.” Between God and the churches there were four messengers: Jesus, an angel, John, and the messenger to each church. Is there any honest soul who imagines that the message was any less from God when it was delivered to the churches than it was when it was given to Jesus? Is there the slightest possibility that the message lost significance, power, or any jot of tittle of content as it passed from Jesus to the angel, to John, to the messenger of each church?

Notice how the angel spoke to John, for the message was delivered to him by an angel that was sent by Jesus. “I will come unto thee quickly . . . I will give thee a crown of life . . . I will cast her into bed . . . I will kill her children with death . . . I will not blot his name out of the book of life . . . I will confess his name before My Father, and before His angels . . . I will write upon him My new name . . . I will spue thee out of My mouth . . . Behold, I stand at the door and knock . . . I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the end . . . I will be his God, and he shall be My son” (2:5, 10,22,23, 3:5,12,16; 21:6,7). Jesus Himself confirms that these words were delivered by His angel: “I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star” (Rev 22:16).

What Shall We Say to These Things?

Thus, even though an angel spoke to Moses at the bush, it was also God speaking to him, calling him, and informing of His own purpose. The words spoken to Moses did not lose their full force because they were conveyed to him by an angel. It would have been out of order for Moses to insist that God speak directly with him on these matters, so he would know for sure that they were coming from him. It was this sort of response that caused Zecharias to be struck dumb for a season. When a chief angel, even Gabriel, delivered a word to him concerning the imminent birth of John the Baptist, Zecharias replied, “Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years” (Luke 1:18). The response of the angel fortifies the observations I have just made. “I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to show thee these glad tidings. And, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season” (Luke 1:20).

There is something more to be noted here than mere academics, and we do well do be able to reason with these things in mind. What shall we say of, what has been falsely termed, higher criticism, where men with the vastly inferior tools of human wisdom, assess the Word of God, imagining to determine what is valid and what is spurious? Precisely how does this fit into what is known of God and His revealed manners, particularly regarding getting messages to men? Following the defeat of the Amalekites, when Israel triumphed because Moses’ hands were held up by Aaron and Hur, God commanded Moses, “ Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven” (Ex 17:14). Was that commandment attended by any jeopardy that the truth of the incident would be subjected to corruption? When Moses wrote, was there any chance that his record would be distorted, slanted, or subject to error? When God had finished revealing the entirety of the First Covenant, together with its attending ordinances, He commanded Moses, “ Write thou these words: for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel” (Ex 34:27). Was there any possibility that Moses’ words could be flawed, partial, or exaggerated? Would he leave something out, or add something? We know this is not the case, because hundreds of years later, the Lord Jesus referred to Moses’ words as authoritative, having lost no power whatsoever (Matt 8:4; 19:8; Mk 7:10; 10:3; 12:26; John 5:46).

When men have difficulty understanding the Scriptures, it is questionable that it is order to look for a better translation, or one that is more easily understand. Men may sanction such an approach, but it is not a wise one, for it thrusts the soul upon the shaky foundation of human judgment. It is better for men to seek understanding from God, as did holy men before us (Psa 119:34,73,125,144,169). Even after Paul had written to Timothy with clarity, he admonished the young evangelist, “Consider what I say; and the Lord give thee understanding in all things” (2 Tim 2:7).

Of course, the circumstances men are facing today, concerning the validity of Scripture, is a relatively new phenomenon. Of old time, holy men and women were more inclined to associate Scripture with God Himself. However, God has become so obscure to the professing church that this is no longer the norm. More and more the Scriptures themselves are being questioned and critiqued. God is greatly to be praised that Moses was not such a man. When he heard from God he knew it, and he submitted to the Divine call. That has always been the response of holy people – those who possessed faith. The other kind of people simply did not hear from the Lord, and were not called into holy involvement in what He was doing. If people balk at the Word of God, the possibility of them being involved with Him, or blessed by Him, is, to say the least, significantly reduced, if not altogether eliminated.

A WONDERMENT THAT CAUSES MOSES TO DRAW NEAR

“ 31a When Moses saw it, he wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to behold it . . . ”

One of the marks of a godly man, and a consistent trait of faith, is a holy curiosity. I say holy curiosity, for such people are not driven by a mere interest in novelty. Rather, there is an underlying thrust for the living God that drives their interest in the unusual. Within the fabric of faith there is the thread of expectation. This is manifested when one peruses the Word of God and comes across some challenging statement of arresting promise. Whereas the carnal mind views this as something beyond reach, the spiritual mind sees it as something within reach, yet requiring extended effort and Divine assistance. While this kind of response cannot be codified or diagnosed after the manner of men, its presence will be readily acknowledged by all who are of tender heart. This text provides us with an illustration of the compelling nature of this intuitive quality.

WHEN MOSES SAW IT

“When Moses saw it . . .” Other versions read, “When he saw this,” NIV “And Moses, seeing it,” BBE and “Moses having seen.” YLT

At once we see the alertness of Moses. Although he was involved in an activity that could become a mere routine, disengaging the mind and attention, it did not have this effect upon Moses. Something unusual occurred in his vicinity, and he saw it. There are many poor souls who are in the presence of extraordinary things, yet are blissfully unaware that they are even there. When it comes to dealings with the Living God, this is a dreadful condition of mind. Yet, we live in a society that actually cultures disinterest in anything outside of the circumference of purely selfish and fleshly interests.

Concerning the sight of the burning bush, Moses perceived it, discerned it, or saw beyond the surface of the matter. The words of Exodus 3:2 are, “and he looked.” The idea is that he fastened his eyes upon the sight, gazing intently upon it. Whatever duties were associated with keeping these sheep, this sight took hold of his attention. This, of course, is often the manner in which the Lord works – getting out attention by some out-of-the-ordinary means.

HE WONDERED AT THE SIGHT

“ . . . he wondered at the sight . . . ” Other versions read “he began to marvel at the sight,” NASB “he was amazed,” NIV “He was full of wonder,” BBE “Moses was surprised when he saw this,” GWN “Moses was amazed by what he saw,” NJB “he was astonished and marveled at the sight,” AMPLIFIED and “the sight filled Moses with wonder.” PHILLIPS

The word “wonder” is an expression of intelligence, analysis, and astute observation. It means more than merely being shocked, or arrested with the sensational nature of a sight. There is a wonder that provokes fear. In this case, wonder provoked inquiry. It ought to be noted that Divine workings have this quality. Where there are sensitive hearts, the working of the Lord compels an intense interest that forbids the person to ignore what is seen.

The account in Exodus reveals what there was about this sight that captured the attention of Moses: “he looked, and, behold, the bush burned with fire, and the bush was not consumed” (Ex 3:2). This could never have been detected by a fleeting glance. Moses had to keep his attention on the bush for some time to draw this conclusion. The bush was not smoldering, it was aflame with fire – a fire that was a blaze. In the desert, this bramble bush would have ordinarily been quickly consumed by such a fire. Yet, this fire had no destructive effect upon the bush.

There are at least five references to this “bush” in Scripture.

- “And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of Him that dwelt in the bush : let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren” (Deut 33:16).

- “And as touching the dead, that they rise: have ye not read in the book of Moses, how in the bush God spake unto him, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?” (Mark 12:26).

- “Now that the dead are raised, even Moses showed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Luke 20:37).

- “And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the wilderness of mount Sinai an angel of the Lord in a flame of fire in a bush” (Acts 7:30).

- “This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush” (Acts 7:35).

This event will prove to be a pivot upon which the history of the children of Israel will turn. It will be the beginning of something that will be told to countless generations – something through which the Lord will receive great glory.

AS HE DREW NEAR

TO BEHOLD IT

“ . . . and as he drew near to behold it . . .” Other versions read, “and he drew near to observe,” NKJV “and as he approached to look more closely,” NASB “he went over to look more closely,” NIV “as he approached to look,” NRSV “as he went up to consider it,” DARBY “as he drew near to view it,” DOUAY “when he approached to investigate,” NET “as he ran to see,” LIVING and “on his going up to look further,” WEYMOUTH

The picture is one of Moses making haste to get to the burning bush and see it more closely. The record in Exodus reads that Moses reasoned within himself, “I will now turn aside, and see this great sight, why the bush is not burnt” (Ex 3:3). Moses now comes closer to consider this sight more intently, seeking to find a reason for this unusual phenomenon.

This kind of response is always the prelude to understanding – particularly in matters pertaining to life and godliness. One does not come upon truth accidentally, or stumble on to great insights. The man who found a treasure in the field was engaged in some activity in that field, whether digging or perusing the ground (Matt 13:44). The man who found the pearl of great price was engaged in a quest for “goodly pearls” (Matt 13:45). That is the nature of spiritual advancement – first obtaining an interest in Kingdom realities, turning aside from the normalities of life to pursue them, and then receiving them.

Truth cannot be obtained apart from a dominating interest in it. It can never be known, and its liberating effects realized, apart from pursuing it – turning aside like Moses to consider it. This accounts for the rarity of real participation in the things of God by great masses of professing Christians. It is not that the things of God are not accessible. Rather, it is because of a lack of interest in them. It is not because they are too profound, but because they are not pursued, being intently sought. There is no reluctance on God’s part to unveil truth to those who seek it. Jesus will not withhold things pertaining to life and godliness from those who earnestly desire them. It is an affront to God to even suggest that such restraint exists with the Him. Neither God nor Christ ever responds to genuine interest by obscuring the things offered to men.

Many a soul has confronted their own burning bush – like a call from God to draw near and receive the good things of God – things that are in Christ Jesus. That call, however, can be ignored, and the lesser things of life in this world preferred. No person making such a choice can expect to be blessed by either Divine calling or spiritual insight.

Of course, if a person embraces a concept of religion that does not allow for the involvement of the Lord with His people, they will never even see a burning bush. When men do not answer the call of God, the person cannot count on God simply calling on another occasion. I will not presume to say that could not happen – but no soul is wise in counting on that taking place. God once said to Israel, “Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer ; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not” (Isa 65:12). Again He said, “I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer ; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not” (Isa 66:4).

Believers are admonished to draw near to the Lord – like Moses drew near to that burning bush. “Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water” (Heb 10:22). And again, “ Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded” (James 4:8). In fact, the New Covenant economy is one of drawing near to God. As it is written, “For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God ” (Heb 7:19).

If, under the Old Covenant, David could say, “it is good for me to draw near to God” (Psa 73:28), what can be said by those who have been delivered from the power of darkness, and translated into the Kingdom of His dear Son (Col 1:13)? How much there is to be learned from this text, pregnant with meaning!

A point of Concern

In our day there has been a revival of drawing near to God with the mouth, while allowing the heart to remain at a distance from Him. Because this is a point of condemnation, something needs to be said about it.

In our day there has been a revival of drawing near to God with the mouth , while allowing the heart to remain at a distance from Him. Because this is a point of condemnation, something needs to be said about it. Through Isaiah, God rebuked the children of Israel for this manner. “Wherefore the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near Me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor Me, but have removed their heart far from Me , and their fear toward Me is taught by the precept of men” (Isa 29:13). Because of the presence of this manner, God imposed spiritual ignorance upon the people. “Therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder: for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid” (Isa 29:14). The people of Ezekiel’s times were rebuked for the same thing. “And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness ” (Ezek 33:31).

During Jesus’ ministry, He also rebuked that generation for this sin. “This people draweth nigh unto Me with their mouth, and honoreth Me with their lips; but their heart is far from Me” (Matt 15:8). He announced that as a consequence of this conduct, their religion was nothing more than an exercise in vanity. “But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men” (Matt 15:9).

Hebrew believers were warned not to allow such a heart to enter into them. “Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God ” (Heb 3:12). Their religion was not to be on a cyclical basis, but on a daily basis . “But exhort one another daily , while it is called To day; lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin” (Heb 3:13). It is clear, therefore, that drawing near to God with the mouth, while the heart remains aloof from Him, is not a condition to be taken lightly. If not corrected, it will end with God rejecting and blinding the individual.

In our time, as I have said, this sin has grown into great prominence. It has been encapsulated in the modern praise movement, which, while not totally wrong, is certainly not the epitome of spiritual maturity. This movement is not in any way noted for its depth, understanding, or soundness of doctrine. It is more comfortable with Old Covenant perceptions and expressions than those of the New Covenant. Its adherents are largely ignorant of the Scriptures, the purpose of God, and the ministry of Jesus. There is too much of the world in their words, appearance, and manners. There is untold trouble in their ranks with moral weakness. No one familiar with this movement will doubt these things. It is a movement that is largely composed of novices who have imposed their ways upon older believers, and have actually reshaped the way people think about God, praise, the gathering of saints, the preaching of the Word, and other things. The reshaping has not been for the better, and has not yielded good fruit.

Whatever may be said of this movement, it is one of the mouth more than of the heart. The people are not noted for purity, sacrifice, or a zeal for the house of the Lord. They are not a people of the book. They have not produced great preachers of the Gospels, or expounders of the apostles doctrine. They are more expert in things relating to this world, than in things having to do with the world to come. They speak more of man-to-man relationships than of those having to do with man and God.

The Relevance of These Observations

These observations are not a mere tirade against the introduction of something new. Those in Christ Jesus delight in “newness of life.” However, they do not delight when old ways and concepts are dressed up with new attire and treated as though they belonged to the category of “newness of life.”

Our text is defining a moment during which the direction of the nation of Israel was turned. They were getting ready for a period of time that would commence with an unparalleled deliverance, include the giving of the Law, miraculous sustenance through a desert, and the entrance into a promised land. It would include the bringing forth of a Messiah, who would take away the sins of the world, be enthroned in glory, and commence the orchestration of the affairs of this world with the intent of bringing many sons to glory.

And how will this period begin? It will have its start when Moses sees something caused by God, and turns aside to consider it. That is the beginning of this period. God will not utter a syllable until He has the attention of Moses. Yet, when He does have it, He will speak through a holy angel, outlining a grand work that transcended anything Moses had ever heard before.

As long as men are attracted to “other things” (Mk 4:19), they will not be receiving from God the things that are necessary to enter and remain in the Kingdom of God. Divine direction is not given to those whose hearts are fundamentally turned away from God. I do understand that this condition is not determined by men. It is, however, a determination that God will make, and He will respond accordingly, in strict congruity with both His nature and His revelation, which are perfectly harmonious. In the meantime, as “the pillar and ground of the truth,” it is the responsibility of the church to apprise men of what the Lord requires of them, making known the manner of His Kingdom.

THE VOICE OF THE LORD CAME TO HIM

“31b . . . the voice of the Lord came unto him . . .” Other versions read, “there came the voice of the Lord,” NASB “he heard the Lord’s voice,” NIV “there came the voice of ADONAI,” CJB “the Lord said to him, audibly,” MRD “the voice of the Lord called out to him,” NLT “He heard a Voice; it was the Lord's,” IE and “the voice of the Lord was heard , saying.” WEYMOUTH

THE VOICE OF THE LORD

As Moses drew near to the bush – and only as he did so – the voice of the Lord was directed specifically to him. This was not a general word, like what the Spirit says “to the churches” (Rev 3:22). It was not a global word, as when it was said, “O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD” (Jer 22:29). It was not a national word, like the one He delivered to Israel (Lev 2:20). It was not even a word to a specific church, like the one Jesus delivered to Ephesus: “Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent, and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent” (Rev 2:5). This was a personalized word, tailored for one man – Moses.

Several things are said of “the voice of the Lord” in Scripture. It is “powerful,” and “full of majesty” (Psa 29:4). It breaks cedars, divides flames of fire, sending it where He wills, shakes the wilderness, makes the deer to calve, and discovers the forests (Psa 29:3-9). The voice of the Lord is said to have beaten down the Assyrian (Isa 30:31).

Here, however, “the voice of the Lord” is personal. He not only “humbleth Himself to behold the things that are in heaven, and in the earth” (Psa 113:6), but deigns to speak to man, involving Him in His purposes. Once God is comprehended, this becomes a most marvelous thing to consider.

THE ACCOUNT IN EXODUS

It is a remarkable evidence of progress when men are able to detect the note of urgency in Divine callings. That awareness assists them in mortifying procrastination and delay, which have caused so many to miss the blessing.

The record in Exodus provides a detail worthy of note: “And when the LORD saw that he turned aside to see, God called unto him out of the midst of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses . And he said, Here am I” (Ex 3:4). The Lord observes the reactions of men to communications and circumstances that are designed to get their attention. This is an aspect of the Divine nature that must be seen. In this case, the burning bush was Divinely designed to get the attention of Moses – and it did. Further, the Lord saw that Moses “turned aside to see” – that is, He took special note of it, and paid close attention to it.

When God is said to see something, it is always a prelude to Him doing something. I will make some extensive remarks concerning this Divine trait when we cover verse thirty-four. It is enough here to note that no voice was heard until Moses “turned aside to see.”

HIS NAME WAS CALLED TWICE

The record in Exodus says “God called unto him out of the bush, and said, Moses, Moses !” A call of this sort denotes urgency, special significance, and a matter requiring immediate attention.

- ABRAHAM. Thus, when the angel of the Lord halted Abraham in the sacrifice of Isaac, he called out, “Abraham, Abraham” (Gen 22:11).

- JACOB. When God spoke to Jacob in a confirming word just prior to him going to Joseph in Egypt, He said, “Jacob, Jacob” (Gen 46:2).

- SAMUEL. When God called young Samuel, He said, “Samuel, Samuel” (1 Sam 3:10).

- PETER. When Jesus revealed Satan’s request to sift Peter, He preceded the revelation by saying “Simon, Simon” (Lk 22:31).

- SAUL OF TARSUS. When Jesus appeared to Saul of Tarsus, to call Him to be an apostle, he said, “Saul, Saul” (Acts 9:4).

It is a remarkable evidence of progress when men are able to detect the note of urgency in Divine callings. That awareness assists them in mortifying procrastination and delay, which have caused so many to miss the blessing. Even under the Law, when speaking to the people concerning offering the first of their ripe fruits to the Lord, it was said, “Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto Me ” (Ex 22:29). Solomon warned men not

Although resources have been given to the church that far transcend those that were given to Moses, the vast number of professing Christians are not turning aside to see what the Lord has to say. It is a condition that parallels the obtuseness that characterized Israel – and they were excluded from the promised land because of

to take tomorrow granted, imagining it would be accessible to them (Prov 27:1). God spoke through Ezekiel of impending danger, yet some who heard him said, “It is not near; let us build houses” (Ezek 11:2-3). There were even some people who reasoned they had a lot of time to do this or that. Thus God said to the prophet, “Son of man, what is that proverb that ye have in the land of Israel, saying, The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth?” (Ezek 12:22).

When Jesus dwelt among men, there were some who saw the necessity of following Jesus, yet requested of Him, “Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.” He was not given the time he requested (Matt 8:21-22). It is an “evil servant” who imagines the Lord will not come at any moment (Matt 24:48). And who can forget the foolish virgins who delayed buying the required oil for their lamps until the last moment? It cost them their souls (Matt 25:1-13).

It is this sense of urgency that moved Paul to reason with Felix “of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come.” This moved Felix to tremble, but he responded that he would send for Paul when he had a “convenient season” (Acts 24:25). There is no record that it every came.

Paul reminded the believers in Thessalonica that the Lord’s return would catch the ungodly unawares and unprepared. “For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape” (1 Thess 5:3). The Hebrew believers were exhorted to respond to the voice of the Lord when they heard it, and not to delay. “Wherefore (as the Holy Ghost saith, To day if ye will hear his voice, Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the wilderness: When your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works forty years. Wherefore I was grieved with that generation, and said, They do alway err in their heart; and they have not known my ways. So I sware in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest)” (Heb 3:7-11).

Candidly, I am concerned that the American church as a whole is not producing this kind of sensitivity. There is a level of sluggishness extant within the church that is staggering. Judging from the level of aggressiveness to gather together, hear the Word of the Lord speak to one another of heavenly realities, and be preparing to meet the Lord, you would never expect that it was possible that the Lord of glory could burst upon the scene at any time. Although resources have been given to the church that far transcend those that were given to Moses, the vast number of professing Christians are not turning aside to see what the Lord has to say. It is a condition that parallels the obtuseness that characterized Israel – and they were excluded from the promised land because of it. In fact, that exclusion is declared in jarring language. “So I sware in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest ” (Heb 3:11). Moses, was in better shape after forty years in the desert, without a Bible and without Divine communication, than multitudes of people who say they are Christians. Such a condition should not exist.

If some kind of dominant spiritual awakening does not take place soon in our nation, judgment will surely be poured out upon it. There is no acceptable excuse for the condition of the American church.

HOW GOD IDENTIFIES HIMSELF

“ 32a Saying, I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob.”

When God appeared to Isaac He said, “I am the God of Abraham thy father” (Gen 26:24). When He appeared to Jacob He said “I am the LORD God of Abraham thy father, and the God of Isaac” (Gen 28:13). Jacob referred to the Lord as, “the God of my father, the God of Abraham, and the fear of Isaac” (Gen 31:42). In the event covered by our text, when the Lord spoke to Moses, He referred to Himself no less than four times as “the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (Ex 3:6,15,16;4:5). When Elijah had his contest with the prophets of Baal, he addressed God as “LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel” (1 Kgs 18:36). When David thanked God for the abundant offering for the building of the Temple, that was willingly offered by the people, he prayed, “O LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, our fathers, keep this for ever in the imagination of the thoughts of the heart of thy people, and prepare their heart unto thee” (1 Chron 29:18). In the days of Hezekiah, when there was a revival toward God, messengers were sent throughout “all Israel and Judah,” with letters from the king. Those letters included these words: “Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you” (2 Chron 30:6). When Peter addressed the Jews concerning the Lord, he referred to God as “The God of Abraham, and of Isaac, and of Jacob” (Acts 3:13).

Note that God is not referred to as the God of Adam, or the God of Abel, or the God of Noah. These were all men of faith, but God did not later refer to Himself in connection with His association with them. Lot was a righteous man (2 Pet 2:8), but God did not refer to Himself as the God of Lot. This is not a reproach to these men, but introduces us to the manner in which God has chosen to be known, and the relationships that most precisely reveal Him.

There are several associations that are accented in the various references to God.

- “The God of Bethel,” where Jacob made a vow to God (Gen 31:13).
- The Egyptians referred to Him as “the God of the Hebrews” (Ex 5:3).
- “The God of Israel” (Ex 24:10; 34:23; Num 16:9; Josh 2:16; 1 Sam 1:17; 5:7,8,10,11; 6:3,5; 2 Sam 23:3; 1 Kgs 11:31; 1 Chron 4:10; Isa 29:23; Jer 7:21) – 90 references).
- In pleading with God for Israel Moses referred to “The God of the spirits of all flesh” (Num 16:22; 27:16).
- “The God of Jeshurun,” an alternate name for Israel (Deut 33:26).
- “The God of the armies of Israel” (1 Sam 17:45).
- “The God of Jacob” (2 Sam 23:1; Psa 20:1; 46:7,11; 75:9; 81:1,4; 94:7; 114:7; 146:5; Isa 2:3) – 25 references.
- “The God of the land” [of Israel] (2 Kgs 17:27)
- “The God of David” (2 Kgs 20:5; Isa 38:5).
- “The God of their fathers” (1 Chron 5:25).
- “The God of Hezkiah” (2 Chron 32:17).
- “The God of Jerusalem” (2 Chron 32:19).
- “The God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego” (Dan 3:26,29).
- “The God of Daniel” (Dan 6:26).
- “The God of our Lord Jesus Christ” (Eph 1:17).
- “The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ” (2 Cor 11:31; Eph 1:3; 4:6; 1 Pet

2:3).

For men of God, and messengers sent from God, there was no generic God – like the supreme power, or “the unknown God,” as the Athenians affirmed, who even built an idol to such a god (Acts 17:23). The general descriptions of God that are found in Scripture, are, in a sense, specific. Here are some of them.

- “The God of heaven” (Gen 24:3).

“The God of heaven and earth” (Ezra 5:11).

- “The God of the whole earth” (Psa 54:5).
- “The God of hosts” (Jer 38:17).
- “The God of the earth” (Rev 11:4).
- “The God of all comfort” (2 Cor 1:3).
- “The God of all grace” (1 Pet 5:10).

As God revealed Himself more and more, the references to Him became more and more personal and specific.

- “The God of my rock” (2 Sam 22:3).
- “God of my righteousness” (Psa 4:1).
- “God of my salvation” (Psa 18:46).
- “The God of my life” (Psa 42:8).
- “The God of my strength” (Psa 43:2).
- “The God of my mercy” (Psa 59:10).

In these somewhat scattered remarks, I am establishing that proper references to God are made within the context of knowledge, insight, and specificity. The more generic the references are to God, the more unprofitable they are. Statements like, “God understands,” “He is there for you,” “God has a plan for your life,” etc. may have an element of truth in them, but they are more philosophical than profitable. Such references tend to encourage men to form their own concept God rather than acquiring an understanding based upon God’s revelation of Himself.

Think, for example, of testimonies that have referred to the manner in which men called upon the Lord. Some have said a dramatic change occurred in their life when they cried out, “Oh God, if there is a God, show Yourself to me.” To say the very least, this is not a wise approach to a God that has revealed Himself in nature (Rom 1:20), the conscience (Rom 2:15), the Law (Rom 2:20), the Person of Jesus Christ (Heb 1:3), the Gospel of Christ (Rom 1:16-17), and the doctrine of the apostles (Eph 3:4-5). These more discerning languages.

The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob

All of this highlights the sin of a vague theology – one that leaves the people fundamentally ignorant of God, and wandering through life in a sort of spiritual stupor. It is a grievous transgression to concoct a God whose activities center in the people who are said to need Him.

By drawing attention to the Divinely uttered expression, “I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob,” Stephen has associated God with revelation and objective.

This is the God who has made Himself known to each of the individuals referenced: Abraham (Gen 12:7; 17:1; 26:24), Isaac (Gen 26:1-5), and Jacob (Gen 28:13; 35:9). God personally confirmed His covenant with each of these men: Abraham (Gen 15:1-21; 17:1-22), Isaac (Gen 26:2-5), and Jacob (Gen 28:13-22; 35:9-15). The details in these revelations were remarkable.

- Abraham's promised offspring would be begotten by Abraham himself, even in his old age (Gen 15:4).
- His progeny would be numerous beyond imagination (Gen 15:5).
- His progeny would be strangers in a land that did not belong to them (Gen 15:13a).
- They would serve these people, and be afflicted by them for four hundred years (Gen 15:13b).
- God would judge the nation who oppressed the people of Abraham (Gen 15:14a).
- They would be delivered from that nation, coming out with great substance (Gen 15:14b).
- In the fourth generation the people would be delivered (Gen 15:16a).
- The deliverance would come four generations later because the iniquity of the Amorites was not yet in full measure (Gen 15:16b).
- The borders of the promised land were specified in detail (Gen 15:18-21).
- God declared He would make a covenant with Abraham, to multiply him exceedingly, making him a father of many nations (Gen 17:2,4).
- Kings would proceed from his loins (Gen 17:6).
- God would be a God unto Abraham and to his seed (Gen 17:7).
- The land of Canaan would be given to Abraham and his seed for an everlasting possession (Gen 17:8).
- God gave the covenant of circumcision to Abraham, instructing him how to carry it out (Gen 17:10-14).
- Sarah's name would be changed, she would be fruitful, be a mother of nations, and kings of people would come from her (Gen 17:15-16).
- God told Isaac to go down into Egypt and sojourn there (Gen 26:1-3a).
- God would give Isaac all the countries of which he spoke, fulfilling His promise to Abraham (Gen 26:3b).
- Isaac's offspring would be multiplied, and through his seed all nations of the earth would be blessed (Gen 26:4).
- God would do this because Abraham had obeyed His voice (Gen 26:5).
- God promised to give the land of Canaan to Jacob (Gen 28:13).
- Jacob's offspring would be numerous, be blessed, and all the families of the earth would be blessed through them (Gen 28:14).
- God would bless Jacob, and keep him wherever he went, never leaving him, and doing everything He had promised him (Gen 28:15).
- God changed Jacob's Isaac name to Isaac, and told him why he did so (Gen 35:9-10).
- A nation, a company of nations, and kings would come forth from Jacob (Gen 35:11).
- The land promised to Abraham and Isaac would be given to Jacob and his seed (Gen 35:12).

There are twenty-five arresting details that were revealed to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They were details that spoke extensively of God, His nature, and His purpose. The revelations vouchsafed to these patriarchs were not shrouded in mystery or couched in ambiguity. They were definitive in the most precise sense of the word. This was the God who had revealed Himself – the God who had said something, and even made a covenant.

All of this highlights the sin of a vague theology – one that leaves the people fundamentally ignorant of God, and wandering through life in a sort of spiritual stupor. It is a grievous transgression to concoct a God whose activities center in the people who are said to need Him. In matters relating God, human need is defined by what God has determined, and what he has declared Himself to be doing. Those are the realities that drive all of His revelations, and without which, there would be no cause for Him to manifest Himself to humanity.

In referring to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, Stephen is not merely drawing attention to them. Rather, He is calling the people to consider the God who revealed Himself to them. That is what makes them significant. In this approach, Stephen is leading the people into a consideration of the ultimate Man – “the Man Christ Jesus” (1 Tim 2:5). The Lord’s Christ is the fundamental revelation of God, and is the only One through whom God can be known as He desires to be known. In order to see this most clearly, even Paul does not speak of the creation of the world, or the various principles of nature. Instead, he speaks of the rationale of God as it was revealed in his dealings with those who bore His image and likeness (Acts 17:24-31). This is the manner in which men are to be brought to consider the Lord.

THE AFFECT OF THE AWARENESS OF GOD

“ 32b Then Moses trembled, and durst not behold.” Other versions read, “Moses trembled and dared not look,” NKJV “Moses shook with fear and would not venture to look,” NASB “Moses trembled with fear and did not dare to look,” NIV “Moses, shaking with fear, kept his eyes from looking at it,” BBE “Moses being terrified , durst not behold,” DOUAY “Moses trembled and was afraid to look ,” NJB “Moses began to shake with fear. He was afraid to look,” IE “Quaking with fear Moses did not dare gaze ,” WEYMOUTH “Moses trembled and was so terrified that he did not venture to look ,” AMPLIFIED and “Moses trembled and was afraid to look any more .” PHILLIPS

When Moses saw the bush ablaze, he was not afraid to look. When he noted how the bush was burning, yet was not consumed, he did not fear to look or to draw close to it. Even when “the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a flame of fire out of the midst of the bush,” Moses still “looked” (Ex 3:2). Here was something that defied the laws of nature. Yet, it did not appear to be physically dangerous, or threatening to the life of Moses – so he drew near to investigate it further.

When, however, “God called unto him out of the midst of the bush,” it had an immediate impact upon Moses. He trembled with fear, was terrified, and began to shake. His curiosity was no longer compelling him, so he did not dare to look any more at the arresting sight. He lost his interest in obtaining a closer look at this strange sight.

When Moses heard the voice of the Lord, he at once ceased looking at the burning bush. He was in the presence of the Lord, and he knew it. That single morsel of knowledge – knowing one is in the presence of Almighty God – has a corrective quality about it. Admittedly, it is not something that resolves waywardness, and it certainly does not have any transforming power. It does, however, make for sobriety and discerning caution. Duly heeded, such fear will move one in the right direction, minimizing fleshly influences.

When Moses heard the voice of the Lord, he at once ceased looking at the burning bush. He was in the presence of the Lord, and he knew it. That single morsel of knowledge – knowing one is in the presence of Almighty God – has a corrective quality about it.

This kind of encounter is frequently found in Scripture – times when people confronted the Lord, or a messenger from the Lord, and it took hold of them, causing fear.

- When Joseph’s brothers connected their seeming misfortune with the action of God, “their heart failed them, and they were afraid” (Gen 42:28).

- When the people of Israel saw Moses coming down from the mount, with “the skin of his face” aglow with the glory of God, “they were afraid to come nigh him” (Ex 34:30).

- When the Philistines heard Israel shouting, “they understood that the ark of the Lord was come into the camp.” It is written that “they were afraid, for they said, God is come into the camp” (1 Sam 4:7).

- When the people of Gadara came to see Jesus, and saw the former wild man who was possessed by a legion of demons, sitting, clothed, and in his right mind, “they were afraid” (Mk 5:15).

- Paul said that if a man who did not believe was to enter an assembly in which God was working, and heard the people speaking a consistent and inspired message, the “secrets of his heart” would be revealed. In such a case, he would fall down “on his face,” “worship God, and report that God is in you of a truth” (1 Cor 14:25).

The church has a stewardship of the knowledge of God, and of their fellowship with the Son. It is the business of the redeemed to bring an awareness of the Living God to all who have sensitive hearts and spirits. The church will be held in strict account for failing to do this.

These are only representative of a host of Scriptural examples in which people feared, trembled, fell down, shook, became weak, and dared not raise their head or voice. They include the heathen – like Abimelech (Gen 20:3-18), Nebuchadnezzar (Dan 4:34-37), the Philippian jailor (Acts 16:29), and Felix (Acts 24:25). They included holy men prior to Christ like David (2 Sam 6:9), Job (Job 3:25), Daniel (Dan 8:17), and Habakkuk (Hab 3:2). They include followers of Jesus – like the twelve in general (Mk 4:41), and Simon Peter in particular (Lk 5:8). They include those who were being called – Cornelius (Acts 10:4), and Saul of Tarsus (Acts 9:6). They included those who were already converted – like the early church when Ananias and Sapphira were judged (Acts 5:5,11).

The thing that all of these incidents have in common – including our text – is that they were either knowingly in the presence of the Lord, or were confronting a work that came from Him. They could not ignore the confrontation, and their flesh was unable to be calm under that condition.

Many people have never knowingly confronted the living God, or been aware of His presence. That is why they are so casual about spiritual matters. They have never made a connection between unsettling circumstances or strange phenomenon and the God of heaven. They have been unable to connect the Scripture in general, and the Gospel in particular, with God Himself. That is why they are able to ignore the Word, or even speak against it.

There is an appointed day when God will force Himself and His Son upon all humanity. At that time, men will have no opportunity to ignore Him, turn from Him, or offer even the slightest resistance. The only reason such responses are even possible now, is the presence of ignorance and insensitivity. However, all of that will be removed when the heavens and the earth pass away. In fact, the presence of the natural order is all that keeps the people from seeing the Lord as He is. Once removed from the temporal domain, men no longer have any difficulty with being aware of the Lord and His thoughts concerning their persons.

It is in view of this that it is affirmed when Jesus returns, “all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him” (Rev 1:7). At that time, there will be a profound regret for having neglected, or even repudiated, the Lord’s Christ. Yet there will be no opportunity to correct the situation. It will become apparent that it is a fearful thing to fall into hands of a living God (Heb 10:31). Preparation for that time begins now.

THE CHURCH HAS A STEWARDSHIP

The church has a stewardship of the knowledge of God, and of their fellowship with the Son. It is the business of the redeemed to bring an awareness of the Living God to all who have sensitive hearts and spirits. The church will be held in strict account for failing to do this. If they have presented a doctrinally flawed view of God, they will be judged for it. If, by their lives, they have led people to believe salvation does not involve a very real moral and spiritual change, they will give an account for that failure.

If the presence of the Lord is arresting, then the more evident He is within His people, the more impact they will have on those about them. Thus Jesus said, “Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven” (Matt 5:16).

If it is countered that men may know the Lord is in front of them, yet oppose Him anyway, we must see that this is not at all the case. It is said of those who crucified Christ, “But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, even the hidden wisdom, which God ordained before the world unto our glory: which none of the princes of this world knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory ” (1 Cor 2:7-8). When addressing some of the very people who were guilty of this crime, Peter said, “And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers” (Acts 3:17). Paul told the Jews in Antioch of Pisidia that they had condemned Jesus “because they knew Him not ” (Acts 13:27).

The redeemed of the Lord – the church – are “a royal diadem in the hand of the Lord” (Isa 62:3). They are a means through which even angelic hosts are tutored in “the manifold wisdom of God” (Eph 3:10). When these people avail themselves of the provisions of redemption, an awareness of the Lord is produced that is most unique and effective. However, should they choose to quench and grieve the Spirit, and draw back from Him because of an “evil heart of unbelief” (Heb 3:12), all evangelistic and missionary activity found among them is nothing more than an exercise in vanity. Such will yield no fruit for it lacks power. In such a case, people will not be able to make any association between the pretending ones and the Living God, and God will receive neither fruit nor glory.

STANDING ON HOLY GROUND

“ 33 Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet: for the place where thou standest is holy ground.”

Is there such a thing as a holy place, or a location that is more blessed than others? Or, is there a certain neutrality found in all places, so that no Divine association can be made with them? This text confirms that such places do, in fact, exist. It further substantiates that men are required to recognize it, and conduct themselves accordingly.

PUT OFF THY SHOES

“Then said the Lord to him, Put off thy shoes from thy feet . . .” Other versions read, “ Take your sandals off your feet,” NKJV “Take off your sandals,” NIV “ Loose the shoes from thy feet,” ASV and “ Remove the sandals from your feet.” NAB

This is a word spoken by the Lord, who cannot change. Whatever significance is given to this word, no person can afford to view it as anything other than a word from God Himself. Of old time, there was a place where wearing shoes was out of order. This text cites the place where God called Moses from the bush as one of them. When Joshua confronted a messenger from heaven – the “captain of the host of the Lord” (Josh 5:14) – he also was required to remove his shoes. “And the captain of the LORD'S host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot ; for the place whereon thou standest is holy. And Joshua did so” (Josh 5:15).

This was a token of humility, a show of obedience, and a display of reverence. To this very day, eastern cultures remove their shoes in places of respect and honor. Our Western culture does not have such a custom. It seems to me that this is one of the fruits of an emphasis upon the individual, and a near-total disregard for things identified with God. I remember the diligence of my own parents to teach me a respect for places that had been given to the Lord, and in which holy teaching and sacred remembrances were cultured. In view of our text, such customs cannot be viewed as foolish. Men have a difficult enough time making an association of God with certain times and places, without reducing every thing and every place to the category of “common.”

In view of our text, such customs cannot be viewed as foolish. Men have a difficult enough time making an association of God with certain times and places, without reducing every thing and every place to the category of “common.”

There are some places where the ordinary is out of order. You may recall that our blessed Lord twice drove moneychangers, and those who sold merchandise from the Temple (John 2:14-16; Matt 21:12-13). He also would not allow any person to carry merchandise or a burden through the Temple (Mk 11:16).

We are careful to avoid drawing up a set of rules concerning apparel in places that are devoted to the Lord. However, we will not shun to emphasize that each individual is responsible for their appearance in such places. The Scriptures refer to “modest apparel” (1 Tim 2:9), and even having a visible manifestation of God-ordained submission (1 Cor 11:4-10). You may also recall that the first issue God had with humanity regarded their attire (Gen 3:7,21). Let all men make this a matter of consideration, then conduct themselves in a way that defers to God.

HOLY GROUND

This was also the declaration of the captain of the Lord’s host to Joshua: “And the captain of the LORD'S host said unto Joshua, Loose thy shoe from off thy foot; for the place whereon thou standest is holy . And Joshua did so” (Josh 5:15). I understand that this can be a sensitive subject, and that care must be taken not to legislate where God has not legislated. However, equal care must be taken not to ignore Divine utterances, even if they appear to be disassociated from ourselves.

The place where God makes Himself known, or where He is served, is not to be regarded as common. For example, under the Lord the Lord said, “And when a man shall sanctify his house to be holy unto the LORD , then the priest shall estimate it, whether it be good or bad: as the priest shall estimate it, so shall it stand” (Lev 27:14). This was speaking of a house that was dedicated to the Lord, and the manner in which its value was to be determined.

There was also the matter of certain vessels that were dedicated to the Lord, for use in the tabernacle, and later in the Temple. Although those vessels did not have Divine qualities, they were to be considered “holy vessels.” “Now set your heart and your soul to seek the LORD your God; arise therefore, and build ye the sanctuary of the LORD God, to bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and the holy vessels of God , into the house that is to be built to the name of the LORD” (1 Chron 22:19).

Solomon warned the people to watch their conduct when they went into the house of God, and be more prone to hear, being spiritually alert. “ Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God , and be more ready to hear, than to give the sacrifice of fools: for they consider not that they do evil” (Eccl 5:1).

Under the Law, there were places that were, because of their employment in the service of God, more holy than other places. “And thou shalt hang up the veil under the taches, that thou mayest bring in thither within the veil the ark of the testimony: and the veil shall divide unto you between the holy place and the most holy . And thou shalt put the mercy seat upon the ark of the testimony in the most holy place ” (Ex 26:33-34).

There were also holy utensils that were to be taken, together with certain vows that were made before God, to a specific location that was identified by God. “Only thy holy things which thou hast, and thy vows, thou shalt take, and go unto the place which the LORD shall choose ” (Deut 12:26). That place was not to be considered the same as other places.

It is expressly taught by some, that as men praise, the Lord gravitates to their assembly – that He has an attraction to such activity, and always draws near to it. This is taught even though God has expressly revealed His absolute disdain for some gatherings that profess to be in His name

When Jesus was among men, and particularly during the close of His ministry, there were two particular places in which He was found. Both of them were obviously sacred. “And in the day time He was teaching in the temple ; and at night He went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives ” (Luke 21:37). How do you suppose the Lord would have responded to the statement that there is no distinction of places, or that nothing is sacred or holy about any location of place? He confirmed by His actions that such a view is wholly spurious, to say nothing of it being damaging to both the heart and mind.

When Peter recapped his own involvement with the Christ, he referred to the time Jesus was transfigured before himself, James, and John. Although he wrote this several decades after the ascension of Jesus, note what he said. “And this voice which came from heaven we heard, when we were with him in the holy mount” (2 Pet 1:18).

The thing that is common in all of these texts is that Divine contact and direction was associated with them. That is what made them sacred. In other words, no time or place is common that has been particularly influenced by God! If there was a time, for example, when we were illuminated, it is good for us to remember that specific time (Heb 10:32; Eph 1:13).

ABUSING THE TERM

The expression “holy ground” cannot be applied to a place of man’s choosing. Nor, indeed, is such a place created by human intention. One of the fashionable choruses of our day is, “We Are Standing on Holy Ground.” There are some good expressions in the song, and it is not my intent to speak disparagingly of it. However, owing to the juvenile influences within the professed church, some have come to believe they can cause the ground to be holy by meeting together and engaging in what they call “praise.” It is expressly taught by some, that as men praise, the Lord gravitates to their assembly – that He has an attraction to such activity, and always draws near to it. This is taught even though God has expressly revealed His absolute disdain for some gatherings that profess to be in His name (Isa 1:11-15; Amos 5:21-23; 6:5; 8:2-3,10). This was so because the heart of the people was far from Him, thus making all of the worship vain, and nothing more than abominable pretension.

When Jacob sanctified the plot of ground on which he heard from God, he did so because of what took place there. He did not set the ground apart in hopes that Divine visitation would take place. Thus is it written, “Surely the LORD is in this place; and I knew it not” (Gen 28:16-19). He called the name of that place “Bethel,” which means house of God. Later, when God appeared again to Jacob, He referred to Himself as “the God of Bethel,” where Jacob anointed the pillar and made a vow to Him (Gen 31:13).

On another occasion, God appeared to Isaac, and confirmed the covenant with him that He had made with his father Abraham. Because of this appearance Isaac “built an altar there, and called upon the name of the LORD, and pitched his tent there” (Gen 26:25). It was a sacred place because the Lord visited him there. God did not visit Isaac because he had consecrated the place.

Religious men wrestle with the tendency to think God will honor their efforts to make something holy – or that a place or thing is holy because of what men have done. This, however, is not the manner of the kingdom. Something becomes holy because of what the Lord has done – whether it be a place or a person. This is a manner of thinking that differs significantly from the modern Christian mind-set.

Any place where we become more aware of the Lord, or where greater measures of truth are vouchsafed to us, is anything but ordinary, and we dare not regard them as such! Places where special deliverances have been realized, or special insights have been ministered, are not to be regarded as mundane. It should be apparent to us all that Divine fellowship, spiritual insight, and the experience of refreshment and strengthening, are to be considered holy and precious in our sight.

THE PRINCIPLE OF DIVINE REPETITION

“34a I have seen, I have seen . . .” Other versions read, “I have surely seen,” NKJV “I have certainly seen,” NASB “I have indeed seen,” NIV “Truly, I have seen,” BBE “I have clearly seen,” CJB “Seeing I have seen,” DOUAY “I have attentively seen,” MRD “I have witnessed,” NAB “I have perfectly seen,” TNT “I have seen, yes, I have seen,” WEYMOUTH “I have most assuredly seen,” AMPLIFIED “with My own eyes I have seen,” CEV and “I’ve seen how.” GW

This is a most unique phrase – “I have seen, I have seen.” The account in Exodus reads, “I have surely seen” (Ex 3:7). There, the meaning of the Hebrew word that is employed is “look at, inspect, perceive, consider . . . regard . . . give attention to . . . gaze at.” STRONG’S The idea is that of lingering on what is seen, perusing it with care, and beholding all of the details. As will be confirmed by the text, here it means that God had viewed the circumstances of His people with the intention of doing something about them.

It also ought to be noted that in Divine communication, repetition, among other things, signifies certainty. Therefore, when Joseph interpreted the two dreams of Pharaoh he said, “And for that the dream was doubled unto Pharaoh twice; it is because the thing is established by God, and God will shortly bring it to pass” (Gen 41:32). Joseph himself experienced the same thing when, at an early age, he had two dreams that revealed the same thing – that his family would eventually bow before him (Gen 37:7-9). The book of Job also alludes to this kind of communication, upbraiding men for not paying attention to it. “For God speaketh once, yea twice, yet man perceiveth it not” (Job 33:14).

There are grievous matters that continue on, even though they are known by the Lord. That is, He does not do something about everything He sees – at least not immediately. Not knowing this, wicked men stumble on in their sin, interpreting what appears to be delay as indifference. Thus Solomon wrote, “Because sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil” (Eccl 8:11). This very reaction would be found in Pharaoh during the execution of the plagues. As soon as there was some relief, he forgot the God with whom he was dealing. “But when Pharaoh saw that there was relief, he hardened his heart and did not heed them, as the LORD had said” NKJV (Ex 8:15). That proved to be a very foolish reaction.

There are frequent references to the Lord beholding something – looking intently upon it – then doing something about it – even though the condition may have existed for a considerable amount of time.

There are frequent references to the Lord beholding something, then doing something about it – even though the condition may have existed for a considerable amount of time.

THE BUILDING OF THE TOWER OF BABEL. “And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded. And the LORD said, Behold, the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do. Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech. So the LORD scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth: and they left off to build the city” (Gen 11:5-8).

- THE SIN OF SODOM AND GOMORRAH. “And the LORD said, Because the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous; I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it, which is come unto me; and if not, I will know” (Gen 18:20-21).

- THE CASE OF LEAH. “And when the LORD saw that Leah was hated, he opened her womb: but Rachel was barren” (Gen 29:31).

- THE PROVOCATIVE MANNER OF ISRAEL. “And when the LORD saw it, he abhorred them, because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters” (Deut 32:19).

- WHEN ISRAEL HUMBLLED THEMSELVES. “Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king humbled themselves; and they said, The LORD is righteous. And when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them some deliverance; and my wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak” (2 Chron 12:7).

- IN THE MATTER OF THE NEED FOR A SAVIOR. “Yea, truth faileth; and he that departeth from evil maketh himself a prey: and the LORD saw it, and it displeased him that there was no judgment. And He saw that there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: therefore his arm brought salvation unto Him; and His righteousness, it sustained Him” (Isa 59:15-16).

In each of these cases, the Lord focused on the situation. It is not that He had never seen it before or that any aspect of those circumstances had escaped His attention. I am careful to note this does not mean God ignores people or circumstances, treating them with indifference. This involves more than mere Divine tolerance. The longsuffering of God is a trait that moves the Lord to act in strict accord with His purpose, rather than with a preeminent regard for the circumstance. Thus He is said to wait in order than He might be gracious. Therefore Isaiah declared, “And therefore will the LORD wait, that he may be gracious unto you, and therefore will he be exalted, that he may have mercy upon you: for the LORD is a God of judgment: blessed are all they that wait for Him” (Isa 30:18). This means that God always works in a timely manner, and with strict regard for His purpose.

HOLY MEN HAVE APPEALED TO THIS DIVINE QUALITY

Knowing that God cannot behold a circumstance in a focused manner without doing something about it, holy men have appealed to Him to behold themselves or their enemies.

- “Look upon mine affliction and my pain; and forgive all my sins” (Psa 25:18).

- “Behold, O God our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed. For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness” (Psa 84:9-10).

- “Give ear to my words, O LORD, consider my meditation” (Psa 5:1).
- “Consider mine enemies; for they are many; and they hate me with cruel hatred” (Psa 25:19).
- “Think upon me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people” (Neh 5:19).
- “So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not” (Jonah 1:6).

Therefore, when the Lord tells Moses He has seen the circumstances of His people, He is, in fact, declaring that He is going to do something about it. That is the purpose of the revelation given to Moses.

WHEN AFFLICTION IS SEEN

“34b . . . the affliction of my people which is in Egypt . . .” Other versions read, “the oppression,” NKJV “the mistreatment,” NRSV “the ill-treatment,” RSV “the sorrows,” BBE “how my people are being oppressed,” CJB “the suffering,” NET “the misery,” NJB “the anguish,” LIVING “My people suffer much,” IE and “the abuse and oppression.” AMPLIFIED

This account perfectly parallels our situation. The saints of God are in a hostile world, rejected and maligned for righteousness’ sake. They also join with nature in sighing under the weight of mortality, groaning within themselves while they wait for the redemption of their body

The people had been oppressed for four centuries, as God had declared they would be (Gen 15:13). Had God not seen their affliction? Indeed He had. That is why they had been sustained. It is why Moses was born at the proper time, after the iniquity of the Amorites became full (Gen 15:16). Now, however, the time had come for the purpose of God to be fulfilled, and therefore He would work.

During the years – as many as thirteen – that Joseph was afflicted, and the fetters hurt his feet, God had seen him also. Yet, of that time of affliction it is written, “Whose feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron: until the time that his word came: the word of the LORD tried him” (Psa 105:19). So it was with the children of Israel. The word of the Lord was trying, or testing, them. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob had been faithful stewards of the promise of God – that their offspring would be delivered from oppressing Egypt, and inherit a land. Joseph had kept the promise in his heart, and reminded his brethren of it before he died, taking an oath from them that they would not leave his bones in Egypt.

During their time of their affliction, the people had to keep the promise alive, looking for the time when it would be fulfilled. Amram and Jochebed kept it alive, and were therefore able to associate the birth of Moses with the working of the Lord. Aaron also kept it alive, so that he was able to instantly respond to the Lord when He called him to meet Moses at the holy mount (Ex 4:27).

THE RELEVANCE OF THE ACCOUNT FOR US

This account perfectly parallels our situation. The saints of God are in a hostile world, rejected and maligned for righteousness’ sake. They also join with nature in sighing under the weight of mortality, groaning within themselves while they wait for the redemption of their body (Rom 8:23). They cry out with Paul, “O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?” (Rom 7:24). Sometimes they seem to be pushed to the edge, so that they even “despair of life,” being asked to endure all manner of injustice and affliction (2 Cor 1:8-9). They are “troubled on every side,” “fightings” without, and “fears” within (2 Cor 7:5).

From time to time they cry out with the sweet psalmist of Israel, “My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O LORD, how long?” (Psa 6:3). Amidst especially trying times they may even cry out in their immaturity, “How long wilt thou forget me, O LORD? for ever? how long wilt thou hide thy face from me?” (Psa 13:1). When sorely oppressed by enemies that seem invincible, the cry may come forth from them, “O God, how long shall the adversary reproach? shall the enemy blaspheme thy name for ever?” (Psa 74:10).

Yet, God is not slumbering or sleeping while our sufferings seem to be mounting higher and higher. He has not forgotten to be gracious, nor is He unmindful of our condition. If we are sensitive enough in our spirits we will hear Him say, “For ye have need of patience, that, after ye have done the will of God, ye might receive the promise” (Heb 10:36). “You are not mature enough! You have are too easily exasperated! You need more strength! You have not run long enough or far enough! You are not ready to come home yet, there is more work for you to do! There is a gallery of witnesses that is watching, beholding what a great prize awaits you, and urging you to continue to run the race with patience that has been set before you. Wait on the Lord, and thus your strength will renewed! Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. You are being readied for the greatest deliverance of all, and when it comes, you will have no regrets that you continued to run in the midst of storms, when the heat beat upon you, and when the waves of trial swept over your head!” Have you sensed Him speaking in this way?

WHEN GROANING IS HEARD

“ 34c . . . and I have heard their groaning . . . ” Other versions read, “their groans ,” NASB “their cries ,” BBE “their cry,” CJB “them crying for help ,” NJB “ moaning ,” IE and “ signing and groaning .” AMPLIFIED

There is an approach to living that leaves people confused about “groaning.” Such an approach leads people to believe trouble and sorrow are a sign of Divine rejection, and that peace and prosperity are the primary indicators of Divine approval. Those who imbibe this nonsense do everything in their power to avoid sorrow, and strive for acceptance by their peers and success in this world. But they are deluded, and this way of thinking is a misconception.

The word “groaning” comes from a word meaning “to groan or sigh as the result of deep concern or stress,” LOUW-NIDA and “to sigh often, sigh deeply.” LIDDELL-SCOTT Therefore, we are not speaking of a response caused by a single circumstance, but of a cry brought on by sustained suffering – a cry that continues over a considerable period time. In this case, it was four hundred years. That means there were several generations – as many as ten – that had only known suffering, with little or no respite or reprieve. Of course, all of this was making the people discontent to remain in Egypt. They certainly were not desiring to become absorbed into the culture, but were being made painfully aware that they did not belong in Egypt. Insightful people knew that God had formed and cultured them to inhabit another land. That fact is what drove the experience they had in Egypt.

As used here, and in strict accord with the purpose of God, groaning is not mere griping or complaining. It is more related to the groans of travail than the suffering of unnatural pain. In other words, there is expectation in “groaning,” whereas there is only discomfort, and often hopelessness in bitter complaining.

The weight of the suffering of Israel in Egypt was felt deeply, and caused painful sighs to erupt from them. The effect of those sighs upon the Lord is recorded in Exodus 2:24-25: “And God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob . And God looked upon the children of Israel, and God had respect unto them” (Ex 2:24-25). Some time after God had called Moses from the burning bush, He again spoke to him about this matter. “And I have also heard the groaning of the children of Israel, whom the Egyptians keep in bondage; and I have remembered My covenant ” (Ex 6:5).

Here we have an index to the Divine nature. As is pointedly declared in apostolic doctrine, God is primarily moved by His own will. He is described as working “according to the purpose of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will ” (Eph 1:11). There was no doubt other people groaning in Egypt – like those who were once fellow prisoners of Joseph, other slaves, etc. But it was the prayers of the offspring of Abraham that God heard, or upon whom He focused His attention.

THE LOGIC OF GROANING

As used here, and in strict accord with the purpose of God, groaning is not mere griping or complaining. It is more related to the groans of travail than the suffering of unnatural pain. In other words, there is expectation in “groaning,” whereas there is only discomfort, and often hopelessness in bitter complaining. Seen from the high vantage point. “groaning” is the result of involvement in the purpose of God, and it is so described in the apostolic doctrine.

Just as surely as there was an appointed deliverance for Israel, so there is one for those who are in Christ Jesus. As that time draws near, the groaning of the elect will become more pronounced in the ears of the Lord.

Under the weight of mortality, which includes temptation, the good fight of faith, and the subduing of the flesh, we come to long for deliverance from the body of this flesh, which is the locus of the moral contradiction. Thus it is written, “For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the firstfruits of the Spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body” (Rom 8:23). Realizing the liberty and glory associated with resurrection body, we “groan , earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven” (2 Cor 5:2). Again it is written, “For we that are in this tabernacle do groan , being burdened : not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life” (2 Cor 5:4).

Just as surely as there was an appointed deliverance for Israel, so there is one for those who are in Christ Jesus, living by faith and in the Spirit. As that time draws near, the groaning of the elect will become more pronounced in the ears of the Lord. Then the saying of Job 14:15 will realize ultimate fulfillment for every person in Christ: “Thou shalt call, and I will answer thee: thou wilt have a desire to the work of thine hands” (Job 14:15). If we will address life in the stance of faith, our sufferings will work “for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory” (2 Cor 4:17).

GOD COMES DOWN TO DELIVER

“ 34d . . . and am come down to deliver them.” Other versions read, “come down to set them free ,” NIV “come down to rescue them ,” NRSV “come down to make them free ,” BBE “come down to take them out of it ,” DARBY and “come down to pluck them out .” LITV

The words “come down” refer to Divine intervention. God was going to suddenly and effectively interrupt the suffering of Israel. He would intervene in the affairs of men, causing things to take place that fulfilled the will of the Israelites and contradicted the will of Pharaoh.

God does not always “come down” to deliver. In “the plain of the land of Shinar” he “came down” to abruptly conclude the project conceived by the people there, and to scatter them (Gen 11:2-8). Concerning Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities of the plain, He came down to behold the extent of their iniquity, and to ultimately destroy them (Gen 18:20-21; 19:13).

But in the case of Israel in Egypt, he came down to “deliver them.” As is always the case, the Lord could say of this revealed intention, “I have purposed it, I will also do it” (Isa 46:11).

The word “deliver” is an interesting one. Its lexical meaning is, “to take out . . . to pluck out, draw out, choose out, select,” THAYER “tear out, remove,” FRIBERG “to take out for oneself.” LIDDELL-SCOTT The deliverance would be abrupt, swift, effective, and with violence. It would be forced, or caused to happen. The Lord would not simply set the people free to go their own way, but was taking them out for Himself. Therefore God said of the deliverance, “Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles’ wings, and brought you unto Myself ” (Ex 19:4). It is said of that unparalleled deliverance, “the children of Israel went out with an high hand in the sight of all the Egyptians” (Num 33:3). The deliverance was attended with such Divine force that it is also written in the Psalms, “Egypt was glad when they departed: for the fear of them fell upon them” (Psa 105:38). The Lord came to deliver them, and deliver them he did!

OUR COMING DELIVERANCE

Those who are in Christ Jesus are also anticipating a deliverance, and it will far exceed that which was experienced by Israel. It will also be an imposed deliverance, and will include the destruction of death itself, the demise of the devil, and the passing of the present heavens and earth. That is the “salvation” that is “ready to be revealed” (1 Pet 1:5). The time is drawing nearer and nearer. As it is written, “And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed ” (Rom 13:11). At this time, the thing that protects our minds is nothing less than “the hope of salvation” (1 Thess 5:8).

The coming deliverance is sure, and it will bring all groaning to an abrupt halt. While we “wait for the hope of righteousness” through faith (Gal 5:5), we do so in the joyful confidence that our God is working all things together for our good (Rom 8:28). We also know that as the sufferings abound in us, even so Divine consolation will also abound – the first fruits now, and the full harvest then (2 Cor 1:5). The understanding of this brings great strength to the believer.

COME, AND I WILL SEND THEE

“ 34e And now come, I will send thee into Egypt.”

Moses had been in the desert for forty years. Life had, in a sense, become monotonous, with few refreshing things taking place. A man without faith could have grown accustomed to such an uneventful life, and forgotten all about the Lord, making shipwreck of the faith and throwing all hope away. But now, in a moment of time, everything will change. Moses’ present occupation will become obsolete, and he will be sent on a mission that no other man begotten of a man, before or since, has ever equaled.

COME!

“And now come . . .” Other versions read, “Come now,” NASB “So come here,” NJB “Now go,” NLT “Come,” LIVING “Now , Moses,” IE and “So come.” WILLIAMS

Since God had spoken, Moses had been afraid to even look at the burning bush, much less draw close to it. An intriguing sight had not become the occasion of great fear and trepidation. Now, however, the heavenly summons is heard, “COME!” The account in Exodus reads, “Come now, therefore” (Ex 3:10). That is, in view of the fact that God had heard the groaning of Israel and remembered His covenant with Abraham, this was the time for Moses to come close, or draw nigh. The summons was “Come! And come now!” Moses was to make no delay, for God was about to commence the fulfillment of His purpose, and He had chosen Moses to be involved.

Another thing to be seen here is that receiving from God requires that men draw close to Him. The blessing of the Lord, and involvement in His purpose, cannot be done at a distance. That is why the Lord said to wayward Israel; “Come now, let us reason together” (Isa 1:18). There is a sense of urgency in the Divine summons. It is something that must not be ignored.

I WILL SEND THEE

“ . . . I will send thee into Egypt.” Other versions read, “I will send you to Egypt,” NKJV “I will send you back to Egypt,” NIV “ I’m sending you to Egypt,” GWN “And now I will send you to Egypt,” WEYMOUTH “I will send you back to Egypt as my messenger,” WILLIAMS and “I will send you back to Egypt [as My messenger.]” AMPLIFIED

Notice the sureness with which the Lord speaks. Men cannot speak in this manner, for neither the present nor the future is governed by them. However, this is not the case with God. He is the Governor (Psa 22:28), is above all (Eph 4:6), and the entirety of the kingdom belongs to Him (Matt 6:13). No one can stay or restrain His hand (Dan 4:35b), and He does according to His will among the army of heaven and the inhabitants of the earth as well (Dan 4:35). He is the absolute and only Lord.

Now, God is going to send Moses back to Egypt. There he will again identify with the people, and become better acquainted with them. In doing this, he will foreshadow the Lord Jesus, who would come into the world around 1,500 years later, to dwell among men and become fitted to be touched with the feeling of their infirmities and lead them to glory.

Those who are sent by God – truly sent by Him – can “go in the strength of the Lord” (Psa 71:16). In fact, that is the only way they can carry out their commission. All of their resources must come from the one who is sending them, and their sole objective is to do His will. Imagined success in any other matter is only a delusion, and counts for nothing. Their credential is their calling, and their authority is their commission. Also, the commission is defined by God, not by man. He determines who is to be sent, not man. The work is His, and therefore it is ordered by Him. Those who are involved in His work have occasion to thank and praise the Lord that this is the case. That circumstance is the guarantee of success.

CONCLUSION

The nature and the content of Stephen’s defense is edifying and instructive to consider. You will notice a total absence of any reference to himself, or the injustice that has characterized this entire affair. There is a distinctly superior purpose that is driving this man of God. He is not building a case for himself, but is rather justifying God in all of His sayings. He is not an institution builder, or the promoter of strange and novel doctrines.

In this, Stephen sets the tone for all who speak in the name of the Lord. Their role is not to promote an organization, make a career for themselves, or engage in an effort to please the people. When you speak for God, His will is the primary will, and His cause is the only cause. This is the aim of those who are called to “endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ” (2 Tim 2:3). The faithful laborer is not to entangle “himself with the affairs of this life; that he may please Him who hath chosen him to be a soldier” (2 Tim 2:4).

Lesson #32

STEPHEN'S DEFENSE, #5

“ 7:35 This Moses whom they refused, saying, Who made thee a ruler and a judge? the same did God send to be a ruler and a deliverer by the hand of the angel which appeared to him in the bush. 36 He brought them out, after that he had showed wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the wilderness forty years. 37 This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear. 38 This is he, that was in the church in the wilderness with the angel which spake to him in the mount Sinai, and with our fathers: who received the lively oracles to give unto us: 39 To whom our fathers would not obey, but thrust him from them, and in their hearts turned back again into Egypt, 40 Saying unto Aaron, Make us gods to go before us: for as for this Moses, which brought us out of the land of Egypt, we wot not what is become of him. 41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice unto the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands. 42 Then God turned, and gave them up to worship the host of heaven; as it is written in the book of the prophets, O ye house of Israel, have ye offered to me slain beasts and sacrifices by the space of forty years in the wilderness?” (Acts 7:35-42)

INTRODUCTION

Stephen points out that Moses returned to Egypt – and he was the very one the Israelites had before rejected. Therein we perceive the contrary way of the natural mind. God chose the man Moses, and the people to whom he was sent rejected him. In this, Moses was a type of Christ, of whom it is written, “He came unto His own, and His own received Him not” (John 1:11). Thus we have Moses, at the forefront of God’s dealings with a body of people, and Jesus as the last Man sent to deliver men from the power of darkness – and both of them were initially rejected.

CONFIRMATION OF THE HUMAN CONDITION

For centuries men have debated over the extent of human depravity. Entire bodies of theology have been developed on this subject. However, after all is said and done, our text provides evidence that is beyond all question. Here we are not dealing with humanity in general, but with a special segment of the race that were set apart for God. Anything that was known of God at that time had been given to them. They were the people with whom God was working, and to whom he had made unalterable commitments. Yet, Stephen points out that they rejected His choice of a ruler. There is no more proof required to establish that “there is none righteous, no not one” (Rom 3:10), for there is no more clear proof of this condition than when people are at a variance with God in their thoughts and assessments.
